TEACHER EDITION

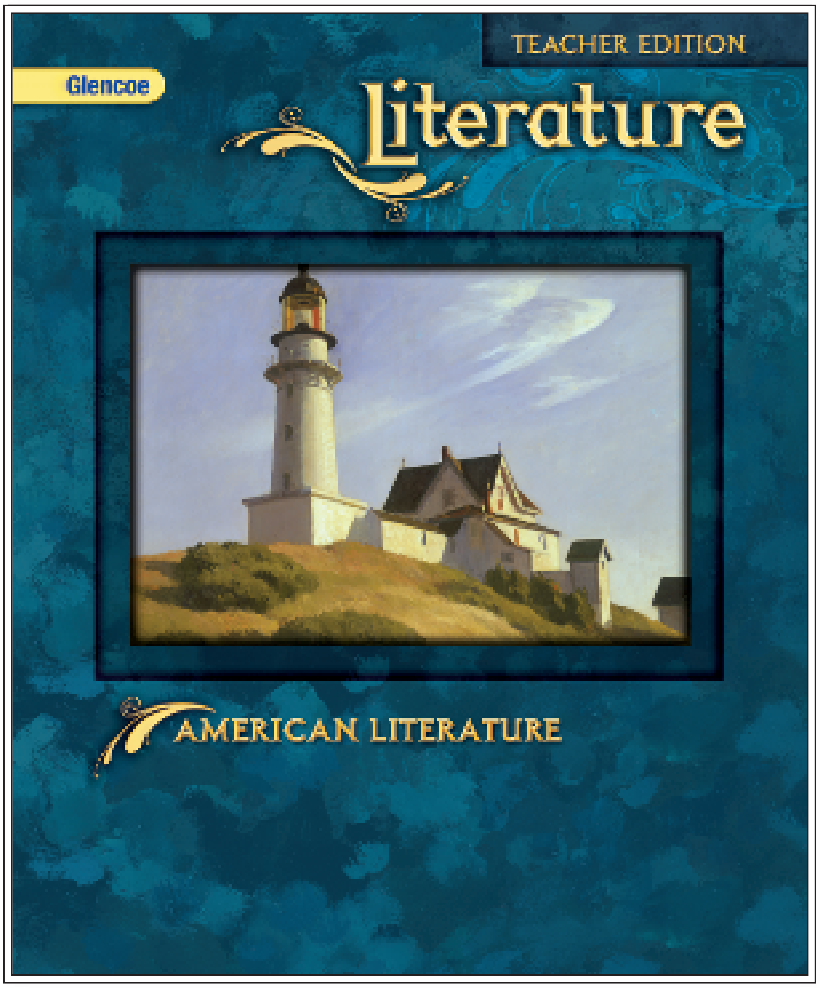
Glencoe

Literature

AMERICAN LITERATURE

Teacher Wraparound Edition

CONTENTS ▷



TEACHER EDITION
Glencoe
Literature
AMERICAN LITERATURE

TEACHER EDITION

Program Consultants

Jeffrey D. Wilhelm, Ph.D.
Douglas Fisher, Ph.D.
Beverly Ann Chin, Ph.D.
Jacqueline Jones Royster, DA

Mc Graw Hill Glencoe

Acknowledgments

Grateful acknowledgment is given authors, publishers, photographers, museums, and agents for permission to reprint the following copyrighted material. Every effort has been made to determine copyright owners. In case of any omissions, the Publisher will be pleased to make suitable acknowledgments in future editions.

Acknowledgments continued on page R110.

Copyright © 2009 by the McGraw-Hill Companies, Inc. All rights reserved. Except as permitted under the United States Copyright Act, no part of this publication may be reproduced or distributed in any form or by any means, or stored in a database or retrieval system, without prior permission of the publisher.

TIME © Time, Inc. TIME and the red border design are trademarks of Time, Inc. used under license.

Send all inquiries to:
Glencoe/McGraw-Hill
8787 Orion Place
Columbus, OH 43240-4027

ISBN: (student edition) 978-0-07-877980-0
MHID: (student edition) 0-07-877980-4
ISBN: (teacher edition) 978-0-07-877987-9
MHID: (teacher edition) 0-07-877987-1

Printed in the United States of America.

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 027/043 13 12 11 10 09 08

Consultants

Senior Program Consultants

Jeffrey D. Wilhelm, PhD, a former middle and secondary school English and reading teacher, is currently Professor of Education at Boise State University. He is the author or coauthor of numerous articles and several books on the teaching of reading and literacy, including award-winning titles such as You Gotta BE the Book and Reading Don't Fix No Chevys. He also works with local schools as part of the Adolescent Literacy Project and recently helped establish the National Writing Project site at Boise State University.

Douglas Fisher, PhD, is Professor of Language and Literacy Education and Director of Professional Development at San Diego State University, where he teaches English language development and literacy. He also serves as Director of City Heights Educational Pilot, which won the Christa McAuliffe Award from the American Association of State Colleges and Universities. He has published numerous articles on reading and literacy, differentiated instruction, and curriculum design. He is coauthor of the book Improving Adolescent Literacies: Strategies That Work and coeditor of the book Inclusive Urban Schools.

Program Consultants

Beverly Ann Chin, PhD, is Professor of English, Director of the English Teaching Program, former Director of the Montana Writing Project, and former Director of Composition at the University of Montana in Missoula. She currently serves as a Member at Large of the Conference of English Leadership. Dr. Chin is a nationally recognized leader in English language arts standards, curriculum, and assessment. Formerly a high school teacher and an adult education reading teacher, Dr. Chin has taught in English language arts education at several universities and has received awards for her teaching and service.

Jacqueline Jones Royster, DA, is Professor of English and Senior Vice Provost and Executive Dean of the Colleges of Arts and Sciences at The Ohio State University. She is currently on the Writing Advisory Committee of the National Commission on Writing and serves as chair for both the Columbus Literacy Council and the Ohioana Library Association. In addition to the teaching of writing, Dr. Royster's professional interests include the rhetorical history of African American women and the social and cultural implications of literate practices. She has contributed to and helped to edit numerous books, anthologies, and journals.

Advisory Board

Special Consultants

Donald R. Bear, PhD
Professor, Department of Curriculum and Instruction. Director, E. L. Cord Foundation Center for Learning and Literacy at the University of Nevada, Reno. Author of Words Their Way and Words Their Way with English Learners.

The Writers' Express®
Immediate Impact. Lasting Transformation. wex.org

Jana Echevarria, PhD
Professor, Educational Psychology, California State University, Long Beach. Author of Making Content Comprehensible for English Learners: the SIOP Model.

FOLDABLES™ Study Organizer Dinah Zike, MEd, was a classroom teacher and a consultant for many years before she began to develop Foldables®—a variety of easily created graphic organizers. Zike has written and developed more than 150 supplemental books and materials used in classrooms worldwide. Her Big Book of Books and Activities won the Teachers' Choice Award.

Glencoe National Reading and Language Arts Advisory Council

Mary A. Avalos, PhD
Assistant Department Chair, Department of Teaching and Learning
Research Assistant Professor, Department of Teaching and Learning
University of Miami
Coral Gables, Florida

Wanda J. Blanchett, PhD
Associate Dean for Academic Affairs and Associate Professor of Exceptional Education
School of Education
University of Wisconsin–Milwaukee
Milwaukee, Wisconsin

William G. Brozo, PhD
Professor of Literacy
Graduate School of Education
College of Education and Human Development
George Mason University
Fairfax, Virginia

Nancy Drew, EdD
LaPointe Educational Consultants
Corpus Christi, Texas

Susan Florio-Ruane, EdD
Professor
College of Education
Michigan State University
East Lansing, Michigan

Sharon Fontenot O'Neal, PhD
Associate Professor
Texas State University
San Marcos, Texas

Nancy Frey, PhD
Associate Professor of Literacy in Teacher Education
School of Teacher Education
San Diego State University
San Diego, California

Victoria Ridgeway Gillis, PhD
Associate Professor
Reading Education
Clemson University
Clemson, South Carolina

Kimberly Lawless, PhD
Associate Professor
Curriculum, Instruction and Evaluation
College of Education
University of Illinois at Chicago
Chicago, Illinois

William Ray, MA
Lincoln-Sudbury Regional High School
Sudbury, Massachusetts

Janet Saito-Furukawa, MEd
English Language Arts Specialist
District 4
Los Angeles, California

Bonnie Valdes, MEd
Independent Reading Consultant
CRISS Master Trainer
Largo, Florida

Teacher Reviewers

The following teachers contributed to the review of Glencoe Literature.

Bridget M. Agnew
St. Michael School
Chicago, Illinois

Monica Anzaldua Araiza
Dr. Juliet V. Garcia Middle School
Brownsville, Texas

Katherine R. Baer
Howard County Public Schools
Ellicott City, Maryland

Tanya Baxter
Roald Amundsen High School
Chicago, Illinois

Danielle R. Brain
Thomas R. Proctor Senior High School
Utica, New York

Yolanda Conder
Owasso Mid-High School
Owasso, Oklahoma

Gwenn de Mauriac
The Wiscasset Schools
Wiscasset, Maine

Courtney Doan
Bloomington High School
Bloomington, Illinois

Susan M. Griffin
Edison Preparatory School
Tulsa, Oklahoma

Cindi Davis Harris
Helix Charter High School
La Mesa, California

Joseph F. Hutchinson
Toledo Public Schools
Toledo, Ohio

Ginger Jordan
Florien High School
Florien, Louisiana

Dianne Konkel
Cypress Lake Middle School
Fort Myers, Florida

Melanie A. LaFleur
Many High School
Many, Louisiana

Patricia Lee
Radnor Middle School
Wayne, Pennsylvania

Linda Copley Lemons
Cleveland High School
Cleveland, Tennessee

Heather S. Lewis
Waverly Middle School
Lansing, Michigan

Sandra C. Lott
Aiken Optional School
Alexandria, Louisiana

Connie M. Malacarne
O'Fallon Township High School
O'Fallon, Illinois

Lori Howton Means
Edward A. Fulton Junior High School
O'Fallon, Illinois

Claire C. Meitl
Howard County Public Schools
Ellicott City, Maryland

Patricia P. Mitcham
Mohawk High School (Retired)
New Castle, Pennsylvania

Lisa Morefield
South-Western Career Academy
Grove City, Ohio

Kevin M. Morrison
Hazelwood East High School
St. Louis, Missouri

Jenine M. Pokorak
School Without Walls Senior High School
Washington, DC

Susan Winslow Putnam
Butler High School
Matthews, North Carolina

Paul C. Putnoki
Torrington Middle School
Torrington, Connecticut

Jane Thompson Rae
Cab Calloway High School of the Arts
Wilmington, Delaware

Stephanie L. Robin
N. P. Moss Middle School
Lafayette, Louisiana

Ann C. Ryan
Lindenwold High School
Lindenwold, New Jersey

Pamela Schoen
Hopkins High School
Minnetonka, Minnesota

Megan Schumacher
Friends' Central School
Wynnewood, Pennsylvania

Fareeda J. Shabazz
Paul Revere Elementary School
Chicago, Illinois

Molly Steinlage
Brookpark Middle School
Grove City, Ohio

Barry Stevenson
Garnet Valley Middle School
Glen Mills, Pennsylvania

Paul Stevenson
Edison Preparatory School
Tulsa, Oklahoma

Kathy Thompson
Owasso Mid-High School
Owasso, Oklahoma

Table of Contents for the Student Edition and Teacher Edition T10
Correlations by Standard T44
Correlations by Selection T48
How to Use Glencoe Literature T52

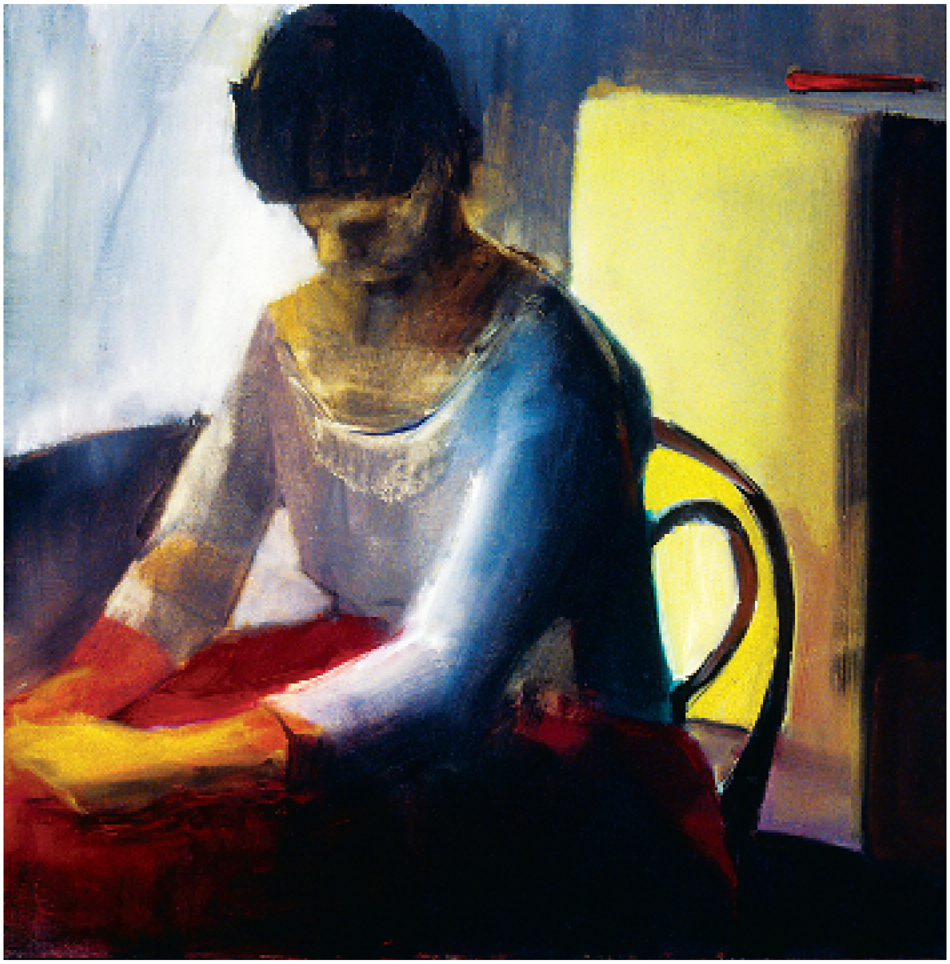
American Literature Scope and Sequence T56

Essential Course of Study T60

Teacher Edition Walk-Through T64

Guide to Readability T72



The Headless Horseman Pursuing Ichabod Crane, 1858. John Quidor. Oil on canvas. Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC.

African American Vernacular English T73

Language Transfers T76

Classroom Resources

Print Resources T88

Technology Resources T91

Library Resources T95

Book Overview

How to Use Glencoe Literature T44
Be Cyber Safe and Smart 3

UNIT ONE

Early America Beginnings–1800 5
Part 1: The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling 19
Part 2: Life in the New World 55
Part 3: The Road to Independence 103

UNIT TWO

American Romanticism 1800–1860 173
Part 1: Individualism and Nature 187
Part 2: The Dark Side of Romanticism 237

UNIT THREE

The Civil War Era 1850–1880 329
Part 1: Resistance to Slavery 343
Part 2: The Civil War: A Nation Divided 373
Part 3: A Poetic Revolution 407

UNIT FOUR

Regionalism and Realism 1880–1910 481
Part 1: Regionalism and Local Color 495
Part 2: Realism and Naturalism 535

The Jolly Flatboatmen, 1877–78. George Caleb Bingham. Oil on canvas, 26 1/16 x 36 3/8 in. Daniel J. Terra Acquisition Endowment Fund, 1992. Terra Foundation for American Art, Chicago, IL.

Room in New York, 1932. Edward Hopper. Oil on Canvas, 28½ x 35½ in. F.M. Hall Collection.

UNIT FIVE

Beginnings of the Modern Age 1910–1930s 645
Part 1: Modern Poetry 659
Part 2: Modern Fiction 739
Part 3: The Harlem Renaissance 785

UNIT SIX

From Depression to Cold War 1930s–1960s 851
Part 1: The New Regionalism and the City 865
Part 2: The United States and the World 969

UNIT SEVEN

Into the 21st Century 1960s–Present 1137
Part 1: An Era of Protest 1151
Part 2: Nature and Technology 1213
Part 3: Extending and Remaking Traditions 1263

Reference Section

Literary Terms Handbook R1
Foldables® R22
Functional Documents R24
Writing Handbook R30
Reading Handbook R40
Language Handbook R42
Logic and Persuasion Handbook R62
Glossary/Glosario R66
Academic Word List R89
Index of Skills R92
Index of Authors and Titles R107
Acknowledgments R110

Contents

UNIT ONE

Early America

BEGINNINGS–1800

Skills and Standards

Timeline 6
By the Numbers 8
Being There 9
Historical, Social, and Cultural Forces 10
Big Ideas 11
ANONYMOUS I Have Killed the Deer .... Song 13
WILLIAM BRADFORD
from Of Plymouth Plantation .... Memoir 15
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN
from The Autobiography .... Autobiography 17
Wrap-Up 18

Part 1

THE SACRED EARTH AND THE POWER OF STORYTELLING

Literary History Native American Mythology 20
Archetype, Identify Sequence JAMES MOONEY How the World Was Made .... Myth 22

> "There is another world under this, and it is like ours in everything . . ."
>
> —Cherokee Myth

Tlingit Raven Rattle, ca. 1850. Native American. The Lowe Art Museum, The University of Miami.

Cultural Perspective
N. SCOTT MOMADAY
from The Way to Rainy Mountain .... Memoir 27

Comparing Literature Across Time and Place 33

Oral Tradition, Question

JOSEPH BRUCHAC The Sky Tree .... Myth 34

CHINUA ACHEBE AND JOHN IROAGANACHI
How the Leopard Got His Claws .... Myth 38

LESLIE MARMON SILKO
Prayer to the Pacific .... Poem 44

Author's Purpose, Draw Conclusions About Culture

DEKANAWIDA
from The Iroquois Constitution .... Public Document 47

Vocabulary Workshop Academic Vocabulary 53

Part 2

LIFE IN THE NEW WORLD

Point of View, Recognize Bias

ÁLVAR NÚÑEZ CABEZA DE VACA
from La Relación .... Memoir 56

Diction, Monitor Comprehension

WILLIAM BRADFORD
from Of Plymouth Plantation .... Memoir 62

The Slave Narrative, Respond

OLAUDAH EQUIANO
from The Life of Olaudah Equiano .... Autobiography 69

> "I had never seen among any people such instances of brutal cruelty . . ."
>
> —Olaudah Equiano

Allusion, Analyze Historical Context

MARY ROWLANDSON
from A Narrative of the Captivity and Restoration of Mrs. Mary Rowlandson .... Memoir 80

Grammar Workshop Sentence Combining 87

Metaphor, Draw Conclusions About Author's Beliefs

ANNE BRADSTREET

Upon the Burning of Our House .... Poem 89

To My Dear and Loving Husband .... Poem 92

Imagery, Examine Connotation

JONATHAN EDWARDS

from Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God .... Speech 95

Vocabulary Workshop Dictionary Usage 102

Part 3

THE ROAD TO INDEPENDENCE

Autobiography, Analyze Voice

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN

from The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin .... Autobiography 104

Aphormism, Connect

from Poor Richard's Almanac .... Proverb 110

Literary History The Rhetoric of Revolution 112

Rhetorical Question, Analyze Figures of Speech

PATRICK HENRY

Speech to the Second Virginia Convention .... Speech 114

Text Structure, Evaluate Argument

THOMAS JEFFERSON

The Declaration of Independence .... Public Document 120

WALTER ISAACSON

TIME How They Chose These Words 128

Vocabulary Workshop Word Origins: Understanding Political and Historical Terms 131

Tone, Summarize

THOMAS PAINE

from The Crisis, No. 1 .... Public Document 132

> ". . . the harder the conflict, the more glorious the triumph."
>
> —Thomas Paine

Washington Crossing the Delaware, 1851. Emanuel Gottlieb Leutze. Oil on canvas, 12²/₅ x 21¹/₄ in. Metropolitan Museum of Art, NY.

Couplet, Analyze Structure

PHILLIS WHEATLEY
To His Excellency, General Washington .... Poem 139

Description, Recognize Author's Purpose

ABIGAIL ADAMS Letter to John Adams .... Letter 144

Grammar Workshop Commas: Missing Commas with Nonessential Elements 149

Historical Perspective

DAVID MCCULLOUGH
from John Adams .... Biography 150

Writing Workshop Writing a Persuasive Speech 154

Professional Model

BECKY CAIN
from Proposals for Electoral College Reform .... Speech 155

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshop Delivering a Persuasive Speech 162

Independent Reading 164

Assessment 166

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN
from The Whistle .... Essay 166

UNIT TWO

AMERICAN ROMANTICISM 1800–1860

Timeline 174

By the Numbers 176

Being There 177

Historical, Social, and Cultural Forces 178

Big Ideas 179

RALPH WALDO EMERSON
from Self-Reliance .... Essay 181

HENRY DAVID THOREAU
from The Journal .... Journal 183

EDGAR ALLAN POE
from The Fall of the House of Usher .... Short Story 185

Wrap-Up 186

PART 1

Individualism and Nature

RALPH WALDO EMERSON
Theme, Recognize Author's Purpose
from Nature .... Essay 188
Figurative Language, Draw Conclusions
from Self-Reliance .... Essay 194

MICHAEL D. LEMONICK
TIME The Biology of Joy .... Science Article 198

Thesis, Summarize
MARGARET FULLER
from Woman in the Nineteenth Century .... Essay 203

> "All men are privately influenced by women."
>
> —Margaret Fuller

The Morning Bell (a.k.a. The Old Mill), 1871. Winslow Homer. Oil on canvas, 24 x 38⅛ x 1 in. Yale University Art Gallery.

Literary History The Fireside Poets 210

Metaphor and Connect
HENRY DAVID THOREAU from Walden .... Memoir 212

Comparing Literature Across Time and Place 220

Argument, Evaluate Evidence

HENRY DAVID THOREAU
from Civil Disobedience .... Essay 221

MOHANDAS K. GANDHI
On the Eve of Historic Dandi March .... Speech 229

NELSON MANDELA
from Long Walk to Freedom ....Autobiography 231

PART 2

The Dark Side of Romanticism

Literary History American Short Stories 238

Characterization, Make and Verify Predictions

WASHINGTON IRVING
The Devil and Tom Walker .... Short Story 240

Narrative Poem, Analyze Sound Devices

EDGAR ALLAN POE The Raven ....Poem 254

Suspense, Identify Sequence

The Pit and the Pendulum .... Short Story 262

Vocabulary Workshop Context Clues.. 277

Symbol, Make Inferences

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE
The Minister's Black Veil............................... Short Story 278

Grammar Workshop
Misplaced and Dangling Modifiers... 293

Motivation, Monitor Comprehension

HERMAN MELVILLE from Moby-Dick..................Novel 294

> "He looked not unlike the weather horizon when a storm is coming up . . . "
>
> —Herman Melville

Historical Perspective

NATHANIEL PHILBRICK
from In the Heart of the Sea .... Essay 306

Writing Workshop Writing a Reflective Essay 310

Professional Model

ANNIE DILLARD
from An American Childhood .... Memoir 311

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshop Delivering a Reflective Essay 318

Independent Reading 320

Assessment 322

RALPH WALDO EMERSON from Self-Reliance .... Essay 322

UNIT THREE

The Civil War Era

1850–1880

Timeline 330

By the Numbers 332

Being There 333

Historical, Social, and Cultural Forces 334

Big Ideas 335

FREDERICK DOUGLASS from The Meaning of July Fourth for the Negro .... Speech 337

ABRAHAM LINCOLN from Second Inaugural Address, March 4, 1865 .... Speech 339

WALT WHITMAN Cavalry Crossing a Ford .... Poem 341

EMILY DICKINSON The Lightening is a Yellow Fork .... Poem 341

Wrap-Up 342

PART 1

Resistance to Slavery

Refrain,
Analyze Historical Context

ANONYMOUS Swing Low, Sweet Chariot .... Song 344

Go Down, Moses .... Song 347

Keep Your Hand on the Plow .... Song 348

> "Oppressed so hard they could not stand, Let my people go."
>
> —from "Go Down, Moses"

Going to Church, 1940–1941. William H. Johnson. Oil on burlap, 38⅛ x 45½ in. Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC.

Comparing Literature Across Time and Place 350

Autobiography,
Analyze Cause and Effect

FREDERICK DOUGLASS from My Bondage and My Freedom .... Autobiography 351

ROBERT HAYDEN Frederick Douglass .... Poem 359

QUINCY TROUPE In Texas Grass .... Poem 360

Literary History Slave Narratives and Civil War Memoirs, Letters, and Diaries 362

RICHARD LACAYO
TIME Slavery Under Glass 364

Oratory, Evaluate Argument

SOJOURNER TRUTH And Ain't I a Woman? ..... Speech 368

Vocabulary Workshop Denotation and Connotation 372

PART 2

The Civil War: A Nation Divided

Journal, Distinguish Fact and Opinion
MARY CHESNUT from Mary Chesnut's Civil War .... Memoir 374

Grammar Workshop Using Transitional Expressions 381

Diction, Determine Main Idea and Supporting Details
ROBERT E. LEE from Letter to His Family .... Letter 382

Point of View, Make and Verify Predictions
AMBROSE BIERCE
An Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge .... Short Story 387

Parallelism, Analyze Style
ABRAHAM LINCOLN
The Gettysburg Address .... Speech 400

Political Perspective
GARY WILLS from Lincoln at Gettysburg .... Essay 404

PART 3

A Poetic Revolution

Free Verse, Paraphrase
WALT WHITMAN I Hear America Singing .... Poem 408

When I Heard the Learn'd Astronomer .... Poem 411

Free Verse, Paraphrase
A Sight in Camp in the Daybreak Gray and Dim .... Poem 413

Beat! Beat! Drums! .... Poem 414

Historical Narrative
from Specimen Days .... Memoir 416

Voice, Draw Conclusions
from Song of Myself .... Poem 421

"I am old and young, of the foolish as much as the wise . . ."

—Walt Whitman

Literary Perspective

JUSTIN KAPLAN

from Walt Whitman: A Life .... Biography 430

Rhyme, Analyze Sound Devices

EMILY DICKINSON If you were coming in the Fall............................... Poem 437

My life closed twice before its close............................... Poem 440

The Soul selects her own Society............................... Poem 441

Much Madness is divinest Sense............................... Poem 442

Success is counted sweetest............................... Poem 443

I heard a Fly buzz when I died............................... Poem 445

The Bustle in a House............................... Poem 446

Personification, Clarify Meaning

Because I could not stop for Death............................... Poem 448

There's a certain Slant of light............................... Poem 450

This is my letter to the World............................... Poem 451

Literary Perspective

BILLY COLLINS

from Emily Dickinson: An Introduction .... Essay 455

Writing Workshop Historical Research Paper............................. 458

Multimedia Presentation Workshop Delivering a Multimedia Report on a Historical Investigation.......................... 468

Independent Reading 472

Assessment.. 474

FREDERICK DOUGLASS

from My Bondage and My Freedom............Autobiography 474

UNIT FOUR

Regionalism and Realism

1880–1910

Timeline... 482

By the Numbers... 484

Being There... 485

Historical, Social, and Cultural Forces 486
Big Ideas 487
WILLA CATHER from O Pioneers! .... Novel 489
KATE CHOPIN from The Awakening .... Novel 491
STEPHEN CRANE
from The Red Badge of Courage .... Novel 493
Wrap-Up 494

PART 1

Regionalism and Local Color

Dialect, Analyze Comic Devices
MARK TWAIN The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County .... Short Story 496
Analogy, Compare and Contrast Language
Two Views of the River .... Memoir 504
NANCY GIBBS
TIME Life Along the Mississippi 508
Dramatic Monologue, Draw Conclusions About Characters
EDGAR LEE MASTERS
Lucinda Matlock .... Poem 514
Fiddler Jones .... Poem 517
Point of View, Identify Sequence
WILLA CATHER A Wagner Matinée .... Short Story 519
Grammar Workshop Appositives 530
Tone, Evaluate Style
CHIEF JOSEPH
I Will Fight No More Forever .... Speech 531

PART 2

Realism and Naturalism

Literary History Urban America's Two Faces 536
Flashback, Make and Verify Predictions
EDITH WHARTON April Showers .... Short Story 538
Vocabulary Workshop Thesaurus Use 549

Comparing Literature Across Time and Place 550

Conflict, Apply Background Knowledge

KATE CHOPIN The Story of an Hour .... Short Story 551
ANTON CHEKHOV The Darling .... Short Story 557
GABRIELA MISTRAL Richness .... Poem 566

Rhyme Scheme, Clarify Meaning

PAUL LAURENCE DUNBAR Douglass .... Poem 568
We Wear the Mask .... Poem 571

Irony, Make Inferences About Characters

EDWIN ARLINGTON ROBINSON
Richard Cory .... Poem 573
Miniver Cheevy .... Poem 576

Author's Purpose, Summarize

STEPHEN CRANE The Open Boat .... Short Story 578

> "White waves paced to and fro in the moonlight."
>
> —Stephen Crane

Moonlit Shipwreck at Sea, 1901. Thomas Moran.
Oil on canvas, 30 x 40¼ in. Private collection.

Setting, Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships

JACK LONDON To Build a Fire .... Short Story 601

Geographic Perspective
BARRY LOPEZ from Arctic Dreams: Imagination and Desire in a Northern Landscape .... Essay 617

Writing Workshop Literary Analysis 624

Professional Model
BETTINA L. KNAPP
from Stephen Crane: Tales of Adventure .... Essay 625

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshop
Oral Response to Literature 634

Independent Reading 636

Assessment 638

UPTON SINCLAIR from The Jungle .... Novel 638

UNIT FIVE

BEGINNINGS OF THE MODERN AGE

1910–1930s

Timeline 646

By the Numbers 648

Being There 649

Historical, Social, and Cultural Forces 650

Big Ideas 651

E. E. CUMMINGS from I: Six Nonlectures .... Speech 653

ERNEST HEMINGWAY
from The Sun Also Rises .... Novel 655

LANGSTON HUGHES from The Negro Artist and the Racial Mountain .... Essay 657

Wrap-Up 658

PART 1

MODERN POETRY

Literary History Symbolist and Imagist Poetry 660

Imagery, Question

EZRA POUND A Pact .... Poem 662

In a Station of the Metro .... Poem 662

Allusion, Connect to Cultural Context

T. S. ELIOT
The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock .... Poem 666

Form, Recognize Author's Purpose

WILLIAM CARLOS WILLIAMS
The Red Wheelbarrow .... Poem 676

This Is Just to Say .... Poem 679

"Forgive me
They were delicious
So sweet
And so cold"

—William Carlos Williams

Plums and Pears. Paul Cezanne. Oil on canvas, 7¾ x 14 in. The Barnes Foundation Collection, Merion Station, PA.

Vocabulary Workshop
Compound Words 681

Structure, Interpret Imagery
AMY LOWELL Summer Rain .... Poem 682
Fireworks .... Poem 685

Comparing Literature Across Time and Place 687

Theme, Analyze Style
ARCHIBALD MACLEISH Ars Poetica .... Poem 688
RAINER MARIA RILKE
from Letters to a Young Poet .... Letter 692
MARK STRAND Eating Poetry .... Poem 694
ISHMAEL REED beware : do not read this poem .... Poem 696

Tone, Recognize Author's Purpose
WALLACE STEVENS Study of Two Pears .... Poem 699 from The Man with the Blue Guitar .... Poem 702

Rhythm, Analyze Style
E. E. CUMMINGS somewhere I have never travelled,gladly beyond .... Poem 704 anyone lived in a pretty how town .... Poem 707

Apostrophe, Make Inferences About Theme
CARL SANDBURG Chicago .... Poem 709
Grass .... Poem 712

Blank Verse, Compare and Contrast Speakers
ROBERT FROST Mending Wall .... Poem 714
Birches .... Poem 718
Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening .... Poem 721

Rhyme Scheme, Compare and Contrast Speakers
Acquainted with the Night .... Poem 723
The Death of the Hired Man .... Poem 725
Political Perspective
JOHN F. KENNEDY
In Praise of Robert Frost .... Speech 735

PART 2

MODERN FICTION

Literary History The Modern American Short Story 740
Style, Recognize Author's Purpose
ERNEST HEMINGWAY
In Another Country .... Short Story 742
Grammar Workshop Sentence Structure: Using Coordinating Conjunctions 751
Motivation, Evaluate Sensory Details
F. SCOTT FITZGERALD Winter Dreams .... Short Story 752
Stream of Consciousness, Draw Conclusions About the Protagonist
KATHERINE ANNE PORTER The Jilting of Granny Weatherall .... Short Story 773

PART 3

THE HARLEM RENAISSANCE

Sonnet, Interpret Imagery
JAMES WELDON JOHNSON My City .... Poem 786
Voice, Analyze Language
ZORA NEALE HURSTON
from Dust Tracks on a Road .... Autobiography 790 Vocabulary Workshop Distinct Meanings: Understanding Homonyms 800
Meter, Analyze Tone
CLAUDE MCKAY If We Must Die .... Poem 801
The Tropics in New York .... Poem 804
ROBERT HUGHES
TIME Stanzas from a Black Epic 806
Repetition, Make Predictions About Theme
LANGSTON HUGHES I, Too .... Poem 810
The Negro Speaks of Rivers .... Poem 813
Juxtaposition, Analyze Concrete Details
When the Negro Was in Vogue .... Autobiography 817

Metaphor, Connect to Personal Experience

ARNA BONTEMPS
A black man talks of reaping .... Poem 824

Stanza, Connect to Contemporary Issues

COUNTEE CULLEN Any Human to Another .... Poem 828

> "Your grief and mine must intertwine
> Like sea and river."
>
> —Countee Cullen

Rondout, New York, c. 1907. Leon Dabo. Oil on canvas. Indianapolis Museum of Art, IN.

Writing Workshop Writing a Literary Analysis: Poetry 832

Professional Model

LAWRENCE RAAB
from Robert Frost's "Mending Wall" .... Essay 833

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshop Presenting an Oral Interpretation of a Poem 840

Independent Reading 842

Assessment 844

LANGSTON HUGHES Early Autumn .... Short Story 844

UNIT SIX

FROM DEPRESSION TO COLD WAR

1930s–1960s

Timeline 852

By the Numbers 854

Being There 855

Historical, Social, and Cultural Forces 856

Big Ideas 857

JOHN STEINBECK
from The Grapes of Wrath..Novel 859

GWENDOLYN BROOKS kitchenette building from A Street in Bronzeville.......................................Poem 861

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT
from The Four Freedoms.. Speech 863

Wrap-Up 864

PART 1

The New Regionalism and the City

Implied Theme, Connect to Personal Experience
JOHN STEINBECK Breakfast .... Short Story 866

Vocabulary Workshop Word Parts: Understanding Roots, Prefixes, and Suffixes 873

Foreshadowing, Identify Sequence
WILLIAM FAULKNER A Rose for Emily ...... Short Story 874

Address upon Receiving the Nobel Prize for Literature...................................... Speech 884

Description, Visualize
EUDORA WELTY A Worn Path..................... Short Story 888

Flashforward, Compare and Contrast Characters
RICHARD WRIGHT from Black Boy.........Autobiography 898

Historical Perspective
ERSKINE CALDWELL AND MARGARET BOURKE-WHITE
You Have Seen Their Faces ....Photo Essay 909

Dialogue, Apply Background Knowledge
FLANNERY O'CONNOR
The Life You Save May Be Your Own .... Short Story 913

Grammar Workshop Sentence Structure: Introductory Phrases and Clauses...927

Plot, Analyze Text Structure
E. B. WHITE
The Second Tree from the Corner................... Short Story 928

Rhyme Scheme, Evaluate Diction
GWENDOLYN BROOKS To Don at Salaam ....Poem 937

The Bean Eaters...Poem 940

Dialect, Analyze Characterization
BERNARD MALAMUD The Magic Barrel .... Short Story 942

Foil, Make Generalizations About Characters
JAMES BALDWIN The Rockpile.................. Short Story 959

PART 2

The United States and The World

Author's Purpose, Distinguish Fact and Opinion

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT
War Message to Congress ....Public Document 970

Vocabulary Workshop
Word Origins: Math and Science.. 975

Imagery, Visualize

RANDALL JARRELL
The Death of the Ball Turret Gunner.......................Poem 976

Comparing Literature Across Time and Place..980

Narrator, Activate Prior Knowledge

ELIE WIESEL
from All Rivers Run to the Sea..............................Memoir 981

GARRETT HONGO from Kubota..........................Memoir 993

ART SPIEGELMAN
from Maus: A Survivor's Tale.....................Graphic Novel 998

Point of View, Draw Conclusions

JOHN HERSEY from Hiroshima.............................. Essay .. 1002

Idiom, Respond to Plot and Characters

TOMÁS RIVERA The Portrait .... Short Story .. 1017

Literary History Cultural Rebels:
Writers of the Beat Generation.. 1024

Dialogue, Draw Conclusions About Characters

ARTHUR MILLER The Crucible .... Drama .. 1026

> "The rumor of witchcraft is all about . . ."
>
> —Arthur Miller

Literary History Modern American Drama 1116

Writing Workshop Writing an Autobiographical Narrative 1118

Professional Model

EUDORA WELTY
from One Writer's Beginnings ....Autobiography .. 1119

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshop
Presenting an Art or Photo Essay 1126

Independent Reading 1128

Assessment 1130

MARGARET BOURKE-WHITE
from Dust Changes America..................................... Essay .. 1130

UNIT SEVEN

Into the 21st Century

1960s–Present

Timeline 1138
By the Numbers... 1140
Being There.. 1141
Historical, Social, and Cultural Forces 1142
Big Ideas 1143

MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR.
from Letter from a Birmingham Jail .... Letter .. 1145

DAVID WAGONER from Lost.................................Poem .. 1147

JUDITH ORTIZ COFER
from The Latin Deli: An Ars Poetica ....Poem .. 1149

Wrap-Up 1150

PART 1 An Era of Protest

RITA DOVE
TIME The Torchbearer .... Profile .. 1152

Structure, Paraphrase
MARTIN LUTHER KING JR.
from Stride Toward Freedom .... Memoir .. 1155

Anecdote, Activate Prior Knowledge
ALICE WALKER Choice: A Tribute to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. .... Essay .. 1161

Vocabulary Workshop

Loaded Words 1166

Oral History, Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships
STUDS TERKEL from Working: Roberto Acuna, Farm Worker .... Oral History .. 1167

Grammar Workshop

Avoid Run-On Sentences 1179

Comparing Literature Across Time and Place 1180

Mood, Analyze Concrete Details
TIM O'BRIEN Ambush .... Short Story .. 1181
TRAN MONG TU The Gift in Wartime .... Poem .. 1186
PIN YATHAY from Stay Alive, My Son .... Memoir .. 1187
YUSEF KOMUNYAKAA
Camouflaging the Chimera .... Poem .. 1190

Figurative Language, Clarify Meaning
W. S. MERWIN The Asians Dying .... Poem .. 1192
Separation .... Poem .. 1195
When You Go Away .... Poem .. 1195

Artistic Perspective

MAYA LIN
Proposal for the Vietnam Veterans Memorial .... Public Document .. 1198

Rhythm, Analyze Rhetorical Devices
BOB DYLAN A Hard Rain's A-Gonna Fall .... Song .. 1202

> “I saw ten thousand talkers whose tongues were all broken . . .”
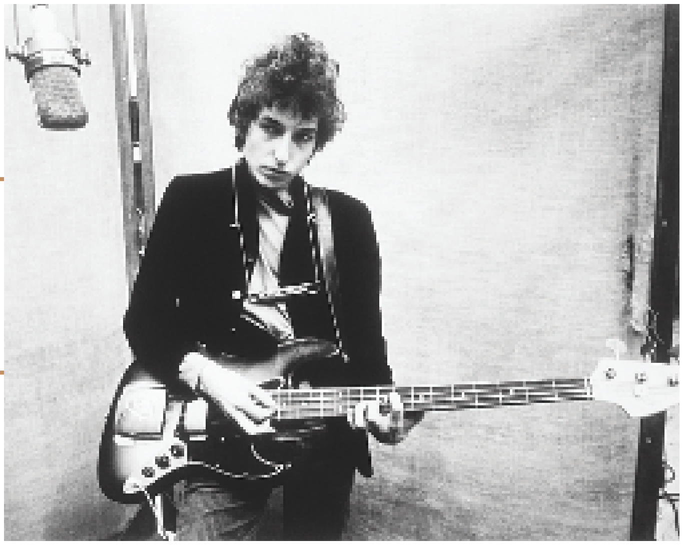
>
> —Bob Dylan



Verse Paragraph, Examine Connotation and Denotation
ANNE SEXTON Courage .... Poem .. 1208

PART 2

Nature and Technology

Tone, Evaluate Sensory Details
ELIZABETH BISHOP The Fish .... Poem .. 1214
Filling Station .... Poem .. 1218

Simile, Interpret Imagery
THEODORE ROETHKE Root Cellar .... Poem .. 1222

Mood, Analyze Voice
SYLVIA PLATH Sleep in the Mojave Desert .... Poem .. 1226
Crossing the Water .... Poem .. 1229

Personification, Evaluate Figures of Speech
STANLEY KUNITZ The War Against the Trees ...... Poem .. 1232

Scientific Perspective

RACHEL CARSON
from Silent Spring .... Essay .. 1236

Satire, Identify Genre
URSULA K. LE GUIN SQ .... Short Story .. 1239

Indirect Characterization, Connect to Contemporary Issues
JULIA ALVAREZ Snow .... Short Story .. 1253

Free Verse, Make Inferences About Theme
LOUISE GLÜCK Cottonmouth Country .... Poem .. 1257
Daisies .... Poem .. 1260

PART 3

Extending and Remaking Traditions

Exposition, Make Inferences About Characters

MAXINE HONG KINGSTON

from The Woman Warrior .... Memoir .. 1264

A Sunny Day with Gentle Breeze, 1993. Zifen Qian. Oil on canvas, 42 x 56 in. Private collection.

> "Finally Brave Orchid's children quit wandering and drooped on a railing."
>
> —Maxine Hong Kingston

Frame Story, Question

RAYMOND CARVER

Everything Stuck to Him .... Short Story .. 1274

Point of View, Examine Connotations

JUDITH ORTIZ COFER

El Olvido (Según las Madres).................................... Poem .. 1282

Symbol, Summarize

NAOMI SHIHAB NYE

My Father and the Figtree .... Poem .. 1286

Personification, Connect to Personal Experience

BILLY COLLINS I Chop Some Parsley While Listening to Art Blakey's Version of "Three Blind Mice" .... Poem .. 1291

Catalog, Distiguishing Fact and Opinion

LOUISE ERDRICH The Names of Women .... Essay .. 1296

Imagery, Analyze Sound Devices

SANDRA CISNEROS
Salvador Late or Early .... Short Story .. 1304

Essay, Determine Main Idea and Supporting Details

TONI MORRISON
Thoughts on the African-American Novel .... Essay .. 1308

Vocabulary Workshop Word Parts: Suffixes That Form Nouns ... 1315

Literary History From Comic Strips to Graphic Novels 1316

Magical Realism, Visualize

EDWIDGE DANTICAT
Nineteen Thirty-Seven .... Short Story .. 1318

Narrative Poetry, Connect to Cultural Context

AI The Man With the Saxophone .... Poem .. 1331

Motif, Make Generalizations

ROSARIO MORALES AND AURORA LEVINS MORALES
Ending Poem .... Poem .. 1336

Writing Workshop Editorial 1342

Professional Model
JEREMY BLACHMAN
Job Posting: The New York Times .... Editorial .. 1343

Media Literacy Workshop Campaign Commercials 1352

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshop
Conducting a Debate 1350

Independent Reading 1358

Assessment 1360

ANNIE DILLARD
from "Transfiguration" .... Essay .. 1360

WILLIAM STAFFORD
Traveling Through the Dark .... Poem .. 1361

Reference Section

Literary Terms Handbook R1
Foldables® R22
Functional Documents R24
Writing Handbook R30
Using the Traits of Strong Writing R30
Research Paper Writing R33
Reading Handbook R40
Language Handbook R42
Grammar Glossary R42
Troubleshooter R49
Mechanics R55
Spelling R59
Logic and Persuasion Handbook R62
Glossary/Glosario R66
Academic Word List R89
Index of Skills R92
Index of Authors and Titles R107
Acknowledgments R110

Family in Interior. Poisson. Haitian Folk Art.

Selections by Genre

Short Story

from The Fall of the House of Usher 185
Edgar Allan Poe

The Devil and Tom Walker 242
Washington Irving

The Pit and the Pendulum 263
Edgar Allan Poe

The Minister's Black Veil.............................280
Nathaniel Hawthorne

An Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge 389
Ambrose Bierce

The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County.................................498
Mark Twain

A Wagner Matinee 521
Willa Cather

April Showers...540
Edith Wharton

Story of an Hour..553
Kate Chopin

The Darling...557
Anton Chekhov

The Open Boat 580
Stephen Crane

To Build a Fire..603
Jack London

In Another Country 744
Ernest Hemingway

Winter Dreams 754
F. Scott Fitzgerald

The Jilting of Granny Weatherall..................775
Katherine Anne Porter

Early Autumn..844
Langston Hughes

Breakfast..868
John Steinbeck

A Rose for Emily 876
William Faulkner

A Worn Path...890
Eudora Welty

The Life You Save May Be Your Own 915
Flannery O'Conner

The Second Tree from the Corner.................930
E. B. White

The Magic Barrel 944
Bernard Malamud

The Rockpile...961
James Baldwin

The Portrait 1019
Tomas Rivera

Ambush 1183
Tim O'Brien

SQ...1241
Ursula K. Le Guin

Snow 1255
Julia Alvarez

Everything Stuck to Him 1276
Raymond Carver

Salvador Late or Early 1306
Sandra Cisneros

Nineteen Thirty-Seven 1320
Edwidge Danticat

Drama

The Crucible 1028
Arthur Miller

Graphic Novel

from Maus: A Survivor's Tale.......................998
Art Spiegelman

Myth

How the World Was Made 24
James Mooney

The Sky Tree..35
Joseph Bruchac

How the Leopard Got His Claws 38
Chinua Achebe and John Iroaganachi

Novel

from Moby Dick 296
Herman Melville

from O Pioneers! 489
Willa Cather

from The Awakening 491
Kate Chopin

from The Red Badge of Courage 493
Stephen Crane

from The Jungle 638
Upton Sinclair

from The Sun Also Rises 655
Ernest Hemingway

from The Grapes of Wrath 859
John Steinbeck

Poetry

Prayer to the Pacific 44
Leslie Marmon Silko

Upon the Burning of Our House 91
Anne Bradstreet

To My Dear and Loving Husband 92
Anne Bradstreet

To His Excellency, General Washington 141
Phillis Wheatley

The Raven 256
Edgar Allan Poe

The Lightning is a Yellow Fork 341
Emily Dickinson

Cavalry Crossing a Ford 341
Walt Whitman

Frederick Douglass 359
Robert Hayden

In Texas Grass 360
Quincy Troupe

I Hear America Singing 410
Walt Whitman

When I Heard the Learn'd Astronomer 411
Walt Whitman

A Sight in Camp in the Daybreak Gray and Dim 413
Walt Whitman

Beat! Beat! Drums! 414
Walt Whitman

from Song of Myself 421
Walt Whitman

If you were coming in the Fall 436
Emily Dickinson

My life closed twice before its close 440
Emily Dickinson

The Soul selects her own Society 441
Emily Dickinson

Much Madness is divinest Sense 442
Emily Dickinson

Success is counted sweetest 443
Emily Dickinson

I heard a Fly buzz when I died 445
Emily Dickinson

The Bustle in a House 446
Emily Dickinson

Because I could not stop for Death 448
Emily Dickinson

There's a certain Slant of light 450
Emily Dickinson

This is my letter to the World 451
Emily Dickinson

Lucinda Matlock 516
Edgar Lee Masters

Fiddler Jones 517
Edgar Lee Masters

Richness 566
Gabriela Mistral

Douglass 570
Paul Lawrence Dunbar

We Wear the Mask 571
Paul Lawrence Dunbar

Richard Cory 575
Edwin Arlington Robinson

Miniver Cheevy 576
Edwin Arlington Robinson

In a Station of the Metro 664
Ezra Pound

A Pact 664
Ezra Pound

The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock............668
T. S. Eliot

The Red Wheelbarrow.................................678
William Carlos Williams

This Is Just To Say.....................................679
William Carlos Williams

Summer Rain...684
Amy Lowell

Fireworks..685
Amy Lowell

Ars Poetica...690
Archibald MacLeish

Eating Poetry...694
Mark Strand

beware : do not read this poem......................696
Ishmael Reed

Study of Two Pears 701
Wallace Stevens

from The Man with the Blue Guitar 702
Wallace Stevens

somewhere i have never traveled,gladly beyond 706
E. E. Cummings

anyone lived in a pretty how town.................707
E. E. Cummings

Chicago..711
Carl Sandburg

Grass 712
Carl Sandburg

Mending Wall 716
Robert Frost

Birches 718
Robert Frost

Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening 721
Robert Frost

Acquainted with the Night 723
Robert Frost

The Death of the Hired Man........................725
Robert Frost

My City 788
James Weldon Johnson

If We Must Die..803
Claude McKay

The Tropics in New York.............................804
Claude McKay

I, Too 812
Langston Hughes

The Negro Speaks of Rivers 813
Langston Hughes

A black man talks of reaping 826
Arna Bontemps

Any Human to Another...............................830
Countee Cullen

kitchenette building.....................................861
Gwendolyn Brooks

To Don at Salaam.......................................939
Gwendolyn Brooks

The Bean Eaters..940
Gwendolyn Brooks

The Death of the Ball Turret Gunner...........978
Randall Jarrell

from Lost...1147
David Wagoner

from The Latin Deli: An Ars Poetica...........1149
Judith Ortiz Cofer

The Gift in Wartime 1186
Tran Mong Tu

Camouflaging the Chimera 1190
Yusef Komunyakaa

The Asians Dying 1194
W. S. Merwin

Separation 1195
W. S. Merwin

When You Go Away..................................1195
W. S. Merwin

Courage 1210
Anne Sexton

The Fish 1216
Elizabeth Bishop

Filling Station 1218
Elizabeth Bishop

Root Cellar..1224
Theodore Roethke

Sleep in the Mojave Desert.........................1228
Sylvia Plath

Crossing the Water....1229
Sylvia Plath

The War Against the Trees....1234
Stanley Kunitz

Daisies....1259
Louise Glück

Cottonmouth Country....1260
Louise Glück

El Olvido (Según las Madres)....1284
Judith Ortiz Cofer

My Father and the Figtree....1288
Naomi Shahib Nye

I Chop Some Parsley While Listening to Art Blakey's Version of "Three Blind Mice"....1293
Billy Collins

The Man With the Saxophone....1333
Ai

Ending Poem....1338
Rosario Morales and Aurora Levins Morales

Traveling Through the Dark....1361
William Stafford

Proverb

from Poor Richard's Almanac....110
Benjamin Franklin

Song

I Have Killed the Deer....13
Anonymous

Swing Low, Sweet Chariot....346
Anonymous

Go Down, Moses....347
Anonymous

Keep Your Hand on the Plow....348
Anonymous

A Hard Rain's A-Gonna Fall....1204
Bob Dylan

Biography, Autobiography, and Memoir

from The Way to Rainy Mountain....27
N. Scott Momaday

from La Relación....58
Álvar Núñez Cabeza de Vaca

from Of Plymouth Plantation....64
William Bradford

from The Life of Olaudah Equiano....71
Olaudah Equiano

from A Narrative of the Captivity and Restoration of Mrs. Mary . . .....82
Mary Rowlandson

from The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin....106
Benjamin Franklin

from John Adams....150
David McCullough

from Walden....214
Henry David Thoreau

from Long Walk to Freedom....231
Nelson Mandela

from An American Childhood....311
Annie Dillard

from My Bondage and My Freedom....353
Frederick Douglass

from Mary Chesnut's Civil War....376
Mary Chesnut

from Specimen Days....416
Walt Whitman

from Walt Whitman: A Life....430
Justin Kaplan

Two Views of the River....504
Mark Twain

from Dust Tracks on a Road....792
Zora Neale Hurston

When the Negro Was in Vogue....817
Langston Hughes

from Black Boy....901
Richard Wright

from All Rivers Run to the Sea 983
Elie Wiesel

from Kubota 993
Garrett Hongo

from One Writer's Beginnings 1119
Eudora Welty

from Stride Toward Freedom 1157
Martin Luther King, Jr.

from Stay Alive, My Son 1187
Pin Yathay

from The Woman Warrior 1266
Maxine Hong Kingston

Essay

from The Whistle 166
Benjamin Franklin

from Nature 190
Ralph Waldo Emerson

from Self-Reliance 194
Ralph Waldo Emerson

from Woman in the Nineteenth Century 205
Margaret Fuller

from Civil Disobedience 222
Henry David Thoreau

from In the Heart of the Sea 306
Nathaniel Philbrick

from Self-Reliance 322
Ralph Waldo Emerson

from Lincoln at Gettysburg 404
Gary Wills

from Emily Dickinson: An Introduction 455
Billy Collins

from Arctic Dreams: Imagination and Desire in a Northern Landscape 617
Barry Lopez

from Stephen Crane: Tales of Adventure 625
Bettina L. Knapp

from How the Other Half Lives 639
Jacob Riis

from The Negro Artist and the Racial Mountain 657
Langston Hughes

from Robert Frost's "Mending Wall" 833
Lawrence Raab

from Hiroshima 1001
John Hersey

from Dust Changes America 1130
Margaret Bourke-White

Choice: A Tribute to Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. 1163
Alice Walker

Fable of Tomorrow from Silent Spring 1236
Rachel Carson

The Names of Women 1298
Louise Erdrich

Thoughts on the African-American Novel ...1310
Toni Morrison

from "Transfiguration" 1360
Annie Dillard

Letter, Journal, or Diary

Letter to John Adams 146
Abigail Adams

from The Journal 183
Henry David Thoreau

from Letter to His Family 384
Robert E. Lee

from Letters to a Young Poet 692
Rainer Maria Rilke

from Letter from a Birmingham Jail 1145
Martin Luther King, Jr.

Oral History

from Working: Roberto Acuna, Farm Worker 1169
Studs Terkel

Photo Essay

You Have Seen Their Faces 909
Erskine Caldwell and Margaret Bourke-White

Public Document

from The Iroquois Constitution 49
Dekanawida

The Declaration of Independence 122
Thomas Jefferson

from The Crisis, No. 1 134
Thomas Paine

Speech

from Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God 97
Jonathan Edwards

Speech to the Second Virginia Convention 116
Patrick Henry

from Proposals for Electoral College Reform ...155
Becky Cain

On the Eve of Historic Dandi March 229
Mohandas k. Gandhi

from The Meaning of July Fourth for the Negro 337
Frederick Douglass

from Second Inaugural Address, March 4, 1865 339
Abraham Lincoln

And Ain't I a Woman?................................370
Sojourner Truth

The Gettysburg Address 402
Abraham Lincoln

I Will Fight No More Forever.......................533
Chief Joseph

from I: Six Nonlectures...............................653
E. E. Cummings

In Praise of Robert Frost.............................735
John F. Kennedy

from The Four Freedoms 863
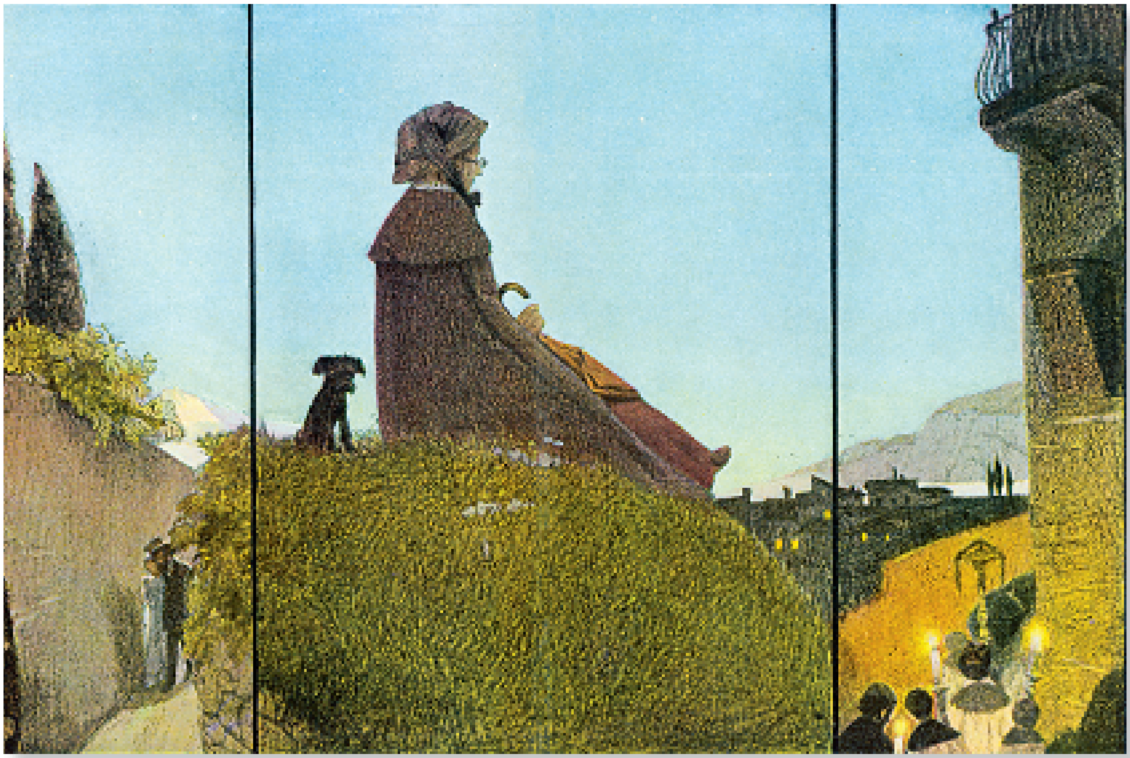
Franklin D. Roosevelt

Address upon Receiving the Nobel Prize for Literature 884
William Faulkner



Contemplating Life, 1903. Richard Pfeiffer.

Features

Perspectives

Award-winning nonfiction book excerpts and primary source documents

Cultural Perspective from The Way to Rainy Mountain 27
N. Scott Momaday

Historical Perspective from John Adams 150
David McCullough

Historical Perspective from In the Heart of the Sea 306
Nathaniel Philbrick

Political Perspective from Lincoln at Gettysburg...404
Gary Wills

Literary Perspective from Walt Whitman: A Life..430
Justin Kaplan

Literary Perspective from Emily Dickinson: An Introduction...455
Billy Collins

Geographic Perspective
from Arctic Dreams: Imagination and Desire in a Northern Landscape...................617
Barry Lopez

Political Perspective "In Praise of Robert Frost" 735
John F. Kennedy

Historical Perspective You Have Seen Their Faces 909
Erskine Caldwell and Margaret Bourke-White

Artistic Perspective Proposal for the Vietnam Memorial....................................1198
Maya Lin

Scientific Perspective Fable of Tomorrow from Silent Spring....................................1236
Rachel Carson

TIME

High-interest, informative magazine articles

How They Chose These Words..................128
Walter Isaacson

The Biology of Joy......................................198
Michael D. Lemonick

Slavery Under Glass.................................364
Richard Lacayo

Life Along the Mississippi.........................508
Nancy Gibbs

Stanzas from a Black Epic.........................806
Robert Hughes

The Torchbearer.....................................1152
Rita Dove

Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

UNIT ONE

The Sky Tree
Joseph Bruchac....34
How the Leopard Got His Claws
Chinua Achebe and John Iroaganachi....38
Prayer to the Pacific
Leslie Marmon Silko....44

UNIT TWO

from Civil Disobedience
Henry David Thoreau....221
On the Eve of Historic Dandi March
Mohandas k. Gandhi....229
from Long Walk to Freedom
Nelson Mandela....231

UNIT THREE

from My Bondage and My Freedom
Frederick Douglass....351
Frederick Douglass
Robert Hayden....359
In Texas Grass
Quincy Troupe....360

UNIT FOUR

Story of an Hour
Kate Chopin....551
The Darling
Anton Chekhov....557
Richness
Gabriela Mistral....566

UNIT FIVE

Ars Poetica
Archibald MacLeish....688
from Letters to a Young Poet
Rainer Maria Rilke....692
Eating Poetry
Mark Strand....694
beware: do not read this poem
Ishmael Reed....696

UNIT SIX

from All Rivers Run to the Sea
Elie Wiesel....981
from Kubota
Garrett Hongo....993
from Maus: A Survivor's Tale
Art Spiegelman....998

UNIT SEVEN

Ambush
Tim O'Brien....1181
The Gift in Wartime
Tran Mong Tu....1186
from Stay Alive, My Son
Pin Yathay....1187
Camouflaging the Chimera
Yusef Komunyakaa....1190

Literary History

Native American Mythology 20
The Rhetoric of Revolution 112
The Fireside Poets 210
The First American Short Stories 238
Slave Narratives and Civil War Memoirs, Letters, and Diaries 362
The Two Faces of Urban America 536
Imagist and Symbolist Poetry 660
The Modern American Short Story 740
Cultural Rebels: Writers of the Beat Generation 1024
Modern American Drama 1116
From Comic Strips to Graphic Novels 1316

Independent Reading

Unit 1 164
Unit 2 320
Unit 3 472
Unit 4 636
Unit 5 842
Unit 6 1128
Unit 7 1358

ASSESSMENT

Unit 1 166
Unit 2 322
Unit 3 474
Unit 4 638
Unit 5 844
Unit 6 1130
Unit 7 1360

AMAZING FANTASY
12¢
15
SPIDER MAN

Skills Workshops

Writing Workshops

Persuasive Speech 154
PROFESSIONAL MODEL: from Proposals for Electoral College Reform by Becky Cain

Reflective Essay 310
PROFESSIONAL MODEL: from An American Childhood by Annie Dillard

Research Report 458

Literary Analysis 624
PROFESSIONAL MODEL: from Stephen Crane: Tales of Adventure by Bettina L. Knapp

Literary Analysis 832
PROFESSIONAL MODEL: from Robert Frost's "Mending Wall" by Lawrence Raab

Creative Nonfiction 1118
PROFESSIONAL MODEL: from One Writer's Beginnings by Eudora Welty

Editorial 1342
PROFESSIONAL MODEL: Job Posting: The New York Times by Jeremy Blachman

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshops

Persuasive Speech 162
Reflective Presentation 318
Multimedia Presentation 468
Oral Response to Literature 634
Oral Interpretation of a Poem 840
Photo Essay 1126
Debate 1350

Media Workshop

Analyze Media Messages 1352

Grammar Workshops

Sentence Combining 87
Clauses as Modifiers 149
Misplaced and Dangling Modifiers 293
Transitional Expressions 381
Appositives 530
Coordinating Conjunctions 751
Introductory Phrases and Clauses 927
Avoid Run-On Sentences 1179

Vocabulary Workshops

Academic Vocabulary 53
Dictionary Use 102
Word Origins: Political Science 131
Context Clues 277
Denotation and Connotation 372
Thesaurus Use 549
Compound Words 681
Homonyms 800
Roots, Prefixes, and Suffixes 873
Word Origins: Math and Science 975
Loaded Words 1166
Noun Suffixes 1315

How to Use Glencoe Literature

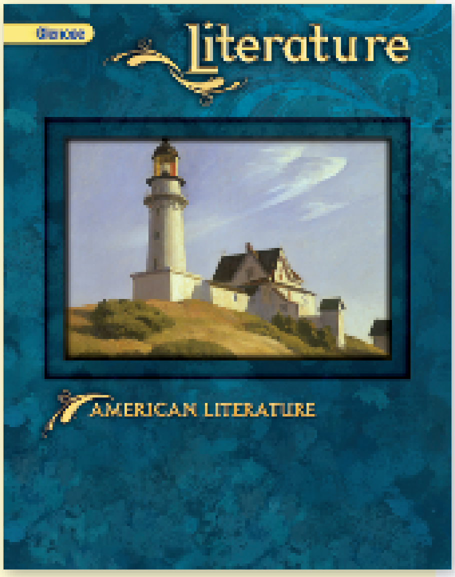
Why do I need this book?

Glencoe Literature is more than just a collection of stories, poems, nonfiction articles, and other literary works. Every part is built around Big Ideas, concepts that you will want to think about, talk about, and maybe even argue about. Big Ideas help you become part of an important conversation. You can join in lively discussions about who we are, where we have been, and where we are going.



Glencoe
literature
AMERICAN LITERATURE

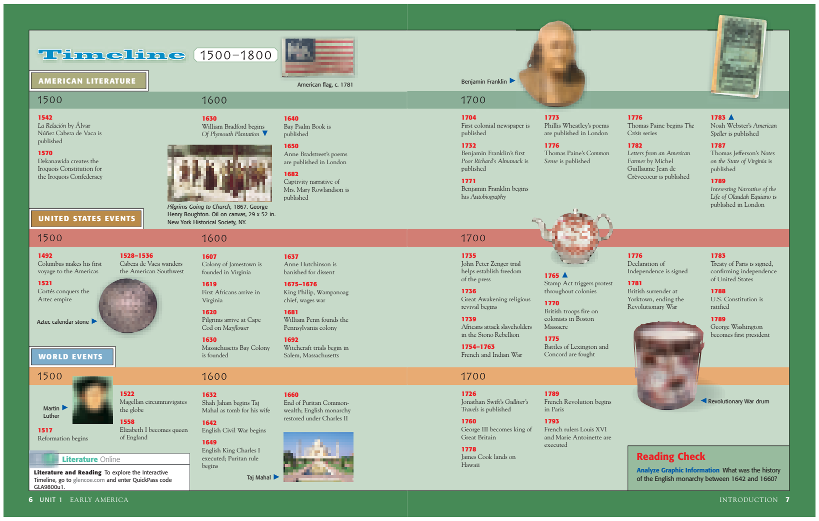
Organization

The literature you will read is organized chronologically into seven units spanning early America to the present.

Each unit contains the following:

A UNIT INTRODUCTION provides you with the background information to help make your reading experience more meaningful.

- The TIMELINE helps you keep track of major literary and historical events.



Timeline 1500–1800

American flag, c. 1781

Benjamin Franklin

AMERICAN LITERATURE

1500

1542
La Relación by Álvar Núñez Cabeza de Vaca is published

1570
Dekanawida creates the Iroquois Constitution for the Iroquois Confederacy

1600

1630
William Bradford begins Of Plymouth Plantation ▼

Pilgrims Going to Church, 1867. George Henry Boughton. Oil on canvas, 29 x 52 in. New York Historical Society, NY.

1640
Bay Psalm Book is published

1650
Anne Bradstreet's poems are published in London

1682
Captivity narrative of Mrs. Mary Rowlandson is published

1700

1704
First colonial newspaper is published

1732
Benjamin Franklin's first Poor Richard's Almanack is published

1771
Benjamin Franklin begins his Autobiography

1773
Phillis Wheatley's poems are published in London

1776
Thomas Paine's Common Sense is published

1776
Thomas Paine begins The Crisis series

1782
Letters from an American Farmer by Michel Guillaume Jean de Crèvecoeur is published

1783 ▲
Noah Webster's American Speller is published

1787
Thomas Jefferson's Notes on the State of Virginia is published

1789
Interesting Narrative of the Life of Olaudah Equiano is published in London

UNITED STATES EVENTS

1500

1492
Columbus makes his first voyage to the Americas

1521
Cortés conquers the Aztec empire

Aztec calendar stone ►

1528–1536
Cabeza de Vaca wanders the American Southwest

1600

1607
Colony of Jamestown is founded in Virginia

1619
First Africans arrive in Virginia

1620 Pilgrims arrive at Cape Cod on Mayflower

1630
Massachusetts Bay Colony is founded

1637
Anne Hutchinson is banished for dissent

1675–1676
King Philip, Wampanoag chief, wages war

1681
William Penn founds the Pennsylvania colony

1692
Witchcraft trials begin in Salem, Massachusetts

1700

1735
John Peter Zenger trial helps establish freedom of the press

1736
Great Awakening religious revival begins

1739
Africans attack slaveholders in the Stono Rebellion

1754–1763
French and Indian War

1765 ▲
Stamp Act triggers protest throughout colonies

1770
British troops fire on colonists in Boston Massacre

1775
Battles of Lexington and Concord are fought

1776
Declaration of Independence is signed

1781
British surrender at Yorktown, ending the Revolutionary War

1783
Treaty of Paris is signed, confirming independence of United States

1788
U.S. Constitution is ratified

1789
George Washington becomes first president

WORLD EVENTS

1500

Martin Luther ►

1517
Reformation begins

1522
Magellan circumnavigates the globe

1558
Elizabeth I becomes queen of England

1600

1632
Shah Jahan begins Taj Mahal as tomb for his wife

1642
English Civil War begins

1649
English King Charles I executed; Puritan rule begins

Taj Mahal ►

1660
End of Puritan Commonwealth; English monarchy restored under Charles II

1700

1726
Jonathan Swift's Gulliver's Travels is published

1760
George III becomes king of Great Britain

1778
James Cook lands on Hawaii

1789
French Revolution begins in Paris

1793
French rulers Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette are executed

◄ Revolutionary War drum

Literature Online

Literature and Reading To explore the Interactive Timeline, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Reading Check

Analyze Graphic Information What was the history of the English monarchy between 1642 and 1660?

6 UNIT 1 EARLY AMERICA

INTRODUCTION 7

- BY THE NUMBERS shows you figures and key data at a glance.
- BEING THERE gives you a glimpse of the geography related to the literary period.
- HISTORICAL, CULTURAL, AND SOCIAL FORCES explains the influences that shape a specific literary period.
- BIG IDEAS target three concepts that you can trace as you read the literature.

LITERARY SELECTIONS follow each Part Introduction. The selections are organized as follows.

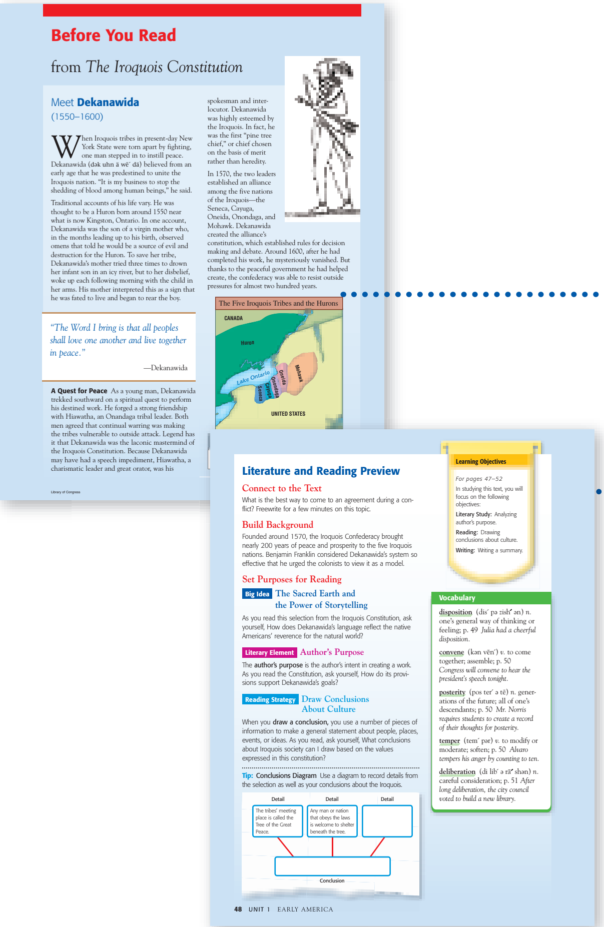
Reading and Thinking

The main literary works in your textbook are arranged in three parts.

- Start with BEFORE YOU READ. Learn valuable background information about the literature and preview the skills and strategies that will guide your reading.

MEET THE AUTHOR presents a detailed biography of the writer whose work you will read and analyze.

LITERATURE AND READING PREVIEW lists the basic tools you will use to read and analyze the literary work.



Before You Read

from The Iroquois Constitution

Meet Dekanawida
(1550–1600)

When Iroquois tribes in present-day New York State were torn apart by fighting, one man stepped in to instill peace. Dekanawida (dək uhn ä wē´ dä) believed from an early age that he was predestined to unite the Iroquois nation. "It is my business to stop the shedding of blood among human beings," he said.

Traditional accounts of his life vary. He was thought to be a Huron born around 1550 near what is now Kingston, Ontario. In one account, Dekanawida was the son of a virgin mother who, in the months leading up to his birth, observed omens that told he would be a source of evil and destruction for the Huron. To save her tribe, Dekanawida's mother tried three times to drown her infant son in an icy river, but to her disbelief, woke up each following morning with the child in her arms. His mother interpreted this as a sign that he was fated to live and began to rear the boy.

"The Word I bring is that all peoples shall love one another and live together in peace."

—Dekanawida

A Quest for Peace As a young man, Dekanawida trekked southward on a spiritual quest to perform his destined work. He forged a strong friendship with Hiawatha, an Onandaga tribal leader. Both men agreed that continual warring was making the tribes vulnerable to outside attack. Legend has it that Dekanawida was the laconic mastermind of the Iroquois Constitution. Because Dekanawida may have had a speech impediment, Hiawatha, a charismatic leader and great orator, was his spokesman and interlocutor. Dekanawida was highly esteemed by the Iroquois. In fact, he was the first "pine tree chief," or chief chosen on the basis of merit rather than heredity.

In 1570, the two leaders established an alliance among the five nations of the Iroquois—the Seneca, Cayuga, Oneida, Onondaga, and Mohawk. Dekanawida created the alliance's constitution, which established rules for decision making and debate. Around 1600, after he had completed his work, he mysteriously vanished. But thanks to the peaceful government he had helped create, the confederacy was able to resist outside pressures for almost two hundred years.

The Five Iroquois Tribes and the Hurons

Library of Congress

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Text

What is the best way to come to an agreement during a conflict? Freewrite for a few minutes on this topic.

Build Background

Founded around 1570, the Iroquois Confederacy brought nearly 200 years of peace and prosperity to the five Iroquois nations. Benjamin Franklin considered Dekanawida's system so effective that he urged the colonists to view it as a model.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling

As you read this selection from the Iroquois Constitution, ask yourself, How does Dekanawida's language reflect the native Americans' reverence for the natural world?

Literary Element Author's Purpose

The author's purpose is the author's intent in creating a work. As you read the Constitution, ask yourself, How do its provisions support Dekanawida's goals?

Reading Strategy Draw Conclusions About Culture

When you draw a conclusion, you use a number of pieces of information to make a general statement about people, places, events, or ideas. As you read, ask yourself, What conclusions about Iroquois society can I draw based on the values expressed in this constitution?

Tip: Conclusions Diagram Use a diagram to record details from the selection as well as your conclusions about the Iroquois.

Detail
The tribes' meeting place is called the Tree of the Great Peace.
Detail
Any man or nation that obeys the laws is welcome to shelter beneath the tree.
Detail
Conclusion

Learning Objectives

For pages 47–52

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing author's purpose.

Reading: Drawing conclusions about culture.

Writing: Writing a summary.

Vocabulary

disposition (dis´ pə zish′ ən) n. one's general way of thinking or feeling; p. 49 Julia had a cheerful disposition.

convene (kən vēn´) v. to come together; assemble; p. 50 Congress will convene to hear the president's speech tonight.

posterity (pos ter´ ə tē) n. generations of the future; all of one's descendants; p. 50 Mr. Norris requires students to create a record of their thoughts for posterity.

temper (tem´ pər) v. to modify or moderate; soften; p. 50 Alvaro tempers his anger by counting to ten.

deliberation (di lib´ ə rā′ shən) n. careful consideration; p. 51 After long deliberation, the city council voted to build a new library.

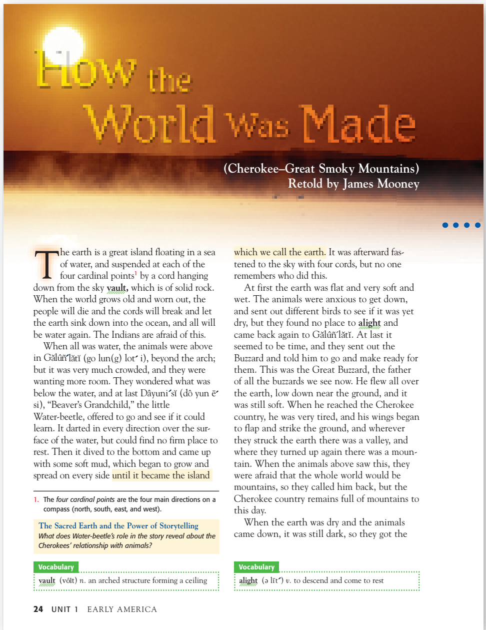
48 UNIT 1 EARLY AMERICA



How the World Was Made

(Cherokee–Great Smoky Mountains)
Retold by James Mooney

The earth is a great island floating in a sea of water, and suspended at each of the four cardinal points[1] by a cord hanging down from the sky vault, which is of solid rock. When the world grows old and worn out, the people will die and the cords will break and let the earth sink down into the ocean, and all will be water again. The Indians are afraid of this.

When all was water, the animals were above in Gălûñ´lătĭ (go lun(g) lot´ i), beyond the arch; but it was very much crowded, and they were wanting more room. They wondered what was below the water, and at last Dâyuni´sĭ (dô yun ē´ si), "Beaver's Grandchild," the little Water-beetle, offered to go and see if it could learn. It darted in every direction over the surface of the water, but could find no firm place to rest. Then it dived to the bottom and came up with some soft mud, which began to grow and spread on every side until it became the island which we call the earth. It was afterward fastened to the sky with four cords, but no one remembers who did this.

At first the earth was flat and very soft and wet. The animals were anxious to get down, and sent out different birds to see if it was yet dry, but they found no place to alight and came back again to Gălûñ´lătĭ. At last it seemed to be time, and they sent out the Buzzard and told him to go and make ready for them. This was the Great Buzzard, the father of all the buzzards we see now. He flew all over the earth, low down near the ground, and it was still soft. When he reached the Cherokee country, he was very tired, and his wings began to flap and strike the ground, and wherever they struck the earth there was a valley, and where they turned up again there was a mountain. When the animals above saw this, they were afraid that the whole world would be mountains, so they called him back, but the Cherokee country remains full of mountains to this day.

When the earth was dry and the animals came down, it was still dark, so they got the

[1] The four cardinal points are the four main directions on a compass (north, south, east, and west).

The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling
What does Water-beetle's role in the story reveal about the Cherokees' relationship with animals?

Vocabulary

vault (vôlt) n. an arched structure forming a ceiling

Vocabulary

alight (ə līt´) v. to descend and come to rest

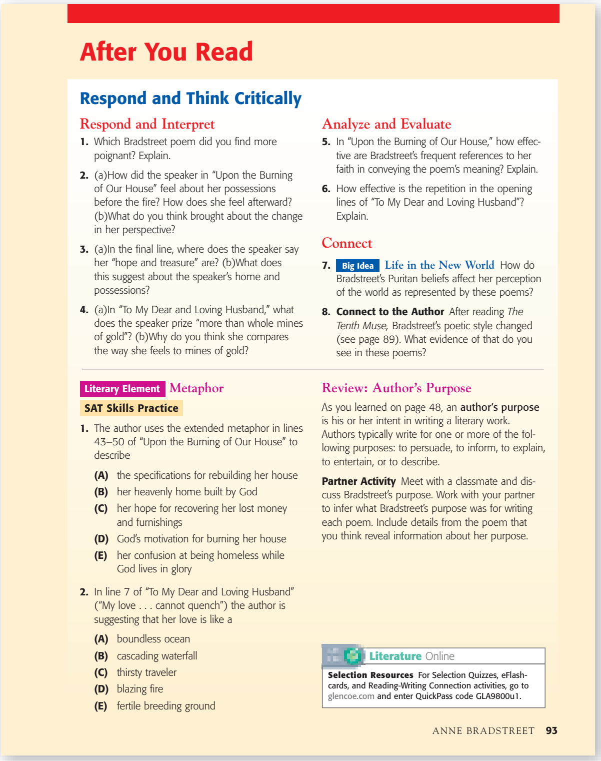
24 UNIT 1 EARLY AMERICA

- Next, read the LITERATURE SELECTION. As you flip through the literature, you will notice that parts of the text are highlighted in different colors. At the bottom of the page are color-coded questions that relate to the highlighted text. Yellow represents a Big Idea, magenta represents a Literary Element, and blue represents a Reading Strategy. These questions will help you gain a better understanding of the text.

- Wrap up the literature with AFTER YOU READ. Explore what you have learned through a wide range of reading, thinking, vocabulary, and writing activities.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Which Bradstreet poem did you find more poignant? Explain.
2. (a)How did the speaker in "Upon the Burning of Our House" feel about her possessions before the fire? How does she feel afterward? (b)What do you think brought about the change in her perspective?
3. (a)In the final line, where does the speaker say her "hope and treasure" are? (b)What does this suggest about the speaker's home and possessions?
4. (a)In "To My Dear and Loving Husband," what does the speaker prize "more than whole mines of gold"? (b)Why do you think she compares the way she feels to mines of gold?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. In "Upon the Burning of Our House," how effective are Bradstreet's frequent references to her faith in conveying the poem's meaning? Explain.
6. How effective is the repetition in the opening lines of "To My Dear and Loving Husband"? Explain.

Connect

7. Big Idea Life in the New World How do Bradstreet's Puritan beliefs affect her perception of the world as represented by these poems?
8. Connect to the Author After reading The Tenth Muse, Bradstreet's poetic style changed (see page 89). What evidence of that do you see in these poems?

Literary Element Metaphor

SAT Skills Practice

1. The author uses the extended metaphor in lines 43–50 of "Upon the Burning of Our House" to describe
   - (A) the specifications for rebuilding her house
   - (B) her heavenly home built by God
   - (C) her hope for recovering her lost money and furnishings
   - (D) God's motivation for burning her house
   - (E) her confusion at being homeless while God lives in glory
2. In line 7 of "To My Dear and Loving Husband" ("My love . . . cannot quench") the author is suggesting that her love is like a
   - (A) boundless ocean
   - (B) cascading waterfall
   - (C) thirsty traveler
   - (D) blazing fire
   - (E) fertile breeding ground

Review: Author's Purpose

As you learned on page 48, an author's purpose is his or her intent in writing a literary work. Authors typically write for one or more of the following purposes: to persuade, to inform, to explain, to entertain, or to describe.

Partner Activity Meet with a classmate and discuss Bradstreet's purpose. Work with your partner to infer what Bradstreet's purpose was for writing each poem. Include details from the poem that you think reveal information about her purpose.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

ANNE BRADSTREET 93

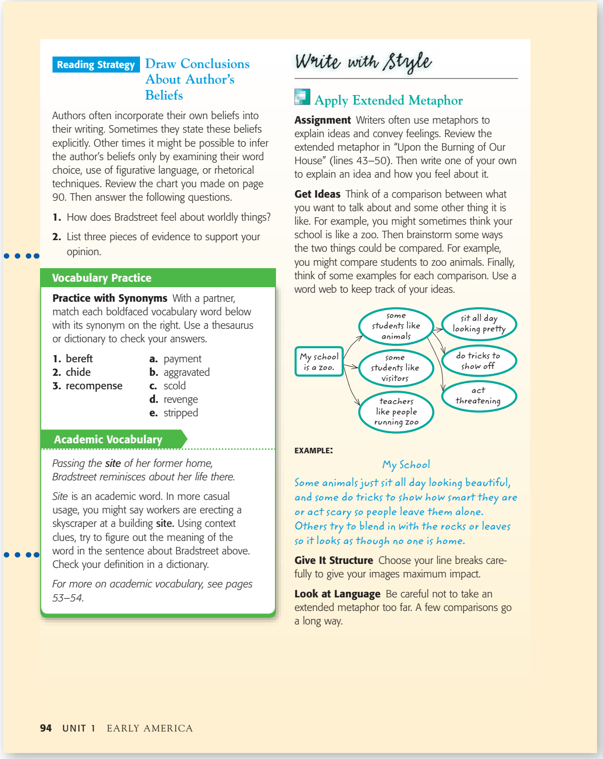
Vocabulary

VOCABULARY WORDS that may be new or difficult are chosen from most selections. They are introduced on the BEFORE YOU READ page. Each word is accompanied by its pronunciation, its part of speech, its definition, and the page number on which it appears. The vocabulary word is also used in a sample sentence. Vocabulary words are highlighted in the literary work.

VOCABULARY PRACTICE On the AFTER YOU READ pages, you will be able to practice using the vocabulary words in an exercise. This exercise will show you how to apply a vocabulary strategy to understand new or difficult words.

ACADEMIC VOCABULARY Many of the AFTER YOU READ pages will also introduce you to a word that is frequently used in academic work. You will be prompted to complete an activity based on that word.



Reading Strategy Draw Conclusions About Author's Beliefs

Authors often incorporate their own beliefs into their writing. Sometimes they state these beliefs explicitly. Other times it might be possible to infer the author's beliefs only by examining their word choice, use of figurative language, or rhetorical techniques. Review the chart you made on page 90. Then answer the following questions.

1. How does Bradstreet feel about worldly things?
2. List three pieces of evidence to support your opinion.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Synonyms With a partner, match each boldfaced vocabulary word below with its synonym on the right. Use a thesaurus or dictionary to check your answers.

1. bereft
2. chide
3. recompense

a. payment
b. aggravated
c. scold
d. revenge
e. stripped

Academic Vocabulary

Passing the site of her former home, Bradstreet reminisces about her life there.

Site is an academic word. In more casual usage, you might say workers are erecting a skyscraper at a building site. Using context clues, try to figure out the meaning of the word in the sentence about Bradstreet above. Check your definition in a dictionary.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Write with Style

Apply Extended Metaphor

Assignment Writers often use metaphors to explain ideas and convey feelings. Review the extended metaphor in "Upon the Burning of Our House" (lines 43–50). Then write one of your own to explain an idea and how you feel about it.

Get Ideas Think of a comparison between what you want to talk about and some other thing it is like. For example, you might sometimes think your school is like a zoo. Then brainstorm some ways the two things could be compared. For example, you might compare students to zoo animals. Finally, think of some examples for each comparison. Use a word web to keep track of your ideas.

My school is a zoo.
some students like animals
some students like visitors teachers like people running zoo sit all day looking pretty
do tricks to show off
act threatening

EXAMPLE:

My School

Some animals just sit all day looking beautiful,
and some do tricks to show how smart they are
or act scary so people leave them alone.
Others try to blend in with the rocks or leaves
so it looks as though no one is home.

Give It Structure Choose your line breaks carefully to give your images maximum impact.

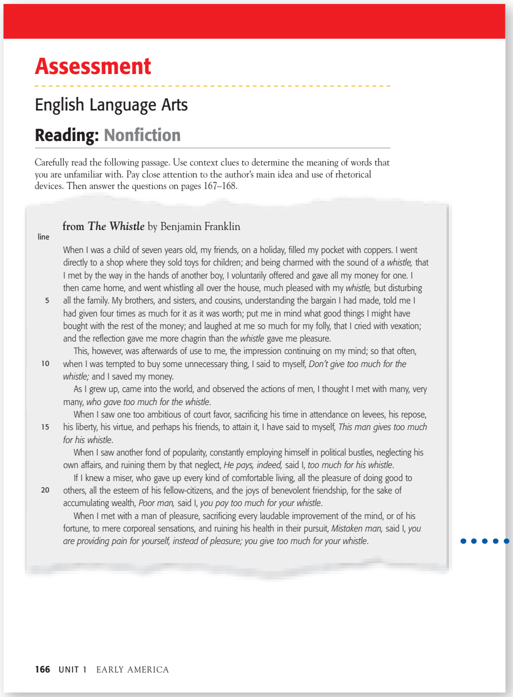
Look at Language Be careful not to take an extended metaphor too far. A few comparisons go a long way.

94 UNIT 1 EARLY AMERICA

Writing Workshops

Each unit in Glencoe Literature includes a Writing Workshop. The workshop walks you through the writing process as you work on an extended piece of writing related to the unit.

- You will create writing goals and apply strategies to meet them.
- You will pick up tips and polish your critical skills as you analyze professional and workshop models.
- You will focus on mastering specific aspects of writing, including organization, grammar, and vocabulary.
- You will use a checklist to evaluate your own writing.



Assessment

English Language Arts

Reading: Nonfiction

Carefully read the following passage. Use context clues to determine the meaning of words that you are unfamiliar with. Pay close attention to the author's main idea and use of rhetorical devices. Then answer the questions on pages 167–168.

from The Whistle by Benjamin Franklin

When I was a child of seven years old, my friends, on a holiday, filled my pocket with coppers. I went directly to a shop where they sold toys for children; and being charmed with the sound of a whistle, that I met by the way in the hands of another boy, I voluntarily offered and gave all my money for one. I then came home, and went whistling all over the house, much pleased with my whistle, but disturbing all the family. My brothers, and sisters, and cousins, understanding the bargain I had made, told me I had given four times as much for it as it was worth; put me in mind what good things I might have bought with the rest of the money; and laughed at me so much for my folly, that I cried with vexation; and the reflection gave me more chagrin than the whistle gave me pleasure.

This, however, was afterwards of use to me, the impression continuing on my mind; so that often, when I was tempted to buy some unnecessary thing, I said to myself, Don't give too much for the whistle; and I saved my money.

As I grew up, came into the world, and observed the actions of men, I thought I met with many, very many, who gave too much for the whistle.

When I saw one too ambitious of court favor, sacrificing his time in attendance on levees, his repose, his liberty, his virtue, and perhaps his friends, to attain it, I have said to myself, This man gives too much for his whistle.

When I saw another fond of popularity, constantly employing himself in political bustles, neglecting his own affairs, and ruining them by that neglect, He pays, indeed, said I, too much for his whistle.

If I knew a miser, who gave up every kind of comfortable living, all the pleasure of doing good to others, all the esteem of his fellow-citizens, and the joys of benevolent friendship, for the sake of accumulating wealth, Poor man, said I, you pay too much for your whistle.

When I met with a man of pleasure, sacrificing every laudable improvement of the mind, or of his fortune, to mere corporeal sensations, and ruining his health in their pursuit, Mistaken man, said I, you are providing pain for yourself, instead of pleasure; you give too much for your whistle.

166 UNIT 1 EARLY AMERICA

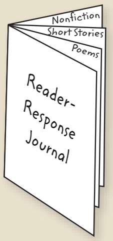
Assessment

At the end of each unit, you will be tested on the literature, reading, and vocabulary skills you have just learned. Designed to simulate standardized tests, this test will give you the practice you need to succeed while providing an assessment of how you have met the unit objectives.

FOLDABLES® Study Organizer

BOUND BOOK

Try using this organizer to explore your personal responses to the poetry, play and nonfiction.



Organizing Information

Graphic organizers—such as Foldables®, diagrams, and charts—help you keep your information and ideas organized.

SCOPE AND SEQUENCE

This chart provides an overview of the scope and sequence for Glencoe American Literature. For a detailed scope and sequence of skills, see the chart at the beginning of each unit in the Teacher Edition. Refer also to the Index of Skills in the Reference Section in the back of the book for a comprehensive listing of all skills and concepts taught in American Literature.

✔ = Introduced ✓ = Reviewed

	UNIT ONE	UNIT TWO	UNIT THREE	UNIT FOUR	UNIT FIVE	UNIT SIX	UNIT SEVEN Literary Periods and Movements
Pre-colonial Period	✔
Colonial and Revolutionary Period	✔	✓
Romanticism		✔	✓	✓		✓
Transcendentalism		✔	✓
Regionalism				✔	✓	✓
Realism			✔	✓	✓	✓
Naturalism				✔	✓		✓
Modernism					✔	✓	✓
Harlem Renaissance					✔
New Regionalism						✔
Contemporary Period							✔
Literary Criticism
Analyzing Literature in Context
Political	✔	✓	✓			✓	✓
Historical	✔	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Social	✔	✓	✓	✓		✓	✓
Cultural	✔			✓	✓	✓	✓
Biographical	✔		✓		✓		✓
Philosophical	✔	✓		✓		✓
Literary Genres
Oral Tradition Forms
Song	✔	✓	✓				✓
Myth, Folklore, and Legend	✔
Fiction
Short Story		✔	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Novel Excerpt		✔
Graphic Novel						✔

	UNIT ONE	UNIT TWO	UNIT THREE	UNIT FOUR	UNIT FIVE	UNIT SIX	UNIT SEVEN
Nonfiction
Autobiography or Memoir	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Biography	✓		✓		✓		✓
Magazine Article	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓		✓
Newspaper Article							✓
Speech	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Informational Text	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Public Document	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Journal or Diary	✓	✓	✓		✓
Letter	✓		✓		✓
Poetry
Narrative Poem	✓	✓	✓		✓		✓
Sonnet			✓	✓	✓
Free Verse	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Drama						✓
Literary Elements
Literary Structure
Plot		✓		✓	✓	✓	✓
Setting	✓	✓		✓	✓	✓	✓
Characters	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Point of View	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Theme		✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Voice and Tone	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Author’s Purpose	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Literary Language
Imagery	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Symbolism		✓			✓	✓	✓
Figures of Speech	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Sound Devices		✓	✓		✓
Diction	✓		✓	✓	✓	✓
Rhetorical Strategies	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓

SCOPE AND SEQUENCE

✔ = Introduced ✓ = Reviewed

	UNIT ONE	UNIT TWO	UNIT THREE	UNIT FOUR	UNIT FIVE	UNIT SIX	UNIT SEVEN
Reading Skills
Strategies
Analyzing	✔	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Clarifying	✔	✓	✓	✓			✓
Drawing Conclusions	✔	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Making Inferences		✔	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Making Predictions		✔	✓	✓		✓
Monitoring Comprehension	✔	✓
Paraphrasing	✔		✓	✓			✓
Previewing	✔	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Questioning	✔	✓	✓		✓		✓
Recognizing Bias	✔						✓
Summarizing	✔	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Sythesizing	✔	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Text Structures
Cause and Effect	✔	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Chronological Order	✔	✓		✓		✓	✓
Compare and Contrast	✔	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Problem and Solution	✔
Vocabulary Development
Academic Vocabulary	✔	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Analogies	✔	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Antonyms	✔	✓		✓	✓	✓	✓
Context Clues
Denotation and Connotation	✔	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Multiple-Meaning Words	✔		✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Word Parts: Roots, Prefixes, and Suffixes	✔		✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Words Origins	✔					✓
Synonyms	✔	✓	✓	✓	✓		✓
Word Usage	✔	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓

Writing and Grammar

Types of Writing

	UNIT ONE	UNIT TWO	UNIT THREE	UNIT FOUR	UNIT FIVE	UNIT SIX	UNIT SEVEN
Creative Nonfiction		✓	✓		✓	✓	✓
Creative Writing: Fiction					✓		✓
Editorial							✓
Literary Analysis	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Persuasive	✓	✓		✓	✓	✓
Research		✓	✓			✓

Writing Process

	UNIT ONE	UNIT TWO	UNIT THREE	UNIT FOUR	UNIT FIVE	UNIT SIX	UNIT SEVEN
Prewriting, Drafting, Revising, Editing and Proofreading, Presenting	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Traits of Strong Writing	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓

Grammar, Usage, and Mechanics

	UNIT ONE	UNIT TWO	UNIT THREE	UNIT FOUR	UNIT FIVE	UNIT SIX	UNIT SEVEN
Parts of Speech	✓	✓	✓		✓	✓	✓
Capitalization and Punctuation	✓	✓		✓			✓
Sentence Structure/Sentence Combining/Transitional Expressions	✓	✓	✓	✓			✓

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing

	UNIT ONE	UNIT TWO	UNIT THREE	UNIT FOUR	UNIT FIVE	UNIT SIX	UNIT SEVEN
Debate	✓					✓	✓
Oral Interpretation of a Poem	✓	✓			✓		✓
Reflective Presentation		✓
Oral Report		✓	✓	✓
Oral Response to Literature	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓	✓
Persuasive Speech	✓	✓	✓
Photo Essay			✓			✓	✓

Media Literacy

	UNIT ONE	UNIT TWO	UNIT THREE	UNIT FOUR	UNIT FIVE	UNIT SIX	UNIT SEVEN
Multimedia Presentation			✓
Multimedia Literacy Workshop							✓

Teaching the Standards: Grade 11

The following abbreviated curriculum is a suggestion for addressing those objectives that students commonly encounter on standardized tests. You may use it as a guide for prioritizing instruction in preparation for the tests.

Unit 1

Selections/Lessons	Pacing/Days	Genre	Where to Find Instruction	Commonly Tested Objectives
Comparing Literature: The Sky Tree AND How the Leopard Got His Claws AND Prayer to the Pacific	3–7	Myths AND Poetry	SE, p. 34 RW, RW-APP, pp. 1–16 RW-EL, pp. 1–16, 306	Literary Study: Analyzing oral tradition. Reading: Questioning. Reading: Comparing works across time and place.
Upon the Burning of Our House AND To My Dear and Loving Husband	1–4	Poetry	SE, p. 89 RW, RW-APP, pp. 17–24, 306 RW-EL, pp. 17–24, 307–308	Literary Study: Analyzing metaphor. Reading: Drawing conclusions about author's beliefs. Reading: Understanding synonyms.
TIME: How They Chose These Words	2–6	Historical Essay	SE, p. 128 RW, RW-APP, pp. 25–36, 307 RW-EL, pp. 25–36, 309–310	Reading: Determining the main idea and supporting details.
Letter to John Adams	1–4	Letter	SE, p. XX RW, RW-APP, pp. 37–44, 308 RW-EL, pp. 37–44, 311–312	Literary Study: Analyzing description. Reading: Recognizing author's purpose. Reading: Understanding analogies.

Unit 2

Selections/Lessons	Pacing/Days	Genre	Where to Find Instruction	Commonly Tested Objectives
Comparing Literature: from Civil Disobedience AND On the Eve of Historic Dandi March AND from Long Walk to Freedom	4–17	Essay AND Speech AND Autobiography	SE, p. 144 RW, RW-APP, pp. 45–78, 309–310 RW-EL, pp. 45–78, 313–315	Literary Study: Analyzing argument. Literary Study: Analyzing political assumptions. Literary Study: Comparing persuasive messages. Reading: Evaluating evidence Reading: Understanding antonyms
The Pit and the Pendulum	3–9	Short Story	SE, p. 263 RW, RW-APP, pp. 79–98 RW-EL, pp. 79–98, 316	Literary Study: Analyzing suspense. Reading: Identifying sequence. Reading: Understanding word origins.

[Note: SE= Student Edition; RW= Read and Write; RW-APP= Approaching Level; RW-EL= English Learner]

Unit 3

Selections/Lessons	Pacing/Days	Genre	Where to Find Instruction	Commonly Tested Objectives
Comparing Literature: from My Bondage and My Freedom AND Frederick Douglass AND In Texas Grass	2–7	Autobiography AND Poetry	SE, p. 351 RW, RW-APP, pp. 99–114 RW-EL, pp. 99–114, 317	Literary Study: Analyzing autobiography. Reading: Analyzing cause and effect. Reading: Comparing literature. Reading: Understanding denotation and connotation.
And Ain't I a Woman	1–4	Speech	SE, p. 368 RW, RW-APP, pp. 115–122 RW-EL, pp. 115–122, 318	Literary Study: Analyzing oratory. Reading: Evaluating argument. Reading: Understanding word usage.
from* Mary Chestnut's Civil War	2–5	Memoir	SE, p. 374 RW, RW-APP, pp. 123–132 RW-EL, pp. 123–132, 319	Literary Study: Analyzing journal. Reading: Distinguishing fact and opinion. Reading: Understanding context clues.
I Hear America Singing AND When I Heard the Learn'd Astronomer	1–3	Poetry	SE, p. 408 RW, RW-APP, pp. 133–138, 311 RW-EL, pp. 133–138, 320–321	Literary Study: Analyzing free verse. Reading: Paraphrasing.
If you were coming in the Fall AND My Life closed twice AND The Soul selects	1–4	Poetry	SE, p. 437 RW, RW-APP, pp. 139–146, 312 RW-EL, pp. 139–146, 322–323	Literary Study: Analyzing rhyme. Reading: Analyzing sound devices.

Unit 4

Selections/Lessons	Pacing/Days	Genre	Where to Find Instruction	Commonly Tested Objectives
The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County	3–7	Short Story	SE, p. 496 RW, RW-APP, pp. 147–158 RW-EL, pp. 147–158, 324	Literary Study: Analyzing dialect. Reading: Analyzing comic devices. Reading: Understanding word origins.
A Wagner Matinee	2–6	Short Story	SE, p. 519 RW, RW-APP, pp. 159–170, 313 RW-EL, pp. 159–170, 325–326	Literary Study: Analyzing point of view. Reading: Identifying sequence. Reading: Understanding analogies.
Douglass AND We Wear the Masks	1–4	Poetry	SE, p. 568 RW, RW-APP, pp. 171–178 RW-EL, pp. 171–178, 327	Literary Study: Analyzing rhyme scheme. Reading: Clarifying meaning. Reading: Understanding denotation and connotation.

Unit 5

Selections/Lessons	Pacing/Days	Genre	Where to Find Instruction	Commonly Tested Objectives
The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock	2–5	Poetry	SE, p. 666 RW, RW-APP, pp. 179–188, 314 RW-EL, pp. 179–188, 328–329	Literary Study: Analyzing allusion. Reading: Connecting to cultural context. Reading: Understanding antonyms.
The Jilting of Granny Weatherall	2–7	Short Story	SE, p. 773 RW, RW-APP, pp. 189–202, 315 RW-EL, pp. 189–202, 330–331	Literary Study: Analyzing stream of consciousness. Reading: Drawing conclusions about the protagonist. Reading: Understanding context clues.
When the Negro Was in Vogue	2–5	Autobiography	SE, p. 817 RW, RW-APP, pp. 203–212, 316 RW-EL, pp. 203–212, 332–333	Literary Study: Analyzing juxtaposition. Reading: Analyzing concrete details. Reading: Understanding synonyms.

Unit 6

Selections/Lessons	Pacing/Days	Genre	Where to Find Instruction	Commonly Tested Objectives
The Rockpile	2–7	Short Story	SE, p. 959 RW, RW-APP, pp. 213–226, 317 RW-EL, pp. 213–226, 334–335	Literary Study: Analyzing foil. Reading: Making generalizations about characters. Reading: Understanding analogies.
The Crucible, Act I	4–13	Drama	SE, p. 1026 RW, RW-APP, pp. 227–254, 318 RW-EL, pp. 227–254, 336–337	Literary Study: Analyzing dialogue. Reading: Drawing conclusions about characters. Reading: Understanding word parts.

[Note: SE= Student Edition; RW= Read and Write; RW-APP= Approaching Level; RW-EL= English Learner]

Unit 7

Selections/Lessons	Pacing/Days	Genre	Where to Find Instruction	Commonly Tested Objectives
Comparing Literature: Ambush AND The Gift in Wartime AND from Stay Alive, My Son	3–7	Short Story AND Poetry AND Memoir	SE, p. 1181 RW, RW-APP, pp. 255–268, 319 RW-EL, pp. 255–268, 338–339	Literary Study: Analyzing mood. Reading: Analyzing concrete details. Comparing literature. Reading: Understanding word origins.
Snow	1–4	Short Story	SE, p. 1253 RW, RW-APP, pp. 269–276 RW-EL, pp. 269–276, 340	Literary Study: Analyzing indirect characterization. Reading: Connecting to contemporary issues. Reading: Understanding word parts.
Salvador Late or Early	1–3	Short Story	SE, p. 1304 RW, RW-APP, pp. 277–282, 320 RW-EL, pp. 277–282, 341–342	Literary Study: Analyzing imagery. Reading: Analyzing sound devices.
Thoughts on the African-American Novel	2–6	Essay	SE, p. 1308 RW, RW-APP, pp. 283–294 RW-EL, pp. 283–294, 343	Literary Study: Analyzing an essay. Reading: Determining main idea and supporting details. Reading: Identifying and understanding word parts.

Reference Section

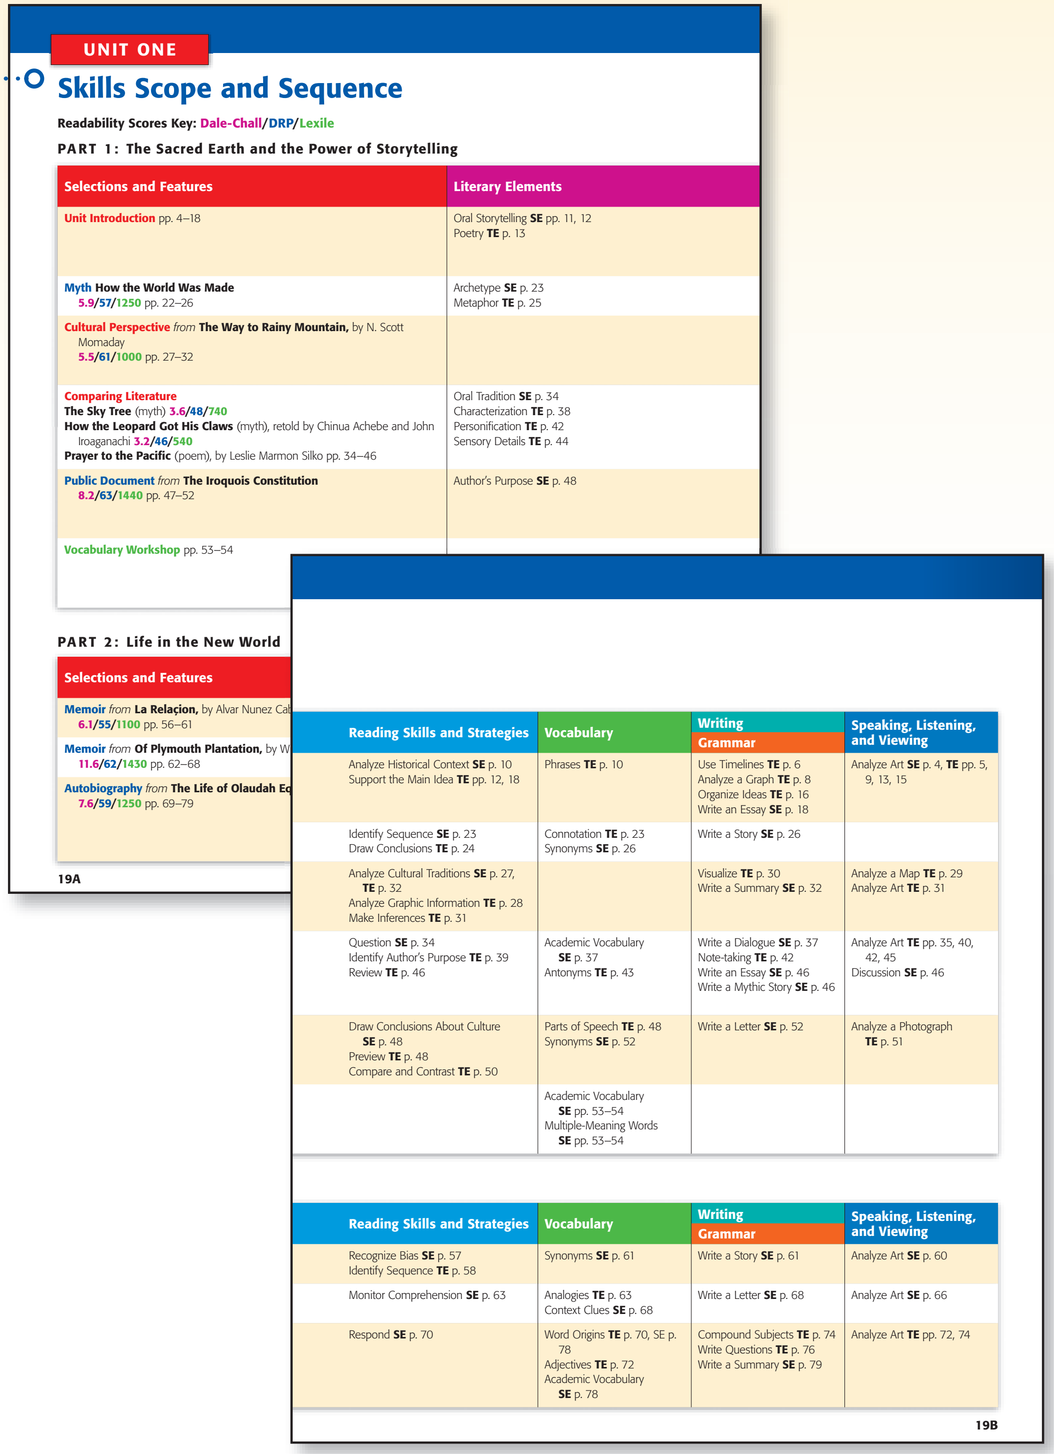
Selections/Lessons	Pacing/Days	Genre	Where to Find Instruction	Commonly Tested Objectives
Functional Documents	2–6	Functional Documents	SE, p. R24 RW, RW-APP, pp. 295–305, 321 RW-EL, pp. 295–305, 344–346	Reading: Analyzing expository texts.
	Total: 48–150 days

To Teachers

Welcome to the Teacher Edition of Glencoe Literature. We have created this teacher edition based on the standards developed by experienced teachers and educational consultants. Teaching suggestions, additional resources, and leveled activities for differentiated instruction are all labeled and wrapped around the student text for your convenience.

Unit Scope and Sequence

Every unit of Glencoe Literature is organized around a carefully researched scope and sequence that includes the reading skills and strategies, literary elements, writing skills, and listening, speaking and viewing skills that students need in order to successfully progress through the program.



UNIT ONE

Skills Scope and Sequence

Readability Scores Key: Dale-Chall/DRP/Lexile

PART 1: The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling

Selections and Features	Literary Elements
Unit Introduction pp. 4–18	Oral Storytelling SE pp. 11, 12 Poetry TE p. 13
Myth How the World Was Made 5.9/57/1250 pp. 22–26	Archetype SE p. 23 Metaphor TE p. 25
Cultural Perspective from The Way to Rainy Mountain, by N. Scott Momaday 5.5/61/1000 pp. 27–32
Comparing Literature The Sky Tree (myth) 3.6/48/740 How the Leopard Got His Claws (myth), retold by Chinua Achebe and John Iroaganachi 3.2/46/540 Prayer to the Pacific (poem), by Leslie Marmon Silko pp. 34–46	Oral Tradition SE p. 34 Characterization TE p. 38 Personification TE p. 42 Sensory Details TE p. 44
Public Document from The Iroquois Constitution 8.2/63/1440 pp. 47–52	Author's Purpose SE p. 48
Vocabulary Workshop pp. 53–54

PART 2: Life in the New World

Selections and Features
Memoir from La Relaçion, by Alvar Nunez Cab 6.1/55/1100 pp. 56–61
Memoir from Of Plymouth Plantation, by W 11.6/62/1430 pp. 62–68
Autobiography from The Life of Olaudah Eq 7.6/59/1250 pp. 69–79

19A

Reading Skills and Strategies	Vocabulary	Writing Grammar	Speaking, Listening, and Viewing
Analyze Historical Context SE p. 10 Support the Main Idea TE pp. 12, 18	Phrases TE p. 10	Use Timelines TE p. 6 Analyze a Graph TE p. 8 Organize Ideas TE p. 16 Write an Essay SE p. 18	Analyze Art SE p. 4, TE pp. 5, 9, 13, 15
Identify Sequence SE p. 23 Draw Conclusions TE p. 24	Connotation TE p. 23 Synonyms SE p. 26	Write a Story SE p. 26
Analyze Cultural Traditions SE p. 27, TE p. 32 Analyze Graphic Information TE p. 28 Make Inferences TE p. 31		Visualize TE p. 30 Write a Summary SE p. 32	Analyze a Map TE p. 29 Analyze Art TE p. 31
Question SE p. 34 Identify Author's Purpose TE p. 39 Review TE p. 46	Academic Vocabulary SE p. 37 Antonyms TE p. 43	Write a Dialogue SE p. 37 Note-taking TE p. 42 Write an Essay SE p. 46 Write a Mythic Story SE p. 46	Analyze Art TE pp. 35, 40, 42, 45 Discussion SE p. 46
Draw Conclusions About Culture SE p. 48 Preview TE p. 48 Compare and Contrast TE p. 50	Parts of Speech TE p. 48 Synonyms SE p. 52	Write a Letter SE p. 52	Analyze a Photograph TE p. 51
	Academic Vocabulary SE pp. 53–54 Multiple-Meaning Words SE pp. 53–54

Reading Skills and Strategies	Vocabulary	Writing Grammar	Speaking, Listening, and Viewing
Recognize Bias SE p. 57 Identify Sequence TE p. 58	Synonyms SE p. 61	Write a Story SE p. 61	Analyze Art SE p. 60
Monitor Comprehension SE p. 63	Analogies TE p. 63 Context Clues SE p. 68	Write a Letter SE p. 68	Analyze Art SE p. 66
Respond SE p. 70	Word Origins TE p. 70, SE p. 78 Adjectives TE p. 72 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 78	Compound Subjects TE p. 74 Write Questions TE p. 76 Write a Summary SE p. 79	Analyze Art TE pp. 72, 74

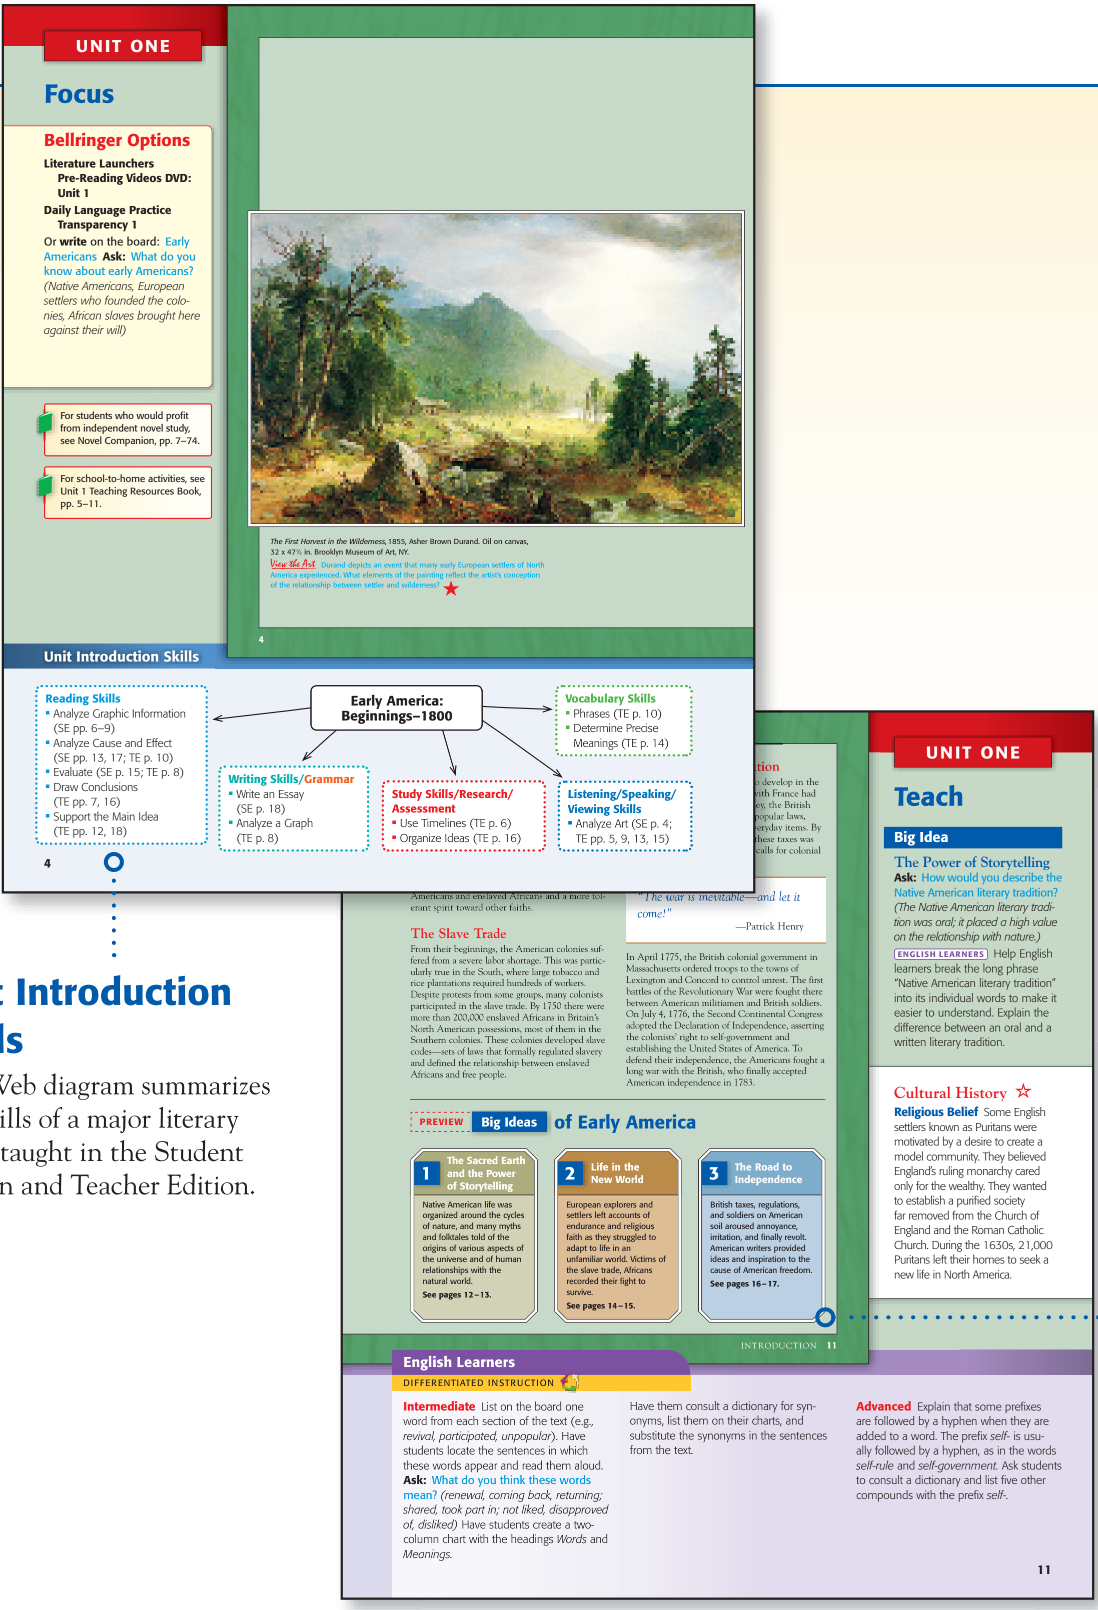
19B



UNIT ONE

Focus

Bellringer Options

Literature Launchers
Pre-Reading Videos DVD: Unit 1

Daily Language Practice Transparency 1

Or write on the board: Early Americans Ask: What do you know about early Americans? (Native Americans, European settlers who founded the colonies, African slaves brought here against their will)

For students who would profit from independent novel study, see Novel Companion, pp. 7–74.

For school-to-home activities, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 5–11.

The First Harvest in the Wilderness, 1855, Asher Brown Durand. Oil on canvas, 32 x 47½ in. Brooklyn Museum of Art, NY.

View the Art Durand depicts an event that many early European settlers of North America experienced. What elements of the painting reflect the artist's conception of the relationship between settler and wilderness? ★

4

Unit Introduction Skills

Early America: Beginnings–1800

Reading Skills
- Analyze Graphic Information (SE pp. 6–9)
- Analyze Cause and Effect (SE pp. 13, 17; TE p. 10)
- Evaluate (SE p. 15; TE p. 8)
- Draw Conclusions (TE pp. 7, 16)
- Support the Main Idea (TE pp. 12, 18)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write an Essay (SE p. 18)
- Analyze a Graph (TE p. 8)

Study Skills/Research/Assessment
- Use Timelines (TE p. 6)
- Organize Ideas (TE p. 16)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE p. 4; TE pp. 5, 9, 13, 15)

Vocabulary Skills
- Phrases (TE p. 10)
- Determine Precise Meanings (TE p. 14)

4 tion

o develop in the vith France had ey, the British popular laws, eryday items. By these taxes was calls for colonial

Americans and enslaved Africans and a more tolerant spirit toward other faiths.

The Slave Trade

From their beginnings, the American colonies suffered from a severe labor shortage. This was particularly true in the South, where large tobacco and rice plantations required hundreds of workers. Despite protests from some groups, many colonists participated in the slave trade. By 1750 there were more than 200,000 enslaved Africans in Britain's North American possessions, most of them in the Southern colonies. These colonies developed slave codes—sets of laws that formally regulated slavery and defined the relationship between enslaved Africans and free people.

> "The war is inevitable—and let it come!"
>
> —Patrick Henry

In April 1775, the British colonial government in Massachusetts ordered troops to the towns of Lexington and Concord to control unrest. The first battles of the Revolutionary War were fought there between American militiamen and British soldiers. On July 4, 1776, the Second Continental Congress adopted the Declaration of Independence, asserting the colonists' right to self-government and establishing the United States of America. To defend their independence, the Americans fought a long war with the British, who finally accepted American independence in 1783.

PREVIEW Big Ideas of Early America

1 The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling
Native American life was organized around the cycles of nature, and many myths and folktales told of the origins of various aspects of the universe and of human relationships with the natural world.
See pages 12–13.

2 Life in the New World
European explorers and settlers left accounts of endurance and religious faith as they struggled to adapt to life in an unfamiliar world. Victims of the slave trade, Africans recorded their fight to survive.
See pages 14–15.

3 The Road to Independence
British taxes, regulations, and soldiers on American soil aroused annoyance, irritation, and finally revolt. American writers provided ideas and inspiration to the cause of American freedom.
See pages 16–17.

INTRODUCTION 11

UNIT ONE

Teach

Big Idea

The Power of Storytelling
Ask: How would you describe the Native American literary tradition? (The Native American literary tradition was oral; it placed a high value on the relationship with nature.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS Help English learners break the long phrase "Native American literary tradition" into its individual words to make it easier to understand. Explain the difference between an oral and a written literary tradition.

Cultural History ☆
Religious Belief Some English settlers known as Puritans were motivated by a desire to create a model community. They believed England's ruling monarchy cared only for the wealthy. They wanted to establish a purified society far removed from the Church of England and the Roman Catholic Church. During the 1630s, 21,000 Puritans left their homes to seek a new life in North America.

English Learners
DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate List on the board one word from each section of the text (e.g., revival, participated, unpopular). Have students locate the sentences in which these words appear and read them aloud. Ask: What do you think these words mean? (renewal, coming back, returning; shared, took part in; not liked, disapproved of, disliked) Have students create a two-column chart with the headings Words and Meanings. Have them consult a dictionary for synonyms, list them on their charts, and substitute the synonyms in the sentences from the text.

Advanced Explain that some prefixes are followed by a hyphen when they are added to a word. The prefix self- is usually followed by a hyphen, as in the words self-rule and self-government. Ask students to consult a dictionary and list five other compounds with the prefix self-.

11

Unit Introduction Skills

The Web diagram summarizes the skills of a major literary genre taught in the Student Edition and Teacher Edition.

Big Idea

The three Big Ideas from a literary period or movement help your students focus on key concepts that they can trace through the reading selections in each unit.

Three Part Lesson Plan

The Teacher Edition of Glencoe Literature is organized in a three-part structure: Focus, Teach, and Assess.

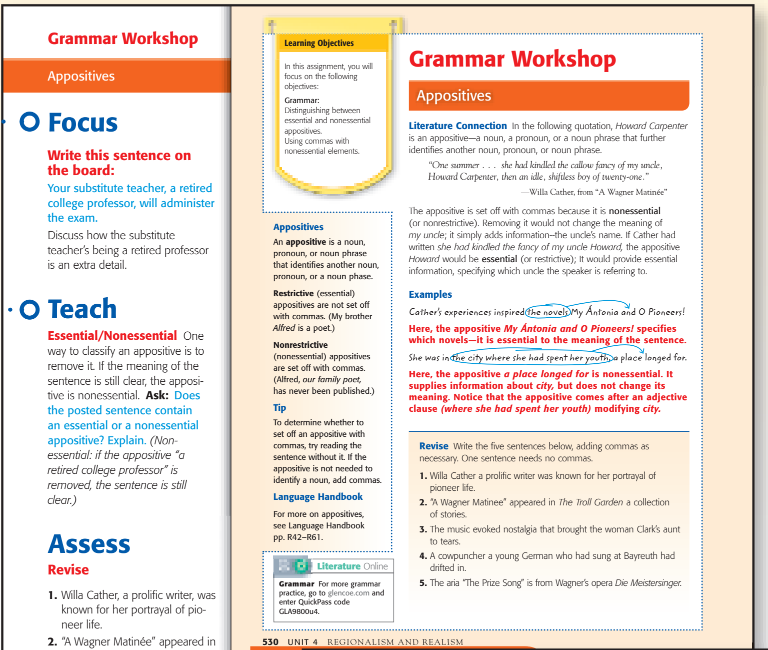
Focus

Focus activities help you prepare students for the day's lessons. The Bellringer Activity provides a choice of transparencies and other teaching strategies that engage students and focus their attention.

Teach

In these sections, you will find leveled activities that correspond to and extend instruction in the Student Edition. Here you will also find information that enriches students' appreciation of art, photos, culture, or history as they apply to the selections being taught.



Grammar Workshop

Appositives

Focus

Write this sentence on the board:

Your substitute teacher, a retired college professor, will administer the exam.

Discuss how the substitute teacher's being a retired professor is an extra detail.

Teach

Essential/Nonessential One way to classify an appositive is to remove it. If the meaning of the sentence is still clear, the appositive is nonessential. Ask: Does the posted sentence contain an essential or a nonessential appositive? Explain. (Nonessential: if the appositive "a retired college professor" is removed, the sentence is still clear.)

Assess

Revise

1. Willa Cather, a prolific writer, was known for her portrayal of pioneer life.
2. "A Wagner Matinée" appeared in The Troll Garden, a collection of stories.
3. The music evoked nostalgia that brought the woman, Clark's aunt, to tears.
4. A cowpuncher, a young German who had sung at Bayreuth, had drifted in.
5. Correct

530

Learning Objectives

In this assignment, you will focus on the following objectives:

Grammar:
Distinguishing between essential and nonessential appositives.
Using commas with nonessential elements.

Appositives

An appositive is a noun, pronoun, or noun phrase that identifies another noun, pronoun, or a noun phase.

Restrictive (essential) appositives are not set off with commas. (My brother Alfred is a poet.)

Nonrestrictive (nonessential) appositives are set off with commas. (Alfred, our family poet, has never been published.)

Tip

To determine whether to set off an appositive with commas, try reading the sentence without it. If the appositive is not needed to identify a noun, add commas.

Language Handbook

For more on appositives, see Language Handbook pp. R42–R61.

Literature Online

Grammar For more grammar practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u4.

Grammar Workshop

Appositives

Literature Connection In the following quotation, Howard Carpenter is an appositive—a noun, a pronoun, or a noun phrase that further identifies another noun, pronoun, or noun phrase.

> "One summer . . . she had kindled the callow fancy of my uncle, Howard Carpenter, then an idle, shiftless boy of twenty-one."
>
> —Willa Cather, from "A Wagner Matinée"

The appositive is set off with commas because it is nonessential (or nonrestrictive). Removing it would not change the meaning of my uncle; it simply adds information--the uncle's name. If Cather had written she had kindled the fancy of my uncle Howard, the appositive Howard would be essential (or restrictive); It would provide essential information, specifying which uncle the speaker is referring to.

Examples

Cather's experiences inspired the novels My Ántonia and O Pioneers!

Here, the appositive My Ántonia and O Pioneers! specifies which novels—it is essential to the meaning of the sentence.

She was in the city where she had spent her youth, a place longed for.

Here, the appositive a place longed for is nonessential. It supplies information about city, but does not change its meaning. Notice that the appositive comes after an adjective clause (where she had spent her youth) modifying city.

Revise Write the five sentences below, adding commas as necessary. One sentence needs no commas.

1. Willa Cather a prolific writer was known for her portrayal of pioneer life.
2. "A Wagner Matinee" appeared in The Troll Garden a collection of stories.
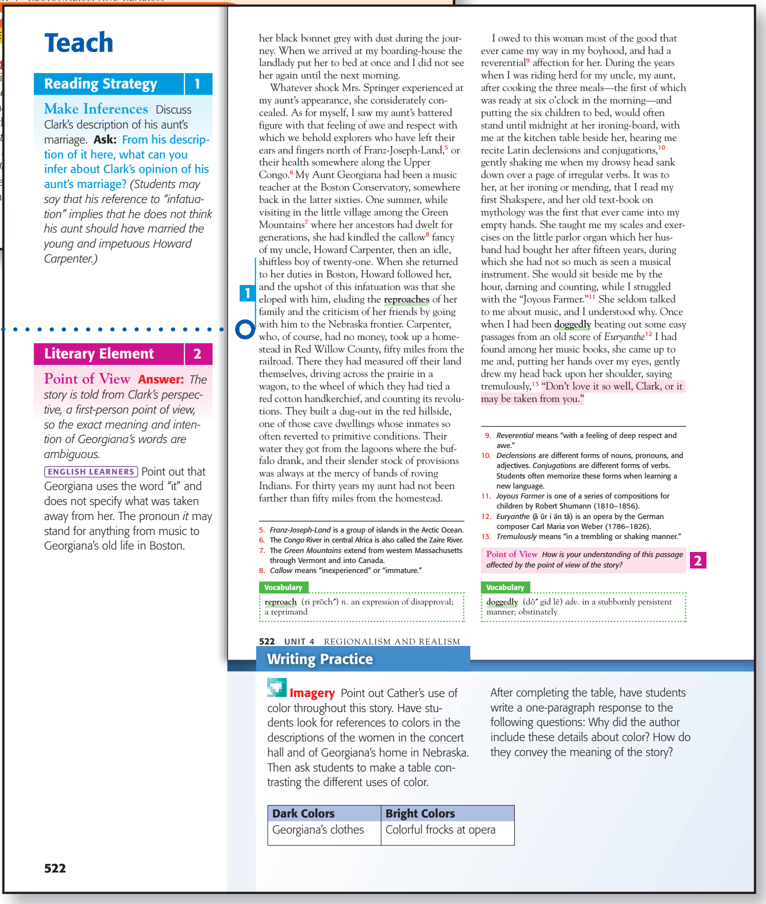
3. The music evoked nostalgia that brought the woman Clark's aunt to tears.
4. A cowpuncher a young German who had sung at Bayreuth had drifted in.
5. The aria "The Prize Song" is from Wagner's opera Die Meistersinger.

530 UNIT 4 REGIONALISM AND REALISM

Brackets and Numbers

When students are asked to think about the text, you will see brackets that are color-coded and numbered so that the corresponding teacher information is readily identifiable.



Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Make Inferences Discuss Clark's description of his aunt's marriage. Ask: From his description of it here, what can you infer about Clark's opinion of his aunt's marriage? (Students may say that his reference to "infatuation" implies that he does not think his aunt should have married the young and impetuous Howard Carpenter.)

Literary Element 2

Point of View Answer: The story is told from Clark's perspective, a first-person point of view, so the exact meaning and intention of Georgiana's words are ambiguous.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Point out that Georgiana uses the word "it" and does not specify what was taken away from her. The pronoun it may stand for anything from music to Georgiana's old life in Boston.

522

her black bonnet grey with dust during the journey. When we arrived at my boarding-house the landlady put her to bed at once and I did not see her again until the next morning.

Whatever shock Mrs. Springer experienced at my aunt's appearance, she considerately concealed. As for myself, I saw my aunt's battered figure with that feeling of awe and respect with which we behold explorers who have left their ears and fingers north of Franz-Joseph-Land,[5] or their health somewhere along the Upper Congo.[6] My Aunt Georgiana had been a music teacher at the Boston Conservatory, somewhere back in the latter sixties. One summer, while visiting in the little village among the Green Mountains[7] where her ancestors had dwelt for generations, she had kindled the callow[8] fancy of my uncle, Howard Carpenter, then an idle, shiftless boy of twenty-one. 1 When she returned to her duties in Boston, Howard followed her, and the upshot of this infatuation was that she eloped with him, eluding the reproaches of her family and the criticism of her friends by going with him to the Nebraska frontier. Carpenter, who, of course, had no money, took up a homestead in Red Willow County, fifty miles from the railroad. There they had measured off their land themselves, driving across the prairie in a wagon, to the wheel of which they had tied a red cotton handkerchief, and counting its revolutions. They built a dug-out in the red hillside, one of those cave dwellings whose inmates so often reverted to primitive conditions. Their water they got from the lagoons where the buffalo drank, and their slender stock of provisions was always at the mercy of bands of roving Indians. For thirty years my aunt had not been farther than fifty miles from the homestead.

I owed to this woman most of the good that ever came my way in my boyhood, and had a reverential[9] affection for her. During the years when I was riding herd for my uncle, my aunt, after cooking the three meals—the first of which was ready at six o'clock in the morning—and putting the six children to bed, would often stand until midnight at her ironing-board, with me at the kitchen table beside her, hearing me recite Latin declensions and conjugations,[10] gently shaking me when my drowsy head sank down over a page of irregular verbs. It was to her, at her ironing or mending, that I read my first Shakspere, and her old text-book on mythology was the first that ever came into my empty hands. She taught me my scales and exercises on the little parlor organ which her husband had bought her after fifteen years, during which she had not so much as seen a musical instrument. She would sit beside me by the hour, darning and counting, while I struggled with the "Joyous Farmer."[11] She seldom talked to me about music, and I understood why. Once when I had been doggedly beating out some easy passages from an old score of Euryanthe[12] I had found among her music books, she came up to me and, putting her hands over my eyes, gently drew my head back upon her shoulder, saying tremulously,[13] "Don't love it so well, Clark, or it may be taken from you."

---

[5] Franz-Joseph-Land is a group of islands in the Arctic Ocean.
[6] The Congo River in central Africa is also called the Zaire River.
[7] The Green Mountains extend from western Massachusetts through Vermont and into Canada.
[8] Callow means "inexperienced" or "immature."
[9] Reverential means "with a feeling of deep respect and awe."
[10] Declensions are different forms of nouns, pronouns, and adjectives. Conjugations are different forms of verbs. Students often memorize these forms when learning a new language.
[11] Joyous Farmer is one of a series of compositions for children by Robert Shumann (1810–1856).
[12] Euryanthe (ā ûr i än tā) is an opera by the German composer Carl Maria von Weber (1786–1826).
[13] Tremulously means "in a trembling or shaking manner."

Point of View How is your understanding of this passage affected by the point of view of the story? 2

Vocabulary

reproach (ri prōch´) n. an expression of disapproval; a reprimand

Vocabulary

doggedly (dô´ gid lē) adv. in a stubbornly persistent manner; obstinately

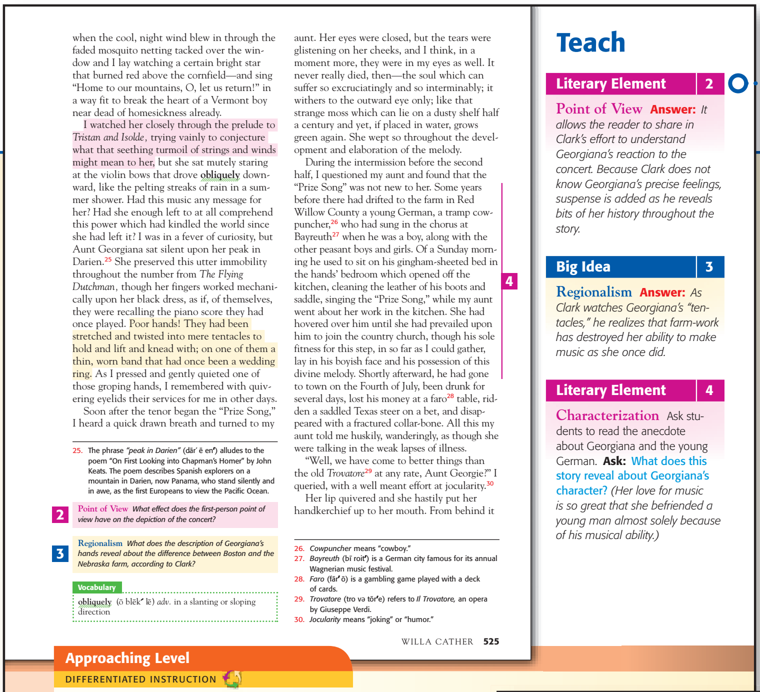
522 UNIT 4 REGIONALISM AND REALISM

Writing Practice

Imagery Point out Cather's use of color throughout this story. Have students look for references to colors in the descriptions of the women in the concert hall and of Georgiana's home in Nebraska. Then ask students to make a table contrasting the different uses of color.

Dark Colors	Bright Colors
Georgiana's clothes	Colorful frocks at opera

After completing the table, have students write a one-paragraph response to the following questions: Why did the author include these details about color? How do they convey the meaning of the story?



when the cool, night wind blew in through the faded mosquito netting tacked over the window and I lay watching a certain bright star that burned red above the cornfield—and sing "Home to our mountains, O, let us return!" in a way fit to break the heart of a Vermont boy near dead of homesickness already.

I watched her closely through the prelude to Tristan and Isolde, trying vainly to conjecture what that seething turmoil of strings and winds might mean to her, but she sat mutely staring at the violin bows that drove obliquely downward, like the pelting streaks of rain in a summer shower. Had this music any message for her? Had she enough left to at all comprehend this power which had kindled the world since she had left it? I was in a fever of curiosity, but Aunt Georgiana sat silent upon her peak in Darien.[25] She preserved this utter immobility throughout the number from The Flying Dutchman, though her fingers worked mechanically upon her black dress, as if, of themselves, they were recalling the piano score they had once played. Poor hands! They had been stretched and twisted into mere tentacles to hold and lift and knead with; on one of them a thin, worn band that had once been a wedding ring. As I pressed and gently quieted one of those groping hands, I remembered with quivering eyelids their services for me in other days.

Soon after the tenor began the "Prize Song," I heard a quick drawn breath and turned to my aunt. Her eyes were closed, but the tears were glistening on her cheeks, and I think, in a moment more, they were in my eyes as well. It never really died, then—the soul which can suffer so excruciatingly and so interminably; it withers to the outward eye only; like that strange moss which can lie on a dusty shelf half a century and yet, if placed in water, grows green again. She wept so throughout the development and elaboration of the melody.

During the intermission before the second half, I questioned my aunt and found that the "Prize Song" was not new to her. Some years before there had drifted to the farm in Red Willow County a young German, a tramp cowpuncher,[26] who had sung in the chorus at Bayreuth[27] when he was a boy, along with the other peasant boys and girls. Of a Sunday morning he used to sit on his gingham-sheeted bed in the hands' bedroom which opened off the kitchen, cleaning the leather of his boots and saddle, singing the "Prize Song," while my aunt went about her work in the kitchen. She had hovered over him until she had prevailed upon him to join the country church, though his sole fitness for this step, in so far as I could gather, lay in his boyish face and his possession of this divine melody. Shortly afterward, he had gone to town on the Fourth of July, been drunk for several days, lost his money at a faro[28] table, ridden a saddled Texas steer on a bet, and disappeared with a fractured collar-bone. All this my aunt told me huskily, wanderingly, as though she were talking in the weak lapses of illness. 4

"Well, we have come to better things than the old Trovatore[29] at any rate, Aunt Georgie?" I queried, with a well meant effort at jocularity.[30]

Her lip quivered and she hastily put her handkerchief up to her mouth. From behind it

---

[25] The phrase "peak in Darien" (dār′ ē en′) alludes to the poem "On First Looking into Chapman's Homer" by John Keats. The poem describes Spanish explorers on a mountain in Darien, now Panama, who stand silently and in awe, as the first Europeans to view the Pacific Ocean.

[26] Cowpuncher means "cowboy."

[27] Bayreuth (bī roit′) is a German city famous for its annual Wagnerian music festival.

[28] Faro (fār′ ō) is a gambling game played with a deck of cards.

[29] Trovatore (tro və tōr′e) refers to Il Trovatore, an opera by Giuseppe Verdi.

[30] Jocularity means "joking" or "humor."

2 Point of View What effect does the first-person point of view have on the depiction of the concert?

3 Regionalism What does the description of Georgiana's hands reveal about the difference between Boston and the Nebraska farm, according to Clark?

Vocabulary

obliquely (ō blēk′ lē) adv. in a slanting or sloping direction

WILLA CATHER 525

Teach

Literary Element 2

Point of View Answer: It allows the reader to share in Clark's effort to understand Georgiana's reaction to the concert. Because Clark does not know Georgiana's precise feelings, suspense is added as he reveals bits of her history throughout the story.

Big Idea 3

Regionalism Answer: As Clark watches Georgiana's "tentacles," he realizes that farm-work has destroyed her ability to make music as she once did.

Literary Element 4

Characterization Ask students to read the anecdote about Georgiana and the young German. Ask: What does this story reveal about Georgiana's character? (Her love for music is so great that she befriended a young man almost solely because of his musical ability.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

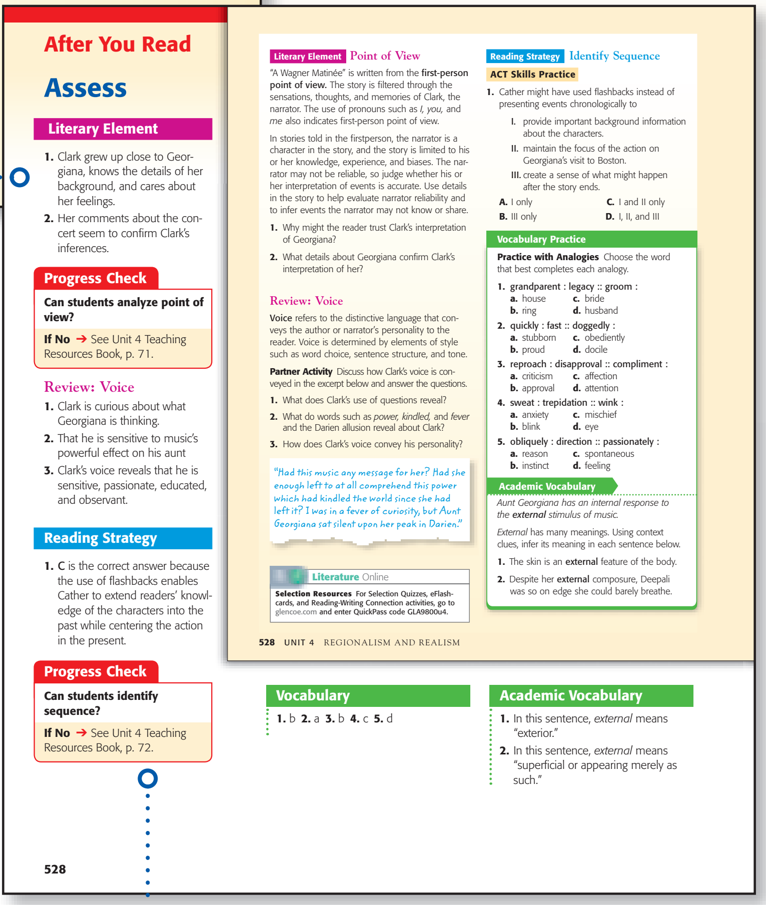
Emerging This story features long, complex sentences and short phrases. To improve reading fluency, urge students to read each paragraph silently before reading it aloud to a partner. Remind students that, when reading, commas and semicolons suggest short pauses, whereas end punctuation requires longer pauses.

Color Coding

Teacher information is color coded to match information in the Student Edition.

Assess

Students are assessed at regular points throughout instruction: after reading selections and at the end of units. The Teacher Edition provides answers to Student Edition questions.



After You Read

Assess

Literary Element

1. Clark grew up close to Georgiana, knows the details of her background, and cares about her feelings.
2. Her comments about the concert seem to confirm Clark's inferences.

Progress Check

Can students analyze point of view?

If No → See Unit 4 Teaching Resources Book, p. 71.

Review: Voice

1. Clark is curious about what Georgiana is thinking.
2. That he is sensitive to music's powerful effect on his aunt
3. Clark's voice reveals that he is sensitive, passionate, educated, and observant.

Reading Strategy

1. C is the correct answer because the use of flashbacks enables Cather to extend readers' knowledge of the characters into the past while centering the action in the present.

Progress Check

Can students identify sequence?

If No → See Unit 4 Teaching Resources Book, p. 72.

528

Literary Element Point of View

"A Wagner Matinée" is written from the first-person point of view. The story is filtered through the sensations, thoughts, and memories of Clark, the narrator. The use of pronouns such as I, you, and me also indicates first-person point of view.

In stories told in the firstperson, the narrator is a character in the story, and the story is limited to his or her knowledge, experience, and biases. The narrator may not be reliable, so judge whether his or her interpretation of events is accurate. Use details in the story to help evaluate narrator reliability and to infer events the narrator may not know or share.

1. Why might the reader trust Clark's interpretation of Georgiana?
2. What details about Georgiana confirm Clark's interpretation of her?

Review: Voice

Voice refers to the distinctive language that conveys the author or narrator's personality to the reader. Voice is determined by elements of style such as word choice, sentence structure, and tone.

Partner Activity Discuss how Clark's voice is conveyed in the excerpt below and answer the questions.

1. What does Clark's use of questions reveal?
2. What do words such as power, kindled, and fever and the Darien allusion reveal about Clark?
3. How does Clark's voice convey his personality?

"Had this music any message for her? Had she enough left to at all comprehend this power which had kindled the world since she had left it? I was in a fever of curiosity, but Aunt Georgiana sat silent upon her peak in Darien."

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u4.

Reading Strategy Identify Sequence

ACT Skills Practice

1. Cather might have used flashbacks instead of presenting events chronologically to
   - I. provide important background information about the characters.
   - II. maintain the focus of the action on Georgiana's visit to Boston.
   - III. create a sense of what might happen after the story ends.

A. I only C. I and II only
B. III only D. I, II, and III

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Analogies Choose the word that best completes each analogy.

1. grandparent : legacy :: groom :
   a. house c. bride
   b. ring d. husband
2. quickly : fast :: doggedly :
   a. stubborn c. obediently
   b. proud d. docile
3. reproach : disapproval :: compliment :
   a. criticism c. affection
   b. approval d. attention
4. sweat : trepidation :: wink :
   a. anxiety c. mischief
   b. blink d. eye
5. obliquely : direction :: passionately :
   a. reason c. spontaneous
   b. instinct d. feeling

Academic Vocabulary

Aunt Georgiana has an internal response to the external stimulus of music.

External has many meanings. Using context clues, infer its meaning in each sentence below.

1. The skin is an external feature of the body.
2. Despite her external composure, Deepali was so on edge she could barely breathe.

528 UNIT 4 REGIONALISM AND REALISM

Vocabulary

1. b 2. a 3. b 4. c 5. d

Academic Vocabulary

1. In this sentence, external means "exterior."
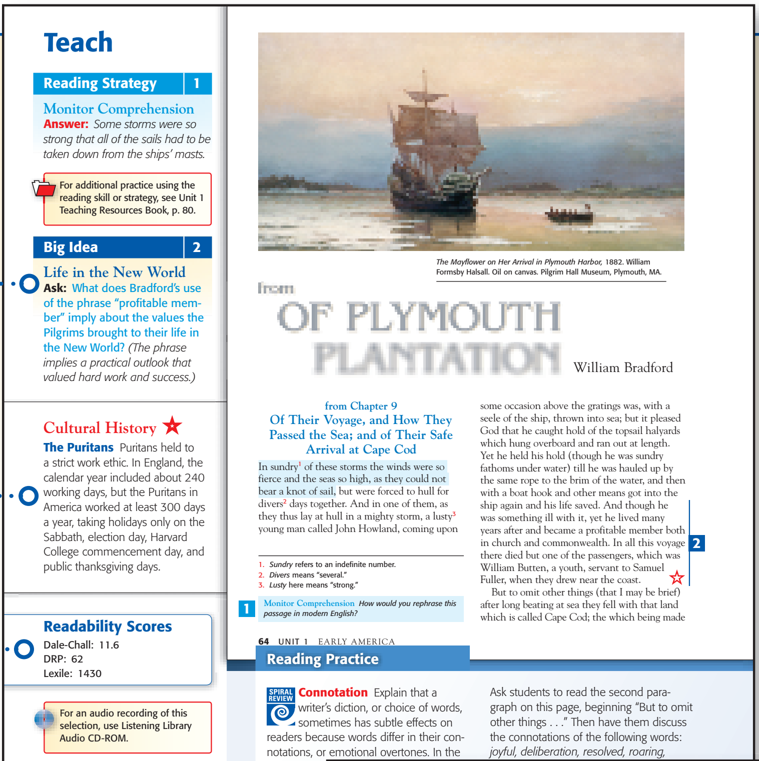
2. In this sentence, external means "superficial or appearing merely as such."

Progress Check

IF a student needs help (based on a quick and informal assessment), THEN we provide a suggestion for reteaching.

Teaching Support



Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Monitor Comprehension
Answer: Some storms were so strong that all of the sails had to be taken down from the ships' masts.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 80.

Big Idea 2

Life in the New World
Ask: What does Bradford's use of the phrase "profitable member" imply about the values the Pilgrims brought to their life in the New World? (The phrase implies a practical outlook that valued hard work and success.)

Cultural History ★
The Puritans Puritans held to a strict work ethic. In England, the calendar year included about 240 working days, but the Puritans in America worked at least 300 days a year, taking holidays only on the Sabbath, election day, Harvard College commencement day, and public thanksgiving days.

Readability Scores
Dale-Chall: 11.6
DRP: 62
Lexile: 1430

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

The Mayflower on Her Arrival in Plymouth Harbor, 1882. William Formsby Halsall. Oil on canvas. Pilgrim Hall Museum, Plymouth, MA.

from
OF PLYMOUTH PLANTATION
William Bradford

from Chapter 9
Of Their Voyage, and How They Passed the Sea; and of Their Safe Arrival at Cape Cod

In sundry[1] of these storms the winds were so fierce and the seas so high, as they could not bear a knot of sail, but were forced to hull for divers[2] days together. And in one of them, as they thus lay at hull in a mighty storm, a lusty[3] young man called John Howland, coming upon some occasion above the gratings was, with a seele of the ship, thrown into sea; but it pleased God that he caught hold of the topsail halyards which hung overboard and ran out at length. Yet he held his hold (though he was sundry fathoms under water) till he was hauled up by the same rope to the brim of the water, and then with a boat hook and other means got into the ship again and his life saved. And though he was something ill with it, yet he lived many years after and became a profitable member both in church and commonwealth. In all this voyage there died but one of the passengers, which was William Butten, a youth, servant to Samuel Fuller, when they drew near the coast. 2 ☆

But to omit other things (that I may be brief) after long beating at sea they fell with that land which is called Cape Cod; the which being made

1 Monitor Comprehension How would you rephrase this passage in modern English?

---

[1] Sundry refers to an indefinite number.
[2] Divers means "several."
[3] Lusty here means "strong."

64 UNIT 1 EARLY AMERICA

Reading Practice

Connotation Explain that a writer's diction, or choice of words, sometimes has subtle effects on readers because words differ in their connotations, or emotional overtones. In the first sentenc had describe than fierce, w impression c

Ask students to read the second paragraph on this page, beginning "But to omit other things . . ." Then have them discuss the connotations of the following words: joyful, deliberation, resolved, roaring,

64

Big Idea Connection

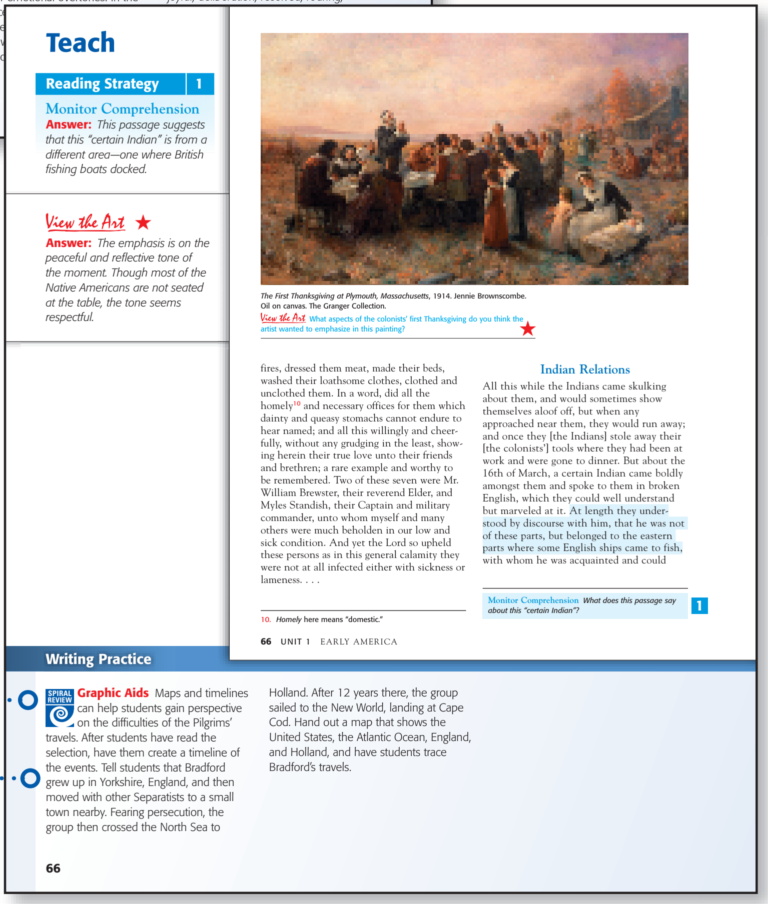
Thought-provoking questions prompt students to explore the Big Idea in context to the reading selection.

Teaching Notes

These notes give you extra teaching hints and information.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall, DRP, and Lexiles are provided for every selection.



Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Monitor Comprehension
Answer: This passage suggests that this "certain Indian" is from a different area—one where British fishing boats docked.

View the Art ★
Answer: The emphasis is on the peaceful and reflective tone of the moment. Though most of the Native Americans are not seated at the table, the tone seems respectful.

The First Thanksgiving at Plymouth, Massachusetts, 1914. Jennie Brownscombe. Oil on canvas. The Granger Collection.

View the Art What aspects of the colonists' first Thanksgiving do you think the artist wanted to emphasize in this painting? ★ fires, dressed them meat, made their beds, washed their loathsome clothes, clothed and unclothed them. In a word, did all the homely[10] and necessary offices for them which dainty and queasy stomachs cannot endure to hear named; and all this willingly and cheerfully, without any grudging in the least, showing herein their true love unto their friends and brethren; a rare example and worthy to be remembered. Two of these seven were Mr. William Brewster, their reverend Elder, and Myles Standish, their Captain and military commander, unto whom myself and many others were much beholden in our low and sick condition. And yet the Lord so upheld these persons as in this general calamity they were not at all infected either with sickness or lameness. . . .

Indian Relations

All this while the Indians came skulking about them, and would sometimes show themselves aloof off, but when any approached near them, they would run away; and once they [the Indians] stole away their [the colonists'] tools where they had been at work and were gone to dinner. But about the 16th of March, a certain Indian came boldly amongst them and spoke to them in broken English, which they could well understand but marveled at it. At length they understood by discourse with him, that he was not of these parts, but belonged to the eastern parts where some English ships came to fish, with whom he was acquainted and could

Monitor Comprehension What does this passage say about this "certain Indian"? 1

---

[10] Homely here means "domestic."

66 UNIT 1 EARLY AMERICA

Writing Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Graphic Aids Maps and timelines can help students gain perspective on the difficulties of the Pilgrims' travels. After students have read the selection, have them create a timeline of the events. Tell students that Bradford grew up in Yorkshire, England, and then moved with other Separatists to a small town nearby. Fearing persecution, the group then crossed the North Sea to Holland. After 12 years there, the group sailed to the New World, landing at Cape Cod. Hand out a map that shows the United States, the Atlantic Ocean, England, and Holland, and have students trace Bradford's travels.

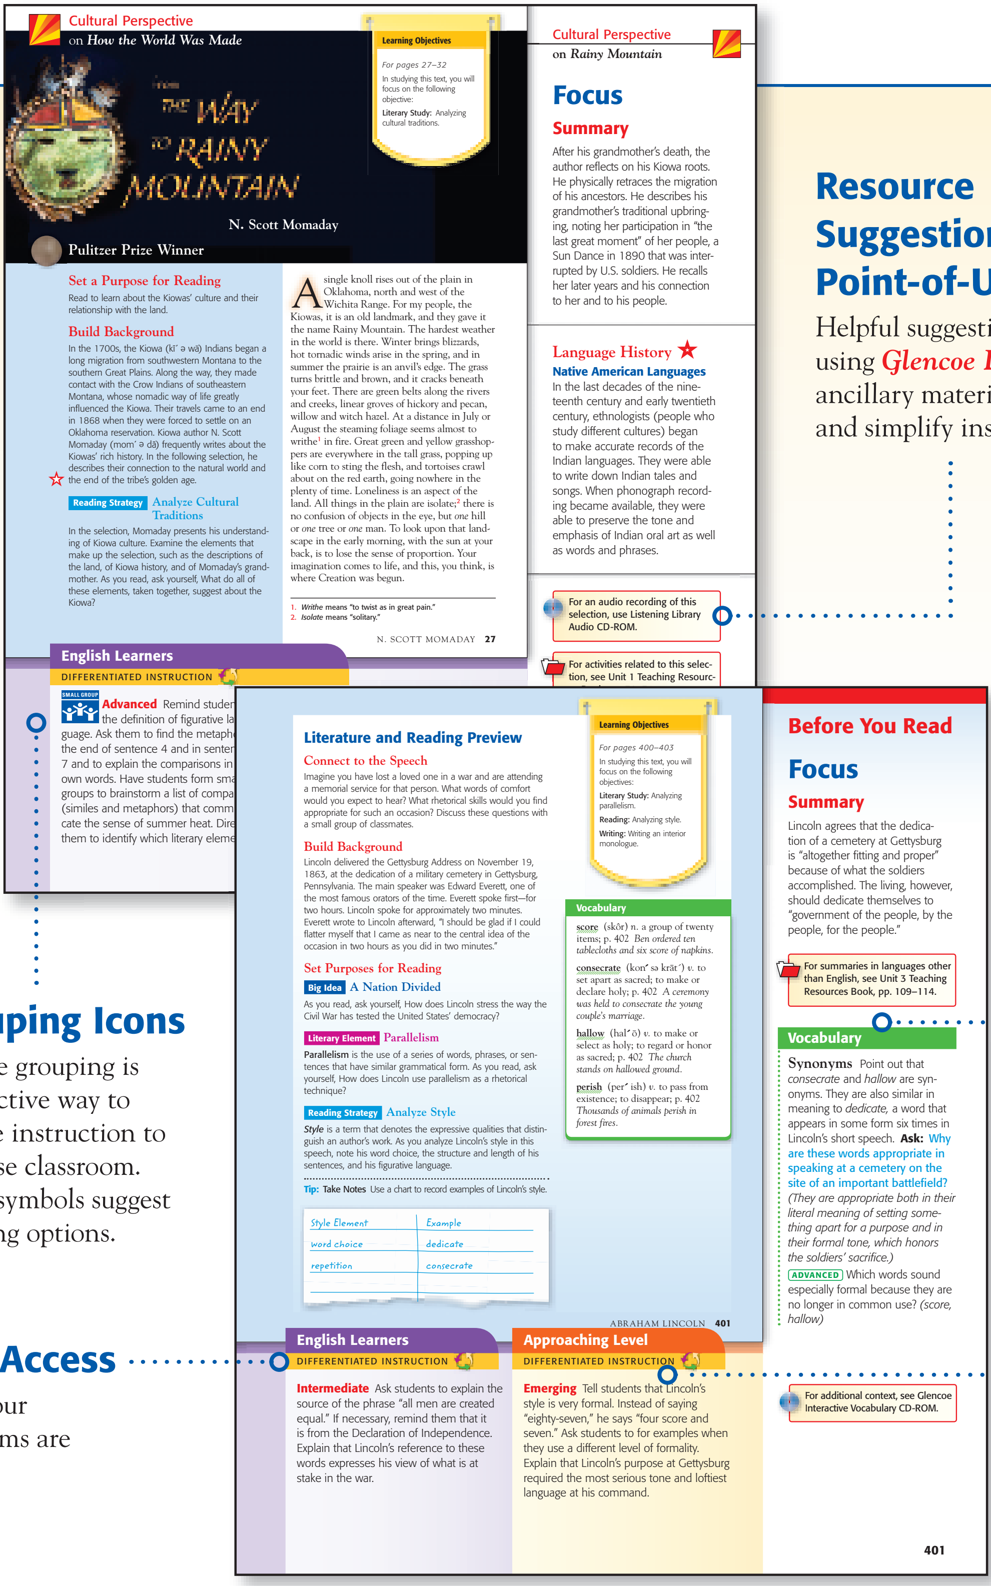
66

Spiral Review

Because repetition and reinforcement are important for students' learning, we indicate when a skill is being reviewed.

Skills Support

Glencoe Literature provides additional support with the skills, such as reading, writing, literature, research, listening, speaking, and viewing, that provide the framework for all academic success.



Cultural Perspective
on How the World Was Made

from THE WAY TO RAINY MOUNTAIN

N. Scott Momaday

Pulitzer Prize Winner

Learning Objectives

For pages 27–32

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objective:

Literary Study: Analyzing cultural traditions.

Set a Purpose for Reading

Read to learn about the Kiowas' culture and their relationship with the land.

Build Background

In the 1700s, the Kiowa (kī′ ə wä) Indians began a long migration from southwestern Montana to the southern Great Plains. Along the way, they made contact with the Crow Indians of southeastern Montana, whose nomadic way of life greatly influenced the Kiowa. Their travels came to an end in 1868 when they were forced to settle on an Oklahoma reservation. Kiowa author N. Scott Momaday (mom′ ə dā) frequently writes about the Kiowas' rich history. In the following selection, he describes their connection to the natural world and ☆ the end of the tribe's golden age.

Reading Strategy Analyze Cultural Traditions

In the selection, Momaday presents his understanding of Kiowa culture. Examine the elements that make up the selection, such as the descriptions of the land, of Kiowa history, and of Momaday's grandmother. As you read, ask yourself, What do all of these elements, taken together, suggest about the Kiowa?

A single knoll rises out of the plain in Oklahoma, north and west of the Wichita Range. For my people, the Kiowas, it is an old landmark, and they gave it the name Rainy Mountain. The hardest weather in the world is there. Winter brings blizzards, hot tornadic winds arise in the spring, and in summer the prairie is an anvil's edge. The grass turns brittle and brown, and it cracks beneath your feet. There are green belts along the rivers and creeks, linear groves of hickory and pecan, willow and witch hazel. At a distance in July or August the steaming foliage seems almost to writhe[1] in fire. Great green and yellow grasshoppers are everywhere in the tall grass, popping up like corn to sting the flesh, and tortoises crawl about on the red earth, going nowhere in the plenty of time. Loneliness is an aspect of the land. All things in the plain are isolate;[2] there is no confusion of objects in the eye, but one hill or one tree or one man. To look upon that landscape in the early morning, with the sun at your back, is to lose the sense of proportion. Your imagination comes to life, and this, you think, is where Creation was begun.

---

1. Writhe means "to twist as in great pain."
2. Isolate means "solitary."

N. SCOTT MOMADAY 27

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP Advanced Remind studen the definition of figurative la guage. Ask them to find the metaph the end of sentence 4 and in senten 7 and to explain the comparisons in own words. Have students form sma groups to brainstorm a list of compa
(similes and metaphors) that comm cate the sense of summer heat. Dire them to identify which literary eleme

Cultural Perspective
on Rainy Mountain

Focus

Summary

After his grandmother's death, the author reflects on his Kiowa roots. He physically retraces the migration of his ancestors. He describes his grandmother's traditional upbringing, noting her participation in "the last great moment" of her people, a Sun Dance in 1890 that was interrupted by U.S. soldiers. He recalls her later years and his connection to her and to his people.

Language History ★

Native American Languages

In the last decades of the nineteenth century and early twentieth century, ethnologists (people who study different cultures) began to make accurate records of the Indian languages. They were able to write down Indian tales and songs. When phonograph recording became available, they were able to preserve the tone and emphasis of Indian oral art as well as words and phrases.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

For activities related to this selection, see Unit 1 Teaching Resourc-

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Speech

Imagine you have lost a loved one in a war and are attending a memorial service for that person. What words of comfort would you expect to hear? What rhetorical skills would you find appropriate for such an occasion? Discuss these questions with a small group of classmates.

Build Background

Lincoln delivered the Gettysburg Address on November 19, 1863, at the dedication of a military cemetery in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania. The main speaker was Edward Everett, one of the most famous orators of the time. Everett spoke first—for two hours. Lincoln spoke for approximately two minutes. Everett wrote to Lincoln afterward, "I should be glad if I could flatter myself that I came as near to the central idea of the occasion in two hours as you did in two minutes."

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea A Nation Divided

As you read, ask yourself, How does Lincoln stress the way the Civil War has tested the United States' democracy?

Literary Element Parallelism

Parallelism is the use of a series of words, phrases, or sentences that have similar grammatical form. As you read, ask yourself, How does Lincoln use parallelism as a rhetorical technique?

Reading Strategy Analyze Style

Style is a term that denotes the expressive qualities that distinguish an author's work. As you analyze Lincoln's style in this speech, note his word choice, the structure and length of his sentences, and his figurative language.

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart to record examples of Lincoln's style.

Style Element	Example
word choice	dedicate
repetition	consecrate

Learning Objectives

For pages 400–403

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing parallelism.

Reading: Analyzing style.

Writing: Writing an interior monologue.

Vocabulary

score (skôr) n. a group of twenty items; p. 402 Ben ordered ten tablecloths and six score of napkins.

consecrate (kon′ sə krāt′) v. to set apart as sacred; to make or declare holy; p. 402 A ceremony was held to consecrate the young couple's marriage.

hallow (hal′ ō) v. to make or select as holy; to regard or honor as sacred; p. 402 The church stands on hallowed ground.

perish (per′ ish) v. to pass from existence; to disappear; p. 402 Thousands of animals perish in forest fires.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN 401

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Ask students to explain the source of the phrase "all men are created equal." If necessary, remind them that it is from the Declaration of Independence. Explain that Lincoln's reference to these words expresses his view of what is at stake in the war.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Tell students that Lincoln's style is very formal. Instead of saying "eighty-seven," he says "four score and seven." Ask students to for examples when they use a different level of formality. Explain that Lincoln's purpose at Gettysburg required the most serious tone and loftiest language at his command.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Lincoln agrees that the dedication of a cemetery at Gettysburg is "altogether fitting and proper" because of what the soldiers accomplished. The living, however, should dedicate themselves to "government of the people, by the people, for the people."

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 109–114.

Vocabulary

Synonyms Point out that consecrate and hallow are synonyms. They are also similar in meaning to dedicate, a word that appears in some form six times in Lincoln's short speech. Ask: Why are these words appropriate in speaking at a cemetery on the site of an important battlefield? (They are appropriate both in their literal meaning of setting something apart for a purpose and in their formal tone, which honors the soldiers' sacrifice.)

ADVANCED Which words sound especially formal because they are no longer in common use? (score, hallow)

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

401

Resource Suggestions at Point-of-Use

Helpful suggestions for using Glencoe Literature ancillary material support and simplify instruction.

Grouping Icons

Flexible grouping is an effective way to provide instruction to a diverse classroom. These symbols suggest grouping options.

Vocabulary Preteaching

Because vocabulary is a key component of reading success, we provide for the struggling students and English Learners in your classroom additional vocabulary preteaching activities.

Universal Access

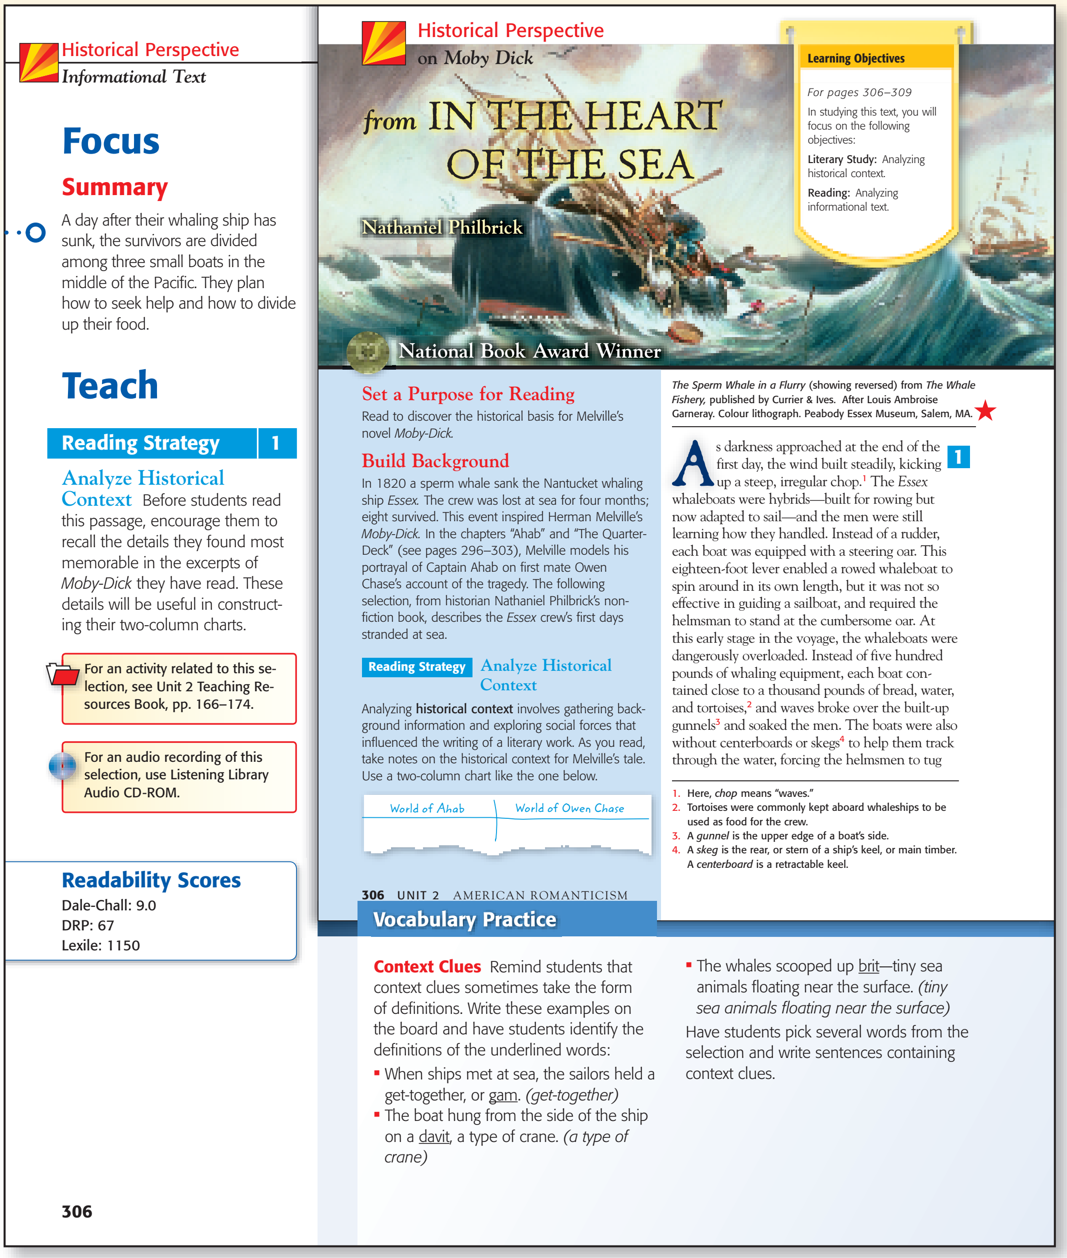
Activities for your diverse classrooms are clearly labeled.

Informational Text

The wide range of informational text in Glencoe Literature broadens the students' reading to include more than just poetry, short stories, and plays.

Perspectives

Award-winning book excerpts provide students with the in-depth information they need to explore the cultural, political, historical, and literary contexts of a reading selection.



Historical Perspective
Informational Text

Focus

Summary

A day after their whaling ship has sunk, the survivors are divided among three small boats in the middle of the Pacific. They plan how to seek help and how to divide up their food.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Historical Context Before students read this passage, encourage them to recall the details they found most memorable in the excerpts of Moby-Dick they have read. These details will be useful in constructing their two-column charts.

For an activity related to this selection, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 166–174.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores
Dale-Chall: 9.0
DRP: 67
Lexile: 1150

306

Historical Perspective on Moby Dick

from IN THE HEART OF THE SEA

Nathaniel Philbrick

National Book Award Winner

Learning Objectives

For pages 306–309

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing historical context.

Reading: Analyzing informational text.

Set a Purpose for Reading

Read to discover the historical basis for Melville's novel Moby-Dick.

Build Background

In 1820 a sperm whale sank the Nantucket whaling ship Essex. The crew was lost at sea for four months; eight survived. This event inspired Herman Melville's Moby-Dick. In the chapters "Ahab" and "The Quarter-Deck" (see pages 296–303), Melville models his portrayal of Captain Ahab on first mate Owen Chase's account of the tragedy. The following selection, from historian Nathaniel Philbrick's nonfiction book, describes the Essex crew's first days stranded at sea.

Reading Strategy Analyze Historical Context

Analyzing historical context involves gathering background information and exploring social forces that influenced the writing of a literary work. As you read, take notes on the historical context for Melville's tale. Use a two-column chart like the one below.

World of Ahab	World of Owen Chase

The Sperm Whale in a Flurry (showing reversed) from The Whale Fishery, published by Currier & Ives. After Louis Ambroise Garneray. Colour lithograph. Peabody Essex Museum, Salem, MA.

As darkness approached at the end of the first day, the wind built steadily, kicking up a steep, irregular chop.[1] The Essex whaleboats were hybrids—built for rowing but now adapted to sail—and the men were still learning how they handled. Instead of a rudder, each boat was equipped with a steering oar. This eighteen-foot lever enabled a rowed whaleboat to spin around in its own length, but it was not so effective in guiding a sailboat, and required the helmsman to stand at the cumbersome oar. At this early stage in the voyage, the whaleboats were dangerously overloaded. Instead of five hundred pounds of whaling equipment, each boat contained close to a thousand pounds of bread, water, and tortoises,[2] and waves broke over the built-up gunnels[3] and soaked the men. The boats were also without centerboards or skegs[4] to help them track through the water, forcing the helmsmen to tug 1

---

[1] Here, chop means "waves."
[2] Tortoises were commonly kept aboard whaleships to be used as food for the crew.
[3] A gunnel is the upper edge of a boat's side.
[4] A skeg is the rear, or stern of a ship's keel, or main timber. A centerboard is a retractable keel.

306 UNIT 2 AMERICAN ROMANTICISM

Vocabulary Practice

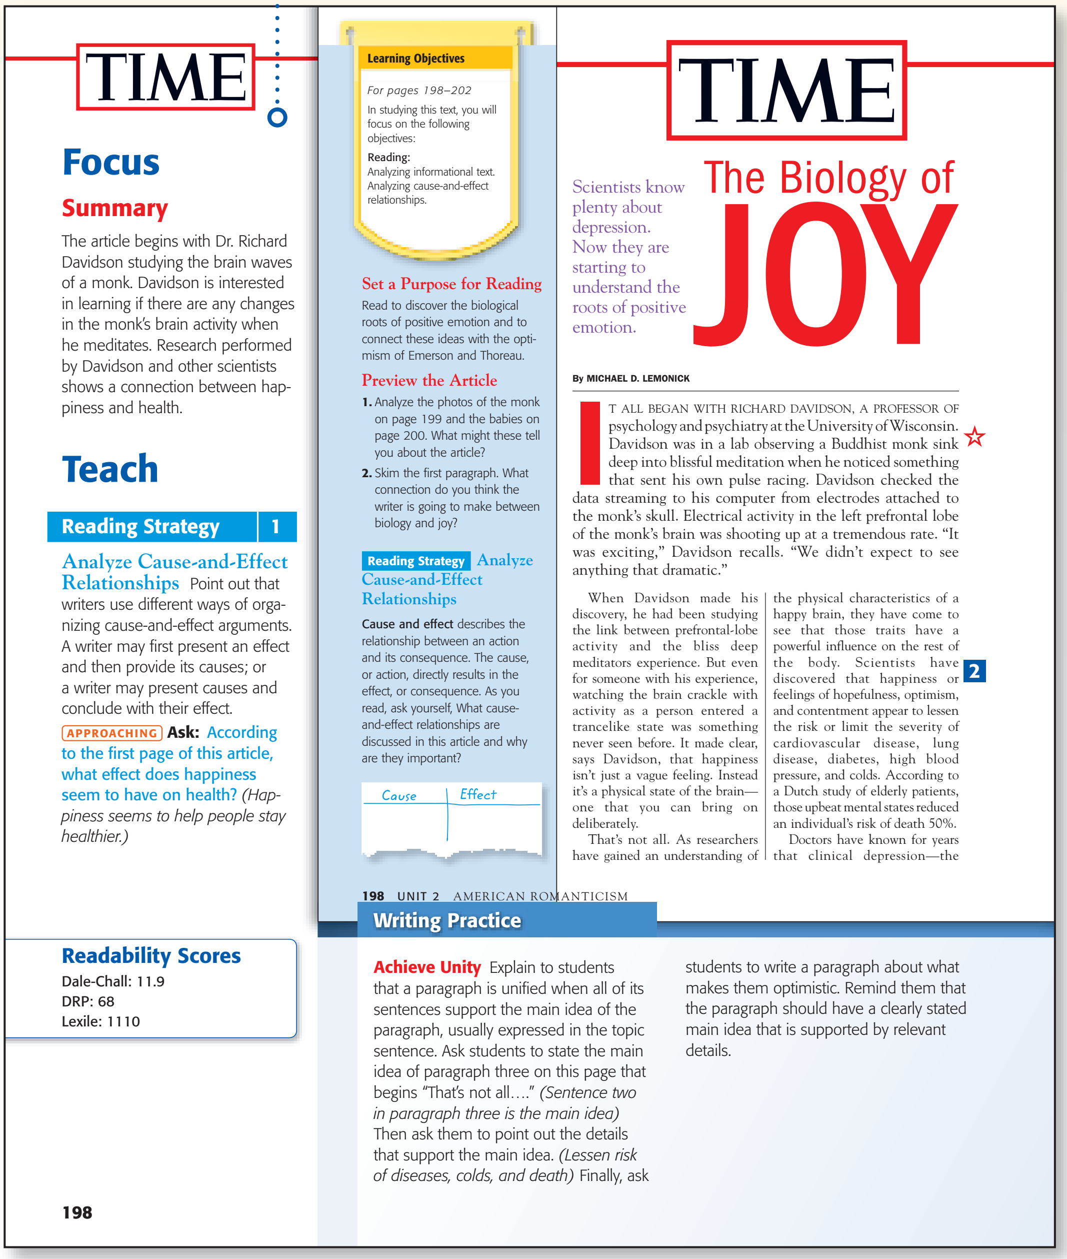
Context Clues Remind students that context clues sometimes take the form of definitions. Write these examples on the board and have students identify the definitions of the underlined words:

- When ships met at sea, the sailors held a get-together, or gam. (get-together)
- The boat hung from the side of the ship on a davit, a type of crane. (a type of crane)
- The whales scooped up brit—tiny sea animals floating near the surface. (tiny sea animals floating near the surface)

Have students pick several words from the selection and write sentences containing context clues.

TIME Articles

Linked to the Big Idea, an author, or a reading selection, these articles deliver the facts on topical issues.



TIME

Focus

Summary

The article begins with Dr. Richard Davidson studying the brain waves of a monk. Davidson is interested in learning if there are any changes in the monk's brain activity when he meditates. Research performed by Davidson and other scientists shows a connection between happiness and health.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships Point out that writers use different ways of organizing cause-and-effect arguments. A writer may first present an effect and then provide its causes; or a writer may present causes and conclude with their effect.

APPROACHING Ask: According to the first page of this article, what effect does happiness seem to have on health? (Happiness seems to help people stay healthier.)

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 11.9
DRP: 68
Lexile: 1110

Learning Objectives

For pages 198–202

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Reading:
Analyzing informational text.
Analyzing cause-and-effect relationships.

Set a Purpose for Reading

Read to discover the biological roots of positive emotion and to connect these ideas with the optimism of Emerson and Thoreau.

Preview the Article

1. Analyze the photos of the monk on page 199 and the babies on page 200. What might these tell you about the article?
2. Skim the first paragraph. What connection do you think the writer is going to make between biology and joy?

Reading Strategy Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships

Cause and effect describes the relationship between an action and its consequence. The cause, or action, directly results in the effect, or consequence. As you read, ask yourself, What cause-and-effect relationships are discussed in this article and why are they important?

Cause	Effect

TIME

The Biology of JOY

Scientists know plenty about depression. Now they are starting to understand the roots of positive emotion.

By MICHAEL D. LEMONICK

IT ALL BEGAN WITH RICHARD DAVIDSON, A PROFESSOR OF psychology and psychiatry at the University of Wisconsin. Davidson was in a lab observing a Buddhist monk sink deep into blissful meditation when he noticed something that sent his own pulse racing. Davidson checked the data streaming to his computer from electrodes attached to the monk's skull. Electrical activity in the left prefrontal lobe of the monk's brain was shooting up at a tremendous rate. "It was exciting," Davidson recalls. "We didn't expect to see anything that dramatic." ☆

When Davidson made his discovery, he had been studying the link between prefrontal-lobe activity and the bliss deep meditators experience. But even for someone with his experience, watching the brain crackle with activity as a person entered a trancelike state was something never seen before. It made clear, says Davidson, that happiness isn't just a vague feeling. Instead it's a physical state of the brain—one that you can bring on deliberately.

That's not all. As researchers have gained an understanding of the physical characteristics of a happy brain, they have come to see that those traits have a powerful influence on the rest of the body. Scientists have discovered that happiness or feelings of hopefulness, optimism, and contentment appear to lessen the risk or limit the severity of cardiovascular disease, lung disease, diabetes, high blood pressure, and colds. According to a Dutch study of elderly patients, those upbeat mental states reduced an individual's risk of death 50%. 2

Doctors have known for years that clinical depression—the

Writing Practice

Achieve Unity Explain to students that a paragraph is unified when all of its sentences support the main idea of the paragraph, usually expressed in the topic sentence. Ask students to state the main idea of paragraph three on this page that begins "That's not all…." (Sentence two in paragraph three is the main idea) Then ask them to point out the details that support the main idea. (Lessen risk of diseases, colds, and death) Finally, ask students to write a paragraph about what makes them optimistic. Remind them that the paragraph should have a clearly stated main idea that is supported by relevant details.

Guide to Readability

Throughout the teacher materials in your Teacher Edition, you will encounter DRP readability measures assigned to the reading selections in Glencoe Literature. You will also find readability scores based on the Lexile Framework® for Reading and the Dale-Chall Readability Formula. You can use these scores to select reading materials that are suitable for your entire class or for individual students.

Degrees of Reading Power® (DRP)

DRP values indicate the readability of prose text. The higher the value, the more difficult the text. The scale ranges from 1 to 100; commonly encountered English text tends to fall somewhere between 25 and 85. Although middle school texts have an average difficulty of 56, and high school texts have an average difficulty of 62, no single readability level is appropriate for each grade level. Rather, a typical classroom has materials with a range of readability levels available for use—some intended for less proficient readers, some for average readers, and some for stronger readers. The following chart shows the average DRP readability range for materials widely available for use at each grade. Some materials you might use, however, will certainly fall outside of the range for your particular grade.

Grade	DRP Readability Ranges
6	51–61
7	52–62
8	53–64
9	53–65
10	51–68
11	56–67
12	57–68

The Lexile® Framework

A Lexile measure assigned to a text is the specific number that describes the reading demands of the text. The typical Lexile Scale ranges from 200 to 1700 Lexiles. As with the DRP measures, there is not a direct translation from a specific Lexile measure to a specific grade level. Within any classroom, there will be a range of readers and a range of materials to be read. The levels shown on the following chart indicate the approximate range of Lexile scores for 50 percent of the materials found in a typical grade-level classroom. For example, the middle half of the instructional materials typically found in a sixth-grade classroom ranges in difficulty from about 850L to 1050L.

Grade	Text Measures (from Lexile Framework Map)
6	850L to 1050L
7	950L to 1075L
8	1000L to 1100L
9	1050L to 1150L
10	1100L to 1200L
11 and 12	1100L to 1300L

Dale-Chall Readability Formula

The Dale-Chall Formula is based on the average sentence length and the number of unfamiliar words in a passage. The idea behind this formula is that readers typically find it easier to read, process, and recall a passage if the words and sentences are familiar and grade appropriate. The Dale-Chall Formula assesses the difficulty of a passage by computing two different values from the text. The first measure is the average number of words per sentence. The second measure is the percentage of words in the passage not found on the grade appropriate Dale Word List. The following chart shows the average Dale-Chall readability scores for grades 5 thru 12.

Grade	Dale-Chall Readability Score
5-6th Grade	5.0 to 5.9
7-8th Grade	6.0 to 6.9
9-10th Grade	7.0 to 7.9
11-12th Grade	8.0 to 8.9

African American Vernacular English (AAVE)

Some of your students will be speakers of African American Vernacular English (AAVE). AAVE is a language system with well-formed rules for sounds, grammar, and meanings. Throughout the year you will help these students learn standard academic English by focusing on those places where AAVE differs from the standard and on those patterns that will have the most immediate impact on the students' reading and writing development.

These students will need help in understanding that what is appropriate in one setting is not appropriate in another, so they can shift easily and competently between varieties in different social contexts. Instruction will be more effective if it identifies nonstandard varieties of English as different, rather than inferior. All students should be taught standard English in a way that respects their home language.

Use the charts that follow to identify AAVE linguistic differences and instructional modifications that can help students as they learn to successfully and fluently speak, read, and write standard English. The modifications focus on the following:

- Providing students with clear enunciation examples during phonics and phonemic awareness lessons targeting difficult sounds. Then additional pronunciation practice is provided during small group phonics lessons.
- Using contrastive analysis during whole group and small group time in which students code switch between AAVE and standard English. The difference in each grammatical structure is highlighted and students are provided ample opportunities to practice standard English in speaking and writing. They are also taught the proper context for each usage.
- Using Discrimination Drills in which two sentences are read aloud or written on the board. One is standard English, the other reflects common AAVE structures. Students must determine which is standard English.
- Using Translation Drills in which students change an AAVE sentence into standard English.

Phonics Differences

English/Language Arts Skill	Linguistic Differences and Instructional Modifications
Digraph th as in bathroom	For many speakers of African American Vernacular English, the initial /th/ sound in function words such as this and then is often produced as a /d/ sound. In some words, such as thing and through, the /th/ sound is produced as a /t/ sound. At the ends of words and syllables, such as bathroom and death, the /th/ sound is replaced by the /f/ sound. This will affect students' spelling and speaking. Students will need additional articulation support prior to spelling these words.
Final Consonant r	Many speakers of African American Vernacular English drop the /r/ sound in words. For example, these students will say sto' for store or do' for door. Clearly pronounce these words, emphasizing the /r/ sound. Have students repeat several times, exaggerating the sound before spelling these words.
r*-Blends	Many speakers of African American Vernacular English drop the /r/ in words with r-Blends. For example, these students will say th'ow for throw. Clearly pronounce these words in the lesson, emphasizing the sounds of the r-Blend. Have students repeat several times, exaggerating the sound.

Final Consonant l and Final l-Blends	Many speakers of African American Vernacular English drop the /l/ sound in words, particularly in words with -ool and -oal spelling patterns, such as cool and coal, and when the letter l precedes the consonants p, t, or k as in help, belt, and milk. These students will drop the l when spelling these words, as well. Provide additional articulation support prior to reading and spelling these words.
Final Consonant Blends	Many speakers of African American Vernacular English drop the final letter in a consonant blend (e.g., mp, nt, nk, lo, lt, lk). For example, they will say des' for desk. Clearly pronounce the final sound in these words and have students repeat several times, exaggerating the sound.
Plurals	When the letter -s is added to a word ending in a consonant blend, such as test (tests), many speakers of African American Vernacular English will drop the final sounds. Therefore they will say tes' or tesses. These students will need additional articulation support.
Contractions	Many speakers of African American Vernacular English drop the /t/ sound when pronouncing the common words it's, that's, and what's. These words sound more like i's, tha's, and wha's. These students will need additional articulation support in order to pronounce and spell these words.
Short Vowels i and e	When the /i/ and /e/ sounds appear before the consonants m or n in words, such as pen/pin and him/hem, many speakers of African American Vernacular English won't pronounce or hear the difference. Focus on articulation, such as mouth position for each vowel sound, during the lesson.
Inflectional Ending -ing	Many speakers of African American Vernacular English will pronounce words with -ing as /ang/. For example, they will say thang for thing. Emphasize the /i/ sound in these words to help students correctly spell and pronounce them.

Grammar, Usage, Mechanics Differences

English/Language Arts Skill	Linguistic Differences and Instructional Modifications
Subject-Verb Agreement (he is , he goes)	To acquire standard academic English speech and writing, speakers of African American Vernacular English need to learn to use -s with a verb and the third person and only there, as in he is and he goes. Many speakers of AAVE will leave out the -s or place it elsewhere, as in he go or we goes. Write a sentence from students' speech or writing. Then provide contrastive analysis work. Write the standard English form above that sentence. Discuss the key differences.
Subject-Verb Agreement (do/does, have/has, was/were)	Many speakers of African American Vernacular English have difficulties with subject-verb agreement when the verbs do/does, have/has, and was/were are used. Additional grammar instruction and practice will be needed. Write a sentence from students' speech or writing. Then provide contrastive analysis work. Write the standard English form above that sentence. Discuss the key differences.
Past Tense (-ed)	Many speakers of African American Vernacular English understand the use of -ed to form the past tense but leave it out or add sounds when pronouncing the word, as in pick or pickted for picked. Students will need additional work during small group time with -ed in order to know when and where to use it in writing.

Past Tense (simple past tense vs. past perfect tense)	Many speakers of African American Vernacular English will add had to the simple past tense, saying We had picked for We picked. The use of had indicates the past perfect tense in standard academic English. Other common nonstandard forms of irregular past-tense verbs include He seen that and He had ran over there.
The Verb "to be" (pronunciation)	In the first person present tense, many speakers of African American Vernacular English will properly use I am or I'm, but say it more like "uhm." Focus on pronunciation.
The Verb "to be" (writing)	To learn standard academic English, many speakers of African American Vernacular English will need to learn not to delete is and are when speaking and writing. For example, students might say He my brother or She goin' over there. Additional grammar instruction and practice will be needed. Use Discrimination and Translation Drills.
The Verb "to be" (speaking)	Many speakers of African American Vernacular English will use was in the singular and plural forms, as in He was and They was. Additional grammar instruction and practice will be needed.
The Verb "to be"	To learn standard academic English, many speakers of African American Vernacular English will need to learn to avoid using nonstandard forms, such as He always be doing this, in favor of am, are, and is. Also, additional instruction and practice will be needed to show the proper placement of the adverbs always, never, and others. For example, He is always doing this rather than He always is doing this. Write a sentence from students' speech or writing. Then provide contrastive analysis work. Write the standard English form above that sentence. Discuss the key differences.
Possessives ('s)	In standard academic English, 's is added to a noun to show possession. For many speakers of African American Vernacular English, the 's is absent. However, the 's is regularly added to mine, as in This is mines.
Possessive (whose)	The possessive pronoun whose is often not used by many speakers of African American Vernacular English. For example, students will say I don't know who book this was. Students will need additional instruction and practice to acquire this skill.
There is/There are	Many speakers of African American Vernacular English will need help in pronouncing its in standard academic English and in properly using the patterns there is and there are. In AAVE it is common to replace the word there with it, as in It's a man at the door rather than There's a man at the door. Use Discrimination and Translation Drills.
Plurals (nouns of measure)	Most speakers of African American Vernacular English correctly use the plural, except when it involves "nouns of measure," as in It cost five dollars or She owe me five dollars. However, the plural /s/ is often absent in writing, and students will need additional instruction and practice during small group time.
Negatives	Many speakers of African American Vernacular English will use several negatives in a sentence when only one is required, as in Nobody never said nothing. To master standard academic English, speakers of AAVE will need considerable practice to gain control of any, ever, and either after a negative word. Write a sentence from students' speech or writing. Then provide contrastive analysis work. Write the standard English form above that sentence. Discuss the key differences. In addition, use Discrimination and Translation Drills.

The Interaction Between English and Students' Primary Languages

By Jana Echevarria, PhD
California State University, Long Beach

Donald Bear, PhD
University of Nevada, Reno

It is important for teachers to understand why English Learners (ELs) use alternative pronunciations for some English words. Many English sounds do not exist or transfer to other languages, so English Learners may lack the auditory acuity to "hear" these English sounds and have difficulty pronouncing them. These students are not accustomed to positioning their mouth in a way the sound requires. The charts that appear on the following pages show that there is variation among languages, with some languages having more sounds in common and thus greater transfer to English than others.

For example, an English speaker may be able to pronounce the /r/ in the Spanish word pero ("but"), but not the /rr/ trill in perro ("dog"). The English speaker may also lack the auditory acuity to detect and the ability to replicate the tonal sounds of some Chinese words. Similarly, a Vietnamese speaker may have difficulty pronouncing /th/ in words such as thin or thanks.

Further, English Learners make grammatical errors due to interference from their native languages. In Spanish, the adjective follows the noun, so often English Learners say "the girl pretty" instead of "the pretty girl." While English changes the verb form with a change of subject (I walk. She walks.), some Asian languages keep the verb form constant across subjects. Adding /s/ to the third person may be difficult for some English Learners. Students may know the grammatical rule, but applying it consistently may be difficult, especially in spoken English.

When working with English Learners, you should also be aware of sociocultural factors that affect pronunciation. Students may retain an accent because it marks their social identity. Speakers of other languages may feel at a social distance from members of the dominant English-speaking culture.

English Learners improve their pronunciation in a nonthreatening atmosphere in which participation is encouraged. Opportunities to interact with native English speakers provide easy access to language models and give English Learners practice using English. However, students should not be forced to participate. Pressure to perform—or to perform in a certain way—can inhibit participation. In any classroom, teacher sensitivity to pronunciation differences contributes to a more productive learning environment.

Phonics, word recognition, and spelling are influenced by what students know about the sounds, word structure, and spelling in their primary languages. For example, beginning readers who speak Spanish and are familiar with its spelling will often spell short o with an a, a letter that in Spanish makes the short o sound. Similarly, English Learners who are unaccustomed to English consonant digraphs and blends (e.g., /ch/ and s-blends) spell /ch/ as sh because /sh/ is the sound they know that is closest to /ch/. Students learn about the way pronunciation influences their reading and spelling, beginning with large contrasts among sounds, then they study the finer discriminations. As vocabulary advances, the meaning of words leads students to the sound contrasts. For example, shoe and chew may sound alike initially, but meaning indicates otherwise. Students' reading and discussions of what they read advances their word knowledge as well as their knowledge in all language and literacy systems, including phonics, pronunciation, grammar, and vocabulary.

Phonics Transfers: Sound Transfers

This chart indicates areas where a positive transfer of sounds and symbols occurs for English Learners from their native languages into English. This symbol (✔) identifies a positive transfer. "Approximate" indicates that the sound is similar.

Consonants

Sound Transfers	Spanish	Cantonese	Vietnamese	Hmong	Korean	Khmer
/b/ as in bat	✔	approximate	approximate	approximate	approximate	✔
/k/ as in cake, kitten, peck	✔	✔	✔	✔	✔	✔
/d/ as in dog	✔	approximate	approximate	✔	approximate	✔
/f/ as in farm	✔	✔	✔	✔
/g/ as in girl	✔	approximate	✔	approximate	approximate
/h/ as in ham	✔	✔	✔	✔	✔	approximate
/j/ as in jet, page, ledge		approximate	approximate		approximate
/l/ as in lion	✔	✔	✔	✔	✔
/m/ as in mat	✔	✔	✔	✔	✔	✔
/n/ as in night	✔	✔	✔	✔	✔	✔
/p/ as in pen	✔	✔	✔	approximate	✔	✔
/kw/ as in queen	✔	approximate	✔		✔	✔
/r/ as in rope	approximate					✔
/s/ as in sink, city	✔	✔	✔	✔	✔	approximate
/t/ as in ton	✔	✔	approximate	approximate	✔	✔
/v/ as in vine	✔		✔	✔
/w/ as in wind	✔	✔			✔	✔
/ks/ as in six	✔				✔	✔
/y/ as in yak	✔	✔		✔	✔	✔
/z/ as in zebra			✔
Digraphs
/ch/ as in cheek, patch	✔	approximate		✔	✔	✔
/sh/ as in shadow			✔	✔	✔
/hw/ as in whistle					✔	✔
/th/ as in path	approximate		approximate
/TH/ as in that	approximate

Digraphs (continued)

Sound Transfers	Spanish	Cantonese	Vietnamese	Hmong	Korean	Khmer
/ng/ as in sting	✔	✔	✔	✔	✔	approximate
Short Vowels
/a/ as in cat	approximate		approximate	✔	✔
/e/ as in net	✔	approximate	approximate		✔
/i/ as in kid	approximate	approximate			✔
/o/ as in spot	approximate	approximate	approximate	approximate	approximate	✔
/u/ as in cup	approximate	approximate	✔		✔	✔
Long Vowels
/ā/ as in lake, nail, bay	✔	approximate	approximate	approximate	✔	✔
/ē/ as in bee, meat, cranky	✔	approximate	✔	✔	✔	✔
/ī/ as in kite, tie, light, dry	✔	approximate	✔	✔	✔	✔
/ō/ as in home, road, row	✔	approximate	approximate		✔
/ū/ as in dune, fruit, blue	✔	approximate	✔	✔	✔	✔
/yü/ as in mule, cue	✔	approximate			✔
r*-Controlled Vowels
/är/ as in far	approximate	approximate
/ôr/ as in corn	approximate	approximate
/ûr/ as in stern, bird, suburb	approximate	approximate
/âr/ as in air, bear
/îr/ as in deer, ear
Variant Vowels
/oi/ as in boil, toy	✔	approximate	approximate		✔	✔
/ou/ as in loud, down	✔	approximate	✔	approximate	✔	✔
/ô/ as in law	approximate	✔	✔	approximate	approximate	✔
/ô/ as in laundry	approximate	approximate	✔	approximate	approximate	✔
/ôl/ as in salt, call	approximate	approximate			approximate	✔
/o͞o/ as in moon, drew	✔	approximate	approximate	✔	✔	✔
/o͝o/ as in look		approximate	approximate		approximate	✔
/ə/ as in askew			approximate		✔

Phonics Transfers: Sound Symbol Match

Consonants

Sound Transfers	Spanish	Cantonese	Vietnamese	Hmong	Korean	Khmer
/b/ as in bat	✔		✔
/k/ as in cake	✔		✔
/k/ as in kitten	✔		✔	✔
/k/ as in peck
/d/ as in dog	✔		✔	✔
/f/ as in farm	✔			✔
/g/ as in girl	✔		✔
/h/ as in ham			✔	✔
/j/ as in jet, page, ledge
/l/ as in lion	✔		✔	✔
/m/ as in mat	✔		✔	✔
/n/ as in night	✔		✔	✔
/p/ as in pen	✔		✔	✔
/kw/ as in queen			✔
/r/ as in rope	approximate
/s/ as in sink, city	✔		✔
/t/ as in ton	✔		✔	✔
/v/ as in vine	✔		✔	✔
/w/ as in wind	✔
/ks/ as in six	✔
/y/ as in yak	✔			✔
/z/ as in zebra

LANGUAGE TRANSFERS

Digraphs

Sound Transfers	Spanish	Cantonese	Vietnamese	Hmong	Korean	Khmer
/ch/ as in cheek, patch	✓
/sh/ as in shadow
/hw/ as in whistle
/th/ as in path			✓
/TH/ as in that
/ng/ as in sting	✓		✓
Short Vowels
/a/ as in cat			✓	✓
/e/ as in net	✓		✓
/i/ as in kid
/o/ as in spot			✓	✓
/u/ as in cup
Long Vowels
/ā/ as in lake
/ā/ as in nail
/ā/as in bay
/ē/ as in bee
/ē/ as in meat
/ē/ as in cranky
/ī/ as in kite, tie, light, dry
/ō/ as in home, road, row
/ū/ as in dune			✓	✓
/ū/ as in fruit, blue
/yü/ as in mule, cue

r-Controlled Vowels

Sound Transfers	Spanish	Cantonese	Vietnamese	Hmong	Korean	Khmer
/är/ as in far	✓
/ôr/ as in corn	✓
/ûr/ as in stern	✓
/ûr/ as in bird, suburb
/âr/ as in air, bear
/îr/ as in deer, ear

Variant Vowels

Sound Transfers	Spanish	Cantonese	Vietnamese	Hmong	Korean	Khmer
/oi/ as in boil	✓		✓
/oi/ as in toy	✓
/ou/ as in loud
/ou/ as in down
/ô/ as in law
/ô/ as in laundry
/ôl/ as in salt	✓
/ôl/ as in call
/o͞o/ as in moon, drew
/o͝o/ as in look
/ə/ as in askew

Grammar Transfers: Grammatical Form

This chart can be used to address common mistakes that some English Learners make when they transfer grammatical forms from their native languages into English.

Nouns

Grammatical Form	Transfer Mistakes in English	Native Language	Cause of Difficulty
Plural Marker -s	Forgets plural marker *-s I have 3 sister.	Cantonese, Haitian Creole, Hmong, Korean, Vietnamese, Khmer	Native language does not use a plural marker.
Countable and Uncountable Nouns	Confuses countable and uncountable nouns the homeworks or the informations	Haitian Creole, Spanish	Countable and uncountable nouns are different in English and native language.
Possessives	Uses prepositions to describe possessives the book of my brother as opposed to my brother's book	Haitian Creole, Hmong, Spanish, Vietnamese	Possession is often described using a prepositional phrase.
	Avoids using 's dog my father as opposed to my father's dog	Haitian Creole, Vietnamese, Khmer	A noun follows the object in the native language.
Articles
	Consistently omits articles He has book. They want dog not cat.	Cantonese, Haitian Creole, Hmong, Korean, Vietnamese, Khmer	There is no article in the native language or no difference between the and a.
	Overuses articles The English is difficult. The soccer is popular in the Europe.	Haitian Creole, Hmong, Spanish	Some languages use articles that are omitted in English.
a/an	Mistakes one for *a/an She is one nurse.	Haitian Creole, Hmong, Vietnamese	The native language either does not use articles or uses articles differently.
Pronouns
Gender-Specific Pronouns	Uses pronouns with the inappropriate gender He is my sister.	Cantonese, Haitian Creole, Hmong, Korean, Spanish, Khmer	The third person pronoun in the native language is gender free, or the personal pronoun is omitted.
	Uses inappropriate gender, particularly with neutral nouns The day is sunny. She is beautiful.	Spanish	Nouns have feminine or masculine gender in the native language, and the gender may be carried over into English.

Pronouns

Grammatical Form	Transfer Mistakes in English	Native Language	Cause of Difficulty
Object Pronouns	Confuses subject and object pronouns Her talks to me.	Cantonese, Hmong, Khmer	The same pronoun form is used for subject and object in the native language.
	Omits object pronouns That girl is very rude, so nobody likes.	Korean, Vietnamese	The native language does not use direct objects.
Pronoun and Number Agreement	Uses the wrong number for pronouns I saw many red birds. It was pretty.	Cantonese, Korean	The native language does not require number agreement.
Subject Pronouns	Omits subject pronouns Mom isn't home. Is at work.	Korean, Spanish	Subject pronouns may be dropped because in the native language the verb ending gives information about the number and/or gender.
Pronouns in Clauses	Omits pronouns in clauses If don't do homework, they will not learn.	Cantonese, Vietnamese	The native language does not need a subject in the subordinate clause.
Pronouns and Nouns	Overuses pronouns with nouns This school, it very good.	Hmong, Vietnamese	This is popular in speech in some languages. The speaker mentions a topic, then makes a comment about it.
	Avoids pronouns and repeats nouns Carla visits her sister every Sunday, and Carla makes a meal.	Korean, Vietnamese	In the native language, the speaker repeats nouns and does not use pronouns.
Pronoun one	Omits the pronoun one I saw two dogs, and I like the small.	Spanish	Adjectives can stand alone in the native language, but English requires a noun or one.
Possessive Forms	Confuses possessive forms The book is my.	Cantonese, Hmong, Vietnamese	Cantonese and Hmong speakers tend to omit the final n sound, which may create confusion between my and mine.

Verbs

Grammatical Form	Transfer Mistakes in English	Native Language	Cause of Difficulty
Present Tense	Omits -s in present tense, third person agreement He like pizza.	Cantonese, Haitian Creole, Hmong, Korean, Vietnamese, Khmer	Subject-verb agreement is not used in the native language.
Irregular Verbs	Has problems with irregular subject-verb agreement Tom and Sue has a new car.	Cantonese, Hmong, Korean, Khmer	Verbs' forms do not change to show the number of the subject in the native language.
Inflectional Endings	Omits tense markers I study English yesterday.	Cantonese, Haitian Creole, Hmong, Korean, Vietnamese, Khmer	The native language does not use inflectional endings to change verb tense.
Present and Future Tenses	Incorrectly uses the present tense for the future tense I go next week.	Cantonese, Korean	The native language may use the present tense to imply the future tense.
Negative Statements	Omits helping verbs in negative statements Sue no coming to school.	Cantonese, Korean, Spanish	The native language does not use helping verbs in negative statements.
Present-Perfect Tense	Avoids the present-perfect tense Marcos live here for three months.	Haitian Creole, Vietnamese	The native language does not use the present-perfect verb form.
Past-Continuous Tense	Uses the past-continuous tense for recurring action in the past When I was young, I was talking a lot.	Korean, Spanish	In the native language, the past-continuous tense is used but in English the expression used to or the simple past tense is used.
Main Verb	Omits the main verb Talk in class not good.	Cantonese	Cantonese does not require an infinitive marker when using a verb as a noun. Speakers may confuse the infinitive for the main verb.
Main Verbs in Clauses	Uses two or more main verbs in one clause without any connectors I took a book went studied at the library.	Hmong	In Hmong, verbs can be used consecutively without conjunctions or punctuation.
Linking Verbs	Omits the linking verb He hungry.	Cantonese, Haitian Creole, Hmong, Vietnamese, Khmer	In some languages, be is implied in the adjective form. In other languages, the concept is expressed with a verb.
Helping Verb in Passive Voice	Omits the helping verb in the passive voice The homework done.	Cantonese, Vietnamese	In Cantonese and Vietnamese, the passive voice does not require a helping verb.

Verbs

Grammatical Form	Transfer Mistakes in English	Native Language	Cause of Difficulty
Passive Voice	Avoids the passive voice They speak English here. One speaks English here. English is spoken here.	Haitian Creole	The passive voice does not exist in the native language.
Transitive Verbs	Confuses transitive and intransitive verbs The child broke. The child broke the plate.	Cantonese, Korean, Spanish	Verbs that require a direct object differ between English and the native language.
Phrasal Verbs	Confuses related phrasal verbs I ate at the apple. I ate up the apple.	Korean, Spanish	Phrasal verbs are not used in the native language, and there is often confusion over their meaning.
Have and be	Uses have instead of be I have thirst. He has right.	Spanish	Spanish and English have different uses for have and be.
Adjectives
Word Order	Places adjectives after nouns I saw a car red.	Haitian Creole, Hmong, Spanish, Vietnamese, Khmer	Nouns often precede adjectives in the native language.
	Consistently places adjectives after nouns This is a lesson new.	Cantonese, Korean	Adjectives always follow nouns in the native language.
-er and -est Endings	Avoids -er and -est endings I am more old than you.	Hmong, Korean, Spanish, Khmer	The native language shows comparative and superlative forms with separate words.
-ing and ed Endings	Confuses -ing and -ed forms Math is bored.	Cantonese, Korean, Spanish, Khmer	Adjectives in the native language do not have active and passive meanings.
Adverbs
Adjectives and Adverbs	Uses an adjective where an adverb is needed Talk quiet.	Haitian Creole, Hmong, Khmer	Adjectives and adverb forms are interchangeable in the native language.
Word Order	Places adverbs before verbs He quickly ran. He ran quickly.	Cantonese, Korean	Adverbs usually come before verbs in the native language, and this tendency is carried over into English.
Prepositions
	Omits prepositions I like come school.	Cantonese	Cantonese does not use prepositions the way that English does.

How to Use the Grammar Transfer Charts

The grammar of many languages differs widely from English. For example, a student's primary language may use a different word order than English, may not use parts of speech in the same way, or may use different verb tenses. The Grammar Transfer Charts are designed to help you anticipate and understand possible student errors in speaking and writing standard English. With all grammar exercises, the emphasis is on oral communication, both as a speaker and listener.

1. Highlight Transferrable Skills

If the grammar skill transfers from the student's primary language to English, state that during the lesson. In many lessons an English Learner feature will indicate which skills do and do not transfer.

2. Preteach Non-Transferrable Skills

Prior to teaching a grammar lesson, check the chart to determine if the skill transfers from the student's primary language into English. If it does not, preteach the skill. Provide sentence frames and ample structured opportunities to use the skill in spoken English. Students need to talk, talk, and talk some more to master these skills.

3. Provide Additional Practice and Time

If the skill does NOT transfer from the student's primary language into English, the student will require more time and practice mastering it. Continue to review the skill using additional resources, such as the grammar lessons in the Grammar and Language Workbook in upcoming weeks.

4. Use Contrastive Analysis

Tell students when a skill does not transfer and include contrastive analysis work to make the student aware of how to correct their speaking and writing for standard English. For example, when a student uses an incorrect grammatical form, write the student sentence, then write the correct English form underneath. Explain the difference between the student's primary language and English. Have the student correct several other sentences using this skill.

5. Increase Writing and Speaking Opportunities

Increase the amount of structured writing and speaking opportunities for students needing work on specific grammatical forms. Sentence starters and paragraph frames, such as those found in the lessons, are ideal for both written and oral exercises.

6. Focus on Meaning

Always focus on the meanings of sentences in all exercises. As they improve and fine-tune their English speaking and writing skills, work with students on basic comprehension of spoken and written English.

To help students move to the next level of language acquisition and master English grammatical forms, recast their responses during classroom discussions or provide additional language for them to use as they respond further. Provide leveled-language sentence frames orally or in writing for students to use as they respond to questions and prompts. Below are samples.

English Learner Response Chart

Beginning (will respond by pointing or saying one word answers)	Sample Frames (simple, short sentences) I see a ______. This is a ______. I like the ______.
Early Intermediate (will respond with phrases or simple sentences)	Sample Frames (simple sentences with adjectives and adverbs added, and compound subjects or predicates) I see a ______ ______. The ______ animal is ______. There are ______ and ______.
Intermediate (will respond with simple sentences and limited academic language)	Sample Frames (harder sentences with simple phrases in consistent patterns; some academic language included) The animal's prey is ______ because ______. The main idea is ______ because ______. He roamed the park so that ______.
Early Advanced (will begin to use more sophisticated sentences and some academic language)	Sample Frames (complex sentences with increased academic language, beginning phrases and clauses, and multiple-meaning words) When the violent storm hit, ______. As a result of the revolution, the army______. Since most endangered animals are ______, they ______.
Advanced (will have mastered some more complex sentence structures and is increasing the amount of academic language used)	Use the questions and prompts provided in the lessons for the whole group. Provide additional support learning and using academic language. These words are boldfaced throughout the lessons and sentence starters are often provided.

Classroom Resources: Print

Blackline Masters

Unit Teaching Resources

These blackline master booklets provide all the teaching materials you need to reinforce the content in each unit of Glencoe Literature. Worksheets include the following:

Unit Introduction
Big Idea Foldable
Big Idea School-to-Home Connection
- English
- Spanish
- Vietnamese
- Tagalog
- Cantonese
- Haitian Creole
- Hmong

Challenge Planner
Academic Vocabulary Development
Part Opener
Literary Focus
English Language Coach
Literary History
Comparing Literature Graphic Organizer
Grammar Workshop Practice
Media Workshop Practice
Selection Summaries
- English
- Spanish
- Vietnamese
- Tagalog
- Cantonese
- Haitian Creole
- Hmong

Literary Element
Reading Strategy
Selection Vocabulary Practice
Grammar Practice
Vocabulary Strategy
Selection Quick Check
- English
- Spanish

Spelling Practice
Writing Workshop Graphic Organizer
Writing Workshop Rubric
Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Activities
Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshop Rubric

Practice Books

Read and Write

INTERACTIVE These leveled consumable worktexts provide structured instruction and practice with selected readings from the anthology.

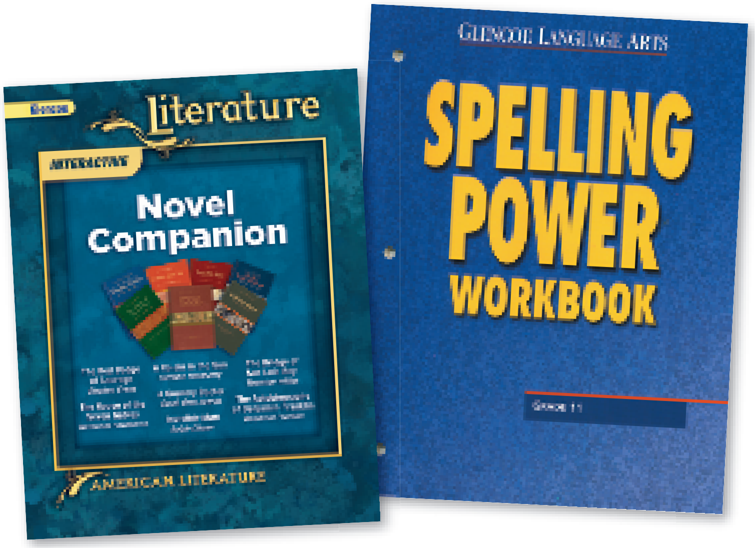
- On-Level provides fast-track instruction for on-level students.
- Approaching provides scaffolding for struggling or reluctant readers.
- English Learners helps students whose primary language is not English read and comprehend selection.

The Novel Companion

This worktext provides accelerated instruction for advanced students through novel study. With the tools for a detailed analysis of a novel and related reading for every unit of the anthology, students explore in more depth the Big Ideas around which the anthology is organized.

Spelling Power Workbook

Provides additional support for practice and mastery of spelling.



Writing

Glencoe Language Arts Writing Resources

This writing resource contains the following transparencies:

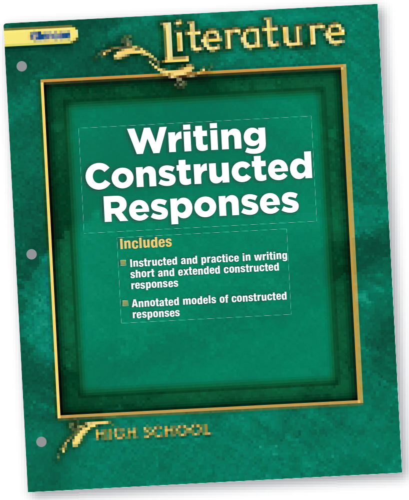
Writing Process Strategies Transparencies provide graphic organizers to help you guide your students through the various stages of the writing process.

Writing Practice Transparencies provide opportunities for students to practice writing in modes that are appropriate for their grade level including Narrative, Expository, and Persuasive Writing and Responding to Literary Texts.

Process of Revision Transparencies use base transparencies and corresponding overlays to show and explain actual revisions and edits. The set of revision transparencies guides students through the process of improving a sample essay. A blank Student Revision transparency is included so student volunteers can make their own revisions to improve the quality of an essay.

Writing Constructed Responses

This sourcebook with blackline masters helps students respond effectively to short essay questions.



Literature
Writing Constructed Responses
Includes
Instructed and practice in writing short and extended constructed responses
Annotated models of constructed responses
HIGH SCHOOL

Success in Writing: Research and Reports

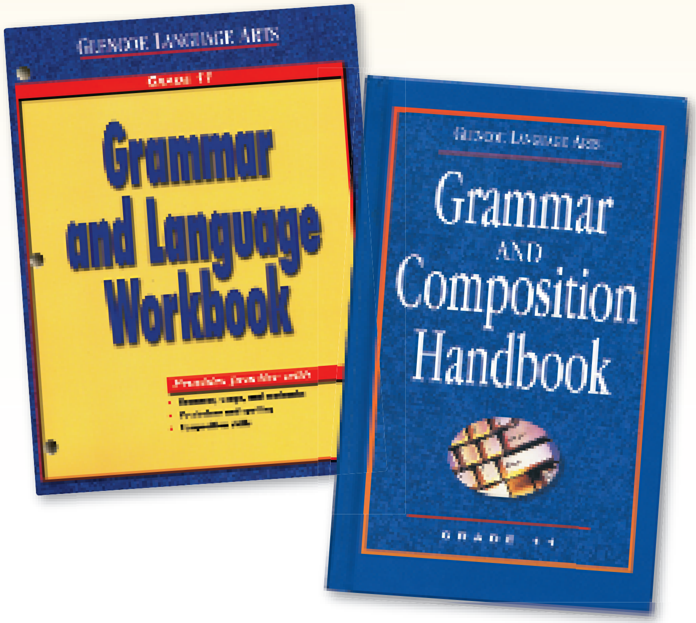
These blackline masters reinforce and extend the coverage of research presented in the student edition.

Grammar and Language Workbook

This workbook provides full coverage of grammar, usage, and mechanics rules, examples, and practice exercises.

Grammar and Composition Handbook

This handbook is a handy desk reference tool providing full coverage of the writing process as well as rules and practice exercises for grammar, usage, and mechanics.

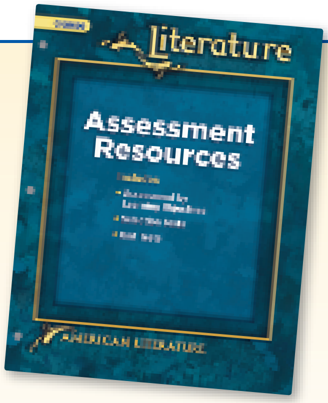


Glencoe Language Arts
Grammar and Language Workbook
Glencoe Language Arts
Grammar and Composition Handbook
GRADE 11

Grammar and Writing Transparencies

Help reinforce the skills taught in the grammar links and writing workshops.

Classroom Resources: Print



Literature
Assessment Resources
American Literature

Assessment

Assessment Resources

This assessment tool provides three types of tests:

- Diagnostic assessment by learning objectives
- Formative tests and answer keys for selections
- Summative unit tests and answer keys

Standardized Test Prep and Practice

These materials feature exercises and activities that get students ready for standardized exams.

ACT/SAT Preparation and Practice Workbook

Fluency Practice and Assessment

English Language Development

English Language Coach

These worksheets provide extra support for English Learners.

Independent Reading

Ethnic Anthologies

Hispanic American Literature
Native American Literature
Asian American Literature
African American Literature

The following anthologies offer students introductions to the richness and variety of literature written by African, Asian, Hispanic, and Native Americans. A Teacher's Guide for each anthology suggests answers to questions accompanying each selection to help further student discussion.

- Glencoe African American Literature
- Glencoe Asian American Literature
- Glencoe Hispanic American Literature
- Glencoe Native American Literature

InTIME Magazines

TEACHER GUIDE
inTIME
STICK SHIFT

This lively collection of articles drawn from TIME helps students develop skills for reading informational text.

Transparencies

Bellringer Transparencies

include warm-up exercises to engage students and to provide a quick review of previously taught skills.

Fine Art Transparencies

enhance visual literacy and provide a strong humanities approach to literature.

Literary Elements Transparencies help reinforce literary elements that are the focus of each lesson.

Read Aloud, Think Aloud Transparencies

model active reading

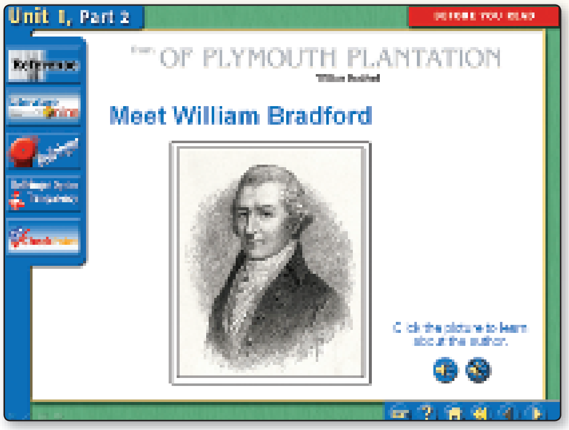
Classroom Resources: Technology

Classroom Planning, Management, and Instruction

TeacherWorks Plus CD-ROM

- Plan and manage daily lessons and activities
- Access all program resources
- Edit lesson plans and worksheets
- Track the standards taught in your classroom

Classroom Presentation Toolkit CD-ROM or DVD-ROM



- Present customizable lessons via PowerPoint
- Launch transparencies, audio, video, and software at point-of-use during instruction

Digital Learning

Online Student Edition and StudentWorks Plus CD-ROM or DVD-ROM

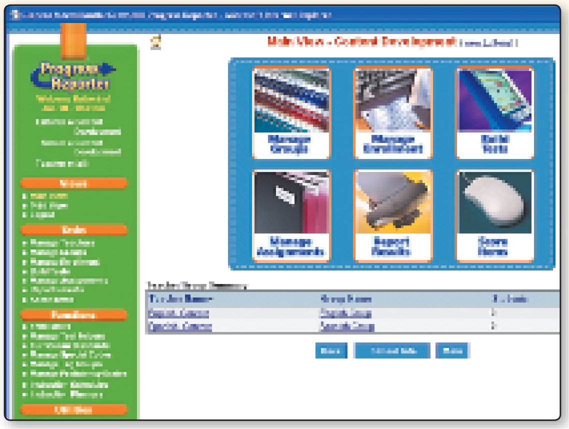
- Full-text synced-audio selection read support
- Audio summaries in multiple languages
- Search, highlighting, and notes tools
- Multimedia links to video, activities, animations, and graphic graphic organizers
- Access student workbooks, Student Media Toolkit, and Student Presentation Builder
- Daily Assignments and Grade Log

Assessment and Progress Monitoring

ExamView Assessment Suite CD-ROM

- Administer ready-made diagnostic, formative, and summative assessments in English or Spanish
- Edit assessment items or create new items as needed
- Monitor student progress through a variety of reporting options
- Provides real assessment-driven remediation options

Progress Reporter Online Assessment



- Administer ready-made diagnostic, formative, and summative assessments online in English or Spanish
- Edit assessment items or create new items as needed
- Assessments administered online are scored automatically
- Essay questions are scored automatically
- Ready-made exams provide students with item rationales, explaining why each answer choice is correct or incorrect
- Automatically assigns reteaching and remediation based on student performance
- Monitor student progress by standard or by standard strand or through a variety of other reporting options

Literature Online: Assessment Resources

- End-of-Unit Assessment
- Test-taking Tips and Strategies

Literature and Reading

Literature Classics

- Choose from over 1,100 additional classic literature selections
- Search selections by author, title, date, genre, country, course/grade level, and Big Question or Big Idea
- Reinforce instruction with Genre Focus Lesson Plans and blackline masters
- Available on CD-ROM and access via glencoe.com

Classroom Resources: Technology

Listening Library CD

- Help students improve overall comprehension and reading fluency with engaging recordings of the selections in Glencoe Literature
- Assist English Learners with audio selection summaries in their native language
- Use the Listening Library CDs in conjunction with the Listening Library Sourcebook, a collection of standards-based strategies and activities, found on your TeacherWorks™ Plus CD-ROM

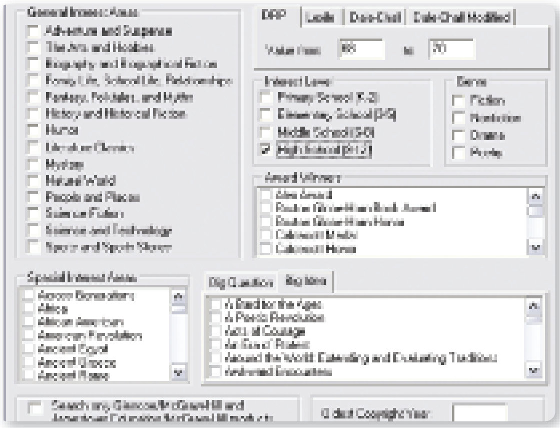
Literature Launchers: Pre-Reading Videos DVD

- Each of the engaging video segments on this DVD brings the literature to life, providing a visual context for every Unit and key selections
- Use this DVD in conjunction with the Literature Launchers Teacher Guide, found on your TeacherWorks™ Plus CD-ROM, which provides teaching strategies and video-specific blackline masters.
- English and Spanish subtitles

Literature Library Teacher Resources CD-ROM

- Access all Glencoe Literature Library Study Guides
- Develop vocabulary with Vocabulary Puzzlemaker
- Assess with ExamView Assessment Suite

BookLink K-12 CD-ROM



- Create customized reading lists for your students from a database of over 30,000 titles
- Search for award-winning titles and for books on state recommended reading lists
- Organize reading lists by students' reading level, author, genre, theme, or area of interest
- Find Degrees of Reading Power™ (DRP), Lexile™, and Dale-Chall scores for all selections in the Glencoe Literature program

Skill Level Up! A Skills-Based Language Arts Game CD-ROM

- Offers an innovative approach to Language Arts and Reading skills practice, assessment and remediation
- Skill Level Up!'s networkable game environment provides a context and purpose for learning by immersing students in an engaging adventure
- Features two access modes: the immersive story mode, which covers all the skills in the context of the adventure game play, or the skill-based assignment mode, which allows teachers to assign discrete activities according to their curriculum plan
- Adapts to each student's performance by offering remediation when necessary or enrichment activities when applicable
- Manage and track student performance using convenient assignment, tracking, and reporting functions featured in the program's management system
- Covers the following Reading Skills and Literary Elements:
  - Connecting
  - Questioning
  - Predicting
  - Point of View
  - Visualizing

- Rhyme
- Dialog
- Main Idea and Supporting Details/Paraphrasing and Summarizing
- Plot
- Conflict
- Interpreting
- Drawing Conclusions
- Setting
- Fact and Opinion
- Theme
- Author's Purpose and Perspective
- Voice, Style, Tone, Narrator
- Description, Imagery, Sensory Details
- Symbolism
- Inferring
- Figurative Language
- Analyzing Text Structure
- Meter and Rhythm
- Character and Characterization
- Sound Devices
- Genre
- Synthesizing

Literature Online: Literature, Reading, and Selection Resources (glencoe.com)

- Author and Artist Search
- Web Quest
- Selection Quizzes
- Selection Vocabulary eFlashcards
- Selection Reading-Writing Connection activities
- Reading Skills Review
- Interactive Reading Practice
- Literary Elements eFlashcards
- Fluency Practice
- Games

Vocabulary Development

Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM

- Generate flashcard sets from a visual glossary of selection, academic, content area, and social vocabulary terms
- Includes audio support in multiple languages for all terms
- Provides instructional modules and practice via an engaging game environment:
  - signal words
  - cognates/false cognates
  - multiple meaning words
  - synonyms and antonyms
  - idioms
  - analogies
  - figures of speech
  - context clues
  - etymology
  - troublesome words
  - text features
  - compound words
  - homonyms

Vocabulary PuzzleMaker

- Create crossword puzzles, word search puzzles, and jumble puzzles in an instant
- Choose from selection and academic vocabulary (in both English and Spanish) and literary terms
- Available on CD-ROM and for download via glencoe.com

Skill Level Up! A Skills-Based Language Arts Game CD-ROM

- Using Context Clues
- Multiple Meaning Words
- Examining Words Origins
- Words with Special Meanings
- Denotation and Connotation
- Using Analogies
- Synonyms
- Antonyms
- Homonyms
- Word Parts/Structural Analysis: Base Words
- Word Parts/Structural Analysis: Prefixes
- Word Parts/Structural Analysis: Suffixes

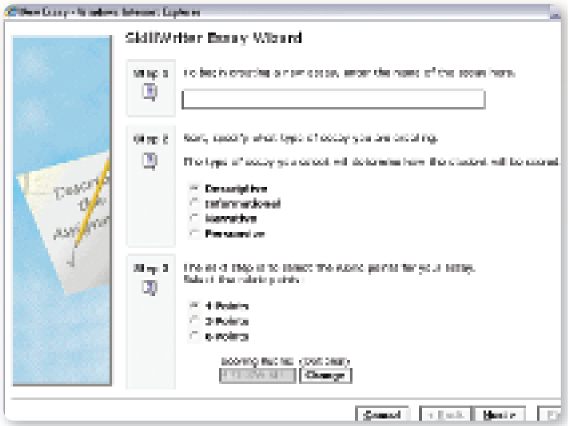
Classroom Resources: Technology

Literature Online: Vocabulary and Spelling Resources (glencoe.com)

- Multi-Language Glossary
- Selection Vocabulary eFlashcards
- Academic Vocabulary eFlashcards
- Vocabulary Games
- Spelling Lessons
- Spelling Games

Writing

Glencoe Online Essay Grader powered by Bookette SkillWriter™ (glencoewriting.com)



- Score student writing assignments and provide individualized feedback to each student automatically
- Assign prompts from Glencoe Literature Writing Workshops or create your own prompts!
- Manage demographic data, assign tests and run a variety of progress monitoring reports using the program’s management system.

Literature Online: Writing and Research Resources (glencoe.com)

- Annotated Writing Models
- Interactive Writing Models
- Writing and Research Handbook
- Research Tips and Strategies
- Graphic Organizers
- Transition Bank
- Grammar Troubleshooter
- Sentence-Combining Practice
- Editing and Proofreading Marks
- Publishing Options

Speaking, Listening and Viewing

Skill Level Up! A Skills-Based Language Arts Game CD-ROM

- Analyzing Persuasive Techniques
- Listening Critically
- Examining Visuals in Literature and Media: Maps, Charts, Graphs
- Examining Visuals in Literature and Media: Visual Techniques

Student Presentation Builder

- Assign additional Unit-based multimedia presentation projects
- Includes a PowerPoint™ tutorial, a PowerPoint™ presentation template, and an image bank
- Available on StudentWorks Plus or via the Online Student Edition
- Teacher Guide is available on TeacherWorks Plus

Literature Online: Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Resources (glencoe.com)

- Project Ideas and Templates
- Presentation Tips and Strategies

Media Literacy

Glencoe Media Workshop DVD

- Engage students in the study and critical review of media from film footage of important events in history to analysis of commercials
- English and Spanish subtitles

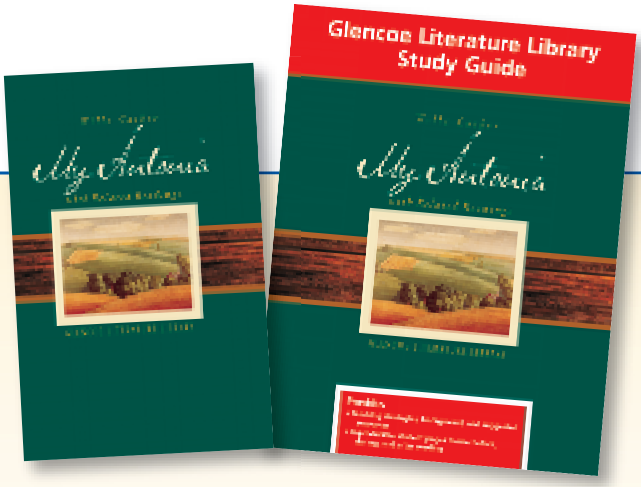
Student Media Toolkit

- Provides additional interactive media analysis activities
- Includes media generator tools

Literature Online: Media Literacy Resources (glencoe.com)

- Media Analysis Guides
- Project Ideas

Library Resources



Glencoe Literature Library

Each Glencoe Literature Library volume consists of at least one complete extended-length reading accompanied by several related readings from a broad range of genres. A separate Study Guide for each book provides teaching notes and reproducible activity pages for students. Students may also find these activity pages at glencoe.com.

The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn by Mark Twain DRP 54

All Quiet on the Western Front by Erich Maria Remarque DRP 52

. . . And the Earth Did Not Devour Him by Tomas Rivera DRP 52

Animal Farm by George Orwell DRP 60

The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin by Benjamin Franklin DRP 64

The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman by Ernest J. Gaines DRP 49

The Awakening by Kate Chopin DRP 58

Beowulf

Billy Budd by Herman Melville DRP 68

The Bridge of San Luis Rey by Thornton Wilder DRP 55

The Brothers Karamazov by Fyodor Dostoevsky DRP 55

The Canterbury Tales by Geoffrey Chaucer DRP 59

The Chosen by Chaim Potok DRP 56

A Country Doctor by Sarah Orne Jewett DRP 59

Cyrano de Bergerac by Edmond Rostand DRP

Ethan Frome by Edith Wharton DRP 59

Fallen Angels by Walter Dean Myers DRP 47

Frankenstein by Mary Shelley DRP 64

Great Expectations by Charles Dickens DRP 60

Gulliver's Travels by Jonathan Swift DRP 67

Hamlet by William Shakespeare

Heart of Darkness and The Secret Sharer by Joseph Conrad DRP 58

A House for Mr Biswas by V. S. Naipaul DRP 58

The House of the Seven Gables by Nathaniel Hawthorne DRP 65

The Importance of Being Earnest by Oscar Wilde DRP

Invisible Man by Ralph Ellison DRP 57

Jane Eyre by Charlotte Brontë DRP 61

Julius Caesar by William Shakespeare

The Jungle by Upton Sinclair DRP 59

The Mayor of Casterbridge by Thomas Hardy DRP 60

The Metamorphosis by Franz Kafka DRP 57

A Midsummer Night's Dream by William Shakespeare

My Ántonia by Willa Cather DRP 57

Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass by Frederick Douglass DRP 62

Nectar in a Sieve by Kamala Markandaya DRP 56

Night by Elie Wiesel DRP 51

One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich by Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn DRP 56

Our Town by Thornton Wilder

Picture Bride by Yoshiko Uchida DRP 55

Pride and Prejudice by Jane Austen DRP 61

A Raisin in the Sun by Lorraine Hansberry

The Red Badge of Courage by Stephen Crane DRP 60

The Return of the Native by Thomas Hardy DRP 61

The Scarlet Letter by Nathaniel Hawthorne DRP 67

Sense and Sensibility by Jane Austen DRP 63

A Separate Peace by John Knowles DRP 59

Silas Marner by George Eliot DRP 55

The Souls of Black Folk by W. E. B. Du Bois DRP 66

The Story of My Life by Helen Keller DRP 59

The Strange Case of Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde by Robert Louis Stevenson DRP 63

A Tale of Two Cities by Charles Dickens DRP 62

The Tempest by William Shakespeare

Things Fall Apart by Chinua Achebe DRP 56

The Time Machine and The War of the Worlds by H. G. Wells DRP 59

To Kill a Mockingbird by Harper Lee DRP 51

Walden by Henry David Thoreau DRP 62

The Way to Rainy Mountain by N. Scott Momaday DRP 55

Wuthering Heights by Emily Brontë DRP 61

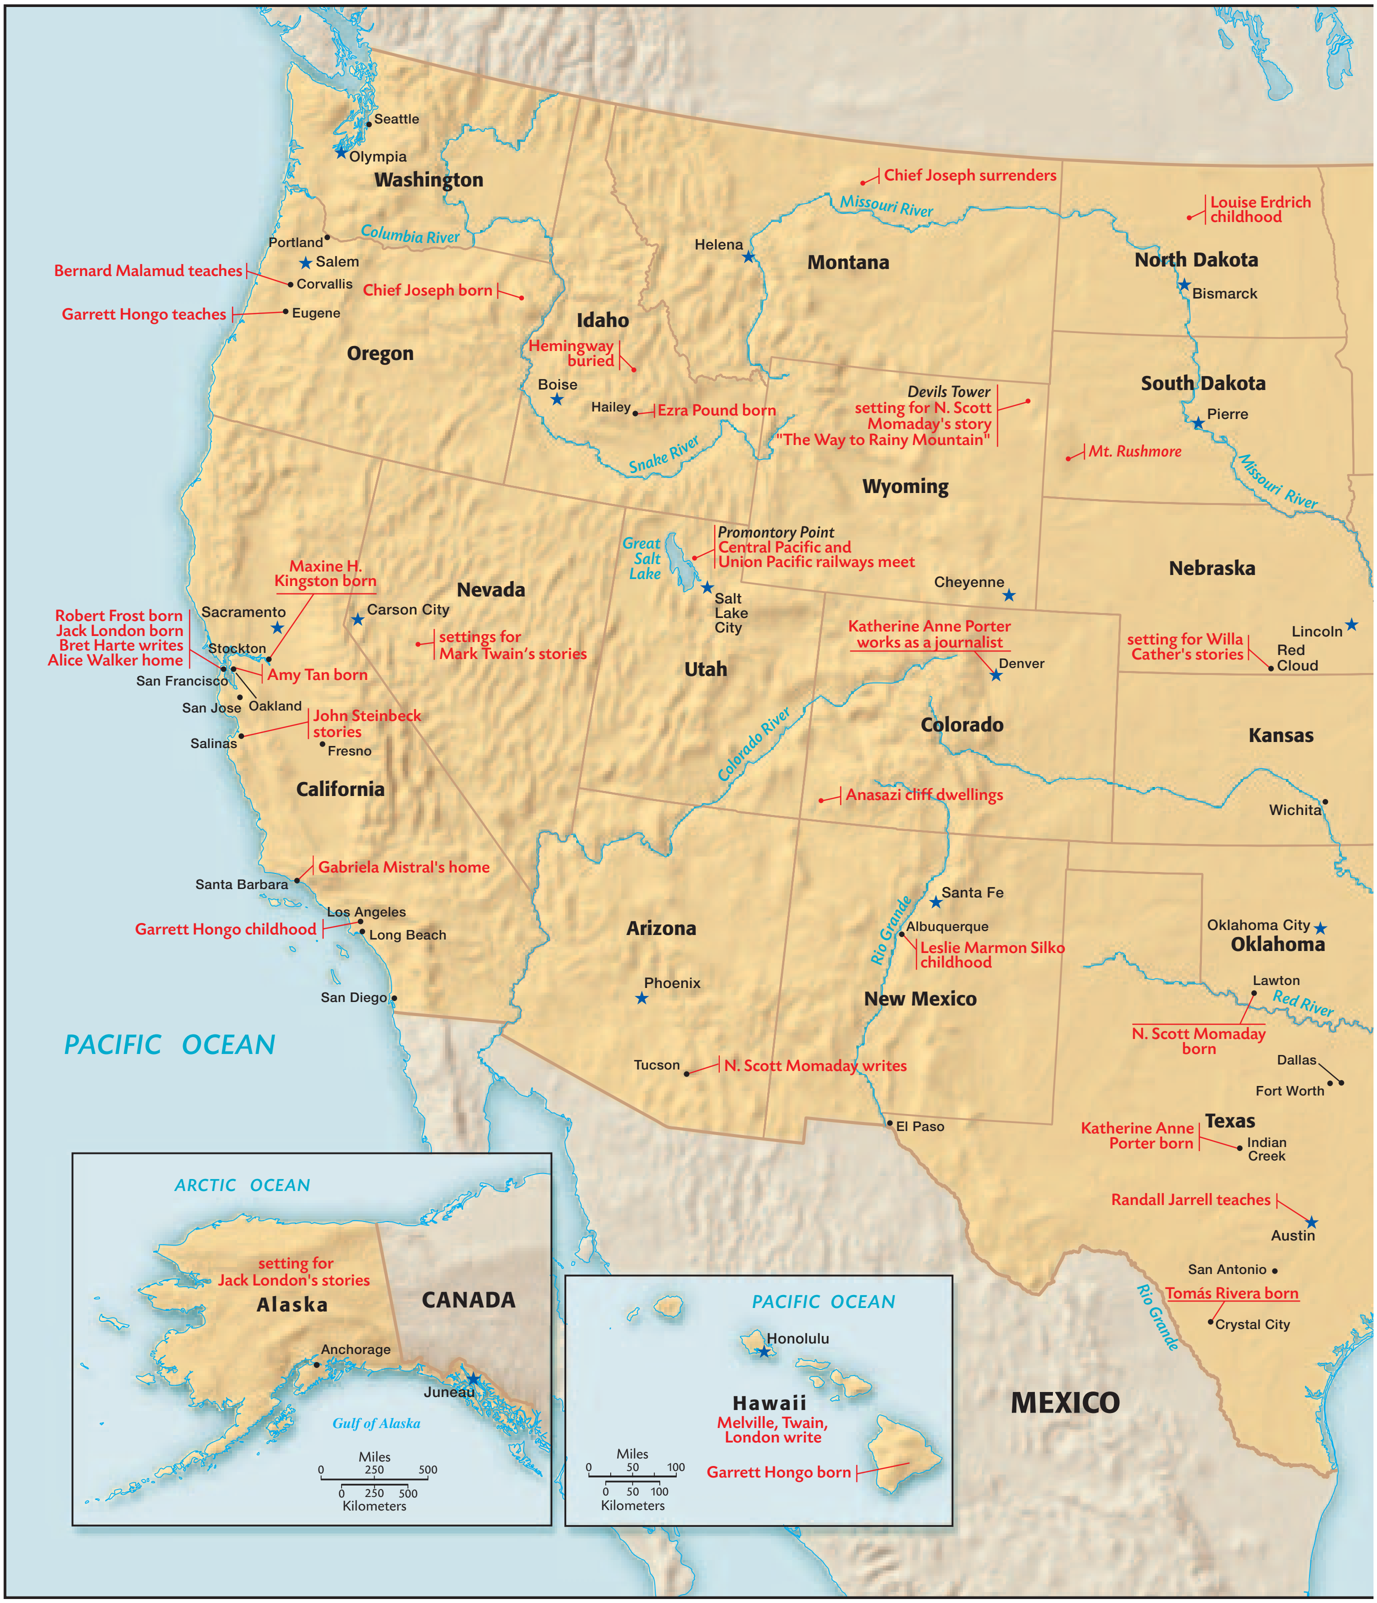
The Yearling by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings DRP 53

Degrees of Reading Power® DRP values indicate the readability of prose text. The higher the value, the more difficult the text. Though the scale ranges from 0 to 100, texts widely available for use at grades nine through twelve typically range from 53 to 68. Some materials, however, may certainly fall outside of this range.

Literary Map of the United States



Seattle
Olympia
Washington
Columbia River
Portland
Salem
Bernard Malamud teaches Corvallis
Chief Joseph born
Garrett Hongo teaches
Eugene
Oregon
Idaho
Hemingway buried
Boise
Hailey
Ezra Pound born
Snake River
Helena
Montana
Chief Joseph surrenders
Missouri River
Louise Erdrich childhood
North Dakota
Bismarck
South Dakota
Pierre
Missouri River
Devils Tower
setting for N. Scott Momaday's story "The Way to Rainy Mountain" Mt. Rushmore
Wyoming
Promontory Point
Central Pacific and Union Pacific railways meet Great Salt Lake
Salt Lake City
Cheyenne
Nebraska
Lincoln setting for Willa Cather's stories
Red Cloud
Maxine H. Kingston born
Nevada
Carson City settings for Mark Twain's stories
Robert Frost born
Jack London born
Bret Harte writes
Alice Walker home
Sacramento
Stockton
San Francisco
Amy Tan born
San Jose
Oakland
John Steinbeck stories
Salinas
Fresno
California
Utah
Katherine Anne Porter works as a journalist
Denver
Colorado
Colorado River
Kansas
Anasazi cliff dwellings
Wichita
Gabriela Mistral's home
Santa Barbara
Los Angeles
Garrett Hongo childhood
Long Beach
San Diego
PACIFIC OCEAN
Arizona
Phoenix
Tucson
N. Scott Momaday writes
Santa Fe
Rio Grande
Albuquerque
Leslie Marmon Silko childhood
New Mexico
Oklahoma City
Oklahoma
Lawton
Red River
N. Scott Momaday born
Dallas
Fort Worth
El Paso
Texas
Katherine Anne Porter born
Indian Creek
Randall Jarrell teaches
Austin
San Antonio
Tomás Rivera born
Crystal City
Rio Grande
MEXICO
ARCTIC OCEAN
setting for Jack London's stories
Alaska
CANADA
Anchorage
Juneau
Gulf of Alaska
Miles
0
250
500
0
250
500
Kilometers
PACIFIC OCEAN
Honolulu
Hawaii
Melville, Twain, London write
Garrett Hongo born
Miles
0
50
100
0
50
100 Kilometers

CANADA
Bob Dylan born
Hibbing
Lake Superior
Louise Erdrich born
Little Falls
F. Scott Fitzgerald childhood
St. Paul
Minneapolis
Minnesota
Wisconsin
Eudora Welty studies
Mississippi River
Lake Michigan
Lake Huron
Michigan
Tim O'Brien born
Austin
Madison
Milwaukee
Lansing
Battle Creek
Detroit
Robert Hayden writes
Lake Erie
Archibald MacLeish born
Glencoe
Chicago
Sojourner Truth buried
Iowa
Des Moines
Sandra Cisneros childhood
Oak Park
Toledo
Cleveland
Lorain
1851 Women's Rights Convention
Akron
Omaha
Iowa City
Hemingway born
Ambrose Bierce childhood
Warsaw
Toni Morrison born
Iowa Writers' Workshop
Illinois
Galesburg
Carl Sandburg born
Indiana
Ohio
Columbus
Edgar Lee Masters childhood
Indianapolis
Dayton
Mark Twain childhood
Lewistown
New Salem
Springfield
Paul Laurence Dunbar born
Cincinnati
Ohio R.
Gwendolyn Brooks born
Hannibal
Abraham Lincoln studies
Kansas City
Topeka
Jefferson City
St. Louis
Frankfort Louisville
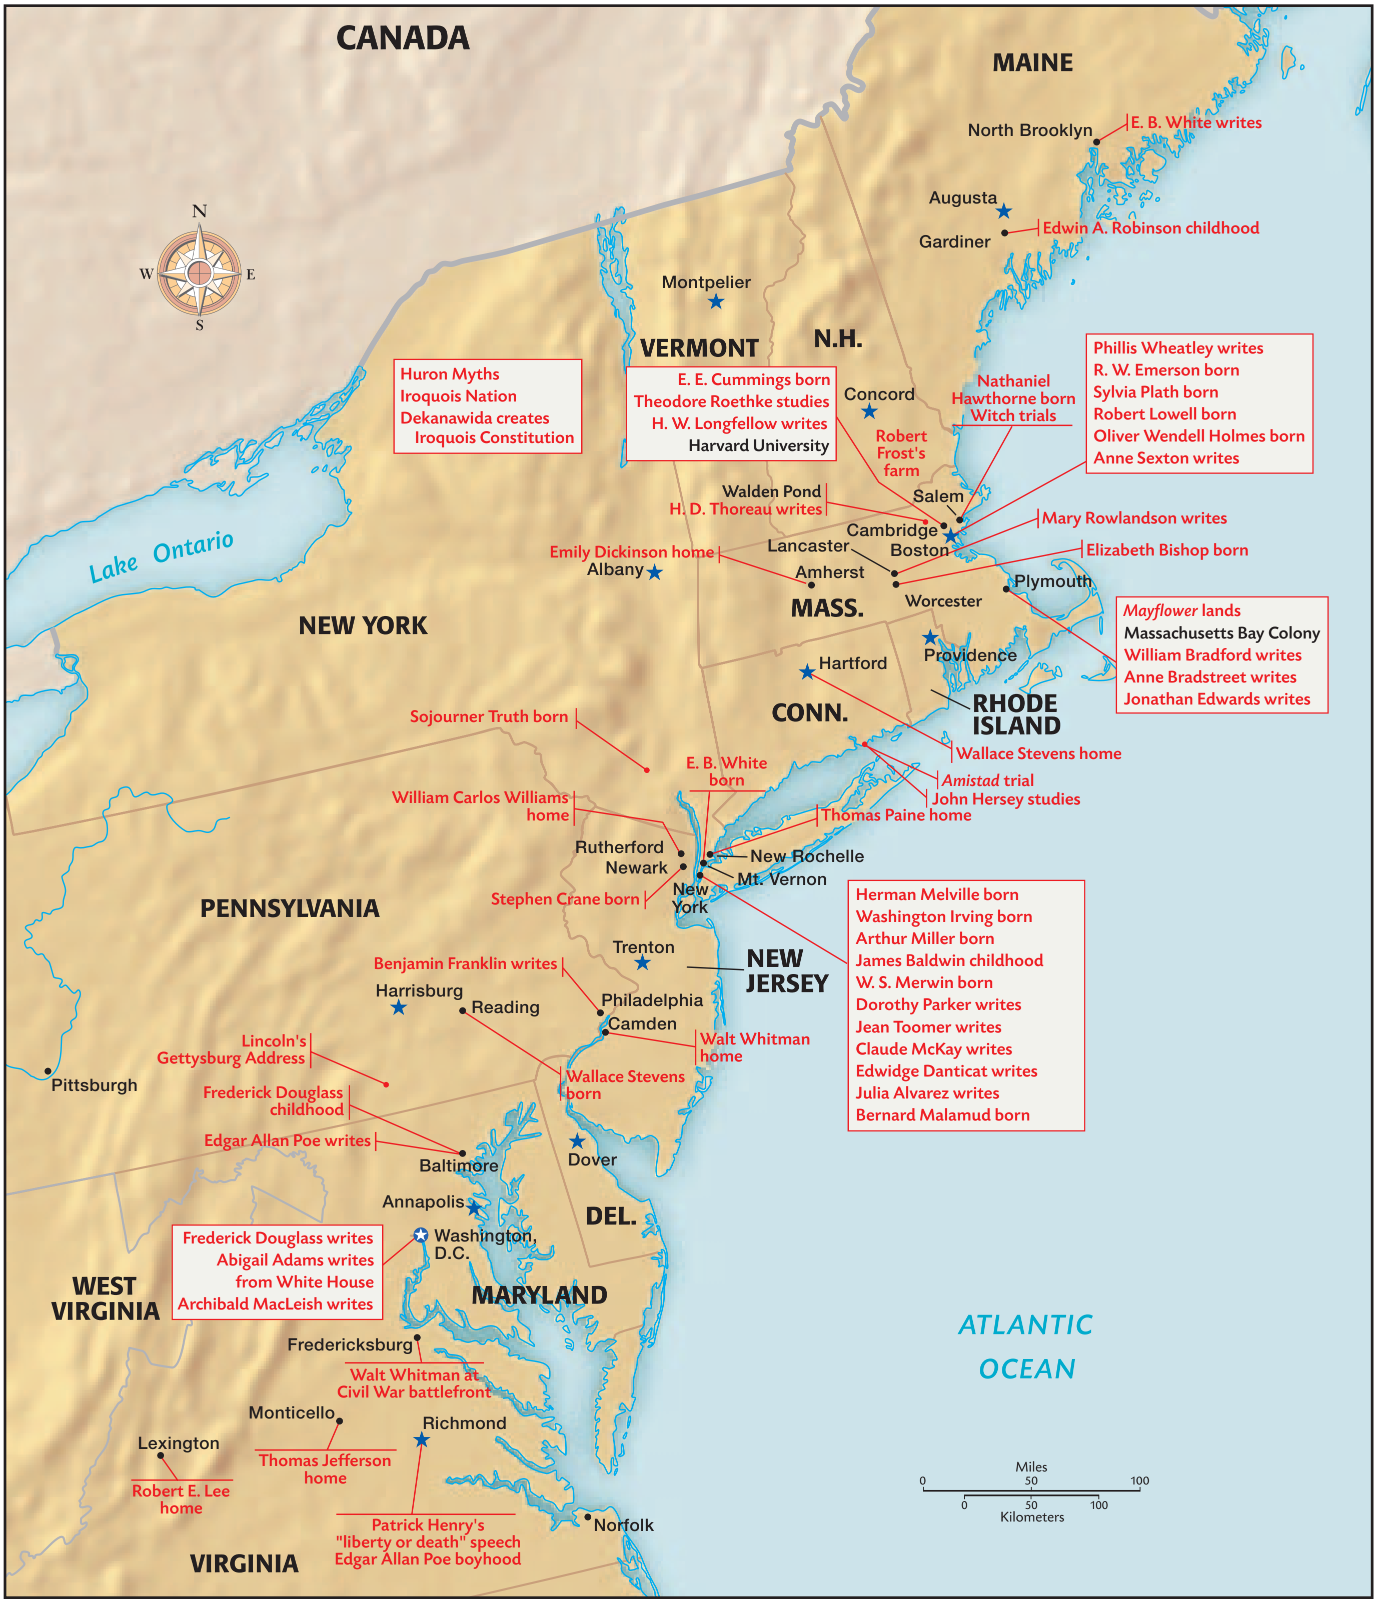
Garnett
T. S. Eliot, Kate Chopin born
Paul Laurence Dunbar childhood
Edgar Lee Masters born
Missouri
Robert Penn Warren born
Kentucky
Guthrie
Langston Hughes born
Joplin
Great Smoky Mtns.
Cherokee myths
Nashville
Randall Jarrell born
Robert Hayden teaches
Tennessee
Tulsa
Carl Sandburg's last home
Arkansas
Memphis
Mississippi R.
Arkansas R.
Little Rock
Oxford
setting for William Faulkner's stories
Martin Luther King Jr. born
Atlanta
Alabama
M. L. King Jr. jailed
Birmingham
Eatonton
Alice Walker born
Georgia
Mississippi
Zora Neale Hurston born
Notasulga
Montgomery
Eudora Welty home
Jackson
Louisiana
Richard Wright born
Roxie
Arna Bontemps born
Alexandria
Baton Rouge
Tallahassee
Toni Morrison teaches
New Orleans
Houston
setting for Kate Chopin's stories
William Faulkner meets Sherwood Anderson
Cabeza de Vaca lands
Gulf of Mexico
Elizabeth Bishop writes
Hemingway writes
Key West
Miami
Lake Okeechobee
Florida
Eatonville
Zora Neale Hurston childhood
James Weldon Johnson born
Jacksonville
setting for Stephen Crane's story "The Open Boat"
Savannah
Flannery O'Connor born
Charleston
Ft. Sumter
First Civil War battle
Mary Chesnut lives
South Carolina
Columbia
Charlotte
North Carolina
Raleigh
Flat Rock
Greensboro
Randall Jarrell teaches
Virginia
Lexington
Richmond
West Virginia
Charleston
Washington, D.C.
Annapolis
Baltimore
Dover
Maryland
Delaware
Pittsburgh
Harrisburg
Philadelphia
New Jersey
Trenton
New York
Pennsylvania
Buffalo
Lake Ontario
New York
Albany
Lake Champlain
Montpelier
Vermont
Maine
Augusta
Gardiner
New Hampshire
Concord
Massachusetts
Boston
Providence
Hartford
Rhode Island
Connecticut
see detailed map on next page
ATLANTIC OCEAN
Puerto Rico
Aurora Levins Morales childhood
Judith Ortiz Cofer born
Miles 0 25
Kilometers 0 25
N
W
E
S
Miles 0 50 100 150 200
Kilometers 0 100 200

Map of the Eastern U.S.



CANADA
MAINE
North Brooklyn
E. B. White writes
Augusta
Gardiner
Edwin A. Robinson childhood
N
W
E
S
Montpelier
VERMONT
N.H.
Huron Myths
Iroquois Nation
Dekanawida creates Iroquois Constitution
E. E. Cummings born
Theodore Roethke studies
H. W. Longfellow writes
Harvard University
Concord
Nathaniel Hawthorne born
Witch trials
Robert Frost's farm
Phillis Wheatley writes
R. W. Emerson born
Sylvia Plath born
Robert Lowell born
Oliver Wendell Holmes born
Anne Sexton writes
Walden Pond
H. D. Thoreau writes
Salem
Cambridge
Boston
Lancaster
Mary Rowlandson writes
Elizabeth Bishop born
Lake Ontario
Emily Dickinson home
Albany
Amherst
Plymouth
Worcester
MASS.
Mayflower lands
Massachusetts Bay Colony
William Bradford writes
Anne Bradstreet writes
Jonathan Edwards writes
NEW YORK
Providence
Hartford
RHODE ISLAND
CONN.
Sojourner Truth born
Wallace Stevens home
E. B. White born
Amistad trial
John Hersey studies
William Carlos Williams home
Thomas Paine home
Rutherford
Newark
New Rochelle
Mt. Vernon
New York
PENNSYLVANIA
Stephen Crane born
Herman Melville born
Washington Irving born
Arthur Miller born
James Baldwin childhood
W. S. Merwin born
Dorothy Parker writes
Jean Toomer writes
Claude McKay writes
Edwidge Danticat writes
Julia Alvarez writes
Bernard Malamud born
Trenton
NEW JERSEY
Benjamin Franklin writes
Harrisburg
Reading
Philadelphia
Camden
Walt Whitman home
Lincoln's Gettysburg Address
Wallace Stevens born
Pittsburgh
Frederick Douglass childhood
Edgar Allan Poe writes
Baltimore
Dover
Annapolis
DEL.
Frederick Douglass writes
Abigail Adams writes from White House
Archibald MacLeish writes
Washington, D.C.
WEST VIRGINIA
MARYLAND
ATLANTIC OCEAN
Fredericksburg
Walt Whitman at Civil War battlefront
Monticello
Richmond
Lexington
Thomas Jefferson home
Robert E. Lee home
Patrick Henry's "liberty or death" speech
Edgar Allan Poe boyhood
Norfolk
VIRGINIA
Miles
0
50
100
0
50
100
Kilometers

Be Cyber Safe and Smart

Cyber Safety

As you explore the Glencoe Literature program, you will have many opportunities to go online. When you use the Internet at school or home, you enter a kind of community—the cyber world. In this online world, you need to follow safety rules and protect yourself. Here are some tips to keep in mind:

Words to Know

cyber world	the world of computers and high-tech communications
cyber safety	actions that protect Internet users from harm
cyber ethics	responsible code of conduct for using the Internet
cyber bully	a person who uses technology to frighten, bother, or harm someone else
cyber citizen	a person who uses the Internet to communicate

- ☑ Be a responsible cyber citizen. Use the Internet to share knowledge that makes people's lives better. Respect other people's feelings and do not break any laws.
- ☑ Beware of cyber bullying. People can be hurt and embarrassed by comments that have been made public. You should immediately tell your teacher or counselor if you feel threatened by another student's computer postings.
- ☑ Do not give out personal information, such as your address and telephone number, without your parents' or guardians' permission.
- ☑ Tell your teacher, parent, or guardian right away if you find or read any information that makes you feel uneasy or afraid.
- ☑ Do not email your picture to anyone.
- ☑ Do not open email or text messages from strangers.
- ☑ Do not tell anyone your Internet password.
- ☑ Do not make illegal copies of computer games and programs, and software CDs.

LOG ON Literature Online

For more about internet safety and responsibility, go to glencoe.com

UNIT ONE

Skills Scope and Sequence

Readability Scores Key: Dale-Chall/DRP/Lexile

PART 1: The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling

Selections and Features	Literary Elements
Unit Introduction pp. 4–18	Oral Storytelling SE pp. 11, 12 Poetry TE p. 13
LiteraryHistory: Native American Mythology pp. 20–21	Myth SE p. 20
Myth How the World Was Made by James Mooney 5.9/57/1250 pp. 22–26	Archetype SE p. 23 Metaphor TE p. 25
Cultural Perspective from The Way to Rainy Mountain, by N. Scott Momaday 5.5/61/1000 pp. 27–32
Comparing Literature The Sky Tree (myth), retold by Joseph Bruchac 3.6/48/740 How the Leopard Got His Claws (myth), retold by Chinua Achebe and John Iroaganachi 3.2/46/540 Prayer to the Pacific (poem), by Leslie Marmon Silko pp. 34–46	Oral Tradition SE p. 34 Characterization TE p. 38 Personification TE p. 42 Sensory Details TE p. 44
Public Document from The Iroquois Constitution 8.2/63/1440 pp. 47–52	Author's Purpose SE p. 48
Vocabulary Workshop pp. 53–54

PART 2: Life in the New World

Selections and Features	Literary Elements
Memoir from La Relación, by Alvar Núñez Cabeza de Vaca 6.1/55/1100 pp. 56–61	Point of View SE p. 57
Memoir from Of Plymouth Plantation, by William Bradford 11.6/62/1430 pp. 62–68	Diction SE p. 63 Point of View TE p. 65

Reading Skills and Strategies	Vocabulary	Writing Grammar	Speaking, Listening, and Viewing
Analyze Historical Context SE p. 10 Support the Main Idea TE pp. 12, 18	Phrases TE p. 10	Use Timelines TE p. 6 Analyze a Graph TE p. 8 Organize Ideas TE p. 16 Write an Essay SE p. 18	Analyze Art SE p. 4, TE pp. 5, 9, 13, 15
Analyze Literary Genres SE pp. 20–21		Respond to Literature SE p. 21
Identify Sequence SE p. 23 Draw Conclusions TE p. 24	Connotation TE p. 23 Synonyms SE p. 26	Write a Story SE p. 26
Analyze Cultural Traditions SE p. 27, TE p. 32 Analyze Graphic Information TE p. 28 Make Inferences TE p. 31		Visualize TE p. 30 Write a Summary SE p. 32	Analyze a Map TE p. 29 Analyze Art TE p. 31
Question SE p. 34 Identify Author's Purpose TE p. 39 Review TE p. 46	Academic Vocabulary SE p. 37 Antonyms TE p. 43	Write a Dialogue SE p. 37 Note-taking TE p. 42 Write an Essay SE p. 46 Write a Mythic Story SE p. 46	Analyze Art TE pp. 35, 40, 42, 45 Discussion SE p. 46
Draw Conclusions About Culture SE p. 48 Preview TE p. 48 Compare and Contrast TE p. 50	Parts of Speech TE p. 48 Synonyms SE p. 52	Write a Letter SE p. 52	Analyze a Photograph TE p. 51
	Academic Vocabulary SE pp. 53–54 Multiple-Meaning Words SE pp. 53–54

Reading Skills and Strategies	Vocabulary	Writing Grammar	Speaking, Listening, and Viewing
Recognize Bias SE p. 57 Identify Sequence TE p. 58	Synonyms SE p. 61	Write a Story SE p. 61	Analyze Art SE p. 60
Monitor Comprehension SE p. 63	Analogies TE p. 63 Context Clues SE p. 68	Write a Letter SE p. 68	Analyze Art SE p. 66

Readability Scores Key: Dale-Chall/DRP/Lexile

PART 2: Life in the New World (continued)

Selections and Features	Literary Elements
Autobiography from The Life of Olaudah Equiano, by Olaudah Equiano 7.6/59/1250 pp. 69–79	Slave Narrative SE p. 70 Characterization TE p. 74 Point of View SE p. 78
Memoir from A Narrative of the Captivity and Restoration of Mrs. Mary Rowlandson, by Mary Rowlandson 7.9/57/1030 pp. 80–86	Allusion SE p. 81 Characterization TE p. 84
Grammar Workshop pp. 87–88
Poems Upon the Burning of Our House and To My Dear and Loving Husband, by Anne Bradstreet, pp. 89–94	Metaphor SE p. 90 Speaker TE p. 91
Speech from Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God, by Jonathan Edwards 7.3/61/1280 pp. 95–101	Imagery SE p. 96 Calvinism TE p. 97 Archetype SE p. 100
Vocabulary Workshop p. 102

PART 3: The Road to Independence

Selections and Features	Literary Elements
Autobiography from The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin, by Benjamin Franklin 7.0/59/1170 pp.104–109	Autobiography SE p. 105
Proverbs from Poor Richard's Almanack, by Benjamin Franklin pp. 110–111	Aphorism SE p. 110
Literary History The Rhetoric of Revolution pp. 112–113	Rhetorical Devices SE p. 112
Speech Speech to the Second Virginia Convention, by Patrick Henry 8.4/60/930 pp. 114–119	Rhetorical Question SE p. 115

Reading Skills and Strategies	Vocabulary	Writing Grammar	Speaking, Listening, and Viewing
Respond SE p. 70	Word Origins TE p. 70, SE p. 78 Adjectives TE p. 72 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 78	Compound Subjects TE p. 74 Write Questions TE p. 76 Write a Summary SE p. 79	Analyze Art TE pp. 72, 74
Analyze Historical Context SE p. 81	Parts of Speech TE p. 81 Word Usage SE p. 86	Interjections TE p. 82 Write a Character Analysis TE p. 84 Write a List SE p. 86
		Sentence Combining SE pp. 87–88 Conjunctions TE p. 88
Draw Conclusions About Author's Beliefs SE p. 90	Adjectives TE p. 90 Synonyms SE p. 94 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 94	Inverted Syntax TE p. 92 Apply Extended Metaphor SE p. 94	Analyze Art TE p. 92
Examine Connotation SE p. 96	Persuasive Words TE p. 96 Word Origins SE p. 101 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 101	Write Research Notes TE p. 98 Apply Diction SE p. 101	Analyze Art SE p. 98
	Dictionary Use SE p. 102 Homonyms TE p. 102

Reading Skills and Strategies	Vocabulary	Writing Grammar	Speaking, Listening, and Viewing
Analyze Voice SE p. 105 Question TE p. 106	Nouns TE p. 105 Word Parts SE p. 109	Conjunctions TE p. 108	Analyze Art SE p. 107
Connect SE p. 110	Academic Vocabulary SE p. 111	Write an Article SE p. 111
Analyze American Literature SE p. 112 Analyze Political Cartoons SE p. 113			Analyze Art SE p. 112
Analyze Figures of Speech SE p. 115 Predict TE p. 116	Antonyms SE p. 119	Write a Speech SE p. 119

Readability Scores Key: Dale-Chall/DRP/Lexile

PART 3: The Road to Independence (continued)

Selections and Features	Literary Elements
Public Document The Declaration of Independence, by Thomas Jefferson 12.6/71/1360 pp. 120–127	Text Structure SE p. 121 Tone TE p. 123 Author's Purpose SE p. 126
Historical Essay TIME: How They Chose These Words, by Walter Isaacson 7.9/68/1200 pp. 128–130
Vocabulary Workshop p. 131
Public Document from The Crisis, No. 1, by Thomas Paine 8.8/62/1050 pp. 132–138	Tone SE p. 133 Diction SE p. 137
Poem To His Excellency, General Washington, by Phillis Wheatley pp. 139–143	Couplet SE p. 140
Letter Letter to John Adams, by Abigail Adams 8.8/62/1350 pp. 144–148	Description SE p. 145
Grammar Workshop p. 149
Historical Perspective from John Adams, by David McCullough 9.9/64/1270 pp. 150–153	Description TE p. 150
Writing Workshop pp. 154–161
Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshop pp. 162–163	Rhetorical Devices SE p. 162
Independent Reading pp. 164–165
Assessment pp. 166–171

Reading Skills and Strategies	Vocabulary	Writing Grammar	Speaking, Listening, and Viewing
Evaluate Argument SE p. 121 Predict TE p. 122	Word Parts TE p. 121 Context Clues SE p. 126 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 126	Parentheses SE p. 127 Write a Persuasive Essay SE p. 127	Analyze Art SE p. 123 Discussion SE p. 125
Determine Main Idea and Supporting Details SE p. 128 Preview TE p. 128		Draft and Revise TE p. 128
	Word Origins SE p. 131
Summarize SE p. 133 Analyze Arguments TE p. 134	Denotation and Connotation SE p. 138 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 138	Apply Tone SE p. 138	Analyze Art SE p. 136 Presentation TE p. 136
Analyze Structure SE p. 140 Paraphrase TE p. 140 Visualize TE p. 142	Academic Vocabulary SE p. 143	Write a Poem SE p. 143
Recognize Author's Purpose SE p. 145 Preview and Make Inferences TE p. 146	Analogies SE p. 148	Write a Letter SE p. 148
		Clauses as Modifiers SE p. 149
Analyze Biographical Narrative SE p. 150 Compare and Contrast TE p. 150		Summarize TE p. 152 Block Quotations TE p. 152
		Write a Persuasive Speech SE pp. 154–161 Transitions TE p. 158 Parallelism SE p. 161	Presentation SE p. 161
Reread TE p. 162		Write Appeals SE p. 162	Speech SE p. 163
		Write a Review SE p. 165	Book Review TE p. 164
Determine Main Idea and Supporting Details TE p. 168		Paraphrase TE p. 166 Organization TE p. 170 Write an Essay SE p. 171

UNIT ONE

Focus

Bellringer Options

Literature Launchers
Pre-Reading Videos DVD: Unit 1

Daily Language Practice Transparency 1

Or write on the board: Early Americans Ask: What do you know about early Americans? (Native Americans, European settlers who founded the colonies, African slaves brought here against their will)

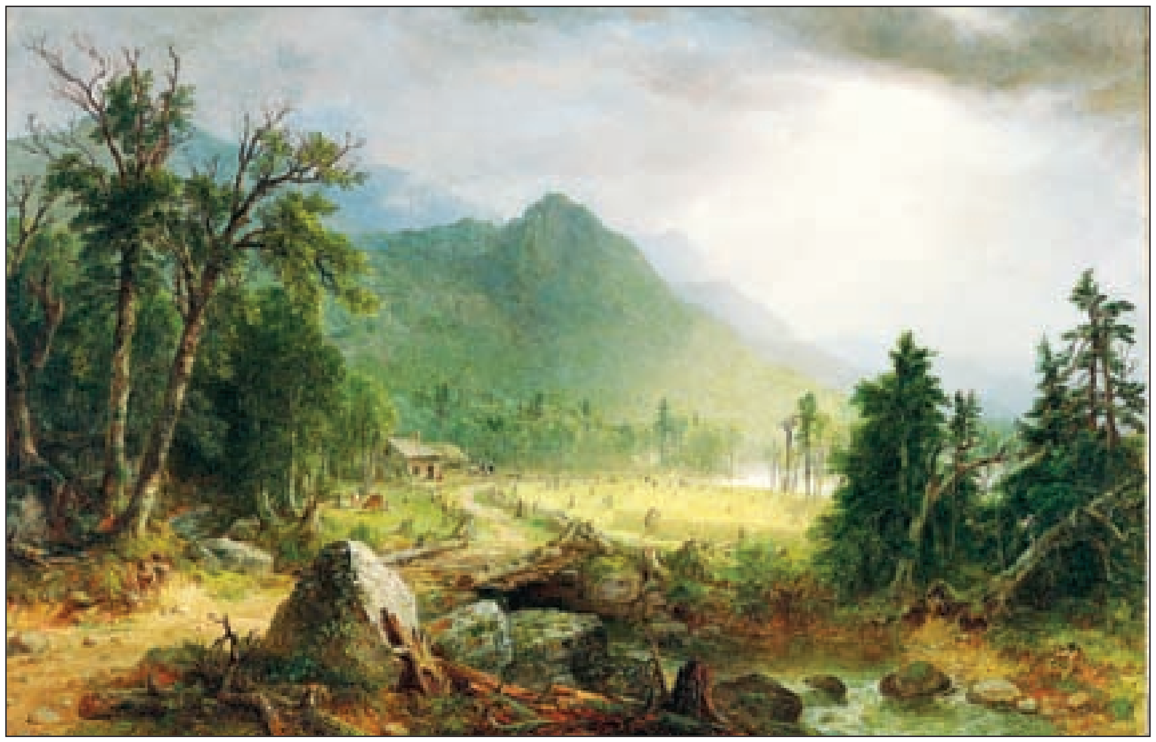
For students who would profit from independent novel study, see Novel Companion, pp. 7–74.

For school-to-home activities, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 5–11.



The First Harvest in the Wilderness, 1855, Asher Brown Durand. Oil on canvas, 32 x 47½ in. Brooklyn Museum of Art, NY.

View the Art Durand depicts an event that many early European settlers of North America experienced. What elements of the painting reflect the artist's conception of the relationship between settler and wilderness?

Unit Introduction Skills

Early America: Beginnings–1800

Reading Skills
- Analyze Graphic Information (SE pp. 6–9)
- Analyze Cause and Effect (SE pp. 13, 17; TE p. 10)
- Evaluate (SE p. 15; TE p. 8)
- Draw Conclusions (TE pp. 7, 16)
- Support the Main Idea (TE pp. 12, 18)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write an Essay (SE p. 18)
- Analyze a Graph (TE p. 8)

Study Skills/Research/ Assessment
- Use Timelines (TE p. 6)
- Organize Ideas (TE p. 16)

Vocabulary Skills
- Phrases (TE p. 10)
- Determine Precise Meanings (TE p. 14)

Listening/Speaking/ Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE p. 4; TE pp. 5, 9, 13, 15)

UNIT ONE

Early America

BEGINNINGS–1800

Looking Ahead

The roots of American literature display a rich, complex mixture of cultures and eras. Through oral tradition, the Native American peoples preserved their myths, tales, songs, and other lore from long ago. When Europeans reached the Americas, their writings recorded their experiences of exploration and settlement. Africans who were brought to the Americas by force wrote of the conditions of slavery. American literature developed further as writers played an important role in the colonial struggle for independence from Great Britain.

Keep the following questions in mind as you read:

- How did Native Americans view their relationship to the world around them?
- What were the major cultural features that the Puritans brought with them to New England?
- How did the development of society in colonial America lead to the Revolution?

UNIT ONE

Focus

Summary

This introduction gives an overview of historical, social, and cultural forces before 1800 in the land that is now the United States. It discusses Native American peoples who lived here first, Europeans who explored and settled during the 1500s and 1600s, and Africans who came against their will in the 1600s and the 1700s. Also covered are the role of religion in the colonial period and the discontent with Britain that led to the American Revolution.

View the Art ★

Answer: Durand shows the wilderness surrounding and dwarfing the settlers' farmland and home, suggesting that the wilderness is greater and more powerful. He also shows the farm and the wilderness existing together in harmony, suggesting that the wilderness is welcoming and bountiful.

The American painter Asher Durand (1796–1886) was an engraver before he became a painter. His skill as an engraver can be seen in his paintings, which are made with fine lines.

Unit Resources

Print Materials

- Unit 1 Teaching Resources, pp. 1–279
- Interactive Read and Write (On Level, Approaching, EL), pp. 1–44
- Novel Companion, pp. 7–74
- Bellringer Option Transparencies: Selection Focus 1–15; Daily Language Practice 1–18
- Assessment Resources, Selection Assessment, pp. 59–96

Technology

- TeacherWorks Plus CD
- StudentWorks Plus CD
- Literature Launchers: Pre-Reading Videos DVD, Unit 1
- Literature Online
- Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM
- Listening Library CD-ROM
- ExamView CD-ROM
- Skill Level Up! CD-ROM

For diagnostic and end-of-unit assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 1–8, 331–332.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Graphic Information Help students read the timeline and relate key events in American literature to U.S. and world history. Explain that this unit covers the era before 1800 in what is now the United States. Have students discuss one U.S. and one world event that they know of from this period.

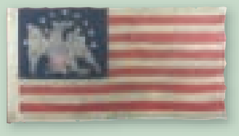
ENGLISH LEARNERS Explain to English learners that the entries in the timeline are not full sentences. Have them read some of the entries aloud and add words that would complete the sentences.

Cultural History ☆

Early American Newspapers

The first colonial newspaper was the Boston News-Letter, published in 1704. It had a small circulation of about 300. Most colonial newspapers avoided controversy. Publishers could not challenge or criticize the government. This changed with the passage of the First Amendment in 1791.

Timeline 1500–1800



American flag, c. 1781

AMERICAN LITERATURE 1

1500

1542
La Relación by Álvar Núñez Cabeza de Vaca is published

1570
Dekanawida creates the Iroquois Constitution for the Iroquois Confederacy

1630
William Bradford begins Of Plymouth Plantation ▼

Pilgrims Going to Church, 1867. George Henry Boughton. Oil on canvas, 29 x 52 in. New York Historical Society, NY.

1600

1640
Bay Psalm Book is published

1650
Anne Bradstreet's poems are published in London

1682
Captivity narrative of Mrs. Mary Rowlandson is published

UNITED STATES EVENTS

1500

1492
Columbus makes his first voyage to the Americas

1521
Cortés conquers the Aztec empire

Aztec calendar stone ▶

1528–1536
Cabeza de Vaca wanders the American Southwest

1600

1607
Colony of Jamestown is founded in Virginia

1619
First Africans arrive in Virginia

1620
Pilgrims arrive at Cape Cod on Mayflower

1630
Massachusetts Bay Colony is founded

1637
Anne Hutchinson is banished for dissent

1675–1676
King Philip, Wampanoag chief, wages war

1681
William Penn founds the Pennsylvania colony

1692
Witchcraft trials begin in Salem, Massachusetts

WORLD EVENTS

1500

Martin Luther ▶

1517
Reformation begins

1522
Magellan circumnavigates the globe

1558
Elizabeth I becomes queen of England

1600

1632
Shah Jahan begins Taj Mahal as tomb for his wife

1642
English Civil War begins

1649
English King Charles I executed; Puritan rule begins

1660
End of Puritan Commonwealth; English monarchy restored under Charles II

Taj Mahal ▶

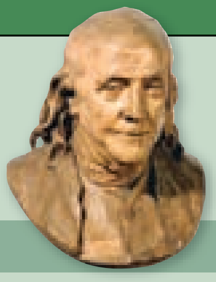
Literature Online

Literature and Reading To explore the Interactive Timeline, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Study Skills Practice

Use Timelines Explain that a timeline is a chart that shows a sequence of events. Point out that there are three timelines in this chart. Explain how events are organized in columns in each timeline. Then ask students to read the label of each timeline and to explain the types of events in that timeline in a sentence.

Have students locate and record information from the timelines about exploration and discovery, the founding of American colonies, titles and authors of literary works, and other topics.



Benjamin Franklin ▶

1700

1704
First colonial newspaper is published ☆

1732
Benjamin Franklin's first Poor Richard's Almanack is published

1771
Benjamin Franklin begins his Autobiography

1773
Phillis Wheatley's poems are published in London

1776
Thomas Paine's Common Sense is published

1776
Thomas Paine begins The Crisis series

1782
Letters from an American Farmer by Michel Guillaume Jean de Crèvecoeur is published

1783 ▲
Noah Webster's American Speller is published

1787
Thomas Jefferson's Notes on the State of Virginia is published

1789
Interesting Narrative of the Life of Olaudah Equiano is published in London

2

1700

1735
John Peter Zenger trial helps establish freedom of the press

1736
Great Awakening religious revival begins

1739
Africans attack slaveholders in the Stono Rebellion

1754–1763
French and Indian War

1765 ▲
Stamp Act triggers protest throughout colonies

1770
British troops fire on colonists in Boston Massacre

1775
Battles of Lexington and Concord are fought

1776
Declaration of Independence is signed

1781
British surrender at Yorktown, ending the Revolutionary War

1783
Treaty of Paris is signed, confirming independence of United States

1788
U.S. Constitution is ratified

1789
George Washington becomes first president

1700

1726
Jonathan Swift's Gulliver's Travels is published

1760
George III becomes king of Great Britain

1778
James Cook lands on Hawaii

1789
French Revolution begins in Paris

1793
French rulers Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette are executed

◀ Revolutionary War drum

Reading Check

Analyze Graphic Information What was the history of the English monarchy between 1642 and 1660?

UNIT ONE

Teach

Reading Check

Answer: A civil war began in 1642. In 1649, King Charles I was executed and the Puritan Commonwealth was established. In 1660, the monarchy was restored under Charles II.

Reading Strategy 2

Draw Conclusions Ask: What conclusions can you draw about the development of American literature in the colonial period? Which works may have been created as responses to the political and social issues of the era? (Early literature was chiefly about exploration and early settlements. Later literature addressed broader political and social issues. Paine's Common Sense and The Crisis, for example, were responses to the political situation in the colonies. Jefferson's book was a social history of Virginia.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Explain to students that the style of a timeline differs from that of ordinary prose. For example, there is no terminal punctuation. Ask students to find several complete sentences in the timeline and to note that a period would normally be added. Then ask students to look for ways that shortcuts are taken in the entries. Have them identify the words that are left out in typical entries. (The words the and a are usually omitted.)

Established On the board copy one entry from the timeline. (Example: Stamp Act triggers protest throughout colonies) Ask students what they would add to this entry to make it a standard English sentence. (appropriate articles and a period) Have them rewrite several entries, adding the words and the punctuation that would normally appear in English usage. Direct them to check their work with a partner.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Evaluate Evidence Tell students to examine the religion graph.

Ask: Which religious group had the most churches? (Congregational)

Ask: Which groups are Protestant? (all except Roman Catholic)

Cultural History ☆

Slavery While the Southern plantation economy depended on slavery, the Northern economy never relied heavily on slave labor. In fact, slaves rarely made up more than 5 percent of the total population in the North. Two likely reasons for this phenomenon are (1) the Southern economy relied more heavily on large farms and (2) the antislavery sentiment among many Northerners discouraged an increased use of slaves.

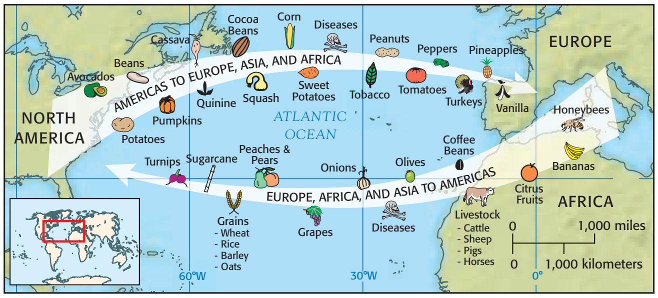
By the Numbers

The Columbian Exchange

Following the arrival of European explorers and settlers in the Western Hemisphere, many plants and animals were carried between the Americas and Europe, Africa, and Asia. This complex interaction, called the Columbian Exchange, permanently altered Earth's ecosystems and changed many cultures around the world.

The results of the Columbian Exchange were mixed. The introduction to Europe of staple crops from the Americas, such as the potato, contributed to a European population explosion. However, Europeans unintentionally brought with them many diseases to which Native Americans had no immunity.

Devastating epidemics resulted, with some Native American groups suffering a 90 percent population loss in the first century after European contact.



EUROPE
NORTH AMERICA
AFRICA
ATLANTIC OCEAN
AMERICAS TO EUROPE, ASIA, AND AFRICA
EUROPE, AFRICA, AND ASIA TO AMERICAS
Cassava
Cocoa Beans
Corn
Diseases
Peanuts
Peppers
Pineapples
Beans
Avocados
Quinine
Squash
Sweet Potatoes
Tobacco
Tomatoes
Turkeys
Vanilla
Pumpkins
Potatoes
Honeybees
Coffee Beans
Turnips
Sugarcane
Peaches & Pears
Onions
Olives
Bananas
Citrus Fruits
Grains
- Wheat
- Rice
- Barley
- Oats
Grapes
Diseases
Livestock
- Cattle
- Sheep
- Pigs
- Horses
0
1,000 miles
0
1,000 kilometers
60°W
30°W
0°

RELIGION IN THE COLONIES 1700s 1

Source Historical Atlas of Religion in America, by Edwin Scott Gaustad

REVOLUTIONARY WAR CASUALTIES

American

- 7,200 battlefield deaths
- 8,200 battlefield wounded
- 1,400 missing in action
- 10,000 deaths from disease and other causes
- 8,500 deaths in British prisons

British

- 10,000 dead from all causes

SLAVERY

From 8 to 10 million enslaved Africans were taken to colonies in the Americas. Of these, only about 5% were taken to North America. At right is shown the distribution of enslaved Africans by colonial nartionality.

Slaves in the Colonies ☆ (in millions)

British (North America)	0.5
British, French, Dutch (Caribbean)	4
Portuguese (Brazil)	3.5
Spanish	1.5

NATIVE AMERICAN DIVERSITY

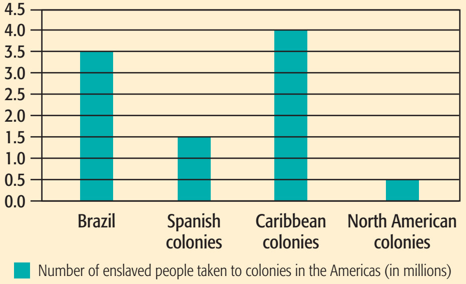
Native American cultures were extraordinarily diverse. Experts estimate that at least 300 distinct languages were spoken in North America when Columbus arrived.

Writing Practice

Analyze a Graph Tell students that when they read a list of facts, reorganizing the material will help them analyze the information. Have students take the items under the heading "Slavery" and represent them visually. Below their graphs, have students write a paragraph explaining conclusions they drew from viewing the graphed information. For example, students might create a bar graph like the one shown, using the following data:

Location of Colonies in Americas	Number of Enslaved People Taken There
Brazil	3.5 million
Spanish colonies	1.5 million
Caribbean colonies	4 million
North American colonies	500,000

Enslaved People by Region

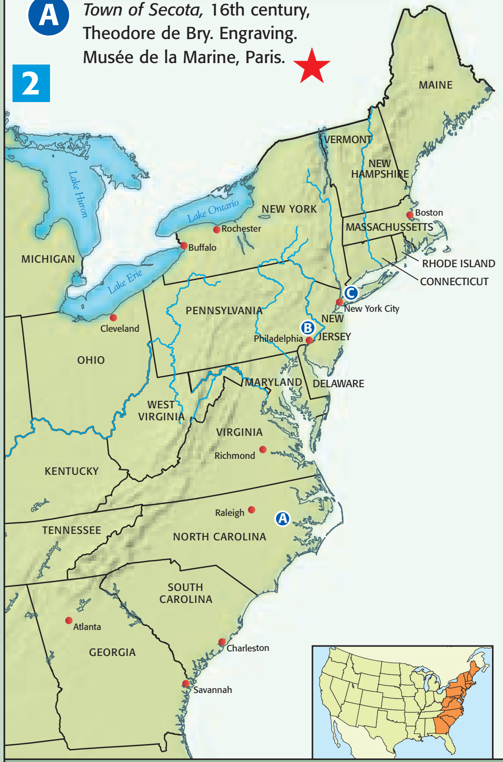


Being There

The Cherokee, Iroquois, and Huron peoples lived in what is now the eastern United States. Great Britain's American colonies extended from present-day Maine to Georgia.

A Town of Secota, 16th century, Theodore de Bry. Engraving. Musée de la Marine, Paris. ★

2



MAINE
VERMONT
NEW HAMPSHIRE
NEW YORK
Boston
MASSACHUSETTS
RHODE ISLAND
CONNECTICUT
Lake Huron
Lake Ontario
Rochester
Buffalo
MICHIGAN
Lake Erie
C
New York City
PENNSYLVANIA
NEW JERSEY
B
Philadelphia
Cleveland
OHIO
MARYLAND
DELAWARE
WEST VIRGINIA
VIRGINIA
Richmond
KENTUCKY
Raleigh
A
TENNESSEE
NORTH CAROLINA
SOUTH CAROLINA
Atlanta
GEORGIA
Charleston
Savannah

B Residence of David Twining, 1845–1847, Edward Hicks. Oil on canvas. Private collection. ★

C Tontine Coffee House, c. 1797, Francis Guy. Oil on linen. New York Historical Society, NY. ★

Literature Online

Literature and Reading For more about the history and literature of this period, go to glencoe.com and enter the QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Reading Check

Analyze Graphic Information:

1. What animals were introduced into the Americas from Europe? What animal was taken from the Americas to Europe?
2. How do American Revolutionary War casualties compare with those of the British?
3. Where were most of colonial America's large cities located?

Teach

Reading Check

Answers:

1. Cattle, sheep, pigs, horses, and honeybees moved from Europe to the Americas. The turkey was brought from the Americas to Europe.
2. There were 15,700 more American deaths than British deaths.
3. In the east, near oceans and other bodies of water

Reading Strategy 2

Interpret Maps Point out to students that the uppercase letters below each work of art correspond to the letters on the map.

View the Art ★

A. Theodore de Bry made this engraving of a Native American town in the 1500s.

B. Edward Hicks (1780–1849) was a Quaker minister. As a child he lived with the Twining family in Pennsylvania.

C. Francis Guy's painting gives an idea of life in New York City in the late 1700s.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging Have students select one of the three paintings and have them list the main objects that indicate the painting's time and place. Have them work in groups to create a list of vocabulary words to help them describe what they see. Ask each group of students to write a brief description of the painting they selected.

Established Ask students to write a diary entry from the point of view of someone who lives in the community depicted in the painting. Explain that a diary entry tells a brief story or explains some daily activity using the first person pronouns I, me, and mine. Remind students to make specific references to the period and location so that readers will know which painting is being referred to.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Cause and Effect

Read the text on page 10.

Ask: Why did European exploration have an enormous effect on world history? (European exploration led to the founding of new countries that influenced historical events and caused many deaths in Native American civilizations.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS Preview some of the vocabulary with English learners. Discuss the differences between historical, social, and cultural forces, and the meanings of such phrases as social organization, complex societies, and cultural contact.

Learning Objectives

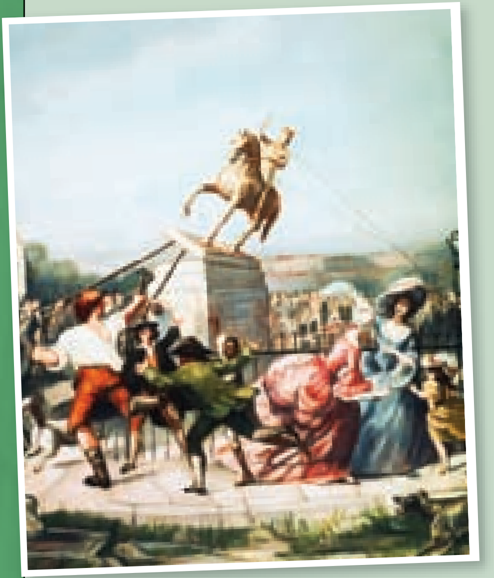
In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Studies: Analyzing literary periods, analyzing literary genres, evaluating historical influences.

Early America

BEGINNINGS–1800

Historical, Social, and Cultural Forces



Pulling Down the Statue of George III, 1857. William Walcutt. Oil on canvas. Lafayette College Art Collection, Easton, PA.

The Native Americans

When Europeans arrived in the Western Hemisphere in the 1490s, it was already home to hundreds of Native American peoples with different languages, cultures, and social values. The ancestors of these Native Americans had come to the Western Hemisphere from Asia thousands of years before. The descendants of these early travelers developed different types of social organization, often based on the local environment. Some peoples, such as the Aztecs of Mexico and Central America, created complex societies with great cities, large-scale farming, and elaborate record keeping based on systems of writing. Others, such as the Plains Indians, who hunted buffalo, lived in portable dwellings and passed on their knowledge through oral tradition.

European Contact

Beginning about 1400, a number of forces prompted Europeans to start exploring the rest of the world. These forces included the growth of trade between Europe and Asia and advances in navigation and shipbuilding. European explorers brought many parts of the world into meaningful contact with one another for the first time in history. One of these explorers was Christopher Columbus, an Italian who commanded a Spanish fleet. In 1492 he made the first of four voyages from Spain to the Americas, opening the era of cultural contact between Europe and the Western Hemisphere.

The European exploration, conquest, and settlement of the Americas led to the founding of many new nations, including the United States. For the Native Americans, however, it was the beginning of an immense tragedy during which many of their societies were destroyed by war and disease. 1

Vocabulary Practice

Phrases After students read the section titled “European Contact,” ask them to supply synonyms for the noun contact. (communication, association, connection) Then have students extend the meaning of the word contact to the phrase “cultural contact.”

Ask: What does this phrase mean to you? What were some results of the cultural contact described in the passage? (Students may reply that American Indians and the Europeans had different beliefs, which led to conflict.) Ask: What are some of the costs and benefits of cultural contact? (Costs include conflicts over land or beliefs; benefits include increased opportunities for trade and education.)

Religious Belief

Religion was a major factor in American colonial culture. Groups of Protestants from England, such as the Pilgrims and Puritans, began founding settlements in New England in 1620. Other groups seeking religious freedom followed, including the Quakers, who settled in Pennsylvania in 1670. In the 1730s and 1740s, a religious revival called the Great Awakening spread throughout the American colonies. Two results of this movement were increased feelings of responsibility for Native Americans and enslaved Africans and a more tolerant spirit toward other faiths.

The Slave Trade

From their beginnings, the American colonies suffered from a severe labor shortage. This was particularly true in the South, where large tobacco and rice plantations required hundreds of workers. Despite protests from some groups, many colonists participated in the slave trade. By 1750 there were more than 200,000 enslaved Africans in Britain's North American possessions, most of them in the Southern colonies. These colonies developed slave codes—sets of laws that formally regulated slavery and defined the relationship between enslaved Africans and free people.

The American Revolution

In the mid-1760s, unrest began to develop in the American colonies. A long war with France had left Britain in debt. To raise money, the British government passed a series of unpopular laws, including taxes on a variety of everyday items. By the mid-1770s, resentment over these taxes was leading to political violence and calls for colonial self-rule.

> "The war is inevitable—and let it come!"
>
> —Patrick Henry

In April 1775, the British colonial government in Massachusetts ordered troops to the towns of Lexington and Concord to control unrest. The first battles of the Revolutionary War were fought there between American militiamen and British soldiers. On July 4, 1776, the Second Continental Congress adopted the Declaration of Independence, asserting the colonists' right to self-government and establishing the United States of America. To defend their independence, the Americans fought a long war with the British, who finally accepted American independence in 1783.

PREVIEW Big Ideas of Early America

2

1 The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling

Native American life was organized around the cycles of nature, and many myths and folktales told of the origins of various aspects of the universe and of human relationships with the natural world.

See pages 12–13.

2 Life in the New World

European explorers and settlers left accounts of endurance and religious faith as they struggled to adapt to life in an unfamiliar world. Victims of the slave trade, Africans recorded their fight to survive.

See pages 14–15.

3 The Road to Independence

British taxes, regulations, and soldiers on American soil aroused annoyance, irritation, and finally revolt. American writers provided ideas and inspiration to the cause of American freedom.

See pages 16–17.

UNIT ONE

Teach

Big Idea

The Power of Storytelling

Ask: How would you describe the Native American literary tradition? (The Native American literary tradition was oral; it placed a high value on the relationship with nature.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS Help English learners break the long phrase "Native American literary tradition" into its individual words to make it easier to understand. Explain the difference between an oral and a written literary tradition.

Cultural History ☆

Religious Belief Some English settlers known as Puritans were motivated by a desire to create a model community. They believed England's ruling monarchy cared only for the wealthy. They wanted to establish a purified society far removed from the Church of England and the Roman Catholic Church. During the 1630s, 21,000 Puritans left their homes to seek a new life in North America.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate List on the board one word from each section of the text (e.g., revival, participated, unpopular). Have students locate the sentences in which these words appear and read them aloud. Ask: What do you think these words mean? (renewal, coming back, returning; shared, took part in; not liked, disapproved of, disliked) Have students create a two-column chart with the headings Words and Meanings. Have them consult a dictionary for synonyms, list them on their charts, and substitute the synonyms in the sentences from the text.

Advanced Explain that some prefixes are followed by a hyphen when they are added to a word. The prefix self- is usually followed by a hyphen, as in the words self-rule and self-government. Ask students to consult a dictionary and list five other compounds with the prefix self-.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Connect Ask: What is your view of the Native American belief system that held the natural world to be sacred? (Answers will vary.)

Cultural History ☆

N. Scott Momaday Navarre Scott Momaday is a Native American writer whose work appears in Part 1 of this unit. He was born on a Kiowa reservation in Oklahoma in 1934. His parents were educators, and as a result the family lived on a number of different reservations during his childhood before eventually settling in New Mexico. His novel House Made of Dawn won the Pulitzer Prize for fiction in 1969. This success helped lead to the widespread acceptance of Native American literature into mainstream curricula.

Ask: What works of literature is Momaday referring to in the quotation? (the Native American oral tradition, which is described in the section A Legacy of Stories, following the quotation.)

Big Idea 1

The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling

We often have a strong feeling for the land where we live—its shapes and colors, its sounds and smells. In many Native American cultures, the entire earth and all of the living things that inhabited it were sacred. This reverence for the earth and its creatures was passed down orally from generation to generation. Speakers and storytellers were valued members of Native American communities.

The Cycle of Life 1

Native Americans saw animals, plants, and the forces of nature as part of a great sacred cycle of life that humans must treat with deep respect. Religious ceremonies were organized around the events of this natural cycle. Through dreams and visions, Native Americans sought contact with the spirits they believed to inhabit all living things. Through their tales and songs, Native Americans expressed their view of the sacredness of the natural world.

> "Sell a country! Why not sell the air, the great sea, as well as the earth? Did not the Great Spirit make them all for the use of his children?"
>
> —Tecumseh, Shawnee leader

Owning the Land

Native Americans' belief that the natural world is sacred affected their attitude toward land ownership. In their view, no one person could own land, which instead belonged in common to all people—and other living things—that inhabited it. This concept of common ownership contrasted sharply with that of the Europeans, who began settling North America in the early 1600s. These settlers had a fierce desire to own their own land. Violent conflicts often resulted when Native American leaders signed treaties—which they usually did not understand—that opened lands to white settlement.

> "American literature begins with the first human perception of the American landscape expressed and preserved in language."
>
> —N. Scott Momaday ☆

A Legacy of Stories

The Native American oral tradition began approximately forty thousand years ago when the first humans crossed from Asia to Alaska via a land bridge now covered by the Bering Strait. As populations migrated south, unique cultures and languages developed in response to different environments. When European explorers first arrived in the New World, thousands of languages, some as unlike each other as English and Chinese, were spoken in the Americas. Each of these cultures developed its own stories and mythology.

It is likely that many early stories dramatized the struggle of the first Americans to survive. Stone Age hunters may have related tales of the hunt to groups sitting around campfires. Sacred stories were often at the heart of religious ceremonies, and in societies where myth and reality merged, rituals were thought to link the spirits of hunters and animals. Versions of the earliest stories have evolved through hundreds of generations and are still a living part of Native American traditions.

Reading Practice

Support the Main Idea Remind students that a paragraph often contains one main idea and details that support it. Ask: How can you find the main idea of a paragraph? (Look for a sentence that states or sums up what the paragraph is about.) Have students locate and write down the main idea of each paragraph on page 12. Then direct them to compare their answers.

Ask: How is the main idea developed in a paragraph? (A main idea is supported by details.) Have students record the main idea and supporting details in one paragraph. Here is an example for paragraph 2:

Main idea:

The religious beliefs of Native Americans were shaped by their attitude toward the natural world.

Supporting details:

- respect for animals, plants, nature
- religious ceremonies for seasons
- spirits believed to inhabit all of life
- sacredness of natural world expressed in tales and songs

Mimbres style pottery bowl painted with the guardians of the four seasons, Mogollon culture, A.D. 10th century. Maxwell Museum of Anthropology, Albuquerque, NM. ★

I Have Killed the Deer Taos Pueblo Song

I have killed the deer.
I have crushed the grasshopper
And the plants he feeds upon.
I have cut through the heart
Of trees growing old and straight.
I have taken fish from water
And birds from the sky.
In my life I have needed death
So that my life can be.

When I die I must give life
To what has nourished me.
The earth receives my body
And gives it to the plants
And to the caterpillars
To the birds
And to the coyotes
Each in its own turn so that
The circle of life is never broken. 2

Reading Check

Analyze Cause and Effect How did Native Americans' religious views lead to conflict with Europeans?

Teach

Reading Check

Answer: The Native American view that the natural world belongs to all people clashed with the Europeans' strong desire to own land.

Literary Element 2

Poetry Ask: Could the song "I Have Killed the Deer" be considered a poem? Say: Find examples of poetic devices, such as imagery, personification, and repetition. Ask: What are some similarities between songs and poetry? (They may share such similar characteristics as rhythm, imagery, and literary devices.)

View the Art ★

Mogollon Culture The Mogollon culture developed in what is now the southwestern part of New Mexico and spread into eastern Arizona and northern Mexico. Mogollon pottery was usually made from volcanic clays, which turned dark brown when the pots were fired. The Mimbres phase took place from about A.D. 1025 to 1300.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Have students read the poem and look up any unfamiliar words. Have them ask questions about unclear phrases and lines. Then have partners read the poem aloud. Ask: How are the two stanzas of the poem related? (In the first stanza the speaker tells how nature has nourished his life. In the second stanza he tells how he will become part of the eternal cycle when his body returns to the earth.)

Have students read aloud the lines in which the speaker identifies the living things that have sustained him. (deer, grasshopper, plants, trees, fish, bird)
Ask: What do you think the circle in the last line refers to? (the interdependence among all living things)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Make Inferences Have students read the introductory paragraph. Ask: What is meant by the phrase "subdue a wilderness"? (create human settlements by clearing brush, making paths, and building homes in the wilderness [The illustration on page 4 shows one example of this.])

Literary History ☆

John Winthrop The founding governor of Massachusetts Bay Colony, John Winthrop, wrote a sermon entitled "A Model of Christian Charity" while traveling to the New World. In this sermon Winthrop created his famous description of a "city upon a hill." He derived this description from a verse in the gospel of Matthew: "A city set on a hill cannot be hid." Winthrop wanted to inspire a sense of duty in his people by indicating that their community would serve as an example for others.

Big Idea 2

Life in the New World

1 For the Europeans who explored and settled North America, daily life was frequently a struggle to subdue a wilderness and to endure fierce conflicts with Native Americans. For Africans seized from their homes and enslaved in the Americas, life was a battle first to survive and then to hold on to their cultural identity.

A Collision of Cultures

Europeans began to explore North America in the early 1500s. Many explorers wrote grim reports of hardships encountered in the wilderness. The first arrivals were followed by other Europeans, settlers who built towns and started farms. As European settlement spread, conflict developed between the newcomers and Native Americans that often led to brutal wars. Their superior weapons enabled the Europeans to overcome their enemies. Even more destructive to the Native Americans were the diseases the newcomers brought with them. As a result of war and disease, few Native Americans survived beyond the end of the 1600s.

Puritan Style

The Puritans greatly influenced early American literature. They began to establish communities in New England in the 1620s after leaving England to escape what they saw as signs of corruption in the Church of England. These included elaborate rituals, a richly dressed clergy, and fine churches. In opposition to this, Puritans dressed plainly and held simple religious services in undecorated meetinghouses. They also believed that they had a God-given responsibility to establish an ideal way of life in America.

The Puritans' plainness and piety showed in their writing, which employed straightforward language and often focused on their faith. William Bradford (see pages 62–68) was a member of the Puritan group known as the Pilgrims, who settled Plymouth Colony in 1620. Bradford viewed writing primarily as a practical tool. At the beginning of his history of the Plymouth Colony, he said that he intended to produce a record of events in "a plain style, with singular regard unto the simple truth in all things."

> "For we must consider that we shall be as a city upon a hill. The eyes of all people are upon us."
>
> —John Winthrop ☆

In 1734 Jonathan Edwards (see pages 95–101), a Congregational minister and a great spokesman for Puritanism, began a series of religious revivals in his community of Northampton, Massachusetts. Edwards' powerful sermons helped start the "Great Awakening," a movement that spread throughout the American colonies. Edwards maintained that a person had to repent and convert in order to be "born again." This idea of having a personal emotional experience that brings one to God was a central idea of the Great Awakening.

Surviving Slavery

The first enslaved Africans were brought to Virginia in 1619. By the 1700s, slave ships arrived regularly in the American colonies. Most of these people, like Olaudah Equiano (see pages 69–78), had been taken from their homes in West Africa by slave traders. After enduring the horrors of the "Middle Passage," the long sea voyage across the Atlantic, they reached the slave markets of the Americas. Despite brutal living conditions, these Africans struggled to preserve parts of their heritage—the social values and cultural traditions of their homelands—but usually without success.

Vocabulary Practice

Determine Precise Meanings Explain to students that they can determine the meaning of new words by using what they already know. Point out that they have seen that the word subdue in "subdue a wilderness" means "to conquer or tame." Ask: Using this knowledge, infer the meaning of the word subdued in each of these phrases:

- subdued lighting (low intensity)
- subdued voices (soft)
- subdued temper (repressed)

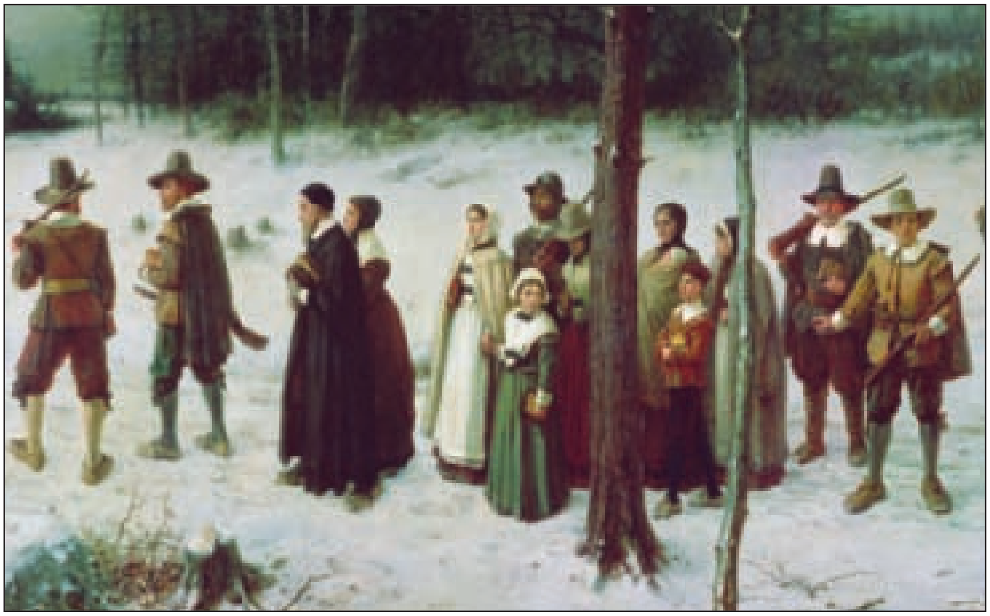
Have students determine the meanings of the word elaborate in these phrases.

- elaborate rituals
- elaborate precautions
- elaborate on a theory

Direct students to check their answers in a standard dictionary.



Pilgrims Going to Church, 1867. George Henry Boughton. Oil on canvas. Collection of the New York Historical Society. ★ from Of Plymouth Plantation by William Bradford

September 6. These troubles being blown over, and now all being compact together in one ship [the Mayflower], they put to sea again with a prosperous wind, which continued divers days together, which was some encouragement unto them; yet, according to the usual manner, many were afflicted with sea sickness. And I may not omit here a special work of God's providence. There was a proud and very profane young man, one of the seamen, of a lusty, able body, which made him the more haughty; he would always be condemning the poor people in their sickness, and cursing them daily with grievous execrations, and did not let to tell them that he hoped to help to cast half of them overboard before they came to their journey's end, and to make merry with what they had; and if he were by any gently reproved, he would curse and swear most bitterly. But it pleased God before they came half seas over, to smite this young man with a grievous disease, of which he died in a desperate manner, and so was himself the first that was thrown overboard. Thus his curses light on his own head, and it was an astonishment to all his fellows, for they noted it to be the just hand of God upon him. 2

Reading Check

Evaluate Why did the Puritans adopt a plain style in their writing?

Teach

Reading Check

Answer: The Puritan writing style was plain because it reflected the Puritan philosophy of simple, faith-based ideals.

Reading Strategy 2

Clarify Help students understand the unfamiliar language and constructions in Bradford's journal entry. Point out unusual phrasing and words. Encourage students to decode meanings by using context clues and a dictionary.

View the Art ★

George Henry Boughton (1833–1905) was born in England and moved with his family to New York when he was a child. He studied art in Paris while in his late 20s and spent most of the rest of his life in London. While working as an illustrator, he created art for an edition of The Scarlet Letter.

Ask: Why might the artist show these churchgoers carrying guns? (The artist may have been reflecting the attitude that Puritans were concerned about being attacked by Native Americans.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging Tell students to list questions they might have about William Bradford's writings. Have them work together to paraphrase the passage line by line. Have pairs share their paraphrases with the class. Then, discuss questions still remaining about the meaning of the passage.

Established Ask students to write a short summary of Bradford's journal. Have them include Bradford's beliefs and his details about the journey. Direct them to write three to five sentences summarizing and responding to the passage. Then, have students read their paragraphs aloud to the class to improve reading fluency.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Draw Conclusions Ask: How did Benjamin Franklin's success reflect the values of the newly emerging American society? (Because Franklin began his life in a poor family and ended up as highly successful in many fields, he embodied the new American society, in which individuals rose as a result of education, effort, and ability.)

Political History ☆

The Declaration of Independence In addition to announcing the separation of the thirteen colonies from Great Britain, the Declaration of Independence identified the basic principles that would form the foundation of the new country. The most important principle was that ordinary citizens would play major roles in running their government.

Big Idea 3

The Road to Independence

As human beings grow, they experience the challenges and rewards of becoming independent. Separated by a long, dangerous sea voyage from Britain, the American colonists became used to managing their own affairs. As colonial society developed, many Americans came to believe that this growth in responsibility should be matched with an increase in political and economic rights. In time, this belief would lead to revolution—resulting in a break with Britain, a long war, and full independence.

A "Natural Aristocracy"

The culture of the American colonies was shaped by the practical, self-reliant, pioneer spirit of settlers who had left their homelands to seek a better life. As the French-born American Michel Guillaume Jean de Crèvecoeur observed, "He is an American who, leaving behind him all his ancient prejudices and manners, receives new ones from the mode of life he has embraced, the new government he obeys, and the new rank he holds." The career of Benjamin Franklin (see pages 104–111) reflected the American colonists' ability to rise in the world. He began life as one of seventeen children in a poor family. He ended as a businessman, an influential politician, and a famous writer and scientist.

1

> "Sloth, like rust, consumes faster than labor wears, while the used key is always bright."
>
> —Benjamin Franklin

Another important factor in the maturing of American colonial society was an emphasis on self-improvement through education. New England's Puritans, for example, established a system of public schools, believing that learning was a defense against evil. The effect of a bold, enterprising spirit coupled with education was the emergence in the American colonies of an outstanding political leadership, which one of these leaders, Thomas Jefferson (see pages 120–126), called a "natural aristocracy" of virtue and talent.

Political Rights

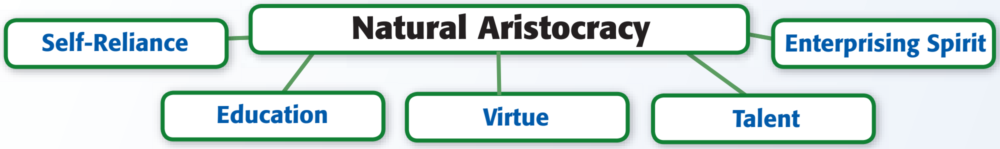
During the 1700s, America came under the influence of the European cultural movement known as the Enlightenment. Enlightenment thinkers believed that natural laws applied to social, political, and economic relationships. Among these was the concept that human beings possessed certain natural, or "inalienable" rights, basic rights that could never be taken away. Thomas Jefferson believed that the colonists had a natural right to be free. He also believed that they had a right—indeed a duty—to end what he saw as Britain's tyrannical rule of the colonies by establishing their own independent government. In the Declaration of Independence, Jefferson eloquently expressed the fundamental ideas behind the American Revolution. ☆

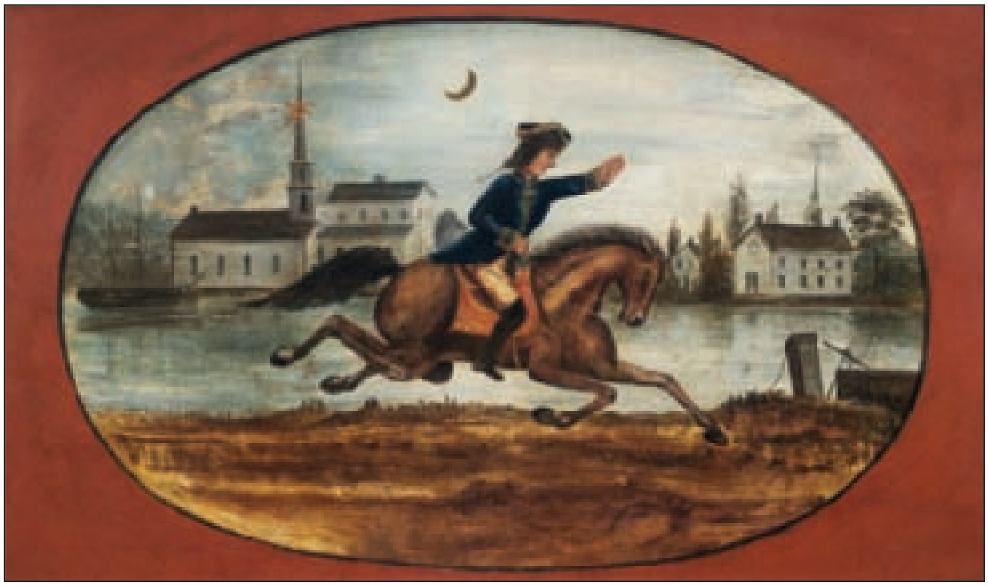
Women's Lives

In colonial America, law and custom gave men greater authority and importance than women in politics and in the home. A married woman had few legal rights and was almost completely under her husband's control. Despite legal limitations, many colonial women worked outside the home, running farms and businesses. Women also played a vital role in the independence movement by organizing boycotts of British goods. During the Revolutionary War, women made important contributions on the home front and on the battlefront. However, the political rights they helped win would be denied them for another 140 years.

Study Skills Practice

Organize Ideas To help students better understand the concepts on this page, have them make a word web for each section.





Midnight Ride of Paul Revere, 1815. Artist Unknown. ☆ from The Autobiography by Benjamin Franklin

1. Temperance. Eat not to dullness; drink not to elevation.
2. Silence. Speak not but what may benefit others or yourself; avoid trifling conversation.
3. Order. Let all your things have their places; let each part of your business have its time.
4. Resolution. Resolve to perform what you ought; perform without fail what you resolve.
5. Frugality. Make no expense but to do good to others or yourself; i.e., waste nothing.
6. Industry. Lose no time; be always employed in something useful; cut off all unnecessary actions.
7. Sincerity. Use no hurtful deceit; think innocently and justly, and, if you speak, speak accordingly.
8. Justice. Wrong none by doing injuries or omitting the benefits that are your duty.
9. Moderation. Avoid extremes; forbear resenting injuries so much as you think they deserve.
10. Cleanliness. Tolerate no uncleanliness in body, clothes, or habitation.
11. Tranquility. Be not disturbed at trifles or at accidents common or unavoidable.
12. Chastity. Rarely use venery but for health or offspring, never to dullness, weakness, or the injury of your own or another's peace or reputation.
13. Humility. Imitate Jesus and Socrates. 2

Reading Check

Analyze Cause and Effect How did the American colonies come to have an effective group of leaders at the time of the Revolution?

Teach

Reading Check

Answer: An effective group of leaders emerged as a result of American beliefs in education and the creation of a better life.

Reading Strategy 2

Connect Ask: Do you think Franklin's recommendations still apply today? Why or why not? (Answers will vary.)

Literary History ☆

Paul Revere's Ride The American poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow wrote a famous poem called "Paul Revere's Ride," in which he described events that took place on the night of April 18, 1775. On that night American colonists learned that British soldiers were advancing to the town of Lexington, Massachusetts, to arrest Samuel Adams and John Hancock. The warning was carried by a man on horseback, a silversmith called Paul Revere.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

PARTNERS Intermediate Have students work with a partner to read each of the thirteen items carefully to identify unfamiliar words. Then have them use dictionaries to choose a definition that fits the context of each word as it appears in Franklin's text.

Advanced Remind students that many words in English have multiple meanings and sometimes can be used as different parts of speech. Ask students to think of two ways in which the word elevation can be used (one meaning is "height"; another meaning is "dignity"). Ask how Franklin uses the word in his first rule (drunkenness or intoxication).

Have students identify three words with multiple meanings and determine how the words are used in Franklin's text. (Examples: temperance, resolution, business)

Assess

Legacy of the Period

Ask: Do Americans still display a willingness to criticize established authority? (Students may say many people voice strong opinions about politics, especially controversial issues.)

Cultural and Literary Links

As students read the unit, invite them to think about other literature that reflects values similar to those expressed by the writers.

Activities

1. Follow Up Students should show an understanding of both Native American and Puritan characteristics.
2. Build Visual Literacy Encourage students to research Native American art to incorporate into their designs.
3. Write Ask students to consider whether virtue and talent are still highly prized.

FOLDABLES® Study Organizer

Foldables: Study Organizer

Have students make and label the bound book. Then have them use it to keep track of literary elements.

Wrap-Up

Legacy of the Period

American literature began with the oral tradition of the Native Americans. This ancient legacy of stories, songs, prayers, history, and other lore enabled the Native Americans to preserve the outlines of a world that largely vanished. Disease and war followed the arrival of Europeans in the Western Hemisphere. In recent years, new generations of Native American writers have reinterpreted, in modern terms, the literary themes and forms of this tradition, as part of a continuing effort to explore Native American cultural identity.

The writings of the Puritans are part of a cultural tradition stretching back to the time of Martin Luther and the beginnings of the Protestant Reformation. Some of the most important features of this tradition, as interpreted by the Puritans, became central to the American cultural tradition. One example is the belief in a God-given mission to offer an example to the world of an ideal community. Another is the Puritan emphasis on simplicity and practicality.

Puritanism inspired the religious revival of the Great Awakening, which in turn inspired a desire for democracy and equality in its followers. To many Americans, this sense of equality applied not only to religion but to society as well. It encouraged in them a willingness to criticize established authority—including the authority of the British government.

Cultural and Literary Links

- Native American literature has flourished since the 1960s. Contributors to this renaissance include N. Scott Momaday, Louise Erdrich, Leslie Marmon Silko, and Sherman Alexie.
- The writings of Benjamin Franklin have inspired Americans and people around the world to undertake self-improvement. One well-known example is Frederick Douglass.
- In 1848, at the first U.S. women's rights convention, Elizabeth Cady Stanton modeled her "Declaration of Rights and Sentiments" on Jefferson's Declaration of Independence.

Literature Online

Unit Resources For additional skills practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Activities

Choose one of the following activities to explore and develop as you read this unit.

1. Follow Up Go back to the Looking Ahead on page 5 and answer the questions.
2. Build Visual Literacy Alone or with other students, create a design expressing the Native American concept of the unending cycle of life.
3. Write Write a brief essay exploring how Jefferson's "natural aristocracy" of virtue and talent that formed the leadership of the American Revolution would regard those governing the United States today.
4. Take Notes Use this study organizer to keep track of the three big ideas in this unit.

FOLDABLES Study Organizer BOUND BOOK

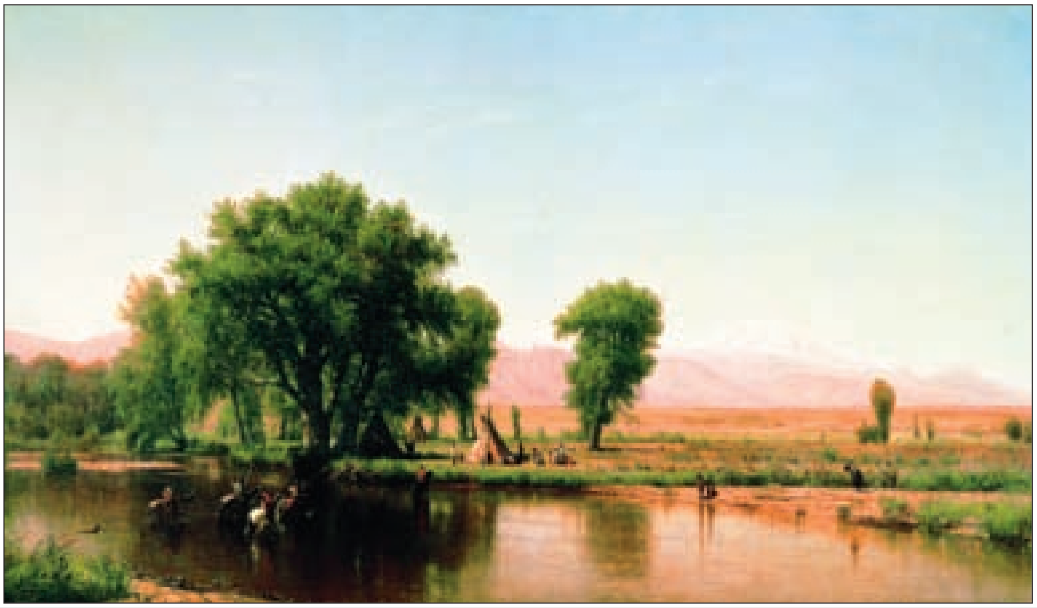
Reading Practice

Support the Main Idea Explain that an outline can show the organization of ideas that appear in expository writing. Ask students to reread one of the "Big Idea" sections. Have them use the heads and subheads to analyze the organization of ideas. Then instruct them to use the heads as a framework for their outlines. As they reread each section, direct students to list the ideas under each subhead.

Part 1

THE SACRED EARTH AND THE POWER OF STORYTELLING



Crossing the Ford, Platte River, Colorado, 1867–1870. Thomas Worthington Whittredge. Oil on canvas. Century Association, NY.

View the Art In this painting, the artist has chosen to make the people very small in relation to the landscape. Why do you think he might have done this? ★

> "Let us tell the old stories,
> Let us sing the sacred songs." 1
>
> —N. Scott Momaday, "Carriers of the Dream Wheel"

UNIT ONE

PART 1

Analyze and Extend

Reading Strategy 1

Make Inferences Invite a student to read aloud the quotation. The speaker is a modern-day member of the Kiowa tribe, whose work is included in this section.

Say: Explain what Momaday means by "old stories" and "sacred songs." (He refers to the history and beliefs of Native American culture transmitted through the oral tradition of folk tales, myths, and poetry.)

View the Art ★

Answer: To show that the American wilderness was vast and powerful; to show that Native Americans lived in harmony with nature

The artist Thomas Worthington Whittredge (1820–1910) went to the Great Plains between 1866 and 1871. Later he wrote, "Whoever crossed the plains at that period . . . could hardly fail to be impressed with its vastness and silence and the appearance everywhere of an innocent . . . existence."

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Beginning Ask: What adjectives describe the scene you see? (serene, vast, awe-inspiring) Have students work in small groups to suggest appropriate modifiers.

Intermediate Ask: What is the main characteristic of a plain? (flat or level) Have students consult a dictionary and read the meaning of the words "Great Plains" aloud.

For additional support for English Learners, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 21.

Literary History

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 2

Or have students imagine they had no scientific explanation for why the moon seems to change shape throughout the month. Brainstorm ideas for a story that provides a creative explanation.

Say: Early Native Americans created stories to help them understand themselves and their world, and they used their oral tradition to pass their understanding from one generation to the next. Momaday's quotation shows one myth of creation from the Kiowas. Ask: What myths do you know that tell about the beginnings of the world? (Answers will vary.)

Teach

Literary Element | 1

Archetypes Invite students to recall heroes and villains in movie series such as Star Wars, Lord of the Rings, and Harry Potter. These classic character roles represent archetypes.

Ask: How does each series represent this battle? Are the characters clear-cut, or a mix of good and evil impulses? (Some characters go through changes and conflicts.)

Learning Objectives

For pages 20–21

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study:
Analyzing literary periods.
Analyzing literary genres.

Literary History

Native American Mythology

Centuries before the first Europeans arrived on the shores of North America, Native Americans had established hundreds of thriving nations, each with a unique culture and heritage. Each nation had its own tradition of oral literature—stories that were passed down from one generation to the next as they were told and retold in the privacy of households and in tribal ceremonies. These stories embodied the tribe's past and told of its close relationship with the natural world. The result is a literature that is timeless, a literature created by no one author but by the people as a whole.

> "You know, everything had to begin, and this is how it was: the Kiowas came one by one into this world through a hollow log."
>
> —N. Scott Momaday
> from The Way to Rainy Mountain

Creation Myths

A myth is an anonymous, traditional story that explains a natural phenomenon, an aspect of human behavior, or a mystery of the universe. Creation myths tell how the world and human beings came to exist. Origin myths explain how natural phenomena, such as the stars, moon, and mountains, came to be or why a society has certain beliefs and customs. Elements of both creation myths and origin myths appear in one story, as in this myth of the Taos Pueblo people:

> "When earth was still young and giants still roamed the land, a great sickness came upon them. All of them died except for one small boy. One day while he was playing, a snake bit him. The boy cried and cried. The blood came out, and finally he died. With his tears our lakes became. With his blood the red clay became. With his body our mountains became, and that was how earth became."

Totem Pole at Saxman Totem Park, Ketchikan. Tlingit. Wood sculpture. Ketchikan, Alaska, USA.

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Analyze Archetypes Introduce another archetypal character: the fool. Point out that he or she is often linked to the trickster character in archetypal story patterns such as the following:

- The trickster wants something from the fool and proceeds to use trickery to get it.
- The fool goes on the offensive, trying in vain to outwit the wily trickster.
- The overconfident trickster gets tricked.

Challenge students to come up with examples of fools versus tricksters—from folktales, cartoons, movies, and modern fiction.

Archetypes

1 The myths told by peoples around the world share common elements known as archetypes. An archetype (ärʹ kə tīpʹ) is a symbol, story pattern, or character type that is found in the literature of many cultures. An example of an archetype is children with opposite qualities who are born of the same parent. In Iroquois myth, Sky Woman gives birth to twins, one good and one evil. This event explains the eternal struggle between light and dark and between order and chaos.

Tricksters

Another archetype found in Native American mythology is the trickster. This character type, frequently an animal—such as a coyote, a raven, or a mink—that speaks and displays other human traits, has two sides to its personality. Tricksters are rebels who defy authority and frequently cause trouble, but they are also clever and creative figures who can unexpectedly reveal wisdom. For example, in one Native American myth, the coyote brought death into the world when he realized that the earth would become too crowded if people were to live forever. In a Navajo myth, the Holy People were gathered to place the stars in the sky. This process was taking so long that Coyote grew impatient, snatched the bag of stars, and hurled it into the heavens, forming the Milky Way. A Kiowa myth explains how a trickster stole the sun from those living on the other side of the earth so that all people could share day and night equally.

The Function of Myths

Native American myths told by various tribes have several things in common. Many emphasize a strong spiritual bond between the Creator, humanity, and the entire natural world. They emphasize that it is the duty of human beings to maintain a balance within the natural world. 2

Tlingit Raven Rattle, ca. 1850. Native American. The Lowe Art Museum, The University of Miami.

View the Art Native Americans used rattles to help maintain a rhythm during ceremonial dances. What features of this rattle reflect Native American beliefs? ★

In many Native American cultures, each family group, or clan, believed it descended from a particular animal or other natural object, called the totem. Members of the bear clan, for example, honored the bear as their clan ancestor. The bear in turn served as the clan's guardian spirit, helping and protecting its members. The bear clan was responsible for preserving the myths of the bear.

Myths and rituals continue to play a central role in traditional Native American cultures. They are used to give people a sense of order and identity, to heal the sick, to ensure a plentiful supply of food, to teach moral lessons, and to initiate young people into adulthood and the wisdom of the tribal past.

Literature Online

Literature and Reading For more about Native American mythology, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Respond and Think Critically

1. In your opinion, what is the most vital role of mythology in a culture?
2. How do Native American myths express a dual view of reality?
3. What archetype do the myths of many cultures throughout the world have in common?

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Select several folk tales that revolve around a trickster character such as Raven or Coyote. For greater variety, include an African figure such as Anansi the Spider. Assign students to read and analyze the trickster character in one tale, and to prepare a presentation.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Have students use the Internet to find images of Native American totems and totem poles and write descriptive labels. Have them present the images and their descriptions to the class.

Teach

Big Idea 2

The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling Native American oral literature reflects a respect for Earth. Ask: How would you characterize people's attitudes toward Earth today? (Some people, nations, and political movements respect Earth; others have a total disregard for it, polluting and wiping out natural resources.)

View the Art ★

Answer: The artifact might represent a totem or a creation myth, since it bears the image of an animal's face.

Assess

1. Mythology helps people understand the world, strengthens cultural identity, and transmits values to succeeding generations.
2. Good and evil twins and the creative tricksters express this.
3. Heroes, magicians, monsters, tricksters, quests, cosmic disasters

For an activity related to this selection, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 19–20.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 3

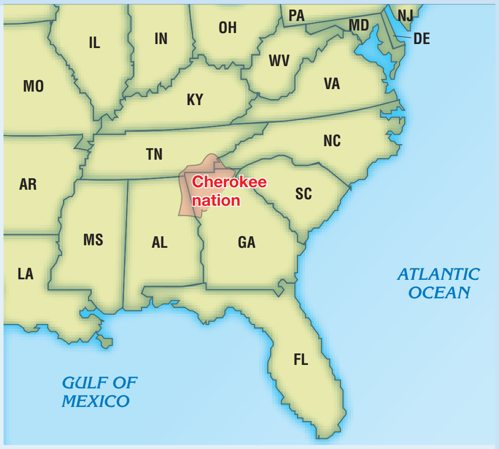
Or tell students they will read a creation myth explaining how the world of the Cherokee came to be. Ask: If you were to write a creation myth, what major landmarks, plants, and animals would you include?

Political History ☆

The Indian Removal Act President Andrew Jackson forced all tribes to lands west of the Mississippi. Most tribes were pressured to sign treaties, and the lands they received in the West were inferior to those surrendered. A few tribes resisted. In 1831 the Cherokees took their case to the Supreme Court. The Court ruled in favor of the Cherokees, but officials ignored the decision and Jackson refused to enforce it.

Before You Read

How the World Was Made



Meet the Cherokee

Hundreds of years ago, the Cherokee were the largest Native American nation in what is now the southeastern United States. Like most other Native American peoples, the Cherokee possessed a vibrant oral culture. Myths helped the Cherokee understand the world around them, live in harmony with nature, and pass on their beliefs and values to their descendants.

In the mid-1500s, the Cherokee used stone tools and hunted bears, elk, and deer. They lived in log cabins with bark roofs, no windows, and a smoke hole in the roof, in towns of about 200 people. At any given time, the Cherokee were in either peace mode or war mode. Because they lived in an alternating state, the Cherokee government was made up of two sets of officials: a white chief, who ruled during peacetime, and a red chief, who ruled during wartime.

Treaty of Augusta The Cherokee had been friendly trading partners with the British throughout the 1700s but had fallen into debt. In the Treaty of Augusta in 1773, the Cherokee and Creek were forced to cede vast swaths of their tribal lands in Georgia to repay these debts to the British. Hoping to regain their traditional hunting grounds, the Cherokee pledged their support for the British at the beginning of the American Revolution. In the 1770s and 1780s, the Cherokee engaged in a flurry of skirmishes with the American army. They lost each time and were forced to surrender more lands.

Assimilation In the 1800s, the Cherokee learned to adapt by assimilating elements of white culture. They learned new farming, weaving, and construction methods. In 1821, Sequoyah, a half-Cherokee who had served in the U.S. Army, developed a system of writing the Cherokee language called a syllabary, a set of written characters in which each character represents a syllable. When Sequoyah pitched the syllabary to the tribal council, the chiefs marveled at its prospects and immediately accepted the new technology. Within a few years, almost the entire Cherokee nation was literate. In 1828, the Cherokee used their syllabary to publish The Cherokee Phoenix, the first Native American newspaper. But adopting white cultural practices did nothing to disarm the westward expansion. In 1830, the Cherokee were forcibly removed from their land under the Indian Removal Act. Some 15,000 Cherokee were placed in internment camps. Meanwhile, settlers pillaged and burned Cherokee homes. ☆

Trail of Tears In 1838–1839, the Cherokee were exiled from their ancestral home and forced to march 1,000 miles to present-day Oklahoma, then known as Indian Territory. As many as 4,000 Cherokee died during the grueling 116-day journey. The soldiers refused to slow down for the sick and exhausted. Today, most Cherokee still live in Oklahoma, while several thousand, the descendants of those who escaped the Trail of Tears, still live in North Carolina.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about the Cherokee, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Selection Skills

How the World Was Made

Literary Elements
- Archetype (SE pp. 23, 25, 26)
- Metaphor (SE p. 25)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Creation Myth (SE p. 26)

Reading Skills
- Sequence (SE pp. 23, 25, 26)
- Draw Conclusions (TE p. 24)

Vocabulary Skills
- Synonyms (SE pp. 23, 26)
- Connotations (TE p. 23)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Myth

People often talk about where they come from—both geographically and in terms of their family, culture, and traditions. Why do people consider this information important? Write a journal entry in which you explain your origins, and what this information means to you.

Build Background

Myths usually come from ancient oral traditions. Early civilizations did not make the clear distinction between history and mythology that we do today. They took their myths very seriously as explanations of how the world came to be as it is.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling

As you read "How the World Was Made," ask yourself, What does this story reveal about the Cherokees' relationship with nature?

Literary Element Archetype

An archetype is a character type, a descriptive detail, an image, or a story pattern that recurs frequently in the literature from many cultures and evokes strong emotional responses. As you read "How the World Was Made," ask yourself, What archetypal elements are present in this story?

Reading Strategy Identify Sequence

Identifying sequence is finding the logical order of ideas or events. Common forms of sequencing include time order, spatial order, and order of importance. Often, two or more types of sequencing are used in one literary work. In fact, all three are employed in this Cherokee genesis myth.

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart to record an example of each type of sequencing.

Detail	Type of Sequencing	Why
p. 25 "Men came after the animals and plants"	Order of Importance (also time order)	Animals and plants were created first so men would have food to survive

Learning Objectives

For pages 22–26

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing archetype.

Reading: Analyzing sequence.

Writing: Writing a story.

Vocabulary

vault (vôlt) n. an arched structure forming a roof or ceiling; p. 24 The church's vault arched high over our heads.

alight (ə līt´) v. to descend and come to rest; p. 24 The cat watched the pigeon alight on the roof.

conjurer (kon´ jər ər) n. one who performs magic; sorcerer; p. 25 The conjurer amused the audience with his tricks.

Tip: Synonyms Synonyms are words that have the same or similar meanings. Sometimes you can determine the meaning of a word by using clues in the text to identify a synonym. In the third paragraph, we learn the birds had to return because they "found no place to alight." In the context of the story, this must mean that the earth was still wet, leaving the birds no place to land. Land and alight are synonyms.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

The world is created when the animals in Gălûñ'lătĭ, a place in the sky, need more room. Waterbeetle goes below the water that is beneath the sky and stirs up mud to form land. Man and woman are created and soon rule the land.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 22–27.

Vocabulary

Connotations Have students look up ceiling and sorcerer in a standard dictionary. Ask: How are the connotations of the word vault different from those of ceiling? (Ceiling is the covering of a room; vault is associated with large spaces.) Ask: How are the connotations of conjurer different from those of sorcerer? (sorcerer is associated with evil forces; a conjurer is good at tricks.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Explain that writers use transitional expressions to connect ideas and make the sequence of ideas and events logical. Provide a list for students to keep as reference:

Time Order: before, eventually, finally, later, next, then

Space Order: above, across, below, here, inside, there

Order of Importance: first, mainly, more important, to begin with, to sum up

Demonstrate how students can create their own charts to identify connecting words and learn how they are used. Direct students to fill in the chart as they read selections in this unit.

Type of Sequencing	Transitional Words	Examples
time order	then	"then it dived to the bottom" (p. 24)
space order	beyond	"beyond the arch" (p. 24)
order of importance	at first	"At first the earth was flat" (p.24)

Teach

Big Idea 1

The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling

Answer: Water-beetle's crucial role in the creation of Earth reveals the importance of animals in the Cherokee culture. According to this myth, without animals, the world in which the Cherokee live would not exist.

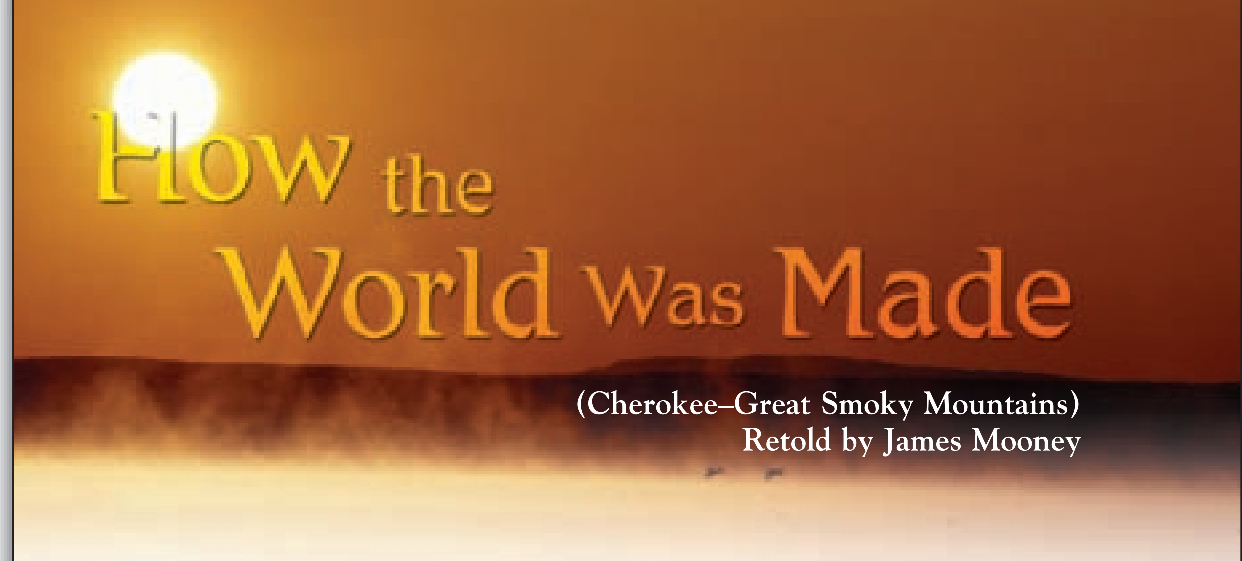
APPROACHING Ask students having difficulty to locate the sentence that tells where the animals lived before the world was made and why they were unhappy. Then ask them to find the sentence that explains why the animals were unable to descend to the land at first. (first sentence of second paragraph; first few sentences of third paragraph)

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 5.9
DRP: 57
Lexile: 1250



How the World Was Made

(Cherokee–Great Smoky Mountains)
Retold by James Mooney

The earth is a great island floating in a sea of water, and suspended at each of the four cardinal points[1] by a cord hanging down from the sky vault, which is of solid rock. When the world grows old and worn out, the people will die and the cords will break and let the earth sink down into the ocean, and all will be water again. The Indians are afraid of this.

When all was water, the animals were above in Gălûñ´lătĭ (go lun(g) lot´ i), beyond the arch; but it was very much crowded, and they were wanting more room. They wondered what was below the water, and at last Dâyuni´sĭ (dô yun ē´ si), "Beaver's Grandchild," the little Water-beetle, offered to go and see if it could learn. It darted in every direction over the surface of the water, but could find no firm place to rest. Then it dived to the bottom and came up with some soft mud, which began to grow and spread on every side until it became the island which we call the earth. It was afterward fastened to the sky with four cords, but no one remembers who did this.

At first the earth was flat and very soft and wet. The animals were anxious to get down, and sent out different birds to see if it was yet dry, but they found no place to alight and came back again to Gălûñ´lătĭ. At last it seemed to be time, and they sent out the Buzzard and told him to go and make ready for them. This was the Great Buzzard, the father of all the buzzards we see now. He flew all over the earth, low down near the ground, and it was still soft. When he reached the Cherokee country, he was very tired, and his wings began to flap and strike the ground, and wherever they struck the earth there was a valley, and where they turned up again there was a mountain. When the animals above saw this, they were afraid that the whole world would be mountains, so they called him back, but the Cherokee country remains full of mountains to this day.

When the earth was dry and the animals came down, it was still dark, so they got the

1 The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling
What does Water-beetle's role in the story reveal about the Cherokees' relationship with animals?

Vocabulary

vault (vôlt) n. an arched structure forming a ceiling

Vocabulary

alight (ə līt´) v. to descend and come to rest

---

[1] The four cardinal points are the four main directions on a compass (north, south, east, and west).

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Draw Conclusions Remind students that creation myths are a culture's attempt to make sense of the world. Thus, the crawfish's meat is spoiled in "How the World Was Made" to reflect the Cherokee aversion to eating crawfish.

Have students select details from this myth and draw conclusions about what these details suggest about Cherokee culture. (For example, students may mention how animals are given the gift of seeing and go about in the dark to explain what the Cherokee observed about nocturnal animals.)

sun and set it in a track to go every day across the island from east to west, just overhead. It was too hot this way, and Tsiska´gĭlĭ´ (chēs kă´ gi li´) the Red Crawfish, had his shell scorched a bright red, so that his meat was spoiled; and the Cherokee do not eat it. The conjurers put the sun another hand-breadth[2] higher in the air, but it was still too hot. They raised it another time, and another, until it was seven handbreadths high and just under the sky arch. Then it was right, and they left it so. This is why the conjurers call the highest place Gûlkwâ´gine Di´gălûñlătiyûñ´ (gul kwô´ gē nā dē´ gol un(g) lot ē yun(g´)), "the seventh height," because it is seven handbreadths above the earth. Every day the sun goes along under this arch, and returns at night on the upper side to the starting place.

There is another world under this, and it is like ours in everything—animals, plants, and people—save that the seasons are different. The streams that come down from the mountains are the trails by which we reach this underworld, and the springs at their heads are the doorways by which we enter it, but to do this one must fast and go to water and have one of the underground people for a guide. We know that the seasons in the underworld are different from ours, because the water in the springs is always warmer in winter and cooler in summer than the outer air.

When the animals and plants were first made—we do not know by whom—they were told to watch and keep awake for seven nights, just as young men now fast and keep awake when they pray to their medicine.[3] They tried to do this, and nearly all were awake through the first night, but the next night several dropped off to sleep, and the third night others were asleep, and then others, until, on the seventh night, of all the animals only the owl, the panther, and one or two more were still awake. To these were given the power to see and to go about in the dark, and to make prey of the birds and animals which must sleep at night. Of the ☆ trees only the cedar, the pine, the spruce, the holly, and the laurel were awake to the end, and to them it was given to be always green and to be greatest for medicine, but to the others it was said: "Because you have not endured to the end you shall lose your hair every winter." 4

Men came after the animals and plants. At first there were only a brother and sister until he struck her with a fish and told her to multiply, and so it was. In seven days a child was born to her, and thereafter every seven days another, and they increased very fast until there was danger that the world could not keep them. Then it was made that a woman should have only one child in a year, and it has been so ever since.

Cherokee drinking vessel in the shape of an owl.

---

[2] A hand-breadth is a unit of measurement based on the width of a hand. It varies from 2½ to 4 inches.

[3] Many Native American cultures believe that each living thing has its own medicine, or spirit, that gives it power.

2 Archetype What other stories have you read that include an underworld?

3 Identify Sequence When do the following events take place in relation to those you have already read about?

Vocabulary

conjurer (kon´ jər ər) n. one who performs magic

Teach

Literary Element 2

Metaphor Answer: Students may say Greek mythology: Demeter and Persephone, Hercules.

Reading Strategy 3

Identify Sequence
Answer: Before the part of the story already read

ENGLISH LEARNERS Have students locate text connectors that clarify organization.

Literary Element 4

Metaphor Direct students to the end of the next to last paragraph—"you [trees] shall lose your hair every winter"—to help them decode the meaning. (The myth refers to the trees' foliage as hair.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS Ask English learners to explain the similarities between the leaves on trees and hair on a head.

Cultural History ☆

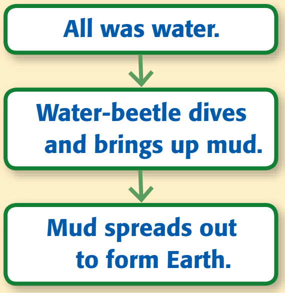
Evergreens Explain that the cedar, pine, spruce, holly, and laurel are not the only trees in Cherokee country that do not "lose their hair." Three other trees that are always green are the juniper, fir, and cypress.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging This story is three tales in one. Ask students to create three graphic organizers: a flow chart of paragraphs 1–4, a web of details for paragraph 5, and a flow chart of paragraphs 6–7. Have students use one visual to practice storytelling.

Example:



All was water.

Water-beetle dives and brings up mud.

Mud spreads out to form Earth.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 31.

After You Read

Assess

1. The Water-beetle's dive into the sea, the Buzzard's sculpting wings, or the conjurers shifting the sun
2. (a) He brings up soft mud that grows into Earth. (b) Every creature has worth.
3. (a) They move the sun up. (b) Magicians who control nature
4. (a) The owl, panther, other animals; the cedar, pine, spruce, holly and laurel. (b) Vigilance and perseverance are rewarded.
5. (a) "No one remembers" or "we do not know" (b) It adds to the mystery.
6. Equal; they believe animals had a major role in creating Earth.
7. (a) Narratives are memorable. (b) They feel close to nature; it is part of a meaningful order.
8. Answers will vary.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 59–60.

To create custom assessments using software, use ExamView Assessment Suite.

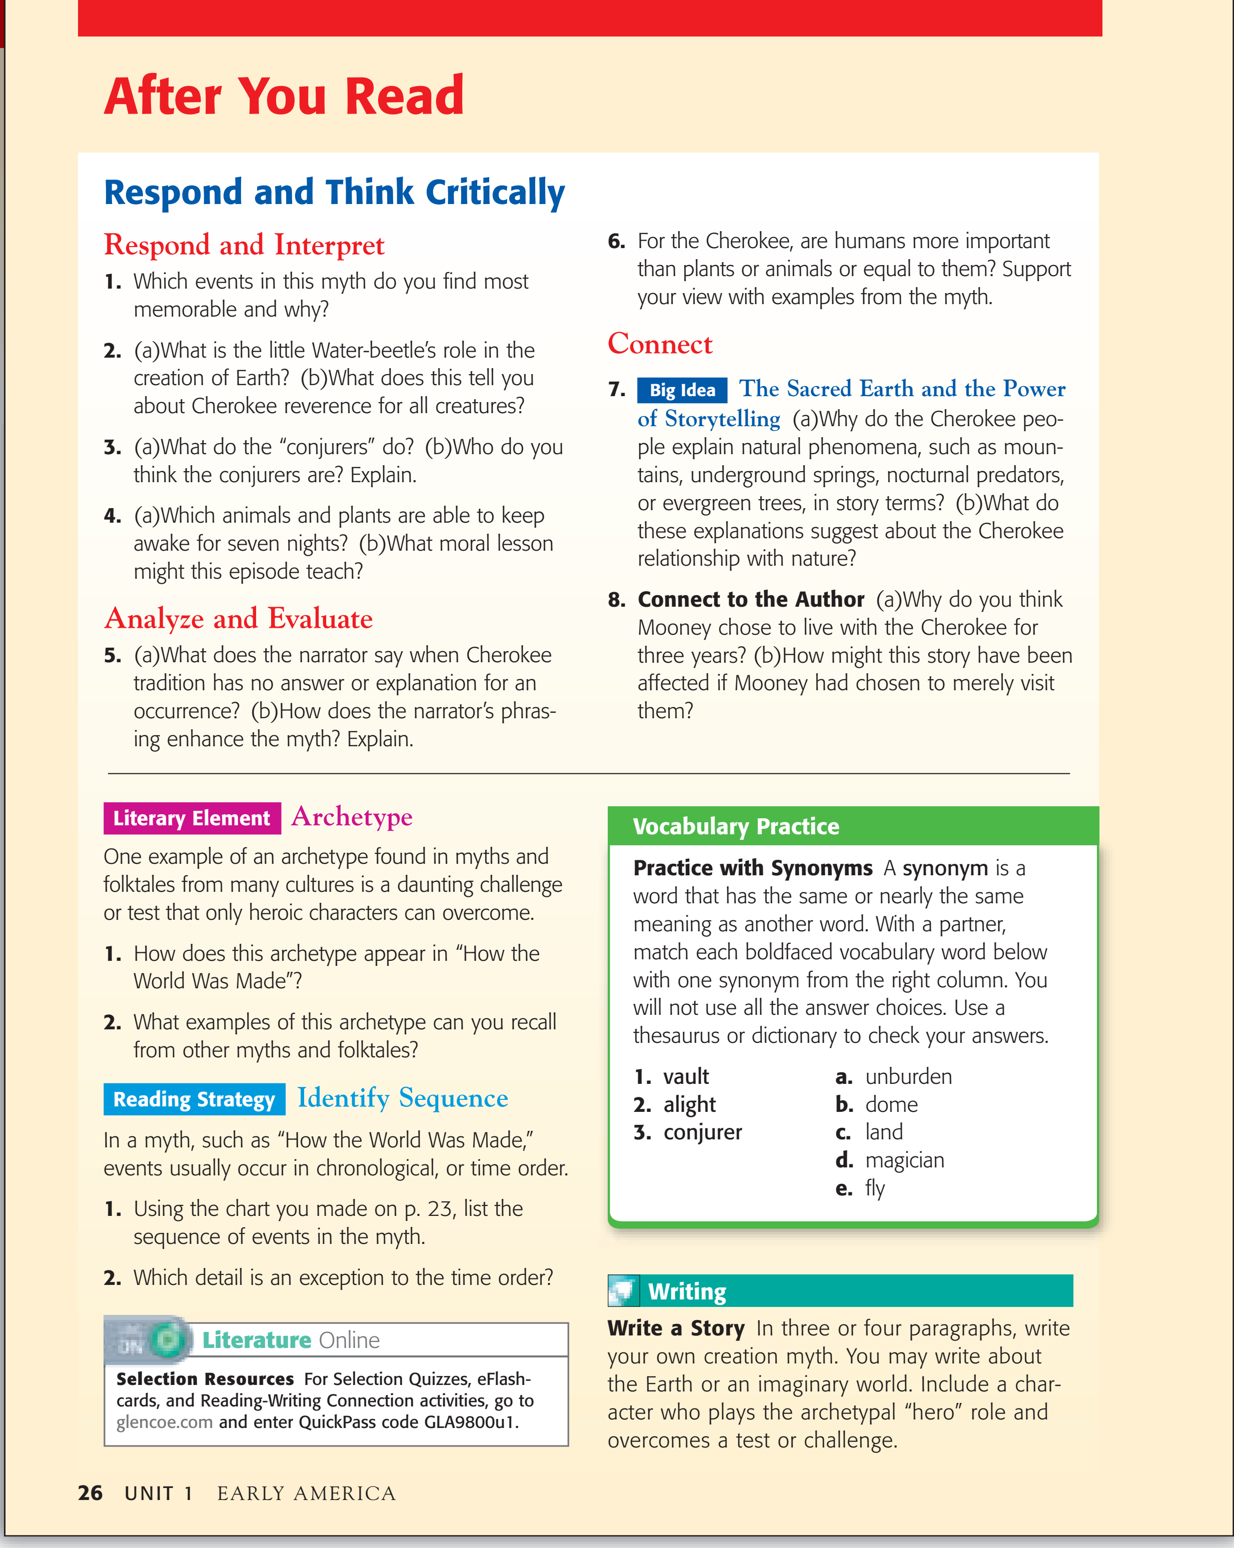
Literary Element

1. The seven-night vigil
2. Such tests as the sword in the stone from the Arthurian legend or Hercules' tasks

Progress Check

Can students identify the sequence of a story?

If No → See Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 29.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Which events in this myth do you find most memorable and why?
2. (a)What is the little Water-beetle's role in the creation of Earth? (b)What does this tell you about Cherokee reverence for all creatures?
3. (a)What do the "conjurers" do? (b)Who do you think the conjurers are? Explain.
4. (a)Which animals and plants are able to keep awake for seven nights? (b)What moral lesson might this episode teach?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)What does the narrator say when Cherokee tradition has no answer or explanation for an occurrence? (b)How does the narrator's phrasing enhance the myth? Explain.
6. For the Cherokee, are humans more important than plants or animals or equal to them? Support your view with examples from the myth.

Connect

7. Big Idea The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling (a)Why do the Cherokee people explain natural phenomena, such as mountains, underground springs, nocturnal predators, or evergreen trees, in story terms? (b)What do these explanations suggest about the Cherokee relationship with nature?
8. Connect to the Author (a)Why do you think Mooney chose to live with the Cherokee for three years? (b)How might this story have been affected if Mooney had chosen to merely visit them?

Literary Element Archetype

One example of an archetype found in myths and folktales from many cultures is a daunting challenge or test that only heroic characters can overcome.

1. How does this archetype appear in "How the World Was Made"?
2. What examples of this archetype can you recall from other myths and folktales?

Reading Strategy Identify Sequence

In a myth, such as "How the World Was Made," events usually occur in chronological, or time order.

1. Using the chart you made on p. 23, list the sequence of events in the myth.
2. Which detail is an exception to the time order?

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Synonyms A synonym is a word that has the same or nearly the same meaning as another word. With a partner, match each boldfaced vocabulary word below with one synonym from the right column. You will not use all the answer choices. Use a thesaurus or dictionary to check your answers.

1. vault
2. alight
3. conjurer

a. unburden
b. dome
c. land
d. magician
e. fly

Writing

Write a Story In three or four paragraphs, write your own creation myth. You may write about the Earth or an imaginary world. Include a character who plays the archetypal "hero" role and overcomes a test or challenge.

Reading Strategy

1. Creation of Earth, creation of mountains and valleys, placement of sun, creation and testing of animals and plants, creation of humans.
2. The description of the underworld introduces a spatial element into the overall chronological sequence.

Vocabulary

1. b 2. c 3. d

Writing

Students' creation myths should follow a clear narrative structure and use proper grammar and sentence structure.

from THE WAY TO RAINY MOUNTAIN

N. Scott Momaday

Pulitzer Prize Winner

Learning Objectives

For pages 27–32

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objective:

Literary Study: Analyzing cultural traditions.

Set a Purpose for Reading

Read to learn about the Kiowas' culture and their relationship with the land.

Build Background

In the 1700s, the Kiowa (kī´ ə wä) Indians began a long migration from southwestern Montana to the southern Great Plains. Along the way, they made contact with the Crow Indians of southeastern Montana, whose nomadic way of life greatly influenced the Kiowa. Their travels came to an end in 1868 when they were forced to settle on an Oklahoma reservation. Kiowa author N. Scott Momaday (mom´ ə dā) frequently writes about the Kiowas' rich history. In the following selection, he describes their connection to the natural world and ☆ the end of the tribe's golden age.

Reading Strategy Analyze Cultural Traditions

In the selection, Momaday presents his understanding of Kiowa culture. Examine the elements that make up the selection, such as the descriptions of the land, of Kiowa history, and of Momaday's grandmother. As you read, ask yourself, What do all of these elements, taken together, suggest about the Kiowa?

A single knoll rises out of the plain in Oklahoma, north and west of the Wichita Range. For my people, the Kiowas, it is an old landmark, and they gave it the name Rainy Mountain. The hardest weather in the world is there. Winter brings blizzards, hot tornadic winds arise in the spring, and in summer the prairie is an anvil's edge. The grass turns brittle and brown, and it cracks beneath your feet. There are green belts along the rivers and creeks, linear groves of hickory and pecan, willow and witch hazel. At a distance in July or August the steaming foliage seems almost to writhe[1] in fire. Great green and yellow grasshoppers are everywhere in the tall grass, popping up like corn to sting the flesh, and tortoises crawl about on the red earth, going nowhere in the plenty of time. Loneliness is an aspect of the land. All things in the plain are isolate;[2] there is no confusion of objects in the eye, but one hill or one tree or one man. To look upon that landscape in the early morning, with the sun at your back, is to lose the sense of proportion. Your imagination comes to life, and this, you think, is where Creation was begun.

---

[1] Writhe means "to twist as in great pain."

[2] Isolate means "solitary."

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Advanced Remind students of the definition of figurative language. Ask them to find the metaphors at the end of sentence 4 and in sentence 7 and to explain the comparisons in their own words. Have students form small groups to brainstorm a list of comparisons (similes and metaphors) that communicate the sense of summer heat. Direct them to identify which literary elements they are using. (For example: "The prairie was a sizzling griddle"= metaphor; "The leaves danced like pasta shells in boiling water" = simile.)

Focus

Summary

After his grandmother's death, the author reflects on his Kiowa roots. He physically retraces the migration of his ancestors. He describes his grandmother's traditional upbringing, noting her participation in "the last great moment" of her people, a Sun Dance in 1890 that was interrupted by U.S. soldiers. He recalls her later years and his connection to her and to his people.

Language History ☆

Native American Languages

In the last decades of the nineteenth century and early twentieth century, ethnologists (people who study different cultures) began to make accurate records of the Indian languages. They were able to write down Indian tales and songs. When phonograph recording became available, they were able to preserve the tone and emphasis of Indian oral art as well as words and phrases.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

For activities related to this selection, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 22–32.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 5.5
DRP: 61
Lexile: 1000

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Fact and Opinion Say: Momaday's memoir combines facts about the Kiowas with his opinions about his people's history. Ask students to find an example of each on this page and to explain how they know which is a fact and which is an opinion. (A fact is an event in the Kiowas' surrender or the Kiowa name of Momaday's grandmother. An opinion is the description of the Kiowa as "among the finest horsemen the world has ever known.")

Cultural History ☆

Names English-language names for Native American peoples tend to be different from the names in Native American languages. For example, the English-language name Kiowa comes from the Spanish word Caygua, which is based on kygu, the Kiowas' name for themselves in their own language. Have students research the origins of other English-language names for Native American peoples and what these people call themselves in their own languages.

I returned to Rainy Mountain in July. My grandmother had died in the spring, and I wanted to be at her grave. She had lived to be very old and at last infirm.[3] Her only living daughter was with her when she died, and I was told that in death her face was that of a child.

I like to think of her as a child. When she was born, the Kiowas were living the last great moment of their history. For more than a hundred years they had controlled the open range from the Smoky Hill River to the Red, from the headwaters of the Canadian to the fork of the Arkansas and Cimarron. In alliance with the Comanches, they had ruled the whole of the southern Plains. War was their sacred business, and they were among the finest horsemen the world has ever known. But warfare for the Kiowas was preeminently[4] a matter of disposition rather than of survival, and they never understood the grim, unrelenting advance of the U.S. Cavalry. When at last, divided and ill-provisioned, they were driven onto the Staked Plains in the cold rains of autumn, they fell into panic. In Palo Duro Canyon they abandoned their crucial stores to pillage[5] and had nothing then but their lives. In order to save themselves, they surrendered to the soldiers at Fort Sill and were imprisoned in the old stone corral that now stands as a military museum. My grandmother was spared the humiliation of those high gray walls by eight or ten years, but she must have known from birth the affliction of defeat, the dark brooding of old warriors.

Her name was Aho, and she belonged to the last culture to evolve in North America. Her forebears came down from the high country in western Montana nearly three centuries ago. They were a mountain people, a mysterious tribe of hunters whose language has never been positively classified in any major group. In the late seventeenth century they began a long migration to the south and east. It was a journey toward the dawn, and it led to a golden age. Along the way ☆ the Kiowas were befriended by the Crows, who gave them the culture and religion of the Plains. They acquired horses, and their ancient nomadic spirit was suddenly free of the ground. They acquired Tai-me,[6] the sacred Sun Dance doll, from that moment the object and symbol of their worship, and so shared in the divinity of the sun. Not least, they acquired the sense of destiny, therefore courage and pride. When they entered upon the southern Plains they had been transformed. No longer were they slaves to the simple necessity of survival; they were a lordly and dangerous society of fighters and thieves, hunters and priests of the sun. According to their origin myth, they entered the world through a hollow log. From one point of view, their migration was the fruit of an old prophecy, for indeed they emerged from a sunless world.

Although my grandmother lived out her long life in the shadow of Rainy Mountain, the immense landscape of the continental interior lay like memory in her blood. She could tell of the Crows, whom she had never seen, and of the Black Hills, where she had never been. I wanted to see in reality what she had seen more perfectly in the mind's eye, and traveled fifteen hundred miles to begin my pilgrimage.

Yellowstone, it seemed to me, was the top of the world, a region of deep lakes and dark timber, canyons and waterfalls. But, beautiful as it is, one might have the sense of confinement there. The skyline in all directions is close at hand, the high wall of the woods and deep cleavages of shade. There is a perfect freedom in the mountains, but it belongs to the eagle and the elk, the badger and the bear. The Kiowas reckoned their stature by the distance they could see, and they were bent and blind in the wilderness.

Descending eastward, the highland meadows are a stairway to the plain. In July the inland slope of the Rockies is luxuriant[7] with flax and buckwheat, stonecrop and larkspur.[8] The earth 1

---

[3] Infirm means "physically weak" or "feeble."

[4] Preeminently means "primarily."

[5] Pillage means "to loot" or "to plunder."

[6] Tai-me (tī′ mā), the Sun Dance doll, wears a robe of white feathers.

[7] Luxuriant means "marked by rich or plentiful growth."

[8] Flax is a flowering plant whose fibers are spun to make cloth. Buckwheat is a plant whose seeds are used as a cereal grain. Stonecrop is a flowering plant found on rocks and walls. Larkspur is known for its showy flower stalks.

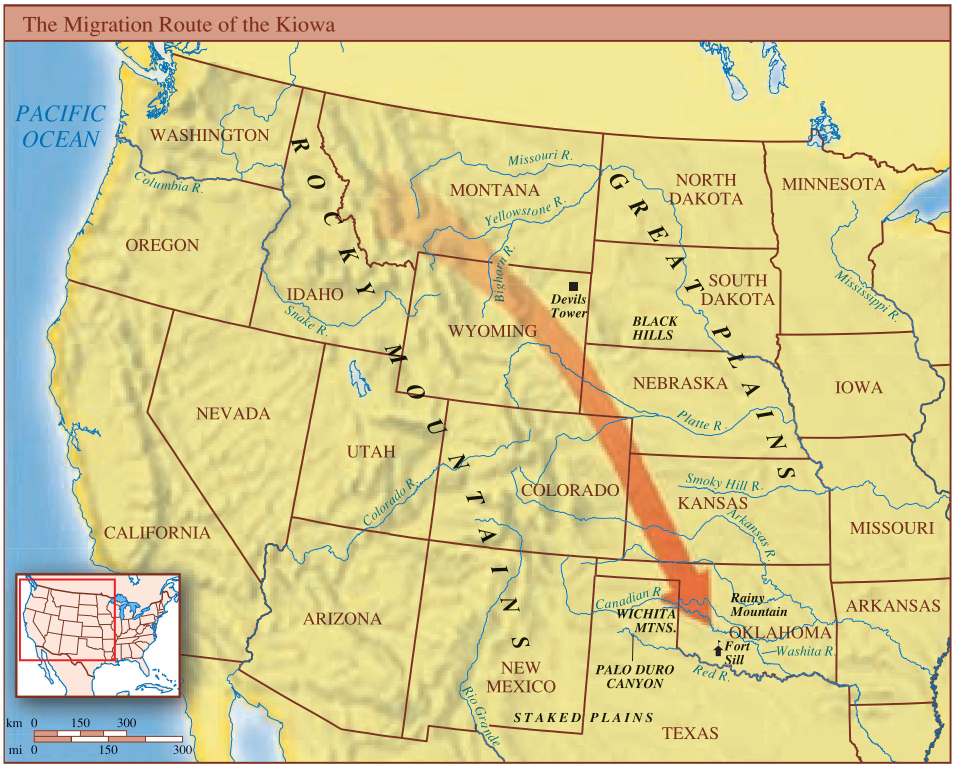
Reading Practice

Graphic Aids Direct students to the map of migration routes, and have them identify the features on the map. Ask: What features make this a political map? (state boundaries, names of states) Ask: What features make this a physical map? (mountain ranges, rivers) Explain that when two species are crossed, such as two plants, the result is a hybrid.

Ask: What makes this a hybrid map? Why was a hybrid map used for the migration routes? (It mixes features of political and physical maps. A political map shows the states through which the Kiowa traveled. A physical map shows mountains that help explain why this route was taken.)

The Migration Route of the Kiowa



PACIFIC OCEAN
WASHINGTON
Columbia R.
OREGON
IDAHO
Snake R.
NEVADA
CALIFORNIA
UTAH
ARIZONA
Colorado R.
ROCKY MOUNTAINS
MONTANA
Missouri R.
Yellowstone R.
Bighorn R.
WYOMING
Devils Tower
COLORADO
NEW MEXICO
Rio Grande
NORTH DAKOTA
SOUTH DAKOTA
BLACK HILLS
GREAT PLAINS
NEBRASKA
Platte R.
Smoky Hill R.
KANSAS
Arkansas R.
Canadian R.
WICHITA MTNS.
Rainy Mountain
OKLAHOMA
Fort Sill
Washita R.
Red R.
PALO DURO CANYON
STAKED PLAINS
TEXAS
MINNESOTA
Mississippi R.
IOWA
MISSOURI
ARKANSAS km 0 150 300
mi 0 150 300

View the Map The Kiowa gradually migrated south and east over some 200 years. Why do you think it was so important for N. Scott Momaday to physically retrace his ancestors' long journey? ★ unfolds and the limit of the land recedes. Clusters of trees, and animals grazing far in the distance, cause the vision to reach away and wonder to build upon the mind. The sun follows a longer 2 course in the day, and the sky is immense beyond all comparison. The great billowing clouds that sail upon it are shadows that move upon the grain like water, dividing light. Farther down, in the land of the Crows and Blackfeet, the plain is yellow. Sweet clover takes hold of the hills and bends upon itself to cover and seal the soil. There the Kiowas paused on their way; they had come to the place where they must change their lives. The sun is at home on the plains. Precisely there does it have the certain character of a god. When the Kiowas came to the land of the Crows, they could see the dark lees[9] of the hills at dawn across the Bighorn River, the profusion of light on the grain shelves, the oldest deity ranging after the solstices.[10] Not yet would they veer southward to the caldron of the land that lay below; they must wean their blood[11] from the northern winter and hold the mountains a while longer in their view. They bore Tai-me in procession to the east.

A dark mist lay over the Black Hills, and the land was like iron. At the top of a ridge I caught sight of Devils Tower[12] upthrust against the gray sky as if in the birth of time the core

---

[9] Lees are the sides of hills that are away from the wind.

[10] Solstices: In the Northern Hemisphere, the summer and winter solstices are the longest and shortest days of the year.

[11] Wean their blood means "to become acclimated by removing themselves gradually."

[12] Devils Tower, an 865-foot-high column of volcanic rock in Wyoming, became a national monument in 1906.

Cultural Perspective

on Rainy Mountain

Teach

Big Idea 2

The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling Have students find instances on these pages of the importance of the sun to the Kiowa culture. (Examples might include the Sun Dance, the Sun Dance doll, mention of the Kiowas' sharing "in the divinity of the sun.") Ask: Why might the sun be so important to people who live on the Plains? (Students might note that the sun is important for growing crops and giving warmth.)

View the Map ★

Answer: Students' answers may vary. Some may say that physically retracing his ancestors' steps helped Momaday connect with his heritage, and therefore better understand himself and his place in the world. This may have been especially important since Momaday's grandmother—who had provided a clear link to his ancestral past—had recently died.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Separating facts from opinions is an important step in understanding a text. Have students create a graphic organizer to help them distinguish between facts and opinions.

	Quotes from the text	I know this is fact/ opinion because
Fact	A1	A2
Opinion	B1	B2

Ask students to find three examples of facts from the text and write them in A1. In A2, have students briefly explain how they determined each to be fact. Have students do the same with opinions in B1 and B2.

Established After students complete the graphic organizer, have them make a list of the key words, signals, and patterns that helped them distinguish between fact and opinion

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Compare and Contrast

Ask: How was the Sun Dance a central part of Kiowa religious beliefs? (The Kiowa revered the Sun. Tai-me was the Sun Dance doll, an object they worshipped.) Have students use Momaday's description to reconstruct what the original Sun Dance might have been like. Direct them to compare and contrast the original ritual with the 1887 and 1890 rituals. Ask: How do these events reflect what happened to the Kiowa and other Native Americans in the nineteenth century? (Native American traditions were eroded and eliminated.)

Cultural History ☆

Myth Ask: What does the myth included here explain? (It explains how the Big Dipper was formed.) Say: This myth also exemplifies the close connection between animals and people, a common theme in Native American folklore.

of the earth had broken through its crust and the motion of the world was begun. There are things in nature that engender[13] an awful quiet in the heart of man; Devils Tower is one of them. Two centuries ago, because they could not do otherwise, the Kiowas made a legend at the base of the rock. My grandmother said:

> Eight children were there at play, seven sisters and their brother. Suddenly the boy was struck dumb; he trembled and began to run upon his hands and feet. His fingers became claws, and his body was covered with fur. Directly there was a bear where the boy had been. The sisters were terrified; they ran, and the bear after them. They came to the stump of a great tree, and the tree spoke to them. It bade them climb upon it, and as they did so it began to rise into the air. The bear came to kill them, but they were just beyond its reach. It reared against the tree and scored the bark all around with its claws. The seven sisters were borne into the sky, and they became the stars of the Big Dipper.[14]

From that moment, and so long as the legend lives, the Kiowas have kinsmen in the night sky. Whatever they were in the mountains, they could be no more. However tenuous their well-being, however much they had suffered and would suffer again, they had found a way out of the wilderness.

My grandmother had a reverence for the sun, a holy regard that now is all but gone out of mankind. There was a wariness in her, and an ancient awe. She was a Christian in her later years, but she had come a long way about, and she never forgot her birthright. As a child she had been to the Sun Dances; she had taken part in those annual rites, and by them she had learned the restoration of her people in the presence of Tai-me. She was about seven when the last Kiowa Sun Dance was held in 1887 on the Washita River above Rainy Mountain Creek. The buffalo were gone. In order to consummate[15] the ancient sacrifice—to impale the head of a buffalo bull upon the medicine tree—a delegation of old men journeyed into Texas, there to beg and barter for an animal from the Goodnight herd. She was ten when the Kiowas came together for the last time as a living Sun Dance culture. They could find no buffalo; they had to hang an old hide from the sacred tree. Before the dance could begin, a company of soldiers rode out from Fort Sill under orders to disperse the tribe. Forbidden without cause the essential act of their faith, having seen the wild herds slaughtered and left to rot upon the ground, the Kiowas backed away forever from the medicine tree. That was July 20, 1890, at the great bend of the Washita. My grandmother was there. Without bitterness, and for as long as she lived, she bore a vision of deicide.[16]

Now that I can have her only in memory, I see my grandmother in the several postures that were peculiar to her: standing at the wood stove on a winter morning and turning meat in a great iron skillet; sitting at the south window, bent above her beadwork, and afterwards, when her vision failed, looking down for a long time into the fold of her hands; going out upon a cane, very slowly as she did when the weight of age came upon her; praying. I remember her most often at prayer. She made long, rambling prayers out of suffering and hope, having seen many things. I was never sure that I had the right to hear, so exclusive were they of all mere custom and company. The last time I saw her she prayed standing by the side of her bed at night, naked to the waist, the light of a kerosene lamp moving upon her dark skin. Her long, black hair, always drawn and braided in the day, lay upon her shoulders and against her breasts like a shawl. I do not speak Kiowa, and I never understood her prayers, but there was something inherently sad in the sound, some merest hesitation upon the syllables of sorrow. She began in a high and descending pitch, exhausting her breath to silence; then again and again—and always the same intensity of effort, of something that is, and is not, like urgency in the human voice.

---

[13] Engender means "to give rise to" or "to produce."

[14] The Big Dipper is part of a larger constellation called Ursa Major, the Great Bear.

[15] Consummate means "to bring to completion."

[16] Deicide is the killing of a god.

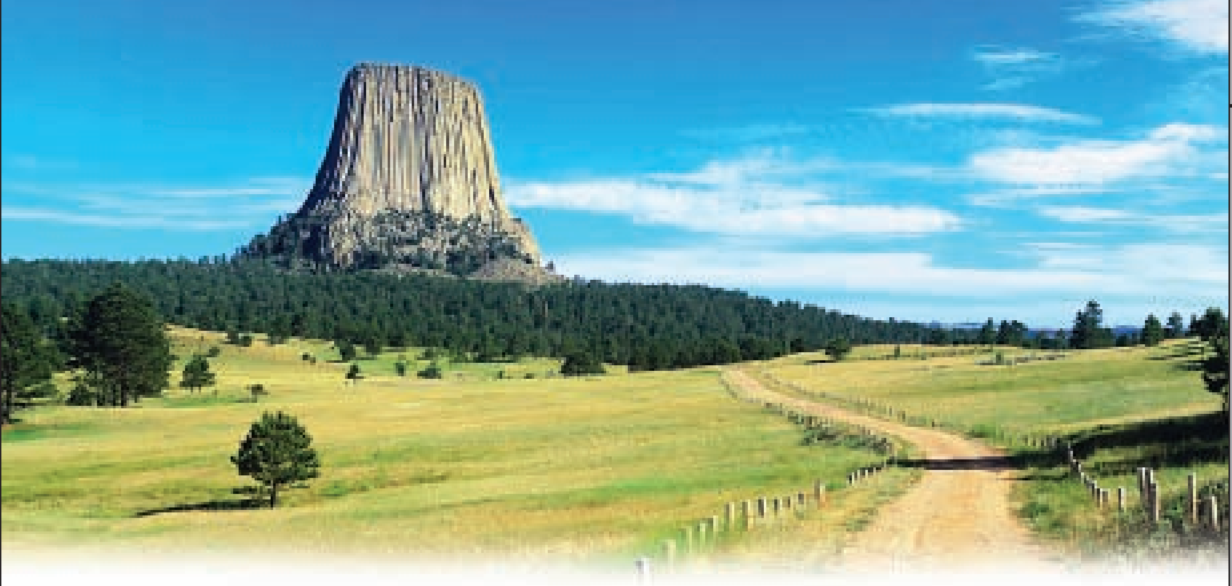
Writing Practice

Visualize Have students read descriptive passages aloud (such as the grandmother's various "postures," the house, her visitors) while listeners close their eyes and visualize the scene. Direct them to imagine concrete sensory details that appeal to different senses: sight, hearing, smell, taste, and touch. They can add details describing the characters' actions and feelings. Have them create webs for each passage, showing details derived from the text and details they added. Direct students to write a descriptive paragraph using words from their webs.



View the Art The author says on p. 30 that the Kiowa created a legend around Devils Tower "because they could not do otherwise." Looking at this photograph, what do you think Momaday meant? ★

Transported so in the dancing light among the shadows of her room, she seemed beyond the reach of time. But that was illusion; I think I knew then that I should not see her again.

Houses are like sentinels in the plain, old keepers of the weather watch. There, in a very little while, wood takes on the appearance of great age. All colors wear soon away in the wind and rain, and then the wood is burned gray and 2 the grain appears and the nails turn red with rust. The windowpanes are black and opaque;[17] you imagine there is nothing within, and indeed there are many ghosts, bones given up to the land. They stand here and there against the sky, and you approach them for a longer time than you expect. They belong in the distance; it is their domain.[18]

Once there was a lot of sound in my grandmother's house, a lot of coming and going, 3 feasting and talk. The summers there were full of excitement and reunion. The Kiowas are a summer people; they abide the cold and keep to themselves, but when the season turns and the land becomes warm and vital they cannot hold still; an old love of going returns upon them. The aged visitors who came to my grandmother's house when I was a child were made of lean and leather, and they bore themselves upright. They wore great black hats and bright ample shirts that shook in the wind. They rubbed fat upon their hair and wound their braids with strips of colored cloth. Some of them painted their faces and carried the scars of old and cherished enmities.[19] 3 They were an old council of warlords, come to remind and be reminded of who they were. Their wives and daughters served them well. The women might indulge themselves; gossip was at once the mark and compensation of their servitude. They made loud and elaborate talk among themselves, full of jest and gesture, fright and false alarm. They went abroad[20] in fringed and flowered shawls, bright beadwork and German silver.[21] They were at home in

---

[17] Opaque means "unable to let light through."

[18] A domain is "a territory over which control is exercised."

[19] Enmities means "deep-seated hatreds."

[20] Here, abroad means "away from one's home."

[21] German silver is an alloy that resembles real silver.

Teach

Big Idea 2

The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling Ask: How does this selection (1) capture the Kiowas' reverence for nature and (2) exemplify the power of storytelling? (1. The sun is central to their spiritual life. 2. The myth in the memoir; the poetic storytelling style)

Reading Strategy 3

Make Inferences Have students cite evidence from the second paragraph for inferences about gender roles in Kiowa culture and Kiowas' attitude toward intertribal wars. (Men were warriors, and women were homemakers; the men relished warfare.)

View the Art ★

Answer: Students may say that Native American people often created stories around important aspects of nature, such as animals, plants, and the landscape. Devils Tower is a very imposing rock formation in an otherwise flat terrain, which makes it a prime candidate for such a myth. It also resembles the base of a tree trunk, as mentioned in the myth.

Devils Tower was the central image in the movie Close Encounters of the Third Kind (1977).

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Intermediate Direct students to reread the passages that focus on the grandmother. Have them plan a short talk to describe her and her role in the memoir. Ask them to develop a sentence about each of the following topics:

- Her connection to her people's past
- Her knowledge of Kiowa legends and customs
- Her participation in Kiowa rituals and prayers
- Her role in the Kiowa community

Working with a partner or a small group, have students listen to one another's sentences and offer suggestions for revision. Direct them to improve their fluency and develop oral delivery skills by practicing with a partner.

Teach

Reading Strategy

Analyze Cultural Traditions

Say: On this page, Momaday weaves frogs, a cricket, grasshoppers, and birds into his narrative. Ask: What memories, events, or ideas does he associate with each animal? (frogs: his childhood, when his people celebrated freely; cricket: a life that is made whole at Rainy Mountain; grasshoppers: his culture's connection to the plains; scissortail: life, perhaps his grandmother's spirit, continuing) the kitchen, and they prepared meals that were banquets.

There were frequent prayer meetings, and great nocturnal feasts. When I was a child I played with my cousins outside, where the lamplight fell upon the ground and the singing of the old people rose up around us and carried away into the darkness. There were a lot of good things to eat, a lot of laughter and surprise. And afterwards, when the quiet returned, I lay down with my grandmother and could hear the frogs away by the river and feel the motion of the air.

Now there is a funeral silence in the rooms, the endless wake of some final word. The walls have closed in upon my grandmother's house. When I returned to it in mourning, I saw for the first time in my life how small it was. It was late at night, and there was a white moon, nearly full. I sat for a long time on the stone steps by the kitchen door. From there I could see out across the land; I could see the long row of trees by the creek, the low light upon the rolling plains, and the stars of the Big Dipper. Once I looked at the moon and caught sight of a strange thing. A cricket had perched upon the handrail, only a few inches away from me. My line of vision was such that the creature filled the moon like a fossil. It had gone there, I thought, to live and die, for there, of all places, was its small definition made whole and eternal. A warm wind rose up and purled[22] like the longing within me.

Visual Vocabulary
A scissortail, a type of flycatcher, is a small gray and pink bird with a forked tail.

The next morning I awoke at dawn and went out on the dirt road to Rainy Mountain. It was already hot, and the grasshoppers began to fill the air. Still, it was early in the morning, and the birds sang out of the shadows. The long yellow grass on the mountain shone in the bright light, and a scissor-tail hied[23] above the land. There, where it ought to be, at the end of a long and legendary way, was my grandmother's grave. Here and there on the dark stones were ancestral names. Looking back once, I saw the mountain and came away.

---

[22] Purled means "rippled with a murmuring sound."
[23] Hied means "went quickly."

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Write a brief summary of the main ideas in this excerpt before you answer the following questions. For help on writing a summary, see page 79.
2. How did you react to the description of the end of the Kiowas' old way of life?
3. (a)What is the importance of Rainy Mountain? (b)Why, do you think, does Momaday feel that Rainy Mountain is "where Creation was begun"?
4. (a)What Kiowa traditional beliefs were part of the grandmother's life? (b)What do you learn about the Kiowa people from the way that they respond to the end of their traditional lifestyle?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)Explain why Momaday considers his grandmother a living embodiment of Kiowa history. (b)Did you find this description convincing? Why or why not?
6. Momaday watches a cricket that he says came to Rainy Mountain to die, "for there, of all places, was its small definition made whole and eternal." He also describes his grandmother's grave. Which of these works best for you as a symbol? Explain.

Connect

7. Momaday once said, "I don't see any validity in the separation of man and landscape." He has also called human alienation from nature "one of the great afflictions of our time." How are these ideas embodied in the selection?

Assess

1. Student summaries should describe the migration of the ancestors, his grandmother's upbringing, the Sun Dance, and the author's reflections on his grandmother and his connection to her and to his people.
2. Students may be shocked or saddened.
3. (a) It is a special landmark for the Kiowas. (b) Students may say it is the starkness or beauty of the landscape; or that Momaday is writing metaphorically about the creation of his tribal history.
4. (a) She told Kiowa legends, revered the sun, and had been to the Sun Dance. (b) They are stoic and resilient survivors.
5. (a) She knew Kiowas who were forced onto the reservation. She spoke the Kiowa language, prayed in the old way, and retained the old beliefs. (b) Students must support their answers with textual evidence.
6. Students must support their answers with textual evidence.
7. He expresses these ideas through descriptions of the Kiowa attachment to the landscape and worship of the sun. Momaday describes people who remain close to nature.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 61–62.

Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

Learning Objectives

For pages 34–46

In studying these texts, you will focus on the following objective:

Literary Study: Comparing cultural context.

Compare Literature About the Power of Storytelling

Oral cultures use storytelling to pass on ancient traditions. The three literary works compared here—a Huron myth, a West African folktale, and a Native American poem—reflect this tradition of storytelling in different ways.

The Sky Tree by the Eastern Woodland Huron .... myth 34

How the Leopard Got His Claws
by Chinua Achebe and John Iroaganachi............................ myth 38
WEST AFRICA, 1972

Prayer to the Pacific by Leslie Marmon Silko ....poem 44

COMPARE THE Big Idea The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling

Storytellers played a vital role in oral cultures. They preserved ancient myths and traditions and made them live for new generations. As you read, ask yourself, How do these selections reveal the power of storytelling?

COMPARE Mythic Elements

A myth is a traditional story that explains a belief, a custom, or a force of nature. Certain mythic elements, such as creation or journeys, are used by storytellers in many different cultures. As you read, ask yourself, What elements of myths are found in these selections?

COMPARE Cultures

The writers featured here each reflect their times and places, as well as transmit the heritage and belief systems of their cultures. As you read, ask yourself, What does each selection suggest about its culture of origin?

Literature Online

Author Search For more about the Eastern Woodland Huron, Chinua Achebe and John Iroaganachi, and Leslie Marmon Silko, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

Focus

Bellringer Options

Literature Launchers:
Pre-Reading Videos DVD, Selection Launcher

Selection Focus
Transparency 2

Daily Language Practice
Transparency 4

Or draw attention to the text under the head Compare Cultures. Have students brainstorm a list of images and writings they would include in a time capsule to reflect their time, place, customs, and beliefs. Ask: Why do you feel these images and writings are important in our culture? (Students may identify the theme or topic of each work and explain how it offers insight into contemporary life.)

Selection Skills

Comparing Literature

Literary Elements
- Oral Tradition (SE pp. 34, 37)
- Characterization (TE p. 38)
- Archetypes (TE p. 39)
- Personification (TE p. 42)
- Sensory Details (TE p. 44)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE pp. 35, 40, 42; TE p. 45)
- Repetition (TE p. 40)

Vocabulary Skills
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 37)
- Antonyms (TE p. 43)

Reading Skills
- Question (SE pp. 34, 36, 37)
- Author's Purpose (TE p. 39)
- Critical Thinking (TE p. 41)
- Review (TE p. 46)

Study Skills/Research/Assessment
- Notetaking (TE p. 42)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a Dialogue (SE p. 37)
- Quickwrite (SE p. 43)
- Write an Essay (SE p. 46)
- Write a Report (TE p. 34)
- Punctuate Dialogue (TE p. 36)

Focus

Connect

Ask: What have you learned about Cherokee and Kiowa traditions and beliefs? (Students may draw on the previous selections, including the myth about the Big Dipper.) How do you think these selections may be similar or different from those you have just read? (Answers will vary.)

Literary History ☆

The World Tree In the Norse creation myth, there is a huge ash tree, called the World Tree (Yggdrasil), which supports the nine worlds of the Norse cosmos. Its roots and branches spread throughout all the worlds.

Summary

To save her sick husband, Aataentsic dives out of Sky Land toward the water below. The animals build a mud island on Turtle's back, where she lands and where the tree takes root.

Interactive Read and Write

Other options for teaching this selection can be found in

- Interactive Read and Write for EL Students, pp. 1–16
- Interactive Read and Write for Approaching-Level Students, pp. 1–16
- Interactive Read and Write for On-Level Students, pp. 1–16

Before You Read

The Sky Tree

Meet the Huron

The Huron people believed that Earth was an island resting on the back of the Great Turtle that swam in the primal waters. So their name for themselves, Wendat, in their own language means "islanders." The name Huron, meaning "boar's head" or "rough hair," was given to them by the French explorers with whom they traded furs. In the 1600s, the Huron were members of a confederacy of tribes living northeast of the Great Lakes in what is now southern Canada. Even before the French arrived, the Huron were great traders. In the mid-1600s, their long conflict with the Iroquois nations (see page 47) reached a climax when the Iroquois seized control of the fur trade and forced the Huron to flee their homelands.

Connect to the Myth

What would you risk to save the person you love most? Discuss this question with a partner.

Build Background

☆ "The Sky Tree" is an example of a type of creation story known as an earth-diver myth. In this type of myth a being dives into the primal waters to retrieve mud. This mud is spread on the back of the Great Turtle, eventually growing to form an island that becomes Earth.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling

As you read "The Sky Tree," ask yourself, What beliefs about people's relationship with the natural world does this myth reveal?

Literary Element Oral Tradition

Oral tradition is literature that passes by word of mouth from one generation to the next. As you read "The Sky Tree," ask yourself, Why did the Huron create and preserve this story?

Reading Strategy Question

Questioning is asking yourself at regular intervals whether you have understood what you have read.

Tip: Take Notes As you read "The Sky Tree," write down questions that puzzle you in the left-hand column of a double-entry journal. See the example below.

Question	Answer
What is the meaning of Aataentsic's act in cutting down the Sky Tree?

Writing Practice

SMALL GROUP

Research Mythology Have students work in small groups to investigate one of the stories involving trees in different mythologies. Suggest the following topics:

- The World Tree in Norse mythology
- The oak tree in European mythologies
- Druid worship of trees
- Trees in Mesoamerican mythologies (Mayan, Aztec, etc.)

Direct students to use a minimum of three sources, including library books and online articles. Instruct them to identify their sources in their reports. Ask each group to share the report with the class.

The Sky Tree

Huron—Eastern Woodland
Retold by Joseph Bruchac

In the beginning, Earth was covered with water. In Sky Land, there were people living as they do now on Earth. In the middle of that land was the great Sky Tree. All of the food which the people in that Sky Land ate came from the great tree. The old chief of that land lived with his wife, whose name was Aataentsic,[1] meaning "Ancient Woman," in their longhouse[2] near the great tree. It came to be that the old chief became sick and nothing could cure him. He grew weaker and weaker until it seemed he would die. Then a dream came to him and he called Aataentsic to him.

"I have dreamed," he said, "and in my dream I saw how I can be healed. I must be given the fruit which grows at the very top of Sky Tree. You must cut it down and bring that fruit to me."

Aataentsic took her husband's stone ax and went to the great tree. As soon as she struck it, it split in half and toppled over. As it fell a hole opened in Sky Land and the tree fell through the hole. Aataentsic returned to the place where the old chief waited.

"My husband," she said, "when I cut the tree it split in half and then fell through a great hole. Without the tree, there can be no life. I must follow it."

Then, leaving her husband she went back to the hole in Sky Land and threw herself after the great tree.

As Aataentsic fell, Turtle looked up and saw her. Immediately Turtle called together all the water animals and told them what she had seen.

"What should be done?" Turtle said.

Beaver answered her. "You are the one who saw this happen. Tell us what to do."

"All of you must dive down," Turtle said. "Bring up soil from the bottom, and place it on my back."

Immediately all of the water animals began to dive down and bring up soil. Beaver, Mink, Muskrat, and Otter each brought up pawfuls of wet soil and placed the soil on the Turtle's back until they had made an island of great size. When they were through, Aataentsic settled down gently on the new Earth and the pieces of the great tree fell beside her and took root.

1 Question Why is the old chief's dream important to the story?

The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling How does this part of the story reflect a Native American attitude toward the natural world? 2

---

[1] Aataentsic was the Earth-mother in Huron mythology. The Huron believed themselves to be the children of Aataentsic.

[2] A longhouse was a bark-covered Native American communal dwelling that could have space for multiple families as well as rooms for tribal ceremonies.

Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Question

Answer: The dream inspires the actions that led to Earth's creation. If the old chief had not told his dream, his wife may never have cut down the Sky Tree.

Ask volunteers to share any questions they noted in their journals. As a group, attempt to resolve them.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 41.

Big Idea 2

The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling

Answer: Animals are responsible for the creation of the world and thus deserve respect.

Ask: How does this myth reflect the Huron beliefs about the roles of husbands and wives? (The Hurons pay tribute here to a devoted wife.)

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 3.6
DRP: 48
Lexile: 740

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Have students transform the narrative into a class play. Ask students to identify the number of required speakers. (narrator, old chief, chief's wife, Turtle, Beaver) Have them identify the characters without speaking parts. (Mink, Muskrat, Otter) Direct them to consider the actions and gestures that will be required and how the tree will be represented in the play. Cast the play with volunteers, if possible. After students have worked out the details, give them opportunity to learn their parts and to rehearse. Then have them present their dramatization.

View the Art ★

Ernest Smith (1907–1975), a member of the Seneca tribe, spent most of his life in California. He painted Sky Woman while working for the Works Progress Administration during the Great Depression.

Ask: Why did the artist choose this moment in the story to depict in his painting? (The artist may have chosen this scene because it is the climactic moment when Aataentsic sacrifices herself so that there can be life. This event causes Turtle and the other animals to create Earth.)

Sky Woman, 1936. Ernest Smith. Oil on canvas, 24¼ x 18⅛ in. Rochester Museum & Science Center, Rochester, NY.

Grammar Practice

SMALL GROUP SPIRAL REVIEW

Punctuate Dialogue

Have students look at the dialogue in the selection. Ask: What do you notice about the way dialogue is punctuated? (indentation, commas inside quotation marks, no capitalization after interruption) Point out to students that when writing dialogue they should keep the following rules in mind:

- Capitalize the first word in dialogue.
- Do not capitalize the first word after interruption in the dialogue.
- Enclose end punctuation within quotation marks.
- Indent each new line of dialogue.

Example:

"Why are you so late?" asked Jay's mother.

"I came home earlier," he explained, "but you were not here."

Have students work together in small groups to create dialogue in which they demonstrate each of these rules. Write their dialogue on the board to demonstrate the rules.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Would you describe Aataentsic's actions as heroic? Why or why not?
2. (a)What is the Sky Tree? (b)Why is it important to the people in Sky Land?
3. (a)Why does Aataentsic cut down the Sky Tree? (b)What does this action reveal about her relationship with her husband?
4. (a)Which animal observes Aataentsic's fall? (b)What role does this animal assume?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)What is the function of the old chief's dream in "The Sky Tree"? (b)What does this myth suggest about the importance that Native Americans attribute to knowledge gained from dreams?
6. (a)What motivates Aataentsic to follow the Sky Tree into the hole? (b)How do you view her actions?

Connect

7. Big Idea The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling What does the role of the water animals in the creation of Earth suggest about Native American attitudes toward other living creatures?
8. Connect to Today How does the role of animals in our culture compare with the role depicted in this myth?

Literary Element Oral Tradition

Oral tradition is a way of recording the past, glorifying leaders, and teaching moral values.

1. Why do you think the Huron preserved and perpetuated a myth such as "The Sky Tree"?
2. How might this myth have been used by the Huron to teach a moral lesson?

Reading Strategy Question

Review the questions that you wrote in your double-entry journal (see page 34) and try to answer them now.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Academic Vocabulary

Storytelling serves an important function in Native American culture.

Function is an academic word that can have different meanings in different subject areas. Using context clues, try to figure out the meaning of function in each sentence below.

1. The function of the heart is to pump blood.
2. The virus deleted some functions, without which the application can't work.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Writing

Write a Dialogue Imagine that this story continues and Aataentsic returns to the Sky Land to cure her husband. What would they say to each other? Write a short dialogue between these two characters, keeping in mind the values represented in this story and how the characters might express them.

After You Read

Assess

1. Some may say she was heroic to try to save her husband's life. Others may question her wisdom in cutting down the only source of food in Sky Land.
2. (a) A great tree in the middle of Sky Land (b) It is the source of food.
3. (a) In an attempt to save her husband's life (b) She would do anything to save his life.
4. (a) Turtle (b) He assumes leadership of the animals.
5. (a) It prompts Aataentsic to cut down the Tree. (b) Native Americans value knowledge from dreams.
6. (a) She tries to protect life. (b) As heroic because she risks harm to protect life
7. Native Americans attach great importance to other living creatures.
8. Students may say that animals were wise and treated as equals in the myth. Today people feel they are superior to all animals.

Progress Check

Do students understand oral tradition?

If No → See Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 40.

Literary Element

1. They may have wanted to preserve their religious beliefs, to celebrate their ancestor Aataentsic, and to offer an example of unselfish devotion and courage.
2. They might have taught the danger of hasty actions, the value of sacrifice, and the importance of working together for a common goal.

Reading Strategy

Questions and answers should relate to key details, such as the placement of the turtle and the moral lesson of the selection.

Writing

Students' dialogues should reflect an understanding of the values of the characters and events in the story and should be punctuated correctly.

Academic Vocabulary

1. In biology, an organ's function is the purpose it serves for the body.
2. In computer science, a function is a procedure within an application that performs a specific task.

Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

Focus

Summary

Wise King Leopard rules the animals, who live together in peace. One day the dog, the only animal with teeth and claws, attacks the other animals and drives out the leopard. The animals declare the dog to be their new leader. The leopard has teeth and claws made for him by a blacksmith, acquires sound from Thunder, and returns to maul the dog. The outcast dog becomes a slave of the hunter, and from then on, the animals live as enemies.

Literary History

African Proverbs Proverbs are an important part of the African oral tradition. Like folktales, proverbs express some wisdom about human experience. Chinua Achebe frequently uses proverbs in his writing. Some African proverbs resemble familiar American sayings. The African proverb "You do not teach the paths of the forest to an old gorilla" has its counterpart in the American saying "You can't teach an old dog new tricks."

Build Background

West African writer Chinua Achebe's myth is an adaptation of a children's story by teacher and writer John Iroaganachi. Achebe's version is full of dark undertones that suggest an allegorical link to the British colonial era and the Nigerian Civil War, which lasted from 1967 to1970. Various military regimes, representing hostile ethnic groups, have periodically seized power in Nigeria since it declared its independence from Britain in 1960.

How the Leopard Got His Claws

Retold by Chinua Achebe and John Iroaganachi

> If you look at the world in terms of storytelling, you have, first of all, the man who agitates, the man who drums up the people—I call him the drummer. Then you have the warrior, who goes forward and fights. But you also have the storyteller who recounts the event, and this is the one who survives, who outlives all the others. It is the storyteller who makes us what we are, who creates history. The storyteller creates the memory that the survivors must have; otherwise, their surviving would have no meaning.
>
> —Chinua Achebe

In the beginning . . . all the animals in the forest lived as friends. Their king was the leopard. He was strong, but gentle and wise. He ruled the animals well, and they all liked him.

At that time the animals did not fight one another. Most of them had no sharp teeth or claws. They did not need them. Even King Leopard had only small teeth. He had no claws at all.

Only the dog had big, sharp teeth. The other animals said he was ugly, and they laughed at him.

"It is foolish to carry sharp things in the mouth," said the tortoise.

"I think so, too," said the goat.

The monkey jumped in and began to tease the dog.

"Don't worry, my dear friend," said the monkey. "You need your teeth to clear your farm."

The animals laughed at the monkey's joke.

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Characterization Explain that in African myths and folktales, the chief characters are animals. Some characters, such as Anansi the Spider and Tortoise, are popular and appear in many stories. The animals behave like human beings but retain their animal natures. Have students choose one of the following characters: leopard, dog, goat, tortoise. Direct them to take notes on their characters while reading the story. Tell them to focus on the character's attitudes and behavior toward the other animals.

Ask: What human characteristics do these animals possess? (examples: humor, fear, wisdom, anger, cowardice) Have students indicate whether their character's attitude changes during the course of the story.

When the farming season came round, King Leopard led the animals to their farmland. They all worked hard to prepare their plots. At the end of the day they returned home tired. They sat on log benches in the village square. As they rested they told stories and drank palm wine.[1]

But soon it would be the rainy season, and the animals would have no shelter from the rain.

The deer took this problem to King Leopard. They talked about it for a long time. King Leopard decided to call the animals together to discuss it.

One bright morning . . . King Leopard beat his royal drum. When the animals heard the drum, they gathered at the village square. The tortoise was there. The goat was there, too. The sheep, the grass-cutter,[2] the monkey, the hedgehog,[3] the baboon, the dog and many others were there.

King Leopard greeted them and said, "I have called you together to plan how we can make ourselves a common shelter."

"This is a good idea," said the giraffe.

"Yes, a very good idea," said many other animals.

"But why do we need a common house?" said the dog. He had never liked King Leopard.

1 "The dog has asked a good question," said the duck. "Why do we need a common shelter?"

"We do need somewhere to rest when we return from our farms," replied King Leopard.

"And besides," said the goat, "we need a shelter from the rain."

"I don't mind being wet," said the duck. "In fact, I like it. I know that the goat does not like water on his body. Let him go and build a shelter."

"We need a shelter," said the monkey, jumping up and down in excitement.

"Perhaps we need one, perhaps we don't," said the lazy baboon sitting on the low fence of the square.

1 The dog spoke again. "We are wasting our time. Those who need a shelter should build it. I live in a cave, and it is enough for me." Then he walked away. The duck followed him out.

"Does anyone else want to leave?" asked King Leopard. No one answered or made a move to go.

"Very well," said King Leopard. "Let the rest of us build the village hall."

The animals soon scattered about to find building materials. The tortoise copied the pattern on his back and made the plan of the roof. The giant rat and mouse dug the foundations. Some animals brought sticks, some ropes, others made roof-mats.

As they built the house, they sang many happy songs. They also told many jokes. Although they worked very hard, everyone was merry.

After many weeks they finished the building.

It was a fine building. The animals were pleased with it. They agreed to open it with a very special meeting.

On the opening day the animals, their wives and children gathered in the hall. King Leopard then made a short speech. He said: "This hall is yours to enjoy. You worked very hard together to build it. I am proud of you."

The animals clapped their hands and gave three cheers to their king.

From that day they rested in their new hall whenever they returned from their farm.

But the dog and the duck kept away from the hall.

One morning the animals went to their farms as usual. King Leopard went to visit a chief in another village.

At first the sun was shining. Then strong winds began to blow. Dark clouds hid the sun.

---

[1] Palm wine is created from the sap of a palm tree.

[2] The grass-cutter is a type of rodent.

[3] A hedgehog is a small, hairy mammal; some varieties have quills.

Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

Teach

Literary Element 1

Archetypes Have students recall what an archetype is. (It is a symbol, character, or story pattern found in many cultures. Refer students to p. 23 or Literary Handbook, p. R2.) Say: Identify the hero and villain that Achebe presents as this tale opens. Provide support for your choices. (Students should agree that the wise and gentle King Leopard is the hero, while the disagreeable dog is the villain.)

Reading Strategy

Author's Purpose

Ask: What purposes might an author have for writing a piece of literature? (An author may write to inform, describe, entertain, or persuade.)

Point out that this selection is as much a fable—a brief story with a moral message—as it is a myth. The author wants to entertain but also to persuade readers that one form of governing is admirable, while another is contemptible.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Established To help students further distinguish between each character, plan a choral reading of the story with different students assigned to read the dialogue of each character and a narrator to read the descriptive paragraphs. Encourage students reading character parts to create a distinct voice fitting the personality of the animal. Assign a small group of students to read the songs on the following pages with rhythm and percussive accompaniment. Allow students time to practice and rehearse before the full class reading of the selection.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 3.2
DRP: 46
Lexile: 540

Teach

Big Idea 1

The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling In West Africa, the storytelling tradition is kept alive by storytellers called griots (grē-ōz′). Originally, such people were the keepers of history as well as entertainers, traveling about and telling or singing their stories. Today, they usually are entertainers who may record their performances on CDs and give live performances on television or on the radio.

Say: There is a close connection between storytelling and music in West African culture. Ask: How does Achebe capture this in his retelling? (He includes highly rhythmic songs.)

View the Art ★

Answer: While there is a baboon in the story, the fierce facial expression of the sculpture also might bring the dog to mind.

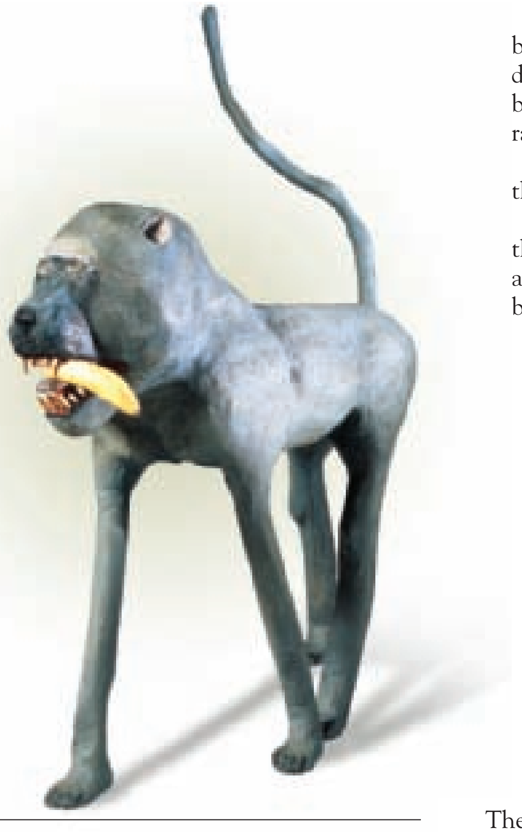
The first rain was coming. The songbirds stopped their singing. The humming insects became quiet. Lightning flashed across the dark clouds. Claps of thunder sounded. The rain poured and poured.

The animals in their farms saw the rain coming and began to hurry to the village hall.

The dog also saw the rain coming and returned to his cave. But it was a very, very heavy rain. Water began to enter the cave. Soon it was flooded.



Baboon, 1978. Felipe Benito Archuleta. Carved and painted cottonwood and pine with glue and sawdust. Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC.

View the Art Felipe Benito Archuleta often carves animals with fierce teeth and snouts to accentuate their ferocity. Does this baboon resemble any of the animals in the story? Explain. ★

The dog ran from one end of his cave to the other. But the water followed him everywhere. At last he ran out of the cave altogether and made straight for the hall of the animals.

The deer was already there. He was surprised to see the dog enter the hall.

"What do you want here?" said the deer to the dog.

"It is none of your business," replied the dog.

"It is my business," said the deer. "Please go out, this hall is for those who built it."

Then the dog attacked the deer and bit him with his big, sharp teeth. The deer cried with pain. The dog seized him by the neck and threw him out into the rain.

The other animals came in one after the other.

The dog barked and threw each of them out. They stood together shivering and crying in the rain. The dog kept barking and showing his teeth.

Then the deer cried out:

O Leopard our noble king,
Where are you?
Spotted king of the forest,
Where are you?
Even if you are far away
Come, hurry home:
The worst has happened to us
The worst has happened to us . . .
The house the animals built
The cruel dog keeps us from it,
The common shelter we built
The cruel dog keeps us from it,
The worst has happened to us
The worst has happened to us . . . 1

The cry of the deer rang out loud and clear. It was carried by the wind. King Leopard heard it on his way back from his journey and began to run toward the village hall.

As he got near, he saw the animals, wet and sheltering under a tree. They were all crying.

Listening and Speaking Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Repetition Have students search for examples of repetition in the selection. ("Nobody has a right.") Ask: What effect does repetition have on the reader? (Students might respond that it adds to the storytelling quality or emphasizes key points.) Point out that repetition is an effective device often used in speeches.

Say: Write and deliver a brief speech for one of the characters using repetition. For example, write a speech the leopard might give when the animals seek him out or that the animals might give to persuade him to return.

As he got nearer still, he could see the dog walking up and down inside the hall.

King Leopard was very angry. "Come out of the hall at once," he said to the dog. The dog barked and rushed at him. They began to fight. The dog bit the leopard and tore his skin with his claws. King Leopard was covered with blood. The dog went back to the hall. He stood at the door barking and barking. "Who is next? Who! Who!" he barked.

King Leopard turned to the animals and said: "Let us go in together and drive out the enemy. He is strong, but he is alone. We are many. Together we can drive him out of our house."

But the goat said: "We cannot face him. Look at his strong teeth! He will only tear us to pieces!"

"The goat is right," said the animals. "He is too strong for us."

The tortoise stood up and said: "I am sure we are all sorry about what has happened to the leopard. But he was foolish to talk to the dog the way he did. It is foolish to annoy such a powerful person as the dog. Let us make peace with him. I don't know what you others think. But I think he should have been our king all along. He is strong; he is handsome. Let us go on our knees and salute him."

"Look at his strong teeth! He will only tear us to pieces!"

"Hear! Hear!" said all the animals. "Hail the dog!"

Tears began to roll down the face of the leopard. His heart was heavy. He loved the animals greatly. But they had turned their backs on him. Now he knew they were cowards. So he turned his back on them and went away. Because of his many wounds he was weak and tired. So he lay down after a while to rest under a tree, far from the village.

The animals saw him go. But they did not care. They were too busy praising their new king, the dog. The tortoise carved a new staff for him. The toad made a new song in his praise:

The dog is great
The dog is good
The dog gives us our daily food.
We love his head, we love his jaws
We love his feet and all his claws.

The dog looked round the circle of animals and asked, "Where is the leopard?"

"We think he has gone away, O King," said the goat.

"Why? He has no right to go away," said the dog. "Nobody has a right to leave our village and its beautiful hall. We must all stay together."

"Indeed," shouted the animals. "We must stay together! The leopard must return to the village! Our wise king has spoken! It is good to have a wise king!"

2 The dog then called out the names of six strong animals and said to them: "Go at once and bring back the leopard. If he should refuse to follow you, you must drag him along. If we let him go, others may soon follow his wicked example until there is no one left in our village. That would be a very bad thing indeed. It is my duty as your king to make sure that we all live together. The leopard is a wicked animal. That is why he wants to go away and live by himself. It is our duty to stop him. Nobody has a right to go away from our village and our beautiful hall."

"Nobody has a right to go away from the village," sang all the animals as the six messengers went to look for the leopard.

They found him resting under the tree beyond the village. Although he was wounded and weak he still looked like a king. So the six

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Critical Thinking

Ask: Which of the dog's statements contradicts something he said on page 39, when the animals were discussing building a shelter? (Earlier the dog had objected to the animals' living in a common shelter. Now he says that the animals must all live together.)

Ask: What does this contradiction add to your knowledge of the dog's character? (The dog will shift his principles to suit his purposes.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Students may have trouble with the words leopard and tortoise because the vowel pairs in each have atypical sound associations. Reinforce the more common associations for the vowel pairs eo and oi (for example, people, geography, choice) as you note the proper pronunciation for these words and have students repeat them.

Intermediate Ask students to recall the events of the story before King Leopard hears the cry of the deer. Direct them to list the major events of the story to this point and to compare their lists with those of other students. Have them present a summary of events orally, in detailed sentences that distinguish the characteristics of the animals.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Personification Say: One form of personification gives human traits to animals. Find examples of personification on pages 42–43. (animals talking, living in a village they have built, throwing stones, dancing, or beating a drum)

View the Art ★

Answer: The leopard is viewed by many cultures as a symbol of power. Using such a strong symbol to honor one's ancestors might have been a declaration of their power, a sign of respect for one's ancestors, or an expression of the family's dominance.

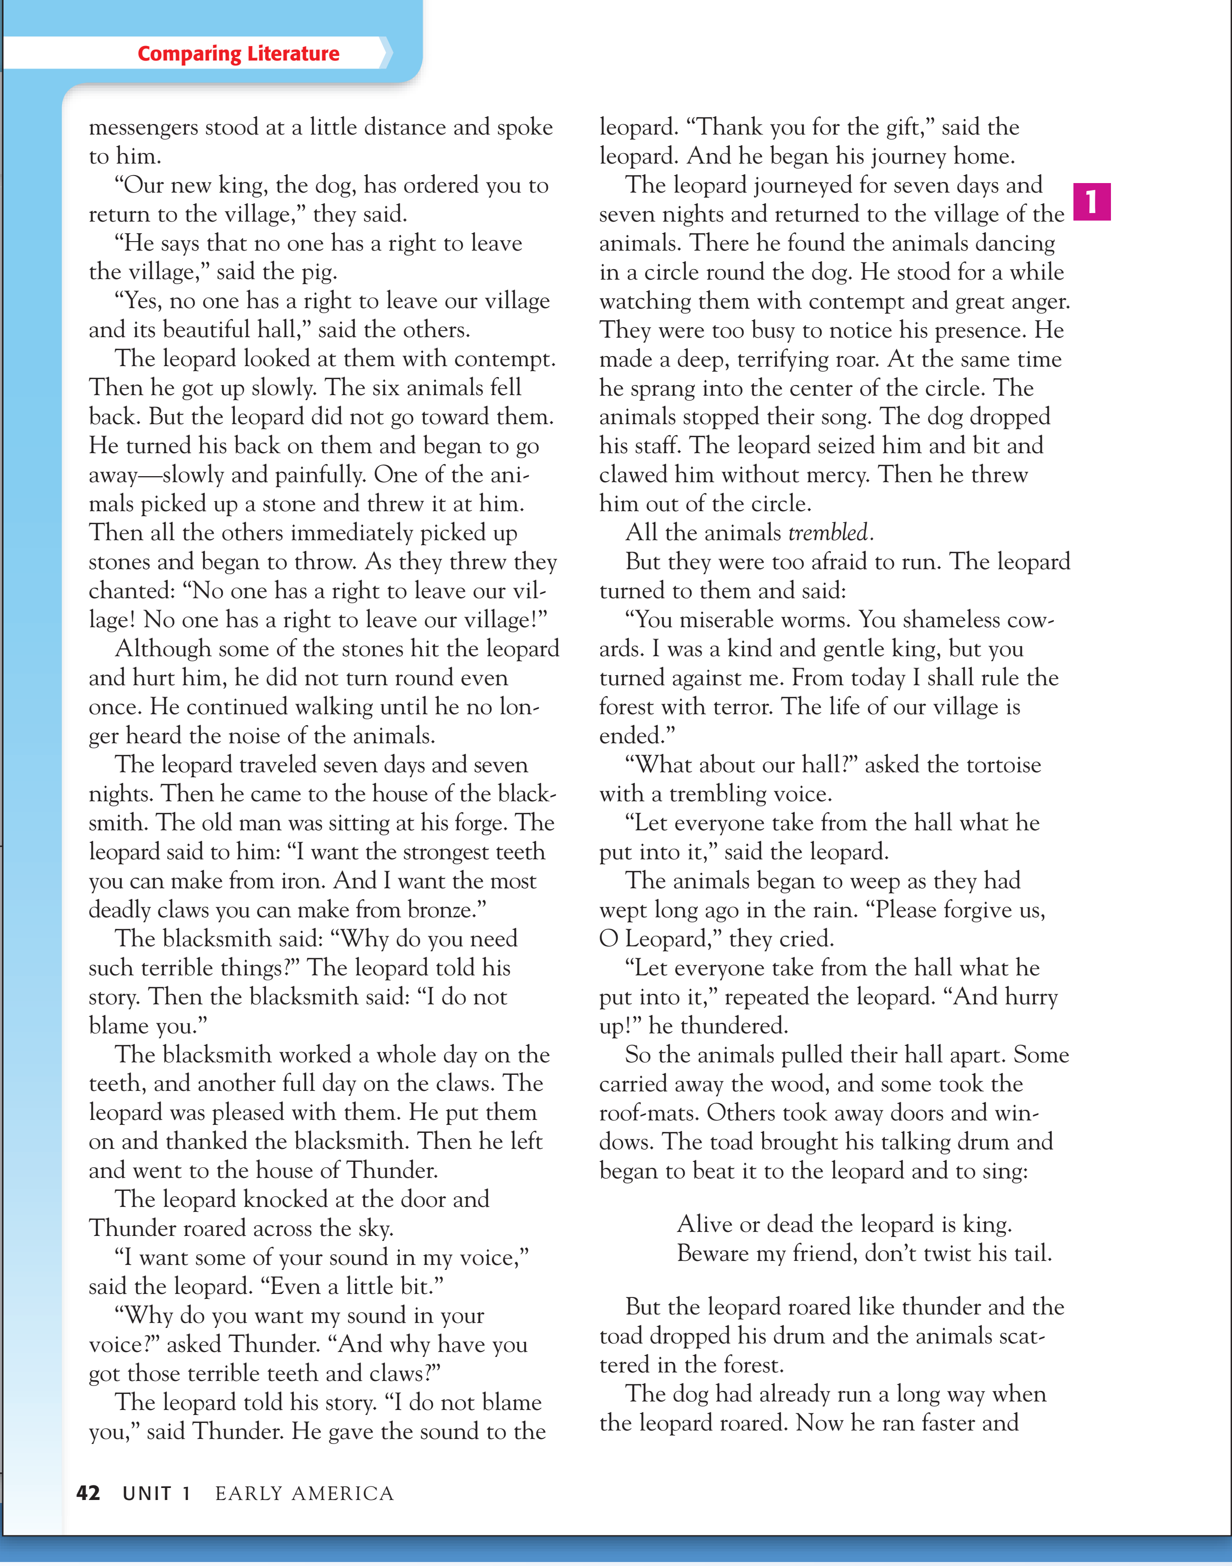
This brass water jug was made by a West African craftworker in the 1700s. Aquamaniles, common to the religious traditions of several continents, were used for the washing of hands during rituals.



messengers stood at a little distance and spoke to him.

"Our new king, the dog, has ordered you to return to the village," they said.

"He says that no one has a right to leave the village," said the pig.

"Yes, no one has a right to leave our village and its beautiful hall," said the others.

The leopard looked at them with contempt. Then he got up slowly. The six animals fell back. But the leopard did not go toward them. He turned his back on them and began to go away—slowly and painfully. One of the animals picked up a stone and threw it at him. Then all the others immediately picked up stones and began to throw. As they threw they chanted: "No one has a right to leave our village! No one has a right to leave our village!"

Although some of the stones hit the leopard and hurt him, he did not turn round even once. He continued walking until he no longer heard the noise of the animals.

The leopard traveled seven days and seven nights. Then he came to the house of the blacksmith. The old man was sitting at his forge. The leopard said to him: "I want the strongest teeth you can make from iron. And I want the most deadly claws you can make from bronze."

The blacksmith said: "Why do you need such terrible things?" The leopard told his story. Then the blacksmith said: "I do not blame you."

The blacksmith worked a whole day on the teeth, and another full day on the claws. The leopard was pleased with them. He put them on and thanked the blacksmith. Then he left and went to the house of Thunder.

The leopard knocked at the door and Thunder roared across the sky.

"I want some of your sound in my voice," said the leopard. "Even a little bit."

"Why do you want my sound in your voice?" asked Thunder. "And why have you got those terrible teeth and claws?"

The leopard told his story. "I do not blame you," said Thunder. He gave the sound to the leopard. "Thank you for the gift," said the leopard. And he began his journey home.

1 The leopard journeyed for seven days and seven nights and returned to the village of the animals. There he found the animals dancing in a circle round the dog. He stood for a while watching them with contempt and great anger. They were too busy to notice his presence. He made a deep, terrifying roar. At the same time he sprang into the center of the circle. The animals stopped their song. The dog dropped his staff. The leopard seized him and bit and clawed him without mercy. Then he threw him out of the circle.

All the animals trembled.

But they were too afraid to run. The leopard turned to them and said:

"You miserable worms. You shameless cowards. I was a kind and gentle king, but you turned against me. From today I shall rule the forest with terror. The life of our village is ended."

"What about our hall?" asked the tortoise with a trembling voice.

"Let everyone take from the hall what he put into it," said the leopard.

The animals began to weep as they had wept long ago in the rain. "Please forgive us, O Leopard," they cried.

"Let everyone take from the hall what he put into it," repeated the leopard. "And hurry up!" he thundered.

So the animals pulled their hall apart. Some carried away the wood, and some took the roof-mats. Others took away doors and windows. The toad brought his talking drum and began to beat it to the leopard and to sing:

> Alive or dead the leopard is king.
> Beware my friend, don't twist his tail.

But the leopard roared like thunder and the toad dropped his drum and the animals scattered in the forest.

The dog had already run a long way when the leopard roared. Now he ran faster and

Study Skills Practice

Note-taking To help students keep track of the many characters in the story, have them create a graphic organizer to distinguish between each character. Assist students in selecting dialogue from each character that reveals something about its personality. In the second row, ask students to draw conclusions about each character based on what the character says and other clues from the story.

Character:	Dog	Leopard	Goat	Thunder
What character says:
What I think about character:

Aquamanile (Water Jug) in the Shape of a Leopard, Benin. British Museum, London.

View the Art This leopard-shaped vessel was used by Nigerian kings to honor their ancestors during a hand washing ceremony. From what you read in this story, why do you think the symbol of the leopard was chosen for this task? ★ faster. His body was covered with blood, and he was very, very weak. He wanted to stop and rest a little. But the fear of the leopard was greater than his weakness. So he staggered and fell and got up and staggered on and on and on. . . .

After many days the dog came to the house of the hunter.

"Please protect me from the leopard," he cried.

"What will you do for me in return?" asked the hunter.

"I will be your slave," said the dog. "Any day you are hungry for meat I shall show you the way to the forest. There we can hunt together and kill my fellow animals."

"All right, come in," said the hunter.

Today the animals are no longer friends, but enemies. The strong among them attack and kill the weak. The leopard, full of anger, eats up anyone he can lay his hands on. The hunter, led by the dog, goes to the forest from time to time and shoots any animals he can find. Perhaps the animals will make peace among themselves someday and live together again. Then they can keep away the hunter who is their common enemy. 2

Quickwrite

The animal leaders in Achebe's myth use violence to seize and wield power. What lessons do you think Achebe suggests through his depiction of the animals and their encounters with the hunter? Write a paragraph explaining your views.

Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

Teach

Vocabulary 2

Antonyms Say: Find antonym pairs in the final paragraph in the story. (Students should note friends/enemies; strong/weak.) Then scan pages 42 and 43 for words you can use to generate an antonym. (Examples include, with story word listed first, contempt/respect, terrifying/calming, kind/cruel, gentle/rough, weep/laugh, and slave/master.)

Quickwrite

Answer: Students may say that Achebe's myth shows that violence breeds more violence and hostility. They might also note that the relationship between the dog and the hunter hurts the animal kingdom.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Prepare students for the Quickwrite activity by brainstorming a list of ideas. Break down parts of the writing prompt and instruct students to respond to each section individually. For example, the first sentence of the Quickwrite is "The animal leaders in Achebe's myth use violence to seize and wield power." Have students list examples of violence and power in the story before having them freewrite.

Next, read the question, "What lessons do you think Achebe suggests through his depiction of animales and their encounters with the hunter?" Discuss and clarify the question and have students list ideas and reactions before freewriting. Finally, ask students to review their writing from the first sentence and the question and draft a paragraph that combines their responses.

Focus

Summary

The speaker reverently and gratefully addresses the Pacific Ocean as the giver of rain, based on the Native American belief that Indians came from China, riding across the ocean on giant turtles.

View the Art ★

Julie Lankford Olds (1962–) is a member of the Native American tribe known as the Miami. In her paintings, she illustrates important Native American beliefs, such as the close ties between people and nature.

Ask: What part of the poem does the art illustrate? (Lines 18–19: "Indians came riding across the ocean / carried by giant sea turtles.")

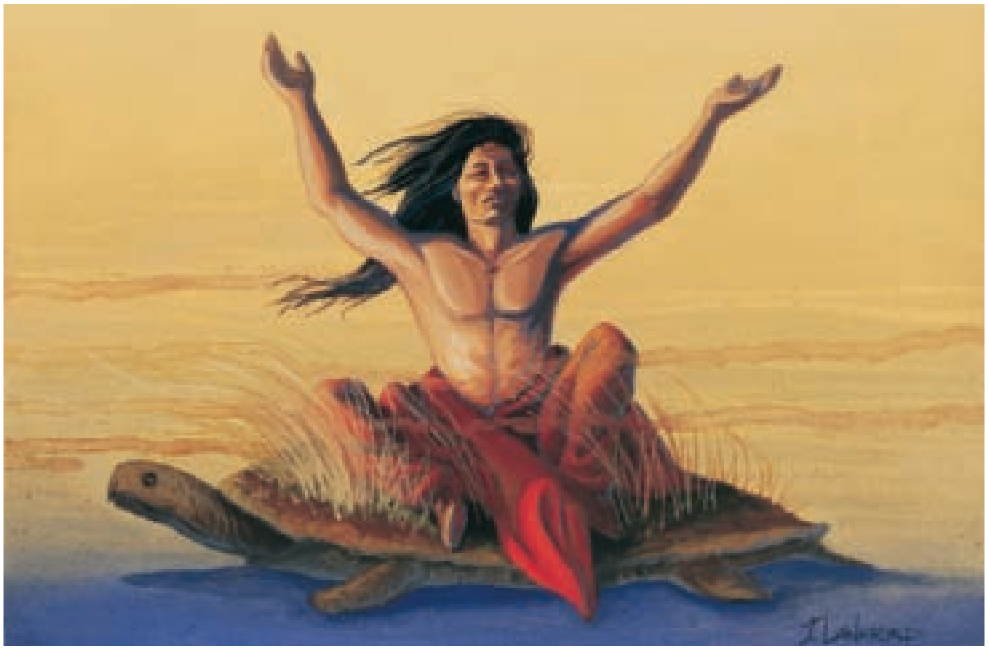
Build Background

Leslie Marmon Silko grew up hearing traditional Native American stories and myths at the Laguna Pueblo Reservation near Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Silko's poem uses myth to draw a comparison between the west-to-east movement of rain clouds and the migration of early peoples to America. Historians have theorized that tens of thousands of years ago these migrants arrived in America from Asia. They most likely traveled across a land bridge where the Bering Strait now separates Asia and North America.

Prayer to the Pacific

Leslie Marmon Silko



Our Life on His Back, 1993. Julie Lankford Olds. Oil on canvas, 12 x 16 in. Historic Prophetstown, Battleground, IN. ★

Reading Practice

Sensory Details Say: Poetry is often filled with images that appeal to the reader's senses of sight, sound, smell, taste, and touch. Find details in this selection that appeal to your senses. Create a chart that notes these details. Ask: Which three senses are well-represented? (sight, touch, and taste) Have students brainstorm possible smells and sounds that the poet might have included.

Prayer to the Pacific
Sight
Taste
Touch

I traveled to the ocean distant from my southwest land of sandrock to the moving blue water
Big as the myth of origin.

Pale pale water in the yellow-white light of sun   floating west to China
where ocean herself was born.
Clouds that blow across the sand are wet.

Squat in the wet sand and speak to the Ocean:
I return to you   turquoise   the red coral you sent us, sister spirit of Earth.
Four round stones in my pocket   I carry back the ocean to suck and to taste.

Thirty thousand years ago
Indians came riding across the ocean carried by giant sea turtles.
Waves were high that day great sea turtles waded   slowly out from the gray sundown sea.
Grandfather Turtle rolled in the sand   four times and disappeared
swimming into the sun.

And so   from that time immemorial,[1]
as the old people say, rain clouds drift from the west
gift from the ocean.

Green leaves in the wind
Wet earth on my feet swallowing raindrops clear from China.

---

[1] Immemorial means "extending back beyond memory or record."

Discussion Starter

What attitude toward nature does the speaker's explanation of the origin of rain illustrate? Use specific details from the poem to support your opinions.

Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

Teach

Discussion Starter

Answer: Students may point out that the speaker observes the ocean flowing west and rain clouds moving east, as her ancestors did. They might relate this cyclical movement to the importance that Native Americans place on the seasons.

Cultural History ☆

Turtle as Trickster In some Native American tales, Turtle is a trickster figure with a reputation for deception and trickery. In one story, Terrapin the Turtle enters a race with Rabbit. He gets his family of turtles to impersonate him and appear at points along the route. Thus he fools Rabbit into thinking he is in the lead.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Have students paraphrase the poem. Direct them to include details such as the Indians' origins and mode of travel, the time of the poem's events, Grandfather Turtle's actions, and the source of the rains. Have them write an opening sentence that identifies the poem by title and author and states the poet's purpose.

Beginning Review word parts: prefix, suffix, and root. Have students break down the word immemorial (line 27) into prefix (im-) + root (memor) + suffix (-al). Ask: How does the spelling of memory change when the suffix is added? (The letter y changes to i.) Explain that the Latin root memor means "mindful." Have students brainstorm other words with this root, such as commemorate, memorable, memorandum.

Assess

Writing Activity

Students' essays should be well-organized and should use supporting evidence from the text. The essays should also reflect an understanding of oral tradition and the function of creation myths.

Group Activity

1. The Huron myth tells how land emerged from water; Achebe's tale explains relationships among animals; Silko's poem tells why clouds move from west to east.
2. The Huron tale is a traditional "earth-diver myth"; Achebe's tale retells a West African folktale; Silko's poem comes from the Pueblo culture.
3. It reveals that the story is mythic and may have a moral lesson or explain the origin of human life.
4. Student responses should connect their life experiences to the myths.

Speaking and Listening

Evaluate student performances using the following criteria:

- Does a student's performance show a grasp of the culture represented?
- Does the story feature elements of creation myths?
- How well does the student use techniques of public speaking, such as eye contact, facial expressions, and clear pronunciation?

Wrap-Up: Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

- The Sky Tree by the Eastern Woodland Huron
- How the Leopard Got His Claws by Chinua Achebe and John Iroaganachi
- Prayer to the Pacific by Leslie Marmon Silko

COMPARE THE Big Idea The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling

Writing Activity In what ways do these selections reveal the power of storytelling and reflect the tradition of the creation myth in oral cultures? Write a brief essay in which you answer this question. State your thesis in an introductory paragraph, cite evidence from the selections in the body paragraphs, and reinforce your thesis in the concluding paragraph.

COMPARE Mythic Elements

Group Activity Personification, supernatural occurrences, and stories about the origin of the universe are features of myths in a variety of cultures. The Huron myth, Achebe's myth, and Silko's poem use these elements for a variety of purposes. In a small group, discuss the following questions. Cite evidence from the selections to support your points.

1. How does each writer describe different aspects of the origin of the universe?
2. What is the importance of the writer's cultural background in each of these selections?
3. How does personification of animals contribute to each selection?
4. What insight about life offered by the writer do you find most compelling?

COMPARE Cultures

Speaking and Listening Before the writers in various cultures recorded their stories in books, storytellers recounted tales orally. Research one of the cultures represented by the selections: Huron (also called Wyandot), Nigerian, or Pueblo. Compare and contrast the belief systems of these cultures. Then compose a mythic story that describes the origin of some aspect of life. If possible, tell your story to the class.

Reading Practice

Review Remind students that the oral tradition is discussed in the Unit Introduction on page 12. Creation myths are discussed in the Literary Periods section, pages 20–21. Have students review these pages. Then ask students to reread the quote from Chinua Achebe on page 38. Ask: Why are storytellers powerful? (Students should offer a variety of reasons: they can create or alter history; they can dramatize an event and influence their audience; they pass traditions from one generation to the next; they explain natural phenomena; they have "the last word.")

Before You Read

from The Iroquois Constitution

☆ Meet Dekanawida

(1550–1600)

When Iroquois tribes in present-day New York State were torn apart by fighting, one man stepped in to instill peace. Dekanawida (dək uhn ä wē´ dä) believed from an early age that he was predestined to unite the Iroquois nation. "It is my business to stop the shedding of blood among human beings," he said.

Traditional accounts of his life vary. He was thought to be a Huron born around 1550 near what is now Kingston, Ontario. In one account, Dekanawida was the son of a virgin mother who, in the months leading up to his birth, observed omens that told he would be a source of evil and destruction for the Huron. To save her tribe, Dekanawida's mother tried three times to drown her infant son in an icy river, but to her disbelief, woke up each following morning with the child in her arms. His mother interpreted this as a sign that he was fated to live and began to rear the boy.

> "The Word I bring is that all peoples shall love one another and live together in peace."
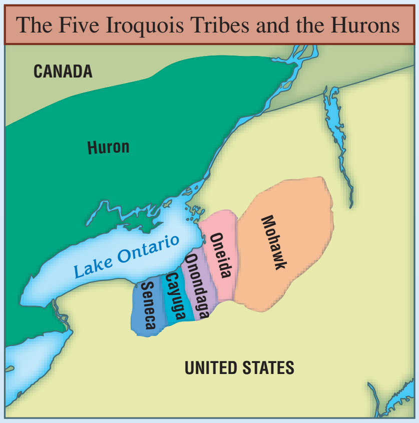
>
> —Dekanawida

A Quest for Peace As a young man, Dekanawida trekked southward on a spiritual quest to perform his destined work. He forged a strong friendship with Hiawatha, an Onandaga tribal leader. Both men agreed that continual warring was making the tribes vulnerable to outside attack. Legend has it that Dekanawida was the laconic mastermind of the Iroquois Constitution. Because Dekanawida may have had a speech impediment, Hiawatha, a charismatic leader and great orator, was his spokesman and interlocutor. Dekanawida was highly esteemed by the Iroquois. In fact, he was the first "pine tree chief," or chief chosen on the basis of merit rather than heredity.

In 1570, the two leaders established an alliance among the five nations of the Iroquois—the Seneca, Cayuga, Oneida, Onondaga, and Mohawk. Dekanawida created the alliance's constitution, which established rules for decision making and debate. Around 1600, after he had completed his work, he mysteriously vanished. But thanks to the peaceful government he had helped create, the confederacy was able to resist outside pressures for almost two hundred years.



The Five Iroquois Tribes and the Hurons

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Dekanawida, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus Transparency 3

Daily Language Practice Transparency 5

Or read the Preamble to the U.S. Constitution aloud. Have students restate it in their own words. (We the people of the United States have created a constitution to establish peace and freedom for ourselves and our descendants and to ensure that our government is fair, helps its citizens live a decent life, and guarantees them basic rights.) Have students think of the U.S. Constitution as they read.

Literary History ☆

Culture Heroes Dekanawida and Hiawatha are Native American culture heroes. A culture hero is a leader celebrated for his or her achievements. Dekanawida and Hiawatha are associated with establishing the Iroquois Confederacy.

Skills Practice

from The Iroquois Constitution

Literary Elements
- Author's Purpose (SE pp. 48, 49, 51, 52)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (TE p. 51)

Reading Skills
- Draw Conclusions (SE pp. 48, 49, 50, 52)
- Preview (TE p. 48)
- Compare and Contrast (TE p. 50)

Vocabulary Skills
- Synonyms (SE p. 52)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a Letter (SE p. 52)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Dekanawida explains how five nations are to unite and conduct their relations on a site he determines in Onondaga territory. He establishes a council that has final authority in decision-making. The constitution details the arrangement of the matriarchal society, how leaders should conduct themselves, what festivals to observe, and what symbols represent the Confederacy.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 45–50.

Vocabulary

Recognize Parts of Speech

Point out that the word temper on the vocabulary list is a verb. Say: Name the part of speech of the word temper in the following sentence: She was afraid of losing her temper. (noun) Explain that in English a word can often perform many jobs. Direct students to write sentences illustrating temper used as a verb and as a noun.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Text

What is the best way to come to an agreement during a conflict? Freewrite for a few minutes on this topic.

Build Background

Founded around 1570, the Iroquois Confederacy brought nearly 200 years of peace and prosperity to the five Iroquois nations. Benjamin Franklin considered Dekanawida's system so effective that he urged the colonists to view it as a model.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling

As you read this selection from the Iroquois Constitution, ask yourself, How does Dekanawida's language reflect the Native Americans' reverence for the natural world?

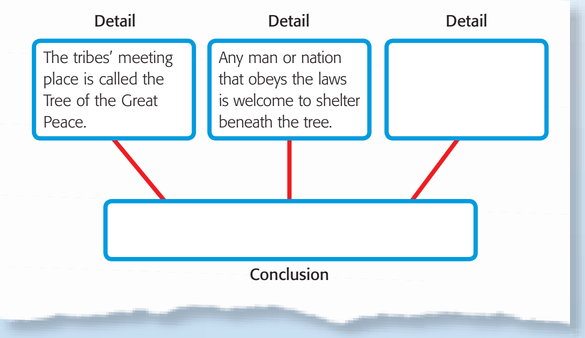
Literary Element Author's Purpose

The author's purpose is the author's intent in creating a work. As you read the Constitution, ask yourself, How do its provisions support Dekanawida's goals?

Reading Strategy Draw Conclusions About Culture

When you draw a conclusion, you use a number of pieces of information to make a general statement about people, places, events, or ideas. As you read, ask yourself, What conclusions about Iroquois society can I draw based on the values expressed in this constitution?

Tip: Conclusions Diagram Use a diagram to record details from the selection as well as your conclusions about the Iroquois.



Detail
Detail
Detail
The tribes' meeting place is called the Tree of the Great Peace.
Any man or nation that obeys the laws is welcome to shelter beneath the tree.
Conclusion

Learning Objectives

For pages 47–52

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing author's purpose.

Reading: Drawing conclusions about culture.

Writing: Writing a summary.

Vocabulary

disposition (dis′ pə zish′ ən) n. one's general way of thinking or feeling; p. 49 Julia had a cheerful disposition.

convene (kən vēn′) v. to come together; assemble; p. 50 Congress will convene to hear the president's speech tonight.

posterity (pos ter′ ə tē) n. generations of the future; all of one's descendants; p. 50 Mr. Norris requires students to create a record of their thoughts for posterity.

temper (tem′ pər) v. to modify or moderate; soften; p. 51 Alvaro tempers his anger by counting to ten.

deliberation (di lib′ ə rā′ shən) n. careful consideration; p. 51 After long deliberation, the city council voted to build a new library.

Reading Practice

SMALL GROUP

Preview Before reading the excerpt from the Iroquois Constitution, students may benefit from previewing the selection. Have students work in small groups to examine all the subheads in the selection and discuss what they think each section of the Constitution is about. Then ask students to make up questions based on the subheads, such as "What is the significance of the Tree of Great Peace?" or "What does the Tree of Great Peace look like?" Have students come up with at least one question for each subhead. Tell students to find answers to their questions when they read the selection.

from The Iroquois Constitution

Dekanawida

The Tree of the Great Peace

I am Dekanawida and with the Five Nations' Confederate Lords I plant the Tree of the Great Peace. I plant it in your territory, Adodarho,[1] and the Onondaga Nation, in the territory of you who are Firekeepers.[2]

I name the tree the Tree of the Great Long Leaves. Under the shade of this Tree of the Great Peace we spread the soft white feathery down of the globe thistle[3] as seats for you, Adodarho, and your cousin Lords.

We place you upon those seats, spread soft with the feathery down of the globe thistle, there beneath the shade of the spreading branches of the Tree of Peace. There shall you sit and watch the Council Fire of the Confederacy of the Five Nations, and all the affairs of the Five Nations shall be transacted at this place.

Roots have spread out from the Tree of the Great Peace, one to the north, one to the east, one to the south, and one to the west. The name of these roots is the Great White Roots and their nature is Peace and Strength.

If any man or any nation outside the Five Nations shall obey the laws of the Great Peace and make known their disposition to the Lords of the Confederacy, they may trace the Roots to the Tree and if their minds are clean and they are obedient and promise to obey the wishes of the Confederate Council, they shall be welcomed to take shelter beneath the Tree of the Long Leaves.

We place at the top of the Tree of the Long Leaves an Eagle who is able to see afar. If he sees in the distance any evil approaching or any danger threatening, he will at once warn the people of the Confederacy.

The Care of the Fire

The Smoke of the Confederate Council Fire shall ever ascend and pierce the sky so that other nations who may be allies may see the Council Fire of the Great Peace.

You, Adodarho, and your thirteen cousin Lords shall faithfully keep the space about the Council Fire clean and you shall allow neither dust nor dirt to accumulate. I lay a Long Wing before you as a broom. As a weapon against a crawling creature I lay a staff with you so that you may thrust it away from the Council Fire.

The Laws of the Council

Whenever the Confederate Lords shall assemble for the purpose of holding a council, the Onondaga Lords shall open it by expressing their gratitude to their cousin Lords and greeting them, and they shall make an address and offer thanks to the earth where men dwell, to the streams of

---

[1] Adodarho was an Onondaga chief who enjoyed a position of honor in the Confederate Council. His name became an honorific, or traditional title, for Iroquois leaders.

[2] Firekeepers were important chiefs who oversaw the Council Fire, which symbolized the confederacy.

[3] Globe thistle is a plant that has prickly leaves and blue flowers. Like a dandelion, the flower becomes a mass of white, silky fuzz, or down, when it goes to seed.

1 Author's Purpose Based on this statement, what do you think is Dekanawida's purpose in writing this piece?

Vocabulary

disposition (dis´ pə zish´ ən) n. one's general way of thinking or feeling

Draw Conclusions About Culture What can you conclude about the Iroquois attitude toward strangers or outsiders? 2

The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling How does the opening of a council meeting reflect the importance of storytelling in Native American culture? 3

Teach

Literary Element 1

Author's Purpose Answer: His purpose is to persuade his listeners to join with him and establish peace and a system of governing among the Five Nations.

Reading Strategy 2

Draw Conclusions

Answer: Strangers will be welcome if they are honest and willing to obey the laws.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 52.

Big Idea 3

The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling

Answer: Their meetings open with a speech followed by extensive praise of the natural world.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 8.2
DRP: 63
Lexile: 1440

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Established Divide the class into seven or fourteen groups. Assign each group one section of the selection. Have students discuss and record the main idea of the section. Then have them record at least two possible reasons that the author chose to include the section in the constitution. Have the groups present their reasons to the class.

AAVE Have approaching-level students who are users of African American Vernacular English (AAVE) read aloud a section of Dekanawida's constitution. Reading offers practice with certain sounds that may cause difficulty, such as the -th sound in words such as feathery, north, south, and beneath. Direct students to think about where they should pause, emphasize words, or use gestures.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Draw Conclusions

Ask: Based on the first full paragraph, what conclusions can you draw about the Five Nations? (Students might note, based on the groupings, that the Mohawk and Seneca, and the Oneida and Cayuga, seem more closely allied, and the Onondaga seem most powerful.)

Reading Strategy 2

Draw Conclusions

Answer: Traditionally, Native Americans believed that land did not belong to one person or group. Dekanawida states that clans will own the land. Perhaps the Iroquois fought with European settlers over land and adopted the idea of ownership to protect themselves.

Political History ☆

Firekeeper At the time of this meeting, Adodarho was chief of the Onondaga nation. As the Chief Firekeeper, he was called on to decide whether a council should meet when the Confederate Council was not officially in session.

water, the pools, the springs and the lakes, to the maize[4] and the fruits, to the medicinal herbs and trees, to the forest trees for their usefulness, to the animals that serve as food and give their pelts for clothing, to the great winds and the lesser winds, to the Thunderers, to the Sun, the mighty warrior, to the moon, to the messengers of the Creator who reveal his wishes and to the Great Creator who dwells in the heavens above, who gives all the things useful to men, and who is the source and the ruler of health and life.

1 All the business of the Five Nations' Confederate Council shall be conducted by the two combined bodies of Confederate Lords. First the question shall be passed upon by the Mohawk and Seneca Lords; then it shall be discussed and passed by the Oneida and Cayuga Lords. Their decisions shall then be referred to the Onondaga Lords (Firekeepers) for final judgment. ☆

When the Council of the Five Nation Lords shall convene, they shall appoint a speaker for the day. He shall be a Lord of either the Mohawk, Onondaga, or Seneca Nation.

No individual or foreign nation interested in a case, question, or proposition shall have any voice in the Confederate Council except to answer a question put to him or them by the speaker for the Lords.

If the conditions which shall arise at any future time call for an addition to or change of this law, the case shall be carefully considered, and if a new beam seems necessary or beneficial, the proposed change shall be voted upon and, if adopted, it shall be called, "Added to the Rafters."[5]

The Clans

Among the Five Nations and their posterity there shall be the following original clans: Great Name Bearer, Ancient Name Bearer, Great Bear, Ancient Bear, Turtle, Painted Turtle, Standing Rock, Large Plover, Little Plover, Deer, Pigeon Hawk, Eel, Ball, Opposite-Side-of-the-Hand, and Wild Potatoes. These clans, distributed through their respective Nations, shall be the sole owners and holders of the soil of the country, and in them is it vested as a birthright.

People of the Five Nations [who are] members of a certain clan shall recognize every other member of that clan, irrespective of the Nation, as relatives.

The lineal descent of the people of the Five Nations shall run in the female line. Women shall be considered the progenitors[6] of the Nation. They shall own the land and the soil. Men and women shall follow the status of the mother.

The Leaders

The Lords of the Confederacy of the Five Nations shall be mentors[7] of the people for all time. The thickness of their skin shall be seven spans—which is to say that they shall be proof against anger, offensive actions, and criticism. Their hearts shall be full of peace and good will and their minds filled with a yearning for the welfare of the people of the Confederacy. With endless patience they shall carry out their duty,

Draw Conclusions About Culture What shift in traditional attitudes toward the land is shown here and what conclusion might you draw from it? 2

---

[4] Maize is corn.

[5] The Iroquois leaders thought of their confederacy of five nations as a longhouse, a communal Iroquois dwelling with an east door, a west door, and a central fire. The terms beam and Added to the Rafters continue this comparison.

[6] Progenitors are direct ancestors or originators of an ancestral line.

[7] Mentors are wise and trusted advisers.

Vocabulary

convene (kən vēn´) v. to come together; assemble

Vocabulary

posterity (pos ter´ ə tē) n. generations of the future; all of one's descendants

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Compare and Contrast Have students compare and contrast the sections of the Iroquois constitution listed here with the U.S. Constitution and other American laws and customs. Focus comparisons by supplying topics such as the organization of government (the confederate council vs. the three branches of the U.S. government), property rights, qualifications for public office, national holidays, and national symbols. Draw attention to a major cultural difference: The Iroquois trace their lineage through the mother's line, while the American practice (drawn from European settlers) is to trace lineage through the father's line. Direct students to record their findings in a Venn Diagram.

and their firmness shall be tempered with a tenderness for their people. Neither anger nor fury shall find lodgment in their minds, and all their words and actions shall be marked by calm deliberation.

The Festivals

The rites and festivals of each Nation shall remain undisturbed and shall continue as before because they were given by the people of old times as useful and necessary for the good of men.

The recognized festivals of Thanksgiving shall be the Midwinter Thanksgiving, the Maple or Sugar Making Thanksgiving, the Raspberry Thanksgiving, the Strawberry Thanksgiving, the Corn Planting Thanksgiving, the Corn Hoeing Thanksgiving, the Little Festival of Green Corn, the Great Festival of Ripe Corn, and the complete Thanksgiving for the Harvest.

The Symbols

A large bunch of shell strings, in the making of which the Five Nations' Confederate Lords have equally contributed, shall symbolize the completeness of the union and certify the pledge of the Nations represented by the Confederate Lords of the Mohawk, the Oneida, the Onondaga, the Cayuga, and the Seneca, that all are united and formed into one body or union called the Union of the Great Law, which they have established. ☆

Five arrows shall be bound together very strong, and each arrow shall represent one nation. As the five arrows are strongly bound, this shall symbolize the complete union of the nations. Thus are the Five Nations united completely and enfolded together, united into one head, one body, and one mind. Therefore they shall labor, legislate, and council together for the interest of future generations. ★

3 Author's Purpose How does Dekanawida's lengthy description of the traits of the Lords of the Confederacy reinforce his purpose for writing the constitution?

Vocabulary

temper (tem´ pər) v. to modify or moderate; soften deliberation (di lib´ ə rā´ shən) n. careful consideration

Teach

Literary Element 3

Author's Purpose Answer: His purpose is to establish peace. The traits describe good leaders.

View the Photograph ★

Ask: What mood does the image evoke and what elements contribute to this feeling? (The scene is peaceful; the soft edges of the trees and mountains, the smooth surface of the water, and the stillness add to this mood.)

Literary History ☆

The Iroquois Constitution The Iroquois Great Law of Peace, as the constitution was known, survived through oral tradition. Its messages and teachings were written into pictographs and wampum belts, which were used as mnemonic devices. The constitution was put in writing in 1915 by Arthur C. Parker, an archaeologist and authority on American Indian culture who was also the son of a Seneca Iroquois.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 56.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Review the concept of the conditional verb tense that indicates time. Explain that the conditional tense expresses something that depends upon something else for fulfillment. It is often introduced by the words if, when, whenever, or should. Write this example from the selection on the board: "If he sees in the distance any evil approaching . . ." (p. 49). Discuss how the sentence expresses something that might happen but has not taken place. Direct students to find additional examples of conditional sentences in the selection. Have students compose their own conditional sentences and exchange their work with a partner. Students may work together to revise their sentences.

After You Read

Assess

1. Dekanawida is a great peacemaker. His plan is thorough.
2. Peace and strength
3. (a) Changes should be decided by the council. (b) He had excellent judgment.
4. Shell strings and an arrow from each nation show the unity of the tribes.
5. (a) Each tribe shares its judgment; firekeepers pass final judgment. Speakers rotate among three tribes. (b) This process promoted peace.
6. Traits: Selfless, peaceful, caring, patient; a leader needs these traits to keep the nations united.
7. The opening ceremony and the nature metaphors display reverence for nature.
8. The Iroquois traced their ancestry through the women.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 65–66.

Progress Check

Can students identify the author's purpose?

If No → See Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 51.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. What is your opinion of Dekanawida's abilities as a peacemaker? Explain.
2. What does Dekanawida say is the nature of the roots of the Tree of the Great Peace?
3. (a)Describe the rules Dekanawida includes about making changes to the law. (b)Given these rules, how would you characterize Dekanawida's skills as a planner?
4. Explain the symbols of the confederacy described on page 51. In what way, do you think, does the design of the symbols reflect Dekanawida's vision for the confederacy?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)How does the constitution divide authority among the five nations? (b)How did structuring decision making this way benefit the Iroquois?
6. What do you think were important leadership qualities in the confederacy? Explain.

Connect

7. Big Idea The Sacred Earth and the Power of Storytelling How is reverence for nature reflected in the Iroquois Constitution? Explain.
8. Connect to the Author Dekanawida gives women a great deal of power. Why might he have assigned women these roles?

Literary Element Author's Purpose

After forming your initial idea of the author's purpose, double-check your notion against the information in the piece.

1. What is Dekanawida's basic purpose in creating the Iroquois Constitution?
2. What different comparisons does he introduce to convey his ideas of peace and unity?

Reading Strategy Draw Conclusions About Culture

To draw conclusions about the Iroquois, think about how the details tell you something about Iroquois society. Review your chart on page 48 and the passage about women's roles on page 50. What conclusions do you draw about the importance of women in Iroquois society?

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Synonyms Match each vocabulary word below with its synonym on the right. You will not use all the answer choices. Check your answers in a thesaurus or dictionary.

1. disposition
2. convene
3. posterity
4. temper
5. deliberation

a. moderate
b. congregate
c. contemplation
d. journey
e. temperament
f. imprisonment
g. descendants

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Writing

Write a Letter Imagine that you were a guest at the meeting at which the Constitution was presented. Write a letter to your friends giving your evaluation of Dekanawida's proposal.

Reading Strategy

Students may conclude that women are of great importance because they own the land and determine family status.

Literary Element

1. To persuade the Iroquois to unite and stop fighting among themselves
2. He compares the confederacy to a great tree and to a bundle of five arrows bound together.

Vocabulary

1. e 2. b 3. g 4. a 5. c

Writing

Students' letters should reflect an understanding of the Iroquois Constitution and Dekanawida's purpose in writing it.

Vocabulary Workshop

Academic Vocabulary

What Is Academic Vocabulary? Words that are commonly used in academic texts such as textbooks, directions, and tests are called academic vocabulary. Learning academic vocabulary is important; it will help you read, write, and research in many academic areas. These words will also help you do well on standardized tests.

Specific and General Academic Vocabulary Some words are specific to certain disciplines, or areas of study. For example, the words iambic, denouement, and soliloquy pertain to literature. Other words, such as function, evidence, and theory, are used in many areas of study. The charts below show more examples of both kinds of words.

Discipline-Specific Academic Vocabulary

Discipline	Words
Math	hypotenuse, polynomial, pi, epicycloid
Science	hypothalamus, electrodynamics, igneous, Pleistocene
Social Studies	egalitarian, servitude, judiciary, anthropology

General Academic Vocabulary

derived	framework	procedure	aggregate
foundation	focus	domain	paradigm

Multiple-Meaning Words Many academic vocabulary words, such as foundation, have more than one meaning. The first meaning is a literal, more common definition that you may already be familiar with: "the solid slab on which a building is constructed." An example is the foundation of a house. The second definition is more academic and may be unfamiliar to you: "the assumptions or evidence underlying a theory or belief." These two definitions are related, however. The ideas that support the theory are its foundation. The chart on the following page lists additional examples of academic words with more than one meaning.

Learning Objectives

For pages 53–54

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objectives:

Vocabulary:

Understanding academic vocabulary. Using context clues to determine the meanings of words with multiple meanings.

Test-Taking Tip

These key academic vocabulary words often appear on standardized tests.

- Analyze: to systematically and critically examine all parts of an issue or event
- Classify or categorize: to put people, things, or ideas into groups based on common characteristics
- Compare: to show how things are alike
- Contrast: to show how things are different
- Describe: to present a sketch or an impression
- Discuss: to systematically write about all sides of an issue or event
- Evaluate: to make a judgment and support it with evidence
- Explain: to clarify, give reasons for, or elaborate

Academic Vocabulary

Focus

Explain to students that academic vocabulary words are useful tools for discussing or writing about material they read. Help students understand that these words are used in the process of critical thinking. Say: Determine what the word critical means in this sentence: Reading literature requires critical thinking. (characterized by careful evaluation and judgment)

Teach

Vocabulary

Multiple-Meaning Words

Some terms that are used to refer to physical things—foundation, framework—are useful when discussing concepts that are intangible. Ask: What tangible things are the words foundation and framework used to describe? (the base and skeleton of houses and other buildings) Ask: What might serve as the foundation for an essay? (a philosophy or set of political or moral beliefs)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

PARTNERS

Intermediate Explain that academic words are often multisyllabic and may seem intimidating. Remind students to break these long words into parts in order to understand them. Have each student choose a word from the General Academic Vocabulary list to look up in the dictionary. Have pairs of students work together to explain both the common and the academic definitions of the words they have chosen.

For example, domain's root means "lord" or "master." A domain is the territory over which control is exercised. When the word is used in the academic sense, a domain is a person's field or area of expertise, such as American history or physics or modern poetry. The word has additional meanings in science and math.

Teach

Vocabulary

Multiple-Meaning Words

Explain that the academic definition of a word often differs from its common meaning when used in test instructions. Ask: If a test asked you to "illustrate" how American Indians viewed animals, what would the test likely be asking for? (several examples of their interactions with animals) Ask: What is the common meaning of the word justify? (to defend or make an excuse)

Assess

Practice

1. Students should infer that casualty used figuratively means "something that is harmed or destroyed as a result of something else."
2. Students should infer that aristocracy here means "a gathering of people with superior talents."

For additional vocabulary practice, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Academic vocabulary words appearing often on standardized tests, continued.

- Illustrate: to provide examples or to show with a picture or another graphic
- Infer: to read between the lines or to use knowledge or experience to draw conclusions, make generalizations, or form predictions
- Justify: to prove or to support a position with specific facts and reasons
- Predict: to tell what will happen in the future based on an understanding of prior events and behaviors
- State: to briefly and concisely present information
- Summarize: to give a brief overview of the main points of an event or issue
- Trace: to present the steps or stages in a process or an event in sequential or chronological order

For a complete list of academic vocabulary words, see pages R89–R91.

Literature Online

Vocabulary For more vocabulary practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Academic Vocabulary with Multiple Meanings

Word	Definitions	Relationship
authority	n. person or group in charge n. person or source of information considered to be knowledgeable and accurate	Both definitions involve making final decisions illustrate	v. to create pictures of something v. to explain something by giving examples or presenting case studies	Both definitions involve showing and clarifying role	n. a part in a drama n. the responsibility or contribution of a person or thing in a particular activity	Both definitions involve acting in a way that contributes to a whole

Academic Vocabulary in This Book You will learn all three types of academic vocabulary words in this book. Words that are specific to literature and language arts will most often be introduced and explained in Literary Element and Reading Strategy features connected with specific reading selections. You will encounter more general and multiple-meaning academic vocabulary words in a feature called Academic Vocabulary that appears after many literature selections.

As you encounter academic vocabulary words in this book, you will master the words through various activities. You'll have a chance to practice these activities in the exercise below.

Practice Follow the instructions to complete each exercise.

1. The judge feared that civil rights would become a casualty of emergency security measures.

   Casualty is an academic word with more than one meaning. Speaking literally, someone might say that the terrible automobile accident didn't result in a single casualty. Using context clues, try to infer the more figurative meaning of casualty in the sentence above. Check your inference in a dictionary.

2. Thomas Jefferson called America's early political leadership a "natural aristocracy*" of talent.*

   Aristocracy is an academic word with more than one meaning. Speaking literally, someone might say that the British royal family are members of the aristocracy. Using context clues, try to infer the more figurative meaning of aristocracy as used by Jefferson in the sentence above. Check your inference in a dictionary.

Vocabulary Practice

PARTNERS Multiple Meanings Have each student choose five academic vocabulary words that have multiple meanings. Say: Write a sentence using each word. After you have written your sentences, exchange papers with a partner. Partners should add a sentence for each word, using a different meaning for each word. Work together to mark sentences that use the words with their academic meanings. (Multiple meaning words include most of the words listed on page 53 under General Academic Vocabulary and most of the words listed on pages 53 and 54 under Test-Taking Tip. Additional words students might use are narrative, character, myth, central, and action.)

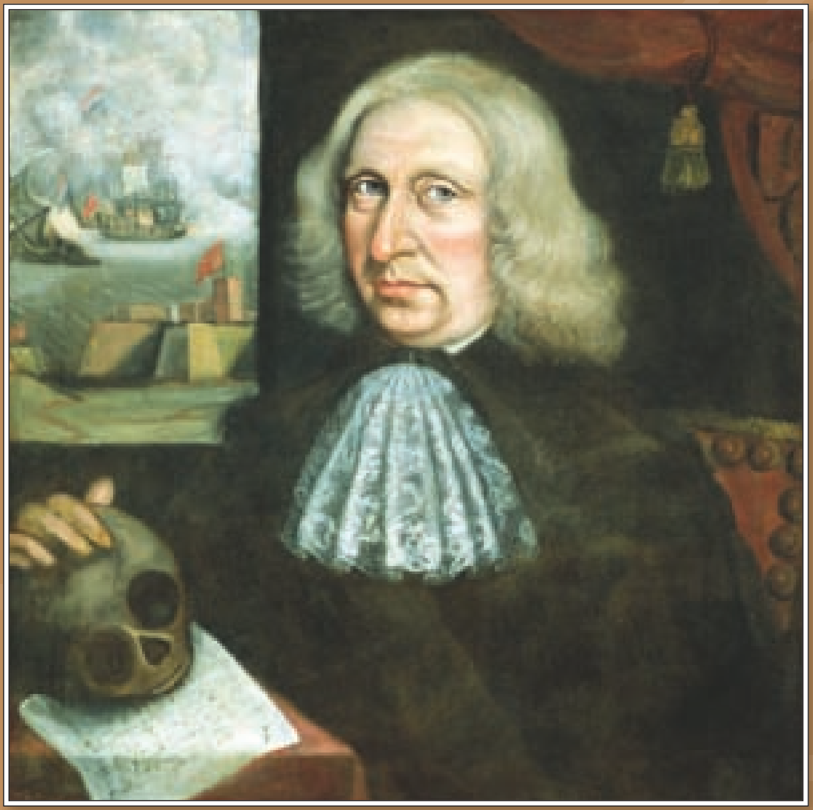
Part 2

LIFE IN THE NEW WORLD



Self-portrait, c. 1680. Thomas Smith. Oil on canvas, 24¾ x 23¾ in. Worcester Art Museum, Worcester, MA.

View the Art Smith's self-portrait includes a skull sitting on top of a poem that contrasts the sorrows of Earthly existence with the joys of eternal life. Why might the artist have included these elements? ★

> "For we must consider that we shall be as a city upon a hill. The eyes of all people are upon us." 1
>
> —John Winthrop, A Model of Christian Charity

UNIT ONE

PART 2

Analyze and Extend

Reading Strategy 1

Evaluate Direct students to read the quotation by John Winthrop. Explain that Winthrop, born in England in 1588, was a key figure in the shaping of Puritan New England. Winthrop composed his sermon "A Model of Christian Charity" in 1630, while he was sailing to the New World.

Ask: How might Winthrop's notion of a city upon a hill be a symbol of Puritan values? (The ideal Puritan community was a harmonious society that would be an example for all people.)

View the Art ★

Answer: To emphasize the shortness of life.

Thomas Smith was a naval officer, painter, and poet. The painting shows Smith's own hair rather than a wig, a sign of the Puritan preference for plainness. The skull rests on a poem that he wrote about the acceptance of mortality.

Ask: What images appear in the painting's inset? What do they reveal about Smith's life? (The naval battle and the fort may relate to his career.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Ask students to discuss the meaning of the phrase "a city upon a hill." (The colony will be highly visible to everyone and will be a model community.) Ideas can be listed on the board. Direct students to paraphrase the quotation, using complete sentences.

Established Have students infer details about Smith's character from the painting. Ask: What conclusion can you draw about Smith from his portrait? (formal, serious, dignified) Have students write a description of the painting, stating their impression of Smith.

For additional support for English Learners, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 59.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus Transparency 4

Daily Language Practice Transparency 6

Or display a world map and a map of the solar system. Point out that explorers during the Age of Discovery (roughly, the 1400s and 1500s) risked their lives to face the unknown.

Ask: What personal qualities are needed by explorers at any time in history—for example, those who explore outer space and the ocean floors today? As they read, have students consider the character traits that Cabeza de Vaca and his men must have needed to survive.

Before You Read

from La Relación

Meet Álvar Núñez Cabeza de Vaca (1490–1556)

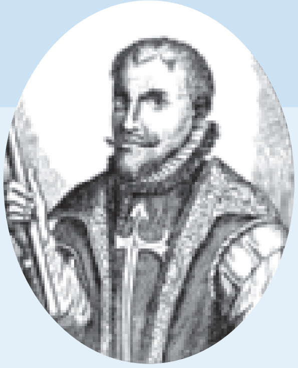
Few adventurers have faced greater odds than the Spanish explorer Álvar Núñez Cabeza de Vaca (äl´ vär no͞o´ nyez kä bā´ zä dā bä´ kä). Stranded and defenseless in the vast wilderness of the New World, he had only a slim chance of surviving. His tale of the journey, La Relación, was the first European account of the interior of what is now the United States.

In 1527, Cabeza de Vaca left Spain as a career soldier on an expedition to occupy North America and discover riches for the king. The expedition, which landed in 1528 at what is today Tampa Bay, Florida, was a disaster. Boat accidents, faulty judgment, and disease led to the deaths of many of the 600 men. The survivors developed a fruitful relationship with the Apalachee tribe, but the situation soured when the Spaniards took the tribe's leader hostage. The Spaniards ended up cowering in a coastal swamp, eating horseflesh to survive. Finally, led by Cabeza de Vaca, the explorers constructed basic rafts from horsehide and trees and set sail, praying they could reach Cuba. Wracked by starvation and thirst, the 80 men who managed to cling to the rafts were buffeted by a hurricane and deposited near present-day Galveston, Texas, on the Gulf of Mexico.

Adaptation The expedition landed in November. By the following spring, there were 15 men alive. Eventually, Cabeza de Vaca and three others were the only survivors. Cabeza de Vaca lived among the nomadic Native Americans in east Texas—the Karankawa, the Mariames, the Yguazes—for four years, adapting to their ways of life and morphing from conquistador to trader and physician in order to survive. The Native Americans were not as lucky. Many perished as a result of a stomach virus that the Spaniards unwittingly carried with them.



Trailblazer Cabeza de Vaca traveled south and west, hoping to find a Spanish outpost. He was the first European to trek through present-day Texas. He continued west through northern Mexico and then turned south, finally running into a band of Spanish slave traders in the present-day Mexican state of Sinaloa. His countrymen were flabbergasted when Cabeza de Vaca stood before them naked and filthy. Eight years had passed since he had landed in Florida—during that time, he had traveled approximately 2,500 miles, mostly on foot.

> "We were entering a land for which we had no description . . .
>
> —Álvar Núñez Cabeza de Vaca
> from La Relación

During his travels, Cabeza de Vaca proved to be a masterful ethnologist. He lived among Native Americans before they had been influenced by European culture. His writings detail the unique customs of many tribes. Unlike other early explorers, he called for tolerance and justice for Native Americans.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Álvar Núñez Cabeza de Vaca, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Selection Skills

from La Relación

Literary Element
- Point of View (SE pp. 57, 60, 61)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a Story (SE p. 61)
- Evaluate (TE p. 60)

Reading Skills
- Recognize Bias (SE pp. 57, 61; TE p. 60)
- Sequence of Events (TE p. 58)

Vocabulary Skills
- Practice with Synonyms (SE p. 61)
- Words with Many Uses (TE p. 57)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE p. 60)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Narrative

Have you ever had to rely on someone you didn't know? Write a journal entry describing such a situation, and the result. Consider what forced you to trust that person and how you felt.

Build Background

In the early 1500s, Spanish conquistadores began exploring and invading Central and South America, searching for gold and other riches. The indigenous people were baffled and frightened by the sudden appearance of the Spanish. The Spanish had weapons that ensured victory in war: horses, war dogs, guns, and cannons. As a result of Spanish occupation, indigenous societies and cultures were often decimated.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Life in the New World

As you read, ask yourself, What does this narrative imply about the Spaniards' view of their own culture in comparison with that of the indigenous people they met in the New World?

Literary Element Point of View

Point of view is the relationship of the narrator to the story. In a narrative with a first-person point of view, the narrator is a character in the story and uses the words I and me. As you read, ask yourself, How does Cabeza de Vaca's first-person point of view affect his description of people and events?

Reading Strategy Recognize Bias

Bias refers to an author's inclination toward a particular opinion or position. As you read, ask yourself, What do Cabeza de Vaca's descriptions reveal about his biases?

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart to record instances of bias and what they suggest about Cabeza de Vaca.

Quote	Bias
p. 60 "Crude and untutored people, who were like brutes"	Cabeza de Vaca assumes indigenous people are unintelligent and unschooled.

Learning Objectives

For pages 56–61

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing point of view.

Reading: Recognizing bias.

Writing: Writing a story.

Vocabulary

ration (rash′ ən) n. fixed portion or share; p. 58 The campers ate their entire day's ration and were still hungry.

rouse (rouz) v. to awaken from sleep; p. 58 They had gone to bed late, and it was difficult to rouse them.

revive (ri vīv′) v. to give new strength, or awaken; p. 58 The lifeguard was able to revive the unconscious swimmer.

embark (em bärk′) v. to set out on a venture; p. 59 The hunting party mounted their horses and prepared to embark.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

After four days at sea, Cabeza de Vaca's ship is caught in a storm. When the ship runs aground on an island, the men fear they will be sacrificed by Native Americans. However, the Native Americans are sympathetic. The Spaniards set sail again but are shipwrecked a second time. The Native Americans weep for the misfortunes of the sailors and hold a great celebration.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 60–65.

Vocabulary

Words with Many Uses

Say: To discover the different meanings a word may have, check a dictionary. Direct students to check the meanings of revive. Have them use the word in three different contexts. (revive someone who has fainted; revive a play; revive an idea)

APPROACHING Ask: Which word can be used as a noun and a verb? (ration) Have students use the word as a noun and as a verb.

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 68.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Explain to students that although this narrative is nonfiction, the narrator, Cabeza de Vaca, is still a character in the story. Direct them to create a chart and take notes about Cabeza de Vaca as they read. Ask them to use these headings for their charts:

- His description of people and events
- His actions
- How others respond to him

After completing their reading, have students orally summarize the character of Cabeza de Vaca, referring to specific details.

Teach

Big Idea 1

Life in the New World

Say: Keep the following questions in mind as you read. What assumptions does Cabeza de Vaca make about the native people? How do those assumptions change? (He refers to his own men as "Christians" to distinguish them from the "pagan" native people, who he believes have no morals. He learns, though, that many Native Americans are hospitable and compassionate.)

from LA RELACIÓN

Álvar Núñez Cabeza de Vaca
Translated by Martin A. Favata and José B. Fernández

1 We sailed in this manner together for four days, eating a daily ration of half a handful of raw corn. After four days a storm came up and caused the other boat to be lost. We did not sink because of God's great mercy. The weather was rough, very cold, and wintery. We had been suffering from hunger for many days and had been pounded so much by the sea that the following day many men began to faint. By nightfall all the men in my boat had passed out, one on top of another, so near death that few of them were conscious and fewer than five were still upright. During the night only the sailing master and I were left to sail the boat. Two hours after nightfall he told me I should take over because he was in such a condition that he thought he would die that very night; so I took the tiller. In the middle of the night, I went to see if the sailing master had died, but he told me that he was better and that he would steer until daybreak. At that time I certainly would have rather died than see so many people before me in that condition. After the sailing master took over the boat, I tried to rest some but could not, and sleep was the furthest thing from my mind.

Vocabulary

ration	(rash′ ən) n. fixed portion or share

Near dawn I thought I heard the roar of the breakers[1] near shore, which was very loud because the coast was low. Surprised by this, I roused the sailing master, who said he thought we were near land. We took a sounding and found that the water was seven fathoms[2] deep. He thought that we should stay out until dawn. So I took an oar and rowed along the coast, which was a league[3] distant. Then we set our stern[4] to sea.

Near land a great wave took us and cast the boat out of the water as far as a horseshoe can be tossed. The boat ran aground with such force that it revived the men on it who were almost dead. When they saw they were near land they pushed themselves overboard and crawled on their hands and knees. When they got to the beach, we lit a fire by some rocks and toasted some of the corn we had and found rain water.

---

1. Breakers are waves that foam as they break.
2. A fathom is a linear measure equal to six feet.
3. A league is a measure of distance of about three miles.
4. The stern is the rear part of a boat or ship.

Vocabulary

rouse	(rouz) v. to awaken from sleep
revive	(ri vīv′) v. to give new strength, or awaken

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 6.1
DRP: 55
Lexile: 1100

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Sequence of Events Have students read silently, paying careful attention to the order in which events occur. Draw a timeline on the board and provide the first and last events:

June 1527 ——— April 1528

Cabeza de Vaca's expedition sets sail from Spain

The 60 remaining men of the expedition arrive in Florida

Help students identify four or five events that occurred between June 1527 and April 1528. Then have students determine the correct order of events.

With the warmth of the fire, the men revived and began to regain some of their strength. We arrived at this place on the sixth of November.

☆ Once our people had eaten, I sent Lope de Oviedo, who was stronger and fitter than the rest of us, to climb one of the trees nearby to sight the land and find out something about it. He did this and saw that we were on an island, and that the land appeared to have been trampled by livestock. He thought for this reason that it must be a country of Christians, and told us so. I told him to look again very carefully to see if there were any paths that could be followed, but not to go too far because of possible danger. He found a path and followed it for half a league and found some unoccupied Indian huts, for the Indians had gone into the fields. He took a pot from one of them, a small dog and some mullet[5] and started back.

We thought he was taking a long time to return, so I sent two other Christians to look for him and find out what had happened to him. They found him near there, pursued by three Indians with bows and arrows. They were calling out to him and he was trying to speak to them through sign language. He got to where we were and the Indians stayed back a bit seated on the same shore. Half an hour later another one hundred Indian bowmen appeared. We were so scared that they seemed to us to be giants, whether they were or not. They stopped near us, where the first three were. We could not even think of defending ourselves, since there were scarcely six men who could even get up from the ground. The Inspector and I went towards them and called them, and they approached us. As best we could we tried to reassure them and ourselves, and gave them beads and little bells. Each of them gave me an arrow, which is a sign of friendship. In sign language they told us that they would return in the morning and bring us food, since they did not have any at the time. The following day at sunrise, at the time the Indians had indicated, they came to us as promised, bringing us much fish, some roots which they eat, the size of walnuts, some larger or smaller. Most of these are pulled with great difficulty from under the water. In the evening they returned to bring us more fish and the same kind of roots. They had their women and children come to see us and they considered themselves rich with little bells and beads that we gave them. The following days they returned to visit with the same things as before.

Seeing that we were provisioned with fish, roots, water, and the other things we requested, we agreed to embark on our voyage once again. We dug up the boat from the sand. We had to strip naked and struggle mightily to launch it, because we were so weak that lesser tasks would have been enough to exhaust us. Once we were out from the shore the distance of two crossbow shots, a wave struck us quite a blow and got us all wet. Since we were naked and it was very cold, we let go of the oars. Another strong wave caused the boat to capsize. The Inspector and two other men held on to it to survive, but quite the opposite occurred because the boat pulled them under and they drowned. Since the surf was very rough, the sea wrapped all the men in its waves, except the three that had been pulled under by the boat, and cast them on the shore of the same island. Those of us who survived were as naked as the day we were born and had lost everything we had. Although the few things we had were of little value, they meant a lot to us.

It was November then and the weather was very cold. We were in such a state that our bones

---

[5] A mullet is a type of fish.

2 Life in the New World How does Lope de Oviedo's assumption reflect the Spaniards' expectations?

Vocabulary

embark (em bärk´) v. to set out on a venture

Teach

Big Idea 2

Life in the New World

Answer: Because he finds something that seems familiar to him—land trampled by livestock—he assumes that the people who live there must be like him—Christian.

Writer's Technique ☆

Style Cabeza de Vaca's account is simple and straightforward. His narrative reveals his training as a mariner and his instincts as an explorer. The experiences he and his men endure—storms, starvation, exhaustion, death, and encounters with native peoples—are described in credible detail.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Remind students that a subordinate clause has a subject and a verb but cannot stand alone as a sentence. Ask: Find a subordinate clause in this sentence: Each of them gave me an arrow, which is a sign of friendship. (which is a sign of friendship) Point out that which is a relative pronoun. List relative pronouns used to begin subordinate clauses: that, which, who, whom, whose. Have students locate several sentences in the selection that have relative pronouns. Direct them to copy each clause, circling the relative pronoun and underlining the subject once, the verb twice.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Correct Bias Have students choose short passages from La Relación to rewrite as bias-free newspaper articles. Review examples of bias, such as charged words, faulty reasoning, stereotyping, and exaggeration. Have students check their own articles for examples of bias.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Recognize Bias Cabeza de Vaca gives accounts of suffering throughout the selection. In this passage, he tells how the explorers were cold and naked, and so hungry that their bones could be counted.

Ask: Do you consider Cabeza de Vaca a credible witness? (We are told that Cabeza de Vaca wrote this account for the king of Spain. He probably wanted to please or impress the king with his bravery, so he may have exaggerated these events.)

Literary Element 2

Point of View Answer: Cabeza de Vaca's description of his own food rations can be generalized to apply to all of the men.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 67.

View the Art ★

Answer: The men look weary and forlorn. They gaze out at the distance, but seem contemplative rather than hopeful.

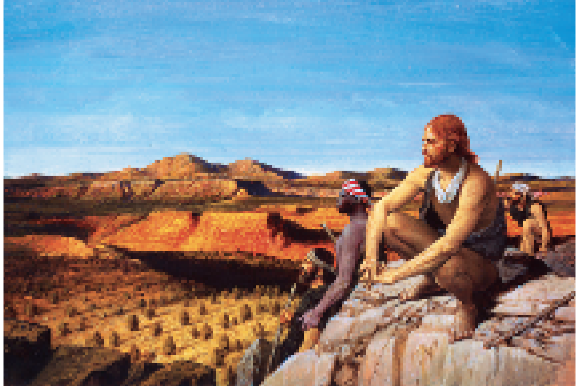
To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 71.



View the Art This painting shows Cabeza de Vaca and the three remaining members of his crew. How would you describe the men's mood in this depiction? ★

1 could easily be counted and we looked like the picture of death. I can say for myself that I had not eaten anything but parched corn since the previous May, and sometimes I had to eat it raw. Although the horses were slaughtered while we were building the boats, I was never able to eat them, and I had eaten fish fewer than ten times. This is but a brief comment, since anyone can imagine what shape we were in. On top of all this, the north wind began to blow, and so we were closer to death than to life. It pleased our Lord to let us find some embers among the coals of the fire we had made, and we made large fires. In this way we asked our Lord's mercy and the forgiveness of our sins, shedding many tears, with each man pitying not only himself but all the others who were in the same condition.

At sunset the Indians, thinking that we had not gone, looked for us again and brought us food. When they saw us in such a different state of attire and looking so strange, they were so frightened that they drew back. I went out to them and called them and they returned very frightened. I let them know through sign language that one of our boats had sunk and that three of our men had drowned. And there before their very eyes they saw two of the dead men, and those of us who were alive seemed as if we would soon join them.

The Indians, seeing the disaster that had come upon us and brought us so much misfortune and misery, sat down with us. They felt such great pain and pity at seeing us in such a state that they all began to cry so loudly and sincerely that they could be heard from afar. This went on for more than half an hour. In fact, seeing that these crude and untutored people, who were like brutes, grieved so much for us, caused me and the others in my company to suffer more and think more about our misfortune. When their crying ceased, I told the Christians that, if they agreed, I would ask those Indians to take us to their lodges. And some who had been in New Spain[6] responded that we should not even think about it, because if they took us to their lodges they would sacrifice us to their idols.[7] But seeing that we had no other recourse and that any other action would certainly bring us closer to death, I did not pay attention to what they were saying and I asked the Indians to take us to their lodges. They indicated that they would be very pleased to do this. They asked us to wait a bit and then they would do what we wanted. Then thirty of them loaded themselves with firewood and went to their lodges, which were far from there. We stayed with the others until nearly nightfall, when they held on to us and took us hastily to their lodges. Since it was so cold and they feared that someone might faint or die on the way, they had provided for four or five large fires to be placed at intervals, and they warmed us at each one. Once they saw that we had gained some strength and gotten warmer, they took us to the next one so rapidly that our feet scarcely touched the ground. In this way we went to their lodges and found that they had one ready for us with many fires lighted in it. Within an hour of our arrival they began to dance and have a great celebration that lasted all night. For us there was no pleasure nor celebration nor sleep because we were waiting to see when they would sacrifice us. In the morning they again gave us fish and roots and treated us so well that we were a little reassured and lost some of our fear of being sacrificed.

---

[6] New Spain was a part of the Spanish Empire in the 1500s. It included Venezuela, Florida, Mexico, and Central America.

[7] Idols are images of gods used as objects of worship.

2 Point of View How does Cabeza de Vaca use his own experience to illustrate the state of his crew?

Writing Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Evaluate Cabeza de Vaca says that he and his men were "a little reassured" by how the Native Americans had treated them. Ask: What treatment did the Spaniards expect to receive? (They thought they would be sacrificed to pagan idols.) Ask students to write a paragraph evaluating how the men were treated. Be sure students refer to specific examples from the selection. Have students consider the attitudes European Christians of the sixteenth century held toward people in the New World. Students should assess how beliefs were shaped by the religious and philosophical influences of the historical period.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. After reading Cabeza de Vaca's account, what questions might you ask him?
2. (a)Why do the Native Americans chase Lope de Oviedo? (b)How does the behavior of Oviedo and his pursuers reveal each group's assumptions about the other?
3. (a)In what ways do the Native Americans help Cabeza de Vaca and his companions? (b)What do you think prompts them to give assistance?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. How do Cabeza de Vaca's descriptions of his own and his men's suffering contribute to the effectiveness and emotional impact of this account?
5. How do de Vaca's references to God's mercy affect your impression of him and his mission?

Connect

6. Big Idea Life in the New World What does Cabeza de Vaca's narrative indicate about the difficulties of first encounters between Native Americans and Europeans?
7. Connect to the Author De Vaca makes several judgmental remarks about Native Americans. Yet he also called for tolerance and justice for them. How do you reconcile these seemingly opposite perspectives?

Literary Element Point of View

The narrator tells what happens in a story from his or her point of view. Narratives of the same events written from a third-person omniscient point of view, or by a different "first person," may reflect different details, feelings, and ideas.

1. How might the story have been different if one of de Vaca's men had told it?
2. Cabeza de Vaca portrays himself as a heroic character. What details create this image?

Reading Strategy Recognize Bias

De Vaca's account contains considerable bias. To detect bias, look for oversimplification and stereotyping, analyze the writer's reasoning, and identify emotionally charged language.

1. Refer to the chart you made and identify two examples of bias in Cabeza de Vaca's narrative.
2. Write the strategy that helped you recognize the bias and the word clues that helped you.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Synonyms Match each boldfaced vocabulary word below with its synonym on the right. You will not use all the answer choices. Check your answers in a thesaurus or dictionary.

1. ration	a. seek
2. rouse	b. stimulate
3. revive	c. allowance
4. embark	d. launch
	e. stir
	f. storm

Writing

Write a Story Rewrite the first meeting of the two cultures from the Native American perspective, detailing your thoughts, feelings, and reactions.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

After You Read

Assess

1. Questions should refer to experiences Cabeza de Vaca describes.
2. (a) He is a stranger who may have stolen from them.
   (b) Native Americans assume the Spaniards are thieves; Spaniards assume Native Americans are savages.
3. (a) They give him food and shelter. (b) They may trust them.
4. His descriptions stir feelings of sympathy and compassion, underscoring the seriousness of their condition.
5. He seems to be a religious man who may feel that his mission has been sanctioned by God.
6. Language barriers, different social customs
7. They helped Cabeza de Vaca and his crew, so he hopes that they are treated well. Conversely, he sees the Native Americans poorly because their culture is different.

Progress Check

Can students identify point of view?

If No → See Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 66.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 67–68.

Literary Element

1. One of the men might have shown frustration with the conditions on the voyage.
2. His mention of his hunger, his ability to survive hardships, and his decision to go to the lodges.

Vocabulary

1. c 2. e 3. b 4. d

Reading Strategy

1. Examples include emotionally charged words, such as "picture of death," "misery," and "pity," to describe the crew, and his characterization of the Native Americans as "crude and untutored."
2. Students may refer to the strategy of taking notes to record instances of bias.

Writing

Students' answers should reflect an understanding of Native American culture as it is depicted in Cabeza de Vaca's account.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus Transparency 5

Daily Language Practice Transparency 7

Or display newspaper articles that describe people suffering extreme hardship (earthquake, war, illness). Ask: What qualities do people need to endure hardship? As they read, have students consider the qualities that might have helped the Pilgrims get through hardships.

Cultural History ☆

Passengers on the Mayflower

Of the 102 passengers aboard the Mayflower, there were 50 men and 19 women, 14 teenage passengers, and 19 children under twelve. Most wished to join the settlement for economic reasons, while a minority were Separatists.

Before You Read

from Of Plymouth Plantation

Meet William Bradford

(1590–1657)

It was 1620, and the passengers aboard the Mayflower were traveling to the Americas. Violent storms tossed the creaking ship and blew it far off course. Among the passengers was thirty-year-old William Bradford.

Born in Yorkshire, England, in 1590, Bradford was orphaned as an infant and brought up by relatives. As a youth, he studied the Bible and became a Separatist. Like the Puritans, Separatists sought reforms in the Church of England. Rather than try to "purify" it, however, the Separatists broke away. In 1609, Bradford expatriated, moving to Leiden in Holland with the congregation and its leader, John Robinson. Fearing they might become assimilated into Dutch culture and lose their identity, the Separatists decided to go to the Americas. John Carver, a successful businessman, attained financial backing and chartered the Mayflower. Nearly 500 miles northeast of their intended destination, the Separatists landed in Provincetown, Massachusetts, on Cape Cod on November 21, 1620. On December 26, the 102 settlers disembarked nearby at a site they named Plymouth, after the town where they had set sail. Before leaving the Mayflower, the men in the group drafted and signed the historic Mayflower Compact, the colony's rules of government.

The First Winter The group of about 100 settlers, known today as the Pilgrims, elected Bradford leader after John Carver, the first governor, died. The voyage had been harsh. They arrived with little or no food at the onset of winter and had no wilderness survival skills. They constructed crude shelters, hoping to make it through the winter. Nearly half the colonists died of scurvy, pneumonia, fever, or starvation.

Governor The colony survived and in time grew into a thriving community under Bradford's leadership. He was reelected governor for thirty one-year terms between 1622 and 1656. In his gubernatorial years, he served as chief magistrate, high judge, and treasurer. He also presided over the community's legislature, known as the General Court. Unlike the Massachusetts Bay Colony, which was a Bible commonwealth, Plymouth was fairly egalitarian for its day, allowing Presbyterians and maverick nonbelievers to live in the community without forcing them to practice in Congregationalist or Separatist churches. To ensure a peaceable, organized society, Bradford distributed parcels of land equally to all settlers, even non-believers.

> "All great and honorable actions are accompanied with great difficulties . . ."
>
> —William Bradford

In 1630, Bradford started to compile Of Plymouth Plantation, 1620–1647. The chronicle is unique in that it separates religious commentary from historical commentary. Certain narratives published by Puritans who had arrived during the Great Migration deemed colonial life as God's plan. Bradford made no such doctrinaire claims. Instead, he steered a middle course between a Bible commonwealth and a secular society that made for a prosperous Plymouth.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about William Bradford, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Selection Skills

from
Of Plymouth Plantation

Literary Elements
- Diction (SE pp. 63, 65, 68)
- Point of View (TE p. 65)

Reading Skills
- Monitor Comprehension (SE pp. 63, 64, 66, 68)
- Connotation (TE p. 64)
- Make Critical Judgments (TE p. 67)

Vocabulary Skills
- Context Clues (SE p. 68)
- Create Analogies (TE p. 63)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a Letter (SE p. 68)
- Graphic Aids (TE p. 66)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the History

How important are your beliefs and your ability to share them with others? Would you put everything on the line for a particular cause? Discuss these questions with a partner.

Build Background

Sea voyages were extremely dangerous in the 1600s. The wooden ships were easily damaged when they hit shoals (sandbars or shallow spots in the water). Sometimes, strong waves caused ships to "seele," or lurch suddenly from side to side. In fierce winds, sails were lowered by heavy ropes called "halyards," and ships would have to "hull" or drift at sea.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Life in the New World

As you read Bradford's description of Plymouth Plantation, ask yourself, How do the colonists demonstrate their values in their daily effort to survive in a harsh environment?

Literary Element Diction

Diction is a writer's choice of words, an important element of the writer's voice or style. As you read, ask yourself, How does Bradford's diction express the values of his time?

Reading Strategy Monitor Comprehension

Bradford's writing style, while typical of his time, can be hard to understand today because he uses archaic idioms and vocabulary and long, complex sentences. As you read, try breaking long sentences into smaller parts. Ask yourself, What is Bradford trying to say in this passage?

Tip: Take Notes Choose three of Bradford's challenging sentences and rewrite them using everyday contemporary words.

Sentence	Revision
"At length they understood by discourse with him, that he was not of these parts, but belonged to the eastern parts where some English ships come to fish."	"After talking with him for a while, they found out that he lived in the east near the ocean where the English had come to fish."

Learning Objectives

For pages 62–68

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing diction.

Reading: Monitoring comprehension by breaking down sentences.

Writing: Writing a letter.

Vocabulary

resolve (ri zolv´) v. to decide; determine; p. 65 After failing two driving tests, Candy resolved to pass her third.

providence (prov´ ə dəns) n. divine care or guidance; foresight; p. 65 We trusted to providence that it would not rain on graduation day.

procure (prə kyoor´) v. to obtain by care or effort; p. 67 Sam set out to procure some dry wood for the campfire.

commodity (kə mod´ ə tē) n. a product or economic good; an article of trade; p. 67 Our town's most important commodity is cranberries.

feigned (fānd) adj. fictitious; not genuine; p. 67 The actress was so convincing that it was hard to believe her emotions were feigned.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

In 1620, a group of Separatists now called the Pilgrims set sail from Holland for Virginia. A storm blows the Mayflower off course, and the ship lands in what is now Massachusetts. A few months after their arrival, nearly half the 100 Pilgrims have died of disease. Some Native Americans befriend the settlers. Squanto becomes an interpreter, guide, and teacher for the Pilgrims, who learn to provide for themselves and celebrate a "First Thanksgiving" after the harvest.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 73–78.

Vocabulary

Create Analogies Explain that a verbal analogy expresses a relationship between two pairs of words. The relationship may involve synonyms, antonyms, cause and effect, grammatical function, or something else. Say: Identify the relationship of the two pairs of words in this verbal analogy: Feigned is to pretended as genuine is to authentic. (Both pairs of words are synonyms.)

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 81.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Have students locate the places named in Bradford's history on a map. As they read, ask them to take notes connecting the places to the events described by Bradford. They can use library sources and the Internet to obtain additional information.

Intermediate Direct students to assume the identity of a passenger aboard the Mayflower and to keep a journal as they read the selection. Ask them to recount these events from their own point of view and to explain what the events reveal about the lives of the Pilgrims.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Monitor Comprehension

Answer: Some storms were so strong that all of the sails had to be taken down from the ships' masts.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 80.

Big Idea 2

Life in the New World

Ask: What does Bradford's use of the phrase "profitable member" imply about the values the Pilgrims brought to their life in the New World? (The phrase implies a practical outlook that valued hard work and success.)

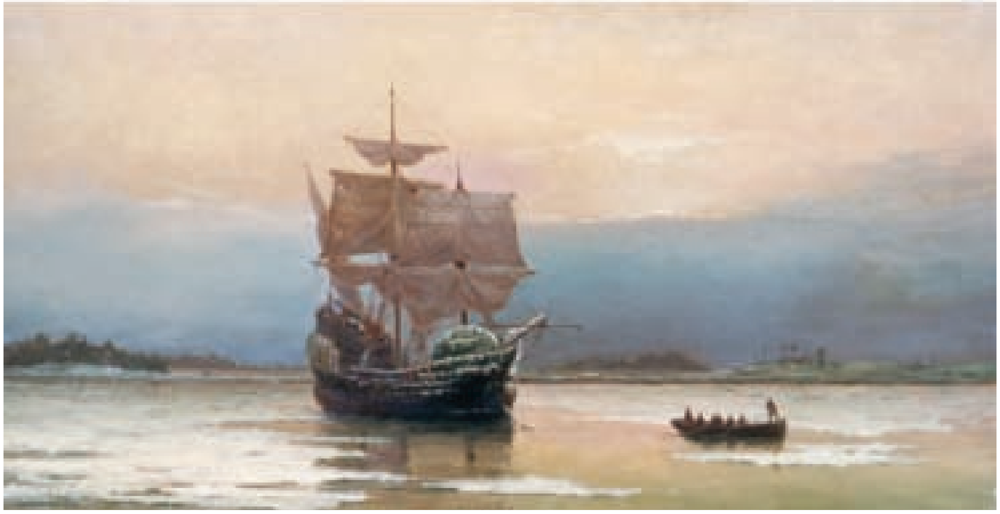
Cultural History ☆

The Puritans Puritans held to a strict work ethic. In England, the calendar year included about 240 working days, but the Puritans in America worked at least 300 days a year, taking holidays only on the Sabbath, election day, Harvard College commencement day, and public thanksgiving days.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 11.6
DRP: 62
Lexile: 1430

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.



The Mayflower on Her Arrival in Plymouth Harbor, 1882. William Formsby Halsall. Oil on canvas. Pilgrim Hall Museum, Plymouth, MA.

from

OF PLYMOUTH PLANTATION

William Bradford

from Chapter 9

Of Their Voyage, and How They Passed the Sea; and of Their Safe Arrival at Cape Cod

In sundry[1] of these storms the winds were so fierce and the seas so high, as they could not bear a knot of sail, but were forced to hull for divers[2] days together. And in one of them, as they thus lay at hull in a mighty storm, a lusty[3] young man called John Howland, coming upon some occasion above the gratings was, with a seele of the ship, thrown into sea; but it pleased God that he caught hold of the topsail halyards which hung overboard and ran out at length. Yet he held his hold (though he was sundry fathoms under water) till he was hauled up by the same rope to the brim of the water, and then with a boat hook and other means got into the ship again and his life saved. And though he was something ill with it, yet he lived many years after and became a profitable member both in church and commonwealth. 2 In all this voyage there died but one of the passengers, which was William Butten, a youth, servant to Samuel Fuller, when they drew near the coast. ☆

But to omit other things (that I may be brief) after long beating at sea they fell with that land which is called Cape Cod; the which being made

1 Monitor Comprehension How would you rephrase this passage in modern English?

---

1. Sundry refers to an indefinite number.
2. Divers means "several."
3. Lusty here means "strong."

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Connotation Explain that a writer's diction, or choice of words, sometimes has subtle effects on readers because words differ in their connotations, or emotional overtones. In the first sentence of his account, if Bradford had described the storms as big, rather than fierce, we would have a different impression of them.

Ask students to read the second paragraph on this page, beginning "But to omit other things . . ." Then have them discuss the connotations of the following words: joyful, deliberation, resolved, roaring, entangled.

and certainly known to be it, they were not a little joyful. After some deliberation had amongst themselves and with the master of the ship, they tacked about and resolved to stand for the southward (the wind and weather being fair) to find some place about Hudson's River for their habitation. But after they had sailed that course about half the day, they fell amongst dangerous shoals and roaring breakers, and they were so far entangled therewith as they conceived themselves in great danger; and the wind shrinking upon them withal,[4] they resolved to bear up again for the Cape and thought themselves happy to get out of those dangers before night overtook them, as by God's good providence they did. And the next day they got into the Cape Harbor where they rid[5] in safety. . . .

Being thus arrived in a good harbor, and brought safe to land, they fell upon their knees and blessed the God of Heaven who had brought them over the vast and furious ocean, and delivered them from all the perils and miseries thereof, again to set their feet on the firm and stable earth, their proper element. And no marvel if they were thus joyful, seeing wise Seneca[6] was so affected with sailing a few miles on the coast of his own Italy, as he affirmed, that he had rather remain twenty years on his way by land than pass by sea to any place in a short time, so tedious and dreadful was the same unto him.

But here I cannot but stay and make a pause, and stand half amazed at this poor people's present condition; and so I think will the reader, too, when he well considers the same. Being thus passed the vast ocean, and a sea of troubles before in their preparation (as may be remembered by that which went before), they had now no friends to welcome them nor inns to entertain or refresh their weatherbeaten bodies; no houses or much less towns to repair to, to seek for succor.[7] It is recorded in Scripture[8] as a mercy to the Apostle and his shipwrecked company, that the barbarians showed them no small kindness in refreshing them, but these savage barbarians, when they met with them (as after will appear) were readier to fill their sides full of arrows than otherwise. And for the season it was winter, and they that know the winters of that country know them to be sharp and violent, and subject to cruel and fierce storms, dangerous to travel to known places, much more to search an unknown coast.

from Chapter 11

The Starving Time

But that which was most sad and lamentable was, that in two or three months' time half of their company died, especially in January and February, being the depth of winter, and wanting houses and other comforts; being infected with the scurvy[9] and other diseases which this long voyage and their inaccommodate condition had brought upon them. So as there died 4 some times two or three of a day in the foresaid time, that of 100 and odd persons, scarce fifty remained. And of these, in the time of most distress, there was but six or seven sound persons who to their great commendations, be it spoken, spared no pains night nor day, but with abundance of toil and hazard of their own health, fetched them wood, made them

---

[4] Also is another word for withal.

[5] Rid means "rode."

[6] Seneca was a Roman philosopher and writer.

[7] Succor means "assistance in a time of need; relief."

[8] The reference here to Scripture, or the Bible, is Acts of the Apostles 28, which tells of the kindness shown to St. Paul and his companions by the natives of Malta after they were shipwrecked on that island.

[9] A severe lack of vitamin C causes a disease called scurvy.

3 Diction How does this phrase reflect Bradford's beliefs?

Vocabulary

resolve	(ri zolv´) v. to decide; determine providence	(prov´ ə dəns) n. divine care or guidance; foresight

Diction What idea about life in the New World is reinforced by the adjectives in this passage? 5

Teach

Literary Element 3

Diction Answer: He believes that the Puritans avoided disaster because they were protected by God.

Literary Element 4

Point of View Say: Throughout the selection, Bradford writes as if he were not present during these experiences. Ask: In this description, what might be his reason for using the third-person plural pronoun they instead of first-person I? (to focus on the group as a whole rather than on himself; the Puritan emphasis on community above self)

Literary Element 5

Diction Answer: The adjectives sharp, violent, cruel, and fierce reinforce the idea that life was savage and dangerous.

APPROACHING Remind English learners that adjectives are used to describe. Have students identify adjectives and the nouns they are describing.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Beginning Explain that although Bradford's seventeenth-century English is challenging, readers can use context clues and a dictionary for help. Divide the class into groups and direct each group to rephrase one or more of the following brief excerpts, using context clues and a dictionary to check unfamiliar words. Have them share their answers with the class.

- "after long beating at sea" (p. 64)
- "they fell amongst dangerous shoals and roaring breakers" (p. 65)
- "nor inns to entertain or refresh their weatherbeaten bodies" (p. 65)
- "spared no pains night nor day" (p. 65)

Intermediate Ask students to rephrase, in contemporary English, the sentence from Bradford's history that begins "But here I cannot but stay and make a pause . . ."

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Monitor Comprehension

Answer: This passage suggests that this "certain Indian" is from a different area—one where British fishing boats docked.

View the Art ★

Answer: The emphasis is on the peaceful and reflective tone of the moment. Though most of the Native Americans are not seated at the table, the tone seems respectful.

The First Thanksgiving at Plymouth, Massachusetts, 1914. Jennie Brownscombe. Oil on canvas. The Granger Collection.

View the Art What aspects of the colonists' first Thanksgiving do you think the artist wanted to emphasize in this painting? ★ fires, dressed them meat, made their beds, washed their loathsome clothes, clothed and unclothed them. In a word, did all the homely[10] and necessary offices for them which dainty and queasy stomachs cannot endure to hear named; and all this willingly and cheerfully, without any grudging in the least, showing herein their true love unto their friends and brethren; a rare example and worthy to be remembered. Two of these seven were Mr. William Brewster, their reverend Elder, and Myles Standish, their Captain and military commander, unto whom myself and many others were much beholden in our low and sick condition. And yet the Lord so upheld these persons as in this general calamity they were not at all infected either with sickness or lameness. . . .

Indian Relations

All this while the Indians came skulking about them, and would sometimes show themselves aloof off, but when any approached near them, they would run away; and once they [the Indians] stole away their [the colonists'] tools where they had been at work and were gone to dinner. But about the 16th of March, a certain Indian came boldly amongst them and spoke to them in broken English, which they could well understand but marveled at it. At length they understood by discourse with him, that he was not of these parts, but belonged to the eastern parts where some English ships came to fish, with whom he was acquainted and could

Monitor Comprehension What does this passage say about this "certain Indian"? 1

---

[10] Homely here means "domestic."

Writing Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Graphic Aids Maps and timelines can help students gain perspective on the difficulties of the Pilgrims' travels. After students have read the selection, have them create a timeline of the events. Tell students that Bradford grew up in Yorkshire, England, and then moved with other Separatists to a small town nearby. Fearing persecution, the group then crossed the North Sea to Holland. After 12 years there, the group sailed to the New World, landing at Cape Cod. Hand out a map that shows the United States, the Atlantic Ocean, England, and Holland, and have students trace Bradford's travels.

name sundry of them by their names, amongst whom he had got his language. He became profitable to them in acquainting them with many things concerning the state of the country in the east parts where he lived, which was afterwards profitable unto them; as also of the people here, of their names, number and strength, of their situation and distance from this place, and who was chief amongst them. His name was Samoset. He told them also of another Indian whose name was Squanto, a native of this place, who had been in England and could speak better English than himself.

Being, after some time of entertainment and gifts dismissed, a while after he came again, and five more with him, and they brought again all the tools that were stolen away before, and made way for the coming of their great Sachem, called Massasoit. Who, about four or five days after, came with the chief of his friends and other attendance, with the aforesaid Squanto. With whom, after friendly entertainment and some gifts given him, they made a peace with him (which hath now continued this 24 years) in these terms:

2 1. That neither he nor any of his should injure or do hurt to any of their people.

2. That if any of his did hurt to any of theirs, he should send the offender, that they might punish him.

3. That if anything were taken away from any of theirs, he should cause it to be restored; and they should do the like to his.

4. If any did unjustly war against him, they would aid him; if any did war against them, he should aid them.

5. He should send to his neighbors confederates to certify them of this, that they might not wrong them, but might be likewise comprised in the conditions of peace.

6. That when their men came to them, they should leave their bows and arrows behind them.

After these things he returned to his place called Sowams, some 40 miles from this place, but Squanto continued with them and was their interpreter and was a special instrument sent of God for their good beyond their expectation. He directed them how to set their corn, where to take fish, and to procure other commodities, and was also their pilot to bring them to unknown places for their profit, and never left them till he died.

from Chapter 12
First Thanksgiving

They began now to gather in the small harvest they had, and to fit up their houses and dwellings against winter, being all well recovered in health and strength and had all things in good plenty. For as some were thus employed in affairs abroad, others were exercised in fishing, about cod and bass and other fish, of which they took good store, of which every family had their portion. All the summer there was no want; and now began to come in store of fowl, as winter approached, of which this place did abound when they came first (but afterward decreased by degrees). And besides waterfowl there was great store of wild turkeys, of which they took many, besides venison, etc. Besides they had about a peck of meal a week to a person, or now since harvest, Indian corn to that proportion. Which made many afterwards write so largely of their plenty here to their friends in England, which were not feigned but true reports. ∾

Life in the New World How did life for the settlers change so drastically since their bleak arrival in the New World? 3

Vocabulary

procure (prə kyoor´) v. to obtain by care or effort commodity (kə mod´ ə tē) n. a product or economic good; an article of trade feigned (fānd) adj. fictitious; not genuine

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Making Critical Judgments

Ask: Do you think the six peace terms are reasonable? Why or why not? (Students might point out that the terms would encourage peaceful relations between the two groups.)

Big Idea 3

Life in the New World

Answer: By the settlers' second winter in the New World, they had been able to gather enough food to avoid the hardships of the previous winter.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 84.

Progress Check

Can students analyze diction?

If No → See Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 79.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging Have students work in small groups to paraphrase the list of peace terms. Have each student read one term aloud to the group to improve students' reading fluency. Have them rewrite each rule as if it were for a peace treaty today. Also, have groups discuss whether they think the peace terms would be effective. They should add one or two terms of their own that they believe would strengthen a peace treaty. Ask representatives from each group to read their revised rules to the class. Discuss group answers.

AAVE Use the First Thanksgiving section with approaching-level students who are users of African American vernacular English (AAVE) to work on subject-verb agreement. Have students replace the third person plural with third person singular. Have pairs record all the words that change as a result.

After You Read

Assess

1. Winter, lack of food, disease.
2. Mayflower: storms, disease; Plymouth: some Native Americans, hunger, disease, weather
3. (a) They were blown off course by storms. (b) They were without shelter in winter weather.
4. (a) The selfless effort of the few who escaped disease (b) They worked without complaint.
5. (a) Samoset taught the Pilgrims about the land and helped negotiate peace. Squanto was an interpreter and an advisor on fishing, farming, and hunting. (b) They might not have survived.
6. (a) Each side would not harm the other, and they would become allies if others waged war. (b) Possible answer: It was a good plan: they could live without fearing each other.
7. (a) Hunting, fishing, good harvest. (b) They and Squanto deserve credit.
8. Possible answer: Today some Americans struggle with hunger and lack shelter.
9. Students may mention Night or Into Thin Air.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 69–70.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. If you had been a Plymouth settler, what do you think would have been your greatest challenge?
2. What hardships did the Pilgrims face aboard the Mayflower and in Plymouth?
3. (a)What caused the Pilgrims to land on Cape Cod, in Massachusetts, instead of farther south, near the Hudson River? (b)How did this event affect the expedition?
4. (a)What enabled the Pilgrims to survive "the Starving Time"? (b)What do Bradford's comments reveal about the Pilgrims' character?
5. (a)What did Samoset and Squanto accomplish? (b)What do you think might have happened to the Pilgrims without Squanto's help?

Analyze and Evaluate

6. (a)What were the six terms of peace meant to accomplish? (b)In your opinion, was this plan a good one? Explain.
7. (a)What enabled the Pilgrims to survive and celebrate their "First Thanksgiving"? (b)How much credit do you give the Pilgrims for this success?

Connect

8. Big Idea Life in the New World Do the experiences of the Pilgrims have any connection to our society today? Explain.
9. Connect to Today What are some modern-day examples of survival stories? Why do you think people are so attracted to write—and read—this type of story?

Literary Element Diction

Diction is a writer's choice of words. Diction contributes to a writer's voice or style. Paraphrase the first sentence on page 65 paragraph 1, which begins "Being thus arrived . . . " How would you describe the style of this sentence?

Reading Strategy Monitor Comprehension

Bradford's writing style involves obscure idioms, archaic vocabulary, and long, complex sentences. In the description of the sea journey, he also uses jargon. You learned several of these words on page 63. Using the chart you made, figure out a few on your own.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Context Clues Identify the context clues that help you determine the meaning of each boldfaced vocabulary word.

1. When I was young, stickers were valuable commodities; I traded them for candy.
2. I knew my sister had taken my sweater because she feigned surprise so poorly when I found a stain on it.
3. Last month I resolved to run a mile a day, but I haven't followed through with it.
4. It took a lot of determination, but I procured two tickets to the sold-out concert.
5. It was sheer providence, or fate, that I ran into Amanda at the library.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Writing

Write a Letter Imagine you are one of the colonists. Write a letter describing life in Plymouth. Explain whether you believe your religious freedom and other benefits were worth the sacrifice.

Literary Element

Now that they had found a good harbor and reached land, they fell on their knees and thanked God for bringing them across the ocean through many dangers to set them again on land, where they belonged. Students may judge the style to be formal and stately.

Vocabulary

1. Students should infer that commodities are items of trade.
2. The sister's surprise must be unreal—or feigned—because that is how the speaker finds out she took it.
3. The phrase "made a decision" defines the word resolved.
4. Students should note that as the task is difficult and the show is sold out, the action of procuring is to acquire.
5. The restatement "or fate" defines providence.

Writing

Students' letters should reflect an understanding of life on Plymouth Plantation and should use proper sentence structure and grammar.

Before You Read
from The Life of Olaudah Equiano

Meet Olaudah Equiano
(1745–1797)

The life of Olaudah Equiano (ō lau´ dä e kwē ä´ nō) was a mixture of tragedy, struggle, and great achievement. The son of an Ibo chieftain, Equiano was born in Essaka, a village in what is now Nigeria. His village was a considerable distance from the coast, and as a child he had never heard of the sea or of the people who lived beyond it. When he was eleven, he had a terrifying introduction to both when he and his sister were kidnapped by slave traders. They were separated, and Equiano was sold to Europeans and packed onto a slave ship headed for the Caribbean island of Barbados. The horrors he witnessed on the ship haunted him for the rest of his life.

In the years after being captured, Equiano spent time in Virginia and England, where he was owned by an officer of the British Royal Navy. Equiano served in the British navy with this officer from 1758 to 1762, during the French and Indian War. Over the years, the officer baptized him, renamed him Gustavus Vassa, and taught him seafaring skills as well as how to read and write. These skills would serve Equiano well after the officer sold him to a merchant in the West Indies in 1763.

Sailor and Trader As a slave to the merchant, Equiano worked on trading ships between the West Indies and mainland American colonies. In 1766, at the age of 21, he used money he had made to buy his freedom. He spent the next several years working on ships and traveling.

While sailing, Equiano realized that life as a free man was in many respects no easier than his life as a slave had been. Freed slaves in the British colonies had no legal rights and were often treated miserably. Soon after he was freed, he wrote, "Hitherto I had thought only slavery dreadful; but the state of the free negro appeared to me now equally so at least, and in some respects even worse."

> ". . . I might say my sufferings were great; but when I compare my lot with that of most of my countrymen, I regard myself as a particular favorite of heaven. . . ."
>
> —Olaudah Equiano

Freedom Fighter In 1776 Equiano settled in England to campaign against slavery. He helped organize several antislavery organizations in London and, along with other abolitionists, petitioned the British parliament to end the slave trade. Equiano was also part of the Committee for Relief of the Black Poor in London and a leader in the Sierra Leone recolonization project, a failed attempt to bring former slaves back to Africa. His greatest contribution to the abolitionist cause, however, was his 1789 autobiography, The Interesting Narrative of the Life of Olaudah Equiano, or Gustavus Vassa, the African. Its graphic and powerful descriptions of the inhumanity Equiano and other slaves suffered helped further the abolitionist cause throughout Europe and the United States. ☆

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Olaudah Equiano, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus
Transparency 6

Daily Language Practice
Transparency 8

Or display images showing flags of the United States and other nations.

Ask: What does freedom mean? How do the freedoms you enjoy compare with freedoms in other countries? Say: Consider the nature of freedom as you read.

Cultural History ☆

Records of the Slave Trade In addition to firsthand accounts of former slaves like Equiano, historians consult primary sources about slave ships that identify the type of ship, the ports and dates of arrival, the number of days of voyage, and the number of slaves. They also refer to documents such as advertisements for slave auctions, letters of slave dealers, and property records.

Selection Skills

from The Life of Olaudah Equiano

Literary Elements
- Slave Narrative (SE pp. 70–72, 76, 78)
- Characterization (TE p. 74)

Reading Skills
- Respond (SE pp. 70–71, 74–76, 78)
- Make Critical Judgments (TE p. 70)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE pp. 72, 74)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Report Main Ideas or Events (SE p. 79)
- Evaluate (TE p. 70)
- Compound Subjects (TE p. 74)
- Write Questions (TE p. 76)

Vocabulary Skills
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 78)
- Word Origins (SE p. 78; TE p. 70)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

In this excerpt, Olaudah Equiano recounts his experiences traveling as a kidnapped, enslaved person on a ship from Africa to Barbados in the West Indies. Using vivid details and straightforward language, Equiano reveals the horrors on the slave ship and the degradation he endured.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 86–91.

Vocabulary

Etymology Explain that learning the etymology, or origin, of a word can provide insights into the word's connotation. Clamor, for example, has the same root as the word claim: the Latin verb clamare, which means "to cry out." Clamor is used to describe shouting that shows dissatisfaction or displeasure, not joy. Have students explore the etymology of each word and write a sentence connecting the word and its origins.

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 94.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Autobiography

How do you respond when people restrict your freedom? Freewrite for a few minutes about a time when someone imposed rules on you that you considered unjust. Discuss your feelings and reactions.

Build Background

From the 1500s to the 1800s, approximately ten million Africans suffered miserable treatment on the forced journey from their homes to enslavement in the Western Hemisphere. The most arduous portion of the journey, known as the Middle Passage, was a two-month voyage from West Africa to the West Indies. Some two million Africans died from malnutrition, disease, suffocation, beatings, and despair during the journey.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Life in the New World

As you read from Equiano's autobiography, ask yourself, What does this selection reveal about the suffering endured by many of the Africans who helped build the United States?

Literary Element The Slave Narrative

A slave narrative is an autobiographical account of a formerly enslaved person's life. Slave narratives helped abolitionists expose slavery's cruelty. As you read, ask yourself, How successful is Equiano in making readers aware of slavery's injustice?

Reading Strategy Respond

Responding is explaining what you think about a selection and how it affects you. Responding personally includes describing what you like, dislike, or find interesting in a selection and how these aspects of the work relate to your own life. More analytical responses deal with giving your opinion on aspects such as the behavior of the characters or stylistic techniques used by the author. As you read, ask yourself, What thoughts and feelings does the selection envoke? What factors contribute to my response?

Tip: Take Notes As you read the selection, jot down quick notes about the passages you think are especially moving or intense.

Learning Objectives

For pages 69–79

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing autobiography.

Reading: Responding to events.

Vocabulary

apprehension (ap´ ri hen´ shən) n. fear of what may happen in the future; anxiety; p. 73 Sam thought of his upcoming speech with apprehension.

copious (kō´ pē əs) adj. large in quantity; plentiful; p. 74 Copious amounts of food were served at the banquet.

gratify (grat´ ə fī´) v. to satisfy or indulge; p. 75 Our walks outside gratify my craving for sunlight.

clamor (klam´ ər) n. confused, insistent shouting; p. 76 The clamor woke Kim from her sleep.

scruple (skro͞o´ pəl) n. moral principle that restrains action; p. 76 Without a scruple, Nina stole the bike.

Writing Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Evaluate Discuss with students the ways in which an autobiographical account teaches lessons that an encyclopedia or other secondary source does not. Ask: What makes a good autobiography? What should an autobiography convey about a subject that might not be found in other pieces of writing? (Autobiography conveys the feelings and thoughts of a person who lived through an experience.) Have students examine the methods Equiano uses to present his ideas. Direct them to write an evaluation of his account, supporting their arguments with precise details from the selection.

from The Life of Olaudah Equiano

Olaudah Equiano

The first object which saluted[1] my eyes when I arrived on the coast, was the sea, and a slave ship, which was then riding at anchor, and waiting for its cargo. These filled me with astonishment, which was soon converted into terror, when I was carried on board. I was immediately handled, and tossed up to see if I were sound, by some of the crew; and I was now persuaded that I had gotten into a world of bad spirits, and that they were going to kill me.

Their complexions, too, differing so much from ours, their long hair, and the language they spoke, (which was very different from any I had ever heard) united to confirm me in this belief. Indeed, such were the horrors of my views and fears at the moment, that, if ten thousand worlds had been my own, I would have freely parted with them all to have exchanged my condition with that of the meanest[2] slave in my own country. When I looked round the ship too, and saw a large furnace of copper boiling, and a multitude of black people of every description chained together, every one of their countenances[3] expressing dejection and sorrow, I no longer doubted of my fate; and, quite overpowered with horror and anguish, I fell motionless on the deck and fainted. When I recovered a little, I found some black people about me, who I believed were some of those who had brought me on board, and had been receiving their pay; they talked to me in order to cheer me, but all in vain.[4] I asked them if we were not to be eaten by those white men with horrible looks, red faces, and long hair. They told me I was not: and one of the crew brought me a small portion of spirituous liquor in a wine glass, but, being afraid of him, I would not take it out of his hand. One of the blacks, therefore, took it from him and gave it to me, and I took a little down my palate,[5] which, instead of reviving me, as they thought it would, threw me into the greatest consternation[6] at the strange feeling it produced, having never tasted any such liquor before. Soon after this, the blacks who brought me on board went off, and left me abandoned to despair.

I now saw myself deprived of all chance of returning to my native country, or even the least glimpse of hope of gaining the shore, which I now considered as friendly; and I even wished for my former slavery[7] in preference to

---

1. Here, saluted means "became noticeable to" or "struck."
2. Here, meanest means "of the lowest social position or rank."
3. Countenance means "face" or "facial expression."
4. Something done in vain is done without effect or success.
5. The palate, here, is the mouth and throat.
6. Consternation is paralyzing dismay or fear.
7. Equiano refers to a brief period of time he spent as a slave to the Africans who kidnapped him and eventually sold him. In his experience, slavery in Africa was far less brutal than slavery in the New World.

1 Slave Narrative Why might Equiano have included these details?

2 Respond What about this passage makes it striking or memorable?

Teach

Literary Element 1

Slave Narrative Answer: The details about people who are so different from the people with whom he is familiar emphasize his confusion and fear.

Reading Strategy 2

Respond Answer: The description of so many people chained together and of their expressions creates a horrific image.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Have students locate words that express Equiano's feelings. Direct students to use a dictionary to find the meanings of unfamiliar words. (Examples: astonishment, terror, horrors, overpowered, anguish, despair)

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 7.6
DRP: 59
Lexile: 1250

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Help students analyze Equiano's long sentences. Using the sentence beginning "When I looked round the ship," indicates the relationship of the ideas to follow.

When he looked round the ship,

What he saw
- a furnace of copper boiling
- a large number of people chained together
- their faces expressing sorrow

How he reacted
- He became sure of his fate.
- He became overwhelmed with emotion and fainted on the deck.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Research Have students investigate the case of the Zong, a slave ship that was transporting slaves to Jamaica in 1781. Direct students to prepare a brief presentation by formulating several key research questions and seeking at least three sources to provide answers and information.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Slave Narrative Answer: Seeing slavery through Equiano's eyes captures the experience vividly. Such a perspective can be far more powerful than reading facts or statistics.

View the Art ★

Answer: Since the slave trade had been abolished, this ship was likely not designed to carry slaves. That would explain why these slaves seem to have more room than Equiano described in his narrative.

In 1845, the British ship Albatross captured the Brazilian slave ship Albaroz. Francis Meynell was a mate on the Albatross.

The Slavedeck of the Albaroz, Prize to the H.M.S. Albatross, 1846. Francis Meynell. Watercolor. National Maritime Museum, London.

View the Art Francis Meynell was both a painter and a sailor—he served on an anti-slavery ship that patrolled the waters after the British Parliament abolished slave trading in 1807. How does Equiano's description of slave ship conditions compare to this painting? ★ my present situation, which was filled with horrors of every kind, still heightened by my ignorance of what I was to undergo. I was not long suffered[8] to indulge my grief; I was soon put down under the decks, and there I received such a salutation in my nostrils as I had never experienced in my life: so that, with the loathsomeness of the stench, and crying together, I became so sick and low that I was not able to eat, nor had I the least desire to taste any thing. I now wished for the last friend, death, to relieve me; but soon, to my grief, two of the white men offered me eatables; and, on my refusing to eat, one of them held me fast by the hands, and laid me across, I think the windlass,[9] and tied my feet, while the other flogged me severely. I had never experienced any thing of this kind before, and although not being used to the water, I naturally feared that element the first time I saw it, yet, nevertheless, could I have got over the nettings,[10] I would have jumped over the side, but I could not; and besides, the crew used to watch us very closely who were not chained down to the decks, lest we should leap into the water; and I have seen some of these poor African prisoners most severely cut, for attempting to do so, and hourly whipped for not eating. This indeed was 1 Slave Narrative How does the point of view affect the message of this selection?

---

[8] Here, suffered means "allowed."

[9] A windlass is a type of crank with a handle. It is used to raise or lower a heavy object such as an anchor.

[10] Nettings were networks of small ropes on the sides of a ship. On slave ships, nettings were used to prevent captives from jumping overboard.

Reading Practice

Changes in English Note instances in Equiano's account that reveal how the English language has changed over time. For example, the word suffered on page 72 means "allowed" not "endured pain." Ask: What other differences do you notice between Equiano's English and modern American English? (Students may say that Equiano's English sounds more formal.) What similarities do you notice? (Students may say that most of the words and sentence structures of colonial English are similar to today.) As students read pages 72 73, have them develop a list of words and phrases from the selection that are rarely used today. (Possible responses: "salutation" and "eatables" on p. 72; "brute" and "quartered" on p. 73.) Clarify and discuss the meanings of unfamiliar words. (salutation means "greeting"; eatables means "food"; brute means "beast"; quartered means "sheltered.") often the case with myself. In a little time after, amongst the poor chained men, I found some of my own nation, which in a small degree gave ease to my mind. I inquired of these what was to be done with us? They gave me to understand, we were to be carried to these white people's country to work for them. I then was a little revived, and thought, if it were no worse than working, my situation was not so desperate; but still I feared I should be put to death, the white people looked and acted, as I thought, in so savage a manner; for I had never seen among any people such instances of brutal cruelty; and this not only shown towards us blacks, but also to some of the whites themselves. One white man in particular I saw, when we were permitted to be on deck, flogged so unmercifully with a large rope near the foremast, that he died in consequence of it; and they tossed him over the side as they would have done a brute. This made me fear these people the more; and I expected nothing less than to be treated in the same manner. I could not help expressing my fears and apprehensions to some of my countrymen; I asked them if these people had no country, but lived in this hollow place? (the ship) they told me they did not, but came from a distant one. "Then," said I, "how comes it in all our country we never heard of them?" They told me because they lived so very far off. I then asked where were their women? had they any like themselves? I was told they had. "And why," said I, "do we not see them?" They answered, because they were left behind. I asked how the vessel could go? they told me they could not tell; but that there was cloth put upon the masts by the help of the ropes I saw, and then the vessel went on; and the white men had some spell or magic they put in the water when they liked, in order to stop the vessel. I was exceedingly amazed at this account, and really thought they were spirits. I therefore wished much to be from amongst them, for I expected they would sacrifice me; but my wishes were vain—for we were so quartered that it was impossible for any of us to make our escape.

While we stayed on the coast I was mostly on deck; and one day, to my great astonishment, I saw one of these vessels coming in with the sails up. As soon as the whites saw it, they gave a great shout, at which we were amazed; and the more so, as the vessel appeared larger by approaching nearer. At last, she came to an anchor in my sight, and when the anchor was let go, I and my countrymen who saw it, were lost in astonishment to observe the vessel stop—and were now convinced it was done by magic. Soon after this the other ship got her boats out, and they came on board of us, and the people of both ships seemed very glad to see each other. Several of the strangers also shook hands with us black people, and made motions with their hands, signifying I suppose, we were to go to their country, but we did not understand them.

At last, when the ship we were in, had got in all her cargo, they made ready with many fearful noises, and we were all put under deck, so that we could not see how they managed the vessel. But this disappointment was the least of my sorrow. The stench of the hold while we were on the coast was so intolerably loathsome, that it was dangerous to remain there for any time, and some of us had been permitted to stay on the deck for the fresh air; but now that the whole ship's cargo were confined together, it became absolutely pestilential.[11] The closeness of the place, and the heat of the climate, added to the number in the ship, which was so crowded that each had scarcely room to turn himself, almost

2 Life in the New World What kind of mood does Equiano create here?

3 Life in the New World Why might Equiano have included a description of this event?

Vocabulary

apprehensions (ap´ ri hen´ shənz) n. fears of what may happen in the future; anxieties

---

[11] Pestilential means "poisonous" or "likely to cause disease or death."

Teach

Big Idea 2

Life in the New World

Answer: The mood is one of confusion, fear, and despair. By describing how he felt, Equiano shows the confusion of the situation and the horror of being held captive by cruel strangers.

Big Idea 3

Life in the New World

Answer: He is exposing the brutality of the white people on the ship. They are cruel not only to the Africans but also to each other, suggesting that they have no regard for people in general.

Writer's Technique ☆

Purpose Ask: What purpose could Equiano have had for writing this narrative? Which reason do you think was foremost in Equiano's mind? (Many students may say that Equiano wanted to expose the horrors of slavery in order to support its abolition.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Have students use Equiano's punctuation as an aid to decoding his long sentences. Point out that both commas and semicolons indicate pause, but that the semicolon indicates a stronger pause, often to separate clauses. Call on a volunteer to read the sentence on page 72 that begins "I now wished for the last friend . . ."

Direct students to restate the sentence in their own words. Ask: What words can you substitute for eatables and flogged? (food, whipped) Have students read their paraphrases aloud to compare responses.

AAVE Approaching level students who use AAVE may use two negatives where only one is needed. Have them find the single negative in Equiano's words.

- if it were no worse than working
- I expected nothing less than to be treated in the same manner

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Respond Answer: Students will likely say they feel anger toward the slave traders and disbelief that the traders could treat other people so inhumanely.

Literary Element 2

Characterization Discuss with the class what sort of person the writer reveals himself to be. What actions, comments, or descriptions can help the reader make valid inferences about Equiano's personality? (He is observant—he can remember in vivid detail events that happened to him long ago. He is also very curious when he watches the sailors use their strange instrument. Despite the staggering hardships of the journey, he seems resilient.)

View the Art ★

Answer: Students may say that the intense red and orange suggest violence and death, the small size of the ship in comparison to the vastness of the sea suggests man's powerlessness over nature, the lack of a distinct horizon suggests chaos, and the drowning slaves in the foreground represent the slave traders' cruelty and disregard for human life.

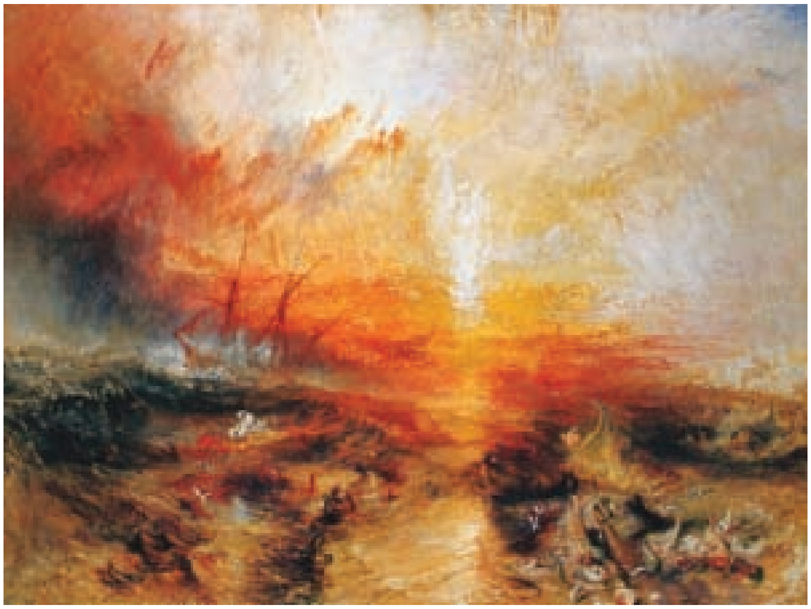
The English painter J. M. W. Turner (1775–1851) was known for his seascapes and landscapes in oil and watercolor and for his ability to show weather. The subtitle of this painting is "Slavers Throwing Overboard the Dead and Dying—Typhoon Coming On."



The Slave Ship, 1840. Joseph Mallord William Turner. Oil on canvas. Museum of Fine Arts, Boston.

View the Art This painting was based on the story of a captain who reportedly threw sick and dying slaves overboard to collect insurance money for slaves "lost at sea," as well as a poem about a slave ship caught in a typhoon. What visual techniques does the painter use to capture the horror of such a situation? ★ suffocated us. This produced copious perspirations, so that the air soon became unfit for respiration, from a variety of loathsome smells, and brought on a sickness among the slaves, of which many died—thus falling victims to the improvident[12] avarice,[13] as I may call it, of their purchasers. This wretched situation was again aggravated by the galling[14] of the chains, now became insupportable; and the filth of the necessary tubs,[15] into which the children often fell, and were almost suffocated. The shrieks of the women, and the groans of the dying, rendered[16] the whole a scene of horror almost inconceivable. Happily perhaps, for myself, I was soon reduced so low here that it was thought necessary to keep me almost always on deck; and from my extreme youth I was not put in fetters.[17] In this situation I expected every hour to share the fate of my companions, some of whom were almost daily brought upon deck at the point of death, which I began to hope would soon put an end to my miseries. Often did I think many of the inhabitants of the deep much more happy than myself. I envied them the freedom they enjoyed, and as often wished I could change my condition for theirs. Every circumstance I met with, served only to render my state more painful, and heightened my apprehensions, and my opinion of the cruelty of the whites.

1 Respond After reading this passage, what feelings and thoughts do you have about the slave traders?

Vocabulary

copious (kō′ pē əs) adj. large in quantity; plentiful

---

[12] Improvident means "lacking foresight" or "not providing for the future."

[13] Avarice is greed.

[14] Galling is the chafing or rubbing that causes irritation of the skin.

[15] Necessary tubs are containers for bodily waste.

[16] Render means "to cause to be" or "to make."

[17] Fetters are leg irons.

Vocabulary Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Compound Subjects Point out that a compound subject is composed of two or more nouns or pronouns. The nouns or pronouns have the same verb, and they are joined by a conjunction such as and. In a two-part compound subject no comma is used before the conjunction. Have students look through the autobiography to find examples of sentences with compound subjects. Ask students why a writer might choose to use them. (to sound more natural; to express more complicated ideas)

2

One day they had taken a number of fishes; and when they had killed and satisfied themselves with as many as they thought fit, to our astonishment who were on deck, rather than give any of them to us to eat, as we expected, they tossed the remaining fish into the sea again, although we begged and prayed for some as well as we could, but in vain; and some of my countrymen, being pressed by hunger, took an opportunity, when they thought no one saw them, of trying to get a little privately; but they were discovered, and the attempt procured them some very severe floggings. One day, when we had a smooth sea and moderate wind, two of my wearied countrymen who were chained together, (I was near them at the time,) preferring death to such a life of misery, somehow made through the nettings and jumped into the sea: immediately, another quite dejected fellow, who, on account of his illness, was suffered to be out of irons, also followed their example; and I believe many more would very soon have done the same, if they had not been prevented by the ship's crew, who were instantly alarmed. Those of us that were the most active, were in a moment put down under the deck, and there was such a noise and confusion amongst the people of the ship as I never heard before, to stop her, and get the boat out to go after the slaves. However, two of the wretches were drowned, but they got the other, and afterwards flogged him unmercifully, for thus attempting to prefer death to slavery. In this manner we continued to undergo more hardships than I can now relate, hardships which are inseparable from this accursed trade. Many a time we were near suffocation from the want of fresh air, which we were often without for whole days together. This, and the stench of the necessary tubs, carried off many.

During our passage, I first saw flying fishes, which surprised me very much; they used frequently to fly across the ship, and many of them fell on the deck. I also now first saw the use of the quadrant; I had often with astonishment seen the mariners make observations with it, and I could not think what it meant. They at last took notice of my surprise; and one of them, willing to increase it, as well as to gratify my curiosity, made me one day look through it. The clouds appeared to me to be land, which disappeared as they passed along. This heightened my wonder; and I was now more persuaded than ever, that I was in another world, and that every thing about me was magic. At last, we came in sight of the island of Barbadoes, at which the whites on board gave a great shout, and made many signs of joy to us. We did not know what to think of this; but as the vessel drew nearer, we plainly saw the harbor, and other ships of different kinds and sizes, and we soon anchored amongst them, off Bridgetown.[18] Many merchants and planters now came on board, though it was in the evening. They put us in separate parcels,[19] and examined us attentively. They also made us jump, and pointed to the land, signifying we were to go there. We thought by this, we should be eaten by these ugly men, as they appeared to us; and, when soon after we were all put down under the deck again, there was much dread and trembling among us, and nothing but bitter cries to be heard all the night from these apprehensions, insomuch, that at last the white people got some old slaves from the land to pacify us. They told us we were not to be eaten, but to work, and were soon to go on land, where we should see many of our country people. This report eased us much. And sure enough, soon after we were landed, there came to us Africans of all languages.

We were conducted immediately to the merchant's yard, where we were all pent up together,

---

[18] Bridgetown is the capital of Barbados.

[19] Here, parcels means "groups."

Respond Does this passage affect your perception of the slave traders? Why or why not? 3

Vocabulary

gratify (grat´ ə fī´) v. to satisfy or indulge

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Respond Answer: Some students may say that one kind act does not change their opinion toward the traders, who have been so cruel. Others may note that the traders are individuals, and it is likely that some are kinder than others.

APPROACHING Ask approaching level students to paraphrase the highlighted text. Be sure to discuss the vocabulary word gratify and its use in the sentence.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Compare and Contrast Have advanced students investigate the theme of the Middle Passage in other literary works such as poems and novels. Direct them to find these works in the library or on the Internet and to select one or more works for comparison and contrast. Ask students to share their impressions of these selections with the class by summarizing the work, preparing a short presentation for oral delivery, and comparing the work with Equiano's narrative. They may also investigate the treatment of the theme in paintings and other visual art forms.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Slave Narrative Answer: The tone changes from a first-person account to direct address—an appeal to those in power to make changes. Equiano appeals to these people's own religious beliefs by quoting the Bible, to emphasize the importance of abolishing slavery.

Reading Strategy 2

Respond Answer: Equiano's use of the word refinement undermines the traders' belief that they are more civilized than the slaves and instead highlights their ability to inflict new kinds of cruelty.

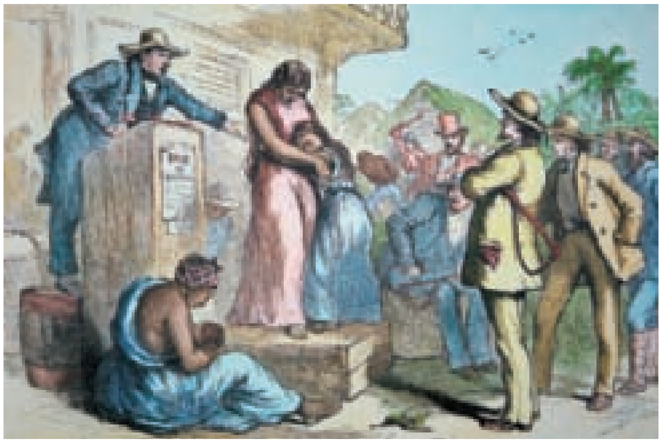
To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 97.



A Slave Auction in the Deep South, c. 1850. American School. Coloured engraving.

like so many sheep in a fold, without regard to sex or age. As every object was new to me, every thing I saw filled me with surprise. What struck me first, was, that the houses were built with bricks and stories, and in every other respect different from those I had seen in Africa; but I was still more astonished on seeing people on horseback. I did not know what this could mean; and, indeed, I thought these people were full of nothing but magical arts. While I was in this astonishment, one of my fellow-prisoners spoke to a countryman of his, about the horses, who said they were the same kind they had in their country. I understood them, though they were from a distant part of Africa; and I thought it odd I had not seen any horses there; but afterwards, when I came to converse with different Africans, I found they had many horses amongst them, and much larger than those I then saw.

We were not many days in the merchant's custody, before we were sold after their usual manner, which is this:—On a signal given, (as the beat of a drum,) the buyers rush at once into the yard where the slaves are confined, and make choice of that parcel they like best. The noise and clamor with which this is attended, and the eagerness visible in the countenances of the buyers, serve not a little to increase the apprehension of terrified Africans, who may well be supposed to consider them as the ministers of that destruction to which they think themselves devoted. In this manner, without scruple, are relations and friends separated, most of them never to see each other again. I remember, in the vessel in which I was brought over, in the men's apartment, there were several brothers, who, in the sale, were sold in different lots; and it was very moving on this occasion, to see and hear their cries at parting. O, ye nominal[20] Christians! might not an African ask you—Learned you this from your God, who says unto you, Do unto all men as you would men should do unto you?[21] Is it not enough that we are torn from our country and friends, to toil for your luxury and lust of gain? Must every tender feeling be likewise sacrificed to your avarice? Are the dearest friends and relations, now rendered more dear by their separation from their kindred, still to be parted from each other, and thus prevented from cheering the gloom of slavery, with the small comfort of being together, and mingling their sufferings and sorrows? Why are parents to lose their children, brothers their sisters, or husbands their wives? Surely, this is a new refinement in cruelty, which, while it has no advantage to atone[22] for it, thus aggravates distress, and adds fresh horrors even to the wretchedness of slavery.

---

[20] Nominal means "in name only."

[21] "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." (Matthew 7:12)

[22] Atone means "to make amends" or "to compensate for."

Vocabulary

clamor (klam′ ər) n. confused, insistent shouting scruple (skro͞o′ pəl) n. moral principle

Slave Narrative How is this section different from the rest of the work? Why does Equiano make this change? 1

Respond How does Equiano's use of the word refinement strengthen the impact of this sentence? 2

Writing Practice

SMALL GROUP

Questions Remind students that three types of questions are frequently used with literature.

- Literal questions ask readers to recall facts stated in the text. (What did Equiano observe from the ship?)
- Interpretive questions ask readers to explain the meaning of the words and require the reader to draw inferences. (What does Equiano imply about himself when he says, "At last, when the ship we were in, had got in all her cargo"?)
- Evaluative questions ask readers to go beyond the text by making outside connections or offering personal opinions or ideas that cannot be inferred from the text. (How does reading about this time period from the perspective of Equiano make you feel about American history?)

Have students work in groups to write one of each type of question about the passage. When each group has finished, redistribute the questions to new groups to answer the questions. Solicit examples of questions from the class and discuss which type of question each is and why.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. What was your reaction to the description of life on a slave ship?

2. (a)What does Equiano fear will happen to him when he is taken aboard the ship? (b)Why?

3. (a)In spite of his fear, Equiano displays great curiosity. Relate an incident that reveals this curiosity. (b)What might the incident reveal about his character?

4. (a)What phrases does Equiano use to describe his feelings about slavery's separation of loved ones? (b)Why does he regard it as he does?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)How does Equiano's tone in the last paragraph shift? (b)What is the effect of this change?

6. Equiano's book was a best seller in its time. (a)Why do you think his story so successfully captured the public's interest? (b)Why would his story have been useful to the cause of abolition?

Connect

7. Big Idea Life in the New World How has reading this work affected your attitudes about personal freedom, human nature, or our nation's history of enslavement of Africans? Explain, using details from the selection.

8. Connect to the Author Equiano was only eleven years old when slave traders kidnapped him. From his narrative, are you able to picture both the young, scared boy and the middle-aged writer and abolitionist? Explain.

Primary Visual Artifact

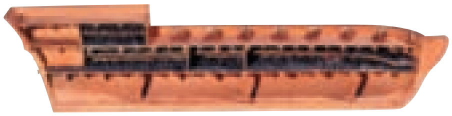
A Nightmarish Journey

Enslaved African men, women, and children endured brutal, inhuman conditions as they were shipped across the Atlantic to the Americas. Crammed against one another below deck, they could neither stand up nor turn over. During the day, they were sometimes brought on deck, where they would be forced to do exercises while shackled in iron chains. The filthy conditions below deck caused widespread disease, and an estimated 13 percent of the captives on these ships died before reaching their destination. This model, created in the late eighteenth century, depicts the interior of one such ship.

Group Activity Discuss the following questions with your classmates.

1. (a)What effect does the scale on which the people in the model are represented have? (b)How might the effect have been created?

2. (a)How does this image compare to the one you imagined as you read? (b) How does viewing this image inform your understanding of the selection?



After You Read

Assess

1. Students should support their responses with details.

2. (a) He fears the white men will kill and eat him (b) His youth; never having seen a white person before

3. (a) Equiano observes the sailors who are using a navigation instrument (b) He remains curious and eager to learn.

4. (a) "A new refinement in cruelty"; "adds fresh horrors even to the wretchedness of slavery." (b) Slavery is made even more horrible without family support.

5. (a) From matter-of-fact to impassioned as Equiano directly challenges those who trade and hold slaves (b) To provide a call to action

6. (a) The book described slavery through the eyes of a real-life slave. (b) It showed the victims of slavery to be human beings with the same right to dignity as other people.

7. Students may say that the graphic images of a slave ship were shocking, making them realize the cruelty that people are capable of.

8. Students may say that Equiano's refined language make it easier to picture him as a writer and abolitionist, rather than as an 11-year-old boy.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 71–72.

Primary Visual Artifact

1. (a)The scale is disturbing because each person seems to be a tiny piece of cargo, rather than an individual. (b)This indicates that the slave trade dehumanized captives and treated them as commodities.

2. (a)Students may have envisioned suffering individuals, rather than rows of identical captives. (b)The image illustrates the unbearably cramped conditions on the ships, as well as suggesting the dehumanizing lens through which slave traders viewed their captives.

After You Read

Literary Element

ACT Skills Practice

1. A is the correct answer because Equiano's personal experiences are what distinguish his slave narrative from an opinion statement and strengthen its message.
2. H is the correct answer because often one person's courage in speaking out makes it easier for others to step forward as well.

Progress Check

Can students identify a slave narrative?

If No → See Unit 1 Teaching Resource Book, p. 77.

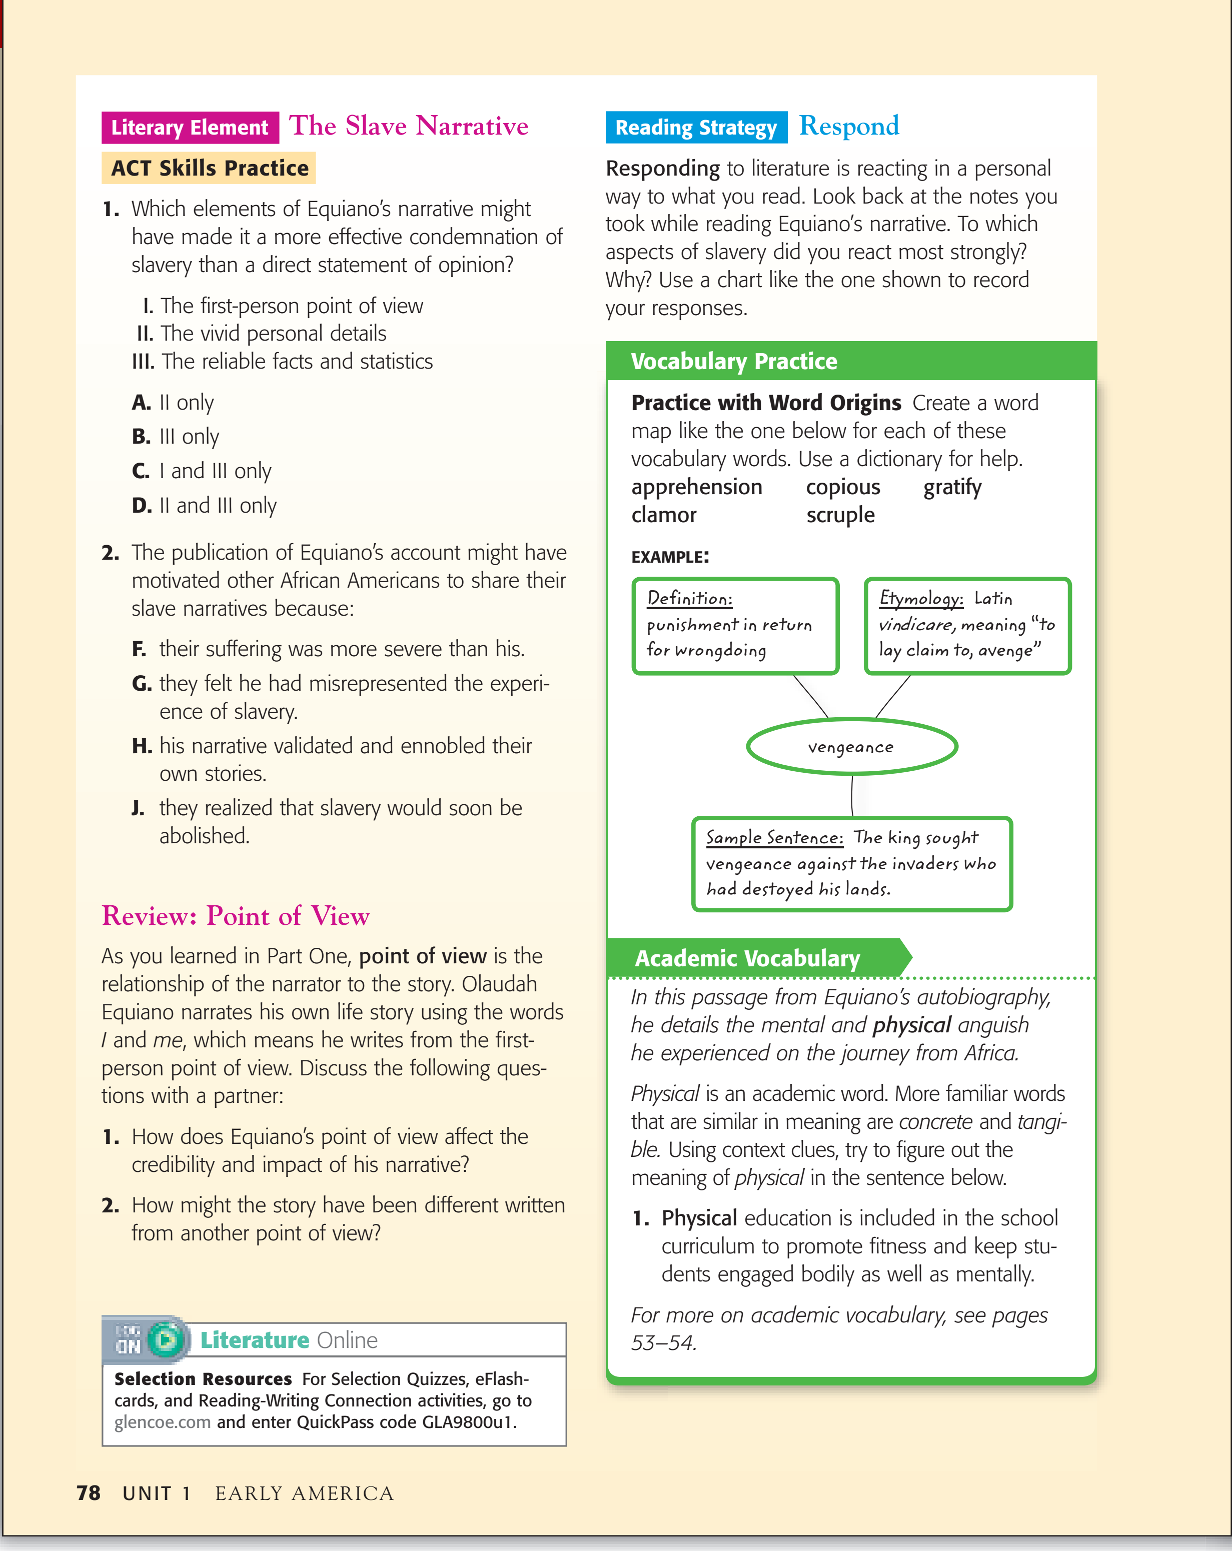
Review: Point of View

1. Students should note that the first-person point of view captures the horror and trauma of the slave ships in a very personal way.
2. A third-person narrative would seem more removed from the events.

Progress Check

Can students respond to literature?

If No → See Unit 1 Teaching Resource Book, p. 78.



Literary Element The Slave Narrative

ACT Skills Practice

1. Which elements of Equiano's narrative might have made it a more effective condemnation of slavery than a direct statement of opinion?

   I. The first-person point of view
   II. The vivid personal details
   III. The reliable facts and statistics

   A. II only
   B. III only
   C. I and III only
   D. II and III only

2. The publication of Equiano's account might have motivated other African Americans to share their slave narratives because:

   F. their suffering was more severe than his.
   G. they felt he had misrepresented the experience of slavery.
   H. his narrative validated and ennobled their own stories.
   J. they realized that slavery would soon be abolished.

Review: Point of View

As you learned in Part One, point of view is the relationship of the narrator to the story. Olaudah Equiano narrates his own life story using the words I and me, which means he writes from the first-person point of view. Discuss the following questions with a partner:

1. How does Equiano's point of view affect the credibility and impact of his narrative?
2. How might the story have been different written from another point of view?

LOG ON Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Reading Strategy Respond

Responding to literature is reacting in a personal way to what you read. Look back at the notes you took while reading Equiano's narrative. To which aspects of slavery did you react most strongly? Why? Use a chart like the one shown to record your responses.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Origins Create a word map like the one below for each of these vocabulary words. Use a dictionary for help.

apprehension copious gratify clamor scruple

EXAMPLE:

Definition: punishment in return for wrongdoing

Etymology: Latin vindicare, meaning "to lay claim to, avenge" vengeance

Sample Sentence: The king sought vengeance against the invaders who had destoyed his lands.

Academic Vocabulary

In this passage from Equiano's autobiography, he details the mental and physical anguish he experienced on the journey from Africa.

Physical is an academic word. More familiar words that are similar in meaning are concrete and tangible. Using context clues, try to figure out the meaning of physical in the sentence below.

1. Physical education is included in the school curriculum to promote fitness and keep students engaged bodily as well as mentally.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Vocabulary Practice

apprehension—Etymology: Latin apprehendere, meaning "to grasp" Sample sentence: Because the doctor had given her a shot on the last visit, Maeve felt apprehension about tomorrow's appointment.

clamor—Etymology: Latin clamare, meaning "to cry out" Sample sentence: We knew the strikers had arrived because we could hear a clamor in front of the building.

copious—Etymology: Latin copia, meaning "abundance" Sample sentence: He took copious notes during the lecture so that he would remember every detail.

scruple—Etymology: Latin scrupulus, meaning a small weight or measure Sample sentence: A scruple might prevent you from being cruel to someone you do not like.

gratify—Etymology: Latin gratus, meaning "pleasing" Sample sentence: If you gratify a child's every wish, the child may not learn to amuse himself.

Academic Vocabulary

Physical in this sentence means "having to do with the body."

Respond Through Writing

Summary

Report Main Ideas or Events When you write a summary of a piece of nonfiction, you restate the main ideas or events in a short version of the original. A summary does not include personal opinions. In about 100 words, summarize this passage from The Life of Olaudah Equiano.

Prewrite Make a timeline of the events in this passage. The example below refers to Bradford's Of Plymouth Plantation (pages 62–68).

Pilgrims set sail for America
"First Thanksgiving" celebration

Draft Using your timeline, summarize the events of this passage. Avoid inserting your own opinions. Use transitional phrases to make the order of events clear. Below is a sample summary of Bradford's narrative.

In his account, William Bradford details the experience of the Pilgrims aboard the Mayflower. In 1620 they leave Europe to live in America where they can practice their religion freely. Bradford describes the harsh conditions the crew endures during the journey, which ends off the coast of Cape Cod. The Pilgrims settle in Plymouth (present-day Massachusetts), and nearly half of the 100 Pilgrims die in the first few months because they lack shelter and resources. A turning point occurs when the Pilgrims meet the Native Americans Samoset and Squanto. The Pilgrims and Native Americans form a peace treaty, and the Native Americans teach the settlers to farm, fish, and hunt. After nearly a year in America, the Pilgrims celebrate their good harvest with the "First Thanksgiving."

Revise Exchange your summary with a peer. Did you and your partner include the same events? If not, discuss your choices.

Edit and Proofread Proofread your paper, correcting any errors in spelling, grammar, and punctuation.

Learning Objectives

In this assignment, you will focus on the following objectives:

Writing: Writing a summary.
Grammar: Understanding parts of speech.

Grammar Tip

Parts of Speech

A noun is a word that names a person, place, thing, idea, quality, or characteristic. The following are all nouns: ship, Africa, slavery.

An adjective is a word that modifies a noun or pronoun by limiting its meaning. An adjective may tell what kind, which one, how many, or how much. The following are all adjectives: dejected, sorrowful, severe.

In a short piece of writing such as a summary, using a lot of adjectives to modify nouns can take up valuable space. Instead, choose specific nouns to achieve the same effect using fewer words. Compare these two sentences to see this idea in action.

- The hold smelled like a cesspit.
- The hold smelled like a squalid, filthy, rotting pit.

After You Read

Respond Through Writing

Students' summaries should reflect a clear understanding of main themes and events in Equiano's text. Students should use transitional phrases and correct sentence structure and grammar.

Assess students' performance in the following categories using the scoring guide at the bottom of the page. The work:

- shows a comprehensive understanding of the text
- shows a clear understanding of the main ideas and events
- summarizes the main ideas thoroughly
- provides a variety of sentence types; uses precise, descriptive language
- follows English language conventions
- avoids inserting personal opinions

For grammar practice, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 96.

Scoring Guide	4	3	2	1
Grasp of text	thoughtful and comprehensive	comprehensive	limited	minimal
Understanding of main themes and events	clear	general	limited	minimal
Summary of main themes	comprehensive	generally covered	limited coverage	minimal coverage
Language	varied, precise, descriptive	varied, somewhat descriptive	predictable, basic	not varied, limited
Convention errors	few or none	several	many	serious
Personal opinions	totally absent	mostly absent	few	many

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus Transparency 7

Daily Language Practice Transparency 9

Or have students write a private entry in their journal, about a time when they were in a frightening situation involving strangers. What first impressions did they have? Did anything change those impressions? As they read the selection, have students consider the ways in which Mary Rowlandson was able to avoid breaking down under pressure.

Literary History ☆

The Captivity Narrative Most but not all of what came to be known as "Indian-captivity narratives" were written by women. The captivity stories tended to stereotype Native Americans and settlers.

Before You Read

from A Narrative of the Captivity and Restoration of Mrs. Mary Rowlandson

Meet Mary Rowlandson

(1636–1710)

In 1675, a long period of relative peace between the Native Americans and Europeans in New England ended in the bloody conflict known as King Philip's War. King Philip was the white settlers' name for Metacom, the Sachem or leader of the Wampanoag people, who vowed to halt European expansion into his lands. The war began as a series of Native American sieges on colonial towns in present-day Massachusetts, Connecticut, and Rhode Island. Lancaster, a frontier town in central Massachusetts, was one of the last to be ransacked.

At dawn on February 10, 1676, a party of Wampanoag warriors took 24 prisoners from Lancaster, including Mary Rowlandson, her six-year-old daughter, and her older son and daughter. Rowlandson was the wife of Reverend Joseph Rowlandson, the first minister in Lancaster, and many of the townspeople had been using their home as a safe haven. But the Wampanoag quickly overwhelmed the defenders of this makeshift garrison. Both Rowlandson and her six-year-old daughter were wounded during the fray, and the child died eight days later. After being captured, Rowlandson was separated from her two surviving children and allowed only short, sporadic contact with them.

Survival as a Prisoner The Wampanoag killed many of the prisoners, but Rowlandson was spared because she was adept at sewing and knitting. She was held captive for three months. Her wounds healed, and she adapted to the Wampanoags' meager diet. She often bartered her skills as a seamstress for food, knitting a pair of socks for a quart of peas or making a shirt for a hunk of bear meat. The Wampanoag were constantly on the move, traveling as far north as New Hampshire while Rowlandson was being held captive. She had become disoriented early on, and fleeing was not an option, especially because she could not bear to leave her surviving children in the hands of the Wampanoag. A stolen Bible one of the Wampanoag had given her and the small portions of food she managed to procure were all that sustained her.

Reunited with Family In May 1676, Reverend Joseph Rowlandson paid a £20 ransom for the release of his wife and children, and Rowlandson was finally reunited with her family.

> "I had often before this said, that if the Indians should come, I should choose rather to be killed by them than taken alive; but when it came to the trial my mind changed. . . ."
>
> —Mary Rowlandson

Rowlandson's account of her ordeal was published in 1682. It received high acclaim and prompted many imitations. Her memoir is the first—and widely considered the best—example of an American literary form, the so-called Indian-captivity narrative. ☆

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Mary Rowlandson, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Selection Skills

from A Narrative of the Captivity and Restoration of Mrs. Mary Rowlandson

Literary Elements
- Allusion (SE pp. 81, 82, 85, 86)
- Characterization (TE p. 84)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a List (SE p. 86)
- Interjections (TE p. 82)
- Character Study (TE p. 84)

Reading Skills
- Analyze Historical Context (SE pp. 81–83, 86; TE p. 84)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Usage (SE p. 86)
- Parts of Speech (TE p. 81)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Narrative

How did you handle and adapt to unfamiliar situations and surroundings as a kid? Write a journal entry about your responses to being in a strange place.

Build Background

As a child, the Wampanoag chief Metacom had watched his father, Massasoit, help the Pilgrims who arrived on the Mayflower. By 1675, there were about 50,000 Puritans in the Massachusetts Bay Colony. With each passing year, more Puritans arrived, encroaching on the Native Americans' land and disrupting their way of life. Metacom began forming alliances against the settlers. In 1675, after three Wampanoag were executed by the Puritans, a swift, desperate war broke out.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Life in the New World

As you read Rowlandson's narrative, ask yourself, How did the deep cultural conflict between New England's Native American and European inhabitants affect the lives of both groups?

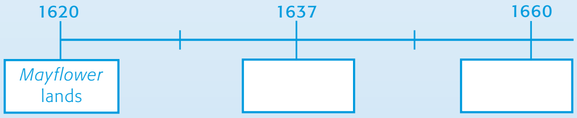
Literary Element Allusion

An allusion is a reference to a well-known character, place, or situation from history or from music, art, or another literary work. As you read, ask yourself, What allusions does Rowlandson use? What purpose do they serve?

Reading Strategy Analyze Historical Context

Analyzing historical context involves gathering background information and exploring social forces that influenced the writing of a literary work. As you read Rowlandson's account, ask yourself, How did cultural conflicts between Native Americans and Europeans lead to King Philip's War?

Tip: Take Notes Use a timeline like the one started below to record the sequence of events that led to King Philip's War.



Learning Objectives

For pages 81–86

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing text structure.

Reading: Analyzing historical content.

Writing: Writing a list.

Vocabulary

desolation (des′ə lā′ shən) n. devastation; misery; sadness; p. 82 The survivors of the hurricane in Florida experienced great desolation when they found their homes destroyed.

daunt (dônt) v. to overcome with fear; to intimidate; p. 82 A visit to the dentist would always daunt her.

compassion (kəm pash′ ən) n. deep awareness of another's suffering with a desire to help; p. 82 The compassion of the doctor earned the gratitude of his patients.

discern (di surn′) v. to recognize as different and distinct; distinguish; p. 84 He could barely discern the boat on the horizon.

lament (lə ment′) v. to express deep sorrow or grief; p. 84 The dead child's mother began to weep and lament.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Mary Rowlandson and the survivors of a Wampanoag attack are taken into the wilderness. Forced to travel on foot, Rowlandson carries her wounded six-year-old child, who dies soon after their capture. Rowlandson's captors treat her better than she expects. Throughout her account, she thanks God for sparing her life.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 99–104.

Vocabulary

Parts of Speech Help students with proper usage of vocabulary words. Students may have heard the adjective daunting, meaning "overwhelming," but may not realize that it is related to the verb daunt. Lament may be used as a noun as well as a verb. Have students discuss other parts of speech that are related to the vocabulary words.

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 107.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Genre Characteristics Explain that the Indian-captivity narrative is a literary genre that has certain features in common with the slave narrative. As students read, direct them to analyze characteristics that both types of captivity narrative share. Ask them to put this information in the form of a graphic that can be shared with the rest of the class. For example, students could create a two-column chart or a Venn diagram.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Students should note the order of events as they read. Have them summarize the major incidents of the narrative. Ask them to conclude their summaries with a sentence that states Rowlandson's purpose in writing the narrative.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Allusion Answer: The writer is a devout person familiar with the Bible; she believes that misfortune does not happen randomly but is an act of God.

For additional literary element practice, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 105.

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Historical Context
Answer: Since Rowlandson "often" talked about what she would do if the Indians came, attacks by the Indians must have been fairly common. If she would rather have been killed than taken alive, it's likely she had heard horrible accounts of what happened to people after they were captured.

Writer's Technique ☆

Tone Somewhat surprisingly, the author's tone in this selection is not bitter. Instead, her faith strengthens her—she seems to feel she has much to be thankful for. By the end of the narrative, she has no hatred for her captors; in fact, she acknowledges the kindness of some.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 7.9
DRP: 57
Lexile: 1030

---

from
A Narrative of the Captivity and Restoration of Mrs. Mary Rowlandson

Mary Rowlandson

Oh the doleful sight that now was to behold at this house! Come, behold the works of the Lord, what desolation he has made in the earth.[1] Of thirty seven persons who were in this one house, none escaped either present death or a bitter captivity, save only one, who might say as he, Job[2] i. 15, And I only am escaped alone to tell the news. There were twelve killed, some shot, some stabbed with their spears, some knocked down with their hatchets. When we are in prosperity, oh, the little that we think of such dreadful sights; and to see our dear friends and relations lie bleeding out their heart-blood upon the ground! . . .

I had often before this said, that if the Indians should come, I should choose rather to be killed by them than taken alive; but when it came to the trial my mind changed; their glittering weapons so daunted my spirit, that I chose rather to go . . . than that moment to end my days. And that I may the better declare what happened to me during that grievous captivity, I shall particularly speak of the several removes[3] we had up and down the wilderness.

There remained nothing to me but one poor wounded babe, and it seemed at present worse than death that it was in such a pitiful condition, bespeaking compassion, and I had no refreshing for it, nor suitable things to revive it . . .

The second remove.—But now (the next morning) I must turn my back upon the town,

---

[1] The author is quoting Psalms 46:8.

[2] In the Bible, Job is a good man. His faith in God is tested by many afflictions. Messengers bring word of catastrophes affecting his possessions and family members. Each messenger tells Job that he alone has escaped to tell the news.

[3] Here, removes means "changes of residence"; we would say moves today.

1 Allusion What does this allusion reveal immediately about the writer?

Vocabulary

desolation (des′ ə lā′ shən) n.	devastation; misery; sadness

2 Analyze Historical Context What clues does this statement offer about the historical context?

Vocabulary

daunt (dônt) v.	to overcome with fear; to intimidate compassion (kəm pash′ ən) n.	deep awareness of another's suffering with a desire to help

Grammar Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Interjections Say: Interjections are words or phrases that express emotion or feeling. In the first paragraph of the excerpt from Mary Rowlandson's narrative, for example, she uses interjections:

- "O[h] the doleful sight"
- "Oh, the little that we think of such dreadful sights"

Explain that an interjection is usually followed by a comma or an exclamation point. Other examples of interjections include wow, aha, um, oops, shh, and eek. Direct students to rewrite another paragraph of the selection, using one or two interjections at appropriate points.

and travel with them into the vast and desolate wilderness, I know not whither.[4] It is not my tongue or pen can express the sorrows of my heart and bitterness of my spirit that I had at this departure: but God was with me in a wonderful manner, carrying me along, and bearing up my spirit, that it did not quite fail. One of the Indians carried my poor wounded babe upon a horse: it went moaning all along, I shall die, I shall die! I went on foot after it, with sorrow that cannot be expressed. At length I took it off the horse, and carried it in my arms, till my strength failed, and I fell down with it. Then they set me upon a horse, with my wounded child in my lap. . . .

Thus nine days I sat upon my knees, with my babe in my lap, till my flesh was raw again. My child, being even ready to depart this sorrowful world, they bid me carry it out to another wigwam; (I suppose because they would not be troubled with such spectacles;) whither I went with a very heavy heart, and down I sat with the picture of death in my lap. About two hours in the night, my sweet babe, like a lamb, departed this life, on Feb. 18, 1675 [1676] it being about six years and five months old. It was nine days (from the first wounding) in this miserable condition, without any refreshing of one nature or other, except a little cold water. I cannot but take notice how, at another time, I could not bear to be in the room where any dead person was; but now the case is changed; I must and could lie down by my dead babe, side by side, all the night after. I have thought since of the wonderful goodness of God to me, in preserving me so in the use of my reason and senses in that distressed time, that I did not use wicked and violent means to end my own miserable life. In the morning, when they understood that my child was dead, they sent for me home to my master's wigwam; (by my master, in this writing, must be understood Quannopin, who was a Saggamore,[5] and married King Philip's wife's sister; not that he first took me, but I was sold to him by another ☆ Narrhaganset Indian, who took me when first I came out of the garrison).[6] I went to take up my dead child in my arms to carry it with me, but they bid me let it alone; there was no resisting, but go I must and leave it. When I had been a while at my master's wigwam, I took the first opportunity I could get to go look after my dead child. When I came, I asked them what they had done with it. They told me it was upon the hill; then they went and shewed me where it was, where I saw the ground was newly dug, and there they told me they had buried it; there I left that child in the wilderness, and must commit it, and myself also, in this wilderness condition, to Him who is above all.

. . . During my abode in this place Philip spake to me to make a shirt for his boy, which I did; for which he gave me a shilling;[7] I offered the money to my master, but he bade me keep it; and with it I bought a piece of horse flesh. Afterwards I made a cap for his boy, for which he invited me to dinner; I went, and he gave me a pancake about as big as two fingers; it was made of parched wheat, beaten and fried in bear's grease, but I thought I never tasted pleasanter meat in my life. There was a squaw who spake to me to make a shirt for her sannup; for which she gave me a piece of bear. Another asked me to knit a pair of stockings, for which she gave me a quart of peas. I boiled my peas and bear together, and invited my master and mistress to dinner; but the proud gossip, because I served them both in one dish, would eat nothing, except one bit that he gave her upon the point of his knife. Hearing that my son was come to this place, I went to see him, and found him lying flat upon the ground; I asked him how he could

---

[4] Whither means "to what place."

[5] A Saggamore was a subordinate chief in the hierarchy of various Native American peoples.

[6] A garrison is a military post.

[7] A shilling was an English or early American coin, whose value was 20 pence (pennies) or 1⁄20 pound.

Analyze Historical Context Why does the author include this information? 3

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Analyze Historical Context

Answer: Rowlandson is trying to place the story in historical context. The reference to King Philip helps to place the events at the time of King Philip's War.

Political History ☆

Colonial Garrisons The "garrison" to which Rowlandson refers was the group of homes in her settlement designated as a fortress during invasions. Different families were assigned to different houses. At the time of this invasion, 37 people were seeking shelter in Rowlandson's home, which was part of the designated garrison.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Ask students to select a brief passage of the narrative and rewrite it from the third person point of view. Have students compare their versions with the originals. Ask them to decide how the passage changes when the narrative voice changes.

Intermediate Because of the time period and context, Rowlandson uses words from Native American languages, such as wigwam and sannup. Have students work in pairs or groups to find other words that are specific to Rowlandson's historical era. (garrison, shilling) Direct students to derive meanings of the words from context and to check their responses in a dictionary. Ask students to paraphrase the sentences in the text where the words appear. Have pairs or groups exchange their sentences for review and revision.

Teach

Big Idea 1

Life in the New World

Answer: Rowlandson's son must hide his praying, which suggests that he would be punished by the Native Americans for doing so. His devotion to God, however—like that of most early settlers—leads him to risk injury in order to pray.

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Historical Context

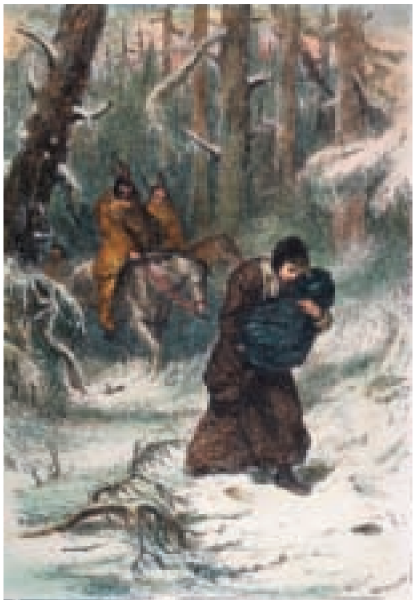
Ask: How do these details show Rowlandson's accurate perception of her own circumstances? (She realizes that the Native Americans need gunpowder to support the war effort and might be willing to sell her back to a white purchaser in Albany in exchange for powder. She also realizes that the availability of horses might solve the practical difficulty of her getting away on foot.)

Literary Element 3

Characterization

Say: Rowlandson's details in this passage reflect well on her captors. Why do you think she includes these positive details? (She may have included the details simply because she was an honest person or because she wanted to show the power and goodness of God.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS Discuss the meanings of the terms piety and courage. Have students orally give evidence of these two qualities of Rowlandson's.



The Indian captivity of Mrs. Mary Rowlandson during King Philip's War in 1676, c. 19th century. Color engraving. The Granger Collection, NY.

sleep so? he answered me, that he was not asleep, but at prayer; and lay so, that they might not observe what he was doing. I pray God he may remember these things, now he is returned in safety. At this place (the sun now getting higher) what with the beams and heat of the sun, and the smoke of the wigwams, I thought I should have been blind; I could scarce discern one wigwam from another. There was here one Mary Thurston of Medfield, who, seeing how it was with me, lent me a hat to wear; but as soon as I was gone, the squaw (who owned that Mary Thurston) came running after me, and got it away again. Here there was a squaw who gave me one spoonful of meal;[8] I put it in my pocket to keep it safe; yet, notwithstanding, somebody stole it, but put five Indian corns in the room of it; which corns were the greatest provision I had in my travel for one day.

The Indians returning from Northampton, brought with them some horses and sheep, and other things which they had taken; I desired them that they would carry me to Albany upon one of those horses, and sell me for powder; for so they had sometimes discoursed.[9] I was utterly hopeless of getting home on foot the way that I came. I could hardly bear to think of the many weary steps I had taken to come to this place. 2

. . . My son being now about a mile from me, I asked liberty to go and see him; they bade me go, and away I went; but quickly lost myself, travelling over hills and through swamps, and could not find the way to him. And I cannot but admire at the wonderful power and goodness of God to me, in that though I was gone from home, and met with all sorts of Indians, and those I had no knowledge of, and there being no Christian soul near me; yet not one of them offered the least imaginable miscarriage to me. I turned homeward again, and met with my master; he showed me the way to my son: when I came to him I found him not well; and withal he had a boil on his side, which much troubled him; 3 we bemoaned one another a while, as the Lord helped us, and then I returned again. When I was returned, I found myself as unsatisfied as I was before. I went up and down moaning and lamenting; and my spirit was ready to sink with the thoughts of my poor children; my son was ill, and I could not but think of his mournful looks; and no Christian friend was near him to do any office of love for him, either for soul or body.

---

8. Meal is coarsely ground grain.
9. Discoursed means "discussed."

1 Life in the New World How does this short passage illustrate the cultural differences between the Native Americans and the European settlers?

4 Life in the New World Why is it important to Rowlandson that her son have a "Christian friend" near him?

Vocabulary

discern (di surn′) v. to recognize as different and distinct; distinguish

Vocabulary

lament (lə ment′) v. to express deep sorrow or grief

Writing Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Character Study Ask students to name the qualities that Rowlandson shows in her narrative. Have them identify examples of traits other Puritans would have admired, such as piety and perseverance. Have them create a graphic such as a cluster diagram to connect Rowlandson's character traits with specific evidence. For example, to illustrate the quality of perseverance, they could cite her continued patience in caring for her sick child, enduring a long journey, and suffering from food deprivation. Have them write a character study, including a topic sentence that sums up Rowlandson's most significant qualities.

And my poor girl, I knew not where she was, nor whether she was sick or well, or alive or dead. I repaired under these thoughts to my Bible (my great comforter in that time) and that scripture came to my hand, Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee. Psal. lv. 22.

But I was fain[10] to go and look after something to satisfy my hunger; and going among the wigwams, I went into one, and there found a squaw who showed herself very kind to me, and gave me a piece of bear. I put it into my pocket, and came home; but could not find an opportunity to broil it, for fear they would get it from me, and there it lay all that day and night in my stinking pocket. In the morning I went again to the same squaw, who had a kettle of ground nuts boiling; I asked her to let me boil my piece of bear in her kettle, which she did, and gave me some ground nuts to eat with it, and I cannot but think how pleasant it was to me. I have seen bear baked very handsomely amongst the English, and some liked it, but the thoughts that it was bear made me tremble: but now that was savory to me that one would think was enough to turn the stomach of a brute creature.

One bitter cold day I could find no room to sit down before the fire; I went out, and could not tell what to do, but I went into another wigwam where they were also sitting round the fire; but the squaw laid a skin for me, and bid me sit down; and gave me some ground nuts, and bade me come again; and told me they would buy me if they were able; and yet these were strangers to me that I never knew before.

. . . The fourteenth remove.—Now must we pack up and be gone from this thicket, bending our course towards the bay-towns. I having othing to eat by the way this day, but a few crumbs of cake, that an Indian gave my girl the same day we were taken. She gave it me, and I put it into my pocket; there it lay till it was so moldy (for want of good baking) that one could not tell what it was made of; it fell all to crumbs, and grew so dry and hard, that it was like little flints;[11] and this refreshed me many times when I was ready to faint. It was in my thoughts when I put it into my mouth; that if ever I returned, I would tell the world what a blessing the Lord gave to such mean food. As we went along, they killed a deer, with a young one in her; they gave me a piece of the fawn, and it was so young and tender, that one might eat the bones as well as the flesh, and yet I thought it very good. When night came on we sat down; it rained, but they quickly got up a bark wigwam, where I lay dry that night. I looked out in the morning, and many of them had lain in the rain all night. I saw by their reeking.[12] Thus the Lord dealt mercifully with me many times; and I fared better than many of them.

. . . O the wonderful power of God that I have seen, and the experiences that I have had! I have been in the midst of those roaring lions and savage bears, that feared neither God nor man, nor the devil, by night and day, alone and in company, sleeping all sorts together; and yet not one of them ever offered the least abuse or unchastity to me in word or action. Though some are ready to say I speak it for my own credit; but I speak it in the presence of God, and to His glory.

. . . If trouble from smaller matters begins to arise in me, I have something at hand to check myself with, and say when I am troubled, it was but the other day, that if I had had the world, I would have given it for my freedom. . . . I have learned to look beyond present and smaller troubles, and to be quieted under them, as Moses said, Exod. xiv. 13, Stand still, and see the salvation of the Lord.

FINIS[13] ❧

---

[10] In this instance, fain means "obliged."

[11] Flints refers to pieces of flint, a very hard type of quartz.

[12] Reeking here means "steaming"; that is, water was evaporating from their hair and clothing.

[13] Finis means "The End."

5 Allusion Why do these words help Rowlandson feel better about her son and daughter?

6 Life in the New World How does Rowlandson suggest that life in the New World has changed her?

Teach

Big Idea 4

Life in the New World

Answer: She wants her son to be cared for in the way she would care for him, by taking care of his wounds and also by reminding him to find strength in God.

Literary Element 5

Allusion Answer: The passage she quotes reaffirms the ideas behind her faith: that God will help her if she shares her troubles, and that she can find "great comfort" in the Bible.

Big Idea 6

Life in the New World

Answer: Being in a rougher environment has led her to accept things that she would never have considered acceptable before.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 110.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Rowlandson's frequent use of biblical allusions reflects her religious beliefs. Ask students to explain in a few sentences how Rowlandson's experiences strengthen her religious beliefs.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Dramatize Ask students to rewrite a part of Rowlandson's narrative as a one-act play. Review the conventions of dialogue, stage directions, and sound effects. Discuss how to handle the narrator. Have students develop a script and then cast the play.

Literary History ☆

The Redeemed Captive Almost as popular as Rowlandson's narrative was an account by Reverend John Williams, The Redeemed Captive, Returning unto Zion (1707). His book tells of a forced march to Canada after a raid on a frontier village by French and Native American forces. Williams spent eight weeks with Abenaki Indians and more than two years among the French.

Progress Check

Can students analyze historical context?

If No → See Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 106.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students should identify an incident and provide support.
2. (a) She would rather be killed than taken alive. (b) She may have been too frightened to resist.
3. (a) Praying but pretending to sleep (b) Wampanoags frowned on displays of piety by captives.
4. (a) She resents being denied adequate food and is upset about the lack of care for her children. But, she notes acts of kindness. (b) Students may say she gives a balanced portrayal.
5. (a) Strength, religious faith (b) Her ability to cope with her ordeal may seem surprising.
6. Such accounts may have deepened settlers' mistrust of Native Americans and led to harsh policies.
7. Students answers will vary, but should point to the initial act and the retributive act.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 73–74.

Literary Element

1. She uses biblical allusions to create powerful imagery and to stress God's providence.
2. It emphasizes her sufferings.

Writing

Students' should list sensible options with clear explanations of how these options would be helpful.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. What incident or observation in Rowlandson's account surprised or moved you most?
2. (a)What does Rowlandson say that she always intended to do if Native Americans attacked? (b)Why do you think she changes her mind?
3. (a)When Rowlandson first visits her son, what does she find him doing? (b)What might this episode suggest about the attitude of the Wampanoag?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. (a)How does Rowlandson portray her captors? (b)In your opinion, is this portrayal fair?
5. (a)What qualities or behaviors help Rowlandson survive her ordeal? (b)What did you find most puzzling about her behavior? Explain.

Connect

6. Big Idea Life in the New World Captivity narratives were a popular literary genre in early America. What effect do you think they might have had on attitudes toward Native Americans?
7. Connect to Today Retribution—taking revenge—has long been a part of cultural clashes. What current conflicts seem to you to be fueled by a desire for retribution?

Literary Element Allusion

The Bible shaped the Puritan culture of early New England. Rowlandson's biblical allusions would be readily understood by the first readers of her account.

1. What are some reasons for her biblical allusions?
2. What is the effect of alluding to the Book of Job?

Reading Strategy Analyze Historical Context

SAT Skills Practice

1. Rowlandson's account suggests that the settlers in King Philip's War were

   (A) master strategists
   (B) aggressive allies
   (C) vulnerable victims
   (D) outside agitators
   (E) skilled consultants

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Usage Respond to these statements to help you explore the meanings of vocabulary words from the selection.

1. Name someone in current events for whom you have felt compassion.
2. Give examples of things that might daunt you if you found yourself in a foreign country.
3. Describe a situation in which you might experience desolation.
4. Give an example from a book or movie in which a character laments.
5. Explain how you discern good music from bad.

Writing

Write a List In response to a series of painful and terrifying events, Mary Rowlandson wrote a memoir. What are some other ways to deal with and work through difficult experiences? Make a list of options. Next to each, jot down why it might be helpful.

Vocabulary

1. Refugees, people who have experienced a natural disaster
2. Not knowing the language might daunt them.
3. A situation that would leave them miserable
4. A book or movie in which a character expresses deep sorrow or grief
5. What they look for in music

Grammar Workshop

Sentence Combining

Literature Connection Mary Rowlandson was not a professional writer, but she had to make choices about how to express herself. Consider the passage below:

> "Hearing that my son was come to this place, I went to see him, and found him lying flat upon the ground . . ."
>
> —Mary Rowlandson, from A Narrative of the Captivity and Restoration of Mrs. Mary Rowlandson

Rowlandson could have written the passage above in the following manner: I heard that my son was come to this place. I went to see him. I found him lying flat upon the ground. Instead she chose to combine these ideas into one sentence.

To write effectively, you must make similar choices about sentence length and structure. Making short sentences into longer ones helps you develop your own writing style. Sentence combining is a research-tested writing strategy that enables you to explore options and develop style.

Strategies for Sentence Combining

Here are some specific ways to help you combine sentences.

- Use a prepositional phrase, a group of words that begins with a preposition and ends with a noun or a pronoun.

  Original: Mary searched for her son. She went over hills and through swamps.

  Combined with prepositional phrases: Mary searched for her son over hills and through swamps.

- Use an appositive, a noun or pronoun placed next to another noun or pronoun to give additional information about it. An appositive phrase is an appositive plus any words that modify it.

  Original: One woman gave Mary a spoonful of meal. Meal is a coarse flour made from corn.

  Combined with an appositive phrase: One woman gave Mary a spoonful of meal, a coarse flour made from corn.

Learning Objectives

For pages 87–88

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objectives:

Grammar:
Recognizing the function of phrases, conjunctions, and clauses in sentence combining.
Combining sentences using a variety of techniques.

Drafting Tip

Vary the length and structure of your sentences. Work for a rhythmic, interesting balance of long and short sentences, remembering that brevity often has dramatic force. By using different kinds of sentence openers—and by sometimes tucking information in the middle of a sentence—you can create stylistic interest.

Revising Tip

Read your draft aloud, stopping now and then to experiment with clusters of sentences. Whisper them to yourself in various combinations. As you read, listen to which version sounds most effective. This process is faster than rewriting and helps you decide on a "best sentence" to write down.

Grammar Workshop

Sentence Combining

Focus

Write the following sentences on the board:

My bike is brand new.

I trust Oren.

I let Oren borrow my bike.

Ask: How could you combine these sentences into one? (Although my bike is brand new, I let Oren borrow it because I trust him.)

Teach

Sentence Combining Point out that combining sentences requires students to think about the relationship between the two sentences. Say: When you combine sentences, you often eliminate the subject and verb from one sentence. Sometimes there are several ways to combine sentences. Write the following sentences on the board:

Joel's friend danced gracefully.

She used to be a ballerina.

Ask: How could you combine these sentences? (Joel's friend, a former ballerina, danced gracefully. Joel's friend danced gracefully because she used to be a ballerina.)

For additional grammar practice, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 112.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging Review some of the grammatical constructions that students can use to combine sentences. Remind them that a prepositional phrase does not have a subject or a verb. Have students work in pairs to create prepositional phrases using the prepositions over, under, through, and around. To help students with appositives, have them combine the following sentences by making one sentence an appositive:

Acorns come from oak trees.

Acorns are a type of nut.

(Acorns, a type of nut, come from oak trees.)

Teach

Conjunctions Help students review the differences between coordinating and subordinating conjunctions.

Ask: What is the meaning of the prefixes co- and sub-? (together and under) Remind students that these prefixes can help them remember that coordinating conjunctions join groups of words with equal weight, while subordinating conjunctions join clauses so that one is dependent on the other.

Assess

Practice

1. Mary had never eaten bear meat or ground nuts before, but she made them into a delicious stew.
2. The Indians returned from Northampton with sheep and horses that they had stolen.
3. Traveling with her captors, Mary remained dry at night because she slept in a bark wigwam.

- Use a participial phrase. A participle is a verb form, often ending in –ing or –ed, that functions as an adjective or adverb. A participial phrase—which includes a participle and its related words—also functions as an adjective or adverb.

Original: Mary grieved for her child. She visited the grave.

Combined with a participial phrase: Grieving for her child, Mary visited the grave.

- Use a coordinating conjunction to join words or groups of words with equal grammatical weight in a sentence. Coordinating conjunctions include words such as and, but, or, so, nor, for, and yet.

Original: Mary was always hungry. She was often physically exhausted. Her captors did not injure her.

Combined with coordinating conjunctions: Mary was always hungry and often physically exhausted, but her captors did not injure her.

- Use a subordinating conjunction to join two clauses, or ideas, so that one is dependent upon the other. Subordinating conjunctions include words such as after, although, as, because, if, since, and when.

Original: Mary was often afraid. Her strength and faith supported her.

Combined with a subordinating conjunction: Although Mary was often afraid, her strength and faith supported her.

- Use an adjective clause, a group of words with a subject and a predicate that modifies a noun or a pronoun. Adjective clauses often begin with who, whom, whose, that, and which.

Original: King Philip was their leader. His real name was Metacom.

Combined with an adjective clause: King Philip, whose real name was Metacom, was their leader.

Practice

1. Use coordinating conjunctions to combine these sentences: Mary had never eaten bear meat before. She had never eaten ground nuts. She made them into a delicious stew.
2. Use a prepositional phrase and an adjective clause to combine these sentences: The Indians returned from Northampton. They had sheep and horses. They had stolen the sheep and horses.
3. Use a participial phrase and a subordinating conjunction to combine the following sentences: Mary traveled with her captors. She remained dry at night. She slept in a bark wigwam.

Test-Taking Tip

Remember that there are many ways to combine sentences. When deciding which solution works best, ask yourself the following questions:

- Is my solution free of excess words?
- Does my solution emphasize the important idea of the sentence?
- Does my solution flow naturally when I read it aloud?
- Is my solution a complete sentence with a subject and predicate and not just a long fragment?

Literature Online

Grammar For more grammar practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Grammar Practice

SMALL GROUP

Conjunctions Have students work with a partner. Say: Each of you should write a sentence that will cause your partner to ask a question. Then exchange papers and your partner will add a question. Exchange papers again, and write one sentence that includes your initial statement as well as your answer. Use either a coordinating or a subordinating conjunction in your final sentence. Give students the following model:

- Initial sentence: My father does not like to cook.
- Question: Why?
- Final sentence: My father does not like to cook because he often gets distracted and the food burns.

Have students share their final sentences with the class, explaining whether they combined their sentences with a coordinating or subordinating conjunction.

Before You Read
Upon the Burning of Our House and To My Dear and Loving Husband

Meet Anne Bradstreet
(1612–1672)

> "[Anne Bradstreet wrote] . . . the first good poems in America, while rearing eight children, lying frequently sick, keeping house at the edge of the wilderness, [and] managed a poet's range and extension within confines as severe as any American poet has confronted."
>
> —Adrienne Rich

Anne Bradstreet was the first published poet in America—a remarkable accomplishment considering that writing was thought improper for a woman at that time.

From England to the New World Anne Bradstreet (born Dudley) was born and raised in England. At age 16, Anne married Simon Bradstreet, a friend of the family. Two years later, Anne, her husband, and her parents boarded the Arbella as members of John Winthrop's party and sailed to the Massachusetts Bay Colony to join the Puritan community there. At first, Bradstreet was appalled by the crude life of the settlement, but she soon adjusted. She wrote, "I changed my condition and was married, and came into this country, where I found a new world and new manners, at which my heart rose [reacted angrily]. But after I was convinced it was the way of God, I submitted to it and joined to the church at Boston."

In Massachusetts, Bradstreet began to write poetry. At first, she imitated the lofty style of established male poets. As a result, her early poems contain many wooden lines and do not reveal her deeper emotions. Bradstreet wrote for her own satisfaction and shared her poems only with her family and friends. Nonetheless, her brother-in-law, the Reverend John Woodbridge, took fifteen of her poems to England without her knowledge and had them published as The Tenth Muse Lately Sprung Up in America. (The nine Muses were ancient Greek goddesses who inspired writers and artists.)

A Change of Style When Bradstreet saw The Tenth Muse in print, she was dissatisfied with her ☆ work and stopped writing imitative verse. Instead, she started writing poetry about her experiences as a woman in seventeenth-century New England. Bradstreet's best poems explore her love for her husband, her sadness at the death of her parents, and her struggle to accept the losses she suffered. Six years after Bradstreet's death, an American edition of The Tenth Muse appeared under the new title Several Poems Compiled with Great Variety of Wit and Learning.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Anne Bradstreet, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Literature Launchers:
Pre-Reading Videos DVD, Selection Launcher

Selection Focus
Transparency 8

Daily Language Practice
Transparency 10

Or show students an object that is meaningful to you, such as a photo album or a gift from a friend. Ask: Which of your possessions are most important to you? How would you feel if those possessions were destroyed? Have students consider their personal feelings as they read about the fire that destroyed all of Bradstreet's possessions.

Language History ☆

Plain Style Most Puritan writers preferred to use simple words in clear order. They believed that a plain style would be understood by all people. They avoided elaborate images and figurative language.

Selection Skills

Upon the Burning of Our House/To My Dear and Loving Husband

Literary Elements
- Metaphor (SE pp. 90, 91, 93; TE p. 90)
- Author's Purpose (SE p. 93)
- Speaker (TE p. 91)

Vocabulary Skills
- Synonyms (SE p. 94)
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 94)
- Adjectives (TE p. 90)

Reading Skills
- Draw Conclusions (SE pp. 90, 91, 94)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write an Extended Metaphor (SE p. 94)
- Inverted Syntax (TE p. 92)

Listening/ Viewing/ Speaking Skills
- Analyze Art (TE p. 92)

Study Skills/Research/Assessment
- Short Response (TE p. 94)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

In "Upon the Burning of Our House," Anne Bradstreet comes to terms with the loss of her home and her possessions to a fire. In "To My Dear and Loving Husband," she rejoices in her love for her husband.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 113–118.

Teach

Vocabulary

Adjectives Point out that bereft is an alternative form of the past participle bereaved. Bereaved is typically used to describe a person whose loved one has died. Bereft describes a loss of anything precious—a person, a feeling, or property.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Poems

What possessions and people do you most value? Make a list of them. Next to each, describe how you would feel if you were to lose that person or thing forever.

Build Background

Bradstreet's husband and father were both governors of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. Their prominence resulted in frequent moves and separations. This instability, along with the daily tragedies of colonial life and Bradstreet's Puritan beliefs, likely influenced her sense of impermanence.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Life in the New World

As a Puritan, Bradstreet viewed all events within the context of God's divine plan. She found similarities between the domestic details of daily life and the spiritual details of her religious life. As you read, ask yourself, How did Bradstreet's religious beliefs affect her relationships and her interactions with the harsh circumstances of early American life?

Literary Element Metaphor

A metaphor is a figure of speech that compares or equates two seemingly unlike things. As you read, ask yourself, What metaphors does Bradstreet use? What do they add to her work?

Reading Strategy Draw Conclusions About Author's Beliefs

When you draw a conclusion, you make a general statement based on the information in a text. For example, you might conclude that the author of an essay about the beauty of a prairie would support prairie conservation efforts. As you read Bradstreet's poems, ask yourself, What conclusions can I draw about Bradstreet's personal and religious beliefs from the text?

Tip: Graphic Organizer Use a two-column chart to record details from the poems and the conclusions you draw from them.

Detail	Conclusion
p. 91, line 54 "My hope and treasure lies above."	Bradstreet valued the afterlife more than earthly existence.

Learning Objectives

For pages 89–94

In studying these texts, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing metaphor.

Reading: Drawing conclusions about author's beliefs.

Writing: Applying extended metaphor in a poem.

Vocabulary

bereft (bi reft´) adj. deprived of the possession or use of something; p. 91 The foul weather left him bereft of his usual good mood.

chide (chīd) v. to find fault with or to blame; p. 91 The teacher chided the class for not completing their homework.

recompense (rek´ əm pens´) n. something given in return for something else; compensation; p. 92 When the soles of his new shoes came apart, the athlete requested recompense from the shoe company.

Reading Practice

Metaphor Prepare students to read and respond to the metaphors in Bradstreet's poetry by asking students to define and give examples of metaphors. A metaphor expresses an imaginative comparison that should not be interpreted literally. List some metaphors and have students explain the types of comparisons:

- It's raining cats and dogs.
- The moon was a golden coin in the sky.
- We are in the springtime of life.

Invite students to provide other examples of metaphors from everyday expressions or from their reading.

Have students create a chart to analyze and paraphrase metaphors in Bradstreet's poetry.

Upon the Burning of Our House

Line	Metaphor	Paraphrase
45	"With glory richly furnished"	Filled with God's glory

Upon the Burning of Our House
July 10th, 1666

Anne Bradstreet

In silent night when rest I took
For sorrow near I did not look
I wakened was with thund'ring noise
And piteous shrieks of dreadful voice.
That fearful sound of "Fire!" and "Fire!"
Let no man know is my desire.
I, starting up, the light did spy,
And to my God my heart did cry
To strengthen me in my distress
And not to leave me succorless.[1]
Then, coming out, beheld a space
The flame consume my dwelling place.
And when I could no longer look,
I blest His name that gave and took,[2]
That laid my goods now in the dust.
Yea, so it was, and so 'twas just.
It was His own, it was not mine,
Far be it that I should repine;[3]
He might of all justly bereft
But yet sufficient for us left.
When by the ruins oft I past
My sorrowing eyes aside did cast,
And here and there the places spy
Where oft I sat and long did lie:
Here stood that trunk, and there that chest,
There lay that store I counted best.
My pleasant things in ashes lie,
And them behold no more shall I.
Under thy roof no guest shall sit,
Nor at thy table eat a bit.
No pleasant tale shall e'er be told,
Nor things recounted done of old.
No candle e'er shall shine in thee,
Nor bridegroom's voice e'er heard shall be. 2
In silence ever shall thou lie,
Adieu, Adieu,[4] all's vanity.[5]
Then straight I 'gin my heart to chide,
And did thy wealth on earth abide?
Didst fix thy hope on mold'ring dust?
The arm of flesh didst make thy trust?
Raise up thy thoughts above the sky
That dunghill mists away may fly.
Thou hast an house on high erect,
Framed by that mighty Architect,
With glory richly furnished,
Stands permanent though this be fled.
It's purchased and paid for too
By Him who hath enough to do.
A price so vast as is unknown
Yet by His gift is made thine own;
There's wealth enough, I need no more,
Farewell, my pelf,[6] farewell my store.
The world no longer let me love,
My hope and treasure lies above.

---

[1] Succorless means "without assistance" or "helpless."

[2] Refers to Job 1:21, "the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

[3] Repine means "to express unhappiness."

[4] Adieu (ə dyo͞o) is French for "good-bye."

[5] All's vanity is a reference to Ecclesiastes 1:2 and 12:8.

[6] Pelf is a term for wealth, often used disapprovingly.

1 Draw Conclusions About Author's Beliefs What conclusions can you draw about Bradstreet's faith in God from these lines?

3 Metaphor Who is the "mighty Architect" in this metaphor?

Vocabulary

bereft (bi reft′) adj. deprived of something

Vocabulary

chide (chīd) v. to find fault with or to blame

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Predicting helps students identify their expectations for what they will read before they begin. As they read, students can compare their expectations with the text, enhancing their comprehension and involvement with the content. Explain that "Upon the Burning of Our House" tells how a woman reacts when she loses all her possessions. Ask students to write a paragraph predicting her possible reactions. After reading, students can compare their ideas with those in the poem.

Ask: How do such comparisons help you draw conclusions about the author's beliefs? (By considering personal reactions to a situation, a context is created to which a comparison can be made.)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Draw Conclusions

Answer: She believes that God is responsible for all things, good and bad, and that she must trust God's will.

Literary Element 2

Speaker Say: The speaker is the voice of a poem, similar to the narrator in a work of prose. Sometimes the speaker's voice is that of the poet; sometimes, it is that of a fictional person—or even a thing. Ask: How does the structure of these lines suggest that the speaker is presenting a dialogue or debate with herself—possibly as a result of her internal conflict triggered by the fire? (In lines 27–36, her thoughts focus on the tragic destruction of her material possessions. In line 37, however, she reproves or "chides" her own heart, as she recalls that true wealth does not abide on earth.)

Literary Element 3

Metaphor Answer: The "mighty Architect" is God.

Interactive Read and Write

Other options for teaching this selection can be found in

- Interactive Read and Write for EL Students, pp. 17–24
- Interactive Read and Write for Approaching-Level Students, pp. 17–24
- Interactive Read and Write for On-Level Students, pp. 17–24

Teach

Big Idea 1

Life in the New World

Answer: Only God, or the heavens, has the power to reward her husband appropriately.

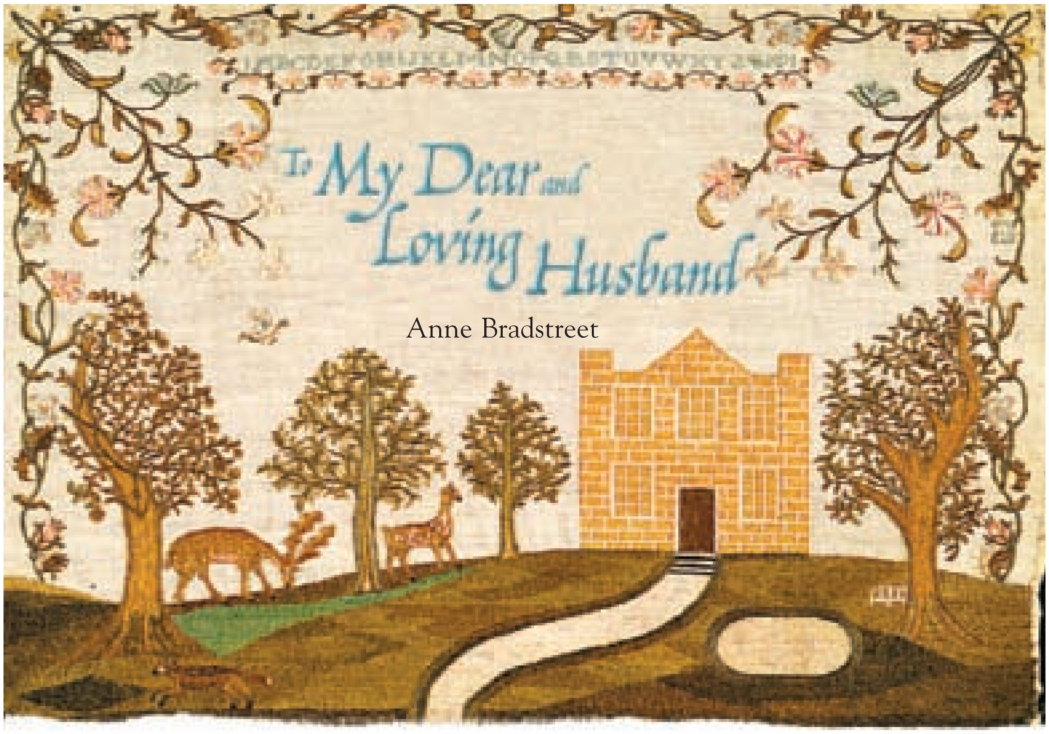
View the Art

This house and garden sampler made of wool and silk was created in 1785 by an unknown British artist. This type of embroidery was a popular form of folk art in colonial America. The alphabet at the top indicates that this sampler had an educational as well as an ornamental function.

Ask: How might the subject of the art connect with the subject of the poem? (The art portrays a scene of domestic tranquility, shown by the animals and the well-tended landscaping; this connects with the speaker's inner contentment and tranquility.)

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 122.



To My Dear and Loving Husband

Anne Bradstreet

If ever two were one, then surely we.
If ever man were loved by wife, then thee;
If ever wife was happy in a man,
Compare with me, ye women, if you can.
I prize thy love more than whole mines of gold
Or all the riches that the East doth hold.
My love is such that rivers cannot quench,
Nor ought[1] but love from thee, give recompense.
Thy love is such I can no way repay,
The heavens reward thee manifold,[2] I pray.
Then while we live, in love let's so persevere[3]
That when we live no more, we may live ever.

---

[1] Ought means "anything."

[2] Here, manifold means "in many different ways."

[3] In the 1600s, the word persevere was pronounced per sé ver, with the accent on the second syllable. Therefore, it rhymes with ever in the following line.

Vocabulary

recompense (rek´ əm pens´) n. something given in return for something else; compensation

Life in the New World How does Bradstreet's description of her love for her husband reflect her religious beliefs? 1

Grammar Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Inverted Syntax Explain that poets often reverse the conventional word order of a sentence. Inversion may be used to emphasize a word or phrase, or it may be used for the sake of rhyme. Ask: How would you rephrase the opening line of "Upon the Burning of Our House" in conventional word order? (In silent night when I took rest.)

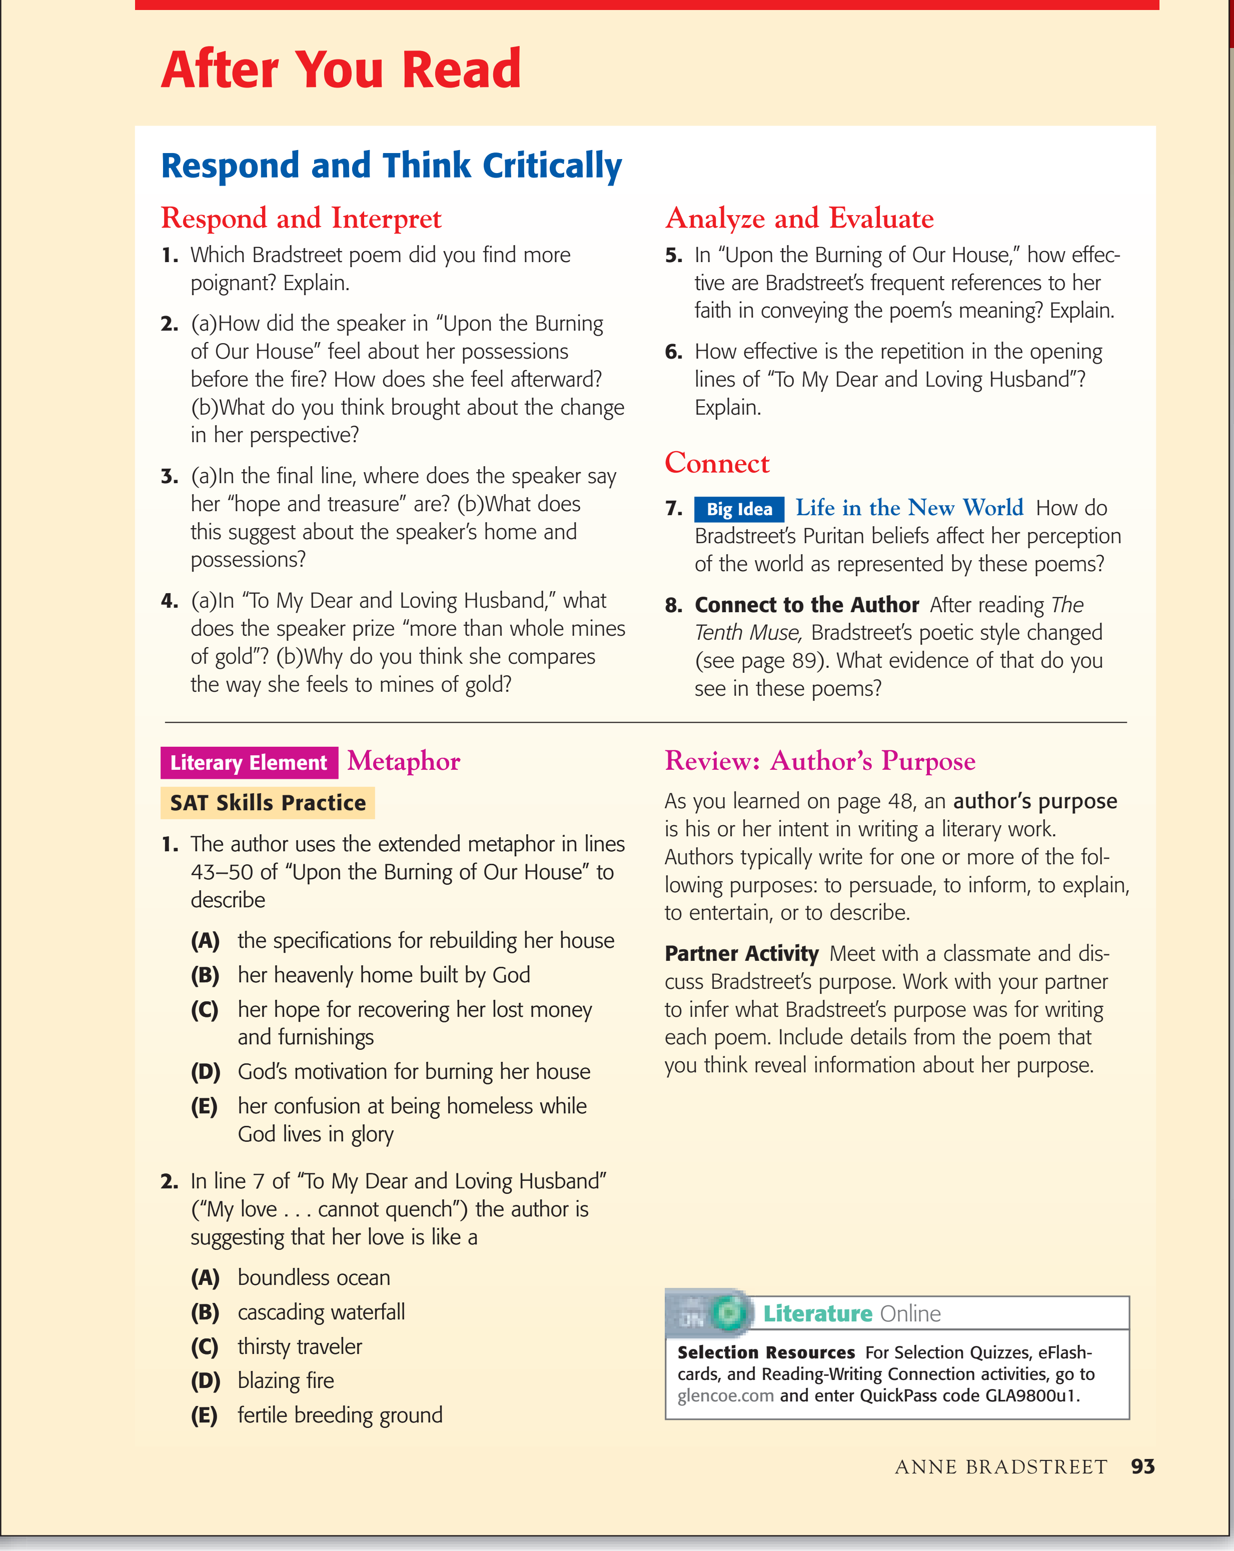
Ask: How does the line change when the word order is changed? Have students practice changing word order by creating "found poems." Have students select one sentence from a newspaper, a textbook, or any accessible printed source. Have students take the sentence and write it in poetic form by rearranging the words and dividing it into lines. The sentence "She shared her poems with family and friends" might become

With family and friends
Her poems she shared

Have students share their "found poems" with the class.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Which Bradstreet poem did you find more poignant? Explain.
2. (a)How did the speaker in "Upon the Burning of Our House" feel about her possessions before the fire? How does she feel afterward? (b)What do you think brought about the change in her perspective?
3. (a)In the final line, where does the speaker say her "hope and treasure" are? (b)What does this suggest about the speaker's home and possessions?
4. (a)In "To My Dear and Loving Husband," what does the speaker prize "more than whole mines of gold"? (b)Why do you think she compares the way she feels to mines of gold?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. In "Upon the Burning of Our House," how effective are Bradstreet's frequent references to her faith in conveying the poem's meaning? Explain.
6. How effective is the repetition in the opening lines of "To My Dear and Loving Husband"? Explain.

Connect

7. Big Idea Life in the New World How do Bradstreet's Puritan beliefs affect her perception of the world as represented by these poems?
8. Connect to the Author After reading The Tenth Muse, Bradstreet's poetic style changed (see page 89). What evidence of that do you see in these poems?

Literary Element Metaphor

SAT Skills Practice

1. The author uses the extended metaphor in lines 43–50 of "Upon the Burning of Our House" to describe
   - (A) the specifications for rebuilding her house
   - (B) her heavenly home built by God
   - (C) her hope for recovering her lost money and furnishings
   - (D) God's motivation for burning her house
   - (E) her confusion at being homeless while God lives in glory
2. In line 7 of "To My Dear and Loving Husband" ("My love . . . cannot quench") the author is suggesting that her love is like a
   - (A) boundless ocean
   - (B) cascading waterfall
   - (C) thirsty traveler
   - (D) blazing fire
   - (E) fertile breeding ground

Review: Author's Purpose

As you learned on page 48, an author's purpose is his or her intent in writing a literary work. Authors typically write for one or more of the following purposes: to persuade, to inform, to explain, to entertain, or to describe.

Partner Activity Meet with a classmate and discuss Bradstreet's purpose. Work with your partner to infer what Bradstreet's purpose was for writing each poem. Include details from the poem that you think reveal information about her purpose.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students' answers will vary. They should cite evidence from the poems to support their opinion.
2. (a) The possessions were important to her; her "sorrowing eyes" look over the ashes and mourn for all the "pleasant things." Later, she decides that her possessions really belong to God. (b) She thought about what is most important in life.
3. (a) She says they are "above," or in heaven. (b) This statement suggests that her home and possessions are impermanent and not her own.
4. (a) Her husband's love (b) She wants to show how deeply she values this love.
5. Some may say that the references make Bradstreet's life and hardships appear universal or ordered by providence.
6. Repetition creates a musical effect and also rhetorically strengthens the speaker's claim.
7. Her beliefs cause her to see the world as both divinely preordained and as transient. Thus, she is willing to accept her fate.
8. Answers will vary, but students should cite evidence from Bradstreet's poem.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 75–76.

Literary Element

1. B is the correct answer because that interpretation supports the message of the poem—the author's realization that her true home is with God.
2. D is the correct answer because the only thing a river possibly could quench is a fire.

Review: Author's Purpose

Sample answers:
"Upon the Burning of Our House"
Detail: "There's wealth enough, I need no more"
Purpose: To explain her beliefs
"To My Dear and Loving Husband"
Detail: "Thy love is such I can no way repay,"
Purpose: To show that she is overjoyed by her husband's love

Progress Check

Can students analyze a metaphor?

If No → See Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 119.

After You Read

Assess

Reading Strategy

1. She feels that they are impermanent—that ultimately all is God's.
2. Students' answers will vary. They might point to Bradstreet's claim that "all's vanity," that "My hope and treasure lies above," and that the "house on high erect,/ Framed by that mighty Architect . . . stands permanent though this be fled."

Vocabulary

1. e 2. c 3. a

Academic Vocabulary

Students should state that site means the location of a building or structure.

Write with Style

Students' writing should reflect an understanding of extended metaphors. Their metaphors should be meaningful and should reflect their personal style.

Reading Strategy Draw Conclusions About Author's Beliefs

Authors often incorporate their own beliefs into their writing. Sometimes they state these beliefs explicitly. Other times it might be possible to infer the author's beliefs only by examining their word choice, use of figurative language, or rhetorical techniques. Review the chart you made on page 90. Then answer the following questions.

1. How does Bradstreet feel about worldly things?
2. List three pieces of evidence to support your opinion.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Synonyms With a partner, match each boldfaced vocabulary word below with its synonym on the right. Use a thesaurus or dictionary to check your answers.

1. bereft
2. chide
3. recompense

a. payment
b. aggravated
c. scold
d. revenge
e. stripped

Academic Vocabulary

Passing the site of her former home, Bradstreet reminisces about her life there.

Site is an academic word. In more casual usage, you might say workers are erecting a skyscraper at a building site. Using context clues, try to figure out the meaning of the word in the sentence about Bradstreet above. Check your definition in a dictionary.

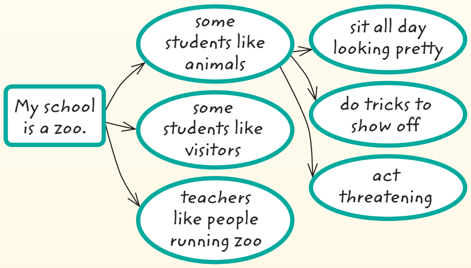
For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Write with Style

Apply Extended Metaphor

Assignment Writers often use metaphors to explain ideas and convey feelings. Review the extended metaphor in "Upon the Burning of Our House" (lines 43–50). Then write one of your own to explain an idea and how you feel about it.

Get Ideas Think of a comparison between what you want to talk about and some other thing it is like. For example, you might sometimes think your school is like a zoo. Then brainstorm some ways the two things could be compared. For example, you might compare students to zoo animals. Finally, think of some examples for each comparison. Use a word web to keep track of your ideas.



My school is a zoo.
some students like animals
some students like visitors
teachers like people running zoo
sit all day looking pretty
do tricks to show off
act threatening

EXAMPLE:

My School

Some animals just sit all day looking beautiful,
and some do tricks to show how smart they are
or act scary so people leave them alone.
Others try to blend in with the rocks or leaves
so it looks as though no one is home.

Give It Structure Choose your line breaks carefully to give your images maximum impact.

Look at Language Be careful not to take an extended metaphor too far. A few comparisons go a long way.

Assessment Practice

Short Response Remind students that answers to short-response questions are evaluated on the basis of their insightfulness and the evidence drawn from the text to support them.

Ask: Which of the two poems shows Bradstreet's Puritan philosophy more clearly? Provide evidence for your answer. (Students should offer citations from their chosen poem to support their answers.)

To create custom assessments using software, use ExamView Assessment Suite.

To create custom assessments online, go to Progress Reporter Online Assessment.

Before You Read

from Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God

Meet Jonathan Edwards

(1703–1758)

Jonathan Edwards was a Puritan theologian, preacher, and philosopher who captivated congregations with his "preaching of terror," a brand of sermonizing aimed at shaking the faith of unrepentant sinners and saving them from eternal damnation. His sermons hinge on fire-and-brimstone depictions of hell and visions of churchgoers dangling by tenuous threads over the depths of hell, held by the hand of an angry God. "I think it is a reasonable thing to fright persons away from hell," Edwards explained. "Is it not a reasonable thing to fright a person out of a house on fire?"

As a child, the precocious Edwards used his vivid imagination and shrewd, analytical mind to write scientific essays on insects, colors, and rainbows. At 13, he matriculated at Yale. He intended to use his education to publish works refuting natural philosophy and its key doctrines of materialism and atheism.

> "O sinner! consider the fearful danger you are in: it is a great furnace of wrath, a wide and bottomless pit, full of the fire of wrath, that you are held over in the hand of that God…"
>
> —Jonathan Edwards

Conversion Edwards was a religious young man, due to his Puritan upbringing, but he had qualms about predestination, the doctrine that claims it is predetermined whether an individual will go to heaven or hell. But in 1721, while studying divinity, he underwent a religious conversion that confirmed his belief in God as omnipotent, total, and in control of all things, including human destiny. Edwards subsequently thought of the revelation of God in intuitive terms—God the divine conveyed directly to the individual soul. ☆

In 1729, Edwards succeeded his grandfather at the pulpit in Northampton, Massachusetts. In his sermons, he attributed New England's ailing morality to its moral and religious independence and its incomplete acceptance of faith as the sole means to salvation.

Great Awakening Between 1730 and 1750, a religious revival known as the Great Awakening swept through the colonies. Preachers attracted people in droves and brought about ecstatic emotional reactions and frenzied mass conversions with their sermons. Edwards sought to keep his audiences calm, but his sermons were equally effective. His sermons were reproduced and read across Britain and other regions in America. However, by 1750 some of Northampton's Puritans objected to Edwards's extreme teachings and removed him from his post. He went into exile for several years, during which he served as a missionary to Native Americans in the frontier village of Stockbridge. He then became president of what is now Princeton University, but he died of smallpox shortly thereafter. Edwards is widely considered the most influential American writer before Benjamin Franklin.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Jonathan Edwards, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus
Transparency 9

Daily Language Practice
Transparency 11

Or display magazine ads, appealing to reason and emotion.

Ask: Which is a more powerful strategy in persuasion, an appeal to reason or an appeal to emotion? As they read, students should consider Edwards' persuasive skills.

Cultural History ☆

The Puritan Concept of Grace

Puritans believed that God granted certain people the gift of grace—the ability to live righteously and receive salvation. Puritans constantly examined their lives for outward signs of being God's elect. They felt that people could not achieve grace through prayer or through attendance at church. Their inner spiritual lives could be transformed only by God.

Selection Skills

from Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God

Literary Elements
- Imagery (SE pp. 96, 98–100; TE p. 97)
- Repetition (TE p. 99)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Apply Diction (SE p. 101)

Reading Skills
- Examine Connotation (SE pp. 96, 99, 101)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE p. 98)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Jonathan Edwards preaches a fiery sermon, invoking images of hell and punishment. He says that God is angry with the sinners who have not received God's grace. The members of the congregation have an opportunity to turn to God and enter God's kingdom. Edwards asks the members of the congregation how they can remain in this condition, knowing they could be saved.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 124–129.

Vocabulary

Persuasive Words Explain that when the vocabulary words are in the hands of Jonathan Edwards, they take on a strong moral connotation. While to appease a child implies comforting, to appease God's anger does not mean to comfort God. Have students find additional synonyms for the word. Ask: What might Edwards mean when he says sinners have done nothing to appease God's anger? (to pacify, conciliate, or make up for)

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 1 Teaching Resource Book, p. 132.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Sermon

What methods would you use if you were trying to convert someone to your way of thinking? Discuss this question with a partner, including any examples from your own experience.

Build Background

This sermon, which Jonathan Edwards delivered in 1741, remains the most famous literary monument to the Great Awakening. Edwards upheld strict Calvinism, which taught that human nature is essentially evil and that God predestines only a select few to be saved from eternal punishment.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Life in the New World

As you read, ask yourself, What does this sermon reveal about the importance of religion in colonial America?

Literary Element Imagery

Imagery refers to the set of mental pictures that writers create by using sensory details, or descriptions that appeal to one or more of the senses. As you read, ask yourself, What images does Edwards use to stir fear in the hearts of his listeners? How effective are these images?

Reading Strategy Examine Connotation

Connotation refers to the implied or suggested meanings associated with a word beyond its denotation, or literal meaning. For example, the words statesman and politician have similar denotations but very different connotations. Connotation is subtle, but often potent in its emphasis of the writer's points. As you read, ask yourself, How does Edwards use specific connotations to emphasize his ideas?

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart to record the denotations and connotations of three words Edwards uses to describe the plight of sinners.

Word	Denotation	Connotation
p. 97 sentenced	having had a sentence imposed, as in a trial	The word sentenced suggests the finality of a court trial.

Learning Objectives

For pages 95–101

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing imagery.

Reading: Examining connotation.

Writing: Applying diction in a persuasive essay.

Vocabulary

appease (ə pēz′) v. to bring to a state of peace or quiet; soothe; p. 97 He tried to appease the sobbing child with a toy.

abate (ə bāt′) v. to lessen or reduce in force or intensity; p. 97 Did the storm abate after the sun came out?

prudence (pro͞od′ əns) n. exercise of good and cautious judgment; p. 98 Showing prudence, the motorist slowed as she neared the school zone.

abhor (ab hôr′) v. to regard with disgust; p. 98 After working in a candy store, she began to abhor sweets.

abominable (ə bom′ ə nə bəl) adj. disgusting; detestable; p. 98 Stealing from the poor is an abominable crime.

Listening Practice

Persuasive Connotation Explain that a sermon is an example of persuasive writing. The preacher wishes to convert his audience or to convince them to renounce their sins. Have students listen to an audio recording of the sermon and create a chart where they can record their answers to the following questions:

- What comparisons are used to express God's wrath?
- What images of doom and destruction are used to appeal to the audience's emotions?
- What hope of God's mercy does Edwards offer repentant sinners?

Ask students to summarize orally how Edwards uses figures of speech and connotative language as a means of persuasion and the impact it has on the listener.

from Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God

Jonathan Edwards

Red Devil Window (detail), 1500–1517. Bernard Flower. Stained glass. St. Mary's Church, Fairford, Gloucestershire, Great Britain.

1 So that thus it is, that natural men[1] are held in the hand of God over the pit of hell; they have deserved the fiery pit, and are already sentenced to it; and God is dreadfully provoked, his anger is as great towards them as to those that are actually suffering the executions of the fierceness of his wrath in hell, and they have done nothing in the least, to appease or abate that anger, neither is God in the least bound by any promise to hold them up one moment; the devil is waiting for them, hell is gaping for them, the flames gather and flash about them, and would fain[2] lay hold on them and swallow them up; the fire pent up in their own hearts is struggling to break out; and they have no interest in any Mediator, there are no means within reach that can be any security to them. In short, they have no refuge, nothing to take hold of; all that preserves them every moment is the mere arbitrary will, and uncovenanted, unobliged forbearance of an incensed God. ☆

Application

The use may be of awakening to unconverted persons in this congregation. This that you have heard is the case of every one of you that are out of Christ.[3] That world of misery, that lake of burning brimstone, is extended abroad under you. There is the dreadful pit of the glowing flames of the wrath of God; there is hell's wide gaping mouth open; and you have nothing to stand upon, nor any thing to take hold of. There is nothing between you and hell but the air; it is only the power and mere pleasure of God that holds you up.

You probably are not sensible of this; you find you are kept out of hell, but do not see the hand of God in it; but look at other things, as the good state of your bodily constitution, your care of your own life, and the means you use for your own

---

[1] Natural men are those who have not received God's grace. They are "out of Christ."

[2] Here, fain means "willingly" or "gladly."

[3] Those who are out of Christ are not in God's grace.

Vocabulary

appease (ə pēz´) v. to bring to a state of peace abate (ə bāt´) v. to lessen or reduce in force

Teach

Literary Element 1

Imagery Say: Imagery refers to the "word pictures" that writers create to evoke mental images in readers. Ask: What is the dominant image in the opening lines of this selection? (The dominant image is the gaping mouth of fiery hell.)

Cultural History ☆

Calvinism As a Calvinist, Jonathan Edwards believed that some people were favored by God and others were not. This belief was interpreted by some of Edwards's contemporaries to mean that worldly success was a sign of God's favor. Many believed that one way God rewarded people for their repentance and pious behavior was with earthly goods.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 7.3

DRP: 61

Lexile: 1280

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Point out that Edwards uses a series of powerful images to reinforce his main idea: the precarious position of sinners. Have students chart the images and consider his beliefs about human nature. Then have students record what the members must do to avoid a terrible fate.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Analysis Ask: What conclusions can you draw about the Puritans from Edwards's sermon? Have students study the tone and language of the selection, focusing on the Puritans' concept of human nature and the role of religion in their lives.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Imagery Answer: The image of a fragile spider's web torn by a falling rock vividly suggests the danger facing those who are "unconverted."

Big Idea 2

Life in the New World
Answer: It indicates that religion was a regular part of the lives of most colonial families.

View the Art ★

Answer: Students may say that Whitefield's outstretched arms and intense expression show the dramatic tone of sermons and the power of the preacher. Alternatively, they may say that Whitefield looks still and posed, so he does not look as if he is delivering an impassioned speech.

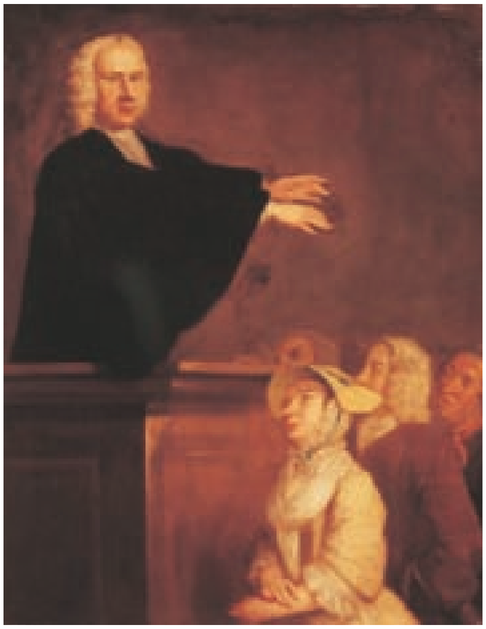
John Wollaston came to America from England in 1749. His works have a heightened sense of line and surface design. His portraits are famous for graceful poses and elaborate costumes.



George Whitefield, c. 1742. John Wollaston. Oil on canvas, 32⁵⁄₈ x 26 in. National Portrait Gallery, London.

View the Art George Whitefield, like Jonathan Edwards, was a minister during the Great Awakening. What does his portrait suggest about sermons of this period? ★ preservation. But indeed these things are nothing; if God should withdraw his hand, they would avail no more to keep you from falling, than the thin air to hold up a person that is suspended in it.

Your wickedness makes you as it were heavy as lead, and to tend downwards with great weight and pressure towards hell; and if God should let you go, you would immediately sink and swiftly descend and plunge into the bottomless gulf, and your healthy constitution, and your own care and prudence, and best contrivance,[4] and all your righteousness, would have no more influence to uphold you and keep you out of hell, than a spider's web would have to stop a falling rock.

The bow of God's wrath is bent, and the arrow made ready on the string, and justice bends the arrow at your heart, and strains the bow, and it is nothing but the mere pleasure of God, and that of an angry God, without any promise or obligation at all, that keeps the arrow one moment from being made drunk with your blood.

Thus are all you that never passed under a great change of heart, by the mighty power of the Spirit of God upon your souls; all that were never born again, and made new creatures, and raised from being dead in sin, to a state of new, and before altogether unexperienced light and life, (however you may have reformed your life in many things, and may have had religious affections, and may keep up a form of religion in your families and closets,[5] and in the houses of God, and may be strict in it) you are thus in the hands of an angry God; it is nothing but his mere pleasure that keeps you from being this moment swallowed up in everlasting destruction.

The God that holds you over the pit of hell, much as one holds a spider, or some loathsome insect, over the fire, abhors you, and is dreadfully provoked; his wrath towards you burns like fire; he looks upon you as worthy of nothing else, but to be cast into the fire; he is of purer eyes than to bear to have you in his sight; you are ten thousand times so abominable in his eyes, as the most hateful and venomous serpent is in ours.

O sinner! consider the fearful danger you are in: it is a great furnace of wrath, a wide and bottomless pit, full of the fire of wrath, that you are held over in the hand of that God, whose wrath is provoked and incensed as much against you, as against many of the damned in

---

[4] A contrivance is a clever scheme or plan.

[5] Here, closets refers to small rooms used especially for prayer and meditation.

1 Imagery Why does Edwards introduce this image?

Life in the New World What does Edwards's observation indicate about the place of religion in the American colonies? 2

Vocabulary

prudence (pro͞od´ əns) n. exercise of good judgment

Vocabulary

abhor (ab hôr´) v. to regard with disgust abominable (ə bom´ ə nə bəl) adj. disgusting; detestable

Reading Practice

Changes in English Note instances in Edwards's sermon that reveal how the English language has changed over time. For example, the word closets on page 98 refers to prayer chambers, not to places in which clothing is stored. Say: Although Edwards's English sounds more formal than modern American English does, much of his language is similar. Only a few of his expressions are rarely seen today. As students read on, have them develop a list of words and phrases from the selection that are no longer commonly used. (Possible responses: "O sinner!" on p. 98; "'Tis doubtless the case," "heretofore," and "lest you be consumed" on p. 99.) Clarify and discuss the meanings of unfamiliar words. *(*heretofore means "up to this time"; lest means "for fear that.")

3 hell: you hang by a slender thread, with the flames of divine wrath flashing about it, and ready every moment to singe it, and burn it asunder;[6] and you have no interest in any Mediator, and nothing to lay hold of to save yourself, nothing to keep off the flames of wrath, nothing of your own, nothing that you ever have done, nothing that you can do, to induce God to spare you one moment.

There is reason to think, that there are many in this congregation now hearing this discourse, that will actually be the subjects of this very misery to all eternity. We know not who they are, or in what seats they sit, or what thoughts they now have. It may be they are now at ease, and hear all these things without much disturbance, and are now flattering themselves that they are not the persons; promising themselves that they shall escape. If we knew that there was one person, and but one, in the whole congregation, that was to be the subject of this misery, what an awful thing it would be to think of! If we knew who it was, what an awful sight would it be to see such a person! How might all the rest of the congregation lift up a lamentable and bitter cry over him! But alas! Instead of one, how many is it likely will remember this discourse in hell! And it would be a wonder, if some that are now present should not be in hell in a very short time, before this year is out. And it would be no wonder if some persons, that now sit here in some seats of this meeting-house in health, and quiet and secure, should be there before to-morrow morning.

Those of you that finally continue in a natural condition, that shall keep out of Hell longest, will be there in a little time! Your damnation does not slumber; it will come swiftly, and in all probability very suddenly upon many of you. You have reason to wonder that you are not already in Hell. 'Tis doubtless the case of some that heretofore you have seen and known, that never deserved Hell more than you, and that heretofore appeared as likely to have been now alive as you: Their case is past all hope. They are crying in extreme misery and perfect despair. But here you are in the land of the living, and in the house of God, and have an opportunity to obtain salvation. What would not those poor damned, helpless souls give for one day's such opportunity as you now enjoy!

And now you have an extraordinary opportunity, a day wherein Christ has flung the door of mercy wide open, and stands in the door calling and crying with a loud voice to poor sinners; a day, wherein many are flocking to Him, and pressing into the kingdom of God. Many are daily coming from the east, west, north and south; many that were very lately in the same miserable condition that you are in, are in now a happy state, with their hearts filled with love to Him that has loved them and washed them from their sins in His own blood, and rejoicing in hope of the Glory of God.[7] How awful is it to be left behind at such a day! To see so many others feasting, while you are pining and perishing! To see so many rejoicing and singing for joy of heart, while you have cause to mourn for sorrow of heart and howl for vexation of spirit! How can you rest one moment in such a condition? . . .

Therefore let everyone that is out of Christ now awake and fly from the wrath to come. The wrath of Almighty God is now undoubtedly hanging over a great part of this congregation: Let everyone fly out of Sodom![8] Haste and escape for your lives, look not behind you, escape to the mountain, lest you be consumed. ❧

---

[6] Asunder means "into separate pieces."

[7] The author is referring to the many people who were part of the Great Awakening, a movement that urged people to experience religion on a personal, emotional level.

[8] In Genesis 19:15–17, angels warn Lot, the only virtuous inhabitant of the sinful city of Sodom, to flee the city before it is destroyed.

4 Imagery Which senses does this image appeal to? What emotions does it stir?

Examine Connotation How does the connotation of the word flocking contribute to Edwards's point? 5

Teach

Literary Element 3

Repetition Say: In this paragraph, Edwards repeats the word nothing several times. Ask: What is the effect of this repetition? (The repetition emphasizes that human beings are powerless, while God is omnipotent.)

Literary Element 4

Imagery Answer: Appeals to the senses of sight and touch; stirs emotions of fear

Reading Strategy 5

Examine Connotation Answer: It conveys a sense of joy and peace. It also suggests the loyalty of sheep following a shepherd.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 131.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 135.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Say: As a preacher, Edwards knew how to use sound as well as sense to capture his audience's attention. Call attention to techniques such as alliteration, repetition, parallelism, and connotation, which are effective in oral delivery. Provide examples and ask students to find other effective examples.

Alliteration: In the opening sentence of the selection, Edwards uses alliteration to link held, hand, and hell.

Repetition: Edwards repeats the word wrath a number of times: "fierceness of his wrath"; "glowing flames of the wrath of God"; "The bow of God's wrath is bent."

Parallelism: Edwards repeats patterns in phrases and clauses: "nothing to lay hold of . . .," "nothing to keep off the flames," "nothing of your own . . ."

Connotation: Edwards chooses words to describe hell that make it sound as if it is alive and active: waiting, gaping, lay hold, swallow, consumed.

After You Read

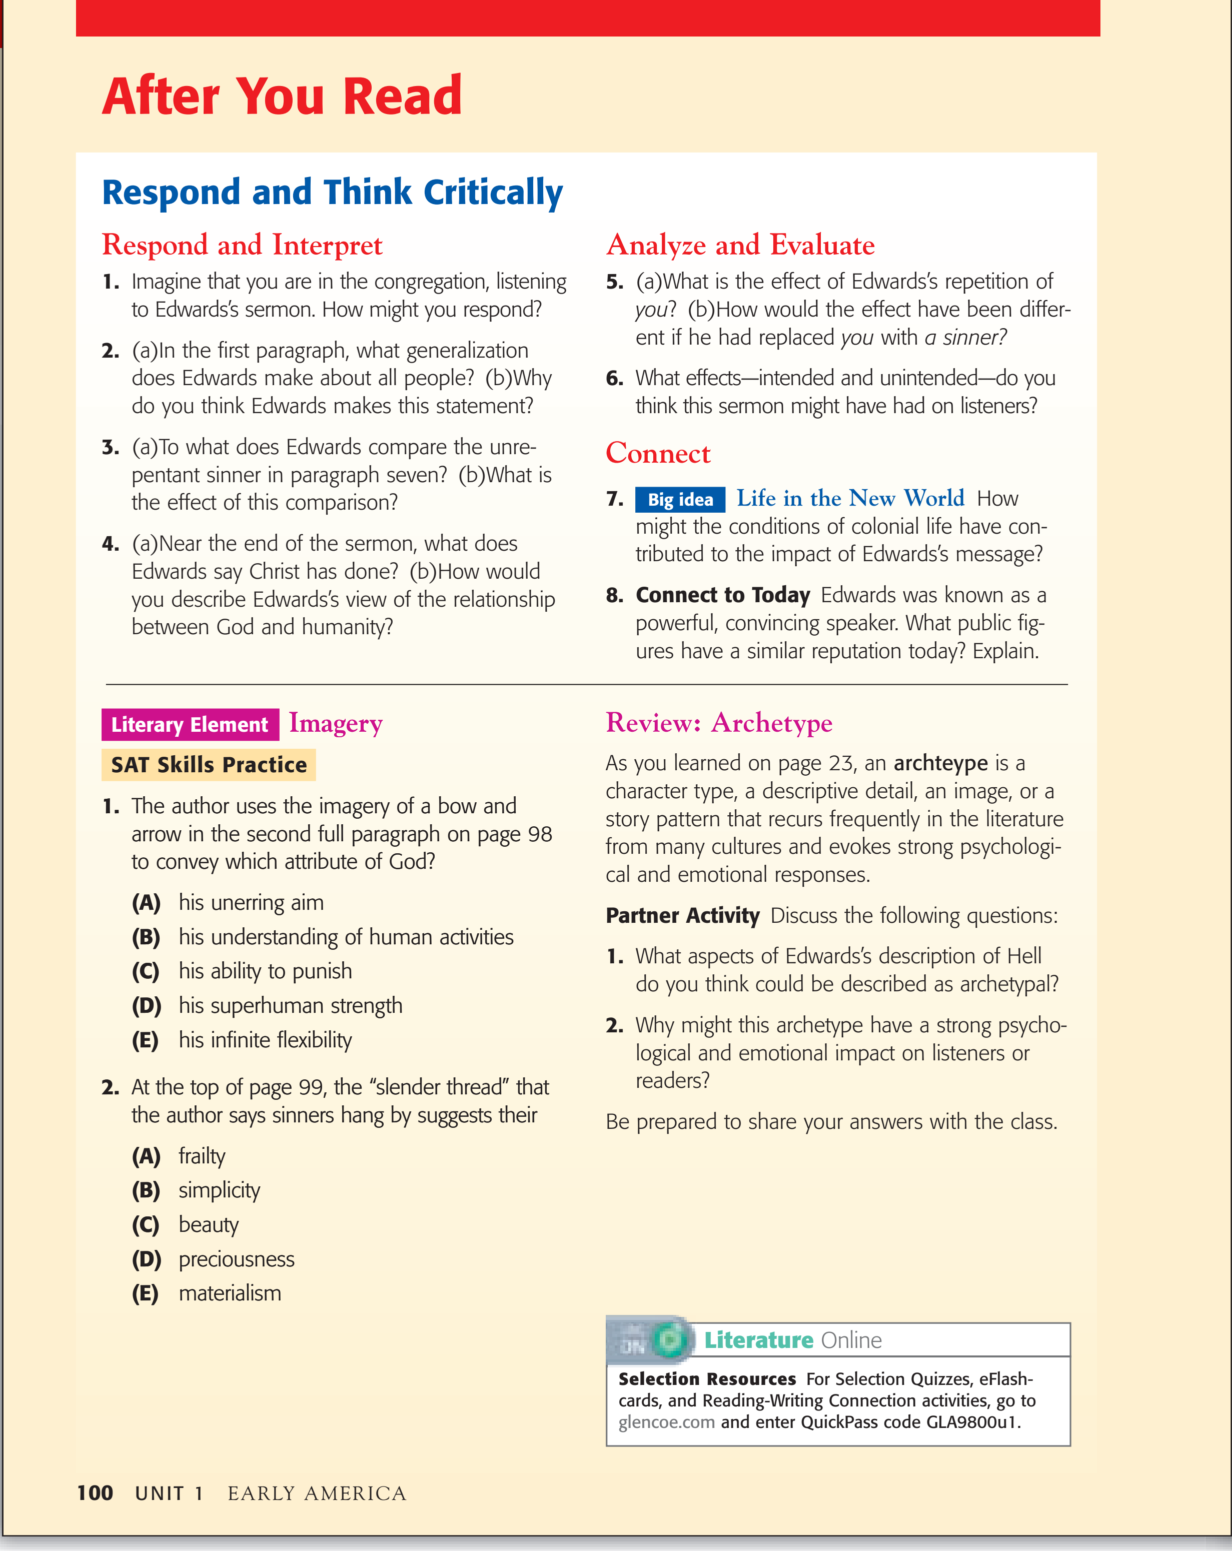
Assess

1. Some may be frightened; others may be repelled.
2. (a) All those who have not been "born again" deserve the punishment of hell. (b) He wants the members of the congregation to be aware of their peril.
3. (a) He compares the sinner to a spider about to be thrown into a fire. (b) It underscores the loathsomeness of sin and the peril of the sinner.
4. (a) He says that Christ has opened the door of mercy for his congregation. (b) Humanity is hopeless without an all-powerful God, who offers mercy to sinners who convert.
5. (a) Edwards's message is addressed to each member of the congregation. (b) A sinner would have been more impersonal and therefore weaker.
6. Some people would be frightened into a "change of heart." Others might have been repelled by the vision of a God who regards human beings as loathsome insects.
7. They might have contributed to the fierce, uncompromising aspects of Edwards's message.
8. Modern speakers with similar reputations include Garrison Keillor, Nelson Mandela, and Queen Rania of Jordan. Students should note the specific qualities the speaker they chose exhibits.

Progress Check

Can students analyze imagery?

If No → See Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 130.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Imagine that you are in the congregation, listening to Edwards's sermon. How might you respond?
2. (a)In the first paragraph, what generalization does Edwards make about all people? (b)Why do you think Edwards makes this statement?
3. (a)To what does Edwards compare the unrepentant sinner in paragraph seven? (b)What is the effect of this comparison?
4. (a)Near the end of the sermon, what does Edwards say Christ has done? (b)How would you describe Edwards's view of the relationship between God and humanity?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)What is the effect of Edwards's repetition of you? (b)How would the effect have been different if he had replaced you with a sinner?
6. What effects—intended and unintended—do you think this sermon might have had on listeners?

Connect

7. Big idea Life in the New World How might the conditions of colonial life have contributed to the impact of Edwards's message?
8. Connect to Today Edwards was known as a powerful, convincing speaker. What public figures have a similar reputation today? Explain.

Literary Element Imagery

SAT Skills Practice

1. The author uses the imagery of a bow and arrow in the second full paragraph on page 98 to convey which attribute of God?
   - (A) his unerring aim
   - (B) his understanding of human activities
   - (C) his ability to punish
   - (D) his superhuman strength
   - (E) his infinite flexibility
2. At the top of page 99, the "slender thread" that the author says sinners hang by suggests their
   - (A) frailty
   - (B) simplicity
   - (C) beauty
   - (D) preciousness
   - (E) materialism

Review: Archetype

As you learned on page 23, an archteype is a character type, a descriptive detail, an image, or a story pattern that recurs frequently in the literature from many cultures and evokes strong psychological and emotional responses.

Partner Activity Discuss the following questions:

1. What aspects of Edwards's description of Hell do you think could be described as archetypal?
2. Why might this archetype have a strong psychological and emotional impact on listeners or readers?

Be prepared to share your answers with the class.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Literary Element

SAT Skills Practice

1. C is correct because it supports the author's view of an angry God.
2. A is correct because a thread is fragile and easily consumed by fire.

Reading Strategy

1. Abominable, hateful, venomous, and serpent have negative connotations.
2. The absolute repugnance of unrepentant sinners.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 77–78.

Reading Strategy Examine Connotation

Words may have different associations, or connotations. In describing sinners, Edwards uses the word howl, which suggests an animal in distress.

1. Identify connotations in this passage: "you are ten thousand times so abominable in his eyes, as the most hateful and venomous serpent is in ours."
2. How do these connotations reinforce Edwards's message?

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Origins Create a word map like the one shown for each vocabulary word below. Use a dictionary for help.

appease prudence abominable abate abhor

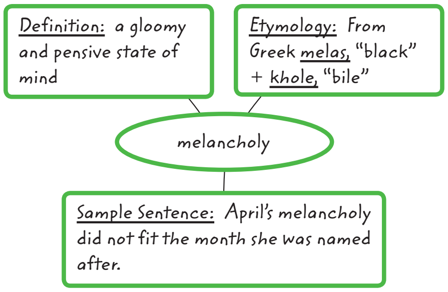
EXAMPLE:



Definition: a gloomy and pensive state of mind
Etymology: From Greek melas, "black" + khole, "bile" melancholy
Sample Sentence: April's melancholy did not fit the month she was named after.

Academic Vocabulary

In this sermon, Edwards gives his parishioners guidelines for avoiding damnation.

Guidelines is an academic word. A teacher might give guidelines for writing essays. To further explore the meaning of this word, answer the following question: If you were asked to give guidelines to incoming freshman, what advice would you give?

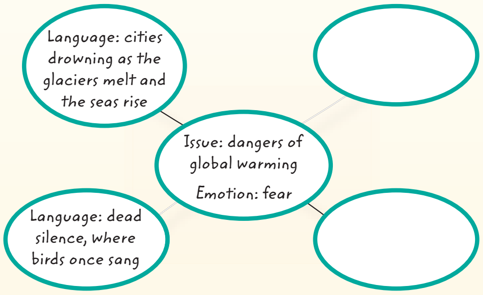
For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Write with Style

Apply Diction

Assignment Through his use of emotionally charged diction—including vivid sensory details—Edwards attempts to convince his audience to repent and follow God. Write a short essay using strong words and details to make an emotional appeal. Make sure you carefully consider your audience and spell out your call to action.

Get Ideas Think of a subject that is important to you. What emotions do you want your readers to feel and what words will evoke those emotions? Create a word web to explore these connections.



Language: cities drowning as the glaciers melt and the seas rise
Issue: dangers of global warming
Emotion: fear
Language: dead silence, where birds once sang

Give It Structure Begin with some of the charged language from your diagram to capture your readers' attention. Then state your main idea, or thesis. Follow with sentences that support your thesis. Include more details from your diagram to target your readers' emotions and convince them of your argument or idea. Conclude with a sentence supporting your thesis.

Look at Language Appealing to multiple senses strengthens the emotional influence of your diction. The example about global warming appeals to a reader's sense of sight, hearing, and touch with specific, evocative words. As you revise your essay, make sure you have engaged at least three senses. If you need to, use a thesaurus to find words with the greatest impact.

After You Read

Assess

Vocabulary

appease—Etymology: Latin pax, "peace" Sentence: No one could appease Jake's anger when the umpire said he was out.

abate—Etymology: Latin battuere, "to beat" Sentence: We hoped the noise would abate when the construction crew stopped.

prudence—Etymology: Latin providere, "to provide for" Sentence: Jenna showed prudence when she decided not to ski.

abhor—Etymology: Latin horrere, "to shudder" Sentence: I left the room because I abhor reality tv.

abominable—Etymology: Latin abominari, "to abhor" Sentence: A group of students protested the abominable conditions.

Academic Vocabulary

I would advise incoming freshmen to get involved in extracurricular activities.

Write with Style

Essays should:

- Use vivid sensory details that appeal to at least three senses.
- Have a clear goal for the piece, pursued throughout the work.
- Use appropriate diction to make an effective emotional appeal.

Scoring Guide	4	3	2	1
Presentation of thesis	thoughtful and comprehensive	comprehensive	limited	minimal
Support of thesis	specific	general	little or none	none
Understanding of complexities	clear	generally	limited	minimal
Language	varied, precise, descriptive	varied, somewhat descriptive	predictable, basic	not varied, limited
Convention errors	few or none	several	many	serious
Emotional appeal	thoughtfully addressed	addressed	may be partially addressed	not addressed

Vocabulary Workshop

Dictionary Use

Focus

Ask: How do you figure out the meaning of an unknown word? (Students may say they use context clues to figure out the meaning of the word or they look up the word in a dictionary.)

Teach

Vocabulary

Use a Dictionary Remind students that when looking up a word, they sometimes have to determine its part of speech. Words such as incense and will have the same spelling as nouns and as verbs. The noun and verb forms each have their own separate main entries in the dictionary. Ask: After reading the quote, can you tell what part of speech the word incensed belongs to? (It is a verb being used as an adjective.) Remind students that most words have several subentries.

For additional vocabulary practice, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Vocabulary Workshop

Dictionary Use

Learning Objectives

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objectives:

Vocabulary:
Understanding multiple-meaning words.
Understanding language resources.

Literature Connection In reading literature, history, and politics, you will find a dictionary invaluable. The passage below contains several words not common today.

> ". . . all that preserves them every moment is the mere arbitrary will, and uncovenanted, unobliged forbearance of an incensed God."
>
> —Jonathan Edwards, from "Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God"

What does incensed mean, for example? Isn't that something you burn?

Looking for a Word Guide words at the top of each dictionary page tell you the first and last words listed on the page to help you locate the word you need alphabetically. As you can see from the excerpt below, incense means "to make someone angry," so incensed means "angered."

Main Entry Each word in a dictionary has a main entry. Sometimes a word appears to have more than one main entry. Incense appears twice in the excerpt below. The small raised numbers indicate that it is two separate words with different meanings. The word incense^{1} is something you burn; incense^{2} is the word used in the quotation above.

Subentries Each main entry often includes different related meanings of the same word. Below, incense^{1} has three subentries.

Additional Word Information In addition to a word's meaning or meanings, dictionary entries can show you how it is divided into syllables, how it is pronounced, what part of speech it is, its etymology (or origin and history), and how the word is correctly used.

in·cense^1 (in´sens´) n. 1. any of several substances, as gums or spices, burned to produce a fragrant aroma. 2. odor or smoke that is emitted from such a substance. 3. any pleasant aroma: the incense of a meadow [Late Latin incēnsum literally, something burnt, from Latin incendere to burn.]

in·cense^2 (in sens´) -censed, -cens·ing, v.t. to make (someone) very angry or indignant: It incensed the lady to be told to move on. [Latin incēnsus, past participle of incendere to burn, anger.]

Exercise Use the excerpt above to answer the following questions.

1. How are the verb and noun forms of incense pronounced differently?
2. Compare and contrast the etymologies of incense^{1} and incense^{2}.
3. What synonym for incensed might Edwards have used in the passage above? Why do you suppose he chose to use incensed?

Tip

Specialized dictionaries provide in-depth information about words in a particular field. There are dictionaries of biography, place names, slang, historic documents, politics, art, and many other subjects. Ask your librarian to help you find the right dictionary for your research.

Technology

Using an online dictionary, you simply enter a search word to find its definition. Online dictionaries also offer features such as illustrations, word games, language tips, and fun facts.

LOG ON Literature Online

Vocabulary For more vocabulary practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

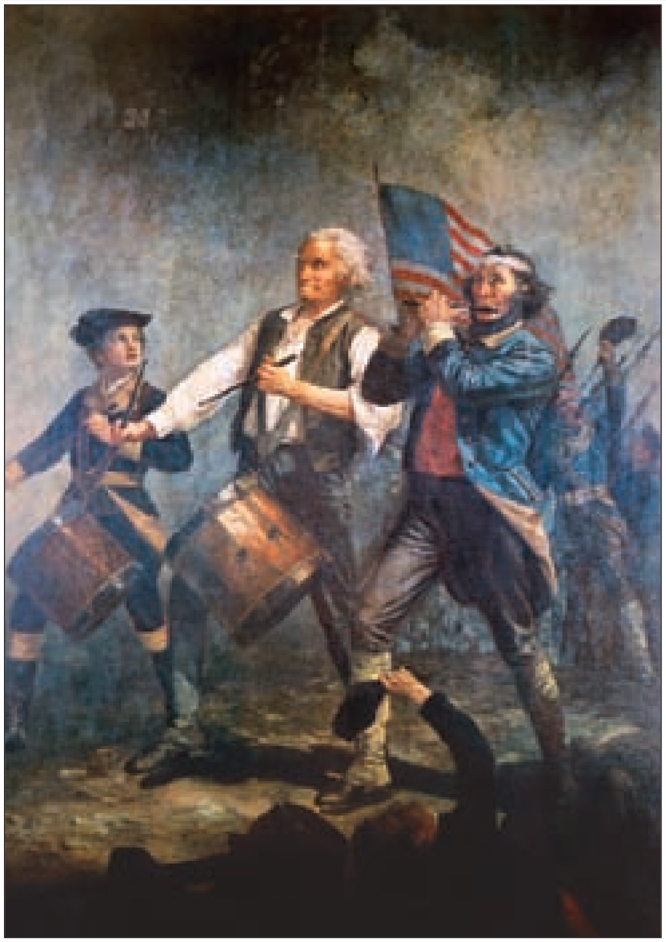
Vocabulary Practice

Homonyms Students may confuse the words homonyms, homophones, and homographs. Remind students that homonyms are words with the same spelling and pronunciation but different meanings and different main entries in the dictionary. Homophones are words with the same pronunciation but different meanings. Homographs are words that are spelled the same but have different meanings.

Have students practice using the dictionary by looking up these homonyms: bear, base, grate, lay, root. Then have students practice using the different meanings of these words in conversation.

Part 3

THE ROAD TO INDEPENDENCE



Spirit of '76, 1891. Archibald M. Willard. Lithograph. 36 x 50 in. Private collection.

View the Art How do you think the artist intended the three drum-and-fife players in this painting to illustrate the spirit of '76? ★

> "These are the times that try men's souls." 1
>
> —Thomas Paine, The Crisis, No. 1

Analyze and Extend

Reading Strategy 1

Evaluate Direct students to read the quotation. Ask: How does the painting relate to the quotation? (The painting depicts men marching to war; a time of war is "trying.")

View the Art ★

Answer: The drummer in the middle shows courage and determination; one of the men is old and one is wounded, yet they carry on. This lithograph is based on the painting originally known as Yankee Doodle, which was created by the Ohio artist Archibald M. Willard (1836–1918).

For additional support for English Learners, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 138.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Read the quotation from The Crisis aloud to students. Explain that the word try has two meanings: "to test" and "to attempt." Ask: What does Paine mean by the word try? How does his choice of this word convey his overall meaning? (He means that war will test people's character. The word shows Paine's belief that the American colonists' struggle for independence will be difficult.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Explain that the authors in this part played an important role in the struggle for American independence. Thomas Paine wanted to inspire people to action. Discuss the different meanings of the word soul, including its meaning in Paine's quote. (character or inner self)

Before You Read

Focus

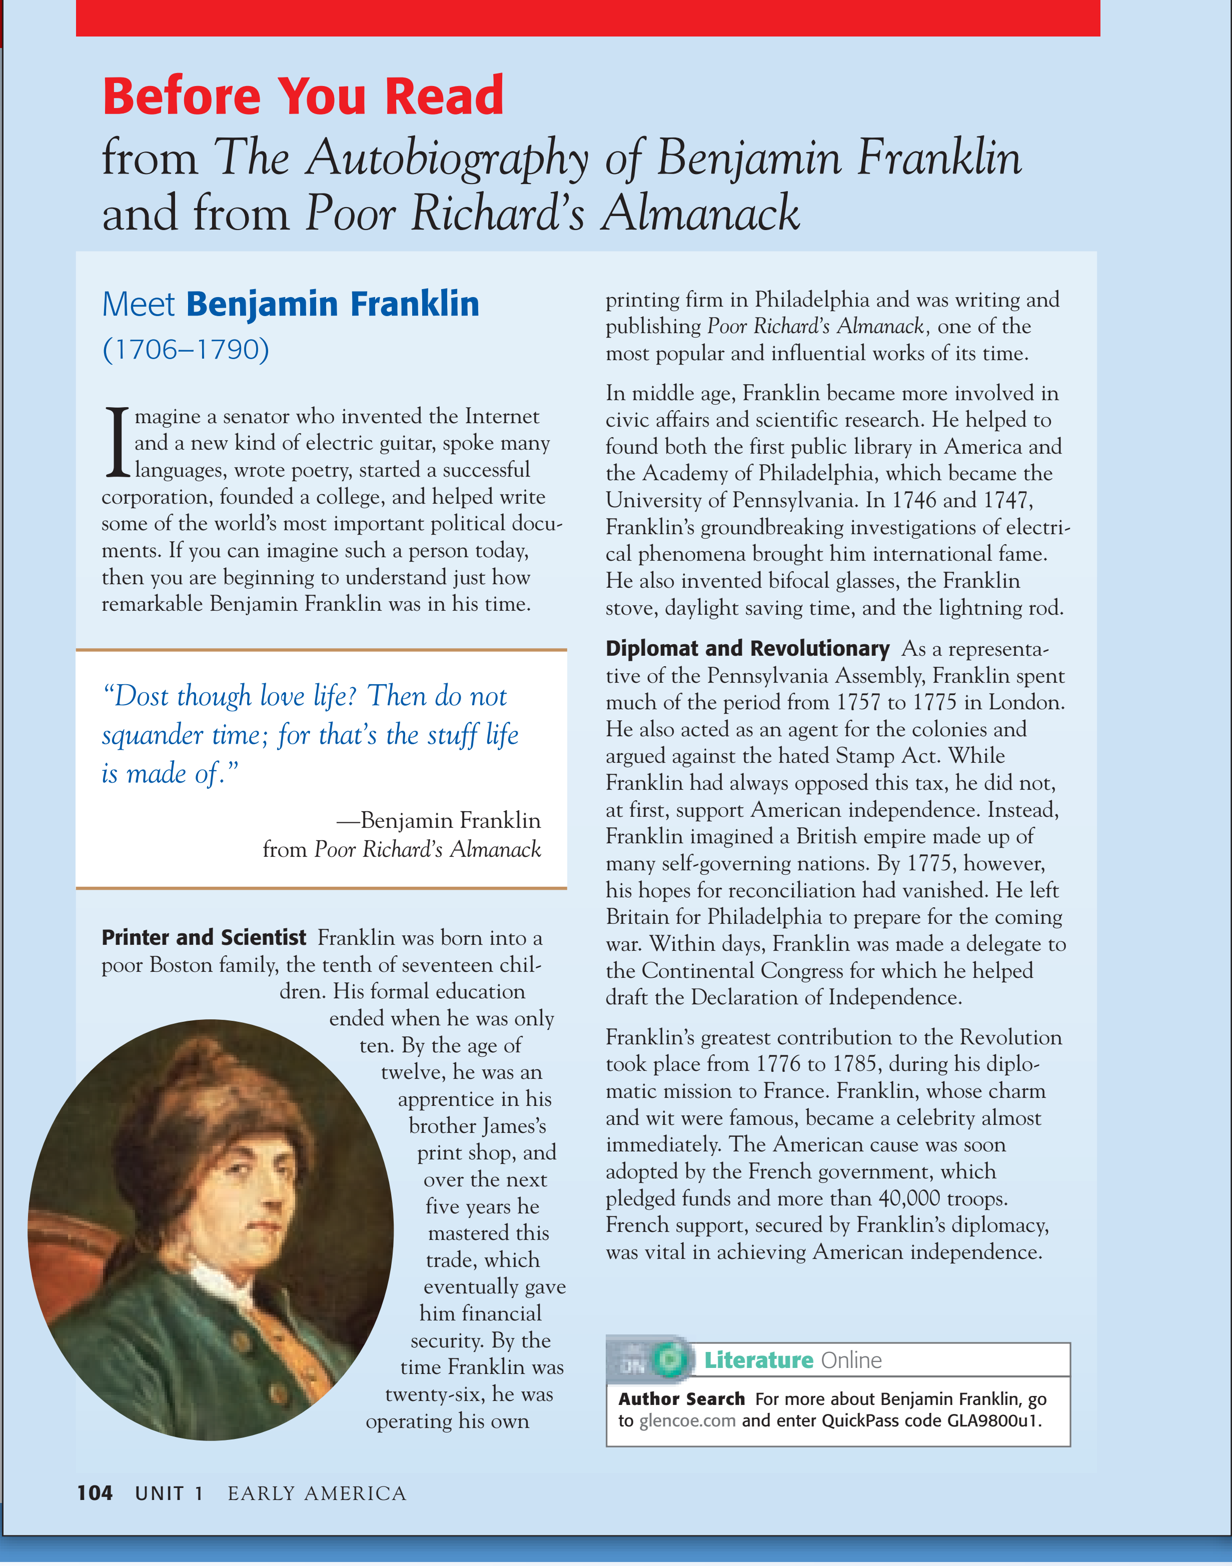
Bellringer Options

Selection Focus Transparency 10

Daily Language Practice Transparency 12

Or write the Benjamin Franklin quotation on the board.

Ask: What are some of your favorite sayings or "words to live by"? Have students discuss their favorite sayings. Have students restate the sayings in their own words and explain why they like the sayings.



Before You Read

from The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin and from Poor Richard's Almanack

Meet Benjamin Franklin
(1706–1790)

Imagine a senator who invented the Internet and a new kind of electric guitar, spoke many languages, wrote poetry, started a successful corporation, founded a college, and helped write some of the world's most important political documents. If you can imagine such a person today, then you are beginning to understand just how remarkable Benjamin Franklin was in his time.

> "Dost though love life? Then do not squander time; for that's the stuff life is made of."
>
> —Benjamin Franklin
> from Poor Richard's Almanack

Printer and Scientist Franklin was born into a poor Boston family, the tenth of seventeen children. His formal education ended when he was only ten. By the age of twelve, he was an apprentice in his brother James's print shop, and over the next five years he mastered this trade, which eventually gave him financial security. By the time Franklin was twenty-six, he was operating his own printing firm in Philadelphia and was writing and publishing Poor Richard's Almanack, one of the most popular and influential works of its time.

In middle age, Franklin became more involved in civic affairs and scientific research. He helped to found both the first public library in America and the Academy of Philadelphia, which became the University of Pennsylvania. In 1746 and 1747, Franklin's groundbreaking investigations of electrical phenomena brought him international fame. He also invented bifocal glasses, the Franklin stove, daylight saving time, and the lightning rod.

Diplomat and Revolutionary As a representative of the Pennsylvania Assembly, Franklin spent much of the period from 1757 to 1775 in London. He also acted as an agent for the colonies and argued against the hated Stamp Act. While Franklin had always opposed this tax, he did not, at first, support American independence. Instead, Franklin imagined a British empire made up of many self-governing nations. By 1775, however, his hopes for reconciliation had vanished. He left Britain for Philadelphia to prepare for the coming war. Within days, Franklin was made a delegate to the Continental Congress for which he helped draft the Declaration of Independence.

Franklin's greatest contribution to the Revolution took place from 1776 to 1785, during his diplomatic mission to France. Franklin, whose charm and wit were famous, became a celebrity almost immediately. The American cause was soon adopted by the French government, which pledged funds and more than 40,000 troops. French support, secured by Franklin's diplomacy, was vital in achieving American independence.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Benjamin Franklin, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Selection Skills

from The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin

Literary Elements
- Autobiography (SE pp. 105, 106, 108, 109)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE p. 107)

Reading Skills
- Analyze Voice (SE pp. 105, 106, 108, 109)
- Question (TE p. 106)
- Visualize (TE p. 107)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Parts (SE p. 109)
- Nouns (TE p. 105)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Conjunctions (TE p. 108)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Autobiography

When you travel, how does the way you are treated by the people you meet affect your impression of that town, city, or country? Write a journal entry in which you discuss these questions. If you can, relate your response to a specific experience.

Build Background

The passage from Franklin's autobiography begins with his arrival in Philadelphia in the 1720s. Franklin published Poor Richard's Almanack in Philadelphia every year for the 25 years between 1733 and 1758. Almanacs were one of the earliest types of reading material to be published and were the forerunners of today's magazines. Colonial almanacs provided a wide variety of material, including puzzles, both serious and humorous articles, and common-sense aphorisms, or witty sayings, of the type that made Franklin famous.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The Road to Independence

As you read these two excerpts, ask yourself, What role did Franklin play in the colonists' struggle for independence?

Literary Element Autobiography

An autobiography is a nonfiction narrative in which the author tells the story of his or her own life. As you read Franklin's autobiography, ask yourself, How did his experience in Philadelphia help shape him as a person?

Reading Strategy Analyze Voice

Voice is the distinctive use of language that conveys the author's or narrator's personality. Word choice, tone, and sentence structure contribute to voice.

Tip: Take Notes In a chart, describe the effect of Franklin's word choice, tone, and sentence structure on voice.

Example	Effect
"ambulatory quack doctor"	vivid, humorous observation

Learning Objectives

For pages 104–111

In studying these texts, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study:
Analyzing autobiography.
Analyzing aphorism.

Reading:
Analyzing voice.
Connecting to personal experience.

Writing:
Writing a journal entry.
Writing an article.

Vocabulary

indentured (in den´ chərd) adj. bound to serve for a time; p. 106 The indentured servant completed a six-year term.

ambulatory (am´ byə lə tôr´ ē) adj. moving from place to place; p. 106 The ambulatory news correspondent traveled all over Europe.

ingenious (in jēn´ yəs) adj. creative; inventive; p. 106 Ani used an ingenious marketing strategy.

infidel (in´ fə del´) n. an unbeliever; p. 106 Those who did not regularly attend church were considered infidels.

mortification (môr´ tə fi kā´ shən) n. feeling of shame or embarrassment; p. 107 My speech was pure mortification.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Although recovering from a fever, Benjamin Franklin sets out to walk 50 miles to Burlington, New Jersey, and then travel by boat to Philadelphia. Along the way he befriends the roguish innkeeper Dr. Brown. Despite his lack of funds and makeshift travel arrangements, Franklin finally arrives in Philadelphia, where he obtains something to eat and falls asleep at a Quaker meetinghouse.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 139–144.

Vocabulary

Nouns Elicit that nouns can name people, places, objects, or feelings and ideas. Ask: Which vocabulary word names a feeling? (mortification) Tell students that nouns that name feelings and ideas often include the suffix -tion, which creates a noun from a verb. The verb in this case is mortify. Ask: Based on the meaning of mortification, what does mortify mean? (Mortify means "to cause a feeling of shame, humiliation, or embarrassment.")"

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Students may benefit from further explanation of the autobiography genre. Write the word autobiography on the board and underline the parts auto, bio, and graph. Clarify the meaning of each word part: auto means "self," bio means "life," and graph means "write." In an autobiography, the author writes about his or her own life. Explain that autobiography is usually written in the first-person point of view, using the pronouns I, me, or myself. This point of view allows readers to step inside the writer's experience but limits what readers learn to what the narrator chooses to share. As students read, have them identify places where they notice Franklin's use of first-person point of view.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Autobiography Answer: His willingness to try a "prescription" he has read somewhere reveals that he is a reader who trusts what he reads.

APPROACHING Explain that an autobiography is always told from a first-person point of view.

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Voice Answer: He is suspicious but amused that the doctor is intimately familiar with so many towns and countries. He pokes fun at the doctor's respectability by using the expression "ambulatory quack."

ENGLISH LEARNERS Have students read the passage about Dr. Brown aloud. Check that they know the pronoun he refers to Dr. Brown.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 146.

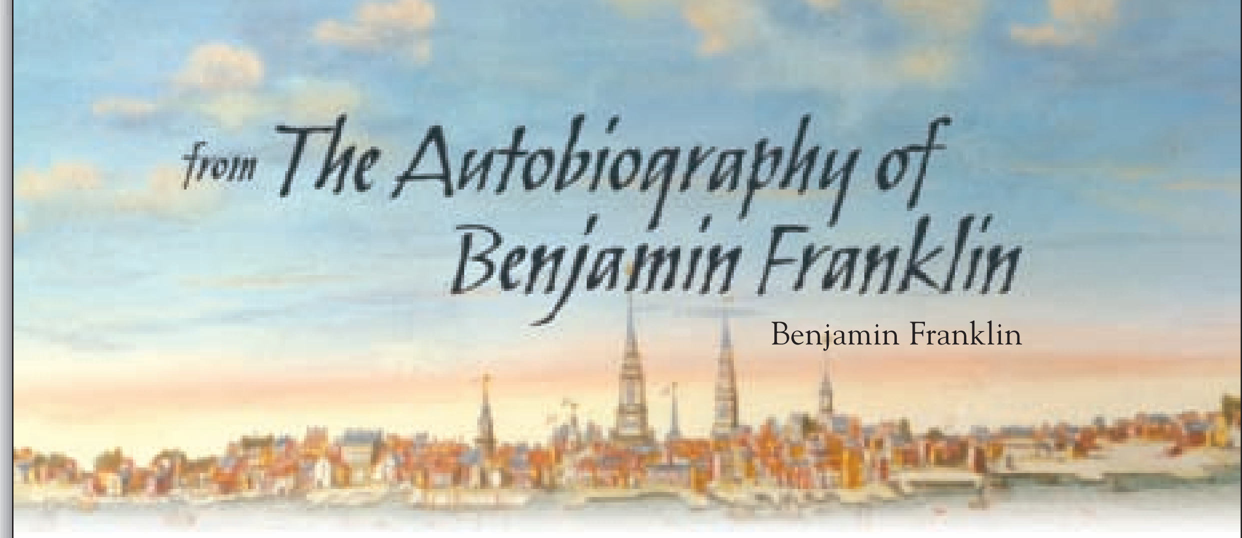
For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 7.0
DRP: 59
Lexile: 1170

from The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin

Benjamin Franklin



East Prospective View of Philadelphia, published 1778. Lithograph.

In the evening I found myself very feverish and went to bed; but having read some where that cold water drunk plentifully was good for fever, I followed the prescription and sweat plentifully most of the night. My fever left me, and in the morning, crossing the ferry, I proceeded on my journey on foot, having fifty miles to go to Burlington,[1] where I was told I should find boats that would carry me the rest of the way to Philadelphia.

It rained very hard all the day; I was thoroughly soaked, and by noon a good deal tired; so I stopped at a poor inn, where I stayed all night, beginning now to wish I had never left home. I made so miserable a figure, too, that I found, by the questions asked me, I was suspected to be some runaway indentured servant and in danger of being taken up on that suspicion. However, I proceeded next day and got in the evening to an inn within eight or ten miles of Burlington, kept by one Dr. Brown. He entered into conversation with me while I took some refreshment, and finding I had read a little, became very obliging and friendly. Our acquaintance continued all the rest of his life. He had been, I imagine, an ambulatory quack doctor, for there was no town in England nor any country in Europe of which he could not give a very particular account. He had some letters,[2] and was ingenious, but he was an infidel, and wickedly undertook, some years after, to turn the Bible into doggerel[3] verse,

---

[1] Burlington, New Jersey, is not far from Philadelphia, on the opposite side of the Delaware River.

[2] Here, letters means "education or knowledge, especially of literature."

[3] English poet Charles Cotton (1630–1687) wrote a doggerel version, or parody, of Virgil's epic poem the Aeneid.

1 Autobiography What does Franklin reveal about himself in this passage?

Vocabulary

indentured (in den´ chərd) adj. bound by contract to serve someone for a time

Analyze Voice What do Franklin's word choice and tone suggest about his attitude toward his new friend? 2

Vocabulary

ambulatory (am´ byə lə tôr´ ē) adj. moving from place to place ingenious (in jēn´ yəs) adj. exhibiting creative ability; inventive infidel (in´ fə del´) n. an unbeliever

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Question This excerpt begins in the middle of the narrative. Ask students to find clues in the first paragraph to what is going to happen. (The speaker is going to walk 50 miles to Burlington to find a boat to take him to Philadelphia.) Ask what questions this information raises in their minds. (Why is he going to Philadelphia? What is he going to do there?) Have them describe how he feels about Dr. Brown, whose political views he does not share. (He becomes lifelong friends with Brown despite this difference.) Ask: How do you think Franklin may behave toward people in Philadelphia whose political views he does not share? (He will be open to their views and will not allow his politics to influence his friendships.)

Benjamin Franklin, Printer, c. 1928. John Ward Dunsmore. Oil on canvas, 28 x 36 in. The New York Historical Society, New York.

View the Art As a colonial tradesman, Benjamin Franklin printed everything from translations of Cicero to hymnals to paper currency. What might Franklin have been discussing with the other people in this scene? ★ as Cotton had formerly done with Virgil. By this means he set many facts in a ridiculous light, and might have done mischief with weak minds if his work had been published; but it never was.

3 At his house I lay that night, and arrived the next morning at Burlington, but had the mortification to find that the regular boats were gone a little before, and no other expected to go before Tuesday, this being Saturday. Wherefore I returned to an old woman in the town, of whom I had bought some gingerbread to eat on the water, and asked her advice. She proposed to lodge me till a passage by some other boat occurred. I accepted her offer, being much fatigued by traveling on foot. Understanding I was a printer, she would have had me remain in that town and follow my business, being ignorant what stock was necessary to begin with. She was very hospitable, gave me a dinner of oxcheek with great good-will, accepting only of a pot of ale in return; and I thought myself fixed till Tuesday should come. However, walking in the evening by the side of the river, a boat came by, which I found was going toward Philadelphia with several people in her. They took me in, and as there was no wind we rowed all the way; and mortification (mor´ tə fi kā´ shən) n. feeling of shame, humiliation, or embarrassment

Vocabulary

The Road to Independence How does this description reveal the spirit of people who will fight for independence? 4

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Visualize Have students picture what Franklin looked like during his journey. Ask students to describe in their own words the images that stand out in their minds. Use a map to trace Franklin's route from the vicinity of South Amboy, New Jersey, to Philadelphia.

Big Idea 4

The Road to Independence
Answer: It presents people who are willing to endure hardships and work hard to achieve their goals.

View the Art ★

Answer: Franklin may have been discussing important news of the day. Students may say that this painting was likely not a depiction of Franklin's revolutionary activities, since he appears to be younger than he would have been around 1776, when he was 70 years old.

John Ward Dunsmore (1856–1945) specialized in historical subjects and portraits. This painting of Benjamin Franklin is representative of the early 20th-century artistic movement known as the colonial revival.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Predicting helps students connect to readings by providing a purpose for reading. They can read to find out whether their predictions were correct. Ask: What do you already know about Ben Franklin? (Possible response: He was a writer, inventor, and politician.) Say: Franklin has just arrived in Philadelphia with almost no money and no place to live. Given what you know about him, what do you think he will do? Tell students to record their ideas. After reading the text, have them compare their predictions with what actually happened.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Voice Answer: He is good-natured and willing to poke fun at himself.

Literary Element 2

Autobiography Answer: He is being ironic.

Some students find the concept of irony difficult to grasp. Irony is a contrast or discrepancy between appearance and reality. The "house" Franklin "slept in" was really a Quaker meetinghouse where he fell asleep. Franklin uses irony as a form of humor.

about midnight, not having yet seen the city, some of the company were confident we must have passed it and would row no further; the others knew not where we were, so we put toward the shore, got into a creek, landed near an old fence, with the rails of which we made a fire, the night being cold, in October, and there we remained till daylight. Then one of the company knew the place to be Cooper's Creek, a little above Philadelphia, which we saw as soon as we got out of the creek, and arrived there about eight or nine o'clock on the Sunday morning and landed at Market Street wharf.

I have been the more particular in this description of my journey, and shall be so of my first entry into that city, that you may in your mind compare such unlikely beginnings with the figure I have since made there. I was in my working dress, my best clothes coming round by sea. I was dirty, from my being so long in the boat. My pockets were stuffed out with shirts and stockings, and I knew no one nor where to look for lodging. Fatigued with walking, rowing, and the want of sleep, I was very hungry; and my whole stock of cash consisted in a single dollar, and about a shilling[4] in copper coin, which I gave to the boatmen for my passage. At first they refused it, on account of my having rowed; but I insisted on their taking it. Man is sometimes more generous when he has little money than when he has plenty; perhaps to prevent his being thought to have but little.

I walked toward the top of the street, gazing about till near Market Street, when I met a boy with bread. I had often made a meal of dry bread, and inquiring where he had bought it, I went immediately to the baker's he directed me to. I asked for biscuits, meaning such as we had at Boston; that sort, it seems, was not made at Philadelphia. I then asked for a threepenny loaf and was told they had none. Not knowing the different prices nor the names of the different sorts of bread, I told him to give me threepenny worth of any sort. He gave me accordingly three great puffy rolls. I was surprised at the quantity, but took it, and having no room in my pockets, walked off with a roll under each arm and eating the other. Thus I went up Market Street as far as Fourth Street, passing by the door of Mr. Read, my future wife's father; when she, standing at the door, saw me, and thought I made, as I certainly did, a most awkward, ridiculous appearance. Then I turned and went down Chestnut Street and part of Walnut Street, eating my roll all the way; and coming round found myself again at Market Street wharf, near the boat I came in, to which I went for a draught[5] of the river water; and being filled with one of my rolls, gave the other two to a woman and her child that came down the river in the boat with us and were waiting to go further.

Thus refreshed I walked again up the street, which by this time had many clean-dressed people in it, who were all walking the same way. I joined them, and thereby was led into the great meeting-house of the Quakers,[6] near the market. ☆ I sat down among them, and after looking round a while and hearing nothing said,[7] being very drowsy through labor and want of rest the preceding night, I fell fast asleep and continued so till the meeting broke up, when some one was kind enough to rouse me. This, therefore, was the first house I was in, or slept in, in Philadelphia.

---

[4] A shilling is a British coin equal to one-twentieth of a pound.

[5] Here, draught means "a gulp" or "a swallow."

[6] Quakers are members of the Society of Friends, a Christian religious group founded in the seventeenth century.

[7] Quaker religious meetings often include long periods of silence.

Analyze Voice What does Franklin reveal about his personality with this passage? 1

Autobiography Why might have Franklin chosen to include this detail in his autobiography? 2

Cultural History ☆

Quakers George Fox founded the Society of Friends in England. Committed to peace and simple living, the sect spread to other countries, including the United States.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 150.

Grammar Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW SMALL GROUP

Conjunctions Remind students that conjunctions join sentence elements and that they also show relationships between the elements. Coordinating conjunctions join words and word groups that have equal grammatical weight (salt and pepper); subordinating conjunctions join clauses in a way that makes one clause grammatically dependent on the other (although I had taken a nap, I was tired).

Have students work in small groups to identify sentences on this page that contain coordinating and subordinating conjunctions, and then list the conjunctions. Have groups identify whether conjunctions are coordinating or subordinating. (shirts and stockings; but took it)

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. How would you have felt if, like Franklin, you arrived in an unfamiliar city with little money, no job, and no place to live?
2. (a)What people does Franklin meet before he takes the boat to Philadelphia? (b)What do you learn about Franklin from these encounters?
3. (a)Why do the boatmen at first refuse to accept money from Franklin? (b)Why do you think he offers to pay?
4. (a)What does Franklin do during the Quakers' meeting? (b)What do you think the last sentence of this selection reveals about Franklin?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)How does an autobiography differ from a biography? (b)How should this difference affect one's evaluation of Franklin's autobiography?
6. (a)Why do you think Franklin emphasizes self-reliance? (b)Do you think self-reliance is as important today as it was in Franklin's time?

Connect

7. Big Idea The Road to Independence
   How might the colonists' reaction to Franklin's arrival indicate a desire for independence?
8. Connect to the Author What one word might you use to describe Benjamin Franklin? Explain, using details from what you have read.

Literary Element Autobiography

An autobiography is the story an author writes about his or her own life.

1. Why do you think Franklin thought it was important to write his autobiography? Explain.
2. Do you think that Franklin presented himself as he really was or from a biased perspective? Support your response with details from the selection.

Reading Strategy Analyze Voice

Voice is determined by sentence structure, tone, and word choice.

1. According to your notes, what are some of the features of Franklin's voice?
2. Judging by Franklin's literary voice, what sort of personality do you imagine he possessed?

Literature Online

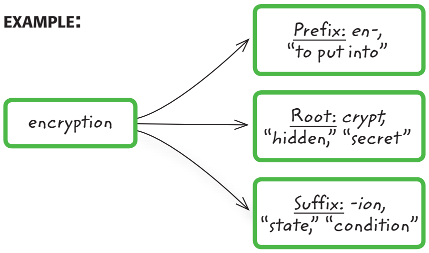
Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Parts Use a dictionary to find the meaning of each vocabulary word's root and any prefixes or suffixes it has. Record the meanings in a diagram like the one shown. Then write a sentence using the word correctly.

indentured	ingenious	mortification
ambulatory	infidel

EXAMPLE:



encryption
Prefix: en-, "to put into"
Root: crypt, "hidden," "secret"
Suffix: -ion, "state," "condition"

After You Read

Assess

1. Students may say "frightened."
2. (a) Dr. Brown and an old woman (b) He is observant, conversational, and friendly.
3. (a) He helped to row the boat. (b) He is generous and wants to show others he is not poor.
4. (a) Falls asleep (b) His wit in his pun on the word house
5. (a) An autobiography is the life of its writer; a biography is of someone other than its writer (b) Franklin might want readers to think well of him.
6. (a) It helped him succeed. (b) Answers will vary.
7. They are friendly, are eager to help, and have faced the challenge of surviving in a new place.
8. Students may say resourceful, given Franklin's ability to find food, shelter, and friendship.

Literary Element

1. Franklin was aware that his life was part of an important historical period.
2. He seems candid and true to life, but there may have some bias, such as his description of himself.

Progress Check

Can students analyze an autobiography?

If No → See Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 145.

Reading Strategy

1. Conversational, humorous; varied word choice and sentence structure.
2. Congenial and witty

Vocabulary

indentured: root endenter, "to indent a document"; suffix -ed, "past participle"; The indentured servant was eager to earn his freedom.

ingenious: root ingenium, "natural capacity"; suffix -ous, "having"; The ingenious engineer came up with an elegant solution.

mortification: root mortificare, "deaden"; suffix -ion, "process of"; The embarrassed actor's facial expression was full of mortification.

ambulatory: root ambulare, "to walk"; suffix -ory, "relating to"; After a week, the bedridden patient became ambulatory.

infidel: prefix in-, "not"; root fid-, "faith"; The infidel did not celebrate religious holidays.

Focus

Summary

In a group of aphorisms excerpted from Poor Richard's Almanack, Benjamin Franklin offers observations about life.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Connect Write on the board: "The worst wheel of the cart makes the most noise." Have students give an example that shows what this means.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Explain that in Franklin's time, people moved heavy things by using carts pulled by horses. Roads were poor, so wheels wore out quickly.

Reading Strategy 2

Connect Answer: Students should describe times when they or others had to work very hard to achieve something.

Literary Element Aphorism

An aphorism is a short, pointed statement that expresses a wise or clever observation about human experience. As you read, ask yourself, Which aphorisms are my most and least favorite, and why?

Reading Strategy Connect

Connecting means linking what you read to events in your own life. As you read, connect Franklin's aphorisms to your own experiences. Then make a list of the aphorisms that you have found to be true.

from Poor Richard's Almanack

Benjamin Franklin

If you would keep your secret from an enemy, tell it not to a friend.
1 The worst wheel of the cart makes the most noise.
He that cannot obey, cannot command.
No gains without pains.
'Tis easier to prevent bad habits than to break them.
A rolling stone gathers no moss.
Today is yesterday's pupil.
Most fools think they are only ignorant.[1]
An empty bag cannot stand upright.
Well done is better than well said.
What you would seem to be, be really.

Honesty is the best policy.
Dost thou love life? Then do not squander time; for that's the stuff life is made of.
Beware of little expenses, a small leak will sink a great ship.
A penny saved is a penny earned.
Don't count your chickens before they are hatched.
Buy what thou hast no need of; and e'er long thou shalt sell thy necessaries.
Not to oversee workmen, is to leave them your purse open.
Fish and visitors smell in three days.
Quarrels never could last long, if on one side only lay the wrong.
Love thy neighbor; yet don't pull down your hedge.

---

[1] Ignorant means "uneducated" or "uninformed."

2 Connect What is a real-life example of this aphorism?

Selection Skills

from Poor Richard's Almanack

Literary Elements
- Aphorism (SE pp. 110, 111)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write an Article (SE p. 111)

Reading Skills
- Connect (SE pp. 110, 111)

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Which of the aphorisms from Poor Richard's Almanack were your favorites? Explain.
2. (a)According to Franklin, how can a secret be kept from an enemy? (b)Describe in your own words the advice given in the second aphorism.
3. (a)What does Franklin say will sink a great ship? (b)What do you think he means by this aphorism?
4. (a)In the final aphorism, what does Franklin say about "thy neighbor"? (b)What might he mean by "don't pull down your hedge"?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. Which of Franklin's aphorisms do you think would be most relevant in today's society?
6. Would any of these aphorisms be irrelevant in today's society? Explain.

Connect

7. Big Idea The Struggle for Independence Which aphorisms would have been most relevant to the struggle for independence? Explain.
8. Connect to Today How popular do aphorisms seem to be today? Why do you think that is?

Literary Element Aphorism

Franklin's aphorisms reflect his clever use of language. For example, the saying "An empty bag cannot stand upright" presents a humorous metaphor for a person who lacks substance or conviction.

1. Explain how Franklin's use of language contributes to the impact of one of his aphorisms.
2. Using modern language and references to contemporary life, reword one of Franklin's aphorisms.

Reading Strategy Connect

You can recall ideas from a reading selection better by connecting them to your own life. What connections can you make between your life and Poor Richard's Almanack?

Writing

Write an Article Today we are more likely to read advice columns in the newspaper than aphorisms. Select a letter written to an advice columnist and write a response. Include an original aphorism that sums up your advice to the letter writer.

Academic Vocabulary

In his aphorisms, Franklin places an emphasis on prudence and hard work.

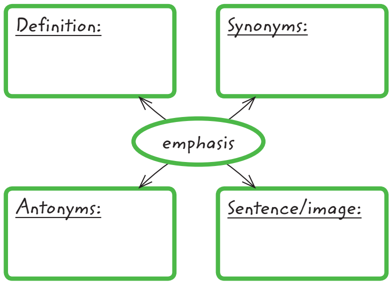
Emphasis is an academic word. A coach might put emphasis on the importance of regular training. To study this word further, fill out the graphic organizer below.



For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students' answers will vary.
2. (a) A secret can be kept by not telling anyone, even a friend. (b) People who shout the loudest usually have the least worthwhile things to say.
3. (a) A small leak (b) He means that little expenses can ruin a person over time.
4. (a) You should love him or her. (b) He means that it is good to have some privacy and some space to call your own.
5. Students' answers will vary.
6. Students' answers will vary, but most students should agree that each aphorism is at least somewhat relevant today.
7. "Fish and visitors smell in three days"; "No gains without pains." Franklin could have intended the first as a way of humorously asserting that the British troops should leave the colonies. The second could mean that going to war is difficult but that the rewards will be great.
8. Students should provide examples to support their positions.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 81–82.

Literary Element

Students' answers will vary.

Writing

Help students find samples of advice columns in the newspaper or on an Internet blog, or have them create a question of their own for their column. Students' advice columns should include an aphorism and be well-organized and insightful.

Progress Check

Can students analyze an aphorism?

If No → See Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 158.

Reading Strategy

Students' connections should be relevant to the reading selection.

Academic Vocabulary

emphasis

Definition: a stress on the importance of something

Synonyms: stress, accent, importance

Antonyms: negativity, unimportance

Sentence/image: The emphasis of the course is learning to speak the language.

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 13

Or ask: Why is the ability to persuade others to adopt a course of action important in a democracy?

Teach

View the Art ★

Answer: Henry seems to be delivering an impassioned call to action, as he does in his famous speech.

Clyde DeLand was an American painter and illustrator of the late 1800s and early 1900s.

Learning Objectives

For pages 112–113

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study:
Analyzing literary periods.
Evaluating historical influences.

The Rhetoric of Revolution

That the United States won independence from British colonial rule is as much a result of effective writers and powerful speakers as of General Washington and his brave army. Patrick Henry, Thomas Paine, and Thomas Jefferson were all highly skilled in rhetoric, the art of persuasion. Persuasion is often based on three types of appeal:

- appeal to reason, logic, and evidence
- appeal to emotions, such as fear, pride, or hate
- ethical appeal, or persuasion based on what we ourselves, moral philosophers, or the majority of people in our culture think is right

Rhetorical Devices

No matter what kinds of appeals speakers and writers focus on, they rely on a number of rhetorical devices. For example, making an ethical and emotional appeal in his pamphlet The Crisis, No. 1, Thomas Paine uses imagery, a type of figurative language, to illustrate his understanding of patriotism.

> "The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of his country; but he that stands it now, deserves the love and thanks of man and woman."

Another common device is hyperbole, or exaggeration. In the following quotation, Thomas Paine uses hyperbole to enhance an emotional appeal.

> "The heart that feels not now is dead . . ."

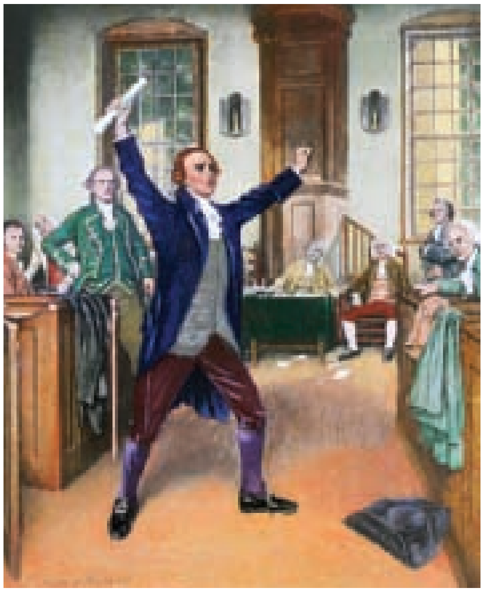
Many speakers use rhetorical questions, or questions that emphasize the obvious answer to what is asked. Patrick Henry's "Speech to the Second Virginia Convention" contains more than twenty rhetorical questions. This technique builds to an emotional climax and makes a strong impression on the listeners.



Patrick Henry's Famous Speech, 1915. Clyde DeLand. Oil on canvas.

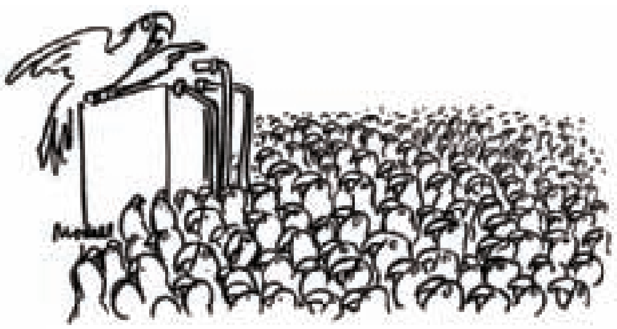
View the Art Patrick Henry's famous speech helped convince a majority of his fellow delegates at the Second Virginia Convention to support military resistance against Britain. Does this painting reflect the tone of that speech? Explain. ★

Listening and Speaking Practice

PARTNERS Faulty Reasoning Explain that people seeking to persuade often use faulty reasoning. Discuss these two common types:

- Circular reasoning is an argument that moves in a circle, assuming what it claims to prove, as in "Pablo Picasso was a genius because his paintings show extraordinary talent."
- Bandwagon reasoning appeals to the actions or thoughts of a group, as in "You should let me go to the party because all of the other kids' parents are letting them go."

Have students work in pairs to develop their own examples of faulty reasoning. They should develop arguments for or against independence from Britain and then present these to another team that must identify the flaw in their thinking.



“Not only do I want a cracker—we all want a cracker!”

★ Analyze Political Cartoons Like many political cartoons, this one has a serious message. What does it say about a speaker’s ability to sway audiences?

> “They tell us, sir, that we are weak; unable to cope with so formidable an adversary. But when shall we be stronger? Will it be the next week, or the next year? Will it be when we are totally disarmed, and when a British guard shall be stationed in every house?”

In the following passage, Patrick Henry uses the rhetorical device parallelism for emphasis. Parallelism is the use of a series of words, phrases, or sentences that have similar grammatical form. Henry’s series reaches a powerful climax with a reference to the English king. The appeal is to reason and emotion.

> “Our petitions have been slighted; our remonstrances have produced additional violence and insult; our supplications have been disregarded; and we have been spurned, with contempt, from the foot of the throne.”

Thomas Jefferson also uses parallelism in the Declaration of Independence to list the colonial grievances against King George III. Additionally, in the following excerpt, Jefferson uses another powerful rhetorical device, connotative language, to make an emotional and ethical appeal.

> “He has plundered our seas, ravaged our coasts, burned our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.”

Connotations are the suggested or implied meanings associated with a word. Here, Jefferson uses verbs with strong negative connotations. Earlier in the Declaration, Jefferson refers to “swarms of officers” sent to “harass our people.” How different the statement would have been had he written, “A lot of soldiers were sent to bother us”!

While Thomas Paine, Patrick Henry, and Thomas Jefferson did not cause the American Revolution with their rhetoric, they did rally the colonists to their side. Paine’s pamphlet Common Sense sold 100,000 copies in three months. Before its publication, Benjamin Franklin observed that he had heard no American speaking in favor of independence. Six months after Common Sense was published in Philadelphia, the Declaration of Independence was signed there. 1

Literature Online

Literature and Reading For more about the rhetoric of revolution, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Respond and Think Critically

1. What answers is Patrick Henry expecting to his rhetorical questions quoted above? Explain.
2. What connotation is suggested by Thomas Jefferson’s phrase ”swarms of officers”?
3. Which type of persuasive appeal—appeal to reason, appeal to emotion, or appeal based on ethics—most influences your political views? Explain.

Teach

Big Idea 1

The Road to Independence

Emphasize that persuasive rhetoric was critical in convincing American colonists to break with Britain. Ask: How important is persuasive rhetoric in politics today? Why might visual images be more important? (Students may say that although rhetoric is important, images have become equally vital in political persuasion because so many media are visual today.)

View the Art ★

Answer: The cartoon makes the point that speakers often express what their audience already feels.

Assess

1. Henry does not expect answers. He asks the questions to point out that the colonists are now as strong as they will ever be.
2. Jefferson’s phrase likens the British soldiers to irritating and dangerous insects that need to be driven off.
3. Students should explain why they are most affected by particular types of appeal.

For an activity related to this selection, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 163–164.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Explain to students that they may find text features such as boldface type and colored type helpful when they are answering questions about a selection. Boldface type can help them quickly locate important terms. For example, if students cannot immediately answer question 1, they can find the term rhetorical questions in bold type and reread the text that follows.

AAVE Have approaching-level students who are users of African American vernacular English read the quotations in blue italic type and write down the uses of the verbs to be and to have to practice these constructions that may cause difficulty.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus Transparency 11

Daily Language Practice Transparency 14

Or read aloud the Patrick Henry quotation displayed on this page. Have students discuss in small groups what freedoms they enjoy every day and what life might be like without those freedoms.

APPROACHING If students have difficulty thinking of examples of freedom, have them work together to list public places they can enter freely. (parks, libraries, stores) Then have students list the things they are free to do in each of these places. (walk, run, read, borrow, browse, buy)

Before You Read

Speech to the Second Virginia Convention

Meet Patrick Henry

(1736–1799)

On March 23, 1775, Patrick Henry stood before fellow delegates at the Second Virginia Convention and thundered his famous challenge, "Give me liberty, or give me death!" Thomas Marshall, a delegate to the convention, recalled that Henry's speech was "one of the most bold, vehement, and animated pieces of eloquence that had ever been delivered."

Henry was born in Hanover County, Virginia. After a series of unsuccessful ventures as a storekeeper and farmer, he began to study law. Henry was admitted to the bar in 1760 and within several years began to prosper. In 1765, at the age of twenty-nine, he became a member of the House of Burgesses, the representative assembly in colonial Virginia. That same year, England passed the Stamp Act, an extremely unpopular tax. When Henry attacked the act in a fiery speech in the House of Burgesses, several members interrupted him with accusations of treason. Henry replied, "If this be treason, make the most of it."

> "I know not what course others may take; but as for me, give me liberty, or give me death."
>
> —Patrick Henry

Governor and Legislator In 1776, as the battles of the Revolution raged around them, the citizens of Virginia elected Henry to be the first governor of the commonwealth under its new constitution. He served three consecutive one-year terms as governor from 1776 through 1778. As wartime governor, Henry vigorously supported General George Washington and his army.

High Standards In 1787, Henry turned down an offer to attend the Philadelphia Constitutional Convention. Although he had toiled as a lawyer, legislator, and governor to uphold inalienable rights, Henry initially opposed the ratification of the U.S. Constitution. What seemed a contradiction, even an insult, to his critics was really Henry's unwillingness to compromise his high ethical standards. Henry championed American independence, but he believed that the Constitution as written did not sufficiently secure the rights of states or those of individuals. Henry also feared that under the Constitution, Spain might retain control of the Mississippi River and its lucrative commerce routes.

The Constitution was published in 1787, but the nation remained divided in two camps. The Federalists supported the Constitution, and the Anti-Federalists did not. Henry was the nation's leading Anti-Federalist, and he and his supporters lobbied for amendments. The Constitution was ratified in Virginia in 1788 by the narrow margin of 89 to 79. The arguments that Henry and his faction of Anti-Federalists made during the debate eventually led to the Bill of Rights. Henry refused several high positions in the new federal government due to his ailing health and family responsibilities. He died at the age of 63 and was interred at Red Hill, his Virginia home.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Patrick Henry, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Selection Skills

Speech to the Second Virginia Convention

Literary Elements
- Rhetorical Question (SE pp. 115, 117–119)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Reasoning and Propositions (TE p. 116)

Reading Skills
- Analyze Figures of Speech (SE pp. 115, 117–119)
- Evaluate Persuasive Writing (TE p. 118)

Vocabulary Skills
- Antonyms (SE p. 119)
- Intensity (TE p. 115)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a Speech (SE p. 119)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Speech

What does the phrase "give me liberty, or give me death" mean to you? Do you find it persuasive? Discuss these questions in a small group.

Build Background

The British parliament passed a series of taxes on its colonies. American colonists protested these taxes, and thousands of British troops were sent to Boston to preserve order. Patrick Henry was one of the leaders of the growing opposition to British rule. The speech you are about to read would firmly establish Henry's reputation as a forceful proponent of liberty.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The Road to Independence

As you read this speech, ask yourself, What does Henry imply about the American colonists' disagreement regarding independence from British rule?

Literary Element Rhetorical Question

A rhetorical question is one to which no answer is expected. It is used to emphasize the obvious answer to what is asked. As you read, ask yourself, How does Henry use rhetorical questions? What effect do they have?

Reading Strategy Analyze Figures of Speech

Figurative language is used for descriptive effect, in order to convey ideas or emotions. Figurative expressions are not literally true but express some truth beyond the literal level. A figure of speech is a specific device or kind of figurative language, such as allusion, assonance, hyperbole, metaphor, metonymy, personification, simile, or symbol. As you read, ask yourself, How does Patrick Henry use figures of speech?

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart to record examples of figures of speech and to restate them in your own words.

Figure of Speech	Restatement
"Suffer not yourselves to be betrayed with a kiss."

Learning Objectives

For pages 114–119

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing rhetorical question.

Reading: Analyzing figures of speech.

Writing: Writing a speech.

Vocabulary

arduous (är´ jo͞o əs) adj. requiring great exertion or endurance; difficult; p. 117 Running the marathon was too arduous for eight of the contestants.

insidious (in sid´ ē əs) adj. slyly treacherous and deceitful; deceptive; p. 117 The candidate used insidious methods, such as bribery, to get elected.

subjugation (sub´ jə gā´ shən) n. act of bringing under control; domination; p. 117 No one liked being under the subjugation of an evil ruler.

remonstrate (ri mon´ strāt) v. to object; to protest; p. 118 The whole country will remonstrate if taxes are raised again.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Explain that the leaders of the colony of Virginia were debating whether to join other American colonies in seeking independence from Great Britain. Leaders supporting independence risked imprisonment or even death. Ask: Which freedoms are most important to you?

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

AAVE Have approaching-level students who are users of African American Vernacular English (AAVE) practice forming the past tense of verbs. Make sure students practice with verbs that end in -ed, making sure the final syllable is pronounced.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

In this speech to the Second Virginia Convention, Henry passionately speaks out against British injustices. Likening Americans to enslaved people, he challenges his fellow colonists to defend themselves. Henry asserts that not only is war justifiable, it is inevitable.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 165–170.

Vocabulary

Intensity Verbs and adjectives can have varying intensity, or strength of meaning. Choosing the correct word requires an understanding of that intensity. Ask: What is a less intense word for insidious? (sneaky)

APPROACHING Ask: Which word in this selection's vocabulary is a more intense word for challenging? (arduous)

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 173.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Predict Have students read the first paragraph of Henry's speech. Ask: What tone do you expect the rest of the speech to have? (The last sentences hint at a blunt and outspoken tone.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS Remind students that tone is an author's or speaker's attitude toward the topic. Words, such as "freely" and "without reserve," hint at Henry's tone.

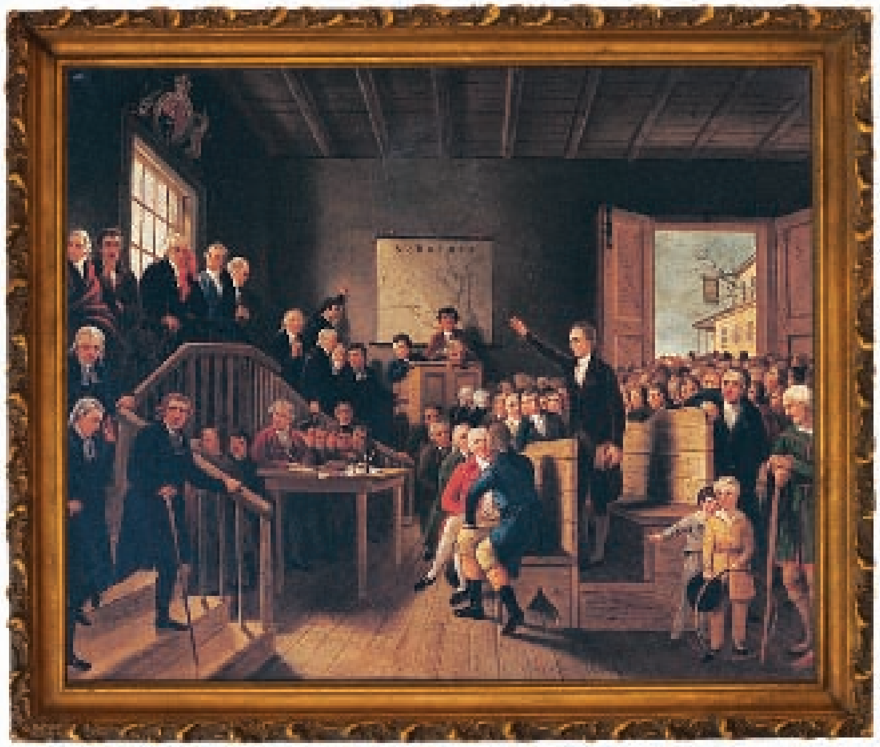
View the Art

In the 1763 "parson's cause" case, Patrick Henry argued that the colonial government, not the British government, should set the price of tobacco paid to the clergy for their services. Henry won the case.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 8.4
DRP: 60
Lexile: 930



Patrick Henry Arguing the Parson's Cause at the Hanover County Courthouse, 1834. George Cooke. Oil on canvas. Virginia Historical Society, Richmond.

Speech to the Second Virginia Convention

Patrick Henry

Mr. President:[1] No man thinks more highly than I do of the patriotism, as well as abilities, of the very worthy gentlemen who have just addressed the house. But different men often see the same subject in different lights; and, therefore, I hope it will not be thought disrespectful to those gentlemen, if, entertaining,[2] as I do, opinions of a character very opposite to theirs, I shall speak forth my sentiments freely and without reserve. This is no time for ceremony. 1

The question before the house is one of awful moment[3] to this country. For my own part, I consider it as nothing less than a question of freedom or slavery. And in proportion to the magnitude of the subject ought to be the

---

[1] Mr. President refers to the president of the Convention.
[2] In this case, entertaining means "having in mind."
[3] Here, of awful moment means "of great consequence."

Listening and Speaking Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW SMALL GROUP

Reasoning and Propositions Break the speech into sections and have a different student read each part aloud. Ask students whether Henry is using inductive reasoning (specific to general) or deductive reasoning (general to specific) to support each argument.

Explain that a proposition is a statement that focuses a discussion or debate. There are propositions of fact (provable assertions), value (opinions), and policy (courses of action). Have student groups discuss the major propositions in Patrick Henry's speech and identify whether each is a proposition of fact, of value, or of policy.

freedom of the debate. It is only in this way that we can hope to arrive at truth, and fulfill the great responsibility which we hold to God and our country. Should I keep back my opinions at such a time, through fear of giving offense, I should consider myself as guilty of treason toward my country, and of an act of disloyalty toward the Majesty of Heaven, which I revere above all earthly kings.

Mr. President, it is natural for man to indulge in the illusions of hope. We are apt to shut our eyes against a painful truth, and listen to the song of that siren, till she transforms us into beasts. Is this the part of wise men, engaged in a great and arduous struggle for liberty? Are we disposed to be of the number of those who, having eyes, see not, and having ears, hear not, the things which so nearly concern their temporal[4] salvation? For my part, whatever anguish of spirit it may cost, I am willing to know the whole truth; to know the worst and to provide for it.

> Give me liberty, or give me death!

I have but one lamp by which my feet are guided; and that is the lamp of experience. I know of no way of judging of the future but by the past. And judging by the past, I wish to know what there has been in the conduct of the British ministry for the last ten years to justify those hopes with which gentlemen have been pleased to solace themselves and the House? Is it that insidious smile with which our petition has been lately received? Trust it not, sir; it will prove a snare to your feet. Suffer not yourselves to be betrayed with a kiss. Ask yourselves how this gracious reception of our petition comports with these warlike preparations which cover our waters and darken our land. Are fleets and armies necessary to a work of love and reconciliation? Have we shown ourselves so unwilling to be reconciled, that force must be called in to win back our love? Let us not deceive ourselves, sir. These are the implements of war and subjugation; the last arguments to which kings resort. I ask gentlemen, sir, what means this martial array,[5] if its purpose be not to force us to submission? Can gentlemen assign any other possible motives for it? Has Great Britain any enemy, in this quarter of the world, to call for all this accumulation of navies and armies? No, sir, she has none. They are meant for us; they can be meant for no other. They are sent over to bind and rivet upon us those chains which the British ministry have been so long forging. And what have we to oppose to them? Shall we try argument? Sir, we have been trying that for the last ten years. Have we

---

[4] The word temporal means "in time; earthly."

[5] A martial array is a military display.

2 Analyze Figures of Speech What is being compared in this metaphor?

Vocabulary

arduous (är´ jo͞o əs) adj. exhausting; difficult

Rhetorical Question How does Henry build on this rhetorical question several sentences later? 3

Analyze Figures of Speech Explain Henry's use of metaphor in this sentence. 4

Vocabulary

insidious (in sid´ ē əs) adj. slyly treacherous subjugation (sub´ jə gā´ shən) n. act of bringing under control; domination

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Figures of Speech

Answer: Henry is comparing experience to a lamp that illuminates one's path.

Ask: How does using a metaphor help Henry make his meaning clear? (It gives readers a concrete image to link to Henry's ideas.)

APPROACHING Ask: What is a metaphor? (It is a figure of speech that compares or equates two seemingly unlike things.)

Literary Element 3

Rhetorical Question

Answer: He later identifies the British fleets and armies as "implements of war and subjugation."

Reading Strategy 4

Analyze Figures of Speech

Answer: Henry is likening the British use of military force against the colonists to the chaining of enslaved people.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Point out that the Literary Element question on this page requires reading beyond the highlighted passage. Henry asks more than one rhetorical question. Note that the sentence that begins "These are the implements" refers back to the things he has already asked about.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Explain that words can have positive, negative, or neutral connotations. Henry uses forceful words with negative connotations to rouse his audience. Have students read the definition and context sentence for insidious and explain its connotation.

Teach

Big Idea 1

The Road to Independence

Answer: He wants to remind his fellow delegates of Britain's repeated refusals to negotiate with the colonists.

Literary Element 2

Rhetorical Question

Answer: He is nearing the end of his speech and wants to produce an emotional effect on his audience.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 176.

Progress Check

Can students identify a rhetorical question?

If No → See Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 171.

anything new to offer on the subject? Nothing. We have held the subject up in every light of which it is capable; but it has been all in vain. Shall we resort to entreaty[6] and humble supplication?[7] What terms shall we find which have not been already exhausted? Let us not, I beseech you, sir, deceive ourselves longer. Sir, we have done everything that could be done to avert the storm which is now coming on. We have petitioned; we have remonstrated; we have supplicated; we have prostrated[8] ourselves before the tyrannical hands of the ministry and parliament. Our petitions have been slighted; our remonstrances have produced additional violence and insult; our supplications have been disregarded; and we have been spurned,[9] with contempt, from the foot of the throne. In vain, after these things, may we indulge the fond[10] hope of peace and reconciliation. There is no longer any room for hope. If we wish to be free—if we mean to preserve inviolate[11] those inestimable privileges for which we have been so long contending—if we mean not basely[12] to abandon the noble struggle in which we have been so long engaged, and which we have pledged ourselves never to abandon until the glorious object of our contest shall be obtained, we must fight! I repeat it, sir, we must fight! An appeal to arms and to the God of Hosts is all that is left us!

They tell us, sir, that we are weak; unable to cope with so formidable an adversary. But when shall we be stronger? Will it be the next week, or the next year? Will it be when we are totally disarmed, and when a British guard shall be stationed in every house? Shall we gather strength by irresolution and inaction? Shall we acquire the means of effectual resistance by lying supinely on our backs, and hugging the delusive phantom of hope, until our enemies shall have bound us hand and foot? Sir, we are not weak, if we make a proper use of the means which the God of nature hath placed in our power. Three millions of people, armed in the holy cause of liberty, and in such a country as that which we possess, are invincible by any force which our enemy can send against us. Besides, sir, we shall not fight our battles alone. There is a just God who presides over the destinies of nations; and who will raise friends to fight our battles for us. The battle, sir, is not to the strong alone; it is to the vigilant, the active, the brave. Besides, sir, we have no election.[13] If we were base enough to desire it, it is now too late to retire from the contest. There is no retreat but in submission and slavery! Our chains are forged! Their clanking may be heard on the plains of Boston! The war is inevitable—and let it come! I repeat it, sir, let it come!

It is in vain, sir, to extenuate[14] the matter. Gentlemen may cry peace, peace—but there is no peace. The war is actually begun! The next gale that sweeps from the North will bring to our ears the clash of resounding arms![15] Our brethren are already in the field! Why stand we here idle? What is it that gentlemen wish? What would they have? Is life so dear, or peace so sweet, as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery? Forbid it, Almighty God! I know not what course others may take; but as for me, give me liberty, or give me death!

---

[6] An entreaty is a plea or request.
[7] Here, supplication means "begging."
[8] Prostrated means "bowed down."
[9] Spurned means "rejected with disdain."
[10] Here, fond means "foolish."
[11] The word inviolate means "unharmed and intact."
[12] Here, basely means "dishonorably."
[13] In this instance, election means "choice."
[14] Here, extenuate means "to debate; offer excuses."
[15] A gale is a strong wind. Colonists in Massachusetts were already engaged in open opposition to the British.

1 The Road to Independence Why does Henry refer to these past events?

Vocabulary

remonstrate (ri mon´ strāt) v. to object; to protest

Rhetorical Question Why does Henry use so many rhetorical questions in this paragraph? 2

Reading Practice

SMALL GROUP

Evaluate Persuasive Writing Patrick Henry's speech was designed to persuade his listeners to join the cause against the British.

Ask: How effective are Henry's arguments? Would his words motivate you to join his cause? Have groups of students evaluate Henry's speech. Do they think his arguments are sound? Why or why not?

Ask: When you read a piece of persuasive writing, how do you decide whether to accept its arguments? Have students develop lists of evaluation criteria, such as "Arguments are logical."

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Imagine that you were a delegate at the Second Virginia Convention. How do you think you would have reacted to Henry's speech?
2. (a)According to Henry, what is the question "of awful moment" to the country? (b)Why do you think Henry offers several reasons to support his speaking out?
3. (a)What does Henry say about Britain's military and naval forces? (b)Why does he introduce this point?
4. (a)According to Henry, what makes Americans "invincible"? (b)Why does Henry say that God is on the side of the colonists?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)Which emotions are expressed in the speech? (b)In your opinion, does Henry's passion add to his effectiveness? Explain.
6. (a)Why does Henry suggest that the colonists have only two choices—liberty or death? (b)Are there other options? Explain.

Connect

7. Big Idea The Road to Independence What steps do you think Henry wanted Virginia to take in reponse to this speech?
8. Connect to the Author Do you find Patrick Henry's presentation of the situation as a choice between extremes—liberty or death—effective? Explain.

Literary Element Rhetorical Question

A rhetorical question presumes that listeners agree with the speaker. The speaker can use this persuasive technique as an emotional appeal designed to achieve solidarity with his or her audience or as a device to lead the audience to accept the speaker's beliefs.

1. What is the effect of the rhetorical questions in the last paragraph of Henry's speech?
2. Name one idea or belief that Henry wants his audience to accept.

Reading Strategy Analyze Figures of Speech

In classical mythology (for example, in Homer's Odyssey), a siren was a sea goddess who lured sailors to their doom with her beautiful song.

1. What does Henry compare to the siren's song?
2. Why do you think he uses this metaphor?

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Antonyms With a partner, brainstorm three antonyms for each boldfaced vocabulary word below. Then discuss your choices with your classmates. Be prepared to explain why you chose your words.

arduous	insidious
subjugation	remonstrate

EXAMPLE: morose

Antonyms: cheerful, happy, joyous

Sample explanation: A person who is morose is very gloomy, but a cheerful person is not.

Writing

Write a Speech Patrick Henry's famous speech expresses a great deal of personal feeling. Consider a contemporary issue about which you feel strongly and write a short speech in support of your position, including a call to action. Use rhetorical questions to give your speech added emotional appeal.

Vocabulary

arduous Antonyms: easy, effortless, simple; Sample explanation: An arduous task is very difficult; an easy task is not.

insidious Antonyms: straightforward, honest, forthright; Sample explanation: An insidious person is deceitful, but an honest person is not.

subjugation Antonyms: emancipation, freedom, independence; Sample explanation: People who live under the subjugation of a ruler are dominated by that ruler; people who live in independence are not.

remonstrate Antonyms: agree, consent, laud; Sample explanation: When people, remonstrate, they object to something; when they agree, they are of the same opinion.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students' answers will vary.
2. (a) Whether to fight for freedom from British rule (b) To ingratiate himself with a hostile audience
3. (a) Britain is increasing these forces in the colonies (b) He claims the forces' only purpose is to subjugate the colonies.
4. (a) They are armed in a good cause. (b) To incite them to war
5. (a) Patriotism, desire for freedom, bravery, and fervor (b) Students' answers will vary.
6. (a) To eliminate all options but war (b) Students may suggest alternatives to war.
7. To join the Massachusetts colonists in preparing to fight the British
8. Students may say that it underscores the powerful emotions and opinions behind his words.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 83–84.

Literary Element

1. They build to a powerful climax.
2. Possible answer: Peace without freedom is worse than death.

Reading Strategy

1. The illusions of hope
2. To suggest how foolish false hope can be.

Writing

Students' speeches should clearly relate to a contemporary issue and should use persuasive techniques.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus
Transparency 12
Daily Language Practice
Transparency 15

Or write on the board: How much freedom should an individual or country have? What, if anything, should limit freedom? Have groups of students imagine they are the Founding Fathers in order to brainstorm freedoms to include in the country's constitution. Have each group make a word web, with "Freedom" in the center and their ideas about individual and national freedoms in circles around it.

Before You Read

Declaration of Independence

Meet Thomas Jefferson
(1743–1826)

Honoring Nobel Prize winners at the White House in 1962, President John F. Kennedy observed, "I think this is the most extraordinary collection of talent, of human knowledge, that has ever been gathered together at the White House, with the possible exception of when Thomas Jefferson dined alone." Kennedy was referring to Jefferson's amazing mastery of at least a dozen different professions. He was an architect, inventor, lawyer, surveyor, musician, and botanist, to name but six. Ultimately he became president of the United States.

Jefferson was born in 1743, in Albemarle County, Virginia, to Peter and Jane Jefferson. In 1760 he enrolled in the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, where he studied mathematics, science, and law. He began to practice law in 1767 and was elected to the Virginia House of Burgesses in 1769. In 1772 he married a widow, Martha Wayles Skelton. They had six children, but only two survived. Martha herself died in 1782.

> "The spirit of resistance to government is so valuable on certain occasions that I wish it to be always kept alive. . . . I like a little rebellion now and then."
>
> —Thomas Jefferson,
> from a letter to Abigail Adams, 1787

Jefferson the Writer As a delegate to the Second Continental Congress in 1776, Jefferson drafted what many believe to be the most powerful argument for freedom ever written. As the delegates debated breaking away from Britain, they turned to Jefferson to commit their ideas about equality and liberty to writing. He expressed those ideas eloquently in the Declaration. Though others edited, revised, and deleted portions of the draft, the final version was essentially Jefferson's.

Jefferson the Leader Jefferson succeeded Patrick Henry as governor of Virginia but served again in the congress from 1783 to 1784. After his appointment as U.S. ambassador to France, he became George Washington's secretary of state and then vice president under John Adams. In 1803, during the first of his two terms as president, Jefferson made a decision that changed the nation forever. He arranged to purchase the Louisiana Territory from France. The Louisiana Purchase cost the nation $11.25 million plus $3.75 million in French debts it agreed to pay but doubled the size of the United States. Jefferson then sent a scientific expedition headed by Meriwether Lewis and William Clark to explore these new lands and continue on to the Pacific Ocean.

Thomas Jefferson spent his last years at the Virginia home he designed, built, and rebuilt—Monticello. In 1819 he founded the University of Virginia at nearby Charlottesville. He died on July 4, 1826, exactly fifty years after the signing of the Declaration. A man of contradictions, Jefferson opposed slavery in principle but owned slaves himself. His epitaph, which he composed himself, cited his writing of the Declaration of Independence among his achievements but made no reference to his presidency.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Thomas Jefferson, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Selection Skills

Declaration of Independence

Literary Elements
- Text Structure (SE pp. 121, 124, 126)
- Tone (TE p. 123)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- View Art (SE p. 123)

Reading Skills
- Evaluate Argument (SE pp. 121, 122, 126)
- Predict (TE p. 122)

Vocabulary Skills
- Context (SE p. 126)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Persuasive Essay (SE p. 127)
- Identify Bias (TE p. 124)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Text

If your freedom was severely limited by the government, what would you do? Would you protest, move, or do something else entirely? Make a list of possible actions you might take.

Build Background

On June 11, the delegates of the Second Continental Congress had appointed a five-member committee to draft a statement declaring independence from Britain. The committee included Benjamin Franklin, John Adams, and Jefferson, but Jefferson was called upon to do the writing. Some of his ideas were not new. According to John Locke's theory of "natural law," which Jefferson had studied, human beings are "by nature free, equal and independent." Following Locke, Jefferson stressed that the American Revolution was a struggle for the rights of all people.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The Road to Independence

As you read the Declaration of Independence, ask yourself, How does Jefferson describe the challenges the colonists faced in their struggle for independence?

Literary Element Text Structure

Text structure is the way the parts of a text are organized and related to each other. In the Declaration of Independence, Jefferson structures his text in terms of problem and solution. As you read, ask yourself, What problem does Jefferson identify? What solution does he propose?

Reading Strategy Evaluate Argument

To evaluate arguments, you need to distinguish valid from invalid reasoning. In deductive reasoning, a writer argues from general principles to specific conclusions. A syllogism is a form of deduction that has three parts: a major premise, a minor premise, and a conclusion. A syllogism is valid if its conclusion follows logically from its premises. Here is an example:

- Major premise: All human beings are mortal.
- Minor premise: Jefferson is a human being.
- Conclusion: Jefferson is mortal.

As you read the Declaration of Independence, notice how Jefferson uses deductive reasoning to develop his argument.

Learning Objectives

For pages 120–124

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing text structure.

Reading: Evaluating argument.

Vocabulary

usurpation (ū´ sər pā´ shən) n. the act of seizing power without right or authority; p. 122 Civil disorder led to a usurpation of power by military leaders.

endeavor (en dev´ ər) v. to make an effort; to try; p. 123 The student endeavored to finish his paper on time.

tenure (ten´ yər) n. duration or terms of a position or office; p. 123 The tenure of an elected judge depends on performance.

acquiesce (ak´ wē es´) v. to consent or agree to, despite objections; to comply passively; p. 124 Ling decided to acquiesce to her friend's plans for the evening.

rectitude (rek´ tə to͞od´) n. uprightness of moral character; honesty; p. 124 Known for his rectitude, Thomas was put in charge of the club's finances.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

The Declaration of Independence explains precisely why the colonists believed they deserved their freedom and lays the groundwork for establishing the basic freedoms that are the foundation of our democracy.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 178–183.

Vocabulary

Noun Suffixes Tell students that the suffix -tion means "the act or state of." It is added to a verb to create a noun. Ask: Which word in this selection's vocabulary is the noun form of a verb? (usurpation)

ADVANCED Point out to advanced learners that some verbs are changed to nouns by adding other suffix endings, such as -ence. Ask: What noun is created by adding -ence to the verb acquiesce? What does the noun mean? (acquiescence; the act of consenting or agreeing silently.)

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 186.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Have students generate a list of ideas or beliefs about the most important things in life. (Students might say family, job, friends, health, or wealth.) From the list, ask students to write down which idea is the most important to them. Have students list underneath the idea two or three reasons that their selection is the best choice. (Possible answer: family, because it provides support, love, and trust.) Then have students think about what might be most important for an entire country. Tell them to keep these thoughts in mind as they read the selection.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Evaluate Argument

Answer: The basic principles are that governments are instituted to secure basic human rights and that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.

Big Idea 2

The Road to Independence

Answer: Jefferson's statement emphasizes that the colonists have been suffering for some time under an unfair system of government, that they have been patient, and that their patience has come to an end.

Political History ☆

Colonial Legislatures The first colonial assemblies modeled their governments on the British Parliament. The assemblies dealt with internal matters, such as raising taxes, forming armies, and overseeing the courts.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 12.6
DRP: 71
Lexile: 1360

Declaration of Independence

In Congress, July 4, 1776

Thomas Jefferson

When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume, among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights;[1] that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; that to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness. Prudence,[2] indeed, will dictate that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shown that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces[3] a design to reduce them under absolute despotism,[4] it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security.

Such has been the patient sufferance of these colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains[5] them to alter their former systems of government. ☆ The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny[6] over these states. To prove this, let facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his assent[7] to laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his governors to pass laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his assent

---

[1] Unalienable rights cannot be taken away.
[2] The exercise of good judgment is called prudence.
[3] Evinces means "makes clear or evident."
[4] Despotism is government by a ruler of absolute authority.
[5] Constrains means "forces."
[6] The arbitrary or oppressive exercise of power is tyranny.
[7] Assent is agreement.

1 Evaluate Argument Which of the basic principles stated earlier support this argument?

The Road to Independence In what way does this statement shed light on what the colonists have endured in their struggle for independence? 2

Vocabulary

usurpation (yū′ sər pā′ shən) n. the act of seizing power without right or authority

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Predict Explain to students that the first sentence of the Declaration acts like a thesis statement. Ask a student to read the sentence aloud. Have students restate the sentence in their own words. Then ask them what information they think Jefferson will convey. (Possible response: He will show why it is necessary for the colonists to dissolve political ties, why the laws of God and nature entitle them to independence, and why they are taking action.)

should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of representation in the legislature, a right inestimable to them, and formidable to tyrants only.

3 He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved representative houses repeatedly, for opposing, with manly firmness, his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused, for a long time after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the legislative powers, incapable of annihilation, have returned to the people at large for their exercise; the state remaining, in the meantime, exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without and convulsions within.

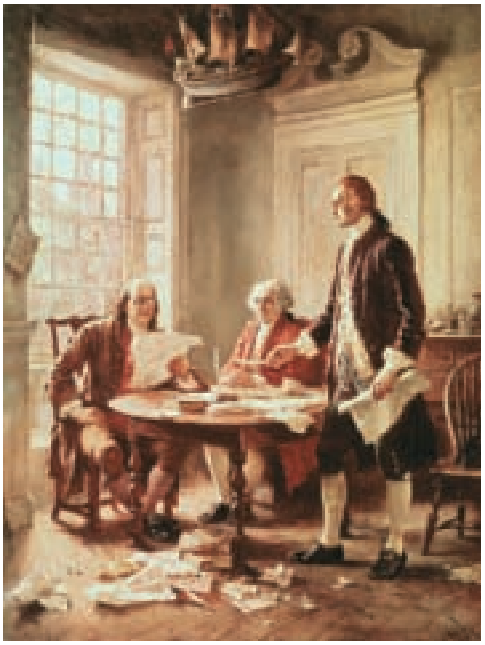
He has endeavored to prevent the population of these states; for that purpose obstructing the laws for naturalization[8] of foreigners, refusing to pass others to encourage their migrations hither, and raising the conditions of new appropriations of lands.

He has obstructed the administration of justice, by refusing his assent to laws for establishing judiciary powers.

He has made judges dependent on his will alone for the tenure of their offices, and the amount of payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of new offices, and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, standing armies, without the consent of our legislatures.



Drafting of the Declaration of Independence, c. 1900. Jean-Léon Gérome Ferris.

View the Art Do you find this painting a believable depiction of the drafting of the Declaration of Independence? Explain. ★

He has affected to render the military independent of, and superior to, the civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution and unacknowledged by our laws, giving his assent to their acts of pretended legislation:

For quartering[9] large bodies of armed troops among us;

For protecting them, by a mock trial, from punishment for any murders which they should commit on the inhabitants of these states;

For cutting off our trade with all parts of the world;

For imposing taxes on us without our consent;

For depriving us, in many cases, of the benefits of trial by jury;

For transporting us beyond seas, to be tried for pretended offenses;

---

[8] Naturalization is the process by which foreigners become citizens of another country.

[9] Here, quartering means "providing with lodging."

Vocabulary

endeavor	(en dev´ ər) v. to make an effort; to try tenure	(ten´ yər) n. duration or terms of a position or office

Teach

Literary Element 3

Tone Help students identify Jefferson's tone and its effect. (Jefferson's tone is direct. It lends credibility to the colonists' decision to declare independence and conveys the nobility of their actions.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS Remind English learners that tone is an author's attitude toward his or her topic. Jefferson's tone reflects his attitude toward the King and his belief in the colonists' right to make changes. Ask: What words in this passage are clues to Jefferson's tone? (refused, relinquish)

For additional literary element practice, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 184.

View the Art ★

Answer: Some students will say yes, because the painting shows the work that went into the Declaration of Independence.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Explain that writers create tone in part through their choice of words. For example, they choose words with strong positive or negative connotations or feelings associated with them. Jefferson's use of the word tyrant in his passage describing the King's actions, for example, conveys his negative attitude toward the King. Read specific words aloud and ask students how each affects tone.

Established For students struggling to identify words that reveal tone, read each modifying word aloud and ask for its connotation. (Unusual, uncomfortable, distant, and fatiguing all have negative connotations and reveal Jefferson's critical tone.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Display these words from the selection: inestimable, unusual, uncomfortable, unalienable. Explain that each word contains a prefix that makes its meaning the opposite of the root word. Ask students to explain how the prefix affects the meaning of each word.

Teach

Big Idea 1

The Road to Independence

Ask: How does the last sentence in the Declaration show the seriousness of the colonists' act of declaring independence? (It expresses the need to repy on a higher power in the undertaking, as well as the signers' certainty and their willingness to risk everything—their lives, their fortunes, and their honor—rather then continue to live under British rule.)

Literary Element 2

Text Structure

Answer: Since the King has not just failed to protect the colonists' rights, but actually violated those rights, the colonists have decided to declare independence and set up their own government to protect their rights and interests.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 189.

For abolishing the free system of English laws in a neighboring province,[10] establishing therein an arbitrary government, and enlarging its boundaries, so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these colonies;

For taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws, and altering fundamentally the forms of our governments;

For suspending our own legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated government here, by declaring us out of his protection and waging war against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our coasts, burned our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is at this time transporting large armies of foreign mercenaries[11] to complete the works of death, desolation, and tyranny already begun with circumstances of cruelty and perfidy[12] scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow-citizens, taken captive on the high seas, to bear arms against their country, to become the executioners of their friends and brethren, or to fall themselves by their hands.

He has excited domestic insurrections among us, and has endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes, and conditions.

In every stage of these oppressions we have petitioned for redress[13] in the most humble terms; our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A prince whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant is unfit to be ruler of a free people.

Nor have we been wanting in our attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them, from time to time, of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity;[14] and we have conjured[15] them, by the ties of our common kindred, to disavow these usurpations, which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They, too, have been deaf to the voice of justice and consanguinity.[16] We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity which denounces[17] our separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, enemies in war, in peace, friends.

We, therefore, the representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the name and by the authority of the good people of these colonies, solemnly publish and declare that these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown, and that all political connection between them and the state of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved; and that, as free and independent states, they have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and do all other acts and things which independent states may of right do. And for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor. 1

---

[10] The neighboring province is Quebec, Canada.
[11] Mercenaries are paid soldiers in a foreign army.
[12] Perfidy means "a deliberate betrayal of trust."
[13] A compensation for a wrong done is a redress.
[14] Magnanimity means "nobility of mind and heart."
[15] Here, conjured means "solemnly appealed to."
[16] Consanguinity is a blood relationship.
[17] Here, denounces means "announces" or "proclaims."

Text Structure How is this declaration and the ones that follow a solution to the problems Jefferson has described? 2

Vocabulary

acquiesce (ak′ wē es′) v. to consent or agree to, despite objections; to comply passively rectitude (rek′ tə to͞od′) n. uprightness of moral character; honesty

Writing Practice

Identify Bias Remind students that bias is the favoring of one side of an argument over the other. Say: Skim the Declaration to find words and phrases that reveal bias against the British. Ask: How do the words "He has refused his assent to laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good" on page 122 accomplish Jefferson's goal? (Calling the laws "wholesome" and "necessary" casts the colonists in the best possible light.) Have students write a one-page analysis of bias in the Declaration. Analyses should include a thesis about Jefferson's bias and discussion of at least two more examples.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

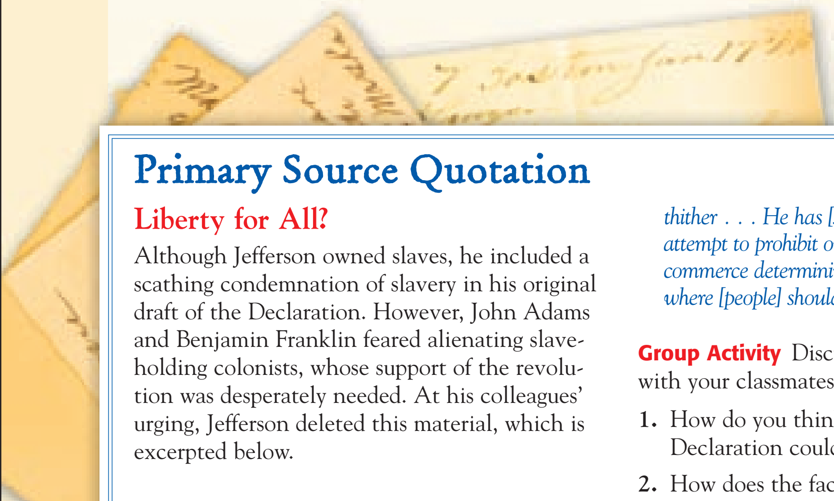
1. How has reading the Declaration of Independence affected your ideas about freedom?
2. (a)What is the purpose of the document? (b)To which "opinions of mankind" might Jefferson be referring?
3. (a)According to Jefferson, which human rights are "unalienable"? (b)How do you interpret the phrase "pursuit of happiness"?
4. (a)How have the colonists met with "these oppressions"? (b)Why might the king have ignored the colonists' petitions for redress?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)In what ways does Jefferson emphasize that the colonists' complaints are against the king of England, not against the British people? (b)Why do you think Jefferson went to such lengths to emphasize this distinction?
6. (a)What method of organization did Jefferson use in creating this document? (b)How effective is this method of organization?

Connect

7. Big Idea The Road to Independence (a)What does the Declaration of Independence stress about the dangers of changing a form of government? (b)What does this indicate about the process that led to the American Revolution?
8. Connect to Today Jefferson chose his words with great care. Do you think politicians today put the same amount of thought into their words, either spoken or written? Explain.



Primary Source Quotation

Liberty for All?

Although Jefferson owned slaves, he included a scathing condemnation of slavery in his original draft of the Declaration. However, John Adams and Benjamin Franklin feared alienating slaveholding colonists, whose support of the revolution was desperately needed. At his colleagues' urging, Jefferson deleted this material, which is excerpted below.

> "He [King George] has waged cruel war against human nature itself, violating its most sacred rights of life and liberty in the persons of a distant people who never offended him, captivating and carrying them into slavery in another hemisphere, or to incur miserable death in their transportation thither . . . He has [stopped] every legislative attempt to prohibit or to restrain this execrable commerce determining to keep an open market where [people] should be bought and sold . . ."

Group Activity Discuss the following questions with your classmates.

1. How do you think the principles of the Declaration could be applied to slavery?
2. How does the fact that Jefferson owned slaves affect your reading of this quotation?
3. Was the deletion of this material from the Declaration an inexcusable mistake or a justifiable strategy for gaining wider support for the cause of revolution? Explain.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students' answers will vary.
2. (a) It explains and justifies the colonists' declaring their independence. (b) To the view that it is wrong to rebel against a government without good cause
3. (a) Life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness (b) Students may say it is what people can do to better their lot without harming others.
4. (a) They have asked to be rightfully compensated, and then warned of more severe action. (b) He may not have believed that the colonists had the right to make demands.
5. (a) Jefferson never once mentions the British people. (b) He may have wanted to gain the British people's support for the colonists' cause.
6. (a) He begins with an introduction that establishes basic principles, then presents a list of violations of the principles, and then concludes with the colonists' response to the violations. (b) Very effective, because it follows a clear pattern of deductive reasoning
7. (a) That such a change is dangerous and to be undertaken only as a last resort (b) It indicates that the break with Britain was not a step the colonists took lightly.
8. Students' answers will vary, but may mention that politicians today do choose their words carefully to avoid ridicule.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 85–86.

Primary Source Quotation

1. The Declaration of Independence states that "all men are created equal" and are entitled to the same "unalienable rights," so it would follow that enslaved Africans should have the same rights as anyone else.
2. Some students might say that this information reveals both Jefferson and the Declaration of Independence to be hypocritical. Others might argue that Jefferson should be admired for holding views that were innovative for his time—even if he did not model them in his behavior.
3. Some students might say that it was justified because drafters were acting pragmatically to gain widespread support for declaring independence. Others might argue that this deletion was unconscionable and contributed to the continued suffering of thousands of people.

After You Read

Literary Element

1. Jefferson devotes almost two-thirds of the Declaration to the colonists' problems. This list justifies Jefferson's argument that the King has trampled on natural rights and that the colonists are justified.
2. Jefferson declares that the colonists should have the right to form their own governments and set up their own laws. The King has taken away all these rights from the colonists.
3. Jefferson uses deductive reasoning. First, he lays out his major premise that people have the right to overthrow a government that does not derive power from its subjects. Then, he spells out specific grievances against the King. Finally, he concludes that independence is the only logical solution to the colonists' problems.

Review: Author's Purpose

Jefferson and his compatriots wrote the Declaration to justify their arguments for declaring independence and to show the legitimacy of their actions.

Reading Strategy

SAT Skills Practice

1. E is the correct answer because a deductive argument moves from general principles to specific conclusions.

Progress Check

Can students evaluate an argument?

If No → See Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 154.

Literary Element Text Structure

Jefferson structures the Declaration in terms of problem and solution.

1. How much space does Jefferson devote to stating the problems faced by the colonists? What is the effect of this list?
2. In what ways does Jefferson declare the Colonies independent of Britain? How are these declarations related to the abuses he has described?
3. Why do you think Jefferson structures the Declaration of Independence in the way he does?

Review: Author's Purpose

Understanding an author's purpose does not mean interviewing the author or trying to read his or her mind. Purpose is something that can be inferred from the text itself. Based on your reading of the Declaration of Independence, what can you infer about Jefferson's and his compatriots' purpose in writing the document?

Reading Strategy Evaluate Argument

SAT Skills Practice

1. An example of deductive reasoning in the "Declaration of Independence" is
   - (A) the presentation of the self-evident truths.
   - (B) the enumeration of Britain's abuse of the self-evident truths.
   - (C) the declaration of independence from Britain.
   - (D) the argument from the specific self-evident truths to the general conclusion—independence.
   - (E) the argument from the general self-evident truths to the specific conclusion—independence.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Context Identify the context clues in the following sentences that help you determine the meaning of each boldfaced vocabulary word.

1. Though the group endeavored to make it to the top of the mountain, they had to give up when a storm came.
2. Because of her rectitude, no one ever questions the truth of Sarah's statements.
3. Craig's absence at several practices resulted in Andy's usurpation, or seizure, of the position of captain.
4. Though my brother didn't want me to drive his car, he acquiesced when I promised to do his chores for a month.
5. With the approach of the next contest, Elaine's tenure as Miss America was coming to a close.

Academic Vocabulary

The Declaration of Independence is greatly influenced by the political philosophy of John Locke.

Philosophy is an academic word. Someone who has ambitions to become a doctor might live by a philosophy of working hard, learning constantly, and helping others.

To study this word further, answer the following question: What is your personal philosophy? Write a list of the principles by which you live your life.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Vocabulary

1. The group's aim was to make it to the top; therefore, endeavored means that they tried.
2. The quality that makes people believe whatever she says is her rectitude; therefore, it means honesty and moral firmness.
3. Andy seizes the power from Craig, or usurps it.
4. The promise of doing the chores makes the brother give in, or acquiesce.
5. Miss America has the title for the year between contests, which is her tenure.

Academic Vocabulary

Students should mention the system of thought or principles by which they conduct their life. For example, a student might mention that she lives by the belief that she should always be honest.

Respond Through Writing

Persuasive Essay

Argue a Position How relevant is the Declaration of Independence to Americans today? In a persuasive essay, identify themes in the Declaration and argue for or against the relevance of these themes to contemporary American society.

Understand the Task In a persuasive essay, you use reason, evidence, and appropriate emotional appeals to convince your reader to adopt a certain position. A theme is the main idea or message a literary work conveys.

Prewrite Before you draft your essay, create a chart like the one below to identify key themes in the Declaration, examples of these themes in the text, and evidence for whether these themes remain relevant.

Theme	Example	Relevance
government by the people	based on "the consent of the governed"	yes; participation of Americans in their government—as measured by voting—is declining

Draft Create a logical structure of arguments and ideas supported with precise and relevant evidence. Strengthen your arguments with an effective and appropriate use of persuasive techniques, such as parallelism, connotative language, symbolism, appeals to authority, and rhetorical questions. (See page R60 for more on using these techniques.)
Try using the following sentence frame to help conclude your essay with a call to action: In conclusion, because of ____________________ I believe we should ____________________.

Revise Ask your partner if your essay addresses opposing arguments and anticipates the concerns of your audience. You can also use the checklist on page 154. Refine your draft based on your partner's feedback.

Edit and Proofread Proofread your paper, correcting any errors in spelling, grammar, and punctuation.

Learning Objectives

In this assignment, you will focus on the following objectives:

Writing: Write a persuasive essay.

Grammar: Citing source information correctly.

Grammar Tip

Parentheses

When you quote or refer to the Declaration of Independence or another source in support of your thesis, remember to enclose source information in parentheses. Here are two examples of in-text citations.

"Nor have we been wanting in our attentions to our British brethren" (Declaration of Independence 124).

Many scholars believe that the idea of people being born with the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness remains the most American of all ideals (Jenkins 492–494).

The use of an author's last name or the name of the work is typically related to an entry in a works-cited list. See page R31 for more on citing sources.

After You Read

Respond Through Writing

Persuasive Essay: Argue a Position

Students should clearly state a position for or against the relevance of the Declaration of Independence. Assess students' essays using the scoring guide at the bottom of the page. Students' essays should

- provide a well-reasoned, focused argument
- support the argument with convincing evidence
- show understanding of the contemporary issues related to the Declaration of Independence
- use effective persuasive techniques and rhetorical devices
- follow standard English language conventions
- be well-organized with a clear structure that lays out the argument and supporting evidence in a logical order

Scoring Guide	4	3	2	1
Argument/Reasoning	authoritative	general	little or none	none
Evidence	convincing	somewhat convincing	little or none	none
Understanding of complexities of theme	clear	general	limited	minimal
Language	varied, precise, persuasive	varied, somewhat persuasive	predictable, basic	limited, unpersuasive
Convention errors	few or none	several	many	serious
Structure and organization	logical, very clear	somewhat logical, clear	little or none	none

TIME

Focus

Summary

This article describes the drafting and revision of the Declaration of Independence. As chairman of the Declaration committee, Jefferson was responsible for drafting the document. As editor, Franklin made a few changes, such as changing an appeal to religion to an appeal to reason. The Continental Congress made additional changes before signing the document.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Preview the Article

1. It might be about why the people who wrote the Declaration used the words they did. I know that the American colonists struggled to break free from Britain during this period.
2. The author's use of immortal suggests that he considers Franklin's editing very important.

For an activity related to this selection, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 191–196.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 7.9
DRP: 68
Lexile: 1200

Learning Objectives

For pages 128–130

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Reading:
Analyzing informational text.
Determining main idea and supporting details.

Set a Purpose for Reading

Read to learn about the the roles of Franklin and Jefferson in writing the Declaration of Independence.

Preview the Article

1

1. From the title, what do you think this article will be about? What do you already know about this subject?
2. Read the deck, or the sentence in large type that appears below the title. How does the author feel about Franklin's edits?

Reading Strategy

Determine the Main Idea and Supporting Details

The main idea of a text is the most important thing that the writer wants to convey. Ask yourself: What main idea does the author wish to convey? What details support this idea?

As you read, create a graphic organizer like the one below.

Main Idea:
- Supporting detail 1: Benjamin Franklin made important changes to the document.
- Supporting detail 2:

TIME

How They Chose These WORDS

Jefferson wrote the Declaration's first draft, but it was Franklin's editing that made a phrase immortal.

By WALTER ISAACSON

AS THE CONTINENTAL CONGRESS PREPARED TO VOTE on the question of American independence in 1776, it appointed a committee for a job that no one at the time thought was very important. The task, however, would turn out to be a momentous one: drafting a declaration that explained the decision. The committee included Benjamin Franklin, of course, and Thomas Jefferson and John Adams, as well as Connecticut merchant Roger Sherman and New York lawyer Robert Livingston.

How was it that Jefferson, at age 33, got the honor of drafting the document? His name was listed first on the committee, signifying that he was the chairman, because he had gotten the most votes and because he was from Virginia, the colony that had proposed the resolution. His four colleagues had other committee assignments that they considered to be more important. None of them realized that the document would eventually come to be viewed as a cornerstone of American politics. As for Franklin, he was still laid up in bed with boils and gout when the committee first met.

And thus it fell to Jefferson to compose, on a little lap desk he had designed, some of the most famous phrases in history while sitting alone in a second-floor room of a house on Market Street in Philadelphia just a block from Franklin's house. "When, in the course of human events . . . ," he famously began.

Taking a Page from Franklin

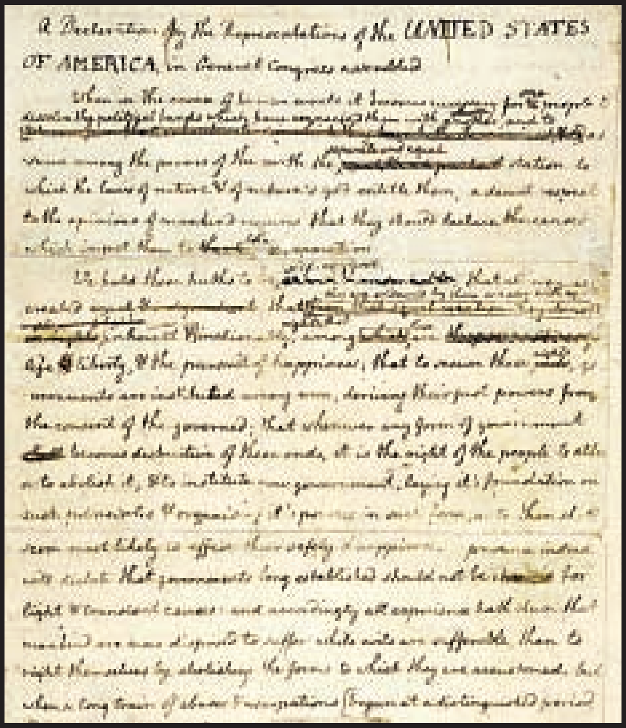
The document Jefferson drafted was in some ways similar to what Franklin would have written. It

Writing Practice

Draft and Revise

SMALL GROUP

Indicate to students that Walter Isaacson's article discusses how Jefferson drafted the Declaration and Franklin edited it. Emphasize that most writers edit their own work first. Drafting is a time for trial and error. Students should use this writing phase to focus on ideas, rather than on grammar or literary techniques. Write on the board, or say: Name a freedom that people in the United States enjoy and explain why it is important. Have students write a paragraph about this topic. Then have small groups exchange paragraphs and suggest edits for each other's work.



A Declaration by the Representatives of the UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, in General Congress assembled.

DEFT TOUCH Franklin changed the phrase "sacred and undeniable" to "self-evident," an assertion of rationality.

contained a highly specific bill of particulars against the British. It also recounted, as Franklin had often done, the details of America's attempts to make peace despite England's unbending attitude. Indeed, Jefferson's words echoed some of the language that Franklin had used, earlier that year, in a draft resolution that he never published: "Whereas, whenever kings, instead of protecting the lives and properties of their subjects, as is their bounden duty, do endeavor to perpetrate the destruction of either, they thereby cease to be kings, become tyrants, and dissolve all ties of allegiance between themselves and their people."

Jefferson's writing style, however, was different from Franklin's. It was graced with rolling rhythms and smooth phrases, soaring in their poetry and powerful despite their polish. In addition, Jefferson drew on a depth of philosophy not found in Franklin. He echoed both the language and grand theories of English and Scottish Enlightenment thinkers. Having read John Locke's Second Treatise on Government at least three times, Jefferson was most notably influenced by Locke's concept of natural rights. And Jefferson built his case, in a manner more sophisticated than Franklin would have, on a contract between government and the governed that was founded on the consent of the people. Jefferson also, it should be noted, borrowed freely from the phrasings of others, including the resounding Declaration of Rights in the new Virginia constitution. Today, this kind of borrowing might lead to accusations of plagiarism, but back then it was considered not only proper but learned.

When he had finished a draft and included some changes from Adams, Jefferson sent it to Franklin on the morning of Friday, June 21. "Will Doctor Franklin be so good as to peruse it," he wrote in his cover note, "and suggest such alterations as his more enlarged view of the subject will dictate?" People were much more polite to editors back then.

Change for the Better?

Franklin made only a few changes, some of which can be viewed written in his hand on what Jefferson referred to as the "rough draft" of the Declaration. The most important of his edits was small but significant. He crossed out, using the heavy backslashes that he often employed, the last three words of Jefferson's phrase "We hold these truths to be sacred and undeniable." Franklin changed them to the words now enshrined in history: "We hold these truths to be self-evident."

The idea of "self-evident" truths drew on the rational view of the world held by Isaac Newton and

TIME

Teach

Big Idea 2

The Road to Independence

Ask: How might Jefferson's and Franklin's writing styles have inspired the colonists? (Possible answer: Jefferson's graceful, polished style appealed to the educated, whereas Franklin's more succinct style appealed to the working class.)

Vocabulary 3

Plagiarism Remind students that plagiarism is the act of presenting someone else's ideas or words as one's own. Ask: What's the difference between quoting from a source and plagiarizing? (When you quote from a source, you identify the source. When you plagiarize, you take credit for the writing.)

Interactive Read and Write

Other options for teaching this selection can be found in

- Interactive Read and Write for EL Students , pp. 25–36
- Interactive Read and Write for Approaching-Level Students, pp. 25–36
- Interactive Read and Write for On-Level Students, pp. 25–36

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Read aloud the first three sentences in the section headed "Taking a Page from Franklin." Then ask: What did Jefferson borrow from Franklin? (a list of British offenses and a list of American peace attempts)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Have students reread the subsection "Change for the Better?" Record some of the changes. Then ask: What is the main difference? (Franklin took out the element of religion.) Why might Franklin have done this? (To create a separation of church and state)

TIME

Assess

1. Possible response: I would like some of the changes that Franklin made, such as "We hold these truths to be self-evident." However, I might think that the changes made by the Continental Congress were excessive.
2. (a) John Locke's Second Treatise on Government (b) It taught Jefferson the concept of natural rights, convincing him that a government should be guided by the will of the people.
3. (a) The criticism of the King for continuing the slave trade was deleted. (b) This shows that some people were in favor of slavery; it also suggests that the proslavery forces were powerful.
4. Editing played an important role in the crafting of the Declaration of Independence.
5. The article points out how much even minor revisions can improve a document.
6. Writing is powerful because it can influence and give shape to public opinion; the Declaration of Independence helped the American colonists understand what they were fighting for.

Franklin's close friend David Hume. The great Scottish philosopher Hume had developed a theory that distinguished between truths that describe matters of fact (such as "London is bigger than Philadelphia") and truths that are declared so through reason and definition ("the angles of a triangle total 180 degrees"; "all bachelors are unmarried"). He referred to the latter type of axioms as "self-evident" truths. By using the word sacred, Jefferson had implied, intentionally or not, that the principle in question—the equality of men and their endowment by their creator with inalienable rights—was a matter of religion. Franklin's edit turned it instead into a matter of reason and rationality.

Franklin's other edits were less suitable. He changed Jefferson's "reduce them to arbitrary power" to "reduce them under absolute despotism," and he took out the literary flourish in Jefferson's "invade and deluge us in blood" to make it more sparse: "invade and destroy us." And a few of his changes seemed stodgy and unnecessary. "Amount of their salaries" became "amount and payment of their salaries."

WORDSMITHS Franklin, Jefferson, Livingston, Adams, and Sherman debate what the document should say.

Archive Photos/NewsCom

Congress Makes Cuts

After the Continental Congress voted for independence from England, it formed itself into a committee to consider Jefferson's draft Declaration. The members were not so light in their editing as Franklin had been. Large sections were sliced out, most notably the one that criticized the king for continuing the slave trade. Congress also, to its credit, cut by more than half the draft's final five paragraphs, in which Jefferson had begun to ramble in a way that detracted from the document's power. Jefferson was upset. "I was sitting by Dr. Franklin," he recalled, "who perceived that I was not insensible to these mutilations." Franklin did his best to console him.

At the official signing of the parchment copy on August 2, John Hancock, the president of the Congress, penned his name with his famous flourish. "There must be no pulling different ways," he declared. "We must all hang together." Supposedly, Franklin replied, "Yes, we must, indeed, all hang together, or most assuredly we shall all hang separately." Their lives, as well as their sacred honor, had been put on the line.

—Updated 2005, from TIME, July 7, 2003

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. If you had drafted the Declaration, what would you think of the revisions it underwent?
2. (a)What book influenced Thomas Jefferson as he drafted the Declaration? (b)How did this book shape Jefferson's political beliefs?
3. (a)What criticism of the king did the Continental Congress delete from the draft? (b)What does this tell you about society during this time period?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. How would you describe in your own words the main idea of the reading selection?
5. (a)What does the effect of Franklin's revisions say about the importance of the revision process?

Connect

6. Why do you think a written document played so important a role in the battle for independence?

Progress Check

Can students identify the main idea and details?

If No → See Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 197.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 87–88.

Vocabulary Workshop

Word Origins: Political Science

Literature Connection Thomas Jefferson's words helped to "dissolve the political bands" between England and its American colonies.

> "Whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it."
>
> —Thomas Jefferson, from the Declaration of Independence

Much of the political language Jefferson used, and that we still use today, traces its origins to ancient Greek and Latin.

Many dictionaries display the etymology, or origin and history, of a word in brackets before or after its definition. For example, the following entry contains the etymology of the word govern. Note that the symbol < means "comes from."

govern (guv′ ərn) v. to exercise political authority over: to govern a nation. [ME < OF gouverner < L gubernāre to steer (a ship) < Gk kybernān to steer]

The entry indicates that the word govern comes from a Middle English (ME) word, which comes from the Old French (OF) word gouverner, which comes from the Latin word gubernāre, which comes from the Greek kybernān, meaning "to steer." Knowing the etymology of the word govern not only enhances your understanding of the word's origins but may also help you understand other related words, such as government and governor.

Practice Use a dictionary to research the origins of the following political terms that appear in the Declaration of Independence. In a chart, copy the etymology for each word and write an explanation, similar to the one above, of its origin. How might knowing a word's etymology help you understand the meanings of other words?

Word	Etymology	Explanation liberty jurisdiction usurp

Learning Objectives

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objectives:

Vocabulary:
Understanding multiple-meaning words.
Understanding language resources.

Vocabulary Terms

A prefix is an attachment at the beginning of a word. It adds to or changes the word's meaning.

A suffix is an attachment at the end of a word. It adds to or changes the word's meaning.

A word root is the part of the original word to which a prefix or suffix is attached.

A base word is the original word to which a prefix or suffix may be attached.

Tip

Analyzing word parts can help you determine the meanings of words and increase your vocabulary. If you memorize common prefixes and suffixes, you will be more prepared when taking standardized tests.

Literature Online

Vocabulary For more vocabulary practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate If students struggle, review basic dictionary skills. Provide a list of numbered steps for reference, and then have students practice it with the word liberty.

1. Identify the first letter of the word: l.
2. Search for that letter using page tabs or headings.
3. Identify the first three letters: lib.
4. Use guidewords to locate the correct page: liberal–liberty tea.
5. Skim the page for the word: liberty.

Vocabulary Workshop

Word Origins: Politics

Focus

Ask students what languages they speak or are studying; list these on the board. Point out that studying other languages can help students expand their English vocabulary. Ask them to list words they use that come from other languages. (Possible responses: regime, ballet [from French]; rodeo, tortilla [from Spanish]; prima donna, spaghetti, pizza, piano [from Italian])

Teach

Word Origins Say: Many English words come from Latin. A knowledge of Latin roots can help you decode these words.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Tell English learners who speak Latin-based languages to use cognates to help them define English words with Latin roots. Have them identify cognates for the word govern in their home languages. (Spanish, gobernar; French, gouverner; Italian, governare; Portuguese, governar)

Practice

Possible etymologies:

liberty: ME liberte < OF < L lībertās < līber, free jurisdiction: ME jurisdicciou n < OF juridicion, < L iūrisdictiō, iūrisdictiōn-: iūris, genitive of iūs, law + dictiō, dictiōn-, declaration

usurp: ME usurpen < OF usurper < L ūsūrpāre, to take into use, usurp

For additional vocabulary practice, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus Transparency 13

Daily Language Practice Transparency 16

Or write on the board: "These are the times that try men's souls." Remind students that the quotation appeared on page 103, as an element in the Part 3 introduction. Have students discuss the quotation. Ask: Is Paine referring to everyday nuisances like a flat tire, or is he referring to something more serious? (Students may say that although a flat tire could be irritating, it wouldn't affect one's soul.) What are some modern examples of "trying" experiences? (Possible responses: war; poverty; diseases)

Before You Read

from The Crisis, No. 1

Meet Thomas Paine

(1737–1809)

Corset maker, cobbler, teacher, tax collector—Thomas Paine failed miserably at every line of work he attempted in his native England. Finally, at age thirty-seven, Paine set sail for the colonies to start a new life. It was 1774, and the colonists were weighing the pros and cons of a break with England. Always a friend of the "little guy," Paine sympathized with the revolutionary forces.

> "Had it not been for America, there had been no such thing as freedom left throughout the whole universe."
>
> —Thomas Paine
> from The Crisis, No. 5

Success in America In January 1776, Paine anonymously published the pamphlet Common Sense, a cry for complete independence from Britain. Paine argued that England was a mother country "devouring her young." The pamphlet quickly sold more than 100,000 copies. Paine enlisted in Washington's army and began to write the first pamphlet of a series of sixteen called The Crisis. Washington ordered that this first pamphlet be read aloud at every military campground. From 1777 to 1779, Paine served as secretary to the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the Continental Congress. After American independence was won, Paine returned to private life.

Troubles in England and France Paine eventually returned to Europe—and to trouble. In the early 1790s, he wrote a defense of the French Revolution called The Rights of Man, in which he argued against the rule of kings and for legislation to help the poor. Although Paine had already escaped to France, he was tried for treason and outlawed by the British. After he was made a citizen by the French assembly, he became an elected official. Unfortunately, he associated with the wrong political party. When that party fell during the French Revolution, he was thrown into prison and stripped of citizenship. After almost a year, and with the help of James Monroe, U.S. minister to France, he was released. Paine returned to the United States in 1802, but he received no hero's welcome. Many Americans misunderstood his later writings and branded him an atheist, although Thomas Jefferson remained a good friend.

When Paine's life ended, he was poor, alone, and swollen with dropsy, a disease of the body's connective tissue. Even after his death, the insults continued. He was buried on his farm in New Rochelle, New York. Ten years later, William Cobbett, a British admirer of Paine, dug up his remains and transported them to England, after which they disappeared. (Cobbett apparently intended a memorial that never came to pass.) Paine achieved his successes with a pen only, but his contribution to the cause of freedom is incalculable. Common Sense inspired even the most reluctant to rebel against what Paine called the "tyranny of Britain."

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Thomas Paine, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Selection Skills

from The Crisis, No. 1

Literary Elements
- Tone (SE pp. 133, 135–137)
- Diction (SE p. 137)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Apply Tone (SE p. 138)

Reading Skills
- Summarize (SE pp. 133, 135, 136, 138)
- Analyze Arguments (TE p. 134)

Vocabulary Skills
- Denotation and Connotation (SE p. 138)
- Related Words (TE p. 133)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE p. 136)
- Presentation (TE p. 136)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Essay

Have you ever gotten so fed up with something or someone that you felt forced to say, "Enough is enough!"? Write a journal entry about such a situation. Explain what caused your reaction and its result.

Build Background

In The Crisis, Paine applies a seventeenth-century idea—that if a government oversteps its bounds, people can voluntarily end it—to British rule in the American colonies.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The Road to Independence

In their struggle with the British, the American colonists were fighting for a cause. As you read, ask yourself, How does Paine encourage his readers' devotion to the struggle for freedom?

Literary Element Tone

An author's attitude toward his or her subject matter or toward the audience is conveyed through tone. Tone consists of such elements as word choice, sentence structure, and figures of speech. As you read, ask yourself, How does Paine's tone convey his attitude?

Reading Strategy Summarize

To summarize what you have read is to state the main ideas in your own words and in a logical sequence. A summary is much shorter than the original. Summarizing can help you focus your understanding and remember what you have read.

Tip: Outline Look for main ideas and supporting details as you read. Putting them in a simple outline form will help you construct a summary after you read.

1. Britain's actions are tyrannical.
    a. Britain has declared a right to tax us.
    b.
    c.

Learning Objectives

For pages 132–138

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing tone.

Reading: Summarizing.

Writing: Applying tone.

Vocabulary

tyranny (tir´ ə nē) n. cruel use of authority; oppressive power; p. 134 In order to regain their rights, the villagers rebelled against the tyranny of the king.

resolution (rez´ ə lo͞o´ shən) n. firmness of purpose; p. 135 My resolution to study harder resulted in better grades.

petrified (pet´ rə fīd) adj. paralyzed with fear; p. 135 Caught in our headlights, the deer seemed petrified and unable to move.

exploit (eks´ ploit) n. notable, heroic deed; feat; p. 135 Reading about superheroes can be fun, but I prefer learning about the exploits of real people.

hypocrisy (hi pok´ rə sē) n. an expression of feelings or beliefs not actually possessed or held; p. 135 The politician revealed his hypocrisy when he did not fulfill his campaign promises.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

In his essay, Paine calls on every reader to join in the noble struggle for independence from Britain. Paine asserts that the war is just—that the British king is a murderer and thief. Paine castigates people who do not act.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 200–205.

Vocabulary

Related Words Words often have different forms for different parts of speech. The related words all share an origin, such as a Latin or Greek root. Explain that recognizing the root and building word families can help students define unfamiliar words and understand complex text. For example, the word tyranny comes from the Latin tyrannus. Ask: What other English words share this root? (tyrant, tyrannical) Ask: What words are related to resolution? (resolve, resolute)

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 208.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Remind students that an outline is a structured list of main ideas and supporting details. Outlines can be used as reading tools or as prewriting tools. Clarify that each numbered outline entry corresponds to a main idea. The lettered entries under each main idea correspond to supporting details. Have students create an outline, entering ideas and details in sentence form. As students read, have them note sentences they want to enter in the outline and label each M for main idea or SD for Supporting Detail.

Teach

Big Idea 1

The Road to Independence

Answer: Paine makes this comparison because it ennobles the colonial struggle. The conflict is elevated from an argument over taxes to a struggle for freedom and independence.

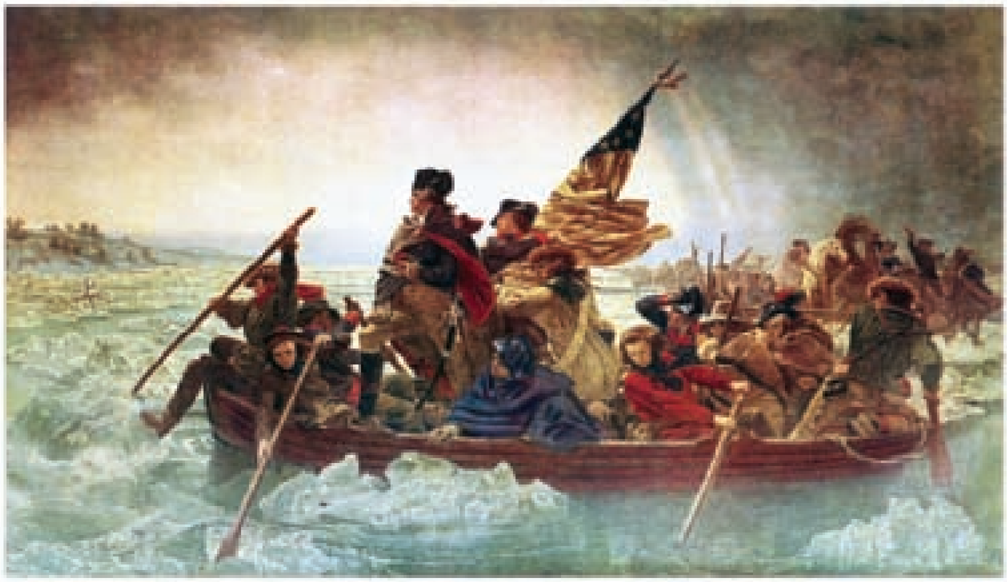
Political History ☆

The Stamp Act In March 1766, the Stamp Act of 1765 was repealed. This had been the fourth Stamp Act passed by the British Parliament. It had levied a tax on, among other things, all legal documents, newspapers, pamphlets, and playing cards in the American colonies. The colonists were so incensed by the taxes that they threatened the tax collectors. The resistance was strong enough that the tax was never enforced.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 8.8
DRP: 62
Lexile: 1050



Washington Crossing the Delaware, 1851. Emanuel Gottlieb Leutze. Oil on canvas, $12\,^{2}/_{5}$ x $21\,^{1}/_{4}$ in. Metropolitan Museum of Art, NY.

from The Crisis, No. 1

Thomas Paine

These are the times that try men's souls. The summer soldier and the sunshine patriot will, in this crisis, shrink from the service of his country; but he that stands it now, deserves the love and thanks of man and woman. Tyranny, like hell, is not easily conquered; yet we have this consolation with us, that the harder the conflict, the more glorious the triumph. What we obtain too cheap, we esteem[1] too lightly: it is dearness only that gives everything its value. Heaven knows how to put a proper price upon its goods; and it would be strange indeed if so celestial an article as freedom should not be highly rated. Britain, with an army to enforce her tyranny, has declared that she has a right (not only to tax) but "to bind us in all cases whatsoever";[2] and if being bound in that manner is not slavery, then is there not such a thing as slavery upon earth. Even the

---

[1] Esteem means "to value" or "to appreciate."

[2] In March 1766, the British parliament repealed the Stamp Act but also passed the Declaratory Act, which extended its right to impose taxes on the colonies and "to bind [the colonies] in all cases whatsoever." ☆

Vocabulary

tyranny (tir´ ə nē) n. cruel use of authority; oppressive power

The Road to Independence Why does Paine compare taxation without representation to slavery? 1

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Analyze Arguments Have students analyze Paine's reasoning in the first paragraph. Ask: What is Paine's main point? (These are difficult times that require much of people.) Then point out that Paine uses contrasts to support his point. Ask: What contrasts does Paine describe? (Tyranny is hell, whereas freedom is heaven; the harder the conflict, the more glorious is the triumph.) Ask: Do you agree that the harder a problem is to solve, the greater the satisfaction in solving it? Explain. (Most students will agree, citing personal experiences as evidence.) Students should use their own life experiences, as well as text evidence, to evaluate author's arguments.

expression is impious;[3] for so unlimited a power can belong only to God.

Whether the independence of the continent was declared too soon, or delayed too long, I will not now enter into as an argument; my own simple opinion is, that had it been eight months earlier it would have been much better. We did not make a proper use of last winter; neither could we, while we were in a dependent state. However, the fault, if it were one, was all our own; we have none to blame but ourselves. But no great deal is lost yet. All that Howe[4] has been doing for this month past is rather a ravage than a conquest, which the spirit of the Jerseys[5] a year ago would have quickly repulsed, and which time and a little resolution will soon recover.

I have as little superstition in me as any man living; but my secret opinion has ever been, and still is, that God Almighty will not give up a people to military destruction, or leave them unsupportedly to perish, who have so earnestly and so repeatedly sought to avoid the calamities of war, by every decent method which wisdom could invent. Neither have I so much of the infidel[6] in me as to suppose that He has relinquished the government of the world, and given us up to the care of devils; and as I do not, I cannot see on what grounds the king of Britain can look up to heaven for help against us: a common murderer, a highwayman,[7] or a housebreaker, has as good a pretense as he.

It is surprising to see how rapidly a panic will sometimes run through a country. All nations and ages have been subject to them: Britain has trembled like an ague[8] at the report of a French fleet of flat-bottomed boats; and in the fourteenth century the whole English army, after ravaging the kingdom of France, was driven back like men petrified with fear; and this brave exploit was performed by a few broken forces collected and headed by a woman, Joan of Arc. Would that heaven might inspire some Jersey maid to spirit up her countrymen, and save her fair fellow sufferers from ravage and ravishment! Yet panics, in some cases, have their uses; they produce as much good as hurt. Their duration is always short; the mind soon grows through them, and acquires a firmer habit than before. But their peculiar advantage is, that they are the touchstones[9] of sincerity and hypocrisy, and bring things and men to light, which might otherwise have lain forever undiscovered. In fact, they have the same effect on secret traitors which an imaginary apparition[10] would have upon a private murderer. They sift out the hidden thoughts of man, and hold them up in public to the world. Many a disguised tory has lately shown his head, that shall penitentially solemnize[11] with curses the day on which Howe arrived upon the Delaware.

---

3. Impious (im′ pē əs) means “lacking in reverence for God.”
4. Major General Sir William Howe was commander in chief of the British forces in America during part of the Revolutionary War.
5. At one time New Jersey was divided into two sections, East Jersey and West Jersey. The two parts were reunited as a royal colony in 1702.
6. Here, infidel means “someone who does not believe in God.”
7. A thief who stole from travelers on a public road was a highwayman.
8. An ague is a fit of shivering.
9. A touchstone is anything that tests the quality or genuineness of something.
10. An apparition is a ghost.
11. A colonist who supported British rule was a tory. Penitentially solemnize means “to celebrate formally with sorrow and regret.”

2 Tone Does Paine seem objective and removed here, or subjective and emotional? Explain.

Vocabulary

resolution (rez´ ə lo͞o´ shən) n. firmness of purpose

3 The Road to Independence What does Paine feel is missing from the colonists’ struggle?

4 Summarize Briefly, what does Paine say about the effect of panics on British sympathizers?

Vocabulary

petrified (pet´ rə fīd) adj. paralyzed with fear; stiff or like stone exploit (eks´ ploit) n. notable, heroic deed; feat hypocrisy (hi pok´ rə sē) n. an expression of feelings or beliefs not actually possessed or held

Teach

Literary Element 2

Tone Answer: Paine’s tone seems objective and removed as he expresses his “simple opinion.”

Big Idea 3

The Road to Independence Answer: Paine feels that the colonists need a symbol of hope and strength, like Joan of Arc.

Reading Strategy 4

Summarize Answer: If the Americans appear to be losing the war, British sympathizers will reveal themselves.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 207.

Political History ☆

Joan of Arc Joan (1412?–1431) was a French peasant who became a military leader and led French troops in victories against the English, saving her country from English rule. She was declared a saint after her death.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Ask: To whom does the word men’s in the first line of Paine’s essay refer? (It refers to both men and women.) Discuss the convention of using male nouns and pronouns to refer to people of both genders, pointing out that it has fallen out of favor with many writers today.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Students may need help paraphrasing Paine’s complex language. Work with students sentence by sentence, separating long sentences into shorter ones. Explain that a paraphrase should be roughly the same length as the original text, but use the student’s own words.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Ask: What is a symbol? How do symbols inspire people? (Symbols are tangible representations of abstract ideas, such as hope or patriotism. They bind people together in service of a common goal.)

Teach

Literary Element 1

Tone Answer: People who do not act might as well be dead; future generations will curse their cowardice. Paine's tone becomes much more forceful and threatening.

Reading Strategy 2

Summarize Answer: Nothing would cause me to start a war, because that is murder. However, when someone threatens me and my property, I will fight back, whether he is a common criminal or the king.

View the Art ★

Answer: Yorn depicts the soldier realistically. The soldier looks cold, not even having enough rags to completely cover his skin. By representing the soldier realistically, willing to tolerate such conditions, Yorn conveys each American soldier's determination to fight for independence.

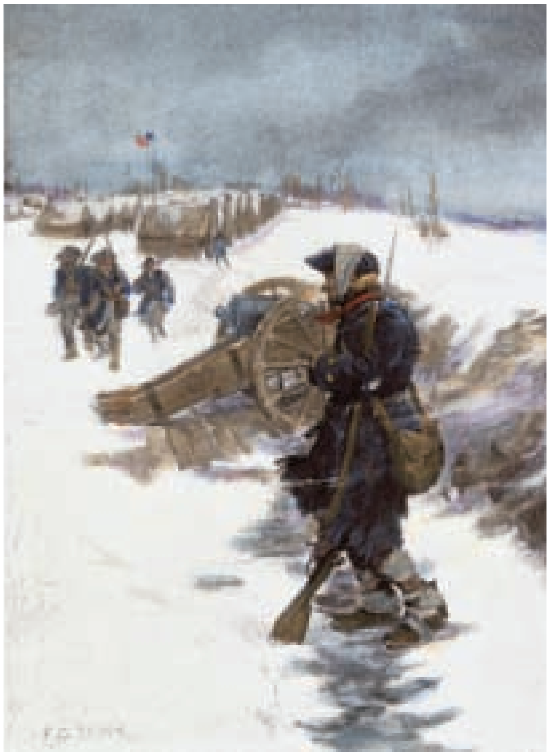
. . . Quitting this class of men, I turn with the warm ardor of a friend to those who have nobly stood, and are yet determined to stand the matter out: I call not upon a few, but upon all: not on this State or that State, but on every State: up and help us; lay your shoulders to the wheel; better have too much force than too little, when so great an object is at stake. Let it be told to the future world that in the depth of winter, when nothing but hope and virtue could survive, that the city and the country, alarmed at one common danger, came forth to meet and to repulse it. Say not that thousands are gone—turn out your tens of thousands; throw not the burden of the day upon Providence, but "show your faith by your works,"[12] that God may bless you. It matters not where you live, or what rank of life you hold, the evil or the blessing will reach you all. The far and the near, the home counties and the back, the rich and poor, will suffer or rejoice alike. The heart that feels not now is dead; the blood of his children will curse his cowardice who shrinks back at a time when a little might have saved the whole, and made them happy. I love the man that can smile in trouble, that can gather strength from distress and grow brave by reflection. It is the business of little minds to shrink; but he whose heart is firm, and whose conscience approves his conduct, will pursue his principles unto death. My own line of reasoning is to myself as straight and clear as a ray of light. Not all the treasures of the world, so far as I believe, could have induced[13] me to support an offensive war, for I think it murder; but if a thief breaks into my house, burns and destroys my property, and kills or threatens to kill me or those that are in it, and to "bind me in all cases whatsoever" to his absolute will, am I to suffer[14] it? What signifies[15] it to me, whether he who does it is a king or a common man; my countryman or not my countryman; whether it be done by an individual villain, or an army of them? If we reason to the root of things we shall find no difference; neither can any just cause be assigned why we should punish in the one case and pardon in the other. . . .



Winter at Valley Forge, 1898. F. C. Yorn.

View the Art In this painting the artist represents the troops at Valley Forge by focusing on a single soldier. How does he depict the soldier? What is the effect of this approach? ★

---

[12] Here, Providence means "God." The quotation is from the New Testament Book of James.

[13] Induced means "persuaded."

[14] Here, suffer means "to put up with."

[15] Here, signifies means "makes important."

1 Tone What does Paine imply about those people who do not act? How does this contribute to his tone?

2 Summarize Summarize the passage beginning "Not all the treasures of the world . . ."

Listening and Speaking Practice

SMALL GROUP

Presentation Form students into groups. To each group, assign one section of Paine's Crisis essay to present as a speech. A group may read the section in unison or assign lines to each member. Have students paraphrase their sections and be prepared to explain them to the rest of the class. As they rehearse, have students advise one another on tone, speed, and volume. Then have each group present its section.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Suppose you were going to choose a sentence from Thomas Paine's essay to put on a bulletin board as a memorable quotation. Which sentence would you choose? Why?
2. Which Americans does Paine criticize in his essay? Which does he praise?
3. (a)To whom does Paine compare the English king? (b)What emotions does Paine appeal to when describing the king?
4. What connection do you think Paine sees between the panics in European history Paine describes and the experience the colonists were facing?
5. (a)Paine suggests that this is not an "offensive" war. Why does he feel this way? (b)Why do you think Paine might have chosen this analogy as his final argument?

Analyze and Evaluate

6. (a)How does Paine use religion as part of his argument? (b)How effective is this approach in persuading the reader?
7. (a)In what ways does Paine express the Enlightenment idea that government should operate by "the consent of the governed"? (b)Do you agree with this idea?

Connect

8. Big Idea The Road to Independence Paine encourages his fellow citizens to defend themselves against British tyranny. (a)What kinds of qualities does Paine encourage the colonists to have? (b)How might these qualities help to define the new nation?
9. Connect to the Author From what you've read, do you think Thomas Paine's early failures influence his later ideas and actions? Explain.

Literary Element Tone

SAT Skills Practice

1. The tone of this essay suggests that Paine's attitude toward his audience is
   (A) respectful but provocative
   (B) disparaging but hopeful
   (C) compassionate but disappointed
   (D) ironic but judgmental
   (E) nostalgic but different
2. The first sentence in the second column on page 135 ("It is surprising . . . a country") conveys a tone of
   (A) disbelief.
   (B) disdain.
   (C) objectivity.
   (D) terror.
   (E) boredom.

Review: Diction

Diction is a writer's choice of words, an important element in the writer's voice or style.

Partner Activity With a classmate, choose two or three sentences that seem typical of Paine's writing. Analyze the sentences, paraphrasing them where appropriate and substituting your own words. Working with your partner, create a chart like the one below. Then write a paragraph describing Paine's diction.

Sentence	Paraphrase

After You Read

Assess

1. Students' choices will vary.
2. He criticizes the "summer soldier," the "sunshine patriot," and the "disguised tory." He praises supporters of freedom.
3. (a) A murderer, highwayman, or housebreaker (b) Disgust and hatred
4. Panics bring people together, reveal those unwilling to fight.
5. (a) Since the King acts like a thief, he should be punished like one. (b) To show the colonists not to be intimidated by the King's status
6. (a) Only God can rule a people "in all cases"; God would not desert a people who have tried to avoid war (b) Students' answers will vary.
7. (a) By criticizing Britain for denying the colonists' right to agree or disagree with governing policies (b) Many students will agree.
8. (a) courage, support for the revolutionary cause, understanding of the danger of British tyranny. (b) The new nation would uphold similar values of strength and freedom.
9. Paine's early failures likely helped him identify with the common person and to better understand the effects of British tyranny on the everyday life of colonial citizens.

Literary Element

1. A is the correct answer because Paine presents logical yet strongly persuasive arguments geared toward his audience's intellect.
2. C is the correct answer because the statement is an observation made without judgment or emotion.

Review: Diction

Students may paraphrase Paine's statement "What signifies it to me, whether he who does it is a king or a common man; my countryman or not my countryman; whether it be done by an individual villain, or an army of them?" as "What do I care whether the thief is a king or a commoner, a single person or an army?"

Progress Check

Can students analyze tone?

If No → See Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 206.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 89–90.

After You Read

Assess

Reading Strategy

1. The reader must remain courageous and defy Britain's threats.
2. Britain is trying to gain complete control over us.

Vocabulary

The words tyranny and domination have a similar denotation, "control," but tyranny has a stronger connotation, suggesting cruelty and coercion.

The words resolution and aim have a similar denotation, "determination," but resolution has a stronger connotation, suggesting a stronger commitment.

The words petrified and scared have a similar denotation, "frightened," but petrified has a stronger connotation, suggesting an extreme degree of fear.

The words exploit and deed have a similar denotation, "accomplishment," but exploit has a stronger connotation, suggesting a difficult feat.

The words hypocrisy and insincerity have a similar denotation, "dishonesty," but hypocrisy has a stronger connotation, suggesting a more calculated effort to appear to be the opposite of what one is.

Academic Vocabulary

Possible answer: Funding for the sports programs was the issue that came before the school committee.

Reading Strategy Summarize

To summarize is to put the main ideas of a reading in your own words and in a logical sequence. Since most persuasion encourages people to act or think in a certain way, you can write a summary of a persuasive essay by answering two questions:

1. What does the writer want the reader to think or do?
2. What reasons does the writer give to support this proposal?

Write a very brief summary (two or three sentences) of this excerpt from Paine's The Crisis, No. 1. Be sure to include answers to the two questions above.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Denotation and Connotation
Denotation is the literal, or dictionary, meaning of a word. Connotation is the implied, or cultural, meaning of a word. For each vocabulary word below, identify a word with a similar denotation. Then explain which word has the stronger connotation and why.

tyranny	petrified	hypocrisy
resolution	exploit

EXAMPLE: The words hot and torrid have a similar denotation, "very warm," but torrid has a stronger connotation, suggesting visceral, scorching heat.

Academic Vocabulary

This selection from Paine's The Crisis, No. 1 deals with the issue of States' support for the war.

Issue is an academic word. In the sentence above issue means a topic and the unresolved questions and problems surrounding it. Write a sentence of your own in which you use issue in the academic sense explained above.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Write with Style

Apply Tone

Assignment: Review the overall tone in "The Crisis, No. 1." Using a similar emotional yet respectful tone, write a paragraph about a topic on which you have a strong viewpoint.

Get Ideas: Make lists of things that create strong emotions in you: things that delight you, inspire you, annoy you, or enrage you. Look through personal journals and recall recent conversations or events to complete your lists. Choose one thing from the lists to write about.

Give It Structure: Begin your paragraph with a topic sentence stating your main idea, which in this case is your thesis. Follow with sentences that support that thesis. End with a sentence that restates it.

Look at Language: Tone is conveyed through various elements of style, including word choice. Use a thesaurus to find words that help to convey your tone. If you have decided to write about something that annoys you, for example, find words that respectfully express irritation and frustration. Jot them down to choose from as you write your paragraph. As you revise, change words or phrases that might be insulting to your audience. Look at Paine's work for inspiration and guidance.

EXAMPLE:

Girls should stop ~~whining~~ complaining that guys don't ~~go on and on about~~ express their feelings as girls do.

In this sentence, for example, complaining and express convey a more respectful tone than the words they replace.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Write with Style

Students should give clear and logical support for their thesis, should use words that convey an emotional connection to this thesis, and should avoid words that would offend readers.

Before You Read

To His Excellency, General Washington

Meet Phillis Wheatley
(1753–1784)

> "We whose Names are underwritten, do assure the World, that the Poems . . . were (as we verily believe) written by Phillis, a young Negro Girl, who . . . [is] under the Disadvantage of serving as a Slave. . . ."
>
> — Poems on Various Subjects

In 1773 most readers would have doubted that an enslaved woman had written a book of poetry. The above statement was taken from the introduction to Phillis Wheatley's book of poetry, Poems on Various Subjects, Religious and Moral, published when Wheatley was only nineteen or twenty years old. Signed by eighteen of "the most respectable characters in Boston," including John Hancock and the royal governor, the statement was testimony to the authenticity of the poems. Wheatley was the first African American to publish a book of poetry.

Wheatley was born in the Senegal/Gambia region on the west coast of Africa around 1753. In 1761, when she was just seven or eight, she was captured by slave traders and brought to New England on the slave ship Phillis. John and Susanna Wheatley, wealthy Bostonians, purchased her to be a personal attendant for Mrs. Wheatley.

Early Promise The young girl was often seen trying to form letters on the wall with a piece of chalk or charcoal. When the Wheatley family recognized Phillis's intelligence, they did not give her menial tasks. Instead, she was taught to read and write by Mrs. Wheatley's daughter. Phillis gained use of the home library, mastered English and Latin, read many ancient Greek and Latin classics, and studied the Bible.

Wheatley first published a poem in 1767, when she was thirteen years old. Three years later, she published a poem honoring the famous evangelist Reverend George Whitefield, which garnered her favorable publicity.

Book Published In May of 1773, the Wheatleys sent Phillis to London. There, Wheatley was able to publish her first and only volume of poetry. Many of the poems contained pleas for justice, as shown in these lines from her poem "To the Right Honourable William, Earl of Dartmouth": "That from a father seiz'd his babe belov'd: / Such, such my case. And can I then but pray / Others may never feel tyrannic sway?"

Freedom When Phillis returned from England, the family freed her from enslavement. However, she remained in the Wheatley household until John Wheatley died in 1778. In April of that same year, she married John Peters, a freed African American. Her husband's business failed, and their two children died as infants. In 1784, alone and working as a servant, she wrote her last poem. Her husband died in debtor's prison, and on December 5, she died of malnutrition when she was only thirty-one. A brief announcement in Boston's Independent Chronicle read, "Last Lord's Day, died Mrs. Phillis Peters (formerly Phillis Wheatley), aged thirty-one, known to the world by her celebrated miscellaneous poems."

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Phillis Wheatley, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus Transparency 14

Daily Language Practice Transparency 17

Or note that modern popular songs may be considered poetry. Form student groups and ask them to brainstorm lists of performers and songs that make statements about the condition of the world. Have them explain their choices.

Selection Skills

To His Excellency, General Washington

Literary Elements
- Couplet (SE pp. 140, 142, 143)

Reading Skills
- Analyze Structure (SE pp. 140, 141, 143)
- Paraphrase (TE p. 140)
- Visualize (TE p. 142)

Vocabulary Skills
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 143)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Poem (SE p. 143)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

When Washington took command of the Continental Army in 1775, Phillis Wheatley wrote a letter and a poem to him. The letter entreats him to overlook the inadequacies of the poem. The poem glorifies Washington and the American fight for freedom.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 213–218.

Literature and Reading Preview

Learning Objectives

For pages 139–143

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing couplets.

Reading: Analyzing structure.

Writing: Writing a poem.

Connect to the Poem

If you were to write a letter to a politician or other authority figure, whom would you choose? What would you say? Discuss these questions with a partner.

Build Background

When General George Washington traveled to Boston in 1775 to assume leadership of the Continental Army and to rid the city of occupying British soldiers, Phillis Wheatley wrote to him. Her letter and poem to the general were sent to his headquarters in nearby Cambridge. Washington was so impressed by Wheatley's poem that he invited her to visit him.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The Road to Independence

Some people have criticized Phillis Wheatley for writing a poem that glorifies freedom while failing to speak out against slavery. Others see Wheatley's choice as a necessity for maintaining support among her readers. As you read this poem, ask yourself, How did Wheatley's experience as a slave affect her reaction to the American Revolution?

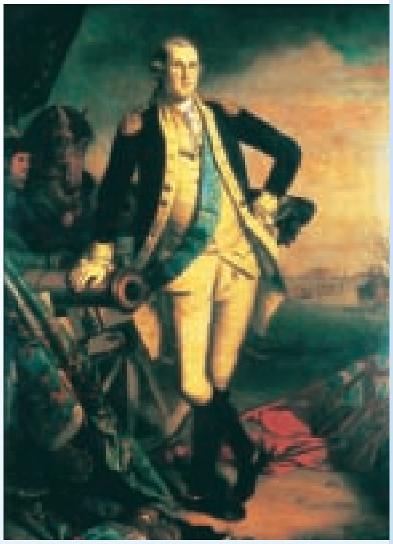
Literary Element Couplet

A couplet is two consecutive, paired lines of poetry, usually rhyming and often forming a stanza. As you read, ask yourself, How does Wheatley use couplets in this poem? What effects does she achieve?

Reading Strategy Analyze Structure

Poets often use inversion, or reversal of the usual word order, for emphasis or variety or to maintain a rhyme scheme. For example, look at this line in Wheatley's poem: "Thy ev'ry action let the goddess guide." In normal word order, this line would be "Let the goddess guide thy ev'ry action." Look for other examples of inversion.

Tip: Understand Inverted Sentences To better understand the meaning of the poem, copy it onto a sheet of paper, changing each inversion to a more natural word order. Then compare the rhyme, rhythm, and emphasis in your modified version with the rhyme, rhythm, and emphasis in Wheatley's original poem.



George Washington. Artist unknown, after Charles Wilson Peale. Oil on canvas. Chateau de Versailles, France.

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Paraphrase Ask students to paraphrase the material in the Build Background and Set Purposes for Reading sections. Remind them that paraphrasing involves putting others' writing into your own words. Have volunteers share their paraphrases. (Possible answers: Build Background—When George Washington became the leader of the colonial army, Phillis Wheatley wrote to him. Washington liked the poem that she sent him and invited her to visit. Set Purposes for Reading—Wheatley described the United States as a goddess of liberty. Readers disagree about whether this was appropriate, because slavery was legal in the United States at that time.)

To His Excellency, General Washington

Phillis Wheatley

Sir.

I Have taken the freedom to address your Excellency in the enclosed poem, and entreat your acceptance, though I am not insensible of its inaccuracies. Your being appointed by the Grand Continental Congress to be Generalissimo of the armies of North America, together with the fame of your virtues, excite sensations not easy to suppress. Your generosity, therefore, I presume, will pardon the attempt. Wishing your Excellency all possible success in the great cause you are so generously engaged in. I am, 1

Your Excellency's most obedient humble servant,
Phillis Wheatley.

Providence, Oct. 26, 1775.
His Excellency Gen. Washington.

Celestial choir! enthron'd in realms of light,
Columbia's scenes of glorious toils I write.
While freedom's cause her anxious breast alarms,
She flashes dreadful in refulgent[1] arms.
See mother earth her offspring's fate bemoan,
And nations gaze at scenes before unknown!
See the bright beams of heaven's revolving light
Involved in sorrows and the veil of night!

---

[1] Refulgent means "radiant."

Analyze Structure How would you change the inversion in this passage to a more natural word order? 2

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Predict Ask students to read the letter that precedes the poem. On the basis of the letter, what can they predict about the poem's content and tone? (Students may predict that the poem will praise Washington and his cause and that the tone will probably be formal.)

For students who are struggling, point out clues in the letter.

APPROACHING Ask: To whom is the letter addressed? (George Washington) What attitude do the words "fame of your virtues," "excite sensations," and "generosity" suggest? (admiration)

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Structure
Answer: See mother earth bemoan her offspring's fate

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 220.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Advanced Organize students in groups to paraphrase each line or couplet of the poem. Students should begin by identifying each example of figurative language.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Some students may find it easier to understand the poem if they map actions that take place. For example, in the first seven lines, "Columbia" worries about freedom, "mother earth" worries over what will happen to humans, and people in nations everywhere are stunned by war and other new events. Have students create a character and action chart where they can map actions as they read.

Character	Action
Columbia	worries about freedom's cause

Teach

Literary Element 1

Couplet Answer: The second line answers the question in the first to form a complete idea. The speaker need not praise the soldiers to Washington because he can see at first hand, in battle, how great they are.

Big Idea 2

The Road to Independence
Answer: She is referring to the mounting losses that Britain is suffering at the hands of the colonists.

Point out that the ancient Greek city of Athens was the first democracy in history. Have students note that many of Wheatley's images evoke ancient Greece.

ADVANCED Ask students to find images in Wheatley's poems that evoke ancient Greece, and to use research to explain these images to the class.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 221.

The goddess comes, she moves divinely fair,
Olive and laurel binds her golden hair:
Wherever shines this native of the skies,
Unnumber'd charms and recent graces rise.
Muse![2] bow propitious[3] while my pen relates
How pour her armies through a thousand gates,
As when Eolus[4] heaven's fair face deforms,
Enwrapp'd in tempest and a night of storms;
Astonish'd ocean feels the wild uproar,
The refluent[5] surges beat the sounding shore;
Or thick as leaves in Autumn's golden reign,
Such, and so many, moves the warrior's train.
In bright array they seek the work of war,
Where high unfurl'd the ensign[6] waves in air.
Shall I to Washington their praise recite?
Enough thou know'st them in the fields of fight.
Thee, first in peace and honours,—we demand
The grace and glory of thy martial band.
Fam'd for thy valour, for thy virtues more,
Hear every tongue thy guardian aid implore!
One century scarce perform'd its destined round,
When Gallic[7] powers Columbia's fury found;
And so may you, whoever dares disgrace
The land of freedom's heaven-defended race!
Fix'd are the eyes of nations on the scales,
For in their hopes Columbia's arm prevails.
Anon[8] Britannia[9] droops the pensive head,
While round increase the rising hills of dead.
Ah! cruel blindness to Columbia's state!
Lament thy thirst of boundless power too late.
Proceed, great chief, with virtue on thy side,
Thy ev'ry action let the goddess guide.
A crown, a mansion, and a throne that shine,
With gold unfading, WASHINGTON! be thine.

---

[2] The poet asks for aid from a Muse. In Greek mythology, the Muses (goddesses) preside over arts and sciences.
[3] Here, propitious means "favorably."
[4] In Greek mythology, Eolus is the god of the winds.
[5] Refluent means "back-flowing."
[6] The ensign here is a flag.
[7] Gallic means "French." Washington had fought the French during the French and Indian War (1754–1763).
[8] Anon means "soon."
[9] Britannia is Great Britain, personified as a goddess.

1 Couplet How does this couplet work to form one complete idea?

2 The Road to Independence What does the speaker mean by the "rising hills of dead"?

Reading Practice

Visualize Wheatley uses striking visual images to describe the colonists' quest for freedom. Visualizing as they read or hear the poem will help students better understand Wheatley's view of her country. Explain that visualizing means using the poet's descriptive language to create mental pictures. Ask: What do you see when you hear the line "While freedom's cause her anxious breast alarms"? (Possible response: a motherly figure who might be holding her hand over her heart in concern) Have students sketch what they visualize as Wheatley's vision of America. Drawings might include Columbia, Britannia, or a victorious Washington. Ask: What feelings or emotions do your drawings convey? Do you think Wheatley's images produce the effect she desires? (Answers will vary.)

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. What is your impression of Phillis Wheatley from reading her letter and poem?
2. (a)In your own words, restate the message in Wheatley's letter to General Washington. (b)Based on the letter, what can you infer about her opinion of Washington?
3. (a)How is Columbia is described in lines 9–12? (b)What does that image convey about the speaker's view of America?
4. (a)In lines 13–22, to what things does the speaker compare the colonial army? (b)Why might Wheatley have chosen these images?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)To whom are lines 29–38 addressed? (b)How does this section of the poem differ from the rest?
6. Do Wheatley's allusions to mythology strengthen or weaken the meaning of the poem? Explain.

Connect

7. Big Idea The Road to Independence How do you think Wheatley's experience of being enslaved affected her attitude toward the colonial cause of freedom?
8. Connect to Today Few people in the 1770s would have thought an enslaved woman could write poetry—a perspective that reveals the deep prejudices of the time. Can you think of any social groups today that are considered by many to be incapable of achieving certain goals? What does this reveal about our society?

Literary Element Couplet

A couplet is two consecutive lines of poetry that rhyme. A heroic couplet (commonly used in epic poems) has a specific rhythm, or meter, called iambic pentameter: each line has five units, or feet, and each foot has two syllables, an unstressed one followed by a stressed one.

1. Read aloud three heroic couplets from the poem. In your opinion, does this form add to or detract from the meaning of the poem?
2. Why do you think Wheatley might have chosen to write this poem in heroic couplets?

Reading Strategy Analyze Structure

Wheatley uses inversion in each of the following lines. Rewrite each without the use of inversion.

1. How pour her armies through a thousand gates,
   As when Eolus heaven's fair face deforms . . .
2. Shall I to Washington their praise recite?

Academic Vocabulary

Wheatley's ode to Washington has a regular metrical structure.

Structure is an academic word. More familiar words with similar meanings are shape, composition, framework, and organization. Using context clues, try to figure out the meaning of structure in each sentence below:

1. Researchers studied the structure of families in various cultures to find similarities.
2. Epithelial tissues are arranged in a structure like a sheet that protects underlying cells.

Writing

Write a Poem Using Wheatley's work as an example, write a poem of praise addressed to someone you consider to be a great leader or role model. Use heroic couplets in your poem and imitate Wheatley's elevated diction and style.

After You Read

Assess

1. Some students may say she believes fully in the cause.
2. (a) The country has confidence in Washington. (b) He is a man of great virtue.
3. (a) Columbia wears symbols of peace and victory. (b) America is strong but not warlike.
4. (a) A storm at sea and autumn leaves (b) She wanted to suggest the army's power and numbers.
5. (a) To all potential enemies of the American colonists, particularly Great Britain (b) The tone is threatening.
6. The references to Columbia, Britannia, a Muse, and Eolus give it an added sense of grandeur.
7. Students may feel that her experience made her enthusiastic about the Revolution. Some may sense irony in a formerly enslaved person's enthusiasm for a leader who did not intend to free enslaved Africans.
8. Answers will vary.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 91–92.

Progress Check

Can students identify a couplet?

If No → See Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 219.

Literary Element

1. Students may note that the regularity of the couplets creates a rational, dignified tone, which adds both gravity and intensity to the poem.
2. Students may say that Wheatley saw General Washington and his cause as heroic, so she chose a form that was used to record heroic deeds.

Reading Strategy

1. How her armies pour through a thousand gates, / As when Eolus deforms heaven's fair face . . .
2. Shall I recite their praise to Washington?

Writing Skills

Students should focus on a specific role model, emulating Wheatley's style and using heroic couplets.

Academic Vocabulary

1. In this statement about sociology, structure means the "interrelated arrangement of or relationship between members of a family."
2. In this statement about biology, structure means "the arrangement and construction of tissues, organs, and parts."

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Literature Launchers:
Pre-Reading Videos DVD, Selection Launcher

Selection Focus
Transparency 15

Daily Language Practice
Transparency 18

Ask: What challenges might women have faced during the Revolutionary War? (Possible responses: being separated from husbands; lack of education)

Interactive Read and Write

Other options for teaching this selection can be found in

- Interactive Read and Write for EL Students, pp. 37–44
- Interactive Read and Write for Approaching-Level Students, pp. 37–44
- Interactive Read and Write for On-Level Students, pp. 37–44

Before You Read

Letter to John Adams

Meet Abigail Adams
(1744–1818)

In her day, Abigail Adams was known to the world as the loyal wife of John Adams, second president of the United States. Today she is just as famous for her brilliant mind. Adams participated in the events of some of the most tumultuous years of the nation, writing about them with sparkling wit.

A Happy Childhood The daughter of an accomplished Massachusetts minister, Adams grew up surrounded by people who valued strong principles and enjoyed defending them. Adams was passionate for knowledge and pursued her education in secret. She gained a wide knowledge of literature, but lamented what she felt was her ignorance. In letters to her husband, she argued that women deserved education and the right to own property.

> "I desire you would remember the ladies, and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors."
>
> —Abigail Adams, Letter to John Adams

Wife and Mother Adams met John Adams, a Harvard-trained lawyer, when she was fifteen. In 1764 the two married and went to live on John's farm at Braintree (later Quincy), Massachusetts. John Adams soon rose to prominence as a believer in American independence, requiring him to spend years in Philadelphia at the Continental Congress. Abigail, deeply supportive of the cause, stayed in Braintree to raise their five children. Outwardly cheerful, she felt, but rarely expressed, deep pain at being separated from her husband. After some months spent without a word from him, she finally wrote: "I pray my guardian generous to waft me the happy tidings of your safety and welfare . . . Difficult as the day is, cruel as this war has been, separated as I am on account of it from the dearest connection in life, I would not exchange my country for the wealth of the Indies, or be any other than an American."

Later Years After the war, John Adams was selected as the first U.S. ambassador to England, later became the first vice president of the United States, and succeeded George Washington as president from 1797 to 1801. After John Adams lost the presidency, he and Abigail retired to Quincy. Their eldest son, John Quincy, went on to become the sixth president of the United States in 1825.

Letters That Endure Abigail Adams's letters vibrate with personality. She could be unapologetically opinionated, seeking to enlarge her husband's sense of morality: "You know my mind upon this subject," she wrote him regarding slavery. "I wish most sincerely there was not a slave in the province. It always appeared a most iniquitous scheme to me—fight ourselves for what we are daily robbing and plundering from those who have as good a right to freedom as we have." Her most famous observations relate to women, who she felt needed expanded legal rights and education. "If we mean to have heroes, statesmen, and philosophers, we should have learned women," she said.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Abigail Adams, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Selection Skills

Letter to John Adams

Literary Elements
- Description (SE pp. 145, 147, 148)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- View Art (TE p. 146)

Reading Skills
- Recognize Author's Purpose (SE pp. 145, 147, 148)
- Preview (TE p. 146)

Vocabulary Skills
- Analogies (SE p. 148)
- Sentences (TE p. 145)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Letter (SE p. 148)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Letters

Is it important to you to keep in touch with relatives or friends who live far away? Why? Reflect on these questions in a journal entry.

Build Background

With the onset of war in 1775, the Continental Congress became the provisional government for the American side. While John Adams labored at the Congress, war raged in Massachusetts. Troops occupied Boston for nearly a year, forcing Bostonians to house them. The British retreated just a few days before Abigail wrote her March 31, 1776, letter.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The Road to Independence

As you read, ask yourself, How does this letter reflect ideals of the time, such as self-reliance and human rights?

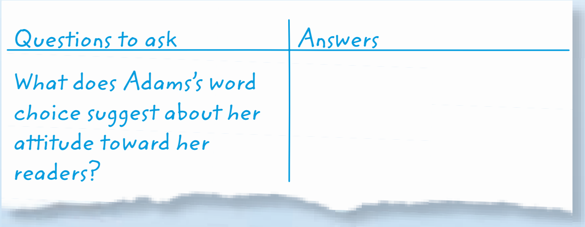
Literary Element Description

Description is the use of details to give the reader a vivid impression of a person, place, or thing. Good descriptive writing contributes to the overall purpose of a piece and avoids irrelevant details. As you read, ask yourself, Which details give you a sense of being in colonial Boston? Why?

Reading Strategy Recognize Author's Purpose

The author's purpose is the author's intent in writing a work. Authors usually write to persuade, to inform, to explain, to entertain, or to describe. As you read, consider what Adams describes and what opinions she expresses. What does her inclusion of these details tell you about her purpose for writing?

Tip: Double-Entry Journal Use a double-entry journal to help you think about Adams's purpose.



Questions to ask	Answers
What does Adams's word choice suggest about her attitude toward her readers?

Learning Objectives

For pages 144–148

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Studies: Analyzing description.

Reading: Recognizing author's purpose.

Vocabulary

deprive (di prīv´) v. to take away from; to keep from enjoying or having; p. 146 Students should not deprive themselves of education.

tyrant (tī´ rənt) n. a ruler who exercises power or authority in an unjust manner; one who has absolute power; p. 147 Many colonists felt that King George was a tyrant.

foment (fō ment´) v. to promote the development or growth of; p. 147 The cruelty of the guards fomented discontent in the inmates.

vassal (vas´ əl) n. a person in a subservient position; p. 147 The vassals, who vowed loyalty to their feudal lord, were nearly slaves.

Tip: Analogies Analogies are comparisons based on relationships between words. For example:

deprive : rob :: supply : provide

To finish an analogy, decide on the relationship between the first two words. Then apply that relationship to the second set of words.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Review the words that describe reasons for writing. Ask: Why might a writer want to persuade? (to get a result) Inform? (to provide facts) Explain? (to teach how to do something) Entertain? (to get a reader's attention) Describe? (to share an experience) As students read, have them pause to restate main ideas and then use these restatements to infer Adams's purpose for writing.

Advanced Remind students that descriptive details may be adjectives, nouns, or verbs. Have students create a map to keep track of descriptive details in Adams's writing.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

In a letter to her husband written in 1776, Abigail Adams describes damage done by British troops to Massachusetts homes. She also requests that the Continental Congress create a government that respects the rights of women.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 223–228.

Vocabulary

Sentences Ask students to create a sentence that uses two of the vocabulary words to describe the relationship between the colonists and King George. (The colonists viewed King George as a tyrant who had deprived them of inalienable rights.)

APPROACHING Specific verbs often have more general synonyms, such as walk for stroll. Ask: Which verb is a synonym for deprive: remove or supply? (remove)

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 231.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Draw Conclusions Ask: Why does Abigail Adams say that the colony has been duped by Dunmore? (Adams believes that Dunmore was devious in offering freedom to slaves who fought for the British.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS Provide students with a synonym for duped, and then have them use it in place of duped in the sentence to build meaning. Ask: What does duped mean? (fooled, tricked)

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 230.

Big Idea 2

The Road to Independence Answer: As a principle, Adams believes that all who fight in the name of freedom should be willing to grant freedom and human rights to others.

View the Art ★

The older house in this painting, on the right, was built in 1681. John Adams lived there until he and Abigail were married. Then they moved into the house next door, where their son John Quincy was born.

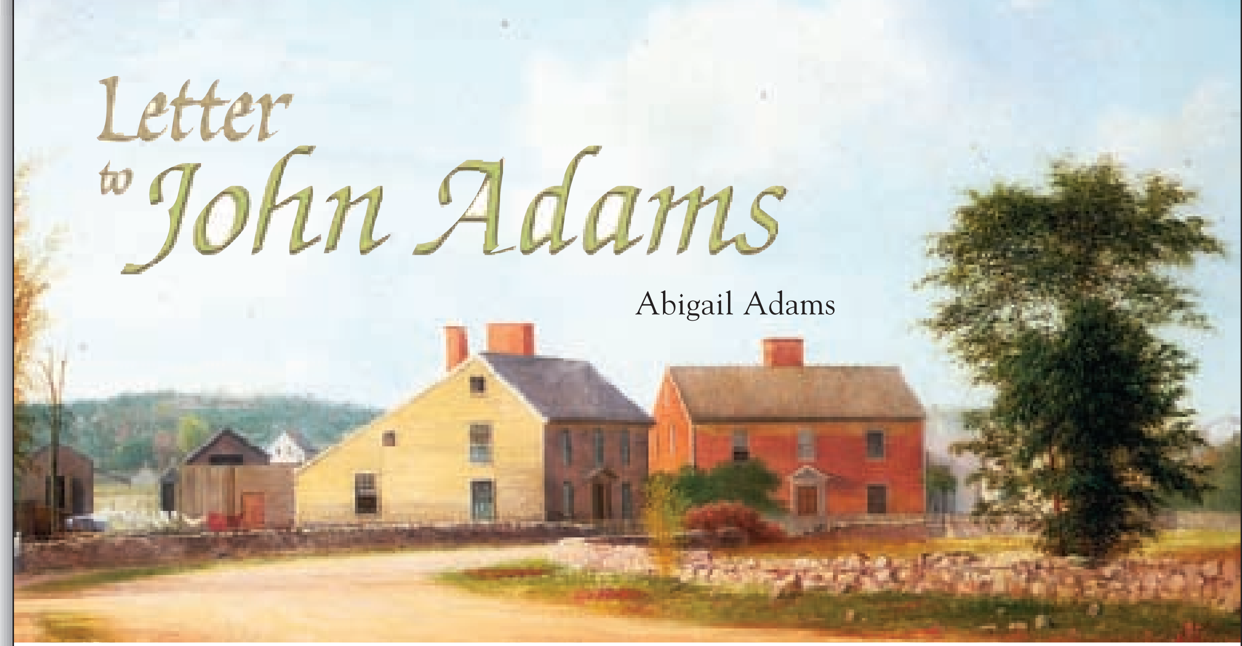
For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 8.8
DRP: 62
Lexile: 1350

Letter to John Adams

Abigail Adams



Birthplaces of John Adams and John Quincy Adams, 1849. G. N. Frankenstein. Watercolor. Courtesy of the Adams National Historic Site, National Park Service. ★

Braintree, March 31, 1776

I wish you would ever write me a letter half as long as I write you; and tell me if you may where your fleet are gone? What sort of defense Virginia can make against our common enemy? Whether it is so situated as to make an able defense? Are not the gentry[1] lords and the common people vassals?[2] Are they not like the uncivilized natives Britain represents us to be? I hope their rifle men,[3] who have shown themselves very savage and even bloodthirsty, are not a specimen of the generality of the people.

1 I am willing to allow the colony great merrit for having produced a Washington, but they have been shamefully duped by a Dunmore.[4]

I have sometimes been ready to think that the passion for liberty cannot be equally strong in the breasts of those who have been accustomed to deprive their fellow creatures of theirs. Of this I am certain: that it is not founded upon the generous and Christian principle of doing to others as we would that others should do unto us.

Do not you want to see Boston; I am fearful of the small pox, or I should have been in before this time. I got Mr. Crane to go to our house and see what state it was in. I find it has been occupied by one of the doctors of a regiment, very dirty, but no other damage has been done to it. The few things which were left in it are all gone. Crane has the key, which he never delivered up. I have wrote to him for it

The Road to Independence How does Adams's criticism reflect her belief in human rights? 2

Vocabulary

deprive (di prīv´) v. to take away from; to keep from enjoying or having

---

1. Gentry means the "upper," or "ruling," class.
2. Here, a vassal is someone in a subordinate or inferior position.
3. Rifle men refers to British soldiers and Loyalists fighting pro-independence forces.
4. The Earl of Dunmore was Virginia's last royal governor. He promised freedom to slaves who would fight against the Continental Congress and for England's king, thus angering American patriots.

Reading Practice

SMALL GROUP

Preview and Make Inferences Explain that Abigail Adams was a prolific letter writer. Her letters reflect the thoughts and feelings of a woman whose intelligence transcended her lack of formal education. Elicit discussion by asking these questions:

- How can a lack of education hinder people?
- How can people compensate for a lack of formal schooling?

Tell students to begin reading the letter. Have them make inferences as they read to identify the traits that Abigail Adams possessed. Then organize students in small groups to exchange and defend their inferences. Students must identify a trait and then point to specific evidence in the letter that supports the inference.

and am determined to get it cleaned as soon as possible and shut it up. I look upon it a new acquisition of property, a property which one month ago I did not value at a single shilling, and could with pleasure have seen it in flames.

The town in general is left in a better state than we expected, more owing to a precipitate[5] flight than any regard to the inhabitants, though some individuals discovered a sense of honor and justice and have left the rent of the houses in which they were for the owners and the furniture unhurt, or if damaged sufficient to make it good.

Others have committed abominable ravages. The mansion house of your president[6] is safe and the furniture unhurt, whilst both the house and the furniture of the Solicitor General have fallen a prey to their own merciless party. Surely the very fiends feel a reverential awe for virtue and patriotism, whilst they detest the parricide[7] and traitor.

I feel very differently at the approach of spring to which I did a month ago. We knew not then whether we could plant or sow with safety, whether when we had toiled we could reap the fruits of our own industry, whether we could rest in our own cottages, or whether we should not be driven from the sea coasts to seek shelter in the wilderness, but now we feel as if we might sit under our own vine and eat the good of the land.

I feel a gaieté de coeur[8] to which before I was a stranger. I think the sun looks brighter, the birds sing more melodiously, and nature puts on a more cheerful countenance. We feel a temporary peace, and the poor fugitives are returning to their deserted habitations.

Though we felicitate ourselves, we sympathize with those who are trembling lest the lot of Boston should be theirs. But they cannot be in similar circumstances unless pusillanimity[9] and cowardice should take possession of them. They have time and warning given them to see the evil and shun it.—I long to hear that you have declared an independency—and by the way, in the new Code of Laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make, I desire you would remember the ladies, and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors. Do not put such unlimited power into the hands of the husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could. If particular care and attention is not paid to the ladies, we are determined to foment a rebellion, and will not hold ourselves bound by any laws in which we have no voice, or representation.

That your sex are naturally tyrannical is truth so thoroughly established as to admit no dispute, but such of you as wish to be happy willingly give up the harsh title of master for the more tender and endearing one of friend. Why, then, not put it out of the power of the vicious and the lawless to use us with cruelty and indignity with impunity. Men of sense in all ages abhor those customs which treat us only as the vassals of your sex. Regard us then as beings placed by providence under your protection, and in imitation of the Supreme Being, make use of that power only for our happiness.

Abigail

---

[5] Precipitate means "sudden" or "hasty."

[6] John Hancock was the president of the Continental Congress. When the British occupied Boston, General William Howe took Hancock's house as his headquarters.

[7] Here, parricide means "a person who commits the crime of treason."

[8] Gaieté de coeur (gā ə tā də koer) is a French idiom meaning "lightheartedness" or "playfulness."

[9] Pusillanimity (pū′ sə lə nim′ ə tē) means "cowardliness" or "faintheartedness."

3 Recognize Author's Purpose Why might Adams have included this information?

4 Description How do these details express the emotional pitch of Adams's situation?

Vocabulary

tyrant (tī´ rənt) n. a ruler who exercises power or authority in an unjust manner; one who has absolute power foment (fō ment´) v. to promote the development or growth of vassal (vas´ əl) n. a person in a subservient position

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Recognize Author's Purpose Answer: Adams wanted her husband to know about the condition of his hometown.

Literary Element 4

Description Answer: These details show Adams's tremendous relief after having lived through a very uncertain time.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 234.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging For students still struggling to identify descriptive language, work through the text word by word. Identify descriptive details and ask: What does this word make you think of? What do you see or hear? What feelings do you associate with these ideas? (Possible responses: The sun coming out of the clouds and birds singing; feelings of happiness and relief)

Established To help students respond to the Literary Element question, review the text with them. Point out a few examples of descriptive details, and then ask students to identify additional examples. Have students indicate to what sense the details appeal and then describe the images they visualize as a result of Adams's description.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students' answers will vary.
2. (a) The occupation of Boston left many homes ruined; Dunmore angered patriots by offering freedom to slaves who would fight for the British; many people feared that the British might take over their towns. (b) Adams is concerned about the effects of the war on people's lives. She is impressed with the leadership of Washington and disappointed in Dunmore.
3. (a) The rights of women (b) If women are ignored, they will organize a rebellion.
4. Men would rather dominate women than consider them their equals. Students' answers will vary.
5. Students are likely to say that Adams's opinions are fair.
6. Adams's letters show a world in turmoil before the Revolution and a much calmer, yet still developing, culture after the war.
7. People can now get in touch with other people much more quickly via telephone and e-mail, but interpersonal relationships are not necessarily closer than those in Adams's time.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 93–94.

Progress Check

Can students analyze a description?

If No → See Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 229.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Would you like to have known Abigail Adams? Why or why not?
2. (a)From reading this letter, what details did you learn about the British occupation of Boston, the role of Dunmore, and "those who are trembling lest the lot of Boston should be theirs"? (b)What are Adams's attitudes toward the conflict and the various people mentioned? Explain.
3. (a)What does Adams urge her husband to consider as he creates a new code of laws? (b)What reasons does she give for urging this consideration?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. What do you think Adams means when she says that "all men would be tyrants if they could"? Do you agree?
5. Do Adams's opinions seem fair to you? Explain.

Connect

6. Big Idea The Road to Independence What does this letter tell you about life before and after the American Revolution?
7. Connect to Today How have the changes in long-distance communication since Abigail Adams wrote this letter affected people's relationships and sense of connectedness?

Literary Element Description

Good descriptive writing gives the reader a picture of a person, place, or thing. Did Adams's descriptions bring war-torn Boston to life for you? Explain why or why not. If so, be sure to include specific examples of details that appealed to your senses.

Reading Strategy Recognize Author's Purpose

You can get a sharper idea of Abigail Adams's purposes for writing by considering the context in which she wrote. Think of what you know about John Adams's responsibilities as well as the issues faced by colonists. What would you say is one purpose of Adams's letter to her husband?

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Analogies Choose the word pair that best completes each analogy.

1. deprive : provide ::
   - a. abuse : berate
   - b. aid : help
   - c. comfort : console
   - d. defend : attack
2. tyrant : abuse ::
   - a. manager : mislead
   - b. expert : speculate
   - c. benefactor : aid
   - d. mentor : learn
3. foment : growth ::
   - a. nourish : hunger
   - b. injure : pain
   - c. bankrupt : wealth
   - d. succeed : defeat
4. vassal : servant ::
   - a. nurse : caregiver
   - b. doctor : medicine
   - c. zoologist : animals
   - d. baby : mother

Writing

Write a Letter Imagine you know someone who is about to move to your neighborhood. Write this person an informal letter giving an accurate description of the area, including the pros and cons of living there. Include sensory details to make your description more vivid.

Reading Strategy

Students' answers will vary.

Literary Element

Students' answers will vary.

Vocabulary

1. d 2. c 3. b 4. a

Writing

Students should follow the conventions of letter writing; they should include clear pros and cons and interesting sensory details.

Grammar Workshop

Clauses as Modifiers

Literature Connection In the quotation below, both sentences are made up of two clauses, each of which has a subject and a predicate and expresses a complete thought. The main (independent) clause can stand alone, but the subordinate (dependent) clause needs the main clause to complete its meaning.

> "Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could. . . . Men of sense in all ages abhor those customs which treat us only as the vassals of your sex."
>
> —Abigail Adams, from Letter to John Adams

In the first sentence, the subordinate clause if they could acts as an adverb by answering the question Under what conditions? of the verb would be. (An adverb clause may also modify an adjective or an adverb.) In the second sentence, the subordinate clause which treat us only as the vassals of your sex acts as an adjective by modifying the noun customs.

Examples

- Crane has the key, which he never delivered up.

  The underlined adjective clause modifies the noun key by providing additional information about it.
- Although the poor fugitives are returning, we cannot feel peaceful.

  The underlined adverb clause answers the question Under what conditions? It modifies the verb cannot. Adverb clauses may also answer the questions how?, when?, where?, why?, how often?, or how much?

Revise Write two new sentences to expand each main clause below. In one new sentence use an adverb clause and in the other use an adjective clause. Underline each clause and identify the word or words that the clause modifies. For adverb clauses, identify the question each answers.

1. Some individuals discovered a sense of honor and justice.
2. Others have committed ravages.
3. The mansion house of your president proved safe.
4. I long to hear that you have declared an independency.
5. I hope their rifle men do not represent the people in general.

Learning Objectives

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objectives:

Grammar:
Understanding how to use clauses as modifiers.
Punctuating subordinate clauses.

Punctuating Clauses

When a subordinate clause introduces a sentence, it is set off from the main clause with a comma. In other positions, only nonessential elements, like which he never delivered up in the first example at left, are set off with commas. Essential elements, such as the clause beginning which treat us only in the Adams quotation, are not set off with commas.

Tip

Adjective clauses are often introduced by relative pronouns (who, whom, which, and that). Adverb clauses are often introduced by subordinating conjunctions such as after, although, as, because, if, and when.

Literature Online

Grammar For more grammar practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Grammar Workshop

Clauses as Modifiers

Focus

Write on the board: The students feel nervous about their English test, which will account for 20 percent of their grade.

Point out that the subordinate clause is acting as an adjective modifying the noun test.

Teach

Nonessential Clauses Tell students that they can tell whether a subordinate clause is nonessential if the meaning of the sentence does not change when the clause is removed from the sentence. Nonessential clauses must be set off from the main clause with commas.

Assess

In their sentences, students should correctly use adverb and adjective clauses, identify what each clause modifies, and tell what question each adverb clause answers.

For additional grammar practice, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, p. 233.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Help students work through the exercise in the Revise section. Remind students that adjective clauses modify nouns or pronouns and adverb clauses modify verbs, adjectives, or adverbs. Have students read the first sentence in the exercise aloud. Ask: Which of the words in this sentence are nouns or pronouns? (individuals, honor, justice) Which are verbs, adjectives, or adverbs? (some, discovered) Ask students to pick one of the nouns and write an adjective clause that gives additional information about the noun. Have students put together their first sentence by picking a suitable relative pronoun to join their adjective clause to the main clause. Students should then write an adverb clause that may modify the verb and pick a subordinating conjunction to join their adverb clause to the main clause for their second sentence. Help students work on the rest of the sentences in the exercise in the same systematic manner.

Focus

Summary

McCullough paints a vivid portrait of Abigail and John Adams, describing the mutual admiration and respect that sustained their marriage despite much separation. McCullough writes about Abigail's intelligence and competence and the equal partnership that made their marriage a success. McCullough also describes the Adamses' happy domestic life before John's ambition took him away from his home and family.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Description Ask: How does McCullough convey information about Abigail's character? (Students may say that his vivid description of her face and facial expressions makes it clear that she was a strong, intelligent woman.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS Remind students that many English words have multiple meanings. Ask students to think of two meanings for stiff (one meaning is "not easily bent;" the other is "reserved, lacking in grace"). Ask how McCullough uses the word to describe the portrait of Abigail Adams. (reserved, lacking in grace)

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 9.9
DRP: 64
Lexile: 1270

Learning Objectives

For pages 150–153

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Reading:
Analyzing informational text.
Analyzing biographical narrative.

from John Adams

Pulitzer Prize Winner

David McCullough

Build Background

Letters between John and Abigail Adams provide insights into their lives, the Revolutionary War, and the career of the second president. This excerpt, from historian David McCullough's biography John Adams, frequently refers to their correspondence.

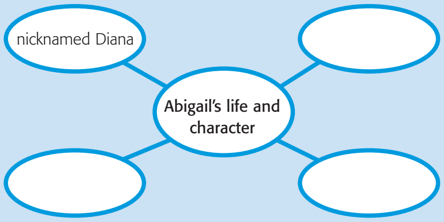
Set a Purpose for Reading

Read to discover biographical information about Abigail and John Adams.

Reading Strategy

Analyze a Biographical Narrative

As you read, take notes about what the selection reveals about Abigail and John. Use word webs like the one below to help you.



Of the courtship Adams had said not a word in his diary. Indeed, for the entire year of 1764 there were no diary entries, a sure sign of how preoccupied he was.

At their first meeting, in the summer of 1759, Abigail had been a shy, frail fifteen-year-old. Often ill during childhood and still subject to recurring headaches and insomnia, she appeared more delicate and vulnerable than her sisters. By the time of her wedding, she was not quite twenty, little more than five feet tall, with dark brown hair, brown eyes, and a fine, pale complexion. For a rather stiff pastel portrait, one of a pair that she and John sat for in Salem a few years after their marriage, she posed with just a hint of a smile, three strands of pearls at the neck, her hair pulled back with a blue ribbon. But where the flat, oval face in her husband's portrait conveyed nothing of his bristling intelligence and appetite for life, in hers there was a strong, unmistakable look of good sense and character. He could have been almost any well-fed, untested young man with dark, arched brows and a grey wig, while she was distinctly attractive, readily identifiable, her intent dark eyes clearly focused on the world. 1

One wonders how a more gifted artist might have rendered Abigail. Long years afterward,

Reading Practice

Compare and Contrast Point out to students that McCullough compares and contrasts Abigail and John Adams by describing their looks and expressions. Have each student make a two-column chart of their traits, with one column for Abigail's and one for John's. Have students point out the similarities and differences between the traits. Then ask students to describe each of the Adamses in a short summary sentence or two. Have students use their lists and sentences to draw conclusions about why Abigail and John Adams had such an enduring marriage.

Gilbert Stuart,[1] while working on her portrait, would exclaim to a friend that he wished to God he could have painted Mrs. Adams when she was young; she would have made "a perfect Venus,"[2] to which her husband, on hearing the story, expressed emphatic agreement.

Year after year through the long courtship, John trotted his horse up and over Penn's Hill[3] by the coast road five miles to Weymouth[4] at every chance and in all seasons. She was his Diana, after the Roman goddess of the moon. He was her Lysander, the Spartan hero. In the privacy of correspondence, he would address her as "Ever Dear Diana" or "Miss Adorable." She nearly always began her letters then, as later, "My Dearest Friend." She saw what latent abilities and strengths were in her ardent suitor and was deeply in love. Where others might see a 2 stout, bluff[5] little man, she saw a giant of great heart, and so it was ever to be.

Only once before their marriage, when the diary was still active, did Adams dare mention her in its pages, and then almost in code:

> Di was a constant feast. Tender, feeling, sensible, friendly. A friend. Not an imprudent, not an indelicate, not a disagreeable word or action. Prudent, soft, sensible, obliging, active.

She, too, was an avid reader and attributed her "taste for letters" to Richard Cranch,[6] who, she later wrote, "taught me to love the poets and put into my hands, Milton, Pope, and Thompson,[7] and Shakespeare." She could quote poetry more readily than could John Adams, and over a lifetime would quote her favorites again and again in correspondence, often making small, inconsequential mistakes, an indication that rather than looking passages up, she was quoting from memory.

Intelligence and wit shined in her. She was consistently cheerful. She, too, loved to talk quite as much as her suitor, and as time would tell, she was no less strong-minded.

Considered too frail for school, she had been ☆ taught at home by her mother and had access to the library of several hundred books accumulated by her father. A graduate of Harvard, the Reverend Smith[8] was adoring of all his children, who, in addition to the three daughters, included one son, William. They must never speak unkindly of anyone, Abigail remembered her father saying repeatedly. They must say only "handsome things," and make topics rather than persons their subjects—sensible policy for a parson's family. But Abigail had views on nearly everything and persons no less than topics. Nor was she ever to be particularly hesitant about expressing what she thought.

Open in their affections for one another, she and John were also open in their criticisms. "Candor is my characteristic," he told her, as though she might not have noticed. He thought she could improve her singing voice. He faulted her for her "parrot-toed" way of walking and for sitting cross-legged. She told him he was too severe in his judgments of people and that to others often appeared haughty.[9] Besides, she chided[10] him, "a gentleman has no business to concern himself about the legs of a lady."

During the terrible smallpox epidemic of 1764, when Boston became "one great hospital," he went to the city to be inoculated, an often harrowing, potentially fatal ordeal extending over many days. Though he sailed through with little discomfort, she worried excessively, and they corresponded nearly every day, Adams reminding her to be sure to have his letters "smoked," on the chance they carried contamination.

---

1. Born in Rhode Island, Gilbert Stuart (1755–1828) was the most highly regarded American portrait painter of his time.
2. Venus was the Roman goddess of love and beauty, associated with the Greek goddess Aphrodite.
3. Penn's Hill is a hill near Boston.
4. Weymouth, a town in eastern Massachusetts, was Abigail Adams's birthplace.
5. Here, bluff means "outspoken and frank."
6. Richard Cranch was Abigail Adams's brother-in-law.
7. John Milton (1608–1674), Alexander Pope (1688–1744), and James Thomson (1700–1748)—whose name Abigail misspells—were all prominent British poets.
8. The Reverend William Smith was Abigail's father.
9. Haughty means "disdainfully proud."
10. Chided means "scolded constructively."

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Help students appreciate the light-hearted banter between Abigail and John. Post the phrases "parrot-toed" and "cross-legged." Ask students to describe, draw, or demonstrate these. Ask: What is John saying to Abigail? (that she is unladylike and awkward in her posture) What is she saying in reply? (that it is not polite for him to look at her legs anyway)

Advanced List words from the selection containing prefixes and suffixes, such as unkindly, discomfort, disagreeable, indelicate, and imprudent. Circle the affixes and ask students to define them. *(*un-, dis-, in-, and im- all mean "not"; -ly means "in the manner of"; -able means "capable of being.") Have students locate the words in the selection and explain their meaning.

Historical Perspective
on John Adams

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Context Clues Say: Use context clues to determine the meanings of the following words: emphatic, latent, ardent. Identify the context clues you used. If you cannot determine the meaning of a word, use a dictionary for help.

APPROACHING Read each context sentence aloud with students. Ask them to suggest a meaning, and then have them read aloud dictionary definitions and etymologies. Have students explain how the etymology informs the usage in context.

Cultural History ☆

Women's Education Before the American Revolution, most colonists believed that girls needed only the most basic education in reading, writing, music, dancing, and needlework. After the Revolution, people began to place a higher value on girls' education. Dr. Benjamin Rush of Philadelphia played a key role in implementing educational reform that benefited girls.

For an activity related to this selection, see Unit 1 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 237–245.

Teach

Text Element 1

Block Quotations Point out the long quotation on this page. Explain that lengthy quotations are indented in this manner to make them easier to read and to emphasize that they include primary source material.

Reading Strategy 2

Make Inferences Have students identify the characteristics that McCullough associates with a "New England woman." Ask whether the expression has a positive connotation.

ADVANCED Have students explain why McCullough contrasts Abigail's knowledge of English poetry and literature with her Yankee speech patterns. Ask them to infer McCullough's attitude toward the Yankee speech patterns.

The rambling, old-fashioned parsonage at Weymouth and its furnishings were a step removed from the plain farmer's cottage of John's boyhood or the house Abigail would move to once they were married. Also, two black slaves were part of the Smith household.

☆ According to traditional family accounts, the match was strongly opposed by Abigail's mother. She was a Quincy, the daughter of old John Quincy, whose big hilltop homestead, known as Mount Wollaston, was a Braintree[11] landmark. Abigail, it was thought, would be marrying beneath her. But the determination of both Abigail and John, in combination with their obvious attraction to each other—like steel to a magnet, John said—were more than enough to carry the day.

A month before the wedding, during a spell of several weeks when they were unable to see one another because of illness, Adams wrote to her:

> Oh, my dear girl, I thank heaven that another fortnight[12] will restore you to me—after so long a separation. My soul and body have both been thrown into disorder by your absence, and a month or two more would make me the most insufferable cynic in the world. I see nothing but faults, follies, frailties and defects in anybody lately. People have lost all their good properties or I my justice or discernment.
>
> 1 But you, who have always softened and warmed my heart, shall restore my benevolence as well as my health and tranquility of mind. You shall polish and refine my sentiments of life and manners, banish all the unsocial and ill natured particles in my composition, and form me to that happy temper that can reconcile a quick discernment with a perfect candor.
>
> Believe me, now and ever your faithful
> Lysander

His marriage to Abigail Smith was the most important decision of John Adams's life, as would become apparent with time. She was in all respects his equal, and the part she was to play would be greater than he could possibly have imagined, for all his love for her and what appreciation he already had of her beneficial, steadying influence.

Bride and groom moved to Braintree the evening of the wedding. There was a servant to wait on them—the same Judah who had been the cause of the family row years before—who was temporarily on loan from John's mother.[13] But as the days and weeks passed, Abigail did her own cooking by the open hearth, and while John busied himself with his law books and the farm, she spun and wove clothes for their everyday use.

Her more sheltered, bookish upbringing notwithstanding, she was to prove every bit as hardworking as he and no less conscientious about whatever she undertook. She was and would remain a thoroughgoing New England woman who rose at five in the morning and was seldom idle. She did everything that needed doing. All her life she would do her own sewing, baking, feed her own ducks and chickens, churn her own butter (both because that was what was expected and because she knew her butter to be superior). And for all her reading, her remarkable knowledge of English poetry and literature, she was never to lose certain countrified Yankee patterns of speech, saying "Canady" for Canada, as an example, using "set" for sit, or the old New England "aya," for yes. 2

To John's great satisfaction, Abigail also got along splendidly with his very unbookish mother. For a year or more, until Susanna Adams was remarried to an older Braintree man named John Hall, she continued to live with her son Peter in the family homestead next door, and the two women grew extremely fond of one another. To Abigail her mother-in-law was a cheerful, open-minded person of "exemplary benevolence,"

---

[11] Braintree, a town in eastern Massachusetts, was John Adams's birthplace.

[12] A fortnight is two weeks.

[13] Judah was a homeless woman who, being unable to care for herself, had been brought to the Adamses' household by Braintree officials. Her arrival had caused a family argument.

Writing Practice

Summarize

SMALL GROUP

Remind students that summarizing a passage is a helpful way to reinforce the main ideas and details it contains. Tell students to write a summary of this. Suggest that they create an outline before they begin writing. Tell students that their summary should include the main ideas and the central events and characters. It should also answer the questions who, what, where, when, why, and how.

Students may want to answer the 5Ws and H questions before they begin writing their summaries to ensure that this information is included. When students are finished, pair them to compare summaries. Have students work together to resolve any discrepancies in their grasp of the facts.

dedicated heart and soul to the welfare of her family, which was more than her eldest son ever committed to paper, even if he concurred.

John and Abigail's own first child followed not quite nine months after their marriage, a baby girl, Abigail or "Nabby," who arrived July 14, 1765, and was, her mother recorded, "the dear image of her still dearer Papa."

A second baby, John Quincy, was born two years later, in 1767, also in mid-July, and Adams began worrying about college for Johnny, fine clothes for Nabby, dancing schools, "and all that." To Abigail, after nearly three years of marriage, her John was still "the tenderest of husbands," his affections "unabated."[14]

For Adams, life had been made infinitely fuller. All the ties he felt to the old farm were stronger now with Abigail in partnership. She was the ballast[15] he had wanted, the vital center of a new and better life. The time he spent away from home, riding the court circuit, apart from her and the "little ones," became increasingly difficult. "God preserve you and all our family," he would write.

But in 1765, the same year little Abigail was born and Adams found himself chosen surveyor of highways in Braintree, he was swept by events into sudden public prominence. His marriage and family life were barely under way when he began the rise to the fame he had so long desired. "I never shall shine 'til some animating occasion calls forth all my powers," he had written, and here now was the moment.

"I am . . . under all obligations of interest and ambition, as well as honor, gratitude and duty, to exert the utmost of abilities in this important cause," he wrote, and with characteristic honesty he had not left ambition out. 3

---

[14] Unabated means "at full strength."

[15] Here, ballast means "something that provides stability."

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. In what ways do you think that the relationship between John and Abigail Adams is like relationships between married people today? How is it different?
2. (a)What nicknames taken from the classical world did John and Abigail give each other? (b)How do these names reveal the perceptions each had of the other?
3. At the beginning of this excerpt, what inferences does McCullough draw about John's and Abigail's characters from their portrait? How do these inferences contribute to his portrayal of the couple?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. Do you agree with McCullough when he calls Adams's marriage to Abigail the "most important decision of John Adams's life"? Explain.
5. McCullough writes that "life had become infinitely fuller" for John Adams after his marriage and the birth of his children. Do you think that Adams considered his marriage more fulfilling than his career? Why or why not?

Connect

6. Abigail's letters are notable partly because of their plea for protections for women's rights in the new American government. How does her reasoning resemble the views of other writers involved in the struggle for American independence?

Teach

Big Idea 3

The Road to Independence

Point out to students that the closing quotation lists the motivating forces that drew John Adams away from his family.

APPROACHING Ask students to identify the "important cause."

Cultural History ☆

Class and Marriage Abigail's mother opposed her marriage to John. Explain that John's relatives were farmers, whereas Abigail's father, William Smith, was a Congregational minister. Many highly educated guests spent time at the Smith home. Class distinctions were especially acute during the colonial period, and Abigail's parents felt themselves superior to the Adams family.

Assess

1. They expressed affection for each other and criticized each other as a modern couple would. Their extensive correspondence sets their relationship apart from most modern ones.
2. (a) Diana and Lysander. (b) She glowed with beauty, like the moon; he was heroic.
3. He infers that Abigail possessed good character and that John had not yet proven himself. He portrays Abigail as bright and confident and John as still seeking a channel for his ambition.
4. Students are likely to agree. According to McCullough, Abigail proved to be a competent woman who became the center of "a new and better life."
5. Students may say that he found marriage as fulfilling as career.
6. Abigail hated tyranny and was willing to go out on a limb to fight for the values she believed in.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 95–96.

Writing Workshop

Write a Persuasive Speech

Focus

Bellringer

Say: There are many controversial issues involving our school and community. Think about some issues that you feel strongly about. Tell students to list a few issues and then to jot down arguments on both sides of each issue.

Summary

In this workshop, students will write and present persuasive speeches. They will follow the stages of the writing process, including prewriting, drafting, revising, and proofreading. In addition, the workshop provides two mini-lessons, one on supporting reasons with evidence and one on parallelism.

Learning Objectives

For pages 154–161

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objectives:

Writing: Writing a persuasive speech as an instrument for change in your community or the world, including a clearly stated opinion supported by relevant evidence.

Writing Process

At any stage of a writing process you may think of new ideas. Feel free to return to earlier stages as you write.

- Prewrite
- Draft
- Revise
- Focus Lesson: Use Evidence
- Edit and Proofread
- Focus Lesson: Parallelism
- Present

Literature Online

Writing and Research For prewriting, drafting, and revising tools, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Writing Workshop

Persuasive Speech

Literature Connection Patrick Henry's direct and passionate "Speech to the Second Virginia Convention" is a memorable example of persuasive speaking and the effective use of rhetorical devices.

> "Is life so dear, or peace so sweet, as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery?"

To write a successful persuasive speech, review "The Rhetoric of Revolution" on pages 112–113 and the following goals and strategies of effective persuasive writing.

Checklist

Goals	Strategies
To present a clearly stated opinion	☑ Choose an issue that has opposing viewpoints ☑ Clearly state your thesis
To present a logically organized argument	☑ Give reasons for your opinion ☑ Use precise, relevant evidence to support your reasons ☑ Analyze evidence to show how it supports your reasons ☑ End with a call to action
To demonstrate understanding of your audience, purpose, and form	☑ Acknowledge and refute opposing arguments ☑ Maintain a tone that matches your audience and purpose ☑ Use point of view to achieve your purpose
To convince an audience that a particular point of view is correct	☑ Use appeals to logic, ethics, and emotion ☑ Employ rhetorical devices and vivid language to strengthen your argument

Workshop Resources

Print Materials

- Unit 1 Teaching Resources, pp. 247–249
- Writing Kit
- Success in Writing: Research and Reports

Technology

- Literature Online: Writing Resources and Grammar Resources, www.glencoe.com
- Online Essay Grader, www.glencoe.com
- Student Presentation Builder on StudentWorks Plus CD-ROM
- Media Workshop DVD
- Online Student Edition

Assignment: Support an Opinion

Write a persuasive speech of at least 1,500 words about a situation in your school or community that you wish to change. As you work, keep your audience and purpose in mind.

Audience: your school or community

Purpose: to persuade others to improve a situation in the school or the community

Analyze a Professional Model

In her persuasive speech, Becky Cain, the president of the League of Women Voters, urges members of the House of Representatives to abolish the Electoral College. As you read the following passage, notice how Cain clearly presents the debate and her position, supports her position with strong evidence, and urges her audience to act. Pay close attention to the comments in the margin. They point out features to include in your own persuasive speech.

From "Proposals for Electoral College Reform" by Becky Cain, President, League of Women Voters

I am pleased to be here today to express the League's support for a constitutional amendment to abolish the electoral college and establish the direct election of the President and Vice President of the United States by popular vote of the American people.

The electoral college system is fundamentally unfair to voters. In a nation where voting rights are grounded in the one-person, one-vote principle, the electoral college is a hopeless anachronism.

The current system is unfair for two reasons.

First, a citizen's individual vote has more weight if he or she lives in a state with a small population than if that citizen lives in a state with a large population.

For example, each electoral vote in Alaska is equivalent to approximately 112,000 people. Each electoral vote in New York is equivalent to approximately 404,000 eligible people (based on 1990 census data). And that's if everyone votes!

Real-World Connection

If you have addressed a community problem, send your speech to your local newspaper for publication. If you have addressed a school problem, submit your speech to your school or community newspaper. Be sure to learn the publication's requirements for submission first.

Introduction

Identify and explain the problem or the situation you are addressing, and propose a solution. State your thesis.

Appeals

Appeal to your audience's emotions and logic.

Supporting Evidence/Statistics

Support your reasons with strong evidence, attributing sources of information as needed.

Write a Persuasive Speech

Teach

Big Idea

The Road to Independence

Help students make a connection between the persuasive speech and American independence. Explain that many prominent colonists delivered persuasive speeches during the struggle for independence. Ask: What was the role of the persuasive speech in the struggle for independence? (To succeed, the patriots had to persuade others that independence from Britain was a cause worth fighting for.)

Political History ☆

The League of Women Voters

Since 1920, the League of Women Voters has worked to encourage citizens to participate in elections and to take an active role in government. The league is active in all 50 states and is nonpartisan, not supporting any particular candidates for public office.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Have students read editorials from newspapers or magazines. If possible, use local periodicals. Then have students work in small groups to identify the stated position, the supporting evidence, and the call to action.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Before students begin, review terms used to discuss elements of a persuasive speech. A position is the statement of the writer's point of view. The supporting evidence is the reasons, facts, examples, and details that explain why the writer believes the position is valid. Speeches may also have a call to action, which is the action or response the writer wants from the reader. For example, a call to action might include writing a letter to a local politician in support of a new law. Give students one simple editorial from a school or local newspaper. Have them identify the three elements discussed.

Teach

Writing Skills

Support Emphasize that students must support an argument with facts. An emotional plea alone is not strong enough to convince an audience to embrace a point of view. Students should expect to do some research in preparation for writing a persuasive speech.

Audience and Purpose/Tone Remind students to choose words carefully to convey the appropriate tone to the audience. For example, if students are speaking to a group of parents, they should use a more formal tone. They may use a more casual tone when making a speech in front of other students.

Persuasive Technique Explain that, after presenting factual information, students should make an emotional appeal to their audience. One way to touch people's emotions is by describing what might happen if no one takes action.

APPROACHING For students who are struggling, clarify that emotional appeals address readers' feelings. To persuade readers to act, writers often appeal to fear, to pride, or to a sense of fairness. Have students identify other emotions that could motivate readers to act.

Reasons/Support
Structure paragraphs to present clear reasons followed by precise, relevant evidence.

The system is also unfair because a citizen's individual vote has more weight if the percentage of voter participation in the state is low. For example, if only half of all people in Alaska vote, then each electoral vote is equivalent to roughly 56,000 people.

Facts/Support
Support your reasons with facts to appeal to your audience's sense of logic.

Moreover, the electoral vote does not reflect the volume of voter participation within a state. If only a few voters go to the polls, all the electoral votes of the state are still cast.

Finally, the electoral college system is flawed because the Constitution does not bind presidential electors to vote for the candidates to whom they have been pledged. For example, in 1948, 1960, and 1976, individual electors pledged to the top two vote getters cast their votes for third-place finishers and also-rans.

Audience and Purpose/Tone
Invite your audience to identify and empathize with the negative consequences of inaction. Keep your tone consistent with your purpose and audience.

Defecting electors in a close race could cause a crisis of confidence in our electoral system.

For all these reasons, the League believes that the presidential election method should incorporate the one-person, one-vote principle. The President should be directly elected by the people he or she will represent, just as the other federally elected officials are in this country. Direct election is the most representative system. It is the only system that guarantees the President will have received the most popular votes. It also encourages voter participation by giving voters a direct and equal role in the election of the President. . . .

Persuasive Techniques
Put short sentences, repetition, emotional appeals, and connotation to work for you.

The time has come to take the next step to ensure a broad-based, representative democracy. Fairness argues for it. Retaining the fragile faith of American voters in our representative system demands it. We urge the House and the Senate to pass a constitutional amendment abolishing the electoral college system and establishing the direct popular election of our President and Vice President.

Conclusion
End your argument with a call to action.

Reading-Writing Connection Think about the writing techniques that you have just encountered and try them out in the persuasive speech you write.

Writing Practice

Call to Action Recall that persuasive speeches should end with a call to action. Stress that such a call must be persuasive and clear so that readers in fact follow its direction. Have a student read aloud the conclusion to Becky Cain's speech. Ask: What word does Becky use to call readers to action? (urge) Then have students brainstorm to compile a list of strong verbs for request, such as urge, implore, appeal, press, and beg. Have them create a list of such verbs that are less urgent, such as recommend, wish, invite, ask, and call. Tell students to refer to these lists and choose strong verbs as they write the conclusion of their speech.

Prewrite

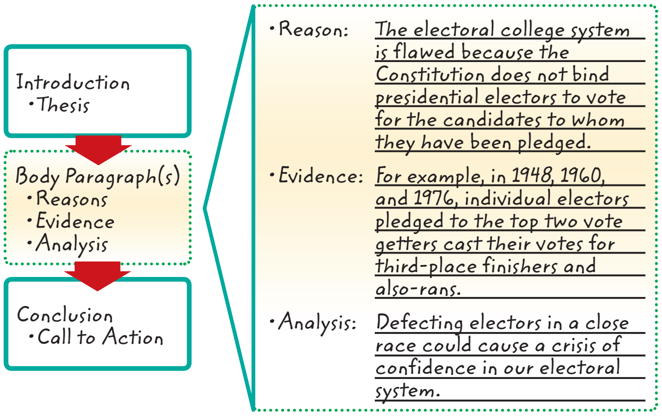
Choose an Issue Think of a situation you would like to change. Have you noticed a rule or policy that is ineffective or unfair? Enacting change requires you to persuade others that a situation can and should be improved, and that your solution is the right one.

- The purpose of a persuasive speech is to inform and influence.
- Determine your audience. Your audience should include people who have the power to improve the situation you describe.

Clarify Your Position In one or two sentences, state the issue and your opinion about it. This is your thesis.

Support Your Position To be persuasive, you need to give reasons and support them with relevant evidence. You should make appeals to logic, ethics, and emotions. Defend your reasons with precise and accurate evidence, such as facts, expert opinions, statistics, and examples.

Outline Your Argument Make an outline to organize your reasons and evidence. Your introduction should describe the issue and your proposal. (For more information on types of proposals, see "Persuasive Speech" on page 154.) In each body paragraph, include a reason and relevant evidence. In your conclusion, summarize your position and end with a call to action.



•Reason: The electoral college system is flawed because the Constitution does not bind presidential electors to vote for the candidates to whom they have been pledged.

•Evidence: For example, in 1948, 1960, and 1976, individual electors pledged to the top two vote getters cast their votes for third-place finishers and also-rans.

•Analysis: Defecting electors in a close race could cause a crisis of confidence in our electoral system.

Discuss Your Ideas When you finish your outline, share your ideas with a partner. To develop your writing voice and to become more comfortable speaking in front of others, read your thesis and reasons. Be sure that each part is clear and that your tone suits your purpose and audience.

Rhetorical Devices

Here are some other rhetorical devices you could use:

Repetition Repeat a word or phrase for emphasis.
"I came, I saw, I conquered."
—Julius Caesar

Rhetorical Question These questions are asked to emphasize the obvious.
"If you wrong us, shall we not revenge?"
—William Shakespeare

Metaphor Metaphors compare two seemingly unlike things.
"No man is an island."
—John Donne

Avoid Plagiarism

When doing Internet research, make notes in your own words rather than cutting and pasting.

Writing Workshop

Write a Persuasive Speech

Teach

Writing Process

Prewrite Have small groups generate ideas for their speeches. Say: List at least six topics. After each topic, write down the specific audience you will be writing for. Keep this audience in mind as you begin to write.

ADVANCED Remind students that in order to support a position with facts, they will need to spend some time doing research. Say: In the course of gathering evidence, you may find information that persuades you to change your position. Be sure you are clear about your final position and will be able to argue your case convincingly.

Peer Review Direct partners to provide supportive but honest feedback. Suggest that students listen closely and that they offer ideas for more persuasive language, stronger reasons, or more effective emotional appeals.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Consult with students individually if possible. Help them develop their position and list their supporting reasons or evidence. Have them look up pronunciations of unfamiliar words. Have students read portions of their speeches aloud to you as they progress through the writing process.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Spend a class period in the library or media center with students who have limited experience with research. Outline major sources for information, such as Web sites, books, and periodicals. Locate and demonstrate the use of search tools to find information in each major source area. Have students list other ways to gather information on their topic, such as interviews or surveys.

Emerging Review outline methods and rules, and then provide a template outline that students can complete. If you prefer sentence outlining, demonstrate this technique. Have students exchange outlines with a partner and highlight areas where their partners need to gather more evidence.

Teach

Writing Process

Draft Remind students that the most important part of the drafting process is to get all their ideas on paper, including their central thesis and supporting evidence. Students will be able to refine and reorganize their argument when they revise their drafts.

Writing Skills

Audience and Purpose/Tone Answer: Discussion of the haunted house creates mystery and suspense. It will probably grab the audience's attention and draw people to listen to the speech.

Thesis Answer: The house shouldn't be torn down. Instead, it should be renovated and used as a museum.

Supporting Evidence/Expert Opinion Answer: An expert's opinion could persuade the audience that the writer's point is valid.

Draft

Don't Get Stuck Writers often modify their original thesis after developing the rest of their argument. Keep in mind that it may be easier to start with a very general thesis, to draft your body paragraphs, and to go back to clarify your thesis afterward. Whichever order you choose, you will be able to revise your thesis later to make your position clear.

Analyze a Workshop Model

Here is a final draft of a persuasive speech. Read the speech and answer the questions in the margin. Use the answers to these questions to guide you as you write your own speech.

Writing Frames

As you read the workshop model, think about the writer's use of the following frames:

Instead of ______, we should ______.

Some critics may argue that ______ …

Let's … ______. ______ is the first step.

Consider using frames like these in your own speech.

Haunted House or Historical Attraction?

Hauntingly beautiful, perhaps—but not a haunted house!

Audience and Purpose/Tone

How does this opening use content and tone to lure the audience and help achieve the purpose?

Some neighbors claim that they hear strange sounds at night from the old Dillard mansion at the end of Briar Street. Others complain that with the sprawling weeds, teetering fence, and peeling paint, the house might just as well be haunted. Now the Briar Street Neighborhood Association is pressuring the city government to bulldoze the old house.

Thesis

What is the thesis?

The Dillard mansion has been empty since 1971, and no doubt the neglect has made it quite an eyesore. Still, the house remains one of the town's oldest standing structures, and a decision to tear it down should not be made without considering other options. Instead of destroying an important part of Dillard history, we should attempt to renovate and restore it. The renovated mansion would serve as an ideal site for a town museum.

Supporting Evidence/Expert Opinion

How does this attributed evidence help persuade?

Many of our citizens recognize that Dillard needs a town museum. In fact, the Dillard Historical Society has been talking about building a museum for some time now. As historian and Society member Adam Frasier explains, "With no central location, Dillard's historic objects risk being damaged or lost. There is no systematic organization in place. The longer we postpone the decision,

Writing Practice

Use Transitions Discuss the importance of using transition words, especially in writing that is intended to be presented to an audience orally. Tell students that a speech flows more smoothly when one thought leads naturally to the next and when the connections between the thoughts are made clear. Have the class make a list of transition words that they can refer to as they write. Post students' ideas on the board. Then discuss categories of transition words. For example, first, next, and last are sequence transition words. Most important, in addition, and finally are order-of-importance transition words. Other categories include cause-effect and comparison-contrast transition words. Have students categorize the posted words, and then identify and categorize transition words in the Workshop model. (Examples include some . . . other, comparison = contrast; however, for contrast; but, for contrast).

the worse it will get." In July 2004, the Dillard Post noted that an estimated 65 percent of archived material is currently in storage, unavailable to the public or even most researchers. Why not solve this need for a public museum by restoring the Dillard mansion?

Some critics may argue that the cost of restoring the old house would outweigh the benefits. The town would need to replace the existing plumbing and electricity to bring it up to safety codes. A complete restoration would require expensive specialists and hours of costly research. However, the cost of building a new museum from the ground up would probably be more expensive overall. The town would need not only to purchase all new materials, fixtures, and labor, but also to pay for an architect and for land to build on. Moreover, a newer building could not achieve the look and atmosphere of an authentically historic space.

Records at Dillard City Hall indicate that the town's founder, Evan Dillard, built the house in 1798. Not only is the house more than 200 years old, it includes a number of architectural features that cannot be found anywhere else in the city. A hidden staircase leads to a secret room, and rare amethyst-glass windows and unexpected gables decorate the roof. Such a unique museum would appeal to both experts and amateurs, and it would probably draw tourists from all over the state.

Let's preserve the cultural heritage, deep history, and unique architecture of our town. Let's turn the Dillard eyesore into a historical attraction. Renovating—not bulldozing—the Dillard mansion is the first step.

Persuasive Technique

How does this rhetorical question help achieve the writer's purpose?

Opposing Arguments

How does the writer acknowledge and refute an opposing argument?

Reasons/Support

What evidence does the writer provide? How does this evidence appeal to both logic and emotion? How does it support the thesis?

Persuasive Techniques

How does the writer use sentence structure, parallelism, word choice, repetition, a call to action, and an emotional appeal to persuade?

Teach

Writing Skills

Persuasive Technique

Answer: The question invites the audience to agree with the speaker.

Opposing Arguments

Answer: The writer reasons that more money would be needed to build a new museum than to renovate the old house to be a museum.

Reasons/Support

Answer: The writer appeals to the audience emotionally by inviting the audience to feel protective of an important piece of town history. The appeal to logic lies in the reasoning that the town would benefit financially as tourists would be lured to the unique building. Both appeals support the thesis that the building should be saved.

Persuasive Techniques

Answer: The writer connects to the audience by starting the first two sentences with the word "Let's" and using words such as "cultural heritage," and "deep history." The writer ends the speech by inviting the audience to take action.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Clarify that a counterargument is the argument that an opponent might make. Ask: What does the word counter mean in this term? (Counter means "opposite" in this case.)

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Models of Persuasion Have students read famous persuasive speeches as additional models for their own writing. Tell them to think about topics they have studied, such as slavery, suffrage, and civil rights. Then have them use the library or the Internet to find speeches on these topics. (Direct students to www.americanrhetoric.com which has a speech bank of famous American speeches, some of which include audio files.) Have students identify thesis, counterarguments, logical or emotional appeals, and rhetorical devices such as parallelism or rhetorical questions in one of the speeches.

Teach

Writing Process

Revise After students finish writing their persuasive speeches, tell them to wait a couple of days before revising. They will approach their work with renewed vision and clarity after some time away from their writing.

Writing Skills

Reliable Sources Caution students to be critical of the sources of the facts they use to support their arguments. Emphasize that what is found on Web sites may not be accurate. Tell them to focus on sites that are produced by governments and educational institutions.

APPROACHING For students who are struggling, review how to recognize sites sponsored by government or educational institutions. Explain that students can identify such sites by .gov or .edu in the URL. In addition, students may be able to use advanced search features to find only these sites.

Traits of Strong Writing

Include these traits of strong writing to express your ideas effectively.

Ideas message or theme and the details that develop it
Organization arrangement of main ideas and supporting details
Voice writer's unique way of using tone and style
Word Choice vocabulary a writer uses to convey meaning
Sentence Fluency rhythm and flow of sentences
Conventions correct spelling, grammar, usage, and mechanics
Presentation the way words and design elements look on a page

For more information on using the Traits of Strong Writing, see pages R30–R32.

Word Choice

Academic vocabulary in the student model:

structure (strək′ shər) n. 1. a building or other construction; 2. coherent form and organization, as in a piece of writing; Still, the house remains one of the town's oldest standing structures. Using academic vocabulary may strengthen your writing. Try to use one or two academic vocabulary words in your persuasive speech. See the list on R89–R91.

Revise

Use the checklist below to evaluate your writing.

Checklist

☑ Do you clearly state your thesis?
☑ Do you use a point of view and tone that matches your purpose and audience?
☑ Do you present precise, relevant evidence to support your thesis?
☑ Do you use rhetorical devices and vivid language to strengthen your argument?
☑ Do you use appeals to logic, ethics, and emotion?
☑ Do you present and respond to opposing arguments in a respectful tone?
☑ Do you end with a call to action?

Focus Lesson

Support Reasons with Evidence

A well-supported reason will demonstrate that you are informed about your subject and that your argument is logical and valid. Make sure to support your reasons with convincing evidence from reliable sources. Here is a sentence from the Workshop Model followed by three kinds of supporting evidence—example, expert opinion, statistic—that you may want to use in your persuasive speech.

Draft:

Many of our citizens recognize that Dillard needs a town museum.

Revision:

Many of our citizens recognize that Dillard needs a town museum. In fact, the Dillard Historical Society has been talking about building a museum for some time now.[1] As historian and Society member Adam Frasier explains, "With no central location, Dillard's historic objects risk being damaged or lost. There is no systematic organization in place. The longer we postpone the decision, the worse it will get."[2] In July 2004, the Dillard Post noted that an estimated 65 percent of archived material is currently in storage, unavailable to the public or even most researchers.[3]

1: Example 2: Expert Opinion 3: Statistic

Writing Practice

Review Discuss the importance of reviewing a piece of writing before deciding that it is finished. In the case of a speech, students should read their work aloud, thinking about which words to emphasize, how to pace the speech, and when to increase or reduce the volume of their voice. Suggest that students work in pairs to review their speeches. Partners should first listen for clarity of argument. Then, on a second hearing, partners should listen for presentation. Have students then exchange tips for final text revision and for improving presentation.

Edit and Proofread

Get It Right Proofread your speech for errors in grammar, usage, mechanics, and spelling. See the Language Handbook, pages R42–R61.

Focus Lesson

Parallelism

Parallelism is the use of a series of words, phrases, or sentences that have similar grammatical form. To write a parallel sentence, balance each item in a series by using the same grammatical construction.

Original: In this sentence, similar ideas are not connected or emphasized.

Let's preserve the cultural heritage and the deep history of our town, as well as its architecture, which is unique.

Improved: Create parallel phrases to reflect the parallel meaning.

Let's preserve the cultural heritage, deep history, and unique architecture of our town.

Original: In this sentence, the series does not use parallel grammatical forms.

Others complain that with weeds, teetering fence, and paint that is cracked and peeling, the house might just as well be haunted.

Improved: Edit the sentence so that all items are parallel in form.

Others complain that with the sprawling weeds, teetering fence, and peeling paint, the house might just as well be haunted.

Present

Preparing Your Persuasive Speech Once you have finished your persuasive speech, think about how you'll present it. Many speakers read from note cards instead of from the paper itself. If you prefer reading from the paper, you may wish to increase the type size and spacing, or add notes in the margins. Your teacher may ask for a clean copy of your speech to grade, so be sure to check the presentation guidelines.

Peer Review Tips

A classmate may ask you to read his or her speech. Take your time and jot down notes as you read so you can give constructive feedback. Use the following questions to get started:

- Can you state the writer's thesis and identify clear reasons and support for it?
- Which persuasive techniques do you see, and how effective do you think they are?

Word-Processing

The title of your speech should appear at the top of the page, in the same font as the rest of your work, without quotation marks. Leave a line of space between the title and the first line of your speech. Double-space the body of your speech, but do not add extra spaces between paragraphs. Use a uniform indent for all paragraphs of about one-half inch.

Writer's Portfolio

Place a copy of your persuasive speech in your portfolio to review later.

Writing Workshop

Write a Persuasive Speech

Teach

Writing Process

Edit and Proofread After students edit and proofread their own work, have them trade speeches with a partner. Have partners check each other's speeches for errors in grammar, punctuation, and mechanics.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Pair English learners with native English speakers. Have English speakers explain each change they make so that English learners understand the language convention behind the change.

Present Presentation guidelines can be adapted from the rubric on page 163. Have students make two copies of their speech—one to hand in and another to read from. They should mark up the copy that they will use for their oral presentation with notes about which words to emphasize, when to read more slowly, and when to increase their volume.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Provide extra time for students to practice reading their speeches aloud. Set up a special session in which students can rehearse their speeches in front of a small group. Have students focus on using standard English grammatical forms and on speaking naturally and clearly. Tell listeners not to interrupt but to take notes as they listen. Have them focus on identifying the main arguments and determining if speakers have included sufficient supporting evidence to be persuasive. Ask listeners to share their comments clearly and supportively with speakers.

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshop

Deliver a Persuasive Speech

Focus

Summary

In this workshop, students will learn techniques for planning, rehearsing, and delivering a persuasive speech.

Teach

Speaking Skills

Model Speech To give students a model of effective speaking, play an audiotape or a videotape of a particularly good speech. After you have played the speech, ask students to read the chart on the next page and identify techniques that make the speech effective.

For help with creating presentations, see Student Presentation Builder on StudentWorks Plus.

Learning Objectives

For pages 162–163

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objectives:

Speaking and Listening:
Delivering a persuasive presentation that develops a logical argument.
Providing feedback on a presentation.
Using visual media to support an oral presentation.

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshop

Persuasive Speech

Literature Connection In 1799, George Washington needed help. Supporters of state independence were resisting the federal union. Fearing that "the tranquility of the Union [was] hastening to an awful crisis," Washington turned to Patrick Henry, who spoke passionately for the inviolability of the Union. Henry's last speech turned sullen opponents into cheering supporters.

Assignment Deliver your persuasive speech to an audience.

Plan Your Presentation

Reread your speech, making sure you have used opportunities for deduction, induction, syllogism, or analogy. Avoid logical fallacies such as an ad hominem attack, a false cause, or a red herring. Determine whether you have presented a proposition of fact, value, policy, or problem, and be sure that you have the organization and support appropriate for this type of speech. (See pages R62–R65 for help.)

Next, decide where your speech is most powerful and convincing and why. Speculate on its probable effect on a live audience. Then look for places to increase its effectiveness by adding or amplifying the following:

- Rhetorical devices: Where appropriate, consider inserting a rhetorical question, parallel structure, figurative language, vivid action verbs, and other choices that will make your speech more forceful and memorable.
- Appeals: Add appropriate logical, ethical, and emotional appeals.
- Level of language: If appropriate, raise or lower your level of formality. If you need technical language for accuracy, use it. Otherwise, for clarity and effectiveness, use standard English.

stunning bell-cast eaves and interior bead molding
It includes a number of architectural features that cannot be found anywhere else in the city.

Listening and Speaking Practice

SMALL GROUP

Reread Tell students to read their speeches several times until they have almost memorized them. First, they should read their speeches to themselves. Tell students to rehearse independently in front of a mirror. Students should explore and select gestures, facial expressions, and body movements that enhance and emphasize the points of their arguments. If students include quotations in their speeches, tell them to find out through research the correct way to pronounce names or dialect. Then have students work with partners to practice presenting the speeches aloud and to exchange helpful pointers that they can use to improve their presentation.

Rehearse

Rehearse your speech both in private and in front of friends and family. Ask your listeners for feedback on your pronunciation, enunciation, gestures, and movement. If you will be fielding questions from your audience, ask your listeners for practice questions. Keep your answers focused and to the point. If possible, watch a videotape of a famous speech, such as Kennedy's 1961 inaugural, or turn on the television to view politicians and world leaders. Identify strategies to emulate.

Use some of the verbal and nonverbal techniques below.

Techniques for Delivering a Speech

Verbal Techniques	Nonverbal Techniques
☑ Volume Speak loudly enough so that everyone can hear you.	☑ Posture Stand up tall with your head straight.
☑ Pronunciation Speak clearly, pronouncing all the words.	☑ Eye Contact Make eye contact with people throughout your audience.
☑ Pace Speak at a moderate speed but vary the rate and use pauses.	☑ Facial Expressions Vary your facial expressions to reflect what you are saying.
☑ Tone Speak in an animated voice.	☑ Gestures Use natural gestures to reinforce your ideas.
☑ Emphasis Stress important words and ideas.	☑ Visual Aids Use photographs or other visuals to enhance your presentation.

Listen and Evaluate

As others present their speeches, use these listening techniques:

- Focus on the speaker.
- Sit up straight; keep your head up; do not fidget.
- Respond: if the speaker uses humor, laugh or smile; if the speaker poses a question, react to or consider it in some visible way.

To evaluate others' speeches, use the presentation tips in the side column. In addition, jot down notes about the speaker's word choice and sentence structure. Note how these choices affected you or other members of the audience.

Sound Check

Record your presentation and play it back to check on whether your voice expresses the right mood and your words are understandable.

Speaking Frames

Consider using the following frames in your persuasive speech:

- My own view is that _____ because _____.
- While it is true that _____, it does not necessarily mean that _____.

Presentation Tips

Use the following checklist to evaluate your speech.

☑ Did you command your audience's attention throughout the speech? What evidence did you see of audience response?

☑ Did you use appeals, rhetorical devices, and levels of language to help persuade your audience?

Literature Online

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing For project ideas, templates, and presentation tips, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u1.

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshop

Deliver a Persuasive Speech

Teach

Speaking Skills

Visual Aids Students may wish to use visual aids to emphasize or illustrate one or two key points of their speech. Explain that a visual aid should be clearly relevant to the intent of the speech and not distract the audience from paying attention to the speaker. Remind students that their visual aids must be displayed so that audience members sitting at the back and to the sides of the room can see the details of the visual aid clearly.

Listening Skills

Peer Assessment Ask students to use the following criteria to evaluate one another's speeches:

- Does the speech give clear reasons to persuade listeners to take action?
- Does the speaker present his or her main points in a clear and convincing manner?

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging To help students evaluate their presentation, have them demonstrate the techniques listed in the chart. For example, you might have students speak at a volume they think is appropriate. Ask other students to build consensus on appropriate volume. Repeat the process for the remaining techniques. As each is discussed, ask students to provide specific comments on how to use each effectively.

Established Tell students to mark their written speeches to indicate which words and phrases to stress. Students might highlight the parts they want to read with greater emphasis. Before students mark text, ask them to identify types of text that merit emphasis and to explain their thinking.

Focus

Summary

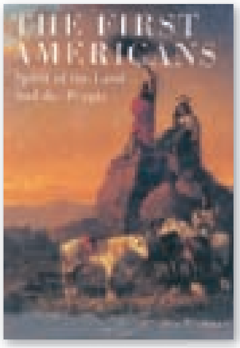
These pages highlight some of the literature that will enrich students' understanding of Native American cultures, colonial times, and the founding of the nation. These books include The First Americans: Spirit of the Land and the People; Words That Make America Great; an anthology of Native American Literature; The Scarlet Letter; Benjamin Franklin's autobiography; and a historical novel called The Rising Shore: Roanoke.

To create customized reading lists from a database of more than 30,000 titles, use BookLink K–12 CD-ROM.

Independent Reading

Early America

THE LITERATURE OF EARLY AMERICA reflects the diversity of its people and their experiences. Native American myths, the journals of European explorers, slave narratives, political treatises, and contemporary historical fiction all tell a piece of the country's story. Explore these selections to expand your understanding of America from the pre-Colonial era through independence from Great Britain.



The First Americans: Spirit of the Land and the People

Josepha Sherman

An intelligent and vividly illustrated overview of Native American cultures, this book includes information about customs, beliefs, living conditions, and contact with white settlers. The illustrations include artwork and portraits of Native Americans in traditional clothing.

WORDS AMERICA
GREAT

Words That Make America Great

Jerome Agel, Editor

This book presents 200 documents that have helped define America's character and ideals from its earliest days to the present. Included are many documents of the years 1750–1850, from the Declaration of Independence to the earliest rules of baseball. The book also includes commentaries on the significance of each document.

Writing Practice

SMALL GROUP Book Review Help students understand that book reviews go beyond the question of whether the reader liked the book. Have students find book reviews in a local paper, a magazine, or online. Have them work in small groups to analyze some of the characteristics of a review. For example, have them discuss the ways authors summarize the basic idea of the book without revealing too much about the story. Have them discuss how the length of the review affects the depth of the writer's analysis.

GLENCOE LITERATURE LIBRARY

Native American Literature: An Anthology

Lawana Trout, Editor

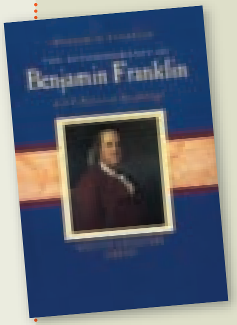
This rich collection features writers such as William Least Heat-Moon, Leslie Marmon Silko, Michael Dorris, N. Scott Momaday, and many more.

The Scarlet Letter

Nathaniel Hawthorne

Set in Colonial Boston in the mid-1600s, The Scarlet Letter tells the story of Hester Prynne, who has committed adultery and must wear a scarlet letter "A" publicly as punishment. ☆

The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin



Benjamin Franklin

The life of this amazing American—scientist, statesman, philosopher, businessman, civic leader, author—is an enduring source of inspiration.

CRITICS' CORNER

> "Homsher's novel gives life to the few scraps of historical documentation of the Roanoke colony and creates strong characters that grab your attention and make you dream of an altered history."
>
> —Catherine Perk,
> Historical Novels Review Online

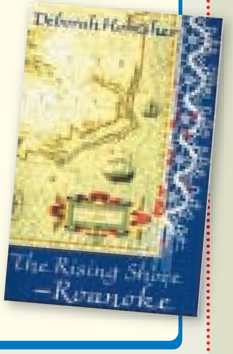
The Rising Shore: Roanoke



Deborah Homsher

This historical novel tells the story of Elenor, the daughter of Roanoke Governor John White. It also explores the mystery of this early American colony, which vanished without explanation.

Write a Review

Imagine you are the book reviewer for a newspaper or magazine. Read one of these books and write a review for your publication. Share your assessment with your class. Make sure to address whether you would recommend the book to others, and how it affects your understanding of early America.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate When reading Catherine Perk's words from "Historical Novels Review Online," English learners may need help with phrases such as "gives life to the few scraps of historical documentation" and "make you dream of an altered history." Have students break down these phrases into parts and discuss what Perk means. Ask: What does "gives life" mean in this quote? (makes lively or real) Ask: What are the scraps that she is talking about? (small amounts of information found in various places) Remind students that a historical novel uses a real setting and some real events, but the novelist must imagine many of the details.

Teach

Cultural History ☆

American Puritanism The Scarlet Letter is set in seventeenth-century Puritan New England. Puritans first came to North America in 1620, establishing Plymouth Colony in New England. Puritans had an intense devotional life. Because Bible study was central to their life, Puritan society was highly literate. Puritan ideals of self-reliance and the virtues of frugality and hard work became defining characteristics of the American way of life.

Glencoe Literature Library

Glencoe Literature Library offers an extensive collection of hardcover books that help you encourage your students to read independently. Choose among the more than 120 full-length literary works—novels, novellas, plays, and nonfiction. Each book includes related readings

Write a Review Evaluate students' reviews for the following:

- a clear summary of the book
- an evaluation of the book's execution
- reference to the book's contribution to an understanding of history

For access to all study guides for the Glencoe Literature Library, see the Literature Library Teacher Resources CD-ROM.

Assessment

Focus

Bellringer

Say: In the next two years, you will take many tests in your classes, and you will take tests as you apply for college. To improve your results, learn test-taking strategies and apply them in test situations. Have students list some of the test-taking strategies that they have already learned.

Teach

Assessment

Tell students that this Assessment will provide reinforcement in general test-taking strategies and will test them in the skills and vocabulary taught in this unit. Students will read a nonfiction selection and will answer context, comprehension, and inference questions. Then they will choose answers for ten paragraph-improvement questions. Finally, they will write a short persuasive essay.

Assessment

English Language Arts

Reading: Nonfiction

Carefully read the following passage. Use context clues to determine the meaning of words that you are unfamiliar with. Pay close attention to the author's main idea and use of rhetorical devices. Then answer the questions on pages 167–168.

from The Whistle by Benjamin Franklin

When I was a child of seven years old, my friends, on a holiday, filled my pocket with coppers. I went directly to a shop where they sold toys for children; and being charmed with the sound of a whistle, that I met by the way in the hands of another boy, I voluntarily offered and gave all my money for one. I then came home, and went whistling all over the house, much pleased with my whistle, but disturbing all the family. My brothers, and sisters, and cousins, understanding the bargain I had made, told me I had given four times as much for it as it was worth; put me in mind what good things I might have bought with the rest of the money; and laughed at me so much for my folly, that I cried with vexation; and the reflection gave me more chagrin than the whistle gave me pleasure.

This, however, was afterwards of use to me, the impression continuing on my mind; so that often, when I was tempted to buy some unnecessary thing, I said to myself, Don't give too much for the whistle; and I saved my money.

As I grew up, came into the world, and observed the actions of men, I thought I met with many, very many, who gave too much for the whistle.

When I saw one too ambitious of court favor, sacrificing his time in attendance on levees, his repose, his liberty, his virtue, and perhaps his friends, to attain it, I have said to myself, This man gives too much for his whistle.

When I saw another fond of popularity, constantly employing himself in political bustles, neglecting his own affairs, and ruining them by that neglect, He pays, indeed, said I, too much for his whistle.

If I knew a miser, who gave up every kind of comfortable living, all the pleasure of doing good to others, all the esteem of his fellow-citizens, and the joys of benevolent friendship, for the sake of accumulating wealth, Poor man, said I, you pay too much for your whistle.

When I met with a man of pleasure, sacrificing every laudable improvement of the mind, or of his fortune, to mere corporeal sensations, and ruining his health in their pursuit, Mistaken man, said I, you are providing pain for yourself, instead of pleasure; you give too much for your whistle.

Paraphrase Directions Explain that instructors often give test directions orally and students need to understand these directions accurately and quickly. Clarify that restating or paraphrasing information is a strategy for checking comprehension. Students may apply the strategy orally or in writing. Ask students to listen carefully as you read aloud the directions at the top of this page, and then to restate them in writing. Tell students to focus on identifying the verbs that indicate required actions and on descriptive language that highlights details of the task. As needed, point out the words read, use context clues, meaning of words, author's main idea, and rhetorical devices, as well as the page numbers where questions appear. For additional practice, preview the directions on pages 169 and 171, providing clarification as needed. Have students rewrite each set of directions.

(continued)

If I see one fond of appearance, or fine clothes, fine houses, fine furniture, fine equipages, all above his fortune, for which he contracts debts, and ends his career in a prison, Alas! say I, he has paid dear, very dear, for his whistle.

When I see a beautiful sweet-tempered girl married to an ill-natured brute of a husband, What a pity, say I, that she should pay so much for a whistle!

In short, I conceive that great part of the miseries of mankind are brought upon them by the false estimates they have made of the value of things, and by their giving too much for their whistles.

1. From whom did Franklin get the whistle?
   A. a shop
   B. friends on a holiday
   C. another boy
   D. a peddler

2. Which rhetorical device is most evident in the sentence beginning on line 5?
   A. hyperbole
   B. rhetorical question
   C. connotative language
   D. parallelism

3. From the context, what does the word folly in line 7 mean?
   A. a good deal
   B. an agreement
   C. a mistake
   D. good sense

4. From the context, what does the word reflection in line 8 mean?
   A. likeness
   B. mirror image
   C. possibility
   D. thought

5. The word whistle, in line 11, is an example of which rhetorical device?
   A. connotative language
   B. hyperbole
   C. parallelism
   D. figurative language

6. According to Franklin, what will happen if people overvalue popularity?
   A. Their affairs will suffer.
   B. They will succeed in politics.
   C. They will become popular.
   D. They will give up comfortable living.

7. In line 18, which literary device does Franklin use in the phrase said I?
   A. allusion
   B. aphorism
   C. inversion
   D. meter

8. In the paragraph beginning on line 19, which is an example of connotative language?
   A. pleasure
   B. miser
   C. wealth
   D. friendship

LOG ON Literature Online

Assessment For additional test practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA3816u1.

Assess

Reading

1. A is the correct answer because Franklin says "I went directly to a shop . . . and gave all my money for one."
2. D is the correct answer because Franklin uses three parallel clauses to describe the actions of his siblings and cousins.
3. C is the correct answer because Franklin learns that he paid four times what the whistle was worth.
4. D is the correct answer because Franklin was thinking about his mistake.
5. D is the correct answer because Franklin uses the word whistle as a metaphor for something that is not worth its price.
6. A is the correct answer because Franklin states in line 18 that "neglecting his own affairs" is one price to be paid for being "fond of popularity."
7. C is the correct answer because Franklin precedes the subject I with its verb said.
8. B is the correct answer because the word miser carries a negative connotation.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Clarify with students that while they need to understand the passage, they will receive points only for correctly answering questions. As a result, students should use the questions to guide their reading. Point out that most of the questions refer test-takers to specific line numbers in the passage. Have students locate the line numbers in the passage and in the questions. After reading the passage through quickly for general understanding, students should focus on reading the questions. They can return to the passage to find the specific details they need in order to answer the questions.

Assess

9. C is the correct answer because elegant means "of high quality."

10. D is the correct answer because, in line 26, Franklin says such a person "ends his career in prison."

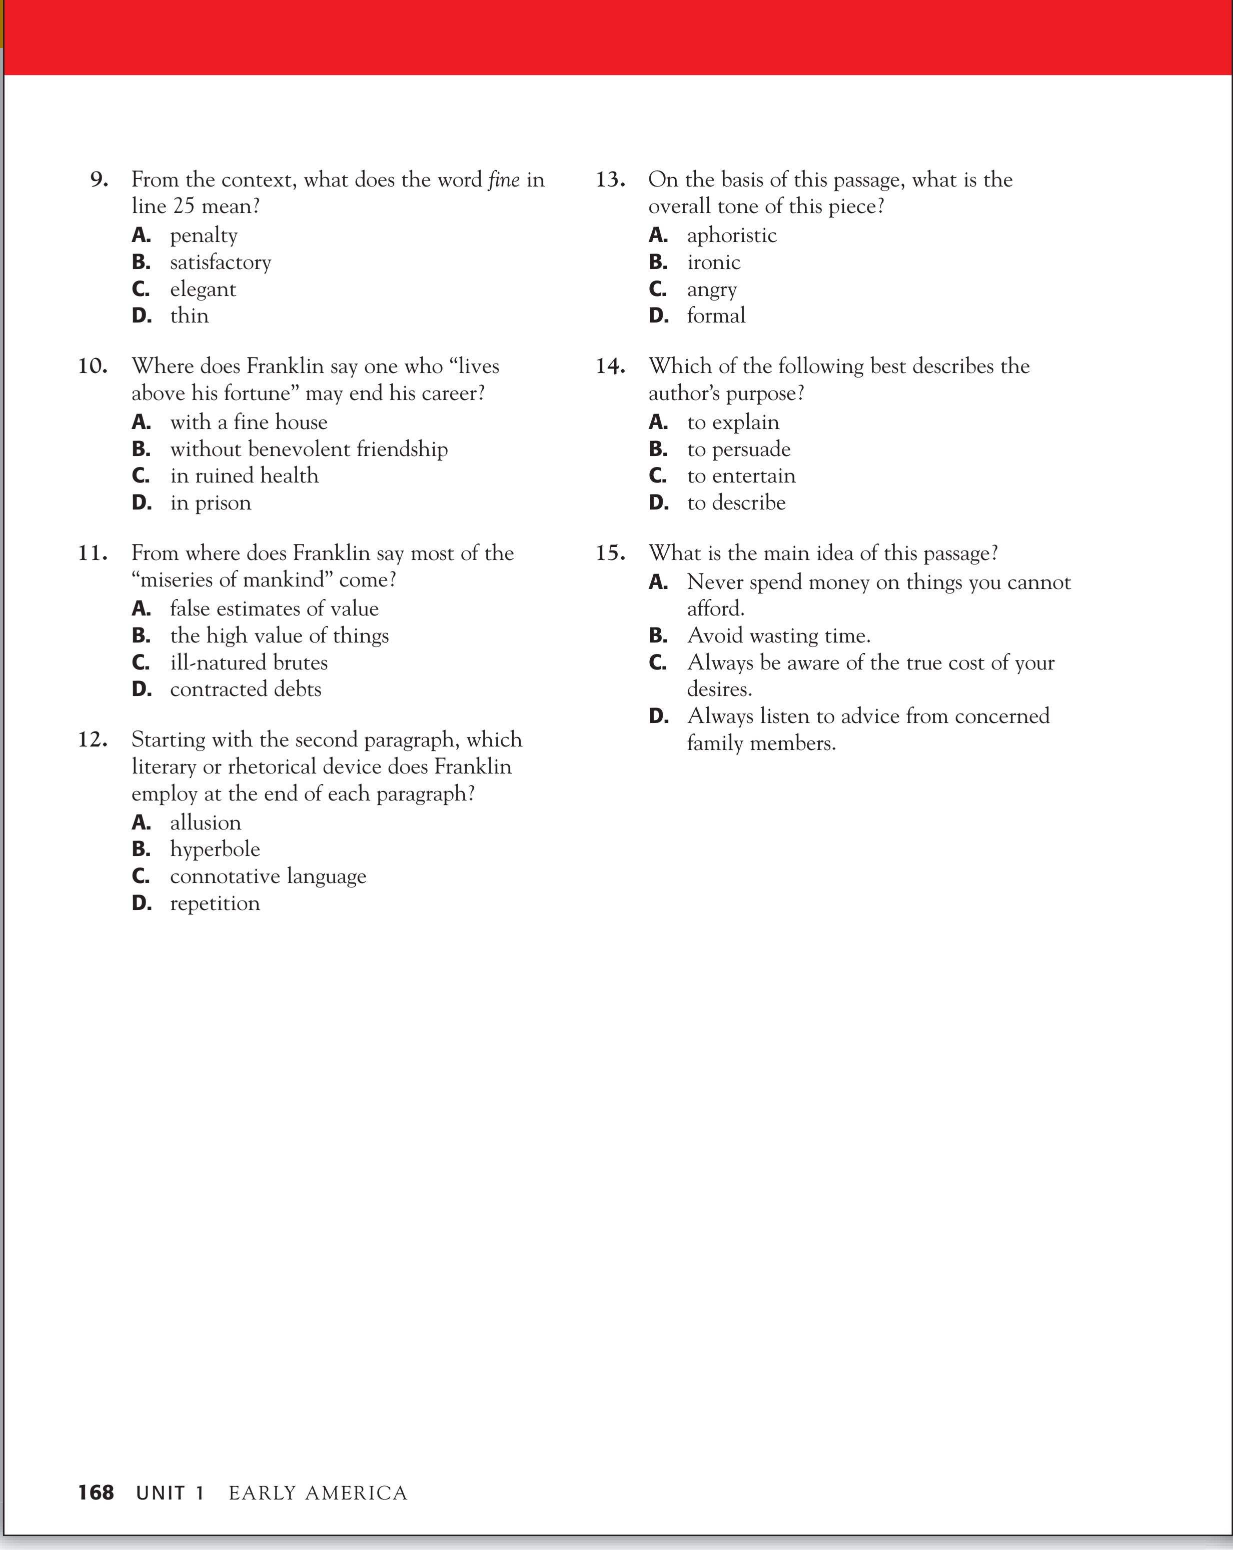
11. A is the correct answer because, in lines 30–31, Franklin says "the false estimates they have made of the value of things" are the cause of mankind's miseries.

12. D is the correct answer because Franklin repeats variations of the expression "gave too much for the whistle."

13. A is the correct answer because Franklin uses an aphorism, or moral, to state a basic principle of life.

14. B is the correct answer because Franklin wants to persuade readers not to falsely value things.

15. C is the correct answer because it restates Franklin's conclusion in lines 30–31.



9. From the context, what does the word fine in line 25 mean?
   - A. penalty
   - B. satisfactory
   - C. elegant
   - D. thin

10. Where does Franklin say one who "lives above his fortune" may end his career?
    - A. with a fine house
    - B. without benevolent friendship
    - C. in ruined health
    - D. in prison

11. From where does Franklin say most of the "miseries of mankind" come?
    - A. false estimates of value
    - B. the high value of things
    - C. ill-natured brutes
    - D. contracted debts

12. Starting with the second paragraph, which literary or rhetorical device does Franklin employ at the end of each paragraph?
    - A. allusion
    - B. hyperbole
    - C. connotative language
    - D. repetition

13. On the basis of this passage, what is the overall tone of this piece?
    - A. aphoristic
    - B. ironic
    - C. angry
    - D. formal

14. Which of the following best describes the author's purpose?
    - A. to explain
    - B. to persuade
    - C. to entertain
    - D. to describe

15. What is the main idea of this passage?
    - A. Never spend money on things you cannot afford.
    - B. Avoid wasting time.
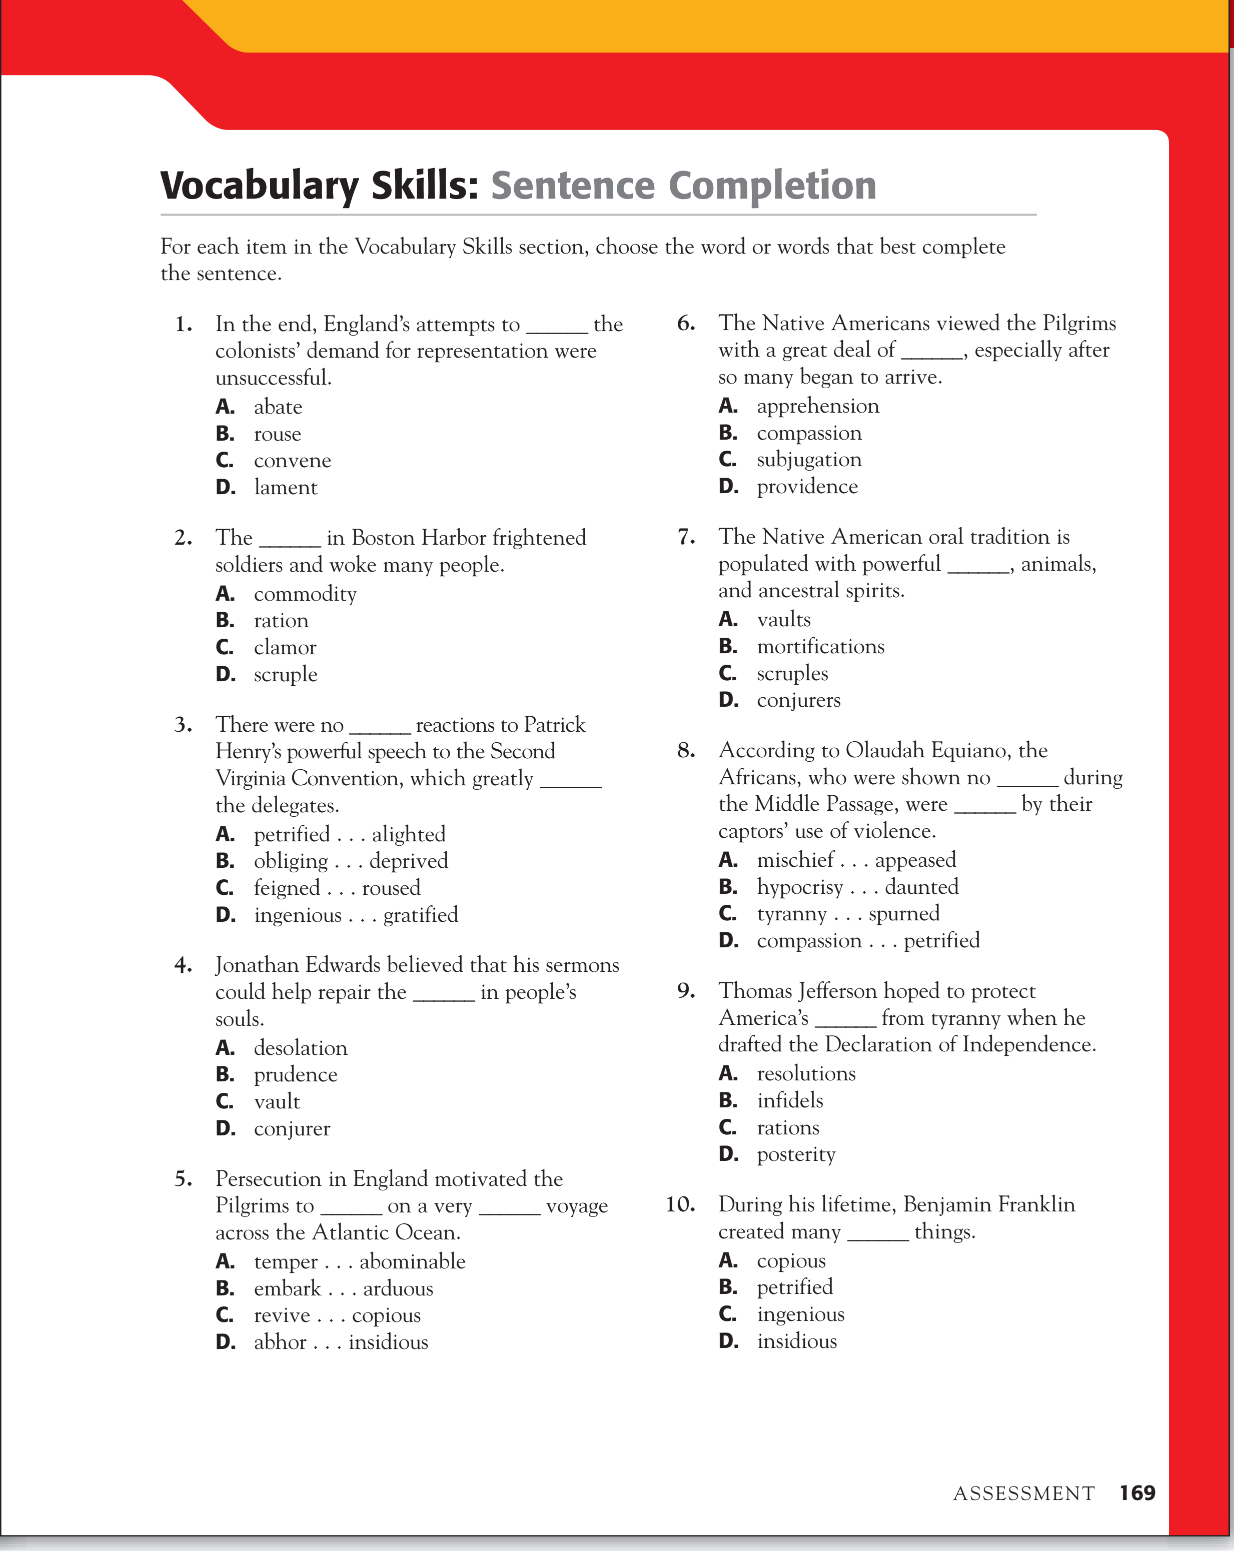
    - C. Always be aware of the true cost of your desires.
    - D. Always listen to advice from concerned family members.

Main Idea and Supporting Details

Tell students that one way to sharpen their reading skills is to focus on the main idea of each paragraph. When taking a test, students may create their own systems to identify main ideas and details—for example, they could draw wavy lines under main ideas and straight lines under details. By focusing on the main ideas, they will be better able to see the underlying organization of the author's thoughts. Have students use magazine or newspaper articles to practice this technique. Have students share their methods with a small group, and then choose and practice a second method learned in the group discussion.



Vocabulary Skills: Sentence Completion

For each item in the Vocabulary Skills section, choose the word or words that best complete the sentence.

1. In the end, England's attempts to ______ the colonists' demand for representation were unsuccessful.
   A. abate
   B. rouse
   C. convene
   D. lament

2. The ______ in Boston Harbor frightened soldiers and woke many people.
   A. commodity
   B. ration
   C. clamor
   D. scruple

3. There were no ______ reactions to Patrick Henry's powerful speech to the Second Virginia Convention, which greatly ______ the delegates.
   A. petrified . . . alighted
   B. obliging . . . deprived
   C. feigned . . . roused
   D. ingenious . . . gratified

4. Jonathan Edwards believed that his sermons could help repair the ______ in people's souls.
   A. desolation
   B. prudence
   C. vault
   D. conjurer

5. Persecution in England motivated the Pilgrims to ______ on a very ______ voyage across the Atlantic Ocean.
   A. temper . . . abominable
   B. embark . . . arduous
   C. revive . . . copious
   D. abhor . . . insidious

6. The Native Americans viewed the Pilgrims with a great deal of ______, especially after so many began to arrive.
   A. apprehension
   B. compassion
   C. subjugation
   D. providence

7. The Native American oral tradition is populated with powerful ______, animals, and ancestral spirits.
   A. vaults
   B. mortifications
   C. scruples
   D. conjurers

8. According to Olaudah Equiano, the Africans, who were shown no ______ during the Middle Passage, were ______ by their captors' use of violence.
   A. mischief . . . appeased
   B. hypocrisy . . . daunted
   C. tyranny . . . spurned
   D. compassion . . . petrified

9. Thomas Jefferson hoped to protect America's ______ from tyranny when he drafted the Declaration of Independence.
   A. resolutions
   B. infidels
   C. rations
   D. posterity

10. During his lifetime, Benjamin Franklin created many ______ things.
    A. copious
    B. petrified
    C. ingenious
    D. insidious

ASSESSMENT 169

Assess

1. A is the correct answer because the English wanted to end the colonists' demand for representation.
2. C is the correct answer because it is the only option that might frighten soldiers and wake people.
3. C is the correct answer because Henry's speech roused the delegates.
4. A is the correct answer because it is the only option that makes sense in this context.
5. B is the correct answer because it is the only option that makes sense in this context.
6. A is the correct answer because the arrival of many Pilgrims would cause the Native Americans to be apprehensive.
7. D is the correct answer because it is the only option that makes sense in this context.
8. D is the correct answer because compassion is the only option that makes sense in the first answer blank.
9. D is the correct answer because Jefferson intended the Declaration of Independence to protect future generations.
10. C is the correct answer because Franklin was a creative inventor.

Approaching Level

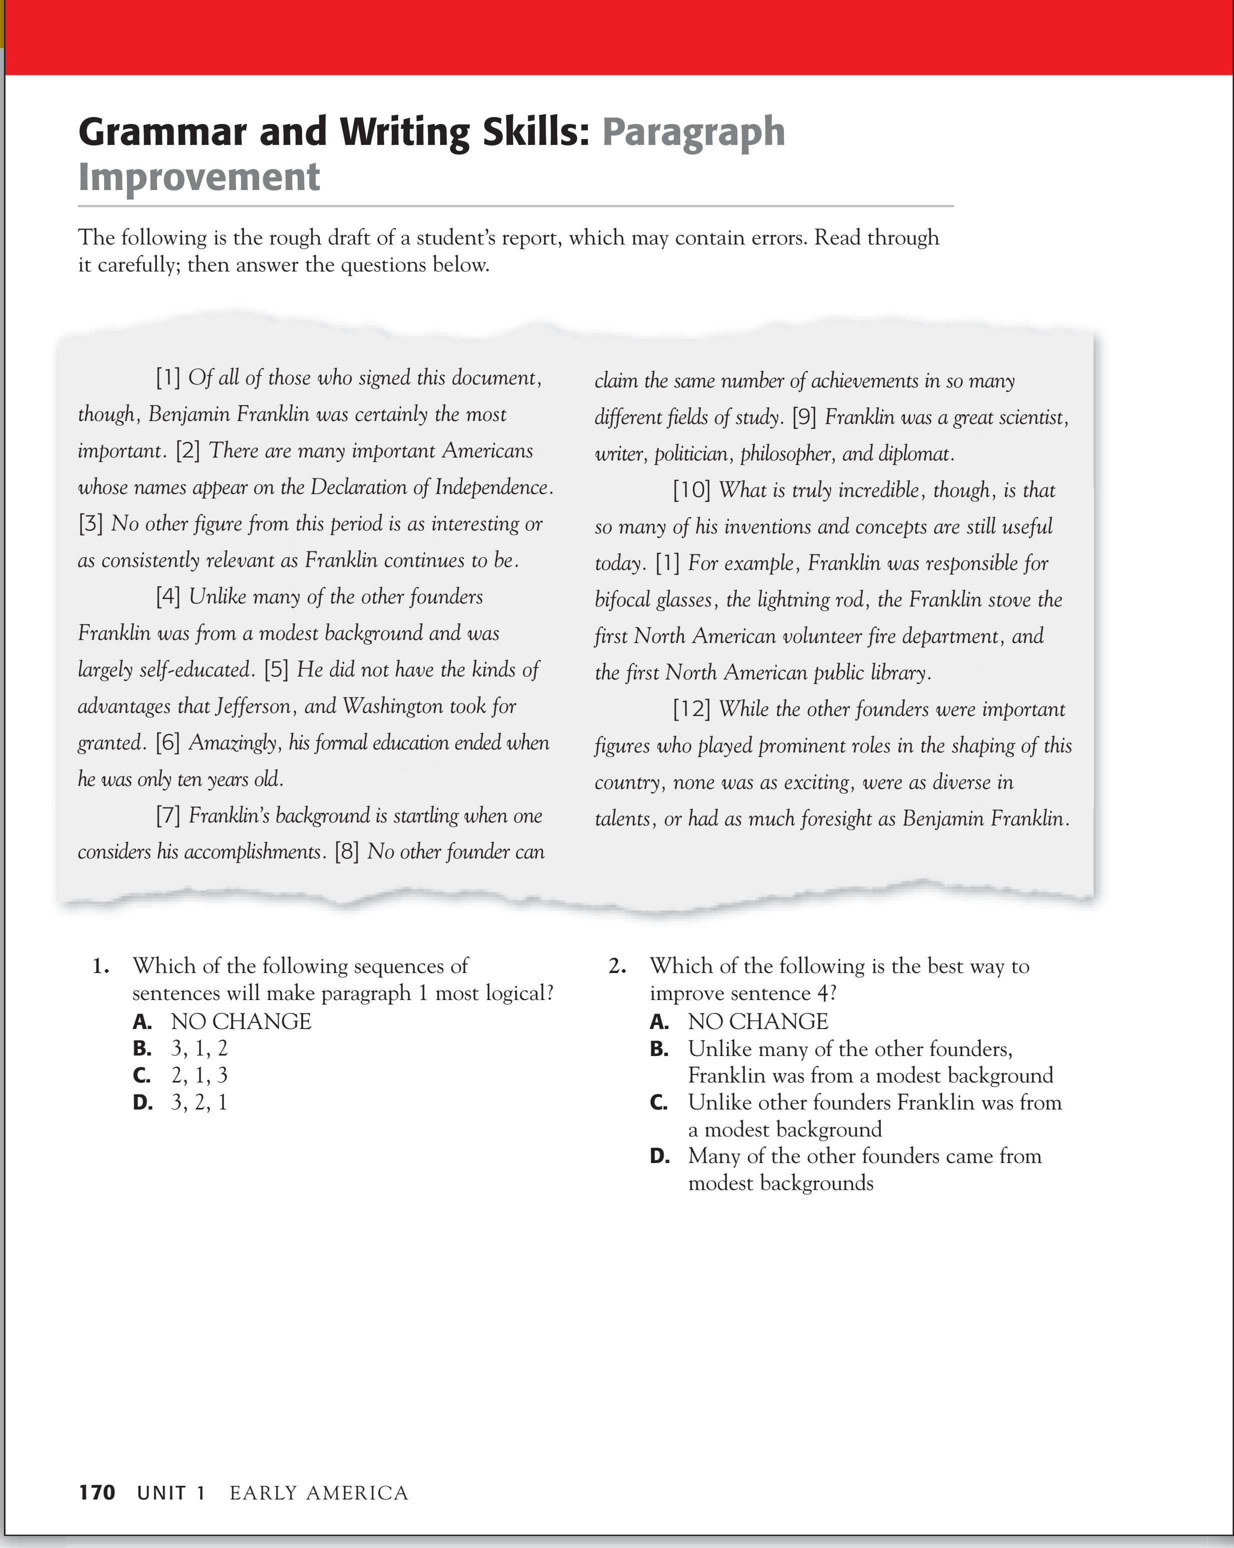
DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging If students struggle with revising paragraphs, tell them to silently read the sentence in question, along with the sentence before and after it. They should ask themselves what sounds or looks incorrect. Then substitute each answer choice, reading it silently, and "listen" to how it sounds. Have students read the questions first and go back to the passage in search of the answer.

Assess

Grammar and Writing

1. C is the correct answer because the second sentence works best as the topic sentence of the paragraph.
2. B is the correct answer because the introductory phrase should be followed by a comma.



Grammar and Writing Skills: Paragraph Improvement

The following is the rough draft of a student's report, which may contain errors. Read through it carefully; then answer the questions below.

[1] Of all of those who signed this document, though, Benjamin Franklin was certainly the most important. [2] There are many important Americans whose names appear on the Declaration of Independence. [3] No other figure from this period is as interesting or as consistently relevant as Franklin continues to be.

[4] Unlike many of the other founders Franklin was from a modest background and was largely self-educated. [5] He did not have the kinds of advantages that Jefferson, and Washington took for granted. [6] Amazingly, his formal education ended when he was only ten years old.

[7] Franklin's background is startling when one considers his accomplishments. [8] No other founder can claim the same number of achievements in so many different fields of study. [9] Franklin was a great scientist, writer, politician, philosopher, and diplomat.

[10] What is truly incredible, though, is that so many of his inventions and concepts are still useful today. [1] For example, Franklin was responsible for bifocal glasses, the lightning rod, the Franklin stove the first North American volunteer fire department, and the first North American public library.

[12] While the other founders were important figures who played prominent roles in the shaping of this country, none was as exciting, were as diverse in talents, or had as much foresight as Benjamin Franklin.

1. Which of the following sequences of sentences will make paragraph 1 most logical?
   - A. NO CHANGE
   - B. 3, 1, 2
   - C. 2, 1, 3
   - D. 3, 2, 1

2. Which of the following is the best way to improve sentence 4?
   - A. NO CHANGE
   - B. Unlike many of the other founders, Franklin was from a modest background
   - C. Unlike other founders Franklin was from a modest background
   - D. Many of the other founders came from modest backgrounds

Rearrange Tell students that paragraph-improvement exercises are like puzzles. Students will have to read the passage more than once to figure out the most logical sequence of sentences and paragraphs. To help students become more comfortable with these exercises, provide practice models students can work on during free time. Take a passage from a book that the class is reading and rearrange the sentences. Have students sequence the sentences in an order that makes sense. Tell students to pay attention to tone and voice as clues to sequence and meaning. Details added to a passage must match the tone and voice of the section to which they are added.

3. Which of the following is the best revision of sentence 5?
   - A. NO CHANGE
   - B. Washington, and Jefferson
   - C. Jefferson and Washington
   - D. Jefferson, Washington

4. Which of the following is the best way to write sentence 9?
   - A. NO CHANGE
   - B. Franklin was a great scientist, writer, politician and philosopher, diplomat.
   - C. Franklin was a great scientist and diplomat.
   - D. Franklin was a scientist and writer and a politician, and philosopher, and diplomat

5. Which of the following sentences, if inserted at the beginning of paragraph 4, would provide the most effective transition?
   - A. Benjamin Franklin was a good inventor.
   - B. Franklin's inventions and scientific findings were groundbreaking in the 1700s.
   - C. There were many things that Franklin knew, even without a strong formal education.
   - D. In the long run, Franklin's formal education wasn't that important.

6. Which of the following is the best revision of the end of sentence 11?
   - A. NO CHANGE
   - B. the Franklin stove the first North American volunteer fire department and the first public library in North America.
   - C. the Franklin stove and the first volunteer fire department and public library.
   - D. the Franklin stove, the first North American volunteer fire department, and the first North American public library.

7. Which of the following is the best way to improve sentence 12?
   - A. NO CHANGE
   - B. was as diverse in talents, or had as much foresight
   - C. is as diverse in talents, or had as much foresight
   - D. that could be as diverse in talents, or have as much insight

8. What could have been added to the last paragraph to make it stronger?
   - A. a summary of the key points
   - B. the introduction of new information
   - C. the introduction of opposing viewpoints
   - D. a visual aid

Questions 9 and 10 ask about the essay as a whole.

9. The writer intends to add a paragraph concerning Franklin's contribution to the Revolutionary War. The most logical place to insert this paragraph is:
   - A. before the third paragraph
   - B. after the last paragraph
   - C. before the second paragraph
   - D. after the third paragraph

10. What information could have been added to this essay to make it more convincing?
    - A. rebuttals of specific arguments against the author's position
    - B. further examples of Franklin's inventions
    - C. a thorough description of everyday life in America during the 1700s
    - D. an account of Franklin's time in Paris

Assess

3. C is the correct answer because a comma is not needed. DOK 1

4. A is the correct answer because the sentence is correct as it stands. DOK 1

5. C is the correct answer because the previous sentence is about the end of Franklin's formal education. DOK 2

6. D is the correct answer because items in a series must be separated by commas. DOK 1

7. B is the correct answer because the singular verb was is consistent with the first verb in the series and agrees with the subject, none. DOK 1

8. A is the correct answer because a summary of key points is an effective way to end the paragraph. DOK 4

9. D is the correct answer because information about Franklin's wartime contributions should directly follow mention of his political and diplomatic roles. DOK 4

10. A is the correct answer because countering arguments that Franklin wasn't the most important signer of the Declaration of Independence would strengthen the writer's position. DOK 4

Essay

Evaluate essays for the following:

- a clear thesis statement fully supported by specific examples and details
- effective voice, word choice, and sentence variety
- effective presentation, with attention to grammar and spelling conventions

DOK 3

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Remind students that they will need a thesis or main idea in order to write a persuasive essay. Model the strategy of creating a thesis or main idea from the essay question. For example, use the following template sentence for the essay question: Benjamin Franklin's view that giving up liberty to gain safety leads to the loss of both ________. Students would fill in their point of view in the blank line or use the template sentence to construct their own thesis. Point out that the thesis includes the important content from the essay question but restates it in the essay writer's own words. Then have students create a brief outline before beginning to write. Review outline techniques and allow students time to outline or make notes prior to writing their essays.

Skills Scope and Sequence

Readability Scores Key: Dale-Chall/DRP/Lexile

PART 1: Individualism, Optimism, and Nature

Selections and Features	Literary Elements
Unit Introduction pp. 172-186	Romanticism SE pp. 178-179 Transcendentalism SE p. 180 Gothic SE p. 184
Essay from Nature, by Ralph Waldo Emerson 8.9/61/960 pp. 188-193	Theme SE p. 189
Essay from Self Reliance, by Ralph Waldo Emerson 10.2/64/1030 pp. 194-197	Figurative Language SE p. 194 Tone (review) SE p. 196
Informational Text TIME: The Biology of Joy, by Michael D. Lemonick 11.9/68/1110 pp. 198-202
Essay from Woman in the Nineteenth Century, by Margaret Fuller 8.2/65/1340 pp. 203-209	Thesis SE p. 204
Literary History The Fireside Poets pp. 210-211	Poetry SE p. 210
Memoir from Walden, by Henry David Thoreau 6.3/58/1260 pp. 212-219	Metaphor SE p. 213
Comparing Literature from Civil Disobedience (essay), by Henry David Thoreau 7.7/63/1110 On the Eve of Historic Dandi March (speech), by Mohandas K. Gandhi 6.8/59/950 from Long Walk to Freedom (autobiography), by Nelson Mandela 6.8/59/950 pp. 220-236	Argument SE p. 221

PART 2: The Dark Side of Romanticism

Literary History American Short Stories pp. 238-239	Short Story SE p. 238
Short Story The Devil and Tom Walker, by Washington Irving 8.4/64/1220 pp. 240-253	Characterization SE p. 241 Archetype (review) SE p. 252

Reading Skills and Strategies	Vocabulary	Writing Grammar	Speaking, Listening, and Viewing
Analyze Graphic Information TE p. 176 Analyze Historical Context SE p. 178 Summarize TE p. 186	Compound Words TE p. 178	Create Graphic Organizers TE pp. 174, 180 Write an Expository Essay TE p. 182, SE p. 186 Commas in Appositives TE p. 184	Analyze Art SE p. 172 Presentation SE p. 186 Diagram SE p. 186
Recognize Author's Purpose SE p. 189 Reread TE p. 192	Word Usage SE p. 193	Write a Description TE p. 190 Write a Journal Entry SE p. 193
Draw Conclusions SE p. 194	Context Clues SE p. 197 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 197	Write a Persuasive Speech SE p. 197	Persuasive Speech SE p. 197
Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships SE p. 198 Preview SE p. 198 Analyze Text Features TE p. 200		Write a Paragraph TE p. 198
Summarize SE p. 204 Analyze Structure TE p. 206	Word Usage SE p. 209	Linking Verbs TE p. 208 Write a Letter SE p. 209	Analyze Art SE p. 205
Analyze Poetic Characteristics SE p. 211		Write a Description TE p. 210	Analyze Art SE p. 210
Connect SE p. 213 Skim and Scan TE p. 216	Context Clues SE p. 219	Write a Comparison-Contrast Essay TE p. 214 Write a Summary TE p. 218	Analyze Art SE p. 216
Compare and Contrast SE p. 220 Evaluate Evidence SE p. 221 Recognize Bias TE p. 232	Negative Prefixes TE p. 226 Antonyms SE p. 228	Transitions TE p. 224 Write a Summary SE p. 228 Write an Expository Essay SE p. 236	Analyze Art SE p. 225 Discussion SE p. 236 Collage SE p. 236
Analyze Fiction SE p. 239		Create a Story Map TE p. 238
Make and Verify Predictions SE p. 241 Visualize TE p. 242	Analogies SE p. 252 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 252	Absolute Phrases TE p. 246 Action Verbs TE p. 250 Write a Summary SE p. 253 Verb Tenses SE p. 253	Analyze Art SE p. 245 Oral Presentation TE p. 248 Discussion SE p. 251

Readability Scores Key: Dale-Chall/DRP/Lexile

PART 2: The Dark Side of Romanticism (continued)

Selections and Features	Literary Elements
Poem The Raven, by Edgar Allan Poe pp. 254-261	Narrative Poem SE p. 255
Short Story The Pit and the Pendulum, by Edgar Allan Poe 9.0/65/1010 pp. 262-276	Suspense SE p. 262 Point of View (review) SE p. 275
Vocabulary Workshop p. 277
Short Story The Minister's Black Veil, by Nathaniel Hawthorne 8.0/66/1240 pp. 278-292	Symbol SE p. 279 Characterization (review) SE p. 291
Grammar Workshop p. 293
Novel from Moby-Dick, by Herman Melville 9.0/67/1150 pp. 294-305	Motivation SE p. 295 Metaphor (review) SE p. 304
Historical Perspective from In the Heart of the Sea, by Nathaniel Philbrick 9.0/67/1150 pp. 306-309
Writing Workshop pp. 310-317
Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshop pp. 318-319
Independent Reading pp. 320-321
Assessment pp. 322-327

Reading Skills and Strategies	Vocabulary	Writing Grammar	Speaking, Listening, and Viewing
Analyze Sound Devices SE p. 255 Classify TE p. 256	Synonyms SE p. 261	Combining Sentences TE p. 260 Write a Summary SE p. 261
Identify Sequence SE p. 262 Evaluate Tone TE p. 272	Context Clues TE p. 264 Word Origins SE p. 275 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 275	Write a Literary Analysis TE p. 266 Write a Description TE p. 268 Dashes TE p. 270 Write an Expository Essay SE p. 276 Apostrophes SE p. 276	Analyze Art SE p. 263 Discussion SE p. 274
	Context Clues SE p. 277
Make Inferences SE p. 279 Analyze Mood TE p. 280	Connotation TE p. 282 Synonyms SE p. 291 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 291	Dangling Participles TE p. 286 Write a Letter TE p. 288 Write an Expository Essay SE p. 292	Analyze Art SE p. 283 Discussion SE p. 290
		Misplaced and Dangling Modifiers SE p. 293
Monitor Comprehension SE p. 295 Preview TE p. 296	Antonyms SE p. 305 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 305	Write a Character Sketch TE p. 298 Write Research Questions TE p. 300	Performance TE p. 302 Oral Report SE p. 305
Analyze Historical Context SE p. 306		Write a Research Report TE p. 308	Analyze Art SE p. 307
		Create an Outline TE p. 312 Prewrite SE p. 313 Draft SE p. 314 Passive Voice TE p. 314 Revise SE p. 316 Adjectives TE p. 316 Write a Reflective Essay SE p. 317
Analyze Cultural Context SE p. 320		Revise SE p. 319 Write an Outline TE p. 319	Reflective Presentation SE p. 319
		Write a Research Report TE p. 320	Collage SE p. 321
		Write a Reflective Essay SE p. 327

Focus

Bellringer Options

Literature Launcher
Pre-Reading Video: Unit 2

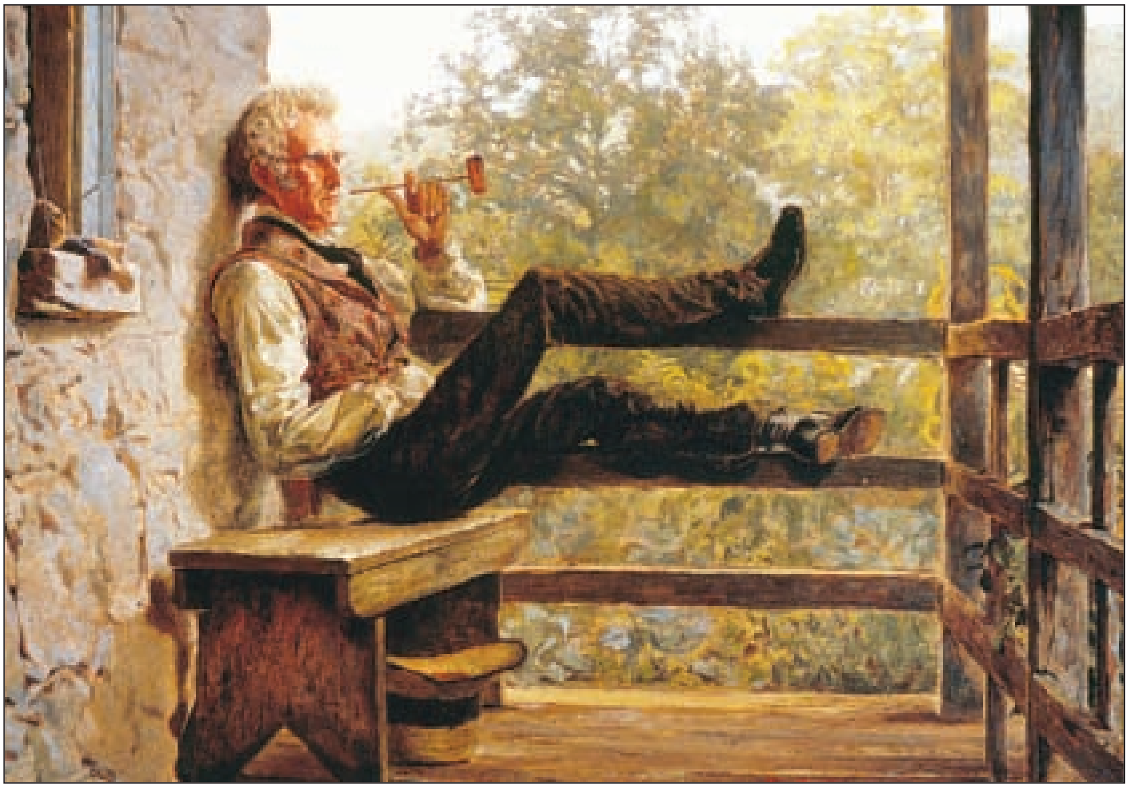
Daily Language Practice
Transparency 19

Or write on the board: Isn't it Romantic?

Say: Identify things—such as events, people, qualities, moods, values, and so on—that are "romantic." (Students may relate to this word's associations with love.) Say: The literary term Romantic refers to the characteristics of a broad cultural movement that began in Europe in the late 1700s and spread to the United States in the 1820s.

For school-to-home activities, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 5–11.

For students who would profit from independent novel study, see Novel Companion pp. 75–118.



Independence (Squire Jack Porter), 1858. Frank Blackwell Mayer. Oil on paperboard, 12 x $15^{7}/_{8}$ in. Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC.

View the Art One definition of squire is "the chief landowner in a district." Why do you think the painter chose Squire Jack Porter to represent independence? ★

Unit Introduction Skills

American Romanticism 1800–1860

Reading Skills
- Analyze Graphic Information (SE pp. 174–177)
- Analyze Cause and Effect (SE p. 181)
- Interpret (SE p. 183; TE p. 182)
- Compare and Contrast (SE p. 185)
- Draw Conclusions (TE p. 176, 178, 180)

Vocabulary Skills
- Compound Words (TE p. 178)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE pp. 172; TE pp. 173, 177, 181, 183, 185)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write an Essay (SE p. 186)
- Graphic Organizers (TE p. 174)
- Interpret Literature (TE p. 182)
- Commas in Appositives (TE p. 184)

UNIT TWO

AMERICAN ROMANTICISM

1800–1860

Looking Ahead

Powerful forces marked the period that produced the first great American literature. The arrival of the European cultural movement known as Romanticism strongly influenced many American writers of this time. These writers also responded to social forces, including an outburst of reform movements, the spread of industry, and the increasing sectional strife that would soon bring the Civil War.

Keep the following questions in mind as you read:

- How do you think the big ideas that shaped this period continue to affect American culture today?
- Which of the writers of this period reflect the positive side of Romanticism? Which reflect its dark side?
- In what ways does the Romantic period seem better than the contemporary American period? In what ways does it seem worse?

Unit Resources

Print Materials

- Unit 2 Teaching Resources, pp. 1–216
- Interactive Read and Write (On Level, Approaching, EL), pp. 45–98
- Novel Companion, pp. 75–118
- Bellringer Option Transparencies: Selection Focus 16–19; Daily Language Practice 19–29
- Assessment Resources, Selection Assessment, pp. 97–120

Technology

- TeacherWorks Plus CD
- StudentWorks Plus CD
- Literature Launchers: Pre-Reading Videos DVD, Unit 2
- Literature Online
- Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM
- Listening Library CD-ROM
- ExamView CD-ROM
- Skill Level Up! CD-ROM

UNIT TWO

Focus

Summary

This introduction begins with an overview of the political, social, and cultural history of the United States from 1800 to 1860. It focuses on the effects of the Industrial Revolution, the growth of sectional strife that would lead to the Civil War, the social reform movements that began with the Second Great Awakening, and the major features of American Romanticism: optimism and individualism, the idealization of nature, and the darkness of the Gothic imagination.

View the Art ★

Answer: A squire is a country gentleman, a person of some wealth and importance. Squire Jack Porter seems completely at ease here. He represents an American who is proud of the land he owns and has the time to sit and admire it.

The American painter Frank Blackwell Mayer (1827–1899) is well known for his realistic scenes of everyday life. His subject was seventy-five years old when Mayer painted him. Porter had been a captain in the War of 1812.

For diagnostic and end-of-unit assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 9–16, 333–334.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Use the Timeline Help students read the timeline.

- Explain that this unit covers the era from the territorial expansion of the Louisiana Purchase to the eve of the U.S. Civil War.
- Have students find a United States or world event that they know.

Ask: How might that event have affected writers? (The Underground Railroad, for example, might have inspired someone to write about slavery.)

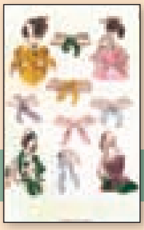
Language History ☆

Rise of American English

Noah Webster (1758–1843) was inspired to write his American Dictionary of the English Language to help standardize and simplify spelling. (For example, he replaced the English spelling honour with honor.) He also added new words, such as skunk and squash, from Native American languages.

TIMELINE 1800–1860

Godey's Lady's Book ▼



AMERICAN LITERATURE 1

1800

1800
Library of Congress founded

1805
Red Jacket, a Seneca chief, gives a speech defending Native American beliefs

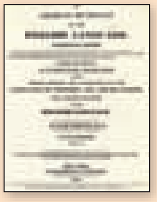
Chief Red Jacket ▶

1810

1819
The Sketch Book by Washington Irving (which includes tales such as "Rip Van Winkle")

1820

1828
Noah Webster's first dictionary of American English ☆ ▼



1830

1831
Ralph Waldo Emerson resigns from the ministry

1836
Transcendental Club founded

1837
Sarah Josepha Hale is made editor of Godey's Lady's Book; it becomes one of the most influential literary magazines of the century

UNITED STATES EVENTS

1800

1803
United States buys Louisiana Territory from France, more than doubling the size of the U.S.

2

1807
Robert Fulton builds the Clermont, the first successful steamboat

1810

1812–1815
United States and Great Britain fight War of 1812

1814
Francis Scott Key writes "The Star-Spangled Banner"

1815
Victory over British at New Orleans makes Andrew Jackson a national hero

1820

1820
Missouri Compromise preserves balance of slave and free states

1825
Erie Canal opens, linking Atlantic Ocean and Great Lakes

1828
Andrew Jackson elected president

1830

1831
Cyrus H. McCormick invents the mechanical reaper

1833
The American Anti-Slavery Society is founded in Philadelphia; by 1838 there are 250,000 members

1838
Cherokees are driven west along the Trail of Tears

WORLD EVENTS

1800

1804
Napoleon crowned emperor of France

1805
Reign of Muhammad Ali begins in Egypt

1810

1810
Miguel Hidalgo begins revolution in Mexico

1815
Napoleon defeated at the Battle of Waterloo

1820

1821
Mexico declares independence from Spain

1825
World's first railway line opens in England

1829
Greece wins independence from Turkey

1830

1837
Victoria crowned queen of Great Britain ▼

Literature Online

Literature and Reading To explore the Interactive Timeline, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Writing Practice

Create Graphic Organizers Explain that a timeline is one kind of chart that presents a sequence of events. Another kind of diagram that serves this function is a flowchart. Flowcharts can help students organize material in preparation for writing assignments. To construct a flowchart, arrange events in order. Then draw arrows to show how one event flows into another.

Have students create flowcharts that correctly sequence the following events from the timeline:

- Thoreau writes novel about living alone at Walden Pond (3)
- Transcendental Club founded (1)
- Transcendentalists establish Brook Farm (2)

THE NORTH STAR.

◀ Masthead from the North Star newspaper

1840 1850

1840
Tales of the Grotesque and Arabesque by Edgar Allan Poe

1841
Social reformers establish Brook Farm, an experiment in communal living

1841
Essays by Ralph Waldo Emerson

1845
The Raven and Other Poems by Edgar Allan Poe

1845
Woman in the Nineteenth Century, an early work of feminism, by Margaret Fuller

1847
Frederick Douglass begins publishing the North Star, an abolitionist newspaper

1850
The Scarlet Letter by Nathaniel Hawthorne

1851
Moby-Dick by Herman Melville

1852
Uncle Tom's Cabin by Harriet Beecher Stowe ☆

1854
Walden by Henry David Thoreau

1855
The Song of Hiawatha by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

1855
Leaves of Grass by Walt Whitman

1840 1850

1844
Samuel Morse demonstrates the first telegraph by sending a message from Washington, D.C., to Baltimore

Gold pan and nuggets ▼

1846–1848
Mexican-American War fought; Mexico cedes territory in Southwest to United States

1848
First women's rights convention held in Seneca Falls, New York

1849
California gold rush begins

1850
Fugitive Slave Act, forcing return of escaped slaves to their owners, inflames sectional conflict

1857
In Dred Scott case, Supreme Court rules that slaves and former slaves are not U.S. citizens

1859
Antislavery activist John Brown is hanged for raiding federal arsenal at Harpers Ferry, Virginia

1840 1850

▲ The Irish Famine, 1850. George Frederick Watts. Oil on canvas. Watts Gallery, Compton, Surrey, UK.

1845
Potato famine begins in Ireland, leading to mass immigration to America

1848
Revolutions sweep Europe; Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels publish the Communist Manifesto

1850
Taiping Rebellion begins in China

▲

1859
Charles Darwin publishes his theory of evolution

Reading Check

Analyzing Graphic Information What relationship can you see between the events in U.S. history in 1815 and 1828 as they are related to the career of Andrew Jackson?

Teach

Reading Check

Answer: In 1815, Jackson became a war hero. People often vote for someone who has shown leadership in crisis and courage in battle. Many people had heard of Jackson, so he was a popular choice for president in the 1828 election.

Reading Strategy 2

Make Inferences Ask: What historical events can you find that might make a writer long to return to a simpler way of life in which he is closer to nature? (Inventions that change the way people do things—steamboat, mechanical reaper, telegraph—quicken the pace of life and can lead to stress. Warfare could make people long for a peaceful life.)

Literary History ☆

Uncle Tom's Cabin The controversy produced by Harriet Beecher Stowe's best-selling antislavery novel contributed to one of the main conflicts leading to the Civil War. Stowe wrote her novel in response to the passing of the Fugitive Slave Act of 1850.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Explain to students that information in the timeline will help them understand how literature connects to the political and social events of the time. Ask: What events in the United States might connect to Henry David Thoreau's choice to live in solitude and to write Walden, the book that describes his life in the woods and his thoughts on nature? (The many industrial and technological advances, such as the mechanical reaper and the telegraph, may have caused Thoreau to long for a quieter, more natural life.) What event in the United States might be related to Margaret Fuller's essay Woman in the Nineteenth Century? (the women's rights convention held in 1848) What events in the United States might have prompted Harriet Beecher Stowe to write Uncle Tom's Cabin? (the Missouri Compromise in 1820, the founding of the American Anti-Slavery Society in 1833, and the Fugitive Slave Act in 1850)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Draw Conclusions Ask: If you compare immigration from 1841 to 1860 with immigration during the twenty years before that, by what factor did immigration increase? (By more than 5) Point out the Voter Participation chart. Ask: What conclusions can you draw from the rise in voter participation in 1840? (Perhaps people felt that the outcome of the election would affect them personally. Perhaps the election campaign was exciting and the candidates were appealing.)

Political History ☆

Log Cabin Election The U.S. presidential election of 1840 was between incumbent Martin Van Buren and William Henry Harrison, a military hero. In their "Log Cabin and Hard Cider" campaign, Harrison and his running mate, John Tyler, presented themselves as common folk—like those who lived in log cabins and drank hard cider. Harrison and Tyler won the election.

BY THE NUMBERS

1

URBAN AND RURAL POPULATIONS IN THE UNITED STATES, 1810–1870

Source Historical Statistics of the United States: Colonial Times to 1970

Purchasing Power

In 1851, a male textile worker earned $6.50 a week, a shoemaker or printer between $4 and $6 a week, and an unskilled laborer about $1 a week. Only a small group of skilled workers were able to make at least $10.38 per week, the amount reformer Horace Greeley calculated that a family of five needed to make ends meet (see list below).

Weekly Needs
Flour	.63
Sugar	.32
Butter	.63
Milk	.14
Butcher's meat	$1.40
Potatoes	.50
Tea and coffee	.25
Candles and oil	.14
Fuel	.40
Sundries	.40
Household articles	.25
Bedding	.20
Rent	$3.00
Wearing apparel	$2.00
Newspapers	.12
TOTAL	$10.38

BIG CITIES OF 1830

City	Population
New York	200,000
Baltimore	80,000
Philadelphia	80,000
Boston	60,000

IMMIGRATION

- Between 1821 and 1840, 751,000 immigrants entered the United States.
- Between 1841 and 1860, more than 4 million immigrants came to the U.S. (most from Great Britain, Ireland, and Germany).

EDUCATION

- In 1850, 64.9 percent of white children and 31.3 percent of African American children attended school.
- In 1860, more than half of the 321 high schools in the U.S. were in Massachusetts, New York, and Ohio.

RAILROAD

In 1833, there were 380 miles of rails in the United States. By 1860, there were more than 30,000 miles of rails in the United States.

FACTORIES

In 1840, U.S. factories and mills produced goods valued at less than $500 million. In 1850, they produced goods valued at more than $1 billion.

VOTER PARTICIPATION, 1824–1840 ☆

Source Historical Statistics of the United States: Colonial Times to 1970

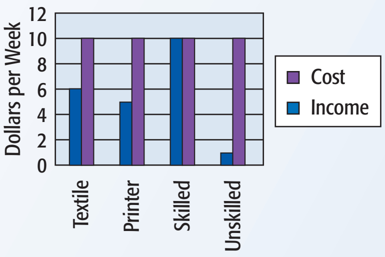
Reading Practice

Use a Graph Have students read "Purchasing Power" and create a graph that summarizes the information in that paragraph. Discuss the difference between incomes and the cost of living. Point out that most people did not have enough income to support a family of five. Then have students create a bar graph showing the levels of income of the four types of workers mentioned versus Greeley's cost of living in 1851. (Students' bar graphs should resemble the example.)

Purchasing Power



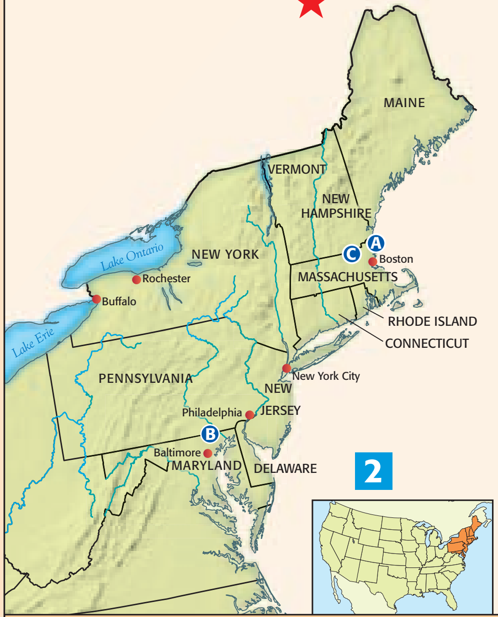
BEING THERE

The major American writers of the period 1800–1860 lived in the northeastern United States, roughly the area from Maryland to New England. These images provide a glimpse of this area.

A Boston as the Eagle and the Wild Goose See It, 1860, James Wallace Black. Photograph. This photo of Boston is the first aerial photograph taken in the United States. ★

B Market Street, Baltimore, 1850. Unknown artist. Colored lithograph. Enoch Pratt Free Library, Baltimore MD. Painting of downtown Baltimore. ★

C Brook Farm, 1844. Josiah Wolcott. Oil on panel. Massachusetts Historical Society, Boston, MA. Painting of a Transcendentalist community outside Boston. ★



2

Literature Online

Literature and Reading For more about the history and literature of this period, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Reading Check

Analyzing Graphic Information

1. In which presidential election year during this period did voter participation increase the most from the previous one?
2. How many more U.S. citizens lived in rural areas than in urban areas in 1850?
3. What large cities are located on the map? Judging by the images, how were the cities of the period like and unlike big U.S. cities today?

Teach

Reading Check

Answers:

1. Voter participation increased most from 1824 to 1828.
2. Approximately 16 million
3. Six cities are shown on the map. The pictures show buildings close together, but no skyscrapers.

Reading Strategy 2

Use Maps Point out that the large map shows the part of the United States where the writers in this unit lived.

Ask: What does the small locator map indicate? (It shows the portion of the continental United States occupied by the area of the larger map.)

View the Art ★

A. Black took his photograph from a balloon tethered over Boston.

B. The Baltimore Museum and Gallery of Fine Arts is pictured on the right.

C. Wolcott's painting of Brook Farm shows the entrance to the community.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning After students have read the information on this spread, ask: In 1830, what was the largest city in the United States? (New York) In what states were most of the high schools located in 1860? (New York, Massachusetts, and Ohio)

Intermediate Have students orally identify information presented on these two pages. What information is shown in the bar graph on the left page? (The number of people voting from 1824 to 1840) What portion of the United States is shown on the map on this page? (The Northeast)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Draw Conclusions Have students read "The Industrial Revolution" subsection.

Ask: Which workers' jobs have disappeared or radically changed since the 1750s? Why? (Workers whose jobs have disappeared or changed include blacksmiths, weavers, shoemakers, and wagon builders. Machines have changed the way people work.)

Reading Strategy 2

Connect Say: Social issues are often reflected in works of fiction. Ask: What social issues are reflected in books, movies, and TV programs today? (Students may list issues that include crime, unemployment, abuse, substance addiction, and poverty.)

Learning Objectives

For pages 178–186

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study:
Analyzing literary periods.
Analyzing literary genres.
Evaluating historical influences.
Connecting to the literature.

AMERICAN ROMANTICISM

1800–1860

Historical, Social, and Cultural Forces

The Industrial Revolution

1 In the mid-1700s, a huge economic change known as the Industrial Revolution began in Britain. Manufacturing shifted from skilled workers using hand tools to unskilled laborers tending large, complex machines. Factories, some housing hundreds of machines and workers, replaced home-based workshops. Manufacturers sold their goods nationwide or abroad instead of just locally.

In the 1840s, railroads reduced the travel time from New York to Boston from a week (by stagecoach) to less than 12 hours.

The Industrial Revolution soon spread to the United States, where it caused tremendous economic growth and transformed American society. Hundreds of new factories were built. The Boston Manufacturing Company, for example, employed thousands of women and children, who worked for lower wages than men and in often dangerous conditions. An expanding network of roads and canals united different sections of the country. Two new inventions—the steamboat and the railroad—revolutionized transportation. 1

The Industrial Revolution brought economic growth, but it also helped divide Americans into two nations. The North had large cities and an economy based on manufacturing. The South had few large cities and a farming economy dominated by a single crop—cotton. Much of this cotton was grown on large plantations worked by slaves. In time, these divisions would bring the Civil War.

The Age of Reform

In the 1820s, idealistic Americans produced an outburst of reform movements. Many of these reformers were inspired by the Second Great Awakening, a major religious movement that reached its peak in the 1820s and 1830s. During the Age of Reform, Americans banded together in dozens of organizations to end slavery, stop drunkenness, secure women's rights, provide better care for the mentally ill, and improve prisons. 2

Vocabulary Practice

Compound Words Remind students that a compound word is made up of two or more words put together. Readers can increase their understanding of familiar words by examining the meaning of the separate parts.

Examples in the introduction include steamboat, railroad, and nationwide.

Give students practice by asking them to define these compound words: smokescreen, newspaper, gingerbread, nightfall, daybreak, horseshoe, basketball, playground.

Roots of Romanticism

Optimism and Individualism

Romanticism was a movement in art and thought that dominated Europe and the United States throughout much of the 1800s. Romantic writers valued imagination and feeling over intellect and reason. Some celebrated individualism and freedom; they believed in the basic goodness and equality of human beings and in their right to govern themselves. Others took a more pessimistic view of human life. Overall, Romanticism reflected a division between a "bright" and a "dark" vision of the world.

Kinship with Nature

Another attitude that the Romantics shared was a belief in the importance of nature. In the 1700s, many European thinkers had believed that nature was merely a wilderness to be tamed. In opposition to this view, the Romantics celebrated the beauty, power, and wonder of the natural world. They also stressed the value of nature as a spiritual and moral guide for humanity. The Romantics' reverence for nature also caused them to fear the destructive effects of industry.

> "A man should learn to detect and watch that gleam of light which flashes across his mind from within."
>
> —Ralph Waldo Emerson

The Power of Darkness

Many Romantics were drawn to the nonrational side of human nature, such as the emotions, imagination, intuition—even evil and insanity. They were also fascinated by remote periods of history and exotic places. These interests came together in Gothic literature—literature with a brooding atmosphere that emphasizes the unknown and inspires fear. Gothic novels typically feature wild ☆ and remote settings, such as haunted castles or wind-blasted moors, and their plots involve violent or mysterious events. 3

PREVIEW Big Ideas of American Romanticism

1 Optimism and Individualism

Optimism is the belief that the world around us is always improving. Some American Romantics presented an optimistic view of the possibility of human progress, based in part on a democratic confidence in the ability of ordinary individuals to better themselves, their political system, and society.

See pages 180–181.

2 Kinship with Nature

Many American Romantics believed in the beneficial effects of a close link between humanity and nature. This belief coexisted with a concern that the spread of industry and new technology threatened the natural world and isolated people from it.

See pages 182–183.

3 The Power of Darkness

There was a dark underside to American Romanticism. It took a variety of forms, including a fascination with disease, madness, death, evil, the supernatural, and the destructive aspects of nature.

See pages 184–185.

Teach

Literary Element 3

Romanticism Ask: What were the values of the Romantic writers? (Imagination, feeling, individuality, freedom, human goodness, equality, self-government, and the importance of nature)

Ask: What characterized the dark side of Romanticism? (The supernatural, nature's destructiveness, evil, insanity, remote periods in history, and exotic places)

Literary History ☆

American Gothic Gothic fiction by British writers became wildly popular in the United States in the 1790s. American writers followed the trend. Charles Brockden Brown's Wieland, or The Transformation, published in 1798, took the familiar elements of European Gothic fiction—strange buildings, mysterious deaths, unearthly voices, and madness—and transferred them to an American setting.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Intermediate To help students understand the paragraph "Optimism and Individualism," ask them to list the words and phrases that describe the attitudes Romantic writers shared. Ask students to work in small groups to restate or give examples to show they understand the meanings of imagination, feeling, individualism, freedom, basic goodness, equality of human beings, and right to govern themselves.

For the paragraph "Kinship with Nature," have students clarify the meanings of nature, wilderness, tamed, celebrated, spiritual, humanity, and reverence.

Lastly, for the paragraph "The Power of Darkness," have students determine the meanings of nonrational, emotions, imagination, intuition, exotic, brooding, and Gothic.

Have students look up unfamiliar terms in a dictionary. Have groups share their findings with each other.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Draw Conclusions Ask: How might a rise in the power of common people change literary history? (More power might lead to greater literacy and wealth, which could both expand the reading public and increase demands for certain types of writing, such as works of entertainment or self-help books.)

Writer's Technique ☆

Emerson's Informal Style

During much of his career, Emerson spread his ideas by giving public lectures. In writing his essays, Emerson often drew on the notes he used as a lecturer. When he spoke, Emerson often reshuffled the pages of his manuscript, reading from different sections as ideas struck him. The literary style of Emerson's essays retains something of this spontaneous, improvised quality.

Big Idea 1

Optimism and Individualism

Each of us has ambitions and plans, hopes and dreams. Our beliefs affect how we feel about what we can achieve as individuals and citizens. Optimists believe they can reach their goals in life. Ralph Waldo Emerson (see pages 188–197) was a lifelong optimist. He also celebrated the individual, proclaiming that by being true to their innermost selves, people could accomplish great things.

1 Rise of the Common People

Beginning in the 1820s, the American belief in the power of the ordinary citizen had a huge impact on both political and social life. Changes in voting laws expanded the electorate to include nearly all white males. In 1828, these voters elected frontiersman Andrew Jackson as president, marking the arrival of the common people in American politics. Americans of this period also became involved in a broad range of reform movements. These ordinary citizens formed associations, raised money, wrote pamphlets, held rallies, gave speeches, and worked to pass laws designed to improve American society.

> "All that Adam had, all that Caesar could, you have and can do."
>
> —Ralph Waldo Emerson

Transcendentalism

In the 1830s, the influence of Romanticism began to be felt in the United States. One result was Transcendentalism, a loosely organized movement that embodied the ideas of thinkers who were active in New England in the 1830s and 1840s. Emerson was a leading figure in this group, which began as an informal discussion club. Among those who participated in the talks at the Transcendental Club were Margaret Fuller, Henry David Thoreau, and Nathaniel Hawthorne.

The essence of Transcendentalism was the philosophy known as Idealism. For Idealists, such as the German philosopher Immanuel Kant, reality is not "out there" in material objects but instead exists in our ideas about those objects. The Transcendentalists believed that intuition is a more valuable guide than sensory experience in grasping what nature really is.

Emerson's Outlook

Emerson's optimism convinced him that the universe existed for humanity's benefit. He told people that they simply needed to look within themselves to awaken a sense of wonder and recover their oneness with the universe: "Every spirit builds itself a house, and beyond its house a world, and beyond its world a heaven. Know then that the world exists for you." He believed that ordinary human beings had limitless potential. His avid reading of mystical Hindu philosophy influenced his conviction that humans are divine because they share in the Over-soul, Emerson's name for the spirit that pervades the universe. Emerson summed up his ideas by saying that he had really taught only one thing, that every person was infinite.

Emerson's Essays ☆

Emerson is best known for his essays, such as "Self-Reliance." Essays can range from serious, formal analyses to light, personal reflections. Although Emerson's essays are formal, they are not tightly unified around a single topic. Instead, he presented his thoughts in a loosely organized series of striking sentences. "The maker of a sentence," he observed, "launches out into the infinite."

Study Skills Practice

Organize Ideas To help students keep track of the ideas presented on this page, have them make a concept map for each major heading. An example follows.

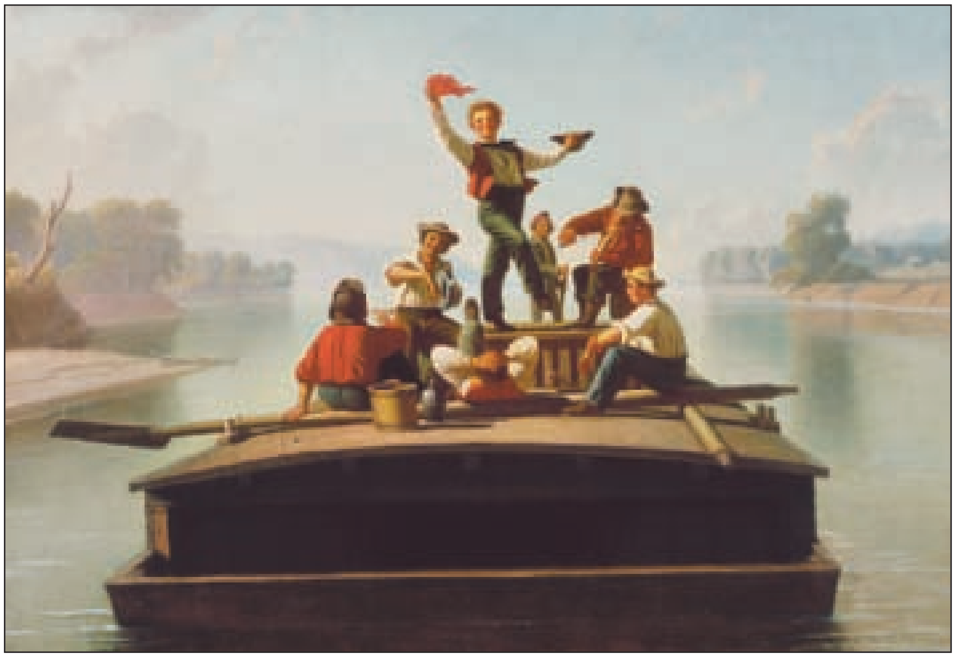
Main Idea: Transcendentalism

Supporting Detail
- Transcendental Club members:
  Margaret Fuller
  Henry David Thoreau
  Nathaniel Hawthorne

Supporting Detail
- Ralph Waldo Emerson, a leading figure

Supporting Detail
- Philosophy of Idealism: Reality exists in our ideas about objects.

Supporting Detail
- Intuition is better than sensory experience for grasping reality.



The Jolly Flatboatmen, 1877–78. George Caleb Bingham. Oil on canvas, $26\frac{1}{16}$ x $36\frac{3}{8}$ in. Daniel J. Terra Acquisition Endowment Fund, 1992. Terra Foundation for American Art, Chicago, IL. ★

from Self-Reliance by Ralph Waldo Emerson

Our houses are built with foreign taste; our shelves are garnished with foreign ornaments; our opinions, our tastes, our faculties, lean, and follow the Past and the Distant. The soul created the arts wherever they have flourished. It was in his own mind that the artist sought his model. It was an application of his own thought to the thing to be done and the conditions to be observed. And why need we copy the Doric or the Gothic model? Beauty, convenience, grandeur of thought, and quaint expression are as near to us as to any, and if the American artist will study with hope and love the precise thing to be done by him, considering the climate, the soil, the length of the day, the wants of the people, the habit and form of the government, he will create a house in which all these will find themselves fitted, and taste and sentiment will be satisfied also.

Insist on yourself; never imitate. 2

Reading Check

Analyzing Cause and Effect Why would Emerson's optimism have made him a reformer?

Teach

Reading Check

Answer: He would have believed that the world could be made a better place through reform.

Literary Element 2

Aphorism Say: An aphorism is a short, pointed statement that expresses a wise or clever observation about human experience. Emerson's writing is full of aphoristic statements. Identify observations in this passage that might stand alone as aphorisms. ("The soul created the arts wherever they have flourished." "Insist on yourself; never imitate.") What do these statements say about life and the human experience? (Students may say that these statements encourage people to be individuals and not imitators.)

View the Art ★

George Caleb Bingham (1811–1879) grew up along the Missouri River. Today he is best known for his paintings of frontier life.

Ask: Why might pioneers such as these flatboatmen tend to be optimistic? (People with the self-confidence needed to face the challenges of settling a frontier would probably possess optimism.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Point out the main heads, subheads, displayed quotation, and the excerpt on pages 180-181. Ask: Without reading the text, what information do the subheadings give about Emerson? (He was a transcendentalist.) How can you tell that the text on this page is an excerpt from an Emerson essay? (Emerson's name and the title of the essay are above the excerpt.)

Established Explain to students that Emerson is asking readers to rely on their own experience. Ask them to make two lists from the excerpt: (1) words that promote self-reliance (2) words that promote dependence on foreign influences.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Connect Ask: What do you feel should be the human response to nature? Does nature exist primarily for our use, or do we have the responsibility to preserve the natural world? Have students give examples from what they have read so far to support their answers.

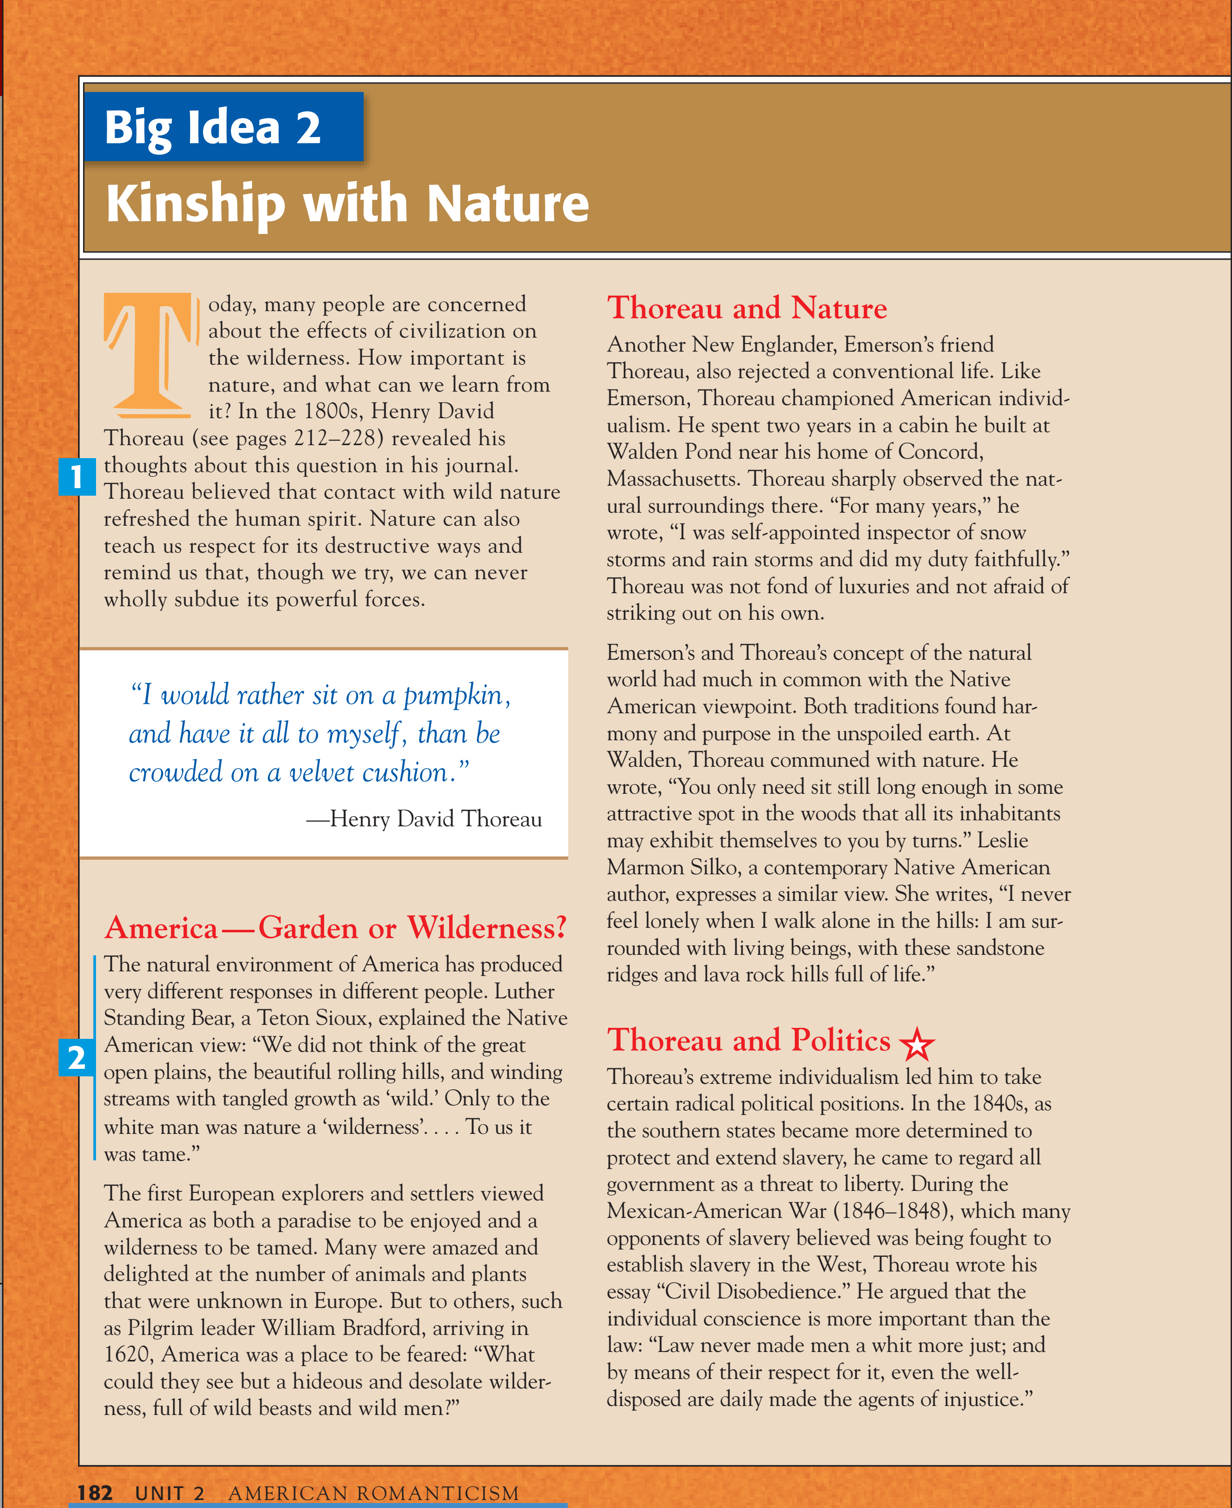
Reading Strategy 2

Evaluate Discuss with students the comment in paragraph 2 by Luther Standing Bear. Ask them how much they think that the attitude he attributed to white people has contributed to today's environmental problems. Ask students to give specific examples to support their opinions about Luther Standing Bear's comment.

Literary History ☆

The Influence of Thoreau

Thoreau is one of the most influential and admired of American writers. His nature writing has made him a hero to the modern environmental movement. Thoreau's political writings, particularly his essay "Civil Disobedience," helped shape the nonviolent civil rights campaigns of both the Indian nationalist Mohandas K. Gandhi and Martin Luther King Jr.



Big Idea 2

Kinship with Nature

1 Today, many people are concerned about the effects of civilization on the wilderness. How important is nature, and what can we learn from it? In the 1800s, Henry David Thoreau (see pages 212–228) revealed his thoughts about this question in his journal. Thoreau believed that contact with wild nature refreshed the human spirit. Nature can also teach us respect for its destructive ways and remind us that, though we try, we can never wholly subdue its powerful forces.

> "I would rather sit on a pumpkin, and have it all to myself, than be crowded on a velvet cushion."
>
> —Henry David Thoreau

America—Garden or Wilderness?

2 The natural environment of America has produced very different responses in different people. Luther Standing Bear, a Teton Sioux, explained the Native American view: "We did not think of the great open plains, the beautiful rolling hills, and winding streams with tangled growth as 'wild.' Only to the white man was nature a 'wilderness'. . . . To us it was tame."

The first European explorers and settlers viewed America as both a paradise to be enjoyed and a wilderness to be tamed. Many were amazed and delighted at the number of animals and plants that were unknown in Europe. But to others, such as Pilgrim leader William Bradford, arriving in 1620, America was a place to be feared: "What could they see but a hideous and desolate wilderness, full of wild beasts and wild men?"

Thoreau and Nature

Another New Englander, Emerson's friend Thoreau, also rejected a conventional life. Like Emerson, Thoreau championed American individualism. He spent two years in a cabin he built at Walden Pond near his home of Concord, Massachusetts. Thoreau sharply observed the natural surroundings there. "For many years," he wrote, "I was self-appointed inspector of snow storms and rain storms and did my duty faithfully." Thoreau was not fond of luxuries and not afraid of striking out on his own.

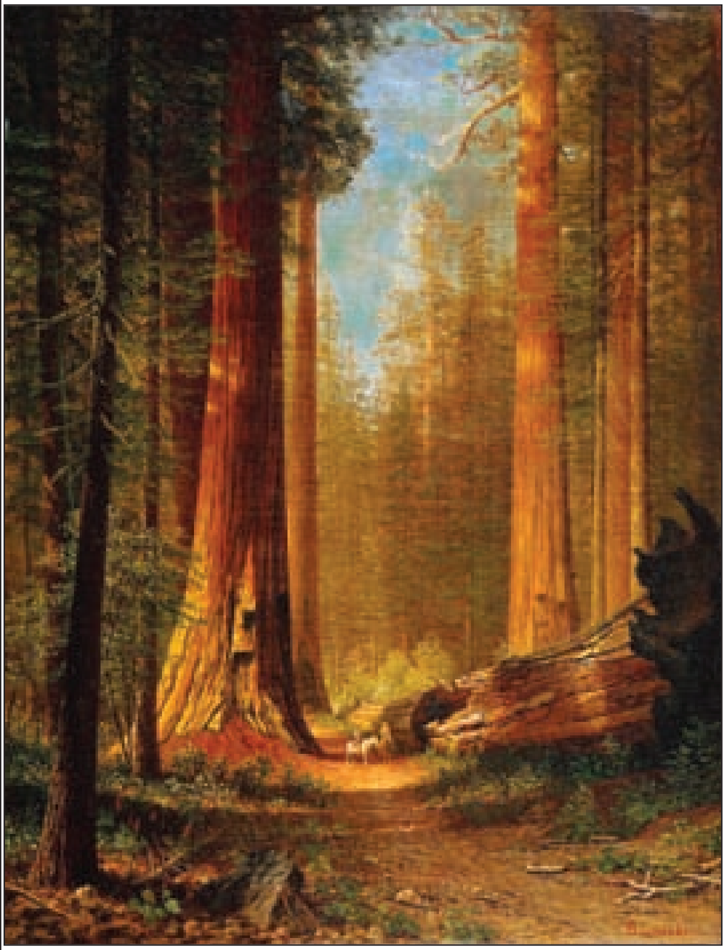
Emerson's and Thoreau's concept of the natural world had much in common with the Native American viewpoint. Both traditions found harmony and purpose in the unspoiled earth. At Walden, Thoreau communed with nature. He wrote, "You only need sit still long enough in some attractive spot in the woods that all its inhabitants may exhibit themselves to you by turns." Leslie Marmon Silko, a contemporary Native American author, expresses a similar view. She writes, "I never feel lonely when I walk alone in the hills: I am surrounded with living beings, with these sandstone ridges and lava rock hills full of life."

Thoreau and Politics ☆

Thoreau's extreme individualism led him to take certain radical political positions. In the 1840s, as the southern states became more determined to protect and extend slavery, he came to regard all government as a threat to liberty. During the Mexican-American War (1846–1848), which many opponents of slavery believed was being fought to establish slavery in the West, Thoreau wrote his essay "Civil Disobedience." He argued that the individual conscience is more important than the law: "Law never made men a whit more just; and by means of their respect for it, even the well-disposed are daily made the agents of injustice."

Writing Practice

Interpret Literature Remind students that studying literature is not just reading stories; it is also confronting and interpreting powerful, thought-provoking ideas. Ask students to think about the highlighted Thoreau quote. Ask them to make some notes about possible interpretations of Thoreau's statement. Then tell them to write a two-paragraph explanatory essay. The first paragraph should offer an interpretation of Thoreau's words, and the second paragraph should explain what this quote tells them about the man.



Cathedral Forest, Albert Bierstadt. Private collection.

Thoreau's Journals

Many of Thoreau's writings, including Walden, are based on his journal entries. Thoreau kept a journal from the time he was twenty and reshaped and revised it throughout his life. When he died at forty-four, the journal ran to 7,000 manuscript pages containing nearly two million words.

Thoreau's journal provides insights into the extraordinary richness of his mind. In one entry, he observed, "My Journal is that of me which would else spill over and run to waste, gleanings from the field which in action I reap."

from The Journal

by Henry David Thoreau

March 5. [1858] . . . We would fain know something more about these animals and stones and trees around us. We are ready to skin the animals alive to come at them. Our scientific names contain a very partial information only. It does not occur to me that there are other names for most of these objects, given by a people who stood between me and them, who had better senses than our race. . . . No science does more than arrange what knowledge we have of any class of objects. But, generally speaking, how much more conversant was the Indian with any wild animal or plant than we are, and in his language is implied all that intimacy, as much as ours is expressed in our language. How many words in his language about moose, or birch bark, and the like! The Indian stood nearer to wild nature than we. The wildest and noblest quadrupeds, even the largest fresh-water fishes, some of the wildest and noblest birds and fairest flowers have actually receded as we advanced, and we have but the most distant knowledge of them. A rumor has come down to us that the skin of a lion was seen and his roar heard here by an early settler. But there was a race here that slept on his skin. It was a new light when my guide gave me Indian names for things for which I had only scientific ones before. In proportion as I understood the language, I saw them from a new point of view. 3

Reading Check

Interpreting How did Thoreau's individualism affect his attitude toward nature and politics?

Teach

Reading Check

Answer: He wanted to live in harmony with nature, with as much freedom as possible. He felt government could threaten people's freedom.

Literary Element 3

Style Ask: How would you describe the style of this passage from Thoreau's journal? (Informal, passionate)

View the Art

Albert Bierstadt (1830–1902) traveled west with a government expedition and began to paint the dramatic landscapes of the American wilderness for which he is best known.

Ask: What sense of the human presence in nature is expressed by Bierstadt's painting? (Human beings seem dwarfed by the magnificence of nature.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Point out the quotation in the box on the previous page, and ask students to write a similar statement about themselves. Tell them to begin with the words "I would rather." When students have written their sentences, have them read their statements orally to the class.

Intermediate Preteach the words fain, conversant, and quadrupeds from Thoreau's journal excerpt. Fain means "gladly or willingly." Conversant means "familiar." Urge students to try to determine the meaning of quadruped by studying the parts of the word. If necessary, have a student look up the word's meaning in a dictionary and read it aloud. Then read the journal entry aloud and have different students look up unfamiliar words. Discuss their meanings as a class.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Connect As students read "The Power of Darkness," discuss how political, religious, and social ideals of the time period influenced writers. Ask: Which category of evils mentioned here—the known or the unknown—seems more fearful to you?

Reading Strategy 2

Question Urge students to ask questions as they read. As an example, point to this quotation from Poe and tell students that questions to clarify meaning might include these:

- Which kinds of terrors did Poe link to Germany?
- What does "terror of the soul" mean?

Discuss with students the answers to these and other questions about Poe's quotation on this page and the excerpt on the following page.

Big Idea 3

The Power of Darkness

1 Our experience of life and the world has a dark side. We fear the evils we know—poverty, violence, disease, madness, death—and are troubled by nameless terrors that might lurk in the shadows beyond our knowledge. Not all the important American writers of Emerson's time shared his optimism. Nathaniel Hawthorne (see pages 278–292) admired Emerson but thought him unrealistic. To Herman Melville (see pages 294–305), Emerson's optimism was "nonsense" that ignored the "disagreeable facts" of life.

Hawthorne and Melville ☆

Almost all of Hawthorne's fiction is based on stories of the past, particularly the history and legends of his Puritan ancestors in New England. In Puritan New England, he found a strange, stark world that provided a richly textured background for the explorations of the nature of good and evil in his fiction. Hawthorne's friend Melville first gained a literary reputation for romantic tales of adventure in the South Seas. In succeeding books, he used his sea stories to explore the mystery of the evil that he saw in both human life and the forces of nature. In Melville's masterpiece, Moby-Dick, Ahab, the crazed captain of a whaling ship, sees evil personified in a huge white whale.

Gothic Horror

The dark side of European Romanticism can be seen in the tradition of Gothic literature. A classic example from nineteenth-century England is Mary Shelley's Frankenstein, a novel about a monster that destroys its creator. The American Romantics also recognized the power of darkness. Gothic horror relies chiefly on atmosphere, or mood, to achieve its effects. Writers create an atmosphere of horror through plot, characters, and settings that most people find chilling. Plots often focus on mysterious happenings, tragic events, and hideous outcomes. Characters are often mad, half-mad, or frightened to death. They may exhibit strange behavior and physical traits. Settings are dark and often contain decayed dwellings with shadowy passageways, haunting sounds, and damp rooms.

Poe and the Terror of the Soul

A European tradition of Gothic literature existed long before Edgar Allan Poe (see pages 254–275), but he was the first American master of this type of horror. In his poems and stories, Poe often bettered earlier Gothic writers in achieving spine-tingling effects. Most of his stories and poems deal with loss and sorrow, ruin and revenge, disease and death. Poe's literary works reflected his own troubles and fears, but many readers responded favorably to his subject matter and to the mood of his works, thus confronting their own fears. Emerson and the Transcendentalists believed that humans are inherently good. By contrast, Poe seems to have had an instinctive feel for the dark impulses of human nature. Poe observed, "The terror of which I write is not of Germany [the setting of much Gothic fiction], but of the soul." He expressed this spiritual terror in haunting literary works. 2

Poe's Short Stories

Poe was a master of the short story. In addition to writing many Gothic tales of terror, he invented a new type of short fiction, the detective story. His first detective story, "The Murders in the Rue Morgue," combines Gothic horror with solid reasoning by Poe's fictional detective, Dupin.

Poe's stories illustrate his idea that any artistic composition should have a single, unique effect. This effect is evident in the gloomy, ominous beginning of his short story "The Fall of the House of Usher," guaranteed to make the reader long for sunshine or the comfort of his or her own room.

Writer's Technique ☆

Hawthorne's Notebooks

Throughout his career, Hawthorne recorded ideas for stories in notebooks—for example,

- "A physician for the cure of moral diseases."
- "A person who has all the qualities of a friend, except that he invariably fails you at the pinch."

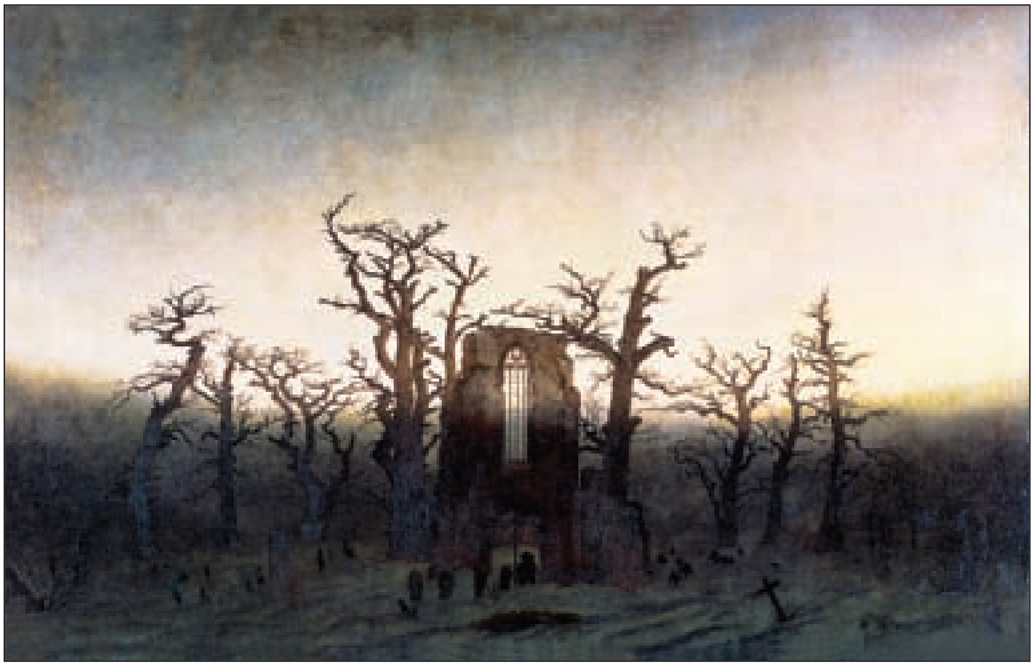
Grammar Practice

Commas in Appositives Have students notice the use of commas to set off explanatory information:

- "In Melville's masterpiece, Moby-Dick, Ahab, the crazed captain of a whaling ship, sees all evil embodied in a huge white whale."

Ask students to use commas to set off the appositives in these sentences:

1. One important writer of Emerson's time Nathaniel Hawthorne did not share his optimism.
2. Hawthorne wrote about the early colonists in New England the region where he lived.



Abbey in an Oak Forest, 1810. Caspar David Friedrich. Oil on canvas. Nationalgalerie, Staatliche Museen zu Berlin, Berlin. ★

from The Fall of the House of Usher by Edgar Allan Poe

During the whole of a dull, dark, and soundless day in the autumn of the year, when the clouds hung oppressively low in the heavens, I had been passing alone, on horseback, through a singularly dreary tract of country; and at length found myself, as the shades of the evening drew on, within view of the melancholy House of Usher. I know not how it was—but, with the first glimpse of the building, a sense of insufferable gloom pervaded my spirit. I say insufferable; for the feeling was unrelieved by any of that half-pleasurable, because poetic, sentiment, with which the mind usually receives even the sternest natural images of the desolate or terrible. I looked upon the scene before me—upon the mere house, and the simple landscape features of the domain—upon the bleak walls—upon the vacant eye-like windows—upon a few rank sedges—and upon a few white trunks of decayed trees—with an utter depression of soul . . . 3

Reading Check

Comparing and Contrasting In what sense were Poe and Emerson both Romantics (see pages 180–181)? How did their Romanticism differ?

Teach

Reading Check

Answer: Both Emerson and Poe valued imagination and feeling. Both were individualists, but Poe wrote of the dark side of Romanticism. He was neither an optimist nor a reformer.

Literary Element 3

Setting Poe often used details of time and place to create a gloomy or threatening mood in his stories. Say: Find specific details in this passage that Poe uses to develop the setting of his story. (These details include "dull, dark, and soundless day," "clouds hung oppressively low," "dreary tract of country," "bleak walls," "rank sedges," and "decayed trees.") Ask: What mood and tone does Poe create through the use of these details of setting? (The mood is melancholy or sad, and the tone is frightened.)

View the Art ★

Caspar David Friedrich (1774–1840) was a painter of the Romantic movement in Germany. Ruins, cemeteries, and solitary figures are the subjects of many of his works.

Ask: What words describe the mood of this painting? (Students might use words such as somber, ominous, eerie, weird, gloomy.)

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Tone Say: A writer's tone is his or her attitude toward the subject and the audience. Writers establish tone through the words they choose, the point of view they use, and the level of formality they employ. The tone of a piece of literature can be angry, hesitant, friendly, regretful, fearful, or many other attitudes. What do you think is Poe's tone in the excerpt on this page? (Fearful or hesitant)

To give students practice establishing tone in their writing, ask them to write a few paragraphs describing a place. Tell students to choose vivid and fresh words that convey whatever tone they choose. Have students read their paragraphs aloud and ask the rest of the class to identify the tone of the work.

Assess/Close

Legacy of the Period

Refer students to Abraham Lincoln's words, "the last, best hope of earth." Ask: Does the United States still have a responsibility to serve as a model community for the rest of the world?

Cultural and Literary Links

Suggest that as students read the unit, they look for ways in which its authors have influenced today's writers.

Connect to Today

1. Speaking/Listening Each member of the group might concentrate on one of the four categories suggested.
2. Visual Literacy As an alternative, students can make a "color meter" showing degrees of brightness and darkness in Romanticism, with a movable arrow.
3. Writing Students' comparisons should provide concrete examples from both time periods to support their point of view.

FOLDABLES Study Organizer

4. Have students make and label the Three-Pocket Foldable. Then have them write notes about the Big Ideas on note cards to insert in the pockets of their Foldables.

WRAP-UP

Legacy of the Period

Some characteristics of American Romanticism—optimism, individualism, and the impulse to reform—had shaped American experience from the time of the first explorers and settlers. The colonists saw their experiment as a model for the rest of the world to imitate. This sense of the United States as a nation with a reforming mission—what Abraham Lincoln described as "the last, best hope of earth"—continues today.

The Romantic view of human kinship with nature has had a limited influence on American culture. Americans have typically viewed the land as something to be "tamed." However, the modern environmental movement is an important legacy of Romanticism, together with the nature writing of authors such as Gary Snyder, N. Scott Momaday, John McPhee, and Annie Dillard.

Cultural and Literary Links

- The essays of Ralph Waldo Emerson (1801–1882) had a great influence on Walt Whitman (1819–1892), who later said, "I was simmering, simmering, simmering. Emerson brought me to a boil."
- The writings of Henry David Thoreau (1817–1862) are among the basic texts of the American environmental movement. John Muir, founder of the Sierra Club (1892), shared the basic outlook that Thoreau expressed: "In wildness lies the preservation of the world."
- As a pioneer of detective, horror, and science fiction writing, Edgar Allan Poe (1809–1849) has had a huge impact on popular culture worldwide.

Literature Online

Unit Resources For additional skills practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Connect to Today

Choose one of the following activities to explore and develop as you read this unit.

1. Speaking/Listening Working with several other students, create a brief presentation for your class about how one of this period's big ideas affects American culture today. You can use examples from literature, fine art, music, movies, or other kinds of expression.
2. Build Visual Literacy Create an illustrated diagram showing the bright and dark sides of Romanticism. For example, you might present your diagram in the form of a color spectrum on which you position cultural ideas and values, works of art, and writers associated with Romanticism's two aspects.
3. Writing Taking into account the political, social, economic, and cultural characteristics of this period, do you think the United States was a better place to live in then or now? Write a brief essay exploring this question.
4. Take Notes Use this graphic organizer to keep track of the three big ideas in this unit. File note cards and other information in each pocket.

FOLDABLES Study Organizer THREE-POCKET BOOK

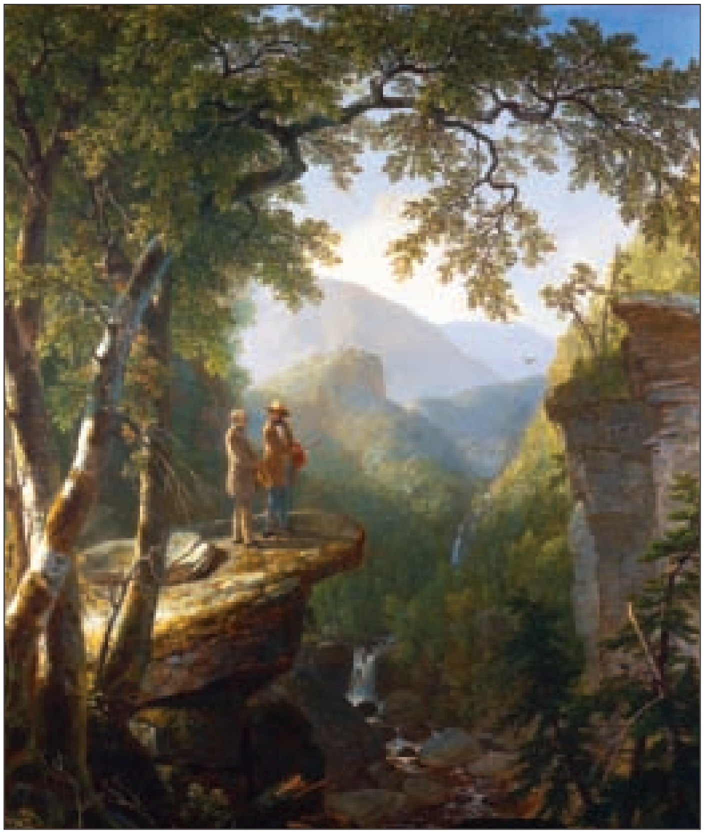
Reading Practice

Summarize Have students write a summary of the information about Romanticism. Provide these tips:

- Identify the main ideas and supporting details.
- Relate the main ideas and the essential details in a logical sequence.
- Use your own words.

PART 1

Individualism and Nature



Kindred Spirits, 1849. Asher Durand. Oil on canvas. The New York Public Library, NY.

View the Art Asher Durand's painting captures an imagined moment in the friendship of American painter Thomas Cole and American poet William Cullen Bryant. What does Durand suggest about the relationship between, nature, art, and literature? ★

"We see the world piece by piece, as the sun, the moon, the animal, the tree; but the whole, of which these are the shining parts, is the soul." 1

—Emerson, "The Over-Soul"

Analyze and Extend

Reading Strategy 1

Evaluate Direct students to read the quotation by Emerson. Explain that the Over-Soul was a Transcendentalist concept referring to a universal mind that unified the entire cosmos. Emerson described the Over-Soul as "the universal beauty to which every part and particle is equally related."

Say: Explain Emerson's quotation in your own words. (Emerson says that most people see the world in its small parts, yet all of these parts fit together in unity to create the whole, which is what he calls the Over-Soul.)

For additional support for English Learners, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 19.

View the Art ★

Answer: The natural world with all of its beauty is an appropriate subject for both art and literature.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Read the quotation from "The Over-Soul" aloud to students. Have each student take a turn reading the quotation aloud. Ask: What do you think Emerson means by "the world"? (He is referring to both the physical and spiritual parts of the universe.)

Intermediate Some students may be unfamiliar with the early American history. Explain that in the 1800s much of the country was still unexplored. Ask: Based on the painting, how do you think America in the 1800s was different? (Less populated, connected to nature)

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 20

Tell students that peace and solitude were important ideas to Emerson. He believed that peace and solitude were best found in nature.

Ask: Do you think that people can find solitude in the city as well as in nature? As they read, have students consider how their answers compare with Emerson's views of how people find peace and solitude.

Before You Read

from Nature, from Self-Reliance

Meet Ralph Waldo Emerson
(1803–1882)

Ralph Waldo Emerson was the central figure of American Romanticism. His ideas about the individual, claims about the divine, and attacks on society were revolutionary.

Emerson's father was a Unitarian minister and his mother a devout Anglican. When Emerson was only eight years old, his father died, and Mrs. Emerson was forced to open a boardinghouse. At the age of 14, Emerson entered Harvard College. After graduation, he studied at Harvard Divinity School. By 1829, Emerson had been ordained a Unitarian minister and was preaching in Boston's Second Church.

In 1831 Ellen Tucker, Emerson's wife, died suddenly. Emerson had already been questioning his religious convictions, and after Ellen's death, he experienced intense grief that further eroded his faith. Eventually, Emerson left the church to embark on a career as a writer.

A Controversial Career In 1833 Emerson settled in Concord, Massachusetts, and began writing Nature. This slim book was to become one of Emerson's most influential works. Two years later, Emerson married Lydia Jackson, whom he called "Lidian." Emerson and Lydia had four children.

During the late 1830s, Emerson gained fame for his lectures—notably "The American Scholar" and "The Divinity School Address." These speeches, delivered at Harvard, rejected organized religion and undue reverence for the past. Harvard's conservative administration was outraged. As a result, he was not invited to speak at the college for the next 30 years.

While Emerson's ideas enraged some, they excited many others and helped create the transcendentalist movement, of which Emerson was the spokesperson. Optimism, self-reliance, intuition, and idealism formed the core of transcendentalist thought. Idealism is a philosophy that maintains the belief that reality is created by the mind.

Challenges to Optimism Emerson's own optimism was challenged when his son Waldo died of scarlet fever in 1842. Two years later, Emerson's essay "The Tragic" appeared in The Dial, a transcendentalist magazine he had co-founded. In this essay, Emerson claimed that the arts and the intellect can "ravish us into a region whereinto these passionate clouds of sorrow cannot rise."

After 1870, his memory began to fail and the quality of his essays diminished. He stayed in Concord and wrote little in his last years; he died of pneumonia at the age of 79.

Emerson influenced writers as diverse as essayist Henry David Thoreau (page 212), novelist Louisa May Alcott, and poets Robert Frost (page 714), Wallace Stevens (page 699), and Hart Crane. Emerson was a radical individualist, and his impact on American thought can still be felt today. As modern critic Harold Bloom wrote, ". . . no single sage, not Dr. Johnson nor Coleridge, is as inescapable as Emerson goes on being for American poets and storytellers."

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Ralph Waldo Emerson, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Selection Skills

from Nature

Literary Elements
- Theme (SE pp. 189, 192, 193

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE p. 190)

Reading Skills
- Recognize Author's Purpose (SE pp. 189, 191, 193)
- Rereading (TE p. 192)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Usage (SE p. 193)
- Synonyms (TE p. 189)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Journal Entry (SE p. 193)
- Describe a Scene (TE p. 190)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Essay

How do you interact with nature in your daily life? How does your mood affect the way you see the world? Discuss these questions with a partner.

Build Background

The Romantics tended to emphasize two aspects of nature—beauty and power. The darker Romantics, such as the Melville of Moby-Dick, stressed nature's destructive power. Although Emerson was sensitive to the power of the untamed American wilderness, he chose to dwell on the beauty of nature.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Kinship with Nature

As you read this selection from Nature, ask yourself, How does Emerson link nature to optimism and individualism?

Literary Element Theme

Theme is the central message of a work of literature that readers can apply to life. As you read, ask yourself, What is the central theme of Emerson's essay?

Reading Strategy Recognize Author's Purpose

The author's purpose is the author's intent in writing a piece of literature. Authors typically write to persuade, to inform, to explain, to entertain, or to describe. While reading, ask yourself, What is Emerson's purpose in writing this essay?

Tip: Ask Questions It might be useful as you read to ask yourself questions such as the following:

- What is the thesis or main idea statement?
- How do the details support the thesis statement?
- What are Emerson's special concerns? Does he show any biases or prejudices? If so, what are they?

Learning Objectives

For pages 188–197

In studying these texts, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing theme.

Reading: Recognizing author's purpose.

Writing: Writing a journal entry.

Vocabulary

perpetual (pər pech´ o͞o əl) adj. lasting forever; eternal; p. 191 The leaders had hoped to create a perpetual union of states.

integrate (in´ tə grāt´) v. to bring all parts together into a whole; p. 191 Can we integrate some new members into the community?

perennial (pə ren´ ē əl) adj. continuing year after year; enduring; p. 192 Art is a perennial joy.

blithe (blīth) adj. lighthearted and carefree; p. 192 He was blithe in the company of his grandchildren.

occult (ə kult´) adj. beyond human understanding; mysterious; p. 192 The old doctor was interested in strange, occult research.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Emerson makes an argument for solitude in communion with nature as a way to achieve inner peace. According to Emerson, nature will never fail to nourish and strengthen us if we contemplate it from the perspective of a child whose inner and physical senses are attuned to the natural world.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 20–25.

Vocabulary

Use Synonyms Synonyms have similar meanings and are the same part of speech. Ask students to write sentences using each adjective in the vocabulary list and one of its synonyms to describe a person, place, thing, or feeling.

APPROACHING For students having difficulty explain that because synonyms have the same meaning, they are often used to define each other. For example, the word eternal is a synonym of perpetual and it is also used in the definition.

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 28.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Read "Connect to the Essay" aloud. Ask: What do you predict the theme of this selection will be? (Students might say the theme is that each person has a unique relationship with nature.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Remind students that the theme is a literary work's central message, which readers may be able to apply to their lives. Ask: Based on the title, what do you think this selection will be about? (Emerson will share his thoughts about nature.)

Teach

View the Art ★

Answer: Yes; Cole's depiction of himself painting a landscape suggests that he believed in the importance of observing nature closely, as did Emerson.

Thomas Cole (1801–1848) was one of the leading American landscape painters of the nineteenth century. His works emphasize nature's untamed beauty.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

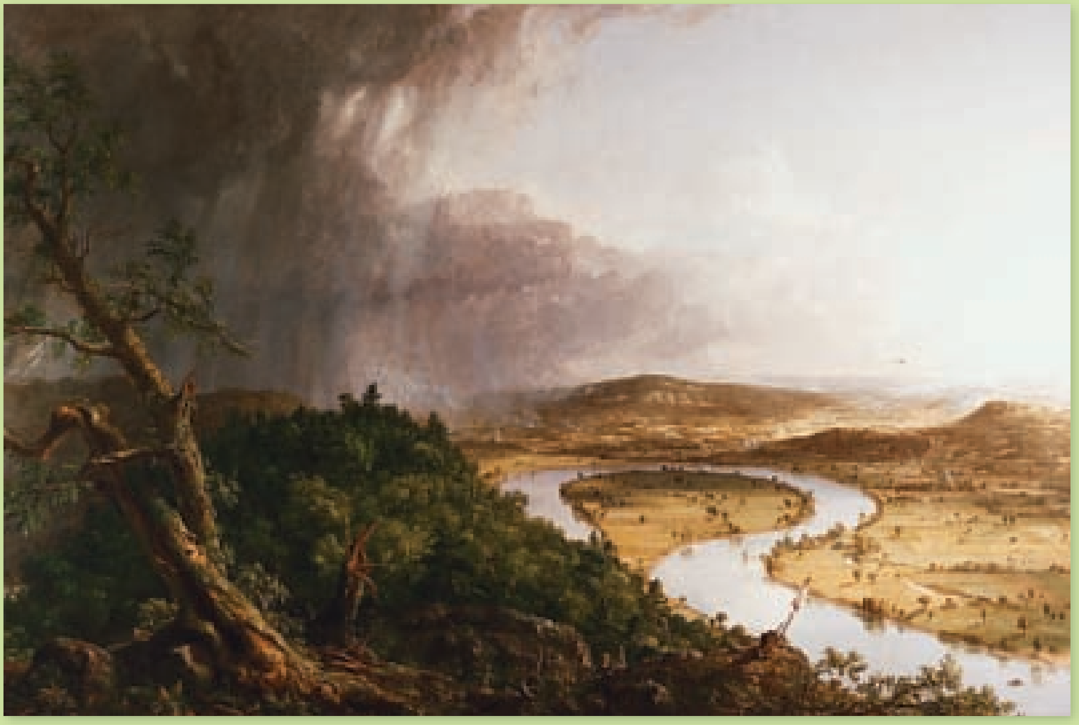
Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 8.9

DRP: 61

Lexile: 960

from Nature



View from Mount Holyoke, Northampton, Massachusetts, after a Thunderstorm—The Oxbow, 1836. Thomas Cole. Oil on canvas, 51½ x 76 in. Metropolitan Museum of Art, NY.

View the Art Hidden in the shadows of this painting is an image of the painter himself, Thomas Cole, painting this very scene. Based on that information and the visual elements of this painting, do you think Cole would have agreed with Emerson's views on nature? Explain. ★

Writing Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Describe a Scene Read aloud several descriptive scenes taken from Emerson's Nature. Discuss how Emerson brings natural images to life through the use of imagery and sensory details. Also point out that Emerson expresses his thoughts and feelings about nature within his essay. Have students write a descriptive paragraph of a nature scene they have recently experienced. Students should give concrete details that activate the senses by describing the sights, sounds, and smells of the scene. They should also include their thoughts and feelings at the time they observed the scene.

Ralph Waldo Emerson

To go into solitude, a man needs to retire as much from his chamber as from society. I am not solitary whilst I read and write, though nobody is with me. But if a man would be alone, let him look at the stars. The rays that come from those heavenly worlds will separate between him and what he touches. One might think the atmosphere was made transparent with this design, to give man, in the heavenly bodies, the perpetual presence of the sublime. Seen in the streets of cities, how great they are! If the stars should appear one night in a thousand years, how would men believe and adore; and preserve for many generations the remembrance of the city of God which had been shown! But every night come out these envoys[1] of beauty, and light the universe with their admonishing[2] smile.

The stars awaken a certain reverence, because though always present, they are inaccessible; but all natural objects make a kindred impression, when the mind is open to their influence. Nature never wears a mean[3] appearance. Neither does the wisest man extort her secret, and lose his curiosity by finding out all her perfection. Nature never became a toy to a wise spirit. The flowers, the animals, the mountains, reflected the wisdom of his best hour, as much as they had delighted the simplicity of his childhood.

When we speak of nature in this manner, we have a distinct but most poetical sense in the mind. We mean the integrity of impression made by manifold[4] natural objects. It is this which distinguishes the stick of timber of the wood-cutter from the tree of the poet. The charming landscape which I saw this morning is indubitably[5] made up of some twenty or thirty farms. Miller owns this field, Locke that, and Manning the woodland beyond. But none of them owns the landscape. There is a property in the horizon which no man has but he whose eye can integrate all the parts, that is, the poet. This is the best part of these men's farms, yet to this their warranty-deeds[6] give no title.

To speak truly, few adult persons can see nature. Most persons do not see the sun. At least they have a very superficial seeing. The sun illuminates only the eye of the man, but shines into the eye and the heart of the child. The lover of nature is he whose inward and

---

[1] Envoys are those sent as representatives of another.
[2] Admonishing means "gently warning" or "scolding."
[3] Here, mean means "poor," "inferior," or "shabby."
[4] Manifold means "many kinds or varieties."
[5] Indubitably means "without a doubt" or "certainly."
[6] Warranty-deeds are legal documents that state ownership of property.

1 Kinship with Nature How does Emerson's statement relate nature to his belief in individualism?

Vocabulary

perpetual (pər pech´ o͞o əl) adj. lasting forever; eternal

Recognize Author's Purpose What does this statement suggest to you about Emerson's purpose? 2

Vocabulary

integrate (in´ tə grāt´) v. to bring all parts together into a whole

Teach

Big Idea 1

Kinship with Nature

Answer: This statement suggests that the natural world can create the conditions for solitude, and thus individuality.

Say: Keep this question in mind as you read: What qualities does Emerson assign to objects in nature? (He assigns natural objects human qualities.)

Reading Strategy 2

Recognize Author's Purpose Answer: He is attempting to persuade the reader to become more aware of the natural world by experiencing nature with a child's senses.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 27.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate English language learners may come from geographic regions that have little in common with New England. Have students suggest details that Emerson might have used if he had lived in another region, such as a desert or a tropical island.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Write an Essay Ask students if they have ever had an experience similar to Emerson's sense of exhilaration and oneness with nature. Have students write an essay that describes their experience, comparing it to Emerson's and relating it to the overall theme of nature's power.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Theme Answer: Emerson uses the woods as a metaphor for nature itself. By returning people to reason and faith, nature promotes optimism.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Remind students that a metaphor directly compares two things. Write the following sentence on the board, "Alex was a tiger on the soccer field." Explain to students that Alex is being compared to a tiger because of his aggressive play. Ask students to write their own simple metaphors and read them to the class.

Literary Element 2

Theme Answer: Earlier, Emerson says that a person in touch with nature has the inward and outward senses adjusted to each other; thus, the inward mood will affect how nature is perceived by the outward senses.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 31.

Progress Check

Can students analyze the theme of the essay?

If No → See Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 26.

outward senses are still truly adjusted to each other; who has retained the spirit of infancy even into the era of manhood. His intercourse with heaven and earth becomes part of his daily food. In the presence of nature a wild delight runs through the man, in spite of real sorrows. Nature says,—he is my creature, and maugre[7] all his impertinent[8] griefs, he shall be glad with me. Not the sun or the summer alone, but every hour and season yields its tribute of delight; for every hour and change corresponds to and authorizes a different state of the mind, from breathless noon to grimmest midnight. Nature is a setting that fits equally well a comic or a mourning piece. In good health, the air is a cordial[9] of incredible virtue. Crossing a bare common,[10] in snow puddles, at twilight, under a clouded sky, without having in my thoughts any occurrence of special good fortune, I have enjoyed a perfect exhilaration. I am glad to the brink of fear. In the woods, too, a man casts off his years, as the snake his slough, and at what period soever of life is always a child. In the woods is perpetual youth. Within these plantations of God, a decorum and sanctity reign, a perennial festival is dressed, and the guest sees not how he should tire of them in a thousand years. In the woods, we return to reason and faith. There I feel that nothing can befall me in life,—no disgrace, no calamity (leaving me my eyes), which nature cannot repair. Standing on the bare ground,—my head bathed by the blithe air and uplifted into infinite space,—all mean egotism vanishes. I become a transparent eyeball; I am nothing; I see all; the currents of the Universal Being circulate through me; I am part or parcel of God. The name of the nearest friend sounds then foreign and accidental: to be brothers, to be acquaintances, master or servant, is then a trifle and a disturbance. I am the lover of uncontained and immortal beauty. In the wilderness, I find something more dear and connate[11] than in streets or villages. In the tranquil landscape, and especially in the distant line of the horizon, man beholds somewhat as beautiful as his own nature.

The greatest delight which the fields and woods minister is the suggestion of an occult relation between man and the vegetable. I am not alone and unacknowledged. They nod to me, and I to them. The waving of the boughs in the storm is new to me and old. It takes me by surprise, and yet is not unknown. Its effect is like that of a higher thought or a better emotion coming over me, when I deemed I was thinking justly or doing right.

Yet it is certain that the power to produce this delight does not reside in nature, but in man, or in a harmony of both. It is necessary to use these pleasures with great temperance. For nature is not always tricked[12] in holiday attire, but the same scene which yesterday breathed perfume and glittered as for the frolic of the nymphs is overspread with melancholy today. Nature always wears the colors of the spirit. To a man laboring under calamity, the heat of his own fire hath sadness in it. Then there is a kind of contempt of the landscape felt by him who has just lost by death a dear friend. The sky is less grand as it shuts down over less worth in the population.

---

[7] Maugre means "in spite of."

[8] Impertinent means "irrelevant."

[9] A cordial is a stimulant, such as a drink or medicine.

[10] A common is community property, such as a park, owned or used by the public.

[11] Connate means "being in harmony or sympathy."

[12] Here, tricked means "dressed."

1 Theme What does this statement tell you about Emerson's theme?

Vocabulary

perennial (pə ren´ ē əl) adj. continuing year after year; enduring blithe (blīth) adj. lighthearted and carefree

2 Theme Why does Emerson hold this belief?

Vocabulary

occult (ə kult´) adj. beyond human understanding; mysterious

Reading Practice

Rereading Remind students that rereading Emerson's selection will help them identify the theme and supporting evidence, as well as the author's purpose. Have the students write down the following note headings:

- Theme and supporting evidence
- Author's purpose
- Unfamiliar words

Have students use these headings to direct their note taking as they reread the selection.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)Which of Emerson's ideas do you think are true in light of your own experience? (b)With which ideas do you disagree?
2. (a)What does Emerson say would happen if the stars appeared only one night in a thousand years? (b)What does his comment suggest about human nature?
3. (a)In Emerson's view, how do adults and children differ in the way they view nature? (b)What does Emerson suggest accounts for this difference?
4. (a)According to Emerson, what effect does the experience of nature have on him? (b)What conclusion does he draw from that effect?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)In this essay, how does Emerson personify, or give human traits to, nature? (b)Does Emerson's personification of nature strengthen or weaken his arguments? Explain.
6. How is Emerson's idealism shown in this essay?

Connect

7. Big Idea Kinship with Nature How do your feelings about nature compare with those of Emerson?
8. Connect to the Author Emerson's first profession was that of a preacher. What impact, if any, do you think Emerson's religious background might have had on his writing? Explain.

Literary Element Theme

While themes can be stated, they are more often implied through events, dialogue, or description.

1. What is the central theme in Nature? Is this theme stated or implied? Explain.
2. How is the theme of this essay consistent with Emerson's transcendentalism?

Reading Strategy Recognize Author's Purpose

Sometimes an author will have more than one purpose for writing. However, authors generally consider one purpose more important than the others.

1. What do you think Emerson's main purpose was for writing Nature?
2. In support of your opinion, list three details from the essay.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Usage Respond to these statements to help you explore the meanings of vocabulary words from this selection.

1. Name something that is perpetual.
2. Describe a time when you helped integrate various members into a group.
3. Give an example of a perennial problem.
4. Describe a time when you felt blithe.
5. Name a creature that appears occult in its behavior.

Writing

Write a Jounal Entry Emerson asserts that few people can appreciate, or truly "see," the glory of nature. Write a journal entry in which you describe an encounter with the outdoors.

After You Read

Assess

1. Answers will vary.
2. (a) People might think that the sublime is transient and rare. (b) We tend to take natural beauty for granted.
3. (a) Adults see with the eye; children see with both the eye and the heart. (b) Children's senses work in harmony.
4. (a) All of his egotism vanishes. (b) Nature can make one "part or parcel with God."
5. (a) The boughs of trees "nod" to him, and "nature is not always tricked in holiday attire." (b) Students should support their opinions.
6. Emerson sees immersion in nature as the way to true happiness. He writes that "In the woods . . . I feel that nothing can befall me in life . . . which nature cannot repair."
7. Students may express positive feelings about nature, but they may not equate nature with reason or faith.
8. Students may say that his religious background impacted his writings, particularly his connections between reason and faith.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 97–98.

Literary Element

1. Nature allows people to become "part or parcel of God"; stated
2. Advocates kinship with nature, optimism, and individualism

Writing

Be sure students describe a specific positive or negative encounter.

Reading Strategy

1. To persuade the reader of nature's beauty and power.
2. Possible answers: The "lover of nature is he whose inward and outward senses are truly adjusted to each other"; the power that produces this delight "does not reside in nature, but in man, or in a harmony of both."

Vocabulary

1. Earth's turning is perpetual.
2. I helped integrate the new information into the financial report.
3. Global warming is a perennial problem.
4. I felt blithe at the homecoming dance.
5. Witches and vampires are often described as occult.

Focus

Summary

In this essay, Emerson argues that people should recognize their own ideas and follow their convictions. People should live by their own opinions and stop imitating the ideas of others.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 33–38.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Draw Conclusions Answer:

Emerson is suggesting that everybody has the potential for genius.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 40.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 10.2

DRP: 64

Lexile: 1030

Literary Element Figurative Language

Figurative language is descriptive language used to convey ideas or emotions. Figurative expressions reach beyond the literal level. As you read, ask yourself, How does Emerson use figurative language to help his readers understand abstract ideas?

Reading Strategy Draw Conclusions

Drawing a conclusion is using details from the text to arrive at a general statement. As you read "Self-Reliance," use the details Emerson presents as the basis for drawing a conclusion about his beliefs.

from

Self-Reliance

Ralph Waldo Emerson

I read the other day some verses written by an eminent[1] painter which were original and not conventional. Always the soul hears an admonition in such lines, let the subject be what it may. The sentiment they instill is of more value than any thought they may contain. To believe your own thought, to believe that what is true for you in your private heart, is true for all men,—that is genius. Speak your latent conviction and it shall be the universal sense; for always the inmost becomes the outmost,—and our first thought is rendered back to us by the trumpets of the Last Judgment. Familiar as the voice of the mind is to each, the highest merit we ascribe to Moses, Plato, and Milton is that they set at naught books and traditions, and spoke not what men, but what they thought. A man should learn to detect and watch that gleam of light which flashes across his mind from within, more than the lustre of the firmament of bards[2] and sages. Yet he dismisses without notice his thought, because it is his. In every work of genius we recognize our own rejected thoughts: they come back to us with a certain alienated majesty. Great works of art have no more affecting lesson for us than this. They teach us to abide by our spontaneous impression with good humored inflexibility then most when the whole cry of voices is on the other side. Else, tomorrow a stranger will say with masterly good sense precisely what we have thought and felt all the time, and we shall be forced to take with shame our own opinion from another.

There is a time in every man's education when he arrives at the conviction that envy is ignorance; that imitation is suicide; that he must take himself for better, for worse, as his portion; that though the wide universe is full of good, no kernel of nourishing corn can come to him but through his toil bestowed on that plot of ground

---

[1] Eminent means "distinguished" or "prominent."

[2] Bards are poets.

Vocabulary

admonition (ad´ mə nish´ ən) n. a warning latent (lā´ tənt) adj. present but not evident; hidden

Draw Conclusions What does Emerson mean by this?

Selection Skills

from Self-Reliance

Literary Elements
- Figurative Language (SE pp. 194–196)
- Tone (SE p. 196)

Reading Skills
- Drawing Conclusions (SE pp. 194, 195, 197)

Vocabulary Skills
- Context Clues (SE p. 197)
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 197)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Personal Narrative (TE p. 196)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Persuasive Speech (SE p. 197)

which is given to him to till. The power which resides in him is new in nature, and none but he knows what that is which he can do, nor does he know until he has tried. Not for nothing one face, one character, one fact makes much impression on him, and another none. It is not without preëstablished harmony, this sculpture in the memory. The eye was placed where one ray should fall, that it might testify of that particular ray. Bravely let him speak the utmost syllable of his confession. We but half express ourselves, and are ashamed of that divine idea which each of us represents. It may be safely trusted as proportionate and of good issues, so it be faithfully imparted, but God will not have his work made manifest by cowards. It needs a divine man to exhibit any thing divine. A man is relieved and gay when he has put his heart into his work and done his best; but what he has said or done otherwise, shall give him no peace. It is a deliverance which does not deliver. In the attempt his genius deserts him; no muse[3] befriends; no invention, no hope.

Trust thyself: every heart vibrates to that iron string. Accept the place the divine Providence[4] has found for you; the society of your contemporaries, the connection of events. Great men have always done so and confided themselves childlike to the genius[5] of their age, betraying their perception that the Eternal was stirring at their heart, working through their hands, predominating[6] in all their being. And we are now men, and must accept in the highest mind the same transcendent[7] destiny; and not pinched in a corner, not cowards fleeing before a revolution, but redeemers and benefactors, pious aspirants[8] to be noble clay plastic under the Almighty effort, let us advance and advance on Chaos and the Dark. . . .

Society everywhere is in conspiracy against the manhood of every one of its members. Society is a joint-stock company in which the members agree for the better securing of his bread to each shareholder, to surrender the liberty and culture of the eater. The virtue in most request is conformity. Self-reliance is its aversion. It loves not realities and creators, but names and customs.

Whoso would be a man must be a nonconformist. He who would gather immortal palms[9] must not be hindered by the name of goodness, but must explore if it be goodness. Nothing is at last sacred but the integrity of your own mind. . . .

What I must do, is all that concerns me, not what the people think. This rule, equally arduous[10] in actual and in intellectual life, may serve for the whole distinction between greatness and meanness.[11] It is the harder, because you will always find those who think they know what is your duty better than you know it. It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after our own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.

---

[3] In Greek mythology, the Muses were goddesses who presided over the arts and sciences.

[4] The divine Providence is God.

[5] Here, genius means "the predominant spirit."

[6] Predominating means "having controlling influence."

[7] Transcendent means "concerned with a spiritual reality beyond the limits of experience."

[8] Aspirants are those who seek, or aspire to, advancement or honors.

[9] Palm leaves are a traditional symbol of victory or success.

[10] Arduous means "difficult."

[11] Here, meanness means "the state of having little importance, worth, or consequence."

Figurative Language What comparison is Emerson making here?

Draw Conclusions According to Emerson, what is the cause of our shame?

Optimism and Individualism What does Emerson think about relationships between individuals?

Vocabulary

manifest (man´ ə fest´) adj. apparent to the eye or the mind; evident; obvious

Vocabulary

benefactor (ben´ ə fak´ tər) n. one who gives help integrity (in teg´ rə tē) n. moral uprightness; honesty

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

AAVE Read the final sentence in the selection. Note the phrase "It is easy." Approaching-level students who are users of African American vernacular English (AAVE) may forget to use is or are between a pronoun subject, such as it, and a noun or adjective, such as easy. Give students a few other examples: She is my sister. They are friends. Then provide students with a list of pronoun subjects (you, he, she, it, we, they) and a list of adjectives or predicate nouns (funny, happy, my friend, and so on) and have them join one word from each list using either is or are, as appropriate.

Teach

Literary Element 2

Figurative Language

Answer: He is comparing the benefits of farming one's own land to the benefits of individualism.

APPROACHING Figurative language is often used to compare an intangible concept to something tangible. Readers may relate to the real, physical thing, and thereby begin to understand the concept. Ask: Why do you think Emerson compares individualism to farming? (Many people farmed during Emerson's time, so they could relate to the rewards of hard work on the land.)

Reading Strategy 3

Draw Conclusions

Answer: We are too modest and timid to trust and express our God-given original ideas.

Big Idea 4

Optimism and Individualism

Answer: Relationships have the potential to destroy individuality and self-reliance.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 44.

After You Read

Assess

1. (a) Answers will vary. (b) Answers should show an understanding of Emerson's idea of nonconformity.
2. (a) Believing your own thoughts (b) The individualist cares about what is true for him or her.
3. (a) With willingness, confidence, and determination to do his or her best (b) Intellectual and spiritual activity and the way to lead one's life
4. (a) A "joint-stock company" (b) Society penalizes those who don't conform.
5. (a) Transcendental thought and religion are intertwined. (b) These references add a sense of importance.
6. (a) Metaphor and hyperbole; he refers to society as a company and to individuals as "divine." (b) It is very effective.
7. (a) Students' opinions will vary. (b) Metaphor, hyperbole, connotative language, and appeals to emotion and reason
8. Encourage students to consider the cost of individualism and nonconformity to the collective sense of community.
9. Students may say that Emerson's life reflected his message: he quit preaching to become a writer and gave speeches that challenged conventional ideas.

Literary Element

1. He is using a metaphor.
2. Students might point to any number of examples. However, make sure that they demonstrate an understanding of how each example functions in context.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)What was your reaction to Emerson's discussion of nonconformity? (b)In your experience, how valuable a trait is the type of nonconformity that Emerson recommends?
2. (a)According to Emerson, what is genius? (b)How does his definition of genius relate to his belief in individualism?
3. (a)According to Emerson, in what way should a person approach his or her work? (b)What kind of "work" do you think he is describing?
4. (a)To what does Emerson compare society? (b)How does society affect what people value?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. Emerson uses many religious references throughout the essay. (a)Why do you think he does so? (b)How do they affect the essay's meaning and tone?
6. (a)What kinds of figurative language does Emerson use to describe both society and the individual? (b)How effective is his use of figurative language?
7. (a)What parts of Emerson's essay did you find most persuasive? (b)What techniques did he use to convince you of his arguments?

Connect

8. Big Idea Optimism and Individualism Do you think it is possible for people to live as individuals and nonconformists in modern society? Why or why not?
9. Connect to the Author Did Emerson's own life reflect his message in Self-Reliance? Support your answer using what you learned about Emerson's life as well as details from the text.

Literary Element Figurative Language

There are many different kinds of figurative language. Examples include imagery, personification, metaphor, metonymy, simile, and symbol. An author can use each of these devices to generate various moods, effects, or ideas. For example, when Emerson says that a person "should learn to detect and watch that gleam of light which flashes across the mind from within," he is using a metaphor that compares a sudden idea to a flash of lightning.

1. When Emerson writes, "Trust thyself: every heart vibrates to that iron string," what kind of figurative language is he using?
2. Find at least two other examples of figurative language in the excerpt from "Self-Reliance." Tell how each helps to explain an idea or make it more concrete.

Review: Tone

As you learned in a previous lesson, tone is the reflection of a writer's attitude toward his or her subject matter, as conveyed through word choice, punctuation, sentence structure, and figures of speech.

Partner Activity Pair up with a classmate and discuss the tone of "Self-Reliance." Working with your partner, create a two-column chart similar to the one below. Fill in the left-hand column with examples from the text that demonstrate a particular tone. In the right-hand column, label each example with an adjective that describes the tone.

Examples	Tone
"It is a deliverance which does not deliver."	Resolute

Progress Check

Can students analyze figurative language?

If No → See Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 39.

Review: Tone

Pairs of students should give accurate examples from the text, along with appropriate tones.

Reading Strategy Draw Conclusions

ACT Skills Practice

From the statements in this essay, you can conclude Emerson believes that:

I. people are untrustworthy.
II. solitude and independence destroy the structure of society.
III. God has a plan for people's lives.

A. I only
B. III only
C. II and III only
D. I and III only

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Context Clues In the following sentences, identify context clues to the meaning of each boldfaced vocabulary word.

1. Mom gave me the admonition that if I did not work, I would not be able to go skiing.
2. One of Kyle's latent—or hidden—talents was his ability to country line dance.
3. To Adriana, the solution to the equation seemed quite clear—almost manifest.
4. My uncle, a very generous benefactor, is sending me to soccer camp in Brazil.
5. My friend's integrity is so solid that her parents never doubt her.

Academic Vocabulary

Evidence of the theme of Emerson's essay "Self-Reliance" can be found in its title.

Evidence is an academic word. To further explore the meaning of this word, answer the questions below.

1. What evidence does Emerson present in "Self-Reliance" to support his theme?
2. Emerson directly addresses his reader. What evidence does this provide about his belief in personal responsibility?

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Speaking and Listening

Deliver a Persuasive Speech

Assignment Emerson argues that people should follow their own convictions—not imitate other people's beliefs and ideas. Practically speaking, what does that mean? Write and deliver a persuasive speech in which you argue for why—and how—people should practice self-reliance.

Prepare As you plan your speech, note how Emerson employs figurative language to convey his ideas and persuade his audience. Using figurative language can also help you support your argument. Appealing to your audience logically, ethically, and emotionally can also help set a tone for your speech and reinforce your message. As you write your speech, fill out a chart like the one below to help you develop logical and ethical appeals.

Emotional Appeal	Ethical Appeal
Do you want to take charge of your life?	According to Emerson, a great person is as independent in a crowd as when alone. This is an ideal we should all follow.

Deliver As you deliver your speech, pay attention to verbal and nonverbal techniques such as eye contact, body language, and tone of voice. Ask a friend to watch you rehearse and give feedback to make sure your voice, posture, and gestures match the tone of your speech.

Evaluate After delivering your speech, use the list on page 163 to write a short critique of your presentation. Note what you think you did well and what you could improve for next time.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

After You Read

Assess

Reading Strategy

ACT Skills Practice

1. B is the correct answer, since the ideas in sentences I and II are not examined in Self-Reliance.

Vocabulary

1. The fact that the speaker cannot go on the trip without a job indicates that her mom is probably giving her a warning or admonition.
2. Hidden is given as a synonym or definition for latent.
3. Clear is given as a synonym for manifest.
4. The uncle pays for the camp, which is the definition of benefactor.
5. The friend's moral uprightness makes the parents trust her without question.

Academic Vocabulary

1. Possible answer: "It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude."
2. By addressing the reader as "you," Emerson commands the individual to take responsibility for his or her actions.

Speaking and Listening

Students' speeches should include persuasive techniques, such as logical and emotional appeals, and should be delivered using verbal and nonverbal techniques.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 99–100.

TIME

Focus

Summary

The article begins with Dr. Richard Davidson studying the brain waves of a monk. Davidson is interested in learning if there are any changes in the monk's brain activity when he meditates. Research performed by Davidson and other scientists shows a connection between happiness and health.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships Point out that writers use different ways of organizing cause-and-effect arguments. A writer may first present an effect and then provide its causes; or a writer may present causes and conclude with their effect.

APPROACHING Ask: According to the first page of this article, what effect does happiness seem to have on health? (Happiness seems to help people stay healthier.)

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 11.9
DRP: 68
Lexile: 1110

Learning Objectives

For pages 198–202

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Reading:
Analyzing informational text.
Analyzing cause-and-effect relationships.

Set a Purpose for Reading

Read to discover the biological roots of positive emotion and to connect these ideas with the optimism of Emerson and Thoreau.

Preview the Article

1. Analyze the photos of the monk on page 199 and the babies on page 200. What might these tell you about the article?
2. Skim the first paragraph. What connection do you think the writer is going to make between biology and joy?

Reading Strategy Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships

1 Cause and effect describes the relationship between an action and its consequence. The cause, or action, directly results in the effect, or consequence. As you read, ask yourself, What cause-and-effect relationships are discussed in this article and why are they important?

Cause	Effect

TIME

The Biology of JOY

Scientists know plenty about depression. Now they are starting to understand the roots of positive emotion.

By MICHAEL D. LEMONICK

IT ALL BEGAN WITH RICHARD DAVIDSON, A PROFESSOR OF psychology and psychiatry at the University of Wisconsin. ☆ Davidson was in a lab observing a Buddhist monk sink deep into blissful meditation when he noticed something that sent his own pulse racing. Davidson checked the data streaming to his computer from electrodes attached to the monk's skull. Electrical activity in the left prefrontal lobe of the monk's brain was shooting up at a tremendous rate. "It was exciting," Davidson recalls. "We didn't expect to see anything that dramatic."

When Davidson made his discovery, he had been studying the link between prefrontal-lobe activity and the bliss deep meditators experience. But even for someone with his experience, watching the brain crackle with activity as a person entered a trancelike state was something never seen before. It made clear, says Davidson, that happiness isn't just a vague feeling. Instead it's a physical state of the brain—one that you can bring on deliberately.

That's not all. As researchers have gained an understanding of the physical characteristics of a happy brain, they have come to see that those traits have a powerful influence on the rest of the body. Scientists have discovered that happiness or feelings of hopefulness, optimism, and contentment appear to lessen the risk or limit the severity of cardiovascular disease, lung disease, diabetes, high blood pressure, and colds. According to a Dutch study of elderly patients, those upbeat mental states reduced an individual's risk of death 50%. 2

Doctors have known for years that clinical depression—the

Writing Practice

Achieve Unity Explain to students that a paragraph is unified when all of its sentences support the main idea of the paragraph, usually expressed in the topic sentence. Ask students to state the main idea of paragraph three on this page that begins "That's not all…." (Sentence two in paragraph three is the main idea) Then ask them to point out the details that support the main idea. (Lessen risk of diseases, colds, and death) Finally, ask students to write a paragraph about what makes them optimistic. Remind them that the paragraph should have a clearly stated main idea that is supported by relevant details.

NIRVANA CHECK Davidson, right, prepares to record the brain activity of a Buddhist monk entering a state of blissful meditation.

> “We’re just beginning to apply a lens to all those parts of the nervous system in which the positive emotions are embodied. This is really neat territory.”
>
> —DACHER KELTNER, University of California, Berkeley

TIME

Teach

Big Idea 2

Optimism and Individualism Point out to students that Ralph Waldo Emerson placed great importance on the value of optimism. “The Biology of Joy” shows the positive effects optimism and happiness can have on one’s health.

Cultural History ☆

Buddhism Buddhism was founded in northern India in the sixth century B.C. by Gautama, called the Buddha (“Enlightened One”) by his followers. The Buddha preached that detachment from worldly goods and desires was the key to human happiness.

For activities related to this selection, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 46–54.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Explain to students that it is helpful to look for context clues when reading. Context clues are the surrounding words and information that can help you figure out the meaning of unfamiliar words. For example, write the following sentence on the chalkboard: Neuroscientists have studied the brain intensely over the past several years. Students may not know the meaning of the word neuroscientist, but if they examine the surrounding words, they can see that neuroscientists study the brain and thus can conclude that a neuroscientist is a scientist who studies the functions of the brain.

TIME

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships Ask: Look at the quote above the split image of the smiling and crying babies. What cause/effect relationship is described? (Happiness may be an inborn result of levels of brain activity.) What is the cause in this relationship? (Higher left prefrontal brain activity in some children) What is the effect? (No crying when their mothers left the room)

Cultural History ☆

Pavlov's Dogs The experiments of the Russian physiologist Ivan Pavlov (1849–1935) in the study of conditioned reflexes are among the most famous in the history of science. The expression "like Pavlov's dogs" has come to describe any reaction that seems to be so automatic as to be involuntary.

ROBERT FROST ▸

"Happiness makes up in height for what it lacks in length."

Bettmann/CORBIS

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN

"Happiness consists more in small conveniences or pleasures that occur every day, than in great pieces of good fortune that happen but seldom to a man in the course of his life."

extreme opposite of happiness—can worsen heart disease and other illnesses. But the neurochemistry of depression is much better known than that of happiness, mostly because depression has been studied more intensively and for much longer. Until about 10 years ago, says Dacher Keltner, a psychologist at the University of California, Berkeley, "90% of emotion research focused on the negative. There still are all of these interesting questions about the positive state."

Happiness on the Brain

A growing number of researchers exploring the physiology and neurology of happiness are starting to answer those questions. Perhaps most basic of all is what happiness is, in a clinical sense. At this point, nobody can say exactly. The word happiness, Davidson observes, "is kind of a placeholder for a group of positive emotional states. It's a state of well-being where individuals are usually not motivated to change the way they are feeling. They're motivated to preserve it." But, Davidson notes, there is much more that scientists must learn about the qualities and effects of happiness in humans. Much of that information lies in a part of the brain called the left prefrontal cortex, the brain's major center of happiness.

Is happiness wired in from the beginning?

A cheerful outlook may be inborn. Babies with less activity in the left prefrontal cortex tend to cry when their mothers leave the room; those with more activity stay content. By looking at brain scans, researchers could predict which infants would cry.

Penny Gentieu (2)

1

Scientists want to know if the prefrontal cortex creates the sensation of happiness or whether it merely reflects a person's more general emotional state. Davidson thinks the answer is both: "We're confident that this part of the brain is the cause of at least certain kinds of happiness." That suggests some people are genetically predisposed to be happy by virtue of their busy prefrontal cortexes, and research in infants confirms it. Davidson first measured left prefrontal activity in babies less than a year old. Then he gave them a test in which their mothers left the room briefly. "Some babies will cry hysterically the instant the mom leaves," he says. "Others are more resilient." It turns out that the babies with the higher left prefrontal activity are the ones who don't cry. "We were actually able to predict which infants would cry in response to that brief but significant stress."

In short, some babies are just born happy. But neuroscientists have also learned that the brain is highly adaptable. It rewires itself in response to experience, and that's especially true before the age of puberty. One might assume, therefore, that negative experiences might destroy a happy personality—and if they're extreme and frequent enough, that might be true. Davidson has learned, however, that mild to moderate doses of negative experience are helpful. The reason, he believes, is that stressful events give us practice at bouncing back from unpleasant emotions. They're like an exercise to strengthen our happiness muscles.

Reading Practice

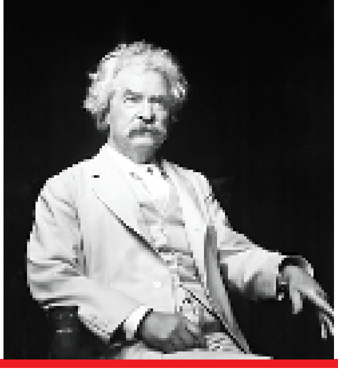
Pictures and Text Point out the quotes and images that appear at the top of this page and the next. Have different volunteers read each quote aloud. Ask: What do you think is the purpose of this information? (Humor; draw attention to the article; provide a break in the text) Also point out the picture of the babies and the related text in the middle of this page. Ask: What is the purpose of this information? (To capture the reader's attention; to present a main idea quickly)

TIME

◂ EDITH WHARTON

“If only we’d stop trying to be happy we’d have a pretty good time.”

Bettmann/CORBIS (2)



◂ MARK TWAIN

“Happiness ain’t a thing in itself—it’s only a contrast with something that ain’t pleasant.”

The Chemistry of Happiness

Exactly what is the physical difference, though, between a left prefrontal cortex that leans towards happiness and one that doesn’t? It almost certainly has in part to do with neurotransmitters. These chemicals ferry signals from one neuron to the next. Davidson believes that one of these chemicals, dopamine, may be significant. Researchers are studying the relationship of dopamine levels to feelings of extreme happiness and depression.

Dopamine pathways may be especially important in aspects of happiness associated with moving toward some sort of goal such as monks achieving a meditative state. “People have made progress telling the difference between the positive feeling you get when you approach a goal, which maps onto dopamine, and the sensory pleasure of enjoying something, which maps onto the opioid system,” says Berkeley’s Keltner. “This is really neat territory.”

Among those exploring that territory is Brian Knutson, an assistant professor of psychology and neuroscience at Stanford, who monitors the brains of test subjects. The mental mode he studies is anticipation. “When people think of happiness,” says Knutson, “they think of feeling good. But a big part of happiness is also looking forward to something.” Knutson’s research was inspired by the classic work of Ivan Pavlov, who trained dogs to salivate at the sound of a bell, which they associated with mealtime. ☆

Instead of food, Knutson used money—a small cash payoff if subjects won a video game. “When we looked at their brains just before they got the reward,” he says, “we saw this spark that clearly had to do with how positive the idea of making money was.” The spark showed up not in the left prefrontal cortex but in the nucleus accumbens, located in the subcortex, at the bottom of the brain. The bigger the prize, Knutson found, “the more activation.” Knutson believes he is looking at the kind of happy feelings we experience as excitement. The primary focus of his work is to understand how emotion and reason work together as people make choices. But it could also be a key to mapping out the brain’s broader happiness circuitry. 2

Happiness and Physical Health

Understanding brain changes when a person feels good is one aspect of happiness research. Another is understanding how positive emotion affects the rest of the body. As with the brain studies, researchers tend to focus on specific aspects of happiness. Harvard psychologist Laura Kubzansky is studying optimism. In a large study she tracked 1,300 men for 10 years and found that heart-disease rates among men who called themselves optimistic were half the rates for men who didn’t.

“It was a much bigger effect than we expected,” she says. Kubzansky also looked at pulmonary function, since poor pulmonary function can signal a range of problems, including early death and cardiovascular disease. Again, optimists did much better. “I’m an optimist,” she says, “but I didn’t expect results like this.”

In a separate study, Kubzansky, working with Duke psychologist Laura Richman, looked at hopefulness and curiosity—mental states that overlap with optimism in some ways. “We found them to be protective against hypertension, diabetes, and upper-respiratory infection,” she says. Such protective effects may explain the longevity advantage found in that Dutch study of the elderly—an advantage for happy optimists that persisted even when researchers corrected for diet, education, and other factors.

Exactly how states of mind affect the body’s biochemistry is still far from clear. Optimists may simply feel less stress than pessimists and so they can avoid the noxious biochemical cascades

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships Say: Try stopping after each subsection of the article to review the causes and effects the writer has presented.

APPROACHING Ask students having difficulty to work in small groups to complete their cause-and-effect charts from page 198 as they read. Have groups read the article aloud, pausing after each subsection to list the causes and effects presented.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging A root is an element that conveys the basic meaning of a word. Knowing roots can be useful when reading challenging material. For example, if students understand that the Greek root bio means “life” and -logy means “study,” they are likely to understand that biology is the study of life.

Ask students to determine the meanings of the words on the left, given the meanings of their Greek roots on the right.

cardiology	kardi	“heart”
psychology	psych	“soul”
ichthyology	ikhthu	“fish”

As students read the article, ask them to look for other scientific terms. Have them attempt to figure out the meaning of the words using the root.

TIME

that stress is known to trigger. Another likely factor: optimistic, happy types seem to take better care of themselves than sad sacks do. Many studies—and common sense—suggest that to be the case.

In a series of studies begun in 1998, psychologist Robert Emmons of the University of California at Davis has found further evidence that happy people are better at keeping themselves in good shape. Emmons randomly assigned 1,000 adults to one of three groups. The first group kept daily journals of their moods and rated them on a scale of 1 to 6. The second group did that and listed the things that annoyed or hassled them throughout their day. The third group kept a journal but added an activity that has repeatedly been shown to improve one's sense of satisfaction with life: they were asked to write down every day all the things for which they were grateful.

Despite being assigned randomly, the last group not only had the predicted jump in their overall feelings of happiness, says Emmons, but were also found to spend more time exercising, be more likely to have regular medical checkups, and routinely take preventive health actions like wearing sunscreen. Overall, the "gratitude" group were promoting better health. "They rate themselves as more energetic, more enthusiastic, more alert," Emmons reports. In short, keeping the diaries contributed to their physical and emotional well-being.

Not surprisingly, the advantages were greatest when compared with the group that focused on life's hassles. "People who are grateful tend to view their body a certain way," says Emmons. "They see life as a gift, health as a gift. So they want to take certain measures to preserve it." Reminding yourself of what you're grateful for is a technique open to anyone, but more sophisticated methods of manipulating happiness are showing promise as well. Behavior therapy and medication, for example, are used mostly to fight depression, but they may also be useful in enhancing happiness.

Such positive results gratify happiness scientists. Thanks to Keltner, Davidson, and others, those findings have gained the field a degree of respectability that's long overdue—and that ultimately could make all of us a whole lot happier.

—From TIME, January 17, 2005

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Were you surprised at the findings of the scientists? Why or why not?

2. What are some reasons given in the article for why happier people live longer?

3. (a)Why did Davidson use a monk for his study? (b)What other professions or types of people would also be suitable for his experiment?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. (a)What kinds of evidence does the writer use to support his point? (b)Why is the writer's choice of evidence appropriate to his purpose?

5. How is your appreciation of Emerson and Thoreau affected by the possibility that their optimism may have been biologically determined?

Connect

6. Connect to Today Pretend that you are Emerson and write a letter to the editor agreeing or disagreeing with the findings in "The Biology of Joy." Try to imitate Emerson's tone and language, using the excerpt from "Self-Reliance" on pages 194–195 as a guideline. Be sure to support your conclusions with evidence from the article.

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships Ask: What did the "grateful" group do that the other groups did not do? (They recorded each day the things for which they were grateful.) What was the effect? (They were happier and took better care of their health.)

Assess

1. Yes; I didn't think there could be any connection between my attitude and my health. No; when I am sick I am often in a bad mood, and when I am happy I usually feel healthy.

2. They are more likely to exercise, have regular medical check ups, and practice preventive health actions, such as wearing sunscreen.

3. (a) Meditation produces an intense experience of happiness. (b) People who achieve elevated levels of happiness in periods of peak performance (for example, dancers, artists, and athletes)

4. (a) Results of experiments conducted by scientific researchers (b) Science is revealing a link between happiness and brain activity.

5. Students may feel that some of the activities Emerson and Thoreau pursued (both were enthusiastic walkers and kept journals) helped encourage their optimistic outlook.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 101–102.

6. Answers will vary, but students may say that Emerson thinks that the article is correct because his journals and reflections help him feel optimistic. Be sure students imitate Emerson's tone and writing. Check that students have supported their conclusions with evidence from the article.

Before You Read
from Woman in the Nineteenth Century

Meet Margaret Fuller
(1810–1850)

New England socialite, expatriate revolutionary, transcendentalist, author, feminist—all of these labels describe Margaret Fuller. Born in Cambridgeport, Massachusetts, Fuller received an extensive education in literature, languages, and the arts from her father, Timothy Fuller Jr., a congressman from Massachusetts. She was a very precocious child and continued to educate herself after attending several local academies. After her father's sudden death in 1835, she became responsible for the education of her eight younger siblings.

> "When people keep telling you that you can't do a thing, you kind of like to try it."
>
> —Margaret Fuller

Feminist and Intellectual In 1836, Fuller first met Ralph Waldo Emerson (page 188) and stayed at his house in Concord while he was finishing his essay Nature. On first acquaintance he was uninterested in Fuller, put off by what he described as her "extreme plainness." However, he soon changed his opinion and developed great respect for Fuller. They became close friends, and Fuller eventually joined his Transcendentalist Club.

In 1839 Fuller moved to Boston and began a series of language classes and formal conversations for women on topics such as literature, education, mythology, and philosophy. She was described as a dazzling discussion leader, and these meetings attracted many intellectuals and social activists. Fuller's meetings provided an opportunity for women to discuss their ideas and speak their thoughts freely. These meetings gave her a formidable reputation, and in 1840 she was invited to edit The Dial, a transcendentalist magazine, in which she published her essay "The Great Lawsuit." She later expanded this essay into her groundbreaking feminist work, Woman in the Nineteenth Century. Her book reveals her extensive knowledge of literature and philosophy. It gained a wide audience and is an impressive argument for the equal status of women. ☆

Activism Abroad In 1846 Fuller went to Europe as the first female foreign correspondent for the New York Tribune. While in Rome, she was involved with Italian aristocrat and revolutionary Giovanni Angelo Ossoli and eventually had a child with him. Ossoli was active in the Risorgimento, a movement to overthrow Rome's papal state and to unify Italy; Fuller vigorously supported the movement. She felt at home in Italy and saw the Risorgimento as an opportunity for women and the laboring class to gain freedom and human rights. When the 1848 revolution broke out, Fuller volunteered in a hospital and sent vivid reports home to the Tribune while Ossoli fought. The revolution failed, and in 1850 Fuller and Ossoli fled to the United States with their infant son, Angelo. Tragically, their ship sank off the coast of New York, and all three were killed.

Fuller's life is well summed up by her memorial in Cambridge: "in youth an insatiable student . . . in riper years teacher, writer, critic . . . in maturer age . . . earnest reformer in America and Europe."

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Margaret Fuller, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Before You Read
Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 21

Or write on the board: Women are not capable of making important decisions. Explain that most people in the nineteenth century believed this idea.

Ask: How do you feel about this idea? If you lived in the nineteenth century, how might you change people's perceptions about women? Have students discuss the answers to these questions.

Literary History ☆

Summer on the Lakes, in 1843 Margaret Fuller's trip around the Great Lakes in 1843 was the topic of her first book. In the book, Fuller describes scenes from nature, the people she encountered, and her thoughts during the journey.

Selection Skills

from Woman in the Nineteenth Century

Literary Elements
- Thesis (SE pp. 204, 207, 209)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Letter (SE p. 209)
- Take Notes (TE p. 204)
- Linking Verbs (TE p. 208)

Reading Skills
- Summarize (SE pp. 204, 205, 209)
- Analyze (TE pp. 206, 207)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE pp. 205, 206)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Usage (SE p. 209)
- Nouns (TE p. 204)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

In her essay, Margaret Fuller focuses on women's social status in the nineteenth century. She demonstrates the hypocrisy of society for allowing women to apply their talents to some roles but not to others. Fuller concludes that women's issues cannot be advanced unless women represent themselves publicly.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 55–60.

Vocabulary

Nouns Remind students that concrete nouns name something that can be seen, heard, touched, smelled, or tasted. Abstract nouns name an idea or feeling that cannot be directly sensed. Ask: Are lot and reverence concrete or abstract nouns? (Both nouns are abstract.) Have students explain the abstract nouns used in the example sentences.

APPROACHING Have students identify nouns from the essay as concrete or abstract: respect (abstract); wife (concrete); woman (concrete); words (concrete); beauty (abstract); dignity (abstract)

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Essay

Do you have any unpopular or controversial opinions? What are they? Freewrite for a few minutes about the pros and cons of sharing these views with other people.

Build Background

Fuller was one of the earliest and most vocal supporters of women's rights in the United States. She was writing at a time when women were gaining more legal rights. Shortly before Woman in the Nineteenth Century was published, for example, laws were passed in some states allowing married women to own property separately from their husbands. Fuller's book laid the groundwork for the women's suffrage movement that in 1920 resulted in the Nineteenth Amendment to the Constitution, which guarantees women's right to vote.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Optimism and Individualism

As you read this excerpt from Woman in the Nineteenth Century, ask yourself, How is Fuller's feminism an extension of Emerson's belief in the divinity of the individual?

Literary Element Thesis

A thesis is the main idea of a work of nonfiction. The thesis may be stated directly or implied. As you read this essay, ask yourself, What is Fuller's thesis?

Reading Strategy Summarize

Summarizing is briefly stating the main ideas of a selection in your own words and in a logical sequence. Summarizing what you have read is an excellent tool for understanding and remembering a passage. As you read, summarize Fuller's ideas to better understand this selection.

Learning Objectives

For pages 203–209

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing thesis.

Reading: Summarizing.

Writing: Writing a letter.

Vocabulary

ludicrous (lo͞o′ də krəs) adj. laughable; foolish; false; p. 206 It would be ludicrous to go camping during this blizzard.

commensurate (kə men′ sər it) adj. equal to; proportionate; p. 207 Our effort in this project was commensurate with yours.

arbitrary (är′ bə trer′ ē) adj. of a random or unreasonable character; p. 207 The organization of the police roadblocks appeared to be arbitrary.

lot (lot) n. way of life or purpose as determined by fate; fortune; p. 208 The lot of the poor family was full of hardship.

reverence (rev′ ər əns) n. a feeling of deep affection; p. 208 The congregation had a great deal of reverence for their minister.

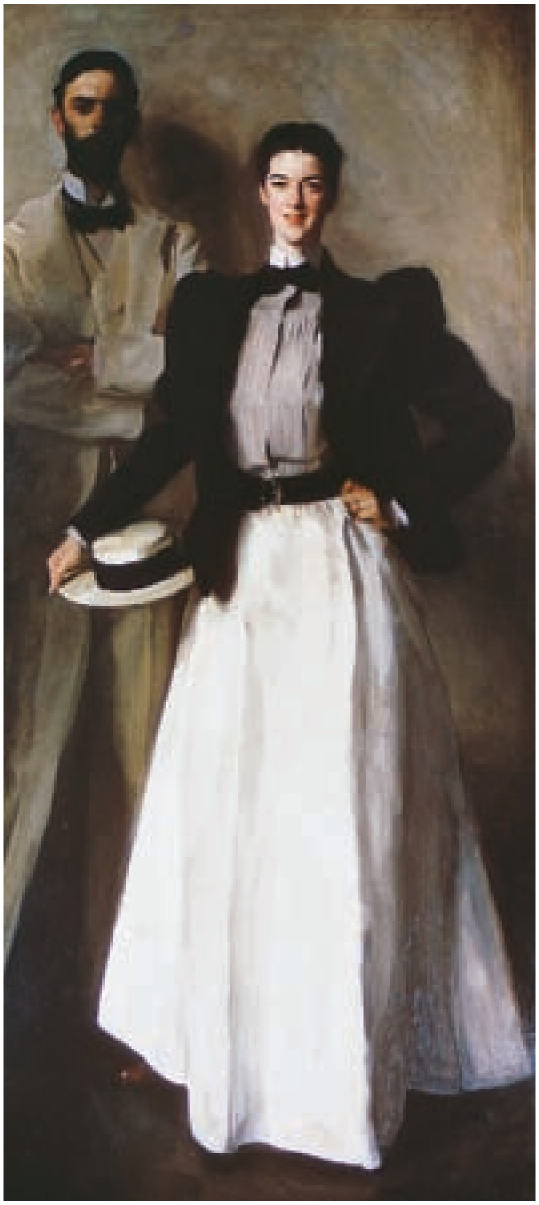
Writing Practice

Take Notes Tell students that rereading a passage and taking notes will help them identify its main idea and supporting details, the author's tone and purpose, rhetorical or literary devices, and unfamiliar words. Write the following headings on the board, and have students copy them onto a piece of paper to guide their note taking.

- Main Idea and Supporting Details
- Tone
- Author's Purpose
- Rhetorical and Literary Devices
- Unfamiliar Words

As they read, tell students to stop at the end of each page to take notes using the headings they wrote down.



Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Phelps Stokes, 1897. John Singer Sargent. Oil on canvas, 84¼ x 39¾ in. The Metropolitan Museum of Art, NY.

View the Art John Singer Sargent painted many portraits of the "modern" nineteenth-century woman. What elements in this painting suggest a more progressive view of women and their role in society? How does this compare with Fuller's message? ★

WOMAN IN THE NINETEENTH CENTURY

Margaret Fuller

Knowing that there exists in the minds of men a tone of feeling toward women as toward slaves, such as is expressed in the common phrase, "Tell that to women and children"; that the infinite soul can only work through them in already ascertained limits; that the gift of reason, Man's highest prerogative,[1] is allotted to them in much lower degree; that they must be kept from mischief and melancholy by being constantly engaged in active labor, which is to be furnished and directed by those better able to think, etc., etc.,—we need not multiply instances, for who can review the experience of last week without recalling words which imply, whether in jest or earnest, these views, or views like these,—knowing this, can we wonder that many reformers think that measures are not likely to be taken in behalf of women, unless their wishes could be publicly represented by women?

"That can never be necessary," cry the other side. "All men are privately influenced by women; each has his wife, sister, or female friends, and is too much biased by these relations to fail of representing their interests; and, if this is not enough, let them propose and enforce their wishes with the pen. The beauty of home would be destroyed, the delicacy of the sex be violated, the dignity of halls of legislation degraded, by an attempt to introduce

---

[1] Prerogative means "right."

Summarize Summarize this statement in your own words. 1

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Have students create an outline of the essay, working in pairs or groups. Their outlines should list the main ideas and supporting details y. After students have completed their outlines, have them write a thesis statement that reflects Fuller's overall argument.

AAVE Approaching level students who are users of AAVE sometimes use the word it where they should be using the word there in sentences. Have a volunteer read the first sentence aloud to the class. Point out the phrase "there exists." Help students use there in their own sentences.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Summarize Answer: Fuller says that she does not need to list all of the examples of discrimination against women because there are so many.

APPROACHING Fuller supports her thesis by presenting and refuting opposing arguments. Say: Summarize the opposing argument that begins in the second paragraph. (Women do not need public representation because privately they can influence their husbands to look after their interests.)

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 62.

View the Art ★

Answer: Mrs. Stokes's pose is very assertive. She is brightly illuminated in the foreground. These details suggest agreement with Fuller's message about women's independence.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 8.2

DRP: 65

Lexile: 1340

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Say: Fuller uses principles of logic when presenting her argument. Explain Fuller's reasoning, giving examples from the text. (Fuller identifies opponents' inconsistencies. For example, to those who say that women are too weak to go to work, Fuller gives examples of women who show great physical strength.)

View the Art ★

Answer: Students may say that a scene of women going to work suggests that the role of women changed after the Civil War—more women went to work to support their families. The strong morning light illuminates the central figure, echoing Fuller's positive portrayal of women.

The Morning Bell (a.k.a. The Old Mill), 1871. Winslow Homer. Oil on canvas, 24 x 38⅛ x 1 in. Yale University Art Gallery.

View the Art In this painting, Homer shows several young women on their way to work in a New England mill. What does this painting suggest about the role of women in society? ★ them there. Such duties are inconsistent with those of a mother;" and then we have ludicrous pictures of ladies in hysterics at the polls, and senate-chambers filled with cradles.

1 But if, in reply, we admit as truth that Woman seems destined by nature rather for the inner circle, we must add that the arrangements of civilized life have not been, as yet, such as to secure it to her. Her circle, if the duller, is not the quieter. If kept from "excitement," she is not from drudgery. Not only the Indian squaw carries the burdens of the camp, but the favorites of Louis XIV[2] accompany him in his journeys, and the washerwoman stands at her tub, and carries home her work at all seasons, and in all states of health. Those who think the physical circumstances of Woman would make a part in the affairs of national government unsuitable, are by no means those who think it impossible for negresses[3] to endure fieldwork, even during pregnancy, or for sempstresses[4] to go through their killing labors.

As to the use of the pen, there was quite as much opposition to Woman's possessing herself of that help to free agency as there is now to her seizing on the rostrum[5] or the desk; and she is likely to draw, from a permission to plead her cause that way, opposite inferences to what might be wished by those who now grant it.

As to the possibility of her filling with grace and dignity any such position, we should think those who had seen the great actresses, and heard the Quaker preachers of modern times, would not doubt that Woman can express publicly the fulness of thought and creation, without losing any of the peculiar beauty of her sex. What can pollute and tarnish is to act thus from any motive except that something needs to be said or done. Woman could take part in the processions, the songs, the dances of old religion; no one fancied her delicacy was impaired by appearing in public for such a cause.

As to her home, she is not likely to leave it more than she now does for balls, theatres, meetings for promoting missions, revival meetings, and others to which she flies,[6] in hope of an animation for her existence commensurate with what she sees enjoyed by men. Governors of ladies'-fairs are no less engrossed by such a charge, than the governor of a state by his;

---

[2] Louis XIV was the king of France from 1638 to 1715.

[3] Negresses: (archaic) women of black African descent.

[4] Sempstresses are "seamstresses."

[5] A rostrum is a platform for speakers.

[6] Here, flies means "rushing toward."

Vocabulary

ludicrous (lo͞o´ də krəs) adj. laughable; foolish; false

Vocabulary

commensurate (kə men´ sər it) adj. equal to; proportionate

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Analyze Structure Students may not be able to determine how Fuller organizes her argument. Remind students that Fuller presents an opposing argument to her thesis in the second paragraph on page 205. Have students read the first sentence of the next five paragraphs, beginning with the paragraph "But if, in reply." Ask: How do these five paragraphs relate to the second paragraph on page 205? What clues tell you about the relationship? (The paragraphs systematically refute each part of the opposing argument presented in the second paragraph. Each paragraph begins by quoting the specific part of the argument Fuller is trying to refute.) As students read on, remind them to analyze how each paragraph fits in the structure of Fuller's argument.

presidents of Washingtonian societies[7] no less away from home than presidents of conventions. If men look straitly to it, they will find that, unless their lives are domestic, those of the women will not be. A house is no home unless it contain food and fire for the mind as well as for the body. The female Greek, of our day, is as much in the street as the male to cry, "What news?" We doubt not it was the same in Athens of old. The women, shut out from the marketplace, made up for it at the religious festivals. For human beings are not so constituted that they can live without expansion. If they do not get it in one way, they must in another, or perish.[8]

As to men's representing women fairly at present, while we hear from men who owe to their wives not only all that is comfortable or graceful, but all that is wise, in the arrangement of their lives, the frequent remark, "You cannot reason with a woman,"—when from those of delicacy, nobleness, and poetic culture, falls the contemptuous[9] phrase "women and children," and that in no light sally[10] of the hour, but in works intended to give a permanent statement of the best experiences,—when not one man, in the million, shall I say? no, not in the hundred million, can rise above the belief that Woman was made for Man,—when such traits as these are daily forced upon the attention, can we feel that Man will always do justice to the interests of Woman? Can we think that he takes a sufficiently discerning and religious view of her office and destiny ever to do her justice, except when prompted by sentiment,—accidentally or transiently, that is, for the sentiment will vary according to the relations in which he is placed? The lover, the poet, the artist, are likely to view her nobly. The father and the philosopher have some chance of liberality; the man of the world, the ☆ legislator for expediency, none.

Under these circumstances, without attaching importance, in themselves, to the changes demanded by the champions of Woman, we hail them as signs of the times. We would have 2 every arbitrary barrier thrown down. We would have every path laid open to Woman as freely as to Man. Were this done, and a slight temporary fermentation[11] allowed to subside, we should see crystallizations more pure and of more various beauty. We believe the divine energy would pervade nature to a degree unknown in the history of former ages, and that no discordant collision, but a ravishing harmony of the spheres,[12] would ensue.

Yet, then and only then will mankind be ripe for this, when inward and outward freedom for Woman as much as for Man shall be acknowledged as a right, not yielded as a concession. As the friend of the Negro assumes that one man cannot by right hold another in bondage, so should the friend of Woman assume that Man cannot by right lay even well-meant restrictions on Woman. If the Negro be a soul, if the woman be a soul, apparelled in flesh, to one Master only are they accountable. There is but one law for souls, and, if there is to be an interpreter of it, he must come not as man, or son of man, but as son of God.

Were thought and feeling once so far elevated that Man should esteem himself the brother and friend, but nowise[13] the lord and tutor, of Woman,—were he really legally bound with her in equal worship,—arrangements as to function and employment would be of no

---

[7] Washingtonian societies were patriotic groups.

[8] Fuller is suggesting here that the women of ancient Greece, although excluded from male society, were able to find alternative modes of expression.

[9] Contemptuous means "scornful."

[10] Here, sally means "witty remark."

[11] Here, fermentation means "unrest."

[12] The ancients believed that the stars and planets created a perfect music, known as "the music of the spheres."

[13] Nowise means "not at all."

Optimism and Individualism How does this statement relate to transcendentalism? 3

Thesis What details support this statement? 4

Vocabulary

arbitrary (är′ bə trer′ ē) adj. of a random or unreasonable character

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Have students reread the sentence containing the word arbitrary. Ask: How does the author's use of the adjective arbitrary to modify the noun barrier reflect her beliefs? (The author believes the obstacles to women's equality are irrational.)

Big Idea 3

Optimism and Individualism
Answer: This statement links optimism about the future with the freedom of the individual.

Literary Element 4

Thesis Answer: It is supported by Fuller's claims about equality among the sexes and her statement that the body is just the "soul, apparelled in flesh."

Cultural History ☆

Women's Rights In 1848, the first women's rights convention in the United States was held in Seneca Falls, New York. Meetings were then held on a regular basis.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Write these words on the board: fermentation, discordant, unimpeded, and unfold. Explain that it is easier to understand these words if they are broken into parts. Have partners work together to find and break unfamiliar words into parts and decide what the parts mean.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Oral Response Ask advanced learners to prepare oral responses to Fuller's essay. Their oral presentations should include three elements: the thesis of Fuller's essay; details and examples from the essay which support the thesis; and their logical response in support of or against Fuller's thesis. Have students share their oral responses with the rest of the class.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Thesis Ask: How does Fuller's example of Miranda reinforce the thesis of this essay? (Miranda proved herself to be equal to men in thought and ability. She was an example of a woman who broke the limits put upon women and was respected by men and women alike.)

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 66.

Progress Check

Can students identify a thesis?

If No → See Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 61.

consequence. What Woman needs is not as a woman to act or rule, but as a nature to grow, as an intellect to discern, as a soul to live freely and unimpeded, to unfold such powers as were given her when we left our common home. If fewer talents were given her, yet if allowed the free and full employment of these, so that she may render back to the giver his own with usury,[14] she will not complain; nay, I dare to say she will bless and rejoice in her earthly birthplace, her earthly lot. Let us consider what obstructions impede this good era, and what signs give reason to hope that it draws near.

1 I was talking on this subject with Miranda,[15] a woman, who, if any in the world could, might speak without heat and bitterness of the position of her sex. Her father was a man who cherished no sentimental reverence for Woman, but a firm belief in the equality of the sexes. She was his eldest child, and came to him at an age when he needed a companion. From the time she could speak and go alone, he addressed her not as a plaything, but as a living mind. Among the few verses he ever wrote was a copy addressed to this child, when the first locks were cut from her head; and the reverence expressed on this occasion for that cherished head, he never belied.[16] It was to him the temple of immortal intellect. He respected his child, however, too much to be an indulgent parent. He called on her for clear judgment, for courage, for honor and fidelity; in short, for such virtues as he knew. In so far as he possessed the keys to the wonders of this universe, he allowed free use of them to her, and, by the incentive of a high expectation, he forbade, so far as possible, that she should let the privilege lie idle.

Thus this child was early led to feel herself a child of the spirit. She took her place easily, not only in the world of organized being, but in the world of mind. A dignified sense of self-dependence was given as all her portion, and she found it a sure anchor. Herself securely anchored, her relations with others were established with equal security. She was fortunate in a total absence of those charms which might have drawn to her bewildering flatteries, and in a strong electric nature, which repelled those who did not belong to her, and attracted those who did. With men and women her relations were noble,—affectionate without passion, intellectual without coldness. The world was free to her, and she lived freely in it. Outward adversity came, and inward conflict; but that faith and self-respect had early been awakened which must always lead, at last, to an outward serenity and an inward peace.

Of Miranda I had always thought as an example, that the restraints upon the sex were insuperable[17] only to those who think them so, or who noisily strive to break them. She had taken a course of her own, and no man stood in her way. Many of her acts had been unusual, but excited no uproar. Few helped, but none checked her; and the many men who knew her mind and her life, showed to her confidence as to a brother, gentleness as to a sister. And not only refined, but very coarse men approved and aided one in whom they saw resolution and clearness of design. Her mind was often the leading one, always effective. ᔓ

---

[14] Here, usury means "interest."

[15] Miranda is a fictional character based on the author.

[16] Belied means "betrayed" or "misrepresented."

[17] Insuperable means "insurmountable."

Vocabulary

lot (lot) n. way of life or purpose as determined by fate; fortune reverence (rev´ ər əns) n. a feeling of respect or deep affection

Grammar Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Linking Verbs Explain that a linking verb joins the subject of a sentence with a word or expression that identifies or describes the subject. The most common linking verbs are be and its forms, such as am, is, are, was, and were. Appear, become, grow, and seem—as well as words associated with the senses, such as look, smell, or feel—can also serve as linking verbs. Have students find sentences with linking verbs and identify the words that are linked. (Example: "It was to him the temple of immortal intellect." The phrase "temple of immortal intellect" identifies the subject "it.") Then have students write a brief paragraph summarizing Fuller's description of Miranda. Ask students to use and underline linking verbs in their paragraphs.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Which of Fuller's arguments do you find most convincing? Explain.
2. (a)Fuller says that women are kept from excitement. In her judgment, what are they not kept from? (b)Based on this judgment, what can you infer about the true motives of those opposed to women's rights?
3. (a)What are two examples that Fuller gives of women who fill public positions with "grace and dignity"? (b)How do these examples strengthen Fuller's argument?
4. (a)How do men respond to Miranda? (b)What is the reason for their response, and what does it suggest about women's education?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. Fuller makes an analogy between the plight of women and that of enslaved African Americans. Is this a valid analogy? Why or why not?
6. (a)Why do you think Fuller introduces Miranda into this essay? (b)Does Miranda help advance Fuller's arguments? Explain.

Connect

7. Big Idea Optimism and Individualism How does Fuller's feminism draw on the transcendentalist belief in optimism and individualism?
8. Connect to Today What are some issues related to women's rights today? Do you think these issues are being addressed adequately?

Literary Element Thesis

The thesis statement in a nonfiction piece may be stated directly, or it may be implied. Writers often state the thesis in the opening paragraph. However, if the thesis is implied, the reader must closely examine the facts, details, and rhetorical devices used by the author to determine the thesis statement.

1. What is the thesis of this essay?
2. Is Fuller's thesis stated directly or implied?

Reading Strategy Summarize

Summarizing can help you come to a conclusion about an author's beliefs. Briefly summarize the main ideas of this essay. On the basis of your summary, state two of Fuller's beliefs.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Usage Respond to the following to practice using selection vocabulary.

1. Describe a school rule that is arbitrary.
2. Answer the following question with a ludicrous response: "When were you born?"
3. Explain how you would show reverence for a great leader.
4. Give an example of a character from literature whose lot in life is sad.
5. Explain how you would gain privileges commensurate to your grade level in school.

Writing

Write a Letter Would Fuller be pleased with women's opportunities today? Write a letter to Fuller discussing this question and comparing the roles of women now and 150 years ago. Refer to specific passages in the text when making your comparisons.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students' answers should support their choice.
2. (a) Drudgery (b) Men opposed to women's rights are mainly interested in women's labor.
3. (a) Actresses and preachers (b) They show women can be successful in public positions.
4. (a) Men approve of her resolution and clear design. (b) She is educated; all women could receive this respect if allowed the opportunity to be educated.
5. Students may say the analogy is exaggerated because women enjoyed more rights than enslaved African Americans.
6. (a) To illustrate her arguments with concrete examples (b) Students should offer support for their opinions.
7. Students may say that her arguments stem from her conviction that all individuals are divine.
8. Students may note issues such as wages.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 103–104.

Literary Element

1. "Yet, then and only then will mankind be ripe for this, ... concession."
2. Fuller's thesis is directly stated.

Vocabulary

1. Allowing some students to go off campus is an arbitrary school rule.
2. I was never born.
3. Writing a paper about a great leader would show reverence for that person.
4. Tom Walker's lot in life is sad.
5. You gain privileges by acting responsibly.

Reading Strategy

Students should properly summarize Fuller's ideas in a logical manner.

Writing

Students' letters should address issues related to women's rights.

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 22

Or say: Imagine it is a chilly, dark winter evening. What would you do to entertain yourselves? (Possible responses: watch TV; play a board game; listen to music) Say: In the nineteenth century, American families entertained themselves by reading poetry aloud.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Poetry Ask: What characteristics of poetry are different from prose? (Many poems are divided into stanzas and use patterns of rhyme and meter; poems use imaginative language and rely more on figures of speech than prose does.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS Give English learners an opportunity to discuss the characteristics of poetry further. Ask: What elements of poetry make it easier to memorize than prose? Why? (Rhyme, rhythm, repetition, and stanzas make poetry easier to memorize because they give it a more musical quality.)

View the Art ★

Born in England, Thomas Birch settled in Philadelphia in 1794. He painted portraits, landscapes, and miniatures—but he is most admired for his seascapes and portraits of ships.

Learning Objectives

For pages 210–211

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study:
Analyzing literary periods.
Analyzing literary genres.

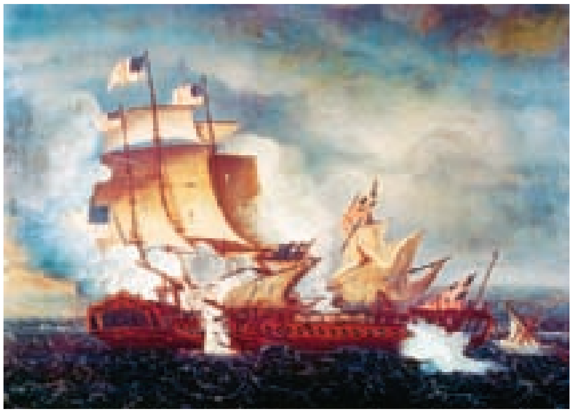
The Fireside Poets

IN THE MID-1800S, A GROUP OF HIGHLY popular American writers became known as the “Fireside Poets” because it was thought that families often sat by the fire and read or recited their poems aloud. Eager to help establish a truly national literature, these poets frequently created vivid pictures of the New England countryside in their lyrics or of famous events from American history in their narrative poems.

William Cullen Bryant (1794–1878) was the oldest of the Fireside Poets. Though his background was Puritan, Bryant was influenced by the English Romantic poets, such as William Wordsworth. He was the first to portray the American landscape in words. In such famous poems as “To a Waterfowl” and “To the Fringed Gentian,” Bryant wrote of the wildlife he encountered while he was hiking through the Berkshire Mountains in western Massachusetts.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow (1807–1882) entered Bowdoin College at the age of fifteen and graduated in the same class as Nathaniel Hawthorne. In his poetry, such as the narrative poems Evangeline and The Song of Hiawatha, he mythologized the American past by using rhyme and simple verse. Tales of a Wayside Inn (1863), a collection of stories in verse supposedly told by various people at an inn, includes one of Longfellow’s best-known poems, “Paul Revere’s Ride.” He was the first American to have a bust placed in the Poet’s Corner of England’s Westminster Abbey.

John Greenleaf Whittier (1807–1892) came from a poor Quaker farm family. His first book, Legends of New England, was published in 1831, but he became nationally famous with the work Snow-Bound, published in 1866. “Storytelling was a necessary resource in the long winter evenings,” Whittier wrote, and Snow-Bound tells of a family isolated and telling stories during a storm. Whittier was devoted to the abolitionist movement, and much of his poetry, including “The Hunters of Men” and “Massachusetts to Virginia,” reflects his stance against racism and slavery.



USS Constitution vs. HMS Guerriere, 1813. Attributed to Thomas Birch. Oil on canvas. US Naval Academy Museum, Annapolis, MD.

Oliver Wendell Holmes (1809–1894) studied both law and medicine but opted for a medical career. Among his best-known poems are “The Chambered Nautilus” and “Old Ironsides,” the nickname for the famous American warship, the USS Constitution. Rumors that the ship was about to be scrapped inspired Holmes’s poem, which roused public sentiment in support of saving it.

James Russell Lowell (1819–1891) objected to slavery and the war with Mexico. In 1846 the first of The Biglow Papers, his antislavery and antiwar poetry series, was published to great acclaim. Lowell created the voice of a rural Yankee, Hosea Biglow, who expressed Lowell’s views with wit and humor. Lowell became the first editor of the Atlantic Monthly in 1857.

Writing Practice

Use Sensory Details Tell students that well-chosen sensory details can help readers experience a scene or an incident just as the writer did. Remind them that sensory details appeal to sight, hearing, smell, touch, and taste. Have students scan the poems on the following page and list the words and phrases that appeal to the senses. Then ask students to write a descriptive paragraph that uses sensory details to paint a vivid picture of a person, place, or thing. Before writing, tell students to jot down at least one sensory detail for each of the five senses. They should also brainstorm possible adjectives to describe each sensory detail.

Americans responded enthusiastically to the Fireside Poets, in part because their works celebrated the values of ordinary people—regard for hard work, respect for family, courage in the face of danger, love of one's country, and love of nature. Because Americans also believed that these writers were the equals of the British poets of the time, they became more confident about the future of their country's culture.

To the Fringed Gentian

William Cullen Bryant

Thou blossom bright with autumn dew,
And colored with the heaven's own blue,
That openest when the quiet light
Succeeds the keen and frosty night—

Thou comest not when violets lean
O'er wandering brooks and springs unseen,
Or columbines, in purple dressed,
Nod o'er the ground-bird's hidden nest.

Thou waitest late and com'st alone,
When woods are bare and birds are flown,
And frosts and shortening days portend
The aged year is near his end.

Then doth thy sweet and quiet eye
Look through its fringes to the sky,
Blue—blue—as if that sky let fall
A flower from its cerulean wall.

I would that thus, when I shall see
The hour of death draw near to me,
Hope, blossoming within my heart,
May look to heaven as I depart.

Old Ironsides

Oliver Wendell Holmes

Ay, tear her tattered ensign down!
 Long has it waved on high,
And many an eye has danced to see
 That banner in the sky;
Beneath it rung the battle shout,
 And burst the cannon's roar; —
The meteor of the ocean air
 Shall sweep the clouds no more.

Her deck, once red with heroes' blood,
 Where knelt the vanquished foe,
When winds were hurrying o'er the flood,
 And waves were white below,
No more shall feel the victor's tread,
 Or know the conquered knee; —
The harpies of the shore shall pluck
 The eagle of the sea!

Oh, better that her shattered hulk
 Should sink beneath the wave;
Her thunders shook the mighty deep,
 And there should be her grave;
Nail to the mast her holy flag,
 Set every threadbare sail,
And give her to the god of storms,
 The lightning and the gale!

Literature Online

Literature and Reading For more about the Fireside Poets, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Respond and Think Critically

1. What do lines 9–12 add to your understanding of the speaker's attitude towards the gentian?
2. How does Bryant use personification in lines 13 and 14? How do these lines relate to the end of the poem?
3. What does the speaker's description of events that have taken place on the ship suggest about his attitude towards it?
4. In "Old Ironsides," explain the terms of the metaphor in lines 15–16.

Assess

1. The gentian blooms when it is almost winter. The speaker associates the flower with hope in the face of death.
2. Bryant describes the flower as if it has an eye. At the end of the poem, the speaker says that he would like to look to heaven with the same hopefulness as his own death approaches.
3. The phrases "battle shout," "cannon's roar," and "heroes' blood" suggest respect for the ship.
4. In Greek mythology, a harpy was part bird and part woman. In English, the term has come to mean a predatory person. The "harpies of the shore" are those who want to scrap Old Ironsides.

For an activity related to this selection, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 68–69.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Point out the archaic ending -est on the verb openest. Tell students to read the word simply as opens. Have them identify words with archaic endings and read them in modern English. (comest, com'st—come; o'er—over; waitest—wait; doth—does)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging To help students understand the poems' sensory details, have students create five-column charts and label each column with one of the five senses (sight, sound, smell, touch, taste). Ask students to work in small groups to read each poem aloud and list details in the appropriate columns. For example, they would list "blossom bright" from the poem "To the Fringed Gentian" under sight. Discuss the sensory details to help students understand the images.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus Transparency 16

Daily Language Practice Transparency 23

Or show students a page in a date book or other objects that indicate a busy life. Ask: How might you simplify your life? (Answers might include turning off phone for certain hours, spending time alone, or watching less TV.) Point out that Thoreau urges people to simplify their lives in order to live more fully.

Literary History ☆

Beyond Nature Though Thoreau is most well known for writing Walden, he was a man of diverse interests. In Civil Disobedience, he discussed America's involvement in the Mexican War. In Slavery in Massachusetts, he spoke against the enslavement of other people.

Before You Read

from Walden

Meet Henry David Thoreau
(1817–1862)

Although he is best known for his simple lifestyle at Walden Pond, Henry David Thoreau was a complex man: opinionated, cranky, nonconformist, compassionate, and subtly humorous. He was an unconventional thinker who expressed his ideas about major issues such as war, slavery, wealth, taxes, friendship, vegetarianism, and the lessons that nature can teach, yet he also wrote about topics as simple as hoeing his garden and walking in the woods. Much of what Thoreau did, thought about, or saw—and he was a keen observer—later took the form of a journal entry, an essay, or part of a book. ☆

Thoreau was born in Concord, Massachusetts, and lived there most of his life. He graduated from Harvard University in 1837 and took a teaching job at his old grammar school. However, he refused to physically discipline his students and quickly resigned. Thoreau founded a progressive school with his brother John in Concord the next year. Although the school was successful, it had to close in 1841 because of his brother's poor health.

> "In Wildness is the preservation of the world."
>
> —Thoreau, Walking

Life in the Woods While at Harvard, Thoreau was influenced by the works of Ralph Waldo Emerson, and the two men became friends. From 1841 to 1843, Thoreau lived with the Emerson family, assisting as a handyman. During this time he contributed a variety of works to The Dial, a Transcendentalist magazine, including poetry, literary essays, and the first of his nature essays. In 1845, he built a cabin on land that Emerson owned at Walden Pond near Concord. Thoreau lived there for more than two years, spending most of his time reading, writing (including his most famous book, Walden), observing nature, and meditating.

Thoreau was deeply affected by his brother's death in 1842, and three years later decided to write an account of a camping and canoeing trip they had taken, referring to notes he had made along the way. The account became his first book, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers, published in 1849. The publisher returned the unsold copies, prompting Thoreau to later observe, "I now have a library of nearly nine hundred volumes, over seven hundred of which I wrote myself."

Thoreau's most famous book, Walden, or, Life in the Woods, was first published in 1854 and has become an American classic. Walden reflects Thoreau's personal philosophies and his response to industrialization, as well as the changing New England in which he lived. Through Walden and his other works, Thoreau helped inspire a long tradition of nature writing in the United States. He remains an inspiration for environmentalists everywhere.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Henry David Thoreau, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Selection Skills

from Walden

Literary Elements
- Metaphor (SE pp. 213, 215, 217–219)
- Tone (TE p. 218)

Reading Skills
- Connect (SE pp. 213–214, 218, 219)
- Vary Reading Rate (TE p. 216)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Compare Literature (TE p. 214)
- Summarize (TE p. 218)

Vocabulary Skills
- Context Clues (SE p. 219)
- Modifiers (TE p. 213)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE p. 216)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Essay

In a journal entry, describe your ideal place to go to be alone and get away from it all. Why is this the place you would choose?

Build Background

Thoreau lived at Walden Pond for two years, two months, and two days in a rugged cabin that measured ten feet by fifteen feet. The cabin, which he built himself, was simple and sturdy, with plastered walls and a shingled roof. He made his own furniture, including a bed, table, desk, and three chairs. At Walden, Thoreau devoted himself to observing the seasons, the animals, the plants and to writing his journals.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Kinship with Nature

As you read this selection from Walden, ask yourself, How does Thoreau stress the importance of a close relationship with nature?

Literary Element Metaphor

A metaphor is a figure of speech that compares or equates two seemingly unlike things. Unlike a simile, a metaphor implies the comparison instead of stating it directly, and does not use the connectives like or as. For example, Thoreau uses the metaphor "this chopping sea of civilized life" to suggest the perils and difficulties of modern living. As you read, identify other metaphors Thoreau uses to convey his ideas. Ask yourself, What theme, or message about life, is Thoreau trying to suggest with this metaphor? Why does he use a metaphor rather than literal language?

Reading Strategy Connect

When you connect to personal experience, you relate what you read to your own life. As you read, look for connections between Thoreau's observations and your own experiences and list ones that you find.

Learning Objectives

For pages 212–219

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing metaphor.

Reading: Connecting to personal experience.

Writing: Writing a speech.

Vocabulary

deliberately (di lib´ ər it lē) adv. in a careful, thoughtful way; p. 214 Thoreau deliberately nailed in place the roof to his cabin.

resignation (rez´ ig nā´ shən) n. unresisting acceptance; submission; p. 214 He practiced calm resignation to life's troubles.

sublime (səb līm´) adj. of great spiritual or intellectual value; noble; p. 214 To Emerson, intuition was a sublime power.

rudiment (ro͞o´ də mənt) n. an imperfect or undeveloped part; p. 215 Though the rudiments of the plan look interesting, it needs more elaboration and detail.

myriad (mir´ ē əd) adj. countless, innumerable; p. 215 There were myriad efforts to improve society during the Age of Reform.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Display these words from the essay: sturdily, simplicity. Ask students to identify other forms of these words. (sturdy, simple) Have students create a four-column chart, with the headings Noun, Verb, Adjective, Adverb, and write the various word forms in the columns. As they read, have them write in forms of these words that Thoreau uses: calculator, communications, memorable, application.

Advanced Students may find Thoreau hard to read because he uses long, complex sentences. Have them read the essay aloud for practice. Remind students to pace themselves, to use expression, and to pause at commas and periods.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Rejecting a life of needless complexity, Thoreau goes into the woods to live more simply. He belittles those who complicate their lives by hurrying, working too hard, and trying to keep track of the latest news. He believes these things limit the time people have for what is important. When he leaves the woods, his belief in simplicity is confirmed and his insight into life is deepened.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 70–75.

Vocabulary

Modifiers Remind students that adjectives modify nouns or pronouns. Adverbs modify verbs, adjectives, and other adverbs. Have students fill in each blank with a vocabulary word:

- ________ ants crawled on the discarded piece of bread.
- Alicia knew she had done the right thing, so she had a ________ look on her face.
- Antonio ________ crossed the street to help an elderly man carry his groceries.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Teach

Big Idea 1

Kinship with Nature Say: Keep the following questions in mind as you read. Why did Thoreau go to Walden? (He went to discover "the essential facts of life.") How did he want to live his life? (He wanted to live life deeply, without being distracted by trivial things.) What did Thoreau find in nature? (Thoreau found fulfillment in living a simple life close to nature.)

APPROACHING Ask students for sentences that show Thoreau's desire to live simply, to live intensely, and to live in nature.

Reading Strategy 2

Connect Answer: Students may suggest such things as following rigid schedules or worrying about things that cannot be changed.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Help English learners navigate the third sentence. Ask: What is Thoreau saying about life and his response to it? (Thoreau does not want to die without having experienced life to its fullest.)

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 77.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 6.3
DRP: 58
Lexile: 1260

from WALDEN

Henry David Thoreau

from Where I Lived and What I Lived For

1 I went to the woods because I wished to live deliberately, to front only the essential facts of life, and see if I could not learn what it had to teach, and not, when I came to die, discover that I had not lived. I did not wish to live what was not life, living is so dear; nor did I wish to practice resignation, unless it was quite necessary. I wanted to live deep and suck out all the marrow[1] of life, to live so sturdily and Spartanlike[2] as to put to rout all that was not life, to cut a broad swath and shave close,[3] to drive life into a corner, and reduce it to its lowest terms, and, if it proved to be mean,[4] why then to get the whole and genuine meanness of it, and publish its meanness to the world; or if it were sublime, to know it by experience, and be able to give a true account of it in my next excursion. For most men, it appears to me, are in a strange uncertainty about it, whether it is of the devil or of God, and have somewhat hastily concluded that it is the chief end of man here to "glorify God and enjoy him forever."

Still we live meanly, like ants; though the fable tells us that we were long ago changed into men;[5] like pygmies we fight with cranes;[6] it is error upon error, and clout upon clout, and our best virtue has for its occasion a superfluous and evitable[7] wretchedness. Our life is frittered away by detail. An honest man has hardly need to count more than his ten fingers, or in extreme cases he may add his ten toes, and lump the rest. Simplicity, simplicity, simplicity! I say, let your affairs be as two or three, and not a hundred or a thousand; instead of a million count half a dozen, and keep your accounts on your thumb nail. In the midst of this chopping sea of civilized life, such are the clouds and 2 Connect In what ways might people today "live what [is] not life"?

Vocabulary

deliberately (di lib′ ər it lē) adv. in a careful, thoughtful way resignation (rez′ ig nā′ shən) n. unresisting acceptance; submission

Vocabulary

sublime (səb līm′) adj. of great spiritual or intellectual value; noble

---

[1] Marrow is the soft tissue inside bones. It also means "the best or most essential part."

[2] Spartans were inhabitants of the ancient Greek city-state of Sparta. Spartanlike means "simple, economical, and disciplined."

[3] [to cut . . . close] means "to gather as much of the essence of life as possible."

[4] Here, mean means "of little importance, worth, or consequence" or "ignoble."

[5] The fable referred to is a Greek myth in which Zeus changes ants into men.

[6] In Homer's Iliad, the Trojans are compared to cranes battling pygmies.

[7] Evitable means "avoidable."

Writing Practice

Compare Literature Lead a class discussion comparing the tone of this essay with that of Emerson's Nature. Draw a Venn diagram on the board to note similarities and differences. Ask: What are the major themes found in each essay? What is each author saying about life? Guide students to note that the themes of the writers are similar (the glory of the individual, the beauty of nature) and that both writers are exuberant and forceful in their presentation of ideas. Thoreau, however, is more blunt and more critical. Have students write a summary of the similarities and differences, supporting their ideas with examples from both texts.

storms and quicksands and thousand-and-one items to be allowed for, that a man has to live, if he would not founder[8] and go to the bottom and not make his port at all, by dead reckoning,[9] and he must be a great calculator indeed who succeeds. Simplify, simplify. Instead of three meals a day, if it be necessary eat but one; instead of a hundred dishes, five; and reduce other things in proportion. . . .

Why should we live with such hurry and waste of life? We are determined to be starved before we are hungry. Men say that a stitch in time saves nine, and so they take a thousand stitches today to save nine tomorrow. As for work, we haven't any of any consequence. We have the Saint Vitus' dance,[10] and cannot possibly keep our heads still. If I should only give a few pulls at the parish bell-rope, as for a fire, that is, without setting the bell, there is hardly a man on his farm in the outskirts of Concord, notwithstanding that press of engagements which was his excuse so many times this morning, nor a boy, nor a woman, I might almost say, but would forsake all and follow that sound, not mainly to save property from the flames, but, if we will confess the truth, much more to see it burn, since burn it must, and we, be it known, did not set it on fire,—or to see it put out, and have a hand in it, if that is done as handsomely; yes, even if it were the parish church itself. Hardly a man takes a half hour's nap after dinner, but when he wakes he holds up his head and asks, "What's the news?" as if the rest of mankind had stood his sentinels. Some give directions to be waked every half hour, doubtless for no other purpose; and then, to pay for it, they tell what they have dreamed. After a night's sleep the news is as indispensable as the breakfast. "Pray tell me any thing new that has happened to a man any where on this globe,"—and he reads it over his coffee and rolls, that a man has had his eyes gouged out this morning on the Wachito River;[11] never dreaming the while that he lives in the dark unfathomed mammoth cave of this world, and has but the rudiment of an eye himself.

For my part, I could easily do without the post-office. I think that there are very few important communications made through it. To speak critically, I never received more than one or two letters in my life—I wrote this some years ago—that were worth the postage. The penny-post is, commonly, an institution through which you seriously offer a man that penny for his thoughts which is so often safely offered in jest. And I am sure that I never read any memorable news in a newspaper. If we read of one man robbed, or murdered, or killed by accident, or one house burned, or one vessel wrecked, or one steamboat blown up, or one cow run over on the Western Railroad, or one mad dog killed, or one lot of grasshoppers in the winter,—we never need read of another. One is enough. If you are acquainted with the principle, what do you care for a myriad instances and applications? . . .

Time is but the stream I go a-fishing in. I drink at it; but while I drink I see the sandy bottom and detect how shallow it is. Its thin current slides away, but eternity remains. I would drink deeper; fish in the sky, whose bottom is pebbly with stars. I cannot count one. I know not the first letter of the alphabet. I have always been regretting that I was not as wise as the day I was born. The intellect is a cleaver; it discerns and rifts its way into the secret of things. I do not wish to be any more busy with my hands than is necessary. My head is hands and feet. I feel all my best faculties 3

---

[8] Founder means "to sink, as a boat."

[9] Dead reckoning is a method of navigation used by sailors when the stars cannot be seen.

[10] Saint Vitus' dance is a nervous disorder characterized by involuntary twitching of the muscles in the face, arms, and legs.

[11] The Wachito River (now called the Ouachita) flows from southern Arkansas into northern Louisiana. People in Thoreau's time thought that criminals went to that region to escape from the law.

Metaphor What comparison is Thoreau making here? 4

Vocabulary

rudiment (ro͞o′ də mənt) n. an imperfect or undeveloped part myriad (mir′ ē əd) adj. countless; innumerable

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Connect Ask: Is Thoreau's simple lifestyle possible in today's world? (Some may say that a complete break with today's society is impossible; others may suggest that our lives may be simplified by focusing only on the essentials.)

Literary Element 4

Metaphor Answer: Thoreau compares the sightless victim to those whose excessive interest in trivial news blinds them to what is of basic importance.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Help English learners understand Thoreau's metaphor. Ask: What does Thoreau compare time to in the last paragraph? (The stream he goes fishing in)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Independent Help students connect with the essay. Tell students that Thoreau believed that worrying about small things is a waste of time. When he says "instead of three meals a day, if it be necessary eat but one," he means that everyday tasks could be a distraction from really living. Ask: What are some things in life that waste time? How could you follow Thoreau's advice and "simplify, simplify"?

Emerging Help students grasp the main ideas of Walden by reading the first paragraph one sentence at a time. After each corresponding sentence, ask: (1) Why did Thoreau move to the woods? What kind of life did Thoreau want to live? (2) What did he want to avoid? (3) What does "to drive life into a corner, and reduce it to its lowest terms" mean? What does Thoreau want to share with the world? How? (4) What do most men think about life according to Thoreau?

Teach

Big Idea 1

Kinship with Nature

Have students read the first sentence under the subhead "from Brute Neighbors." Ask: Why does Thoreau make this comment about the relationship between people and nature? (He is getting ready to address the importance of kinship with nature. He implies that only hunters have an awareness of the natural elements around them because they are actively searching.)

Big Idea 2

Kinship with Nature

Answer: This is an extension of his earlier arguments. By slowing down long enough for animals to feel comfortable coming out, one might be able to simplify life and return to a basic, natural level.

View the Art ★

Answer: Students may note that the simple cabin set amid colorful trees reflects both the beauty and importance of nature and the intersection between domestic life and the natural world.

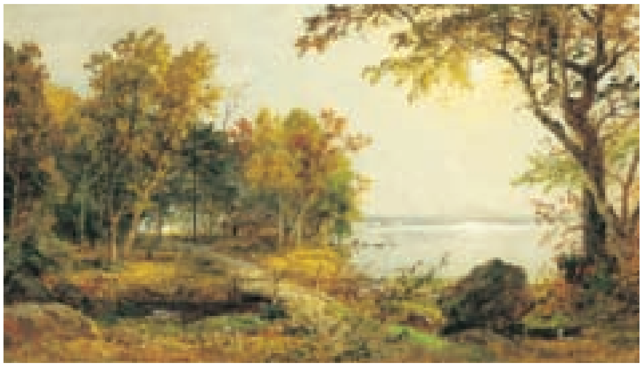
Jasper Francis Cropsey (1823–1900) was a member of the Hudson River school of landscape painters. He specialized in views of the Catskill Mountains.



A Cabin on Greenwood Lake, 1879. Jasper Francis Cropsey. Oil on canvas, 23.3 x 41.4 cm. Private collection.

View the Art The Hudson River painters—including Jasper Francis Cropsey—created works that were visual parallels to the ideas of Emerson, Thoreau, and other transcendentalists. How does this painting reflect the themes in Walden? ★ concentrated in it. My instinct tells me that my head is an organ for burrowing, as some creatures use their snout and fore-paws, and with it I would mine and burrow my way through these hills. I think that the richest vein is somewhere hereabouts; so by the divining rod[12] and thin rising vapors I judge; and here I will begin to mine.

from Brute Neighbors

1 It is remarkable how many creatures live wild and free though secret in the woods, and still sustain themselves in the neighborhood of towns, suspected by hunters only. How retired the otter manages to live here! He grows to be four feet long, as big as a small boy, perhaps without any human being getting a glimpse of him. I formerly saw the raccoon in the woods behind where my house is built, and probably still heard their whinnering at night. Commonly I rested an hour or two in the shade at noon, after planting, and ate my lunch, and read a little by a spring which was the source of a swamp and of a brook, oozing from under Brister's Hill, half a mile from my field. The approach to this was through a succession of descending grassy hollows, full of young pitch pines, into a larger wood about the swamp. There, in a very secluded and shaded spot, under a spreading white pine, there was yet a clean firm sward[13] to sit on. I had dug out the spring and made a well of clear gray water, where I could dip up a pailful without roiling it, and thither I went for this purpose almost every day in mid-summer, when the pond was warmest. Thither too the woodcock led her brood, to probe the mud for worms, flying but a foot above them down the bank, while they ran in a troop beneath; but at last, spying me, she would leave her young and circle round and round me, nearer and nearer till within four or five feet, pretending broken wings and legs, to attract my attention, and get off her young, who would already have taken up their march, with faint wiry peep, single file through the swamp, as she directed. Or I heard the peep of the young when I could not see the parent bird. There too the turtle-doves sat over the spring, or fluttered from bough to bough of the soft white pines over my head; or the red squirrel, coursing down the nearest bough, was particularly familiar and inquisitive. You only need sit still long enough in some attractive spot in the woods that all its inhabitants may exhibit themselves to you by turns.

I was witness to events of a less peaceful character. One day when I went out to my wood pile, or rather my pile of stumps, I observed two large ants, the one red, the other much larger, nearly half an inch long, and black, fiercely contending with one another. Having once got hold they never let go, but struggled and wrestled and rolled on the chips incessantly. Looking farther, I was

Kinship with Nature How would you compare this suggestion with Thoreau's comments in the chapter "Where I Lived and What I Lived For"? 2 [12] A divining rod is a forked stick believed to indicate the presence of underground minerals or water.

---

[13] Sward means a "grassy piece of land."

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Vary Reading Rate Discuss the different ways students can approach reading the excerpt from "Brute Neighbors." (a) Skimming is for previewing and reviewing. (b) Scanning is for finding specific facts or topics. (c) In-depth reading gives thorough knowledge of material. Before students begin reading, ask them to skim the selection by reading the first sentence of each paragraph and looking quickly through the paragraphs.

After they skim the selection to get a general idea of the content, ask students to write down the main idea of this excerpt. Then have them scan the text to locate specific passages or ideas that support their conclusion. Finally, have them read the excerpt carefully and confirm their assumptions.

surprised to find that the chips were covered with such combatants, that it was not a duellum, but a bellum, a war between two races of ants, the red always pitted against the black, and frequently two red ones to one black. The legions of these Myrmidons[14] covered all the hills and vales in my wood-yard, and the ground was already strewn with the dead and dying, both red and black. It was the only battle which I have ever witnessed, the only battlefield I ever trod while the battle was raging; internecine[15] war; the red republicans on the one hand, and the black imperialists on the other. On every side they were engaged in deadly combat, yet without any noise that I could hear, and human soldiers never fought so resolutely. I watched a couple that were fast locked in each other's embraces, in a little sunny valley amid the chips, now at noonday prepared to fight till the sun went down, or life went out. The smaller red champion had fastened himself like a vice to his adversary's front, and through all the tumblings on that field never for an instant ceased to gnaw at one of his feelers near the root, having already caused the other to go by the board; while the stronger black one dashed him from side to side, and, as I saw on looking nearer, had already divested him of several of his members. They fought with more pertinacity than bulldogs. Neither manifested the least disposition to retreat. It was evident that their battle-cry was Conquer or die. In the meanwhile there came along a single red ant on the hillside of this valley, evidently full of excitement, who either had despatched his foe, or had not yet taken part in the battle; probably the latter, for he had lost none of his limbs; whose mother had charged him to return with his shield or upon it. Or perchance he was some Achilles,[16] who had nourished his wrath apart, and had now come to avenge or rescue his Patroclus.[17] He saw this unequal combat from afar—for the blacks were nearly twice the size of the red—he drew near with rapid pace till he stood on his guard within half an inch of the combatants; then, watching his opportunity, he sprang upon the black warrior, and commenced his operations near the root of his right foreleg, leaving the foe to select among his own members; and so there were three united for life, as if a new kind of attraction had been invented which put all other locks and cements to shame. I should not have wondered by this time to find that they had their respective musical bands stationed on some eminent chip, and playing their national airs the while, to excite the slow and cheer the dying combatants. I was myself excited somewhat even as if they had been men. The more you think of it, the less the difference. And certainly there is not the fight recorded in Concord history, at least, if in the history of America, that will bear a moment's comparison with this, whether for the numbers engaged in it, or for the patriotism and heroism displayed. For numbers and for carnage it was an Austerlitz or Dresden.[18] Concord Fight! Two killed on the patriots' side, and Luther Blanchard wounded! Why here every ant was a Buttrick—"Fire! for God's sake fire!"—and thousands shared the fate of Davis and Hosmer.[19] There was not one hireling there. I have no doubt that it was a principle they fought for, as much as our ancestors, and not to avoid a three-penny tax on their tea;[20] and the

---

14. The Myrmidons were a legendary group of Thessalians who followed their king, Achilles, in the Trojan War. In modern English, Myrmidon can refer to any devoted, unquestioning follower.
15. Internecine means "deadly" or "marked by destruction."
16. In Greek mythology, Achilles was king of the Myrmidons. A handsome warrior reknowned for his bravery and greatness, he died in battle during the Trojan War.
17. Patroclus was Achilles' cousin and constant companion.
18. Austerlitz refers to the Battle of Austerlitz, one of Napoleon's greatest victories. Dresden refers to the Battle of Dresden, Napoleon's last big victory over Germany. Concord refers to the Battle of Concord, April 19, 1775, one of the opening battles of the Revolutionary War.
19. Luther Blanchard was a fifer who was killed at the Battle of Concord. Buttrick refers to Major John Buttrick, an American commander at Concord. Davis and Hosmer refer to Captain Isaac Davis and Abner Hosmer, two American soldiers who died at the Battle of Concord.
20. Three-penny tax on their tea refers to the tea tax portion of the Townshend Acts, designed by the English Parliament to collect revenue from the American colonies.

Metaphor How effective is this extended metaphor comparing the battling ants to human warfare? 3

Teach

Literary Element 3

Metaphor Answer: Students may suggest that the comparison adds drama and connects the events of nature more closely with those of people. Others may argue that the comparisons become ridiculous.

APPROACHING Explain to approaching level students that personification is a type of metaphor in which human characteristics are given to nonhuman things. Ask: How does Thoreau personify the ants? (He names the different groups of ants and describes the ant's mother sending him off to war.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning The use of subordinate clauses may be confusing to English language learners. Explain that compound and complex sentences can often be rewritten as groups of shorter sentences. Write the following example on the board: "On every side they were engaged in deadly combat, yet without any noise that I could hear, and human soldiers never fought so resolutely."

Students can simplify these sentences as follows: "On every side they were engaged in deadly combat. I could not hear them making any noise. Human soldiers never fought so resolutely." Have students work with a partner to rewrite sentences from the selection.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Creative Writing Ask advanced students to imitate Thoreau's ant metaphor and write an essay comparing people to some element in nature. Students should use figurative language and descriptive details.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Tone Ask: What is the tone of the last paragraph on this page? How does the tone shift from that of the previous paragraph? (The tone of the last paragraph is lofty, and forcefully optimistic, as opposed to the previous paragraph, which is more reflective and personal.)

Literary Element 2

Metaphor Answer: Thoreau is continuing his argument for living life to its fullest. Most students will say that the metaphor is effective because it includes a powerful image—that of being on deck and seeing one's surroundings versus being in a dark room below deck.

Reading Strategy 3

Connect Answer: Students should suggest concrete ways in which they might make their dreams or plans come to fruition.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 81.

results of this battle will be as important and memorable to those whom it concerns as those of the battle of Bunker Hill,[21] at least.

I took up the chip on which the three I have particularly described were struggling, carried it into my house, and placed it under a tumbler on my window sill, in order to see the issue. Holding a microscope to the first-mentioned red ant, I saw that, though he was assiduously gnawing at the near foreleg of his enemy, having severed his remaining feeler, his own breast was all torn away, exposing what vitals he had there to the jaws of the black warrior, whose breastplate was apparently too thick for him to pierce; and the dark carbuncles[22] of the sufferer's eyes shone with ferocity such as war only could excite. They struggled half an hour longer under the tumbler, and when I looked again the black soldier had severed the heads of his foes from their bodies, and the still living heads were hanging on either side of him like ghastly trophies at his saddle-bow, still apparently as firmly fastened as ever, and he was endeavoring with feeble struggles, being without feelers and with only the remnant of a leg, and I know not how many other wounds, to divest himself of them; which at length, after half an hour more, he accomplished. I raised the glass, and he went off over the window sill in that crippled state. Whether he finally survived that combat, and spent the remainder of his days in some Hôtel des Invalides,[23] I do not know; but I thought that his industry would not be worth much thereafter. I never learned which party was victorious, nor the cause of the war; but I felt for the rest of that day as if I had had my feelings excited and harrowed by witnessing the struggle, the ferocity and carnage, of a human battle before my door.

from Conclusion

. . . I left the woods for as good a reason as I went there. Perhaps it seemed to me that I had several more lives to live, and could not spare any more time for that one. It is remarkable how easily and insensibly we fall into a particular route, and make a beaten track for ourselves. I had not lived there a week before my feet wore a path from my door to the pond-side; and though it is five or six years since I trod it, it is still quite distinct. It is true, I fear that others may have fallen into it, and so helped to keep it open. The surface of the earth is soft and impressible by the feet of men; and so with the paths which the mind travels. How worn and dusty, then, must be the highways of the world, how deep the ruts of tradition and conformity! I did not wish to take a cabin passage,[24] but rather to go before the mast and on the deck of the world, for there I could best see the moonlight amid the mountains. I do not wish to go below now.

I learned this, at least, by my experiment; that if one advances confidently in the direction of his dreams, and endeavors to live the life which he has imagined, he will meet with a success unexpected in common hours. He will put some things behind, will pass an invisible boundary; new, universal, and more liberal laws will begin to establish themselves around and within him; or the old laws be expanded, and interpreted in his favor in a more liberal sense, and he will live with the license of a higher order of beings. In proportion as he simplifies his life, the laws of the universe will appear less complex, and solitude will not be solitude, nor poverty poverty, nor weakness weakness. If you have built castles in the air, your work need not be lost; that is where they should be. Now put the foundations under them. . . . 1

Metaphor Why might Thoreau have chosen to use this metaphor? 2

Connect How might you apply Thoreau's advice in your own life? 3

---

[21] Bunker Hill was the first major battle of the American Revolutionary War. It was fought in Charlestown (now Boston, Massachusetts) on June 17, 1775.

[22] Here, carbuncle means a type of red precious stone.

[23] The Hôtel des Invalides is a famous complex in Paris, France. Louis XIV founded the hospital to accommodate 7,000 elderly or injured veterans. Today, it houses several museums and a church.

[24] A person who took a cabin passage on a sailing ship would travel in a private compartment, sheltered from the weather.

Writing Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Summarize Have students write a paragraph summarizing one excerpt from Walden other than the "Conclusion" excerpt to help fill in confusing details about the selection. Tell students that after they read the excerpt from "Conclusion," they will be asked to relate the main ideas of the essay in their own words. Suggest that they take notes as they read to remember key points such as who, what, when, where, how, and why. Ask volunteers to read their summaries to the class.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. With which of Thoreau's ideas do you strongly agree? With which ideas do you strongly disagree?
2. (a)What did Thoreau hope to do at Walden? (b)How could being at Walden help him achieve his goal?
3. (a) What are Thoreau's views of the news and the mail? (b)What do these views tell you about his values?
4. (a)Summarize the battle between the ants that Thoreau describes. (b)Why do you think he becomes so fascinated with this battle?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)How does Thoreau characterize the animals he observes? (b)Do you agree with his observations?
6. (a)Why does Thoreau insist that people need to simplify their lives? (b)Is he a credible speaker on this topic? Explain.
7. (a)What is Thoreau's central message in Walden? (b)Does Thoreau's decision to leave Walden affect your evaluation of his message?

Connect

8. Big Idea Kinship with Nature (a)What does Thoreau learn at Walden? (b)What role does nature play in what he learns?
9. Connect to the Author Do you think it would be possible to live a happy, successful life by following Thoreau's philosophy? Explain.

Literary Element Metaphor

Thoreau frequently uses metaphor and other types of figurative language to help convey his ideas. For example, the metaphor "Time is but the stream I go a-fishing in" (p. 215) compares time to a stream, suggesting that one moment follows another in an uninterrupted flow. Sometimes, Thoreau develops a metaphor throughout an entire paragraph—a technique called extended metaphor.

1. Why does Thoreau say he goes "a-fishing" in time?
2. Give an example of another metaphor from the reading.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Reading Strategy Connect

Connect to Personal Experience What are some of the things that surround us in the United States today about which Thoreau might cry, "Simplify, simplify"?

Vocabulary Practice

Context Clues In the following sentences, identify context clues to the meaning of each boldfaced vocabulary word.

1. Trying not to jostle the ants, Thoreau very deliberately lifted the chip they were on.
2. Realizing his guilt, the man bowed his head and listened with resignation to the verdict.
3. Mozart's music seems sublime, as if created by a higher power.
4. He thought it was a story, but it was merely the rudiments of a character sketch.
5. Thoreau must have had myriad reflections on nature before completing Walden.

Vocabulary

1. The contrast of "jostle" to "deliberately" helps identify the meaning of the word as "in a careful, thoughtful way."
2. It can be inferred that "resignation" means "submission or acceptance."
3. The phrase "higher power" suggests "of great spiritual value."
4. The contrast of "story" to "character sketch" defines "rudiments" as "undeveloped parts."
5. The plural of the word "reflections" indicates that "myriad" is also plural.

Reading Strategy

Students may say that Thoreau would decry the use of cell phones and other electronic devices that complicate our lives.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students should state Thoreau's ideas and provide support.
2. (a) To discover the essence of life (b) It offered a place for a simple life, time for reflection.
3. (a) He disdains news and mail, viewing them as unimportant. (b) He values deeper knowledge.
4. (a) A large black ant defeats two smaller red ants after a long struggle. (b) He is amazed at their intensity and ferocity.
5. (a) Self-reliant and brave (b) Students should give support.
6. (a) People are immersed in meaningless activities. (b) Yes, he simplified his own life.
7. (a) Simplify life; follow dreams with confidence. (b) Students may say that Thoreau decided to follow his own dreams.
8. (a) The practical and the philosophical essentials of life (b) Being close to nature expanded his awareness and taught him "the essential facts of life."
9. Students may say that the text is insightful, but hard to follow.

Progress Check

Can students analyze a metaphor?

If No → See Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 76.

Focus

Bellringer Options

Literature Launchers:
Pre-Reading Videos DVD, Selection Launcher

Daily Language Practice Transparency 24

Or tell students that the power of individualism has motivated people to seek reform in their governments. Ask: What do you know about social protest? How can individuals protest peacefully?

Compare Literature About Protesting Injustice

Allow students to share their responses to the opening question. Then have students discuss what they already know about the authors Henry David Thoreau, Mohandas Gandhi, and Nelson Mandela.

Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

Learning Objectives

For pages 220–236

In studying these texts, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Studies:
Comparing cultural context.
Comparing themes.
Analyzing argument.

Compare Literature About Protesting Injustice

How far would you go to carry out your principles? The writers compared here—Henry David Thoreau, Mohandas K. Gandhi, and Nelson Mandela—spoke out against the oppression they witnessed during their lifetimes.

from Civil Disobedience
by Henry David Thoreau........essay........222

On the Eve of Historic Dandi March by Mohandas K. Gandhi........speech........229
INDIA, 1930

from Long Walk to Freedom
by Nelson Mandela........autobiography........231
SOUTH AFRICA, 1994

COMPARE THE Big Idea Optimism and Individualism

Some of the major American Romantic writers celebrated the spirit of individualism and optimism. Thoreau, for instance, believed that ordinary citizens can better themselves, their political system, and their society. Gandhi and Mandela, reformers from other cultures and eras, shared Thoreau's belief in the power of the individual to bring about change peacefully. As you read, ask yourself, What passages convey the power of the individual as a catalyst for social reform?

COMPARE Persuasive Messages

Thoreau, Gandhi, and Mandela tried to sway audiences to adopt their views or to take action. Each of these leaders used persuasive appeals to convey his message with clarity and force. As you read, ask yourself, What arguments do these writers make to influence the audience?

COMPARE Cultures

Thoreau, Gandhi, and Mandela belonged to different cultures and fought injustices that were unique to their surroundings. Social and historical circumstances presented each of them with distinct challenges. In meeting those challenges, they left their mark on their particular cultures—and changed the course of history. As you read, ask yourself, What social and historical forces helped shape each writer's message?

South Africa, 1994

Selection Skills

Comparing Literature

Literary Elements
- Argument (SE pp. 221, 222, 228)
- Description (TE p. 232)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Summary (SE p. 228)
- Quickwrite (SE p. 230, 235)
- Essay (SE p. 236)
- Transitions (TE p. 224)

Reading Skills
- Evaluate (SE pp. 221, 223, 228)
- Preview (TE p. 222)
- Compare (TE p. 230)

Vocabulary Skills
- Antonyms (SE p. 228)
- Connotation (TE p. 221)
- Context Clues (TE p. 222)
- Negative Prefixes (TE p. 226)
- Multiple Meanings (TE p. 226)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE p. 225)
- Use Transitions (TE p. 233)

Before You Read

Civil Disobedience

Connect to the Essay

What risks would you be willing to take to stand up for something you believe in? Discuss this question with a partner or a small group of classmates.

Build Background

As a protest against slavery and the U.S. war with Mexico, Thoreau refused to pay a poll tax—and was arrested. In "Civil Disobedience," he reflects on the night he spent in jail and criticizes the government for straying from its true purpose—to serve the people.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Optimism and Individualism

Thoreau's outlook reflected the Romantic spirit of optimism and individualism—the belief that ordinary citizens could better themselves, their political system, and their society. As you read, ask yourself, How does Thoreau feel about putting limitations on personal freedom?

Literary Element Argument

An argument is a form of persuasion that uses logic, reasons, and evidence. In "Civil Disobedience," Thoreau argues for limiting the power of government. As you read, ask yourself, How does Thoreau develop his argument?

Reading Strategy Evaluate Evidence

One way of evaluating the evidence presented in an argument is to distinguish between facts and opinions. Facts are statements that can be proved true, while opinions are statements that are based on personal beliefs. As you read, ask yourself, Do the facts seem relevant, reliable, and accurate? Do the opinions seem based on facts and thoughtful observations?

Vocabulary

din (din) n. loud, continuous noise; p. 222 The din of the children kept me from concentrating.

alacrity (ə lak´ rə tē) n. speed; swiftness; p. 222 She plays the fiddle with great alacrity.

expedient (ek spē´ dē ənt) adj. convenient or efficient for a certain purpose; p. 223 During Thoreau's era, the railroad was the most expedient means of traveling from Boston to New York.

blunder (blun´ dər) n. a serious error or mistake; p. 224 The police officer's blunder allowed the criminal to escape through the back door.

sanction (sangk´ shən) n. approval or support; p. 227 The troops awaited sanction from their commanding officer before continuing their mission.

Comparing Literature

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Thoreau's night in jail confirms his belief that the government can control people's bodies, but not their minds or souls. He argues that the government's actions diverge from the will of the people. Though imprisoned, Thoreau feels freer than those outside because he follows his own conscience rather than the law.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 84–89.

Vocabulary

Connotation Explain that connotation refers to the meaning or emotions associated with a word. For example, the words mature and old may refer to an elderly person; however, mature has a positive connotation where old is more negative. Ask: Which words in this vocabulary list have a more negative connotation? (din, blunder) Which words in this vocabulary list have a more positive connotation? (alacrity, expedient, sanction)

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Beginning Have students create an outline of the main ideas in Thoreau's essay as they read. Have them work with a partner to identify and state the main idea of each paragraph. Their outlines should include the major claim (thesis) and supporting evidence.

Intermediate Have students read the first paragraph. Ask: What is Thoreau's major claim? (The government's power should be limited.) What evidence does he give to support this claim? (He uses the Mexican War as an example of the power of the few.)

Teach

Literary Element 1

Argument Answer: Thoreau presents evidence to support his argument, saying a few people seized the power of the entire government in waging the Mexican War.

Vocabulary 2

Context Clues Say: Describe how "complicated machinery" helps you to understand the meaning of din. (The context suggests the sound of loud, metal-on-metal grinding.)

Interactive Read and Write

Other options for teaching this selection can be found in

- Interactive Read and Write for EL Students, pp. 45–78
- Interactive Read and Write for Approaching-Level Students, pp. 45–78
- Interactive Read and Write for On-Level Students, pp. 45–78

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 7.7
DRP: 63
Lexile: 1110

from Civil Disobedience

Henry David Thoreau

I heartily accept the motto, "That government is best which governs least"; and I should like to see it acted up to more rapidly and systematically. Carried out, it finally amounts to this, which also I believe—"That government is best which governs not at all"; and when men are prepared for it, that will be the kind of government which they will have. Government is at best but an expedient;[1] but most governments are usually, and all governments are sometimes, inexpedient. The objections which have been brought against a standing army, and they are many and weighty, and deserve to prevail, may also at last be brought against a standing government. The standing army is only an arm of the standing government. The government itself, which is only the mode which the people have chosen to execute their will, is equally liable to be abused and perverted before the people can act through it. Witness the present Mexican war, the work of comparatively a few individuals using the standing government as their tool; for, in the outset, the people would not have consented to this measure.

This American government—what is it but a tradition, though a recent one, endeavoring to transmit itself unimpaired to posterity,[2] but each instant losing some of its integrity? It has not the vitality and force of a single living man; for a single man can bend it to his will. It is a sort of wooden gun to the people themselves. But it is not the less necessary for this; for the people must have some complicated machinery or other, and hear its din, to satisfy that idea of government which they have. 2 Governments show thus how successfully men can be imposed on, even impose on themselves, for their own advantage. It is excellent, we must all allow. Yet this government never of itself furthered any enterprise, but by the alacrity with which it got out of its way. It does not keep the country free. It does not settle the

---

[1] Expedient means "something employed to bring about a desired result; a means to an end."

1 Argument How does Thoreau support his argument?

[2] Posterity means "future generations."

Vocabulary

din (din) n. loud, continuous noise alacrity (ə lak′ rə tē) n. speed; swiftness

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Preview Point out to students that they can anticipate the tone and content of Thoreau's essay by looking over the art, displayed quotations, highlighted passages, and bottom-of-the-page questions before reading. Have students create a chart with things they know about Thoreau, things they anticipate will be in his essay, and things they would like to know. Then have them use the information in their chart to set a purpose for their reading.

One of the notebooks in which Thoreau kept his journal

West. It does not educate. The character inherent in the American people has done all that has been accomplished; and it would have done somewhat more, if the government had not sometimes got in its way. For government is an expedient by which men would fain[3] succeed in letting one another alone; and, as has been said, when it is most expedient, the governed are most let alone by it. Trade and commerce, if they were not made of india-rubber, would never manage to bounce over the obstacles which legislators are continually putting in their way; and if one were to judge these men wholly by the effects of their actions and not partly by their intentions, they would deserve to be classed and punished with those mischievous persons who put obstructions on the railroads.

But, to speak practically and as a citizen, unlike those who call themselves no-government men, I ask for, not at once no government, but at once a better government. Let every man make known what kind of government would command his respect, and that will be one step toward obtaining it.

After all, the practical reason why, when the power is once in the hands of the people, a majority are permitted, and for a long period continue, to rule is not because they are most likely to be in the right, nor because this seems fairest to the minority, but because they are physically the strongest. But a government in which the majority rule in all cases cannot be based on justice, even as far as men understand it. Can there not be a government in which majorities do not virtually decide right and wrong, but conscience?—in which majorities decide only those questions to which the rule of expediency is applicable? Must the citizen ever for a moment, or in the least degree, resign his conscience to the legislator? Why has every man a conscience, then? I think that we should be men first, and subjects afterward. It is not desirable to cultivate a respect for the law, so much as for the right. The only obligation which I have a right to assume is to do at any time what I think right. It is truly enough said that a corporation has no conscience; but a corporation of conscientious men is a corporation with a conscience. Law never made men a whit[4] more just; and, by means of their respect for it, even the well-disposed are daily made the agents of injustice. . . .

Some years ago, the State met me in behalf of the Church, and commanded me to pay a

---

[3] Fain means "gladly" or "willingly."

[4] Whit means "a tiny amount" or "a bit."

Vocabulary

expedient (ek spē´ dē ənt) adj. convenient or efficient for a certain purpose

Evaluate Evidence Is Thoreau's opinion of majority rule fair or unfair? Explain. 3

Comparing Literature

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Evaluate Evidence Answer: Thoreau makes a distinction between ruling by conscience and ruling by force. He aslo states that majority rule is unfair "in all cases."

Ask: What does Thoreau suggest is the first step toward making sure government acts with a conscience? (Each and every person should "make known what kind of government would command his respect, and that will be one step toward obtaining it.")

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 91.

Political History ☆

Manifest Destiny America went to war with Mexico partly because of an idea called Manifest Destiny. American political leaders in the 1840s believed that it was America's destiny to expand from the east coast to the west coast. In order to achieve this goal, America went to war with Mexico to gain the territory that now includes Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, and California.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Students' comprehension may improve if they read, summarize, and predict. Have students read the last paragraph on page 223 and the first full paragraph on page 224. Ask them to summarize Thoreau's argument. Next have them list facts and opinions that are given as evidence. Then ask them to predict how Thoreau will get out of jail.

Established Point out the ellipsis points at the end of the last full paragraph on this page. Explain that this punctuation indicates that part of Thoreau's essay has been omitted. Ask: What might this indicate about the subject of the next paragraph? (A new thought is coming.) What are the main ideas of the paragraphs before and after the ellipsis? (The paragraph before is about the unfairness of majority rule and the idea that people should rule by their consciences. The paragraph after the ellipsis is about an unfair tax that Thoreau refused to pay.)

Teach

Big Idea 1

Optimism and Individualism

Answer: Though imprisoned, Thoreau feels freer than those outside the jail because he follows his own conscience rather than the law. He believes his mind is free—and therefore can go places that his fellow villagers' minds cannot—though his body is in jail.

APPROACHING Ask: What does Thoreau think about the government that has imprisoned him? (He believes the government wants to change his attitudes and ideas, but since it is unable to change him, it attacks his physical body instead. He only pities the government rather than respecting it.)

certain sum toward the support of a clergyman whose preaching my father attended, but never I myself. "Pay," it said, "or be locked up in the jail." I declined to pay. But, unfortunately, another man saw fit to pay it. I did not see why the schoolmaster should be taxed to support the priest, and not the priest the schoolmaster; for I was not the State's schoolmaster, but I supported myself by voluntary subscription. I did not see why the lyceum[5] should not present its tax-bill, and have the State to back its demand, as well as the Church. However, at the request of the selectmen,[6] I condescended to make some such statement as this in writing: "Know all men by these presents, that I, Henry Thoreau, do not wish to be regarded as a member of any incorporated society which I have not joined." This I gave to the town clerk; and he has it. The State, having thus learned that I did not wish to be regarded as a member of that church, has never made a like demand on me since; though it said that it must adhere to its original presumption that time. If I had known how to name them, I should then have signed off in detail from all the societies which I never signed on to; but I did not know where to find a complete list.

I have paid no poll-tax[7] for six years. I was put into a jail once on this account, for one night; and, as I stood considering the walls of solid stone, two or three feet thick, the door of wood and iron, a foot thick, and the iron grating which strained the light, I could not help being struck with the foolishness of that institution which treated me as if I were mere flesh and blood and bones, to be locked up. I wondered that it should have concluded at length that this was the best use it could put me to, and had never thought to avail itself of my services in some way. I saw that, if there was a wall of stone between me and my townsmen, there was a still more difficult one to climb or break through, before they could get to be as free as I was. I did not for a moment feel confined, and the walls seemed a great waste of stone and mortar. I felt as if I alone of all my townsmen had paid my tax. They plainly did not know how to treat me, but behaved like persons who are underbred. In every threat and in every compliment there was a blunder; for they thought that my chief desire was to stand the other side of that stone wall. I could not but smile to see how industriously they locked the door on my meditations, which followed them out again without let[8] or hindrance, and they were really all that was dangerous. As they could not reach me, they had resolved to punish my body; just as boys, if they cannot come at some person against whom they have a spite, will abuse his dog. I saw that the State was half-witted, that it was timid as a lone woman with her silver spoons, and that it did not know its friends from its foes, and I lost all my remaining respect for it, and pitied it.

They only can force me who obey a higher law than I.

Thus the State never intentionally confronts a man's sense, intellectual or moral,

---

[5] A lyceum is an organization that sponsors educational programs, such as concerts and lectures.

[6] Selectmen refers to a group of elected local officials.

[7] A poll tax, now illegal, was a tax on people (not property). Payment was often required in order to vote.

[8] Here, let means "an obstruction" or "an obstacle."

Optimism and Individualism Why does Thoreau believe he is freer than his "townsmen"? 1

Vocabulary

blunder (blun′ dər) n. a serious error or mistake

Writing Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Transitions Remind students to use transitions to make clear connections between the ideas in their writing. Point out that transitions show various relationships:

- movement in time (before, during, first, second, soon, then, next, later)
- location in space (beyond, farther, in front of, between, near, under)
- similarities and differences (also, in the same way, but, however)
- emphasis (in fact, especially, above all)

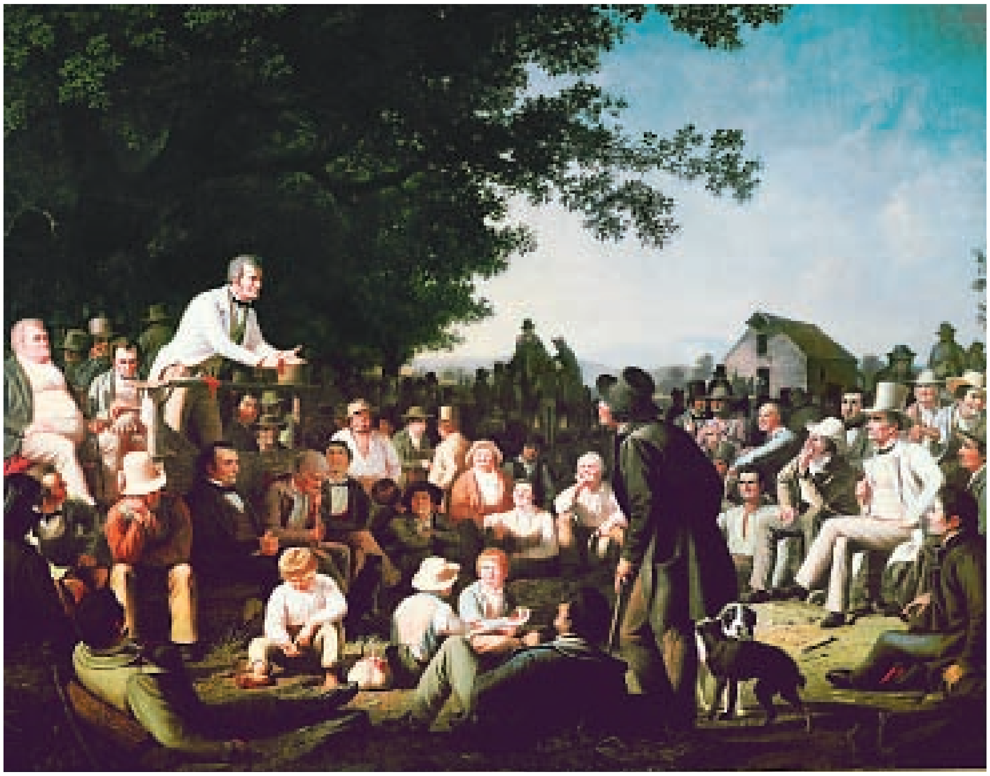
Have students supply a transitional word in the following sentences:

1. Jail can be a harsh place; ________ Thoreau found it a good place to reflect. (however)

2. ________ his time in jail, Thoreau felt freer than the other people in his community. (During)

Have students write a paragraph about their schedule for the rest of the day using an example of each type of transition listed above.



Stump Speaking, 1853–54, George Caleb Bingham. Oil on canvas, 108 x 147 cm. Private collection.

View the Art George Caleb Bingham not only painted political scenes; he was also a politician. In this scene, what does he suggest about the relationship between citizens and government in Thoreau's era? ★ but only his body, his senses. It is not armed with superior wit or honesty, but with superior physical strength. I was not born to be forced. I will breathe after my own fashion. Let us see who is the strongest. What force has a multitude? They only can force me who obey a higher law than I. They force me to become like themselves. I do not hear of men being forced to live this way or that by masses of men. What sort of life were that to live? When I meet a government which says to me, "Your money or your life," why should I be in haste to give it my money? It may be in a great strait, and not know what to do: I cannot help that. It must help itself; do as I do. It is not worth the while to snivel about it. I am not responsible for the successful working of the machinery of society. I am not the son of the engineer. I perceive that, when an acorn and a chestnut fall side by side, the one does not remain inert to make way for the other, but both obey their own laws, and spring and grow and flourish as best they can, till one, perchance, overshadows and destroys the other. If a plant cannot live according to its nature, it dies; and so a man.

Teach

Literary Element 2

Argument Ask: Why might Thoreau go into so much detail about how he spent his time in jail? (to show that his punishment had little effect)

View the Art ★

Answer: Bingham presents a spirited political scene in which ordinary people are participating. In his essay, Thoreau says that political decisions are made without the input of ordinary people.

Ask: How does the image contrast with political speeches of today? (Bingham's painting shows a close connection between the public and the politician; the public has direct access to speak to the politician on the stage. Modern security needs make this unworkable in many situations.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate After students have read to the end of the first full paragraph on page 226, have them create a four-column chart for notetaking about the theme, supporting evidence, setting, and people. Prompt ideas by asking questions and having students take notes during the discussion. Ask: What is the theme of Thoreau's essay so far? (Thoreau believes the power of the government should be more limited.) What evidence does Thoreau give to support this theme? (Thoreau discusses the Mexican war, the power of the minority, an unfair church tax, not paying a poll tax, and a night in jail.) What setting has Thoreau described? (Thoreau describes his jail cell.) What people has Thoreau discussed? (Thoreau mentions himself, the government, the American people, a clergyman, the jailer, and his cellmate.) What do you predict might happen? (Thoreau will get out of jail and continue not paying his poll tax.)

Teach

Vocabulary 1

Multiple Meanings Students may recognize a different usage of the word sanction than the way Thoreau uses it in the essay. Today, sanction often refers to "an economic or militarily coercive measure adopted by several nations to deter another nation from violating international law."

ENGLISH LEARNERS Have students read the sentence in which sanction appears. Ask: What context clue helps you understand the meaning of the word sanction? (The word "consent" gives a synonym for sanction*.)*

The night in prison was novel and interesting enough. The prisoners in their shirt-sleeves were enjoying a chat and the evening air in the doorway, when I entered. But the jailer said, "Come, boys, it is time to lock up"; and so they dispersed, and I heard the sound of their steps returning into the hollow apartments. My room-mate was introduced to me by the jailer as "a first-rate fellow and a clever man." When the door was locked, he showed me where to hang my hat, and how he managed matters there. The rooms were whitewashed once a month; and this one, at least, was the whitest, most simply furnished, and probably the neatest apartment in the town. He naturally wanted to know where I came from, and what brought me there; and, when I had told him, I asked him in my turn how he came there, presuming him to be an honest man, of course; and, as the world goes, I believe he was. "Why," said he, "they accuse me of burning a barn; but I never did it." As near as I could discover, he had probably gone to bed in a barn when drunk, and smoked his pipe there; and so a barn was burnt. He had the reputation of being a clever man, had been there some three months waiting for his trial to come on, and would have to wait as much longer; but he was quite domesticated and contented, since he got his board for nothing, and thought that he was well treated.

He occupied one window, and I the other; and I saw that if one stayed there long, his principal business would be to look out the window. I had soon read all the tracts[9] that were left there, and examined where former prisoners had broken out, and where a grate had been sawed off, and heard the history of the various occupants of that room; for I found that even here there was a history and a gossip which never circulated beyond the walls of the jail. Probably this is the only house in the town where verses are composed, which are afterward printed in a circular form, but not published. I was shown quite a long list of verses which were composed by some young men who had been detected in an attempt to escape, who avenged themselves by singing them.

I saw yet more distinctly the State in which I lived.

I pumped my fellow-prisoner as dry as I could, for fear I should never see him again; but at length he showed me which was my bed, and left me to blow out the lamp. It was like traveling into a far country, such as I had never expected to behold, to lie there for one night. It seemed to me that I never had heard the town clock strike before, nor the evening sounds of the village; for we slept with the windows open, which were inside the grating. It was to see my native village in the light of the Middle Ages, and our Concord was turned into a Rhine[10] stream, and visions of knights and castles passed before me. They were the voices of old burghers[11] that I heard in the streets. I was an involuntary spectator and auditor[12] of whatever was done and said in the kitchen of the adjacent village inn—a wholly new and rare experience to me. It was a closer view of my native town. I was fairly inside of it. I never had seen its institutions before. This is one of its peculiar institutions; for it is a shire town.[13] I began to comprehend what its inhabitants were about.

In the morning, our breakfasts were put through the hole in the door, in small

---

[9] Tracts are leaflets or pamphlets, especially those on religious or political topics.

[10] Concord refers to the Concord River. The Rhine River flows through Germany and the Netherlands.

[11] Burghers is a term for inhabitants of a city.

[12] Here, auditor means "someone who hears," or "a listener."

[13] A shire town, or county town, is similar to a county seat.

Vocabulary Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Negative Prefixes Point out that negative prefixes such as un-, im-, in-, il-, dis-, a-, and ir- change base words to antonyms. Examples include happy/unhappy, legal/illegal, and natural/unnatural. Have students add a negative prefix to each base word in parentheses.

1. The court order was (typical). (atypical)
2. Considering the blunder was his fault, the judge was surprisingly (apologetic). (unapologetic)
3. The investigation showed the mayor had been (honest) about his past. (dishonest)

Ask students to identify other words on this spread that contain negative prefixes and to explain their meanings. (involuntary—"not voluntary"; impure—"not pure"; independent—"not dependent"; inconsistent—"not consistent") oblong-square tin pans, made to fit, and holding a pint of chocolate, with brown bread, and an iron spoon. When they called for the vessels again, I was green enough to return what bread I had left; but my comrade seized it, and said that I should lay that up for lunch or dinner. Soon after he was let out to work at haying in a neighboring field, whither he went every day, and would not be back till noon; so he bade me good-day, saying that he doubted if he should see me again.

When I came out of prison—for some one interfered, and paid that tax—I did not perceive that great changes had taken place on the common, such as he observed who went in a youth and emerged a tottering and gray-headed man; and yet a change had to my eyes come over the scene—the town, and State, and country—greater than any that mere time could effect. I saw yet more distinctly the State in which I lived. . . .

The authority of government, even such as I am willing to submit to—for I will cheerfully obey those who know and can do better than I, and in many things even those who neither know nor can do so well—is still an impure one: to be strictly just, it must have the sanction and consent of the governed. It can have no pure right over my person and property but what I concede to it. 1 The progress from an absolute to a limited monarchy, from a limited monarchy to a democracy, is a progress toward a true respect for the individual. Even the Chinese philosopher[14] was wise enough to regard the individual as the basis of the empire. Is a democracy, such as we know it, the last improvement possible in government? Is it not possible to take a step further towards recognizing and organizing the rights of man? There will never be a really free and enlightened State until the State comes to recognize the individual as a higher and independent power, from which all its own power and authority are derived, and treats him accordingly. I please myself with imagining a State at least which can afford to be just to all men, and to treat the individual with respect as a neighbor; which even would not think it inconsistent with its own repose[15] if a few were to live aloof from it, not meddling with it, nor embraced by it, who fulfilled all the duties of neighbors and fellow-men. A State which bore this kind of fruit, and suffered it to drop off as fast as it ripened, would prepare the way for a still more perfect and glorious State, which also I have imagined, but not yet anywhere seen. ↜ sanction (sangk´ shən) n. approval or support

Vocabulary

---

[14] The Chinese philosopher is Confucius (c. 551–479 B.C.)

[15] Here, repose refers to the state's "peace of mind."

Optimism and Individualism What type of freedom does Thoreau desire? 2

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate English learners may benefit from help with some of Thoreau's idiomatic expressions. Have pairs of students read pages 226 and 227 to identify words or phrases they find confusing. Have students write down these words or phrases. Give students some examples, such as the word domesticated and the phrase "He occupied one window," both in the lefthand column on page 226. Explain that when Thoreau says his fellow prisoner was "quite domesticated," he means that he seemed calm and at home living in jail. When he says that they each occupied a window, he means they stood at the window and looked out. Have partners work together to find the meanings using the context and a dictionary.

Comparing Literature

Big Idea 2

Optimism and Individualism

Answer: Thoreau desires the freedom to follow his own conscience and to live apart from society and its laws. He believes as long as he does no harm to other people, the state should allow him to live as he chooses.

Literary History ☆

Publishing Background

Thoreau wrote "Civil Disobedience" for a Concord Lyceum lecture he delivered on January 26, 1848. In May 1849, the essay was first published as "Resistance to Civil Government." The title changed in Yankee in Canada, with Anti-Slavery and Reform Papers, an 1866 collection of Thoreau's writings. Historians are unsure if Thoreau himself ever actually used the term "civil disobedience."

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 95.

Progress Check

Can students analyze an argument?

If No → See Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 90.

Assess

1. He makes logical points about the value of one's conscience.
2. (a) He did not pay his poll tax. (b) His beliefs were powerful.
3. (a) For burning down a barn (b) That his cellmate accidentally caused the fire
4. (a) Enjoys fellow inmates and the chance to reflect (b) He makes the best of an experience.
5. Still idealistic, but more cynical about the prospects for government's becoming truly just
6. Some may say he should not have let someone pay his tax.
7. (a) Answers will vary. (b) Responses should cite Thoreau's use of facts. (c) Arguments against the Mexican War, majority rule, and taxation
8. (a) Dedication, courage, ability to inspire others (b) Dedication
9. Students may say that this fact gives his arguments validity because he clearly adheres to the principles of his essay.

Vocabulary

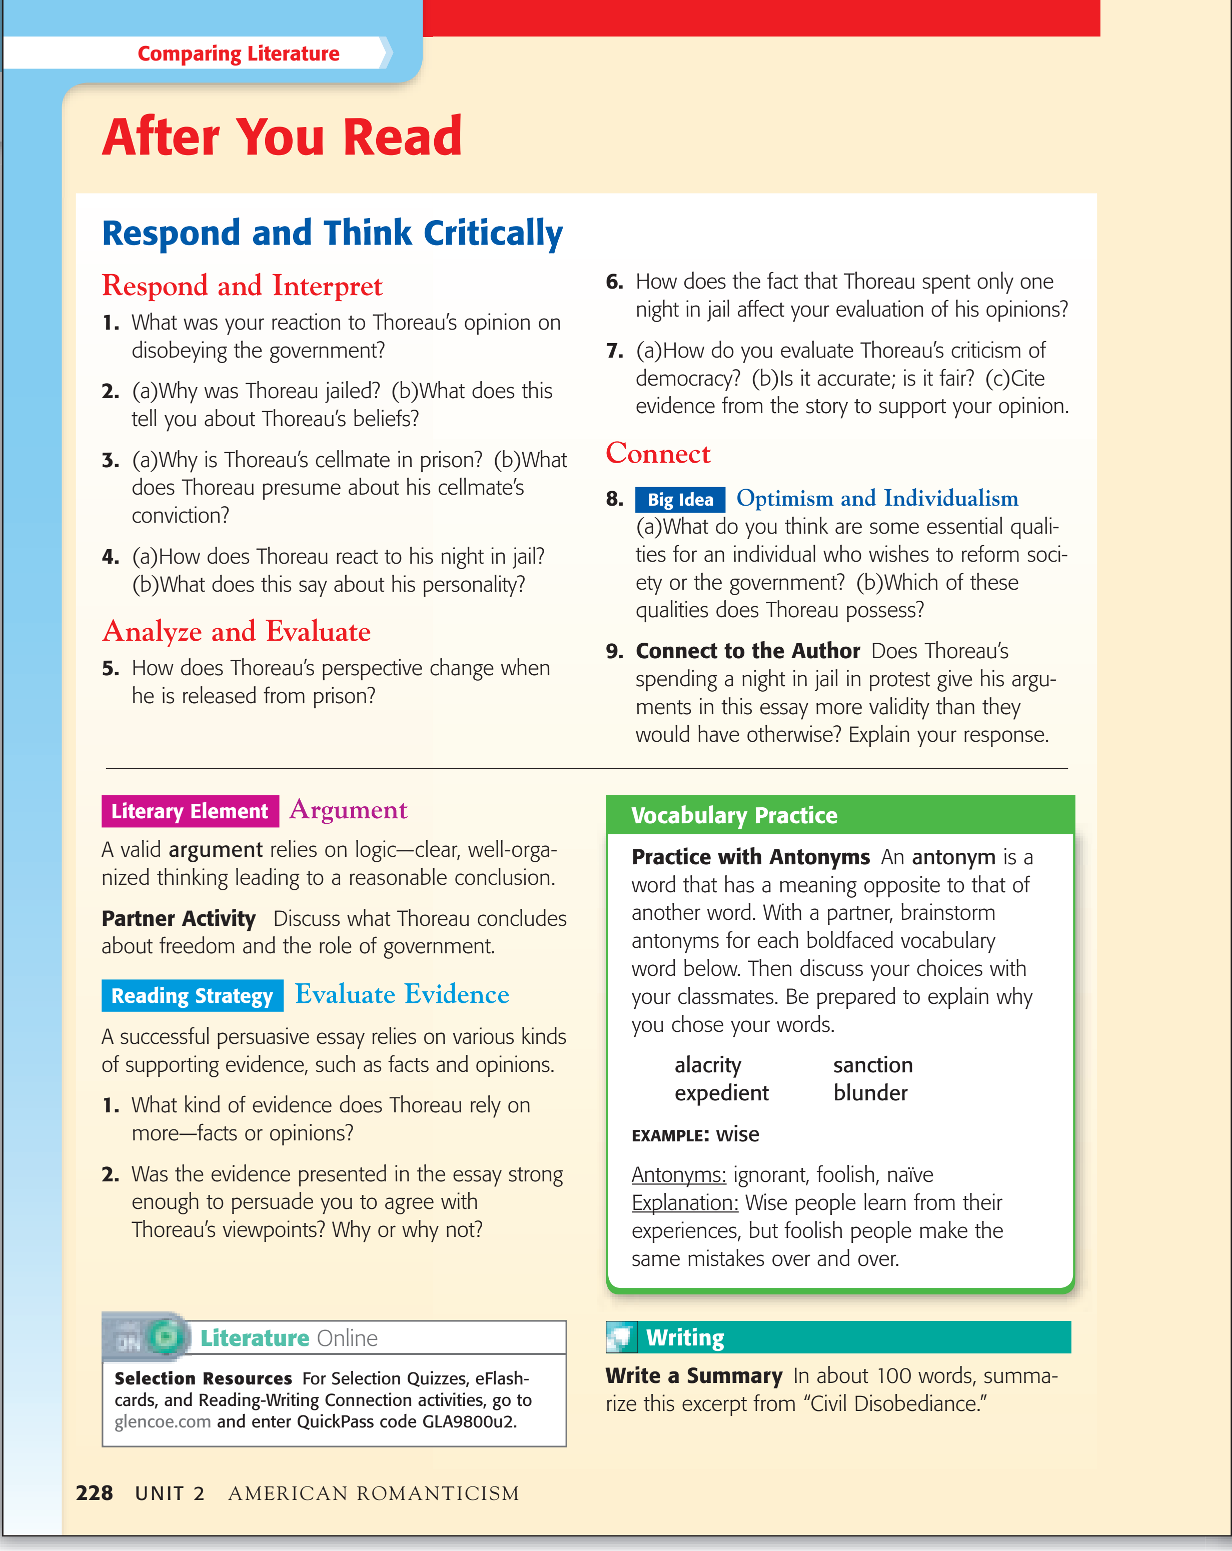
Possible answers:

alacrity Antonyms: slowness, hesitation; Explanation: A decision made with alacrity comes quickly, while hesitation makes it take a long time.

expedient Antonyms: inefficient, slow, impractical Explanation: Something that is expedient is convenient and efficient, not slow.

sanction Antonyms: disapproval, veto Explanation: I have my parents' sanction to buy a car, but I couldn't buy it if I had their disapproval.

blunder Antonym: correction Explanation: A blunder is an error, and a correction amends the error.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. What was your reaction to Thoreau's opinion on disobeying the government?
2. (a)Why was Thoreau jailed? (b)What does this tell you about Thoreau's beliefs?
3. (a)Why is Thoreau's cellmate in prison? (b)What does Thoreau presume about his cellmate's conviction?
4. (a)How does Thoreau react to his night in jail? (b)What does this say about his personality?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. How does Thoreau's perspective change when he is released from prison?
6. How does the fact that Thoreau spent only one night in jail affect your evaluation of his opinions?
7. (a)How do you evaluate Thoreau's criticism of democracy? (b)Is it accurate; is it fair? (c)Cite evidence from the story to support your opinion.

Connect

8. Big Idea Optimism and Individualism (a)What do you think are some essential qualities for an individual who wishes to reform society or the government? (b)Which of these qualities does Thoreau possess?
9. Connect to the Author Does Thoreau's spending a night in jail in protest give his arguments in this essay more validity than they would have otherwise? Explain your response.

Literary Element Argument

A valid argument relies on logic—clear, well-organized thinking leading to a reasonable conclusion.

Partner Activity Discuss what Thoreau concludes about freedom and the role of government.

Reading Strategy Evaluate Evidence

A successful persuasive essay relies on various kinds of supporting evidence, such as facts and opinions.

1. What kind of evidence does Thoreau rely on more—facts or opinions?
2. Was the evidence presented in the essay strong enough to persuade you to agree with Thoreau's viewpoints? Why or why not?

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Antonyms An antonym is a word that has a meaning opposite to that of another word. With a partner, brainstorm antonyms for each boldfaced vocabulary word below. Then discuss your choices with your classmates. Be prepared to explain why you chose your words.

alacrity expedient sanction blunder

EXAMPLE: wise

Antonyms: ignorant, foolish, naïve
Explanation: Wise people learn from their experiences, but foolish people make the same mistakes over and over.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Writing

Write a Summary In about 100 words, summarize this excerpt from "Civil Disobediance."

Reading Strategy

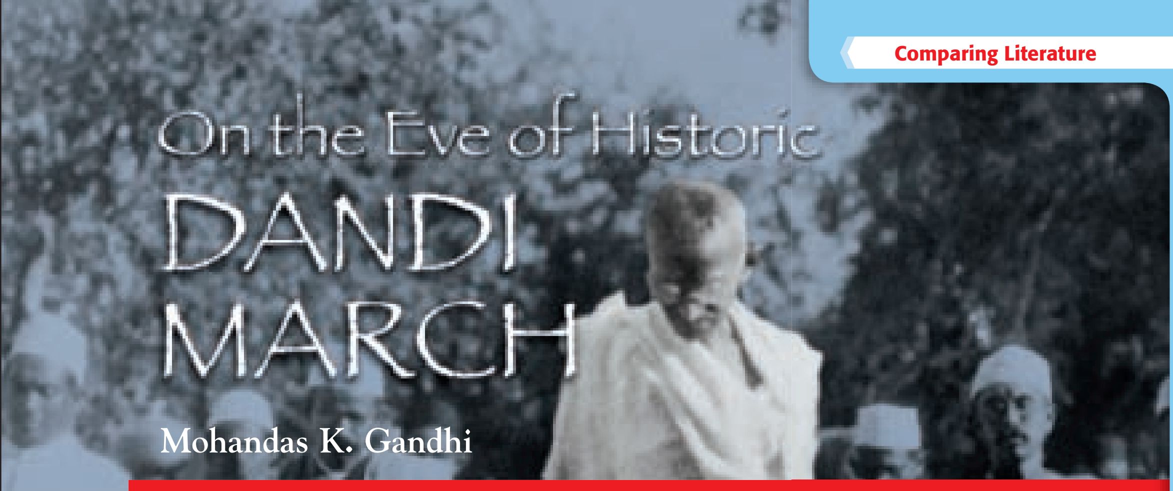
1. Thoreau relies more on opinions based on observations and logic.
2. Responses should include students' interpretation of the essay.

Writing

Students' summaries should include only the main ideas of the text, not opinions.

Literary Element

He concludes that the best government would allow the individual freedom if no harm is done to others.



On the Eve of Historic DANDI MARCH

Mohandas K. Gandhi

Build Background

Known as Mahatma, or "Great-Souled," Gandhi opposed British rule in early twentieth-century India using satyagraha—"truth persistence"—nonviolent resistance to injustice. Gandhi's "salt march" in 1930 protested the salt monopoly, which required Indians to buy taxed salt from the British government. To demonstrate opposition marchers to the Arabian Sea defied British law by extracting salt from seawater.

In all probability this will be my last speech to you. Even if the Government allow me to march tomorrow morning, this will be my last speech on the sacred banks of the Sabarmati.[1] Possibly these may be the last words of my life here.

I have already told you yesterday what I had to say. Today I shall confine myself to what you should do after my companions and I are arrested. The program[2] of the march to Jalalpur[3] must be fulfilled as originally settled. The enlistment of the volunteers for this purpose should be confined to Gujarat[4] only. From what I have seen and heard during the last fortnight, I am inclined to believe that the stream of civil resisters will flow unbroken.

But let there be not a semblance of breach of peace even after all of us have been arrested. We have resolved to utilize all our resources in the pursuit of an exclusively nonviolent struggle. Let no one commit a wrong in anger. This is my hope and prayer. I wish these words of mine reached every nook and corner of the land. My task shall be done if I perish and so do my comrades. It will then be for the Working Committee of the Congress[5] to show you the way and it will be up to you to follow its lead. So long as I have not reached Jalalpur, let nothing be done in contravention to the authority vested in me by the Congress. But once I am arrested, the whole responsibility shifts to the Congress. No one who believes in nonviolence, as a creed, need, therefore, sit still. My compact with the Congress ends as soon as I am arrested. In that case there should be no slackness in the enrolment of volunteers. Wherever possible, civil disobedience of salt laws should be started. These laws can be violated in three ways. It is an offense to manufacture salt wherever there are facilities for doing so. The possession and sale of contraband salt,

---

[1] The Sabarmati is a river in western India.

[2] Here, program means "mission."

[3] Jalalpur, a city in India, was the last stop before Dandi.

[4] Gujarat is a state in western India.

[5] By Congress, Gandhi is referring to the Indian National Congress, a political party he led in the 1920s and '30s.

Focus

Summary

Gandhi outlines his strategy for challenging the British monopoly on the salt industry as part of his campaign for Indian self-rule. This strategy comprises manufacturing, buying, selling, and transporting homemade salt in defiance of British law. Gandhi impels his listeners to carry on this campaign if British forces arrest him, or worse. He also tells his audience to hold firm to nonviolent protest methods even in the face of physical confrontation.

Political History

Civil Disobedience Gandhi believed in peaceful protest and desired to end the British rule of India. In order to live his beliefs, Gandhi chose to break unfair laws as a nonviolent method of opposing the government. He predicted in the opening of this speech that the Dandi March would end with his arrest or death. Gandhi was arrested just outside of Dandi and, without a trial, was jailed for eight months. In addition to this incident, Gandhi was arrested twelve more times.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 6.8
DRP: 59
Lexile: 950

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Persuasive Writing Students might enhance their exploration by researching Hinduism and the political, social, and cultural forces in India—including the caste system. Next have students write an essay agreeing or disagreeing with Gandhi's statement: "I have faith in the righteousness of our cause and the purity of our weapons. And where the means are clean, there God is undoubtedly present with His blessings. And where these three combine, there defeat is an impossibility." Remind students to use evidence from this speech, from other writings by Gandhi, and from their background research to support their claims. Students may present their essays to the class.

Teach

Quickwrite

Student responses should make a connection between self-confidence and nonviolence.

Reading Strategy 1

Compare Ask: How do Gandhi's ideas about individuality and reform compare to Thoreau's? (Gandhi suggests that Indians rise up against the ruling British government. Thoreau discusses his desire to live apart from government, while Gandhi proposes a method of engaging and opposing the government.)

Cultural History ☆

An Epic Speech Gandhi delivered his "salt march" speech to a crowd of 10,000 on the banks of the Sabarmati River. The following morning, Gandhi and 78 followers started the 24-day trek to Dandi. On the morning of April 6, 1930, about 2,000 fellow protestors accompanied Gandhi as he waded into the sea.

which includes natural salt or salt earth, is also an offense. The purchasers of such salt will be equally guilty. To carry away the natural salt deposits on the seashore is likewise violation of law. So is the hawking of such salt. In short, you may choose any one or all of these devices to break the salt monopoly.

1 We are, however, not to be content with this alone. There is no ban by the Congress and wherever the local workers have self-confidence other suitable measures may be adopted. I stress only one condition, namely, let our pledge of truth and nonviolence as the only means for the attainment of Swaraj[6] be faithfully kept. For the rest, every one has a free hand. But, that does not give a license to all and sundry to carry on on their own responsibility. Wherever there are local leaders, their orders should be obeyed by the people. Where there are no leaders and only a handful of men have faith in the program, they may do what they can, if they have enough self-confidence. They have a right, nay it is their duty, to do so. The history of the world is full of instances of men who rose to leadership, by sheer force of self-confidence, bravery and tenacity. We too, if we sincerely aspire to Swaraj and are impatient to attain it, should have similar self-confidence. Our ranks will swell and our hearts strengthen, as the number of our arrests by the Government increases.

Much can be done in many other ways besides these. The liquor and foreign cloth shops can be picketed. We can refuse to pay taxes if we have the requisite strength. The lawyers can give up practice. The public can boycott the law courts by refraining from litigation. Government servants can resign their posts. In the midst of the despair reigning all round people quake with fear of losing employment. Such men are unfit for Swaraj. But why this despair? The number of Government servants in the country does not exceed a few hundred thousand. What about the rest? Where are they to go? Even free India will not be able to accommodate a greater number of public servants. A Collector then will not need the number of servants he has got today. He will be his own servant. Our starving millions can by no means afford this enormous expenditure. If, therefore, we are sensible enough, let us bid goodbye to Government employment, no matter if it is the post of a judge or a peon. Let all who are cooperating with the Government in one way or another, be it by paying taxes, keeping titles, or sending children to official schools, etc. withdraw their cooperation in all or as many ways as possible. Then there are women who can stand shoulder to shoulder with men in this struggle.

You may take it as my will. It was the message that I desired to impart to you before starting on the march or for the jail. I wish that there should be no suspension or abandonment of the war that commences tomorrow morning or earlier, if I am arrested before ☆ that time. I shall eagerly await the news that ten batches are ready as soon as my batch is arrested. I believe there are men in India to complete the work begun by me. I have faith in the righteousness of our cause and the purity of our weapons. And where the means are clean, there God is undoubtedly present with His blessings. And where these three combine, there defeat is an impossibility. A Satyagrahi,[7] whether free or incarcerated, is ever victorious. He is vanquished only when he forsakes truth and nonviolence and turns a deaf ear to the inner voice. If, therefore, there is such a thing as defeat for even a Satyagrahi, he alone is the cause of it. God bless you all and keep off all obstacles from the path in the struggle that begins tomorrow.

Quickwrite

Gandhi insists his followers must have self-confidence to succeed. Why is this important when using nonviolence as a tool for social justice?

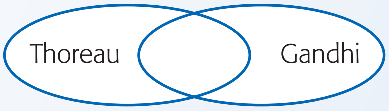
---

[6] Swaraj means "home rule." It refers to Indians' desire to rule themselves, rather than be ruled by the British.

[7] A Satyagrahi embodies Gandhi's ideals of nonviolence.

Reading Practice

Compare and Contrast Point out that a Venn diagram is one way to organize thoughts when asked to compare and contrast selections. Have students make a list of things that they know about Thoreau's cultural background, beliefs, and purpose for writing. After they read this selection, have them do the same for Gandhi, and then fit things that are similar in the overlapping portion of the diagram and things that seem different on the outside.



from Long Walk to Freedom

Nelson Mandela

Build Background

From prisoner to president of South Africa, Nelson Mandela was one of the political miracles of the twentieth century. In 1944 he became a leader in the African National Congress (ANC), a political party that opposed apartheid, South Africa's policy of racial segregation. After a massacre of unarmed Africans in 1960, Mandela dropped his nonviolent reform method in favor of supporting acts of sabotage against the government. In 1962 he was jailed and, after a widely publicized trial, was sentenced to life in prison in 1964. Over the years, Mandela became the world's best-known political prisoner, gaining international support in his fight against apartheid.

May 10 dawned bright and clear. For the past few days, I had been pleasantly besieged by arriving dignitaries[1] and world leaders who were coming to pay their respects before the inauguration.[2] The inauguration would be the largest gathering ever of international leaders on South African soil.

The ceremonies took place in the lovely sandstone amphitheater formed by the Union Buildings in Pretoria.[3] For decades, this had been the seat of white supremacy, and now it was the site of a rainbow gathering of different colors and nations for the installation of South Africa's first democratic, nonracial government.

On that lovely autumn day I was accompanied by my daughter Zenani. On the podium, Mr. de Klerk[4] was first sworn in as second deputy president. Then Thabo Mbeki[5] was

---

[1] Dignitaries are people who hold a rank of dignity, or honor.

[2] An inauguration is a ceremonial induction into office, or a formal beginning.

[3] Pretoria is the administrative capital of South Africa.

[4] F. W. de Klerk served as president of South Africa from 1989 to 1994.

[5] Thabo Mbeki is a politician who became the president of South Africa in 1999.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Compound adjectives such as best-known or dark-skinned are hyphenated to show that they work together to modify the noun that follows. Have students place the hyphen in this sentence: The long standing bans on voting were repealed.

Intermediate Have students paraphrase Mandela's inauguration speech. Ask: What is Mandela referring to when he uses the following terms: human disaster, human dignity, and *human achievement? (apartheid, the African people, overcoming apartheid)

Comparing Literature

Focus

Summary

This excerpt from Nelson Mandela's autobiography begins at the former South African president's inauguration day. He discusses the difficulties of serving both his family as a father and his country as a reformer. The autobiography refers to Mandela's fellow activists and expresses his belief that adversity strengthens the individual. According to Mandela, acts of racism hurt both the oppressor and the oppressed. At the end of this excerpt, Mandela tells the reader that he has a long way to go on his journey to improve his country.

Political History

Establishment of Apartheid

When it took control of the government in the 1940s, the Afrikaner National Party created a system of apartheid to solidify its power. The goal of apartheid was to give power to Caucasian people and to repress other races. The government passed apartheid laws that instituted racial discrimination and segregation as a way of life.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 6.8
DRP: 59
Lexile: 950

Teach

Literary Element 1

Description Say: Analyze Mandela's use of description in the paragraph beginning with "A few moments later." To which senses does this passage appeal? (Fighter jets and generals wearing medals and ribbons appeal to sight; the sound of the jets performing a flyover appeals to hearing.)

Ask: Why does Mandela find it ironic that the generals are saluting him? (The same people who are saluting Mandela now would have arrested him a few years earlier.)

Political History ☆

Apartheid Laws Apartheid became an official government policy in 1948. It was fortified by laws such as the Group Areas Act of 1950 and the Land Acts of 1954 and 1955, which led to white control of more than 80 percent of the nation's land. In 1990 F. W. de Klerk repealed the laws that sustained apartheid.

sworn in as first deputy president. When it was my turn, I pledged to obey and uphold the constitution and to devote myself to the well-being of the republic and its people. To the assembled guests and the watching world, I said:

Today, all of us do, by our presence here . . . confer[6] glory and hope to newborn liberty. Out of the experience of an extraordinary human disaster that lasted too long, must be born a society of which all humanity will be proud.

. . . We, who were outlaws not so long ago, have today been given the rare privilege to be host to the nations of the world on our own soil. We thank all of our distinguished international guests for having come to take possession with the people of our country of what is, after all, a common victory for justice, for peace, for human dignity.

We have, at last, achieved our political emancipation.[7] We pledge ourselves to liberate all our people from the continuing bondage of poverty, deprivation, suffering, gender, and other discrimination.

Never, never, and never again shall it be that this beautiful land will again experience the oppression of one by another. . . . The sun shall never set on so glorious a human achievement.

Let freedom reign. God bless Africa!

1 A few moments later we all lifted our eyes in awe as a spectacular array of South African jets, helicopters, and troop carriers roared in perfect formation over the Union Buildings. It was not only a display of pinpoint precision and military force, but a demonstration of the military's loyalty to democracy, to a new government that had been freely and fairly elected. Only moments before, the highest generals of the South African Defense Force and police, their chests bedecked[8] with ribbons and medals from days gone by, saluted me and pledged their loyalty. 1 I was not unmindful of the fact that not so many years before they would not have saluted but arrested me. Finally a chevron of Impala jets[9] left a smoke trail of the black, red, green, blue, white, and gold of the new South African flag.

Nelson Mandela visits schoolchildren in South Africa.

---

[6] Confer means "to bestow, or give, an honor."

[7] Emancipation means "the process of becoming free from restraint or control."

[8] Bedecked means "adorned or clothed."

[9] Here, chevron is a V-shaped pattern; an Impala jet is a military fighter plane.

Reading Practice

Detecting Bias Explain that persuasive messages, such as advertisements, editorials, and political campaigns, appeal heavily to an audience's emotions. A bandwagon appeal attempts to make you think everyone else is doing something. Loaded language is words with strong connotations. Testimonials supply endorsements from experts or celebrities. Polling results offer numbers to show support for a certain viewpoint.

Have students compare Gandhi's speech with the excerpt from Mandela's autobiography. Ask them to identify whether bias appears in either work or whether the political and philosophical ideas each man presented are clear and accurate.

The day was symbolized for me by the playing of our two national anthems, and the vision of whites singing "Nkosi Sikelel' iAfrika" and blacks singing "Die Stem," the old anthem of the republic. Although that day, neither group knew the lyrics of the anthem they once despised, they would soon know the words by heart.

On the day of the inauguration, I was overwhelmed with a sense of history. In the first decade of the twentieth century, a few years after the bitter Anglo-Boer War[10] and before my own birth, the white-skinned peoples of South Africa patched up their differences and erected a system of racial domination against the dark-skinned peoples of their own land. The structure they created formed the basis of one of the harshest, most inhumane societies the world has ever known. Now, in the last decade of the twentieth century, and my own eighth decade as a man, that system had been overturned forever and replaced by one that recognized the rights and freedoms of all peoples regardless of the color of their skin.

That day had come about through the unimaginable sacrifices of thousands of my people, people whose suffering and courage can never be counted or repaid. I felt that day, as I have on so many other days, that I was simply the sum of all those African patriots who had gone before me. That long and noble line ended and now began again with me. I was pained that I was not able to thank them and that they were not able to see what their sacrifices had wrought.[11]

The policy of apartheid created a deep and lasting wound in my country and my people. All of us will spend many years, if not generations, recovering from that profound hurt. But the decades of oppression and brutality had another, unintended effect, and that was that it produced the Oliver Tambos, the Walter Sisulus, the Chief Luthulis, the Yusuf Dadoos, the Bram Fischers, the Robert Sobukwes[12] of our time—men of such extraordinary courage, wisdom, and generosity that their like may never be known again. Perhaps it requires such depth of oppression to create such heights of character. My country is rich in the minerals and gems that lie beneath its soil, but I have always known that its greatest wealth is its people, finer and truer than the purest diamonds.

2 It is from these comrades in the struggle that I learned the meaning of courage. Time and again, I have seen men and women risk and give their lives for an idea. I have seen men stand up to attacks and torture without breaking, showing a strength and resiliency that defies the imagination. I learned that courage was not the absence of fear, but the triumph over it. I felt fear myself more times than I can remember, but I hid it behind a mask of boldness. The brave man is not he who does not feel afraid, but he who conquers that fear.

I never lost hope that this great transformation would occur. Not only because of the great heroes I have already cited, but because of the courage of the ordinary men and women of my country. I always knew that deep down in every human heart, there is mercy and generosity. No one is born hating another person because of the color of his skin, or his background, or his religion. People must learn to hate, and if they can learn to hate, they can be taught to love, for love comes more naturally to the human heart than its opposite. Even in the grimmest times in prison, when my comrades and I were pushed to our limits, I would see a glimmer of humanity in one of the guards, perhaps just for a second, but it was enough to reassure me and keep me going. Man's goodness is a flame that can be hidden but never extinguished.

---

[10] The Anglo-Boer War (1899–1902) was fought between Great Britain and the Boers, who are South Africans of Dutch descent.

[11] Here, wrought means "made."

[12] The people Mandela refers to—Tambo, Sisulu, Luthuli, Dadoo, Fischer, and Sobukwe—are fellow South African reformers and opponents of apartheid.

Comparing Literature

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Clarify Point out to students that if they skip a confusing passage, they may not be able to understand text that follows. Ask: What does Mandela mean by "The brave man is not he who does not feel afraid, but he who conquers that fear"? (Everyone is afraid sometimes. Brave people do not deny that they are afraid; instead, they conquer their fear.) How does Mandela lead up to this idea? (He suggests that individuals are made stronger through adversity and by confronting their fears.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

AAVE For approaching level students who are users of African American vernacular English (AAVE), Mandela provides an example of the proper use of the word whose. He says "...people whose suffering and courage can never be counted or repaid." This possessive pronoun is sometimes replaced with the word who by users of AAVE. Have students practice using this construction by giving them the following nouns followed by whose, and having them supply a sentence: students whose; a friend whose; dogs whose; football players whose. Model with this example: He knows many students whose backpacks weigh 20 pounds.

Comparing Literature

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Understand Cause and Effect Ask: How does Mandela argue that oppression affects more than just the person who is oppressed? (Mandela says that someone who engages in racist acts is a "prisoner of hatred." He says he cannot rest until the people of his country are free from hatred.) How did this cause Mandela to make sacrifices? (Mandela notes that he was forced to take time away from his family and abandon his law career in the pursuit of social reform.)

Cultural History ☆

Mandela's Retirement Mandela retired from politics in 1999, devoting himself to other reform efforts. In 2005, he was the host of a benefit concert for women with HIV. The concert was named 46664, in honor of Mandela's number while a prisoner.

We took up the struggle with our eyes wide open, under no illusion that the path would be an easy one. As a young man, when I joined the African National Congress,[13] I saw the price my comrades paid for their beliefs, and it was high. For myself, I have never regretted my commitment to the struggle, and I was always prepared to face the hardships that affected me personally. But my family paid a terrible price, perhaps too dear a price for my commitment.

In life, every man has twin obligations— ☆ obligations to his family, to his parents, to his wife and children; and he has an obligation to his people, his community, his country. In a civil and humane society, each man is able to fulfill those obligations according to his own inclinations and abilities. But in a country like South Africa, it was almost impossible for a man of my birth and color to fulfill both of those obligations. In South Africa, a man of color who attempted to live as a human being was punished and isolated. In South Africa, a man who tried to fulfill his duty to his people was inevitably ripped from his family and home and was forced to live a life apart, a twilight existence of secrecy and rebellion. I did not in the beginning choose to place my people above my family, but in attempting to serve my people, I found that I was prevented from fulfilling my obligations as a son, a brother, a father, and a husband.

> The oppressed and the oppressor alike are robbed of their humanity.

In that way, my commitment to my people, to the millions of South Africans I would never know or meet, was at the expense of the people I knew best and loved most. It was as simple and yet as incomprehensible as the moment a small child asks her father, "Why can you not be with us?" And the father must utter the terrible words: "There are other children like you, a great many of them . . ." and then one's voice trails off.

I was not born with a hunger to be free. I was born free—free in every way that I could know. Free to run in the fields near my mother's hut, free to swim in the clear stream that ran through my village, free to roast mealies[14] under the stars and ride the broad backs of slow-moving bulls. As long as I obeyed my father and abided by the customs of my tribe, I was not troubled by the laws of man or God.

It was only when I began to learn that my boyhood freedom was an illusion, when I discovered as a young man that my freedom had already been taken from me, that I began to hunger for it. At first, as a student, I wanted freedom only for myself, the transitory freedoms of being able to stay out at night, read what I pleased, and go where I chose. Later, as a young man in Johannesburg, I yearned for the basic and honorable freedoms of achieving my potential, of earning my keep, of marrying and having a family—the freedom not to be obstructed in a lawful life.

But then I slowly saw that not only was I not free, but my brothers and sisters were not free. I saw that it was not just my freedom that was curtailed, but the freedom of everyone who looked like I did. That is when I joined the African National Congress, and that is when the hunger for my own freedom became the greater hunger for the freedom of my people. It was this desire for the freedom of my people to live their lives with dignity and self-respect that animated my life, that transformed a frightened young man into a bold one, that drove a law-abiding attorney

---

☆ [13] The African National Congress (ANC) is a South African political party founded by blacks in 1912.

[14] A mealie is an ear of Indian corn.

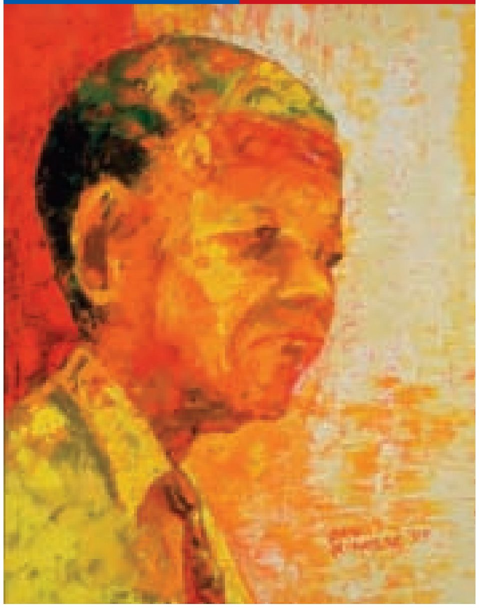
Speaking and Listening Practice

Use Transitions Discuss the importance of transitions in a speech. Transitional words, such as first, second, finally, most importantly, and in conclusion serve as signposts, cuing the audience and guiding them through a speech. In the introduction of an oral presentation, it helps to preview the main points that will be discussed so that the audience can anticipate the speech's direction. Have students prepare an oral response to the three essays in this section. Students should compare and contrast the writers' attitudes toward government and their ideas about social protest. Have students use examples and evidence from the three texts to support their conclusions.



Mandela, 1993. Bayo Iribhogbe. Oil on board, 58.4 x 73.6 cm. Private Collection.

to become a criminal, that turned a family-loving husband into a man without a home, that forced a life-loving man to live like a monk. I am not more virtuous or self-sacrificing than the next man, but I found that I could not even enjoy the poor and limited freedoms I was allowed when I knew my people were not free. Freedom is indivisible; the chains on any one of my people were the chains on all of them, the chains on all of my people were the chains on me.

1 It was during those long and lonely years that my hunger for the freedom of my own people became a hunger for the freedom of all people, white and black. I knew as well as I knew anything that the oppressor must be liberated just as surely as the oppressed. A man who takes away another man's freedom is a prisoner of hatred, he is locked behind the bars of prejudice and narrow-mindedness. I am not truly free if I am taking away someone else's freedom, just as surely as I am not free when my freedom is taken from me. The oppressed and the oppressor alike are robbed of their humanity.

When I walked out of prison, that was my mission, to liberate the oppressed and the oppressor both. Some say that has now been achieved. But I know that is not the case. The truth is that we are not yet free; we have merely achieved the freedom to be free, the right not to be oppressed. We have not taken the final step of our journey, but the first step on a longer and even more difficult road. For to be free is not merely to cast off one's chains, but to live in a way that respects and enhances the freedom of others. The true test of our devotion to freedom is just beginning.

I walked that long road to freedom. I have tried not to falter; I have made missteps along the way. But I have discovered the secret that after climbing a great hill, one only finds that there are many more hills to climb. I have taken a moment here to rest, to steal a view of the glorious vista[15] that surrounds me, to look back on the distance I have come. But I can rest only for a moment, for with freedom come responsibilities, and I dare not linger, for my long walk is not yet ended. ❧

---

[15] Here, vista means a "wide viewpoint of history."

Quickwrite

What qualities and values distinguish Nelson Mandela as a leader of the people? Write a paragraph describing these qualities and values. Use evidence from his autobiography to support your position.

Teach

Quickwrite

Students should discuss Mandela's belief in serving both family and country and his idea that an essential feature of bravery is acknowledging one's fears.

Cultural History ☆

The ANC Nelson Mandela's presidential victory in 1994 was part of a sweep for the African National Congress, a political party founded in 1912. The group was energized in the 1940s by Mandela and other such leaders, then banned by the South African government in 1960 until it was reinstated by President F. W. de Klerk in 1990. Today the ANC remains the dominant party of South Africa.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Have students reread the last paragraph. Ask: How does the last paragraph sum up the theme of this excerpt? (Throughout the excerpt Mandela has discussed gaining freedom from an oppressive government. In the last paragraph, he looks at where he has been and where he is going.) How does Mandela use the imagery of hills in this paragraph? (The hills are an extended metaphor for the hard or difficult challenges in life. The "great hill" Mandela climbed was overcoming apartheid and seeing his country freed.) How does the imagery of the hills fit with the overriding imagery of a "long walk"? (The "long walk" is an extended metaphor for Mandela's journey through life. The hills represent the challenges in life and the top of a hill represents accomplishment and rest.)

Assess

Compare the Big Idea

Evaluate using these criteria:

- Do students discuss both the theories presented and the actions taken by each writer?
- Do they find similarities and differences among Thoreau, Gandhi, and Mandela?

Have students decide how they will organize their comparisons before they begin to write their essays.

Compare Persuasive Messages

1. Thoreau: The State must respect the individual as a higher power than itself; Gandhi: Indians must fight oppression with nonviolence; Mandela: His country cannot be free until both the oppressor and the oppressed escape hatred. Context, Thoreau: industrialization and the era of reform; Gandhi: British colonialism; Mandela: era of apartheid.
2. Students should include an evaluation of the evidence presented by each writer.
3. Students might point to Thoreau's argument that rule by majority can never be fair by nature or Mandela's point about the negative effects of hatred.

Compare Cultures

Each panel might include different colors or textures that help contrast the three writers.

Wrap-Up: Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

- from Civil Disobedience by Henry David Thoreau
- On the Eve of Historic Dandi March by Mohandas K. Gandhi
- from Long Walk to Freedom by Nelson Mandela

COMPARE THE Big Idea Optimism and Individualism

Writing Activity Henry David Thoreau, Mohandas K. Gandhi, and Nelson Mandela reflect the spirit of optimism and individualism in these selections. Write a brief essay discussing each writer's message about the power of the individual to bring about social reform. In your essay, be sure to describe the historical context that frames each writer's message. Cite evidence from the selections to support your ideas.

COMPARE Persuasive Messages

Group Activity Thoreau, Gandhi, and Mandela craft different arguments for social reform and develop them by using a variety of persuasive techniques. With a small group discuss the following questions. Cite evidence from the selections to support your answers.

1. What is each writer's main message or philosophical assumption? What is the historical context that shapes each writer's message?
2. Evaluate the effectiveness of each writer's argument for both friendly and hostile audiences. Which writer best succeeds at stating his case? Why?
3. Which of the reading selections challenged you to think in a new way? Explain.

Former South African President Nelson Mandela gazes through the bars of the jail cell he spent more than two decades in as a political prisoner.

COMPARE Cultures

Visual Display Cultural, social, and political forces influenced all of these writers. Thoreau was influenced by American Romanticism and the Reform Era; Gandhi, by British colonialism in India; Mandela, by African tribal culture and apartheid. Create a three-panel collage of images—one panel for each writer—that illustrate these cultural, historical, and political forces.

Literature Online

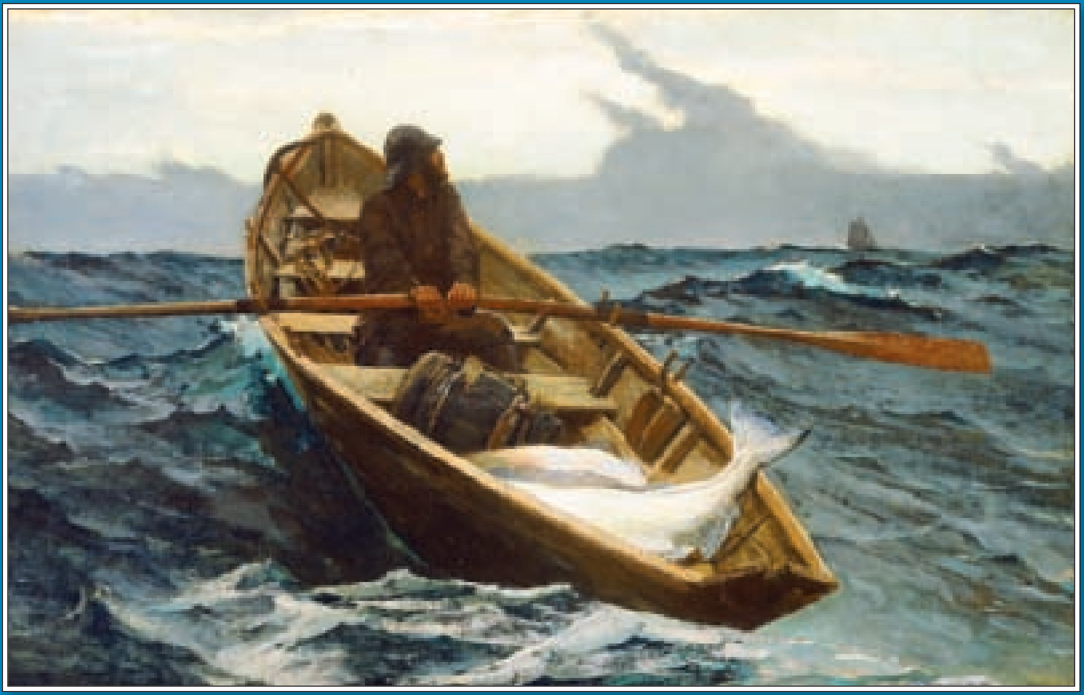
Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Assessment Practice

Short Response Remind students that answers to short-response questions are evaluated based on their insightfulness and the evidence drawn from the text to support them. For example, in order to answer question 3 above, students should decide which selection presented them with a new idea, and then find the particular words that challenged them to think in a new way.

PART 2

The Dark Side of Romanticism



The Fog Warning, 1885. Winslow Homer. Oil on canvas. Museum of Fine Arts, Boston.

View the Art Homer's painting seems to capture a moment in a story. What might be some main events in the story and what does it suggest about the relationship between humans and nature? ★

> "All that we see or seem
> Is but a dream within a dream." 1
>
> —Edgar Allan Poe

UNIT TWO

PART 2

Analyze and Extend

Literary Element 1

Create a Mood Have a student read aloud the quotation on this page. Discuss what Poe's words mean. (Students may say that Poe means reality is an illusion or a dream.) Ask: What mood do these lines create? (Students may say that they create a mood of sadness and strangeness by blurring the line between what is real and what is imagined.)

View the Art ★

Answer: The main idea might be that the fisherman has gone far from his ship to harvest nature's bounty, but now he might fear that he cannot overcome the rough sea to get back to his ship. Nature gives and takes.

The American artist Winslow Homer (1836–1920) is known for his powerful paintings of the sea. His seascapes, based on direct observations of nature, show men challenging the power of the ocean. The subjects in his paintings perceive the dangers of dark, turbulent, and overwhelming natural forces and struggle to survive.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Some students may not be familiar with examining fine art and responding to it. Encourage them to examine the painting and then write down adjectives and phrases that describe the sea and the man in the boat. (Students may say that the sea looks angry, rough, dark, threatening, dangerous, or frightening and that the man is rowing hard, watching the sky and sea, and looking worried.) Ask: How does the mood of this painting compare with the mood created in the quotation by Poe? (Both moods are dark and somewhat eerie.)

For additional support for English Learners, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 100.

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 25

Or write on the board: What makes a good adventure story? Horror story? Mystery? Guide the discussion to help students realize that every story contains basic elements: setting, plot, characters, point of view, and theme.

Teach

Literary Element

Short Story A short story is a brief fictional narrative written in prose. It generally includes a plot (sequence of events), a setting (time and place in which events occur), characters, a point of view (relationship of the narrator to the story), and a theme (central message).

View the Art ★

John Quidor (1801–1881) was both a painter and an artisan. Of his 35 known paintings, 17 depict subjects from Washington Irving's stories.

For an activity related to this selection, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 98–99.

Learning Objectives

For pages 238–239

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study:
Analyzing literary periods.
Analyzing literary genres.

American Short Stories

As the American novelist and critic Henry James observed, "It takes a great deal of history to produce a little literature." At the beginning of the 1800s, the United States was still a very young country. American writers of the time were painfully conscious of the lack of a native literary tradition. This was particularly true in the area of fiction. Dominated by Puritanism, early American culture had no place for made-up stories created largely for the purpose of entertainment.

This attitude toward fiction lingered for a long time. It was not until the period of American Romanticism that Washington Irving, Nathaniel Hawthorne, and Edgar Allan Poe laid the foundations of the American short story. In the process, they created literary forms and ideas about how to write short stories that remain important today.

> "It has been a matter of marvel, to my European readers, that a man from the wilds of America should express himself in tolerable English."
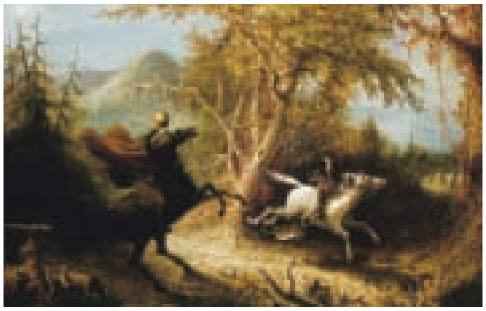
>
> —Washington Irving

Literary Pioneers

Irving, the first American writer to become famous outside the U.S., transplanted traditional European narratives and gave them American settings. For example, he based "Rip Van Winkle" on legends about people captured by fairies. Hawthorne used both European material and the histories and legends of Puritan New England as the basis for fiction. Poe helped develop the new American literary magazines into mass-circulation marketplaces for short stories. More importantly, he was a true innovator who pioneered new literary genres—mysteries (or detective stories) and science fiction.



The Headless Horseman Pursuing Ichabod Crane, 1858. John Quidor. Oil on canvas, 68 x 86 cm. Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC. ★

Mysteries and Science Fiction

Tales of robbery and murder had always existed. Poe's brilliant innovation was to combine such stories with a skilled detective using reasoning to investigate a crime. This new investigative approach had not existed until the appearance of the first professional police forces in the early 1800s. In "The Murders in the Rue Morgue," Poe established many of the basic conventions that mystery writers have followed ever since:

- the brilliant, eccentric detective (Dupin)
- his less-gifted partner, who is an admiring foil
- the blundering official police force
- the "impossible crime" taking place in a locked room

Writing Practice

Evaluate Elements Remind students of the devices that Poe developed (the eccentric detective, blundering police force). Tell students that many of the conventions of these early writers survive today in television programs and movies. Discuss a detective or crime program and write a brief list of elements from that show (noting the major characters, plot, setting). Ask students to look for these story elements in the works of literature they read. For information about characters, remind students to look for what the characters say and do. Remind students that the writers discussed in this introduction often focused on New England settings. Have students create a story map to track the basic conventions of mystery writers.

Poe also has a claim to be the "father of science fiction." In stories such as "A Descent into the Maelstrom," he created Romantic tales of terror with an emphasis on factual detail that anticipated later science fiction. Poe so realistically portrayed a transatlantic balloon flight in one of his stories that it was widely believed actually to have taken place.

Theory and Practice

Poe believed that the most effective short stories are those that can be read in a single sitting. He theorized that every detail in a well-constructed story contributes to the creation of a certain unique and single effect. By effect, Poe meant the overall impact that the story makes upon the reader. Some favorite effects that Poe tried to achieve in his stories were feelings of dread, horror, and suspense. Poe's theory of a unique single effect remains a fundamental principle of short-story writing today.

Although Hawthorne's stories were finely crafted, he showed little interest in constructing literary theories. Hawthorne chose to focus on moral and psychological themes, such as the struggle between good and evil and the isolation of people from their fellow human beings. Unlike his friend Emerson, Hawthorne saw life as essentially tragic. His pessimistic view of human nature gave his stories a dark, shadowy quality that Poe criticized as "a somewhat too general or prevalent tone—a tone of melancholy and mysticism." Hawthorne's mystical outlook led him to rely heavily on symbolism and allegory to convey his meaning, often at the expense of a realistic rendering of everyday life. His distinguishing feature is his probing exploration of the role of guilt in the inner lives of human beings—an obsession that he inherited from his Puritan ancestors.

Literature Online

Literature and Reading For more about American short stories, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Short Story Elements

The short story generally includes these elements.

Setting: the time and place in which the events occur

Characters: the participants in the story. The main character is the protagonist. There may be an antagonist, a character in conflict with the protagonist.

Point of view: the perspective of the storyteller, or narrator

Theme: the central message of the story that readers can apply to life. A theme may be stated clearly or implied.

Plot: the sequence of related events in a story. Most plots deal with a problem and develop around a conflict, a struggle between opposing forces.

Poster for Universal film Murders in the Rue Morgue, unknown artist, 1932.

Respond and Think Critically

1. What was the attitude of readers in early American culture toward fiction? Why do you think early American readers had this attitude?
2. What materials did Irving use as the basis of his fiction? How did he use these materials?
3. Compare and contrast Poe's and Hawthorne's attitudes toward literary theory and practice. Name one literary achievement that each author is famous for today.
4. Connect to Today What were Poe's important innovations in literary form? Explain how these innovations can be seen in literature today.

Assess

1. They generally did not read fictional stories for entertainment. American culture was dominated by Puritanism, which discouraged the use of art forms for enjoyment.
2. Irving combined European material and the legends of New England, putting traditional European narratives into American settings.
3. Poe thought that a short story should create a single effect on the reader. Hawthorne focused on moral and psychological themes. Poe's theory of a unique effect continues to influence short story writers today. Hawthorne is known for his deep exploration of the role of guilt in people's inner lives.
4. Detective stories and science fiction; today, conventions such as the brilliant private detective who outsmarts the police force and the "impossible crime" that takes place in a locked room are still found in such stories.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established To help students keep track of these three authors, have them make a chart similar to the one shown. Tell them to look for personal, historical, religious, and cultural influences on each author's writing. An example of how students might use the chart is shown.

	Personal Influences	Historical Influences	Religious and Cultural Influences
Washington Irving	His fiancée died; focused on writing
Edgar Allan Poe
Nathaniel Hawthorne			Read widely about dark Puritan past

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus Transparency 17

Daily Language Practice Transparency 26

Or tell students about a difficult decision you have made—such as changing careers or moving to a new town—and the effects of that decision. Ask students to give examples of decisions they have made and to share the consequences of their decisions. Ask: What is the most difficult aspect of making an important decision? (not being able to predict the outcome)

Before You Read

The Devil and Tom Walker

Meet Washington Irving
(1783–1859)

Named after his country's first president, Washington Irving won the battle for America's literary independence. He was the first American storyteller to be internationally recognized as a man of letters.

> "[Washington Irving is] the first ambassador from the New World of Letters to the Old."
>
> —William Makepeace Thackeray

Lawyer and Writer The youngest of eleven children, Irving was born in New York City to a wealthy family with strict moral values. Though he had little formal education, he took an interest in the study of law, later working in the law office of Josiah Hoffman. Irving and Hoffman's daughter Matilda fell in love, and they were engaged.

His interest in law began to dwindle, however, and in 1802 he started to write, publishing satirical essays in a New York newspaper. He soon began to publish a series of periodical essays called Salmagundi. The success of Salmagundi steered Irving away from law and toward writing.

Success and Heartbreak In 1809, under the pseudonym Diedrich Knickerbocker, he published his most popular work, Knickerbocker's A History of New York from the Beginning of the World to the End of the Dutch Dynasty. This book was a humorous combination of history, folklore, and opinion that delighted readers with sketches of the customs and families of old New York. That same year, however, Matilda died suddenly of tuberculosis. Overwhelmed by grief, Irving put his writing on hold. Haunted by the memory of his lost fiancée, he was never to marry.

During this dark period, Irving traveled often, eventually moving to Europe to manage his brother's business interests. In 1818, after the family business went bankrupt, Irving resumed writing.

International Acclaim The Sketch Book of Geoffrey Crayon, Gent (1819–1820) established Irving's literary reputation in Europe. The book included two stories that later became classics, "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow" and "Rip Van Winkle." Irving borrowed the plots of these stories from two German folktales and then placed them in the Hudson Valley.

Irving eventually returned to the United States, where he continued writing—travel books, histories, biographies of Columbus and Washington, and more tales and sketches. His enormous popularity earned him recognition as the father of American letters. Irving's distinctively American settings and character types later influenced a range of authors, including Romantics, such as Nathaniel Hawthorne and Edgar Allan Poe, and regionalist writers, such as Mark Twain and William Faulkner.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Washington Irving, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Selection Skills

The Devil and Tom Walker

Literary Elements
- Characterization (SE pp. 241, 242, 244, 245, 247–249, 252)

Reading Skills
- Make Predictions (SE pp. 241, 243, 246, 247, 249, 252)
- Visualize (TE p. 242)

Vocabulary Skills
- Analogies (SE pp. 241, 252)
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 252)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE pp. 245, 247, 250)
- Oral Presentation (TE p. 248)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Summary (SE p. 252)
- Appositives and Appositive Phrases (TE p. 244)
- Absolute Phrases (TE p. 246)
- Action Verbs (TE p. 250)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Story

Have you ever made a decision that you later regretted? Have you ever made a commitment to do something and then later changed your mind? Discuss these questions in a small group.

Build Background

"The Devil and Tom Walker" takes place in New England in the 1720s—when Puritanism was fading and commercialism was on the rise. The story is an adaptation of the old German legend of Faust, a sixteenth-century astronomer who sold his soul to the devil.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The Power of Darkness

As you read "The Devil and Tom Walker," ask yourself, What elements of Romanticism does this story reflect?

Literary Element Characterization

Characterization refers to the methods a writer uses to reveal the personality of a character. In direct characterization the writer makes explicit statements about a character. In indirect characterization the writer reveals a character through the character's words and actions and through what other characters think and say about that character. As you read, ask yourself, How does Irving characterize Tom Walker? What details about Walker's character stand out to you most?

Reading Strategy Make and Verify Predictions

Predicting is making an educated guess about what will happen in a story. Predicting helps you anticipate events and appreciate less obvious parts of a story. To make predictions, combine clues the author provides with your own understanding of characters and events. Adjust or change your predictions as you continue to read and discover more clues.

Tip: Predict Ask yourself, "How do I think this situation will be resolved based on the clues I have discovered so far?" Write down your ideas. After reading, review your work to see whether your predictions were correct.

Learning Objectives

For pages 240–252

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing characterization (direct and indirect).

Reading: Making and verifying predictions about plot.

Vocabulary

prevalent (prev´ ə lent) adj. widespread; p. 242 Flu was so prevalent that all the kids were sick.

discord (dis´ kôrd) n. lack of agreement or harmony; conflict; p. 243 There was discord in the court when the verdict was read.

melancholy (mel´ ən kol´ ē) adj. depressing; dismal; gloomy; p. 243 The dark clouds made us melancholy.

surmise (sər mīz´) v. to infer from little evidence; to guess; p. 245 She surmised that the roses came from a secret admirer.

speculate (spek´ yə lāt´) v. to engage in risky business ventures, hoping to make quick profits; p. 248 He speculated by purchasing older houses cheaply and then reselling them at high prices.

Tip: Analogies Analogies are matching relationships between word pairs, for example, Weak is to strong as dark is to ______. To complete an analogy, use the relationship between the first two words to find a partner for the third (light).

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Remind students that "characterization" refers to the various ways an author or narrator introduces a character to the reader. In this selection, the narrator uses mostly direct characterization by making statements about the characters. For example, Tom Walker is described as "a meager, miserly fellow." Tell students to use a sticky note to mark examples of indirect characterization. Have them look for the following clues to indirect characterization:

- quotation marks (what a character says and what others say about the character)
- verbs (actions a character takes that reveal something about his or her personality)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

One day, the devil offers Tom Walker a pirate's treasure. When Tom's greedy wife urges him to accept the deal, he refuses out of spite; so she tries to make her own bargain with the devil—but she disappears. Tom then accepts the devil's offer and becomes a rich moneylender who preys on those in need. When a borrower asks Tom for an extension on a loan, he replies, "The devil take me if I have made a farthing." The devil whisks Tom away, and his riches turn to cinders.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 101–106.

Vocabulary

Make Analogies Write these examples on the board.

1. peace : war ::
   harmony : discord
2. enjoyable : thrilling ::
   unpleasant : melancholy

Have students describe the relationship between the first pair of words in each set and use that information to help them understand the relationship between the vocabulary words in the second pair in each set. (1. opposites 2. degree or intensity)

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 109.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Make Predictions Help students predict the direction the story will take by focusing on the first four paragraphs.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 108.

Literary Element 2

Characterization Answer: Both Tom and his wife are so greedy that they even cheat each other. They appear to have no love for each other.

Literary History ☆

Captain Kidd In 1695, the king of England commissioned Captain William Kidd to arrest all pirates in the eastern seas. When Kidd arrived at the Comoro Islands, however, he joined the pirates instead of hunting them.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 8.4
DRP: 64
Lexile: 1220

The Devil and Tom Walker

Washington Irving

A few miles from Boston, in Massachusetts, there is a deep inlet, winding several miles into the interior of the country from Charles Bay, and terminating in a thickly wooded swamp or morass. On one side of this inlet is a beautiful dark grove; on the opposite side the land rises abruptly from the water's edge into a high ridge, on which grow a few scattered oaks of great age and immense size.

Under one of these gigantic trees, according to old stories, there was a great amount of treasure buried by Kidd the pirate. ☆ The inlet allowed a facility to bring the money in a boat, secretly and at night, to the very foot of the hill; the elevation of the place permitted a good lookout to be kept that no one was at hand; while the remarkable trees formed good landmarks by which the place might easily be found again. The old stories add, moreover, that the devil presided at the hiding of the money, and took it under his guardianship; but this, it is well known, he always does with buried treasure, particularly when it has been ill gotten. Be that as it may, Kidd never returned to recover his wealth, being shortly after seized at Boston, sent out to England, and there hanged for a pirate.

About the year 1727, just at the time that earthquakes were prevalent in New England and shook many tall sinners down upon their knees, there lived near this place a meager, miserly fellow, of the name of Tom Walker. He had a wife as miserly as himself; they were so miserly that they even conspired to cheat each other. Whatever the woman could lay hands on she hid away; a hen could not cackle but she was on the alert to secure the new laid egg. Her husband was continually prying about to detect her secret hoards, and many and fierce were the conflicts that took place about what ought to have been common property. They lived in a forlorn-looking house that stood alone and had an air of starvation. A few straggling savin trees, emblems of sterility, grew near it; no smoke ever curled from its chimney, no traveler stopped at its door. A miserable horse, whose ribs were as articulate as the bars of a gridiron, stalked about a field where a thin carpet of moss, scarcely covering the ragged beds of pudding stone,[1] tantalized and balked his hunger; and sometimes he would lean his head over the fence, look piteously at the passer-by, and seem to petition deliverance from this land of famine.

The house and its inmates had altogether a bad name. Tom's wife was a tall termagant,[2] fierce of temper, loud of tongue, and strong of arm. Her voice was often heard in wordy warfare with her husband, and his face sometimes showed signs that their conflicts were not confined to words. 1
No one ventured, however, to interfere between

Vocabulary

prevalent (prev′ ə lent) adj. widespread

---

[1] Pudding stone is a rock consisting of pebbles and gravel embedded in cement, like plums in a pudding.

[2] A termagant is a quarrelsome, scolding woman.

Characterization What does this detail tell you about Tom Walker and his wife? 2

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Visualize Sensory Details Explain to students that this selection requires the reader to pay attention to the setting to understand the interactions among the characters. The inlet, Tom's house, the swamp, and other locations inform the actions and inner thoughts of the characters. Ask: What does Tom's house look like? (bare, forlorn) How do he and his wife behave with each other? (miserly with each other) Ask students to list each place or scene as they read and to write sensory details about it. Have students note the specific actions and feelings of the characters that have been influenced by each place or scene.

them. The lonely wayfarer shrunk within himself at the horrid clamor and clapperclawing,[3] eyed the den of discord askance, and hurried on his way, rejoicing, if a bachelor, in his celibacy.

3 One day that Tom Walker had been to a distant part of the neighborhood, he took what he considered a short cut homeward, through the swamp. Like most short cuts it was an ill-chosen route. The swamp was thickly grown with great gloomy pines and hemlocks, some of them ninety feet high, which made it dark at noonday, and a retreat for all the owls of the neighborhood. It was full of pits and quagmires, partly covered with weeds and mosses, where the green surface often betrayed the traveler into a gulf of black, smothering mud; there were also dark and stagnant pools, the abodes of the tadpole, the bullfrog, and the water snake, where the trunks of pines and hemlocks lay half drowned, half rotting, looking like alligators sleeping in the mire.

Tom had long been picking his way cautiously through this treacherous forest, stepping from tuft to tuft of rushes and roots, which afforded precarious footholds among deep sloughs, or pacing carefully, like a cat, along the prostrate[4] trunks of trees, startled now and then by the sudden screaming of the bittern or the quacking of a wild duck rising on the wing from some solitary pool. At length he arrived at a firm piece of ground, which ran out like a peninsula into the deep bosom of the swamp. It had been one of the strongholds of the Indians during their wars with the first colonists. Here they had thrown up a kind of fort, which they had looked upon as almost impregnable, and had used as a place of refuge for their squaws and children. Nothing remained of the old Indian fort but a few embankments, gradually sinking to the level of the surrounding earth, and already overgrown in part by oaks and other forest trees, the foliage of which formed a contrast to the dark pines and hemlocks of the swamp.

Visual Vocabulary
A bittern is a marsh-dwelling wading bird with mottled brownish plumage and a deep, booming cry.

It was late in the dusk of evening when Tom Walker reached the old fort, and he paused there awhile to rest himself. Any one but he would have felt unwilling to linger in this lonely, melancholy place, for the common people had a bad opinion of it, from the stories handed down from the time of the Indian wars, when it was asserted that the savages held incantations[5] here, and made sacrifices to the evil spirit.

Tom Walker, however, was not a man to be troubled with any fears of the kind. He reposed himself for some time on the trunk of a fallen hemlock, listening to the boding cry of the tree toad, and delving with his walking staff into a mound of black mold at his feet. As he turned up the soil unconsciously, his staff struck against something hard. He raked it out of the vegetable mold, and lo! a cloven[6] skull, with an Indian tomahawk buried deep in it, lay before him. The rust on the weapon showed the time that had elapsed since this death blow

---

[3] Clapperclawing is scratching or clawing with the fingernails.

[4] Prostrate means "lying down."

[5] Incantations are the recitations of verbal charms or spells to produce a magical effect.

[6] Cloven means "split" or "divided."

4 Make and Verify Predictions How does this detail of the setting help you predict what might happen to Tom?

5 Make and Verify Predictions What purpose might this fort serve in the story? What clues lead you to this prediction?

The Power of Darkness How does Irving's description reflect Romanticism's interest in exotic settings? 6

Vocabulary

discord (dis´ kôrd) n. lack of agreement or harmony; conflict

Vocabulary

melancholy (mel´ ən kol´ ē) adj. depressing; dismal; gloomy

Teach

Literary Element 3

Simile Explain that a simile is a comparison between two seemingly unlike things, containing the word like or as. Ask: What are some of the similes in the first column on this page? (Possible answers: "trunks of pines . . . looking like alligators"; "pacing carefully, like a cat")

Reading Strategy 4

Make and Verify Predictions Answer: "Ill-chosen route" suggests that something bad might happen to Tom.

Reading Strategy 5

Make and Verify Predictions Answer: The fort might represent evil, since Tom has taken "an ill-chosen route" to get there.

Big Idea 6

The Power of Darkness
Answer: Irving's description shows nature in its wildest, most exotic state. His choice of an Indian fort as part of the setting also reveals his interest in the exotic.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

emerging Have students work in small groups to analyze the role that the forest and thick woods play in setting the tone and mood of the scenes. Ask: What does Tom find in the woods from the colonists' wars with the Indians? (He finds an old fort once used as a place of refuge.) Who lived here and what happened? (The squaws and children lived in the fort. The colonists killed and drove out the Indians.) How does this history contribute to the mood? (The woods seem haunted and frightening.) Have students find descriptions of the woods that contribute to the dark tone and mood.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Make Predictions Tom learns that the tall trees, "fair and flourishing without," are actually "rotten at the core." Ask: What do you think is the link between these trees and Crowninshield? (Crowninshield, rich through piracy, was morally as rotten as the trees.)

Literary Element 2

Characterization Answer: Tom is comfortable talking to Old Scratch in a casual manner because he is so corrupt that he finds nothing to fear in the devil himself.

had been given. It was a dreary memento of the fierce struggle that had taken place in this last foothold of the Indian warriors.

"Humph!" said Tom Walker, as he gave it a kick to shake the dirt from it.

"Let that skull alone!" said a gruff voice. Tom lifted up his eyes, and beheld a great black man seated directly opposite him on the stump of a tree. He was exceedingly surprised, having neither heard nor seen any one approach, and he was still more perplexed on observing, as well as the gathering gloom would permit, that the stranger was neither negro nor Indian. It is true he was dressed in a rude, half Indian garb,[7] and had a red belt or sash swathed round his body, but his face was neither black nor copper color, but swarthy and dingy, and begrimed with soot, as if he had been accustomed to toil among fires and forges. He had a shock of coarse black hair, that stood out from his head in all directions, and bore an ax on his shoulder.

He scowled for a moment at Tom with a pair of great red eyes.

"What are you doing on my grounds?" said the black man, with a hoarse, growling voice.

"Your grounds!" said Tom with a sneer, "no more your grounds than mine; they belong to Deacon Peabody."

"Deacon Peabody be d——d," said the stranger, "as I flatter myself he will be if he does not look more to his own sins and less to those of his neighbors. Look yonder, and see how Deacon Peabody is faring."

Tom looked in the direction that the stranger pointed, and beheld one of the great trees, fair and flourishing without, but rotten at the core, and saw that it had been nearly hewn through, so that the first high wind was likely to blow it down. On the bark of the tree was scored the name of Deacon Peabody, an eminent man who had waxed[8] wealthy by driving shrewd bargains with the Indians. He now looked around, and found most of the tall trees marked with the name of some great man of the colony, and all more or less scored by the ax. The one on which he had been seated, and which had evidently just been hewn down, bore the name of Crowninshield, and he recollected a mighty rich man of that name, who made a vulgar display of wealth which it was whispered he had acquired by buccaneering.[9] 1

"He's just ready for burning!" said the black man, with a growl of triumph. "You see I am likely to have a good stock of firewood for winter."

"But what right have you," said Tom, "to cut down Deacon Peabody's timber?"

"The right of a prior claim," said the other. "This woodland belonged to me long before one of your white-faced race put foot upon the soil."

"And pray, who are you, if I may be so bold?" said Tom.

"Oh, I go by various names. I am the wild 'huntsman' in some countries, the 'black miner' in others. In this neighborhood I am known by the name of the 'black woodsman.' I am he to whom the red men consecrated this spot, and in honor of whom they now and then roasted a white man, by way of sweet-smelling sacrifice. Since the red men have been exterminated by you white savages, I amuse myself by presiding at the persecutions of Quakers and Anabaptists;[10] I am the great patron and prompter of slave dealers, and the grand master of the Salem witches."

"The upshot of all which is that, if I mistake not," said Tom sturdily, "you are he commonly called 'Old Scratch.'"[11]

"The same, at your service!" replied the black man, with a half civil nod.

Such was the opening of this interview, according to the old story, though it has almost too familiar an air to be credited. One would think that to meet with such a singular personage, in this wild, lonely place, would have shaken any man's nerves; but Tom was a hard-minded fellow,

Characterization What does the manner in which Tom speaks to Old Scratch reveal about Tom's character? 2

---

[7] Garb means "clothing" or "attire."

[8] Here, waxed means "grown" or "become."

[9] Buccaneering is robbing ships at sea (piracy).

[10] The Quakers and the Anabaptists were two religious groups in Massachusetts that were persecuted for their beliefs.

[11] Old Scratch is a nickname for the devil.

Grammar Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW

Appositives and Appositive Phrases Display and explain the following definitions:

- appositive: a noun or pronoun that further identifies another noun or pronoun
- appositive phrase: an appositive plus its modifiers

Explain that nonessential appositive phrases are set off with commas. Write the following example and direct attention to the commas:

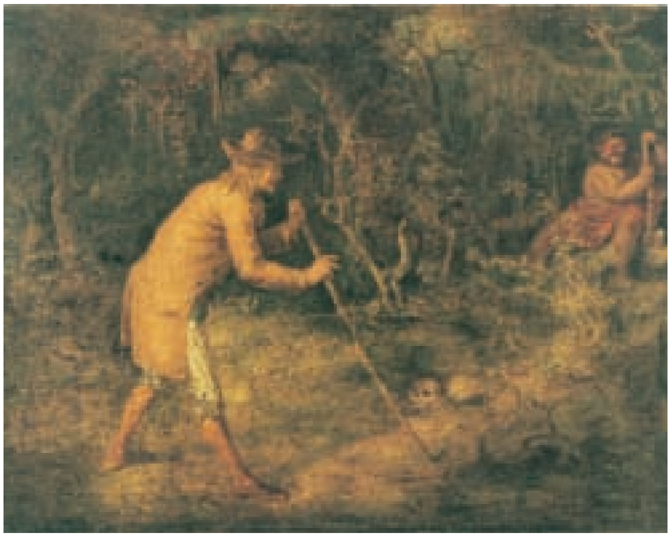
"On the bark of the tree was scored the name of Deacon Peabody, an eminent man . . . ." Explain that "an eminent man" is nonessential because it describes the deacon, but it does not single him out. Write these nonessential appositive phrases for students:

Tom, a simple man; Absalom Crowninshield, the rich buccaneer; Old Scratch, the devil. Have students write sentences using each of these phrases. Have them exchange sentences with other students to check for correct punctuation.

not easily daunted, and he had lived so long with a termagant wife that he did not even fear the devil.

It is said that after this commencement they had a long and earnest conversation together, as Tom returned homeward. The black man told him of great sums of money buried by Kidd the pirate under the oak trees on the high ridge, not far from the morass. All these were under his command, and protected by his power, so that none could find them but such as propitiated[12] his favor. These he offered to place within Tom Walker's reach, having conceived an especial kindness for him; but they were to be had only on certain conditions. What these conditions were may be easily surmised, though Tom never disclosed them publicly. They must have been very hard, for he required time to think of them, and he was not a man to stick at trifles when money was in view. When they had reached the edge of the swamp the stranger paused. "What proof have I that all you have been telling me is true?" said Tom. "There's my signature," said the black man, pressing his finger on Tom's forehead. So saying, he turned off among the thickets of the swamp, and seemed, as Tom said, to go down, down, down into the earth, until nothing but his head and shoulders could be seen, and so on, until he totally disappeared. 3

When Tom reached home he found the black print of a finger burned, as it were, into his forehead, which nothing could obliterate.



The Devil and Tom Walker, 1856. John Quidor. Oil on canvas. The Cleveland Museum of Art. Cleveland, OH.

View the Art John Quidor's best-known paintings were inspired by Washington Irving's stories. Do you find this painting to be a faithful depiction of Tom Walker's encounter with the devil? Explain. ★

The first news his wife had to tell him was the sudden death of Absalom Crowninshield, the rich buccaneer. It was announced in the papers with the usual flourish, that a great man had fallen in Israel.[13]

Tom recollected the tree which his black friend had just hewn down, and which was ready for burning. "Let the freebooter[14] roast," said Tom; "who cares!" He now felt convinced that all he had heard and seen was no illusion.

He was not prone to let his wife into his confidence, but as this was an uneasy secret he willingly shared it with her. All her avarice was awakened at the mention of hidden gold, and she urged her husband to comply with the black

---

[12] Propitiated means "won over" or "gained by pleasing acts."

[13] Here, Israel is a biblical reference to 2 Samuel 3:38: "Know ye not that there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel?" The Puritans referred to New England as "Israel," their Promised Land.

[14] A freebooter is a pirate.

Vocabulary

surmise (sər mīz´) v. to infer from little evidence; to guess

Characterization How does Irving use the attitudes of Tom and his wife toward the devil to develop their characters? Is this direct or indirect characterization? 4

Teach

Literary Element 3

Tall Tale A tall tale contains exaggerations. Have students point out the exaggerations in the first column on this page. (Possible answers: the disappearance of the stranger "down, down, down into the earth"; the permanent imprint of a finger burned into Tom's forehead)

Literary Element 4

Characterization Answer: Their eagerness to make a deal with the devil reveals that they are interested only in personal gain. The highlighted sentence is an example of direct characterization because the narrator refers to the wife's greed explicitly.

View the Art ★

Answer: Students might say that the depiction is accurate, since the devil is wearing a red sash and has a face that is neither "black nor copper" and black hair.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate English learners may need help with figurative language in expressions such as "great patron and prompter of slave dealers," "grand master of the Salem witches," and "Old Scratch." Discuss the meaning of each phrase, asking volunteers to identify individual words within the phrases. Explain that a patron or prompter would encourage the slave trade; that the Salem witches were a group of women who were killed for practicing witchcraft in Salem, Massachusetts; that Old Scratch was a name for the devil that was popular at the time. Have students rewrite the phrases using literal translations or expanded explanations.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Make and Verify Predictions Answer: Some students may reply that Tom's wife was killed by the devil while trying to make a deal with him.

Ask: Do you think Tom's uneasiness is caused by a genuine concern for his wife's safety? Why or why not? (Some students may argue that he is concerned that an unscrupulous thief stole the goods and did away with his wife. Others may think that Tom worries more about the loss of property than the loss of his wife.)

man's terms, and secure what would make them wealthy for life. However Tom might have felt disposed to sell himself to the devil, he was determined not to do so to oblige his wife, so he flatly refused, out of the mere spirit of contradiction. Many and bitter were the quarrels they had on the subject, but the more she talked the more resolute was Tom not to be damned to please her.

At length she determined to drive the bargain on her own account, and, if she succeeded, to keep all the gain to herself. Being of the same fearless temper as her husband, she set off for the old Indian fort towards the close of a summer's day. She was many hours absent. When she came back she was reserved and sullen in her replies. She spoke something of a black man whom she had met about twilight hewing at the root of a tall tree. He was sulky, however, and would not come to terms; she was to go again with a propitiatory offering, but what it was she forbore to say.

The next evening she set off again for the swamp, with her apron heavily laden. Tom waited and waited for her, but in vain; midnight came, but she did not make her appearance; morning, noon, night returned, but still she did not come. Tom now grew uneasy for her safety, especially as he found she had carried off in her apron the silver teapot and spoons and every portable article of value. Another night elapsed, another morning came, but no wife. In a word, she was never heard of more.

What was her real fate nobody knows, in consequence of so many pretending to know. It is one of those facts which have become confounded by a variety of historians. Some asserted that she lost her way among the tangled mazes of the swamp, and sank into some pit or slough; others, more uncharitable, hinted that she had eloped with the household booty,[15] and made off to some other province; while others surmised that the tempter had decoyed her into a dismal quagmire, on the top of which her hat was found lying. In confirmation of this it was said a great black man, with an ax on his shoulder, was seen late that very evening coming out of the swamp, carrying a bundle tied in a check apron, with an air of surly triumph.

The most current and probable story, however, observes that Tom Walker grew so anxious about the fate of his wife and his property that he set out at length to seek them both at the Indian fort. During a long summer's afternoon he searched about the gloomy place, but no wife was to be seen. He called her name repeatedly, but she was nowhere to be heard. The bittern alone responded to his voice, as he flew screaming by, or the bullfrog croaked dolefully from a neighboring pool. At length, it is said, just in the brown hour of twilight, when the owls began to hoot and the bats to flit about, his attention was attracted by the clamor of carrion crows[16] hovering about a cypress tree. He looked up, and beheld a bundle tied in a check apron and hanging in the branches of the tree, with a great vulture perched hard by, as if keeping watch upon it. He leaped with joy, for he recognized his wife's apron and supposed it to contain the household valuables.

"Let us get hold of the property," said he consolingly to himself, "and we will endeavor to do without the woman."

As he scrambled up the tree the vulture spread its wide wings and sailed off, screaming, into the deep shadows of the forest. Tom seized the check apron, but, woeful sight! found nothing but a heart and liver tied up in it!

Such, according to this most authentic old story, was all that was to be found of Tom's wife. She had probably attempted to deal with the black man as she had been accustomed to deal with her husband; but though a female scold is generally considered a match for the devil, yet in this instance she appears to have had the worst of it. She must have died game, however, for it is said Tom noticed many prints of cloven feet deeply stamped about the tree, and found handfuls

1 Make and Verify Predictions What do you think has happened to Tom's wife?

---

[15] Booty is stolen goods.

[16] Carrion crows are crows that feed on dead or decaying flesh.

Grammar Practice

SMALL GROUP

Absolute Phrases Point out to students that an absolute phrase consists of a noun or pronoun that is modified by a participle or a participial phrase. An absolute phrase is used as a modifier. It may modify an entire sentence. For example, the sentence His wife being ill-tempered, Tom was not saddened to lose her contains an absolute phrase (underlined).

Organize the class into small groups, and have each student write and share a sentence containing an absolute phrase. Discuss and rewrite problem sentences.

of hair that looked as if they had been plucked from the coarse black shock of the woodman. Tom knew his wife's prowess by experience. He shrugged his shoulders as he looked at the signs of a fierce clapperclawing. "Egad," said he to himself, "Old Scratch must have had a tough time of it!"

Tom consoled himself for the loss of his property with the loss of his wife, for he was a man of fortitude. He even felt something like gratitude towards the black woodman, who, he considered, had done him a kindness. He sought, therefore, to cultivate a further acquaintance with him, but for some time without success; the old blacklegs played shy, for whatever people may think, he is not always to be had for calling for; he knows how to play his cards when pretty sure of his game.

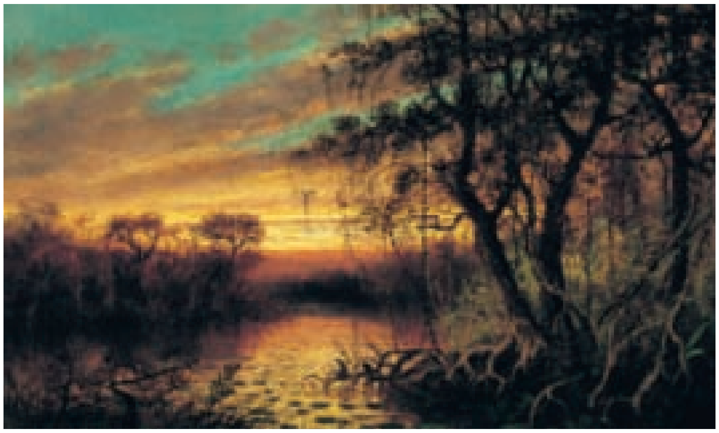
At length, it is said, when delay had whetted Tom's eagerness to the quick, and prepared him to agree to anything rather than not gain the promised treasure, he met the black man one evening in his usual woodman's dress, with his ax on his shoulder, sauntering along the swamp, and humming a tune. He affected to receive Tom's advances with great indifference, made brief replies, and went on humming his tune.

By degrees, however, Tom brought him to business, and they began to haggle about the terms on which the former was to have the pirate's treasure. There was one condition which need not be mentioned, being generally understood in all cases where the devil grants favors; but there were others about which, though of less importance, he was inflexibly obstinate. He insisted that the money found through his means should be employed in his service. He proposed, therefore, that Tom should employ it in the black traffic,—that is to say, that he should fit out a slave ship. This, however, Tom resolutely refused; he was bad enough, in all conscience, but the devil himself could not tempt him to turn slave trader.

Finding Tom so squeamish on this point, he did not insist upon it, but proposed, instead, that he should turn usurer,[17] the devil being extremely anxious for the increase of usurers, looking upon them as his peculiar[18] people.

To this no objections were made, for it was just to Tom's taste.

"You shall open a broker's shop in Boston next month," said the black man.



Swamp Sunset. Harold Rudolph. Oil on canvas. The Ogden Museum of Southern Art, University of New Orleans, LA.

View the Art What mood does this painting evoke? Would the mood be different if the artist had called it Swamp Sunrise? How does the scene in the painting compare with Irving's description of the one where Tom Walker and the devil first meet? ★

2 Characterization Why does Irving use humor to describe the disappearance of Tom's wife? How does this reflect on Tom?

3 Make and Verify Predictions What will be the outcome of this relationship?

---

[17] A usurer is a person who lends money, especially at an excessive or unlawfully high rate of interest.

[18] Here, peculiar means "special."

Teach

Literary Element 2

Characterization Answer: Irving's humor helps convey the character of both Tom and his wife. Tom is not distressed about his wife's disappearance; in fact, he is rather amused at the devil's struggle to capture her, as he knows that she is no easy match. The reader learns that Tom's wife is so greedy that she will tackle the devil. Irving gives the reader permission to laugh at the misfortune they have brought upon themselves.

Reading Strategy 3

Make Predictions Answer: Students may say that anyone with such a relationship will eventually lose his soul.

View the Art ★

Answer: This painting's mood might change from melancholy to hopeful if it were named Swamp Sunrise. The scene is similar to Irving's descriptions of the swamp, including the rushes, weeds, and tree trunks.

Harold Rudolph began his career by painting portraits. He then turned his attention to landscapes, particularly those of Louisiana.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Make sure that students understand that when words in a selection are footnoted, numbers are used to identify both the words in the text and the corresponding notes at the bottom of the page. Explain that the term carrion crows on page 246 is superscripted—and carries a corresponding footnote at the bottom of the page. The phrase cloven feet in the same column is not footnoted.

Tell students that a cloven foot is one that is split or divided, such as a sheep's hoof. Ask: What else might have cloven feet? (the devil) Have students suggest additional words or phrases that could be footnoted and write their own footnotes.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Characterization Answer: Irving shows that Tom is more than willing to cheat people out of money.

Reading Strategy 2

Make Inferences Ask students whether Tom is a hypocrite. (yes) Ask: What details support your inference? (Tom's public appearance masks his real self. Instead of being a "universal friend of the needy," he squeezes his customers dry; his "vast house" is actually "unfinished and unfurnished," and he owns a carriage but starves his horses.)

"I'll do it tomorrow, if you wish," said Tom Walker.

"You shall lend money at two percent a month."

"Egad, I'll charge four!" replied Tom Walker.

"You shall extort[19] bonds, foreclose mortgages, drive the merchants to bankruptcy—"

"I'll drive them to the d—l!" cried Tom Walker.

"You are the usurer for my money!" said blacklegs with delight. "When will you want the rhino?"[20]

"This very night."

"Done!" said the devil.

"Done!" said Tom Walker. So they shook hands and struck a bargain.

A few days' time saw Tom Walker seated behind his desk in a countinghouse in Boston.

His reputation for a ready-moneyed man, who would lend money out for a good consideration, soon spread abroad. Everybody remembers the time of Governor Belcher,[21] when money was particularly scarce. It was a time of paper credit. The country had been deluged with government bills; the famous Land Bank[22] had been established; there had been a rage for speculating; the people had run mad with schemes for new settlements, for building cities in the wilderness; land jobbers[23] went about with maps of grants and townships and Eldorados,[24] lying nobody knew where, but which everybody was ready to purchase. In a word, the great speculating fever which breaks out every now and then in the country had raged to an alarming degree, and everybody was dreaming of making sudden fortunes from nothing. As usual the fever had subsided, the dream had gone off, and the imaginary fortunes with it; the patients were left in doleful plight, and the whole country resounded with the consequent cry of "hard times."

> His reputation for a ready-moneyed man, who would lend money out for a good consideration, soon spread abroad.

At this propitious time of public distress did Tom Walker set up as usurer in Boston. His door was soon thronged by customers. The needy and adventurous, the gambling speculator, the dreaming land jobber, the thriftless tradesman, the merchant with cracked credit,— in short, everyone driven to raise money by desperate means and desperate sacrifices hurried to Tom Walker.

Thus Tom was the universal friend of the needy, and acted like a "friend in need"; that is to say, he always exacted good pay and good security. In proportion to the distress of the applicant was the hardness of his terms. He accumulated bonds and mortgages, gradually squeezed his customers closer and closer, and sent them at length, dry as a sponge, from his door. 2

---

[19] Extort means "to obtain by threats, force, or other types of oppression."

[20] Rhino is a slang term for money.

[21] Jonathan Belcher was governor of Massachusetts and New Hampshire from 1730 to 1741.

[22] Boston merchants organized the Land Bank in 1739. Landowners could borrow money in the form of mortgages on their property and then repay the loans with cash or manufactured goods. When the bank was outlawed in 1741, many colonists lost money.

[23] Land jobbers are people who buy and sell land for profit.

[24] Eldorados are places of great wealth or opportunity. The term comes from the name El Dorado, a legendary region of South America sought by Spanish explorers for its gold and jewels.

1 Characterization What does Irving show about Tom's character with this dialogue?

Vocabulary

speculate (spek´ yə lāt´) v. to engage in risky business ventures, hoping to make quick profits

Speaking and Listening Practice

Oral Presentation Ask each student to assume the identity of a Boston citizen who has had an encounter with Tom Walker and who will now testify for or against him in court—for example, a borrower, a neighbor, a churchgoer, or a stable boy.

Establish guidelines for a two-minute student presentation. Students should

- identify their character by name
- state the character's relationship to Tom
- memorize their "testimony" or use note cards rather than read a prepared text
- use vocal tone and gestures to imply the character's attitude toward Tom.

Have each student deliver, in character, a two-minute statement to the class. Have students critique presentations for accurate tone and content to match the character.

In this way he made money hand over hand, became a rich and mighty man, and exalted his cocked hat upon 'Change.[25] He built himself, as usual, a vast house, out of ostentation,[26] but left the greater part of it unfinished and unfurnished, out of parsimony. He even set up a carriage in the fullness of his vainglory,[27] though he nearly starved the horses which drew it; and as the ungreased wheels groaned and screeched on the axletrees you would have thought you heard the souls of the poor debtors he was squeezing.

As Tom waxed old, however, he grew thoughtful. Having secured the good things of this world, he began to feel anxious about those of the next. He thought with regret on the bargain he had made with his black friend, and set his wits to work to cheat him out of the conditions. He became, therefore, all of a sudden, a violent churchgoer. He prayed loudly and strenuously, as if heaven were to be taken by force of lungs. Indeed, one might always tell when he had sinned most during the week by the clamor of his Sunday devotion. The quiet Christians who had been modestly and steadfastly traveling Zionward,[28] were struck with self-reproach at seeing themselves so suddenly outstripped in their career by this new-made convert. Tom was as rigid in religious, as in money, matters; he was a stern supervisor and censurer of his neighbors, and seemed to think every sin entered up to their account became a credit on his own side of the page. He even talked of the expediency of reviving the persecution of Quakers and Anabaptists. In a word, Tom's zeal became as notorious as his riches.

Still, in spite of all this strenuous attention to forms, Tom had a lurking dread that the devil, after all, would have his due. That he might not be taken unawares, therefore, it is said he always carried a small Bible in his coat pocket. He had also a great folio Bible on his countinghouse desk, and would frequently be found reading it when people called on business. On such occasions he would lay his green spectacles in the book, to mark the place, while he turned round to drive some usurious bargain.

Some say that Tom grew a little crack-brained in his old days, and that, fancying his end approaching, he had his horse new shod, saddled, and bridled, and buried with his feet uppermost, because he supposed that at the last day the world would be turned upside down, in which case he should find his horse standing ready for mounting, and he was determined at the worst to give his old friend a run for it. This, however, is probably a mere old wives' fable. If he really did take such a precaution it was totally superfluous; at least, so says the authentic old legend, which closes his story in the following manner.

One hot summer afternoon in the dog days,[29] just as a terrible, black thunder gust was coming up, Tom sat in his countinghouse, in his white linen cap and India silk morning gown. He was on the point of foreclosing a mortgage, by which he would complete the ruin of an unlucky land speculator for whom he had professed the greatest friendship. The poor land jobber begged him to grant a few months' indulgence. Tom had grown testy and irritated, and refused another day.

"My family will be ruined and brought upon the parish," said the land jobber.

"Charity begins at home," replied Tom; "I must take care of myself in these hard times."

"You have made so much money out of me," said the speculator.

Tom lost his patience and his piety. "The devil take me," said he, "if I have made a farthing."[30]

Just then there were three loud knocks at the street door. He stepped out to see who was

---

[25] The 'Change, or Exchange, was a financial center where merchants, bankers, and brokers met to do business.

[26] Ostentation means "a display meant to impress others."

[27] Vainglory is boastful, undeserved pride in one's accomplishments or qualities.

[28] Zionward means "toward heaven."

[29] Dog days are the hot, sultry days of summer.

[30] A farthing was a British coin worth one-fourth of a penny.

3 Make and Verify Predictions Do you think Tom will succeed in cheating the devil?

Characterization How does this statement develop Tom's character? 4

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Make Predictions Answer: Tom will not, because he has not really had a change of heart. He merely uses the trappings of religion in a superstitious attempt to outwit a power greater than himself and to protect his own interests.

Literary Element 4

Characterization Answer: It reinforces the hypocrisy of Tom's religious pursuits.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Have groups of students review the text on this page, and then reread the Big Ideas of American Romanticism on page 179. Have groups select one of the Big Ideas and discuss how this section of the story represents one of the ideas. Ask each group to prepare a five-minute presentation explaining their connections. Tell students to support their findings with text from the reading.

Teach

Big Idea 1

The Power of Darkness

Answer: The thunderstorm reflects the power of the devil and makes Tom's abduction more frightening.

Big Idea 2

The Power of Darkness

Answer: Irving adds this detail to highlight the impermanence of worldly wealth and the irony of fate.

View the Art

Answer: Students may say that the exaggerated representation of the characters and their actions reflects the fantastic nature of Irving's story.

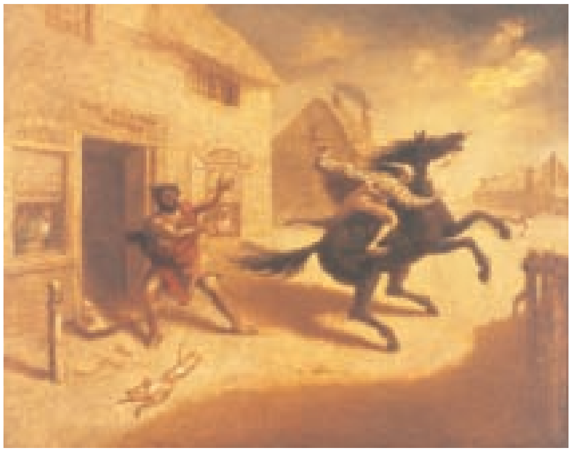
Say: Some of John Quidor's critics thought that the gestures and expressions in his works were so dramatic that he must have based his paintings on theatrical productions. Have students discuss their reactions to this painting and the one on page 245.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 112.



Tom Walker's Flight, 1856. John Quidor. Oil on canvas, 23¾ x 33¾ in. The Fine Arts Museum of San Francisco.

View the Art Review the description of the devil on page 244. Is Quidor's painting a good illustration of the text? How does it compare with the way you pictured the devil when you first read Irving's description?

there. A black man was holding a black horse, which neighed and stamped with impatience.

"Tom, you're come for," said the black fellow gruffly. Tom shrank back, but too late. He had left his little Bible at the bottom of his coat pocket, and his big Bible on the desk buried under the mortgage he was about to foreclose; never was sinner taken more unawares. The black man whisked him like a child into the saddle, gave the horse a lash, and away he galloped, with Tom on his back, in the midst of the thunderstorm. The clerks stuck their pens behind their ears, and stared after him from the windows. Away went Tom Walker, dashing down the streets, his white cap bobbing up and down, his morning gown fluttering in the wind, and his steed striking fire out of the pavement at every bound. When the clerks turned to look for the black man he had disappeared.

Tom Walker never returned to foreclose the mortgage. A countryman, who lived on the border of the swamp, reported that in the height of the thunder gust he had heard a great clattering of hoofs and a howling along the road, and running to the window caught sight of a figure such as I have described, on a horse that galloped like mad across the fields, over the hills, and down into the black hemlock swamp towards the old Indian fort, and that shortly after, a thunderbolt falling in that direction seemed to set the whole forest in a blaze.

The good people of Boston shook their heads and shrugged their shoulders, but had been so much accustomed to witches and goblins, and tricks of the devil, in all kinds of shapes, from the first settlement of the colony, that they were not so much horror-struck as might have been expected. Trustees were appointed to take charge of Tom's effects. There was nothing, however, to administer upon. On searching his coffers,[31] all his bonds and mortgages were found reduced to cinders. In place of gold and silver his iron chest was filled with chips and shavings; two skeletons lay in his stable instead of his half starved horses; and the very next day his great house took fire and was burned to the ground.

Such was the end of Tom Walker and his ill-gotten wealth. Let all griping money brokers lay this story to heart. The truth of it is not to be doubted. The very hole under the oak trees, whence he dug Kidd's money, is to be seen to this day, and the neighboring swamp and old Indian fort are often haunted in stormy nights by a figure on horseback, in morning gown and white cap, which is doubtless the troubled spirit of the usurer. In fact, the story has resolved itself into a proverb, and is the origin of that popular saying, so prevalent throughout New England, of "the devil and Tom Walker."

---

[31] Coffers are strongboxes used to hold money or other valuables.

1 The Power of Darkness What is the effect of including details of the thunderstorm?

The Power of Darkness Why do you think Irving adds this detail? 2

Grammar Practice

Action Verbs Explain that writers choose strong verbs to describe dramatic actions. Ask students to identify verbs that Irving uses to describe Tom's last earthly ride. (whisked, galloped, dashing, bobbing fluttering, striking) Tell students that these are examples of strong, specific verbs. Explain that general verbs are not as strong or specific. List these general verbs for students: ran, said, looked, asked, walked out. Ask students to write a sentence for each of these words and then rewrite each sentence using a stronger, more specific verb.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)What was your reaction to Tom Walker at the beginning of the story? (b)Did your opinion of him change by the end?

2. (a)How does Tom react to the devil and his offer? (b)What does this tell you about Tom?

3. (a)What kind of person is Tom's wife? (b)How does she contribute to Tom's downfall?

4. (a)What eventually happens to Tom's wife? (b)Which version of what happened to her does the narrator want the readers to believe? Explain.

5. How do you interpret what happens to Tom Walker and his possessions?

Analyze and Evaluate

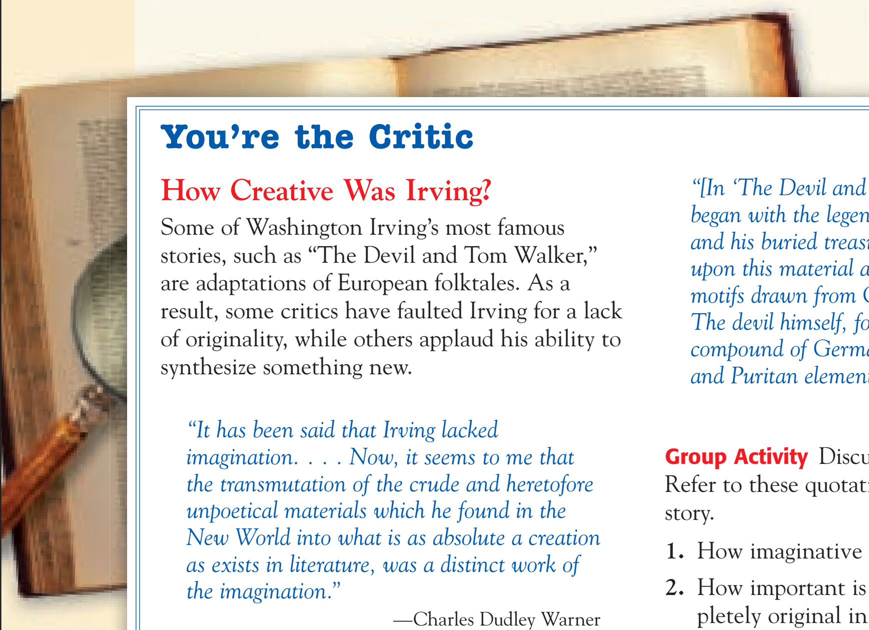
6. (a)The narrator often uses disclaimers by saying "people said" or "it is said." Why might Irving have used this tactic? (b)How trustworthy does the narrator appear to be?

7. Satire is a form of writing that uses humor as a way of criticizing someone or something. (a)In what ways is this story a satire? (b)Do you agree with Irving's implied criticisms?

Connect

8. Big Idea The Power of Darkness Irving wrote "The Devil and Tom Walker" when Puritanism was fading and the urge to acquire wealth was growing. How does Irving portray the dark side of both religion and wealth in his story?

9. Connect to Today Is Irving's fantastic depiction of the result of greed applicable in a realistic way to people's behavior today? Explain.



You're the Critic

How Creative Was Irving?

Some of Washington Irving's most famous stories, such as "The Devil and Tom Walker," are adaptations of European folktales. As a result, some critics have faulted Irving for a lack of originality, while others applaud his ability to synthesize something new.

> "It has been said that Irving lacked imagination. . . . Now, it seems to me that the transmutation of the crude and heretofore unpoetical materials which he found in the New World into what is as absolute a creation as exists in literature, was a distinct work of the imagination."
>
> —Charles Dudley Warner

> "[In 'The Devil and Tom Walker,'] Irving began with the legends of Captain Kidd and his buried treasure and . . . he grafted upon this material a much wider variety of motifs drawn from German folklore. . . . The devil himself, for example, is a compound of German, American Indian, and Puritan elements."
>
> —Edward Wagenknecht

Group Activity Discuss the questions below. Refer to these quotations and evidence from the story.

1. How imaginative is Irving's story?
2. How important is it for a writer to be completely original in creating a literary work?

After You Read

Assess

1. (a) Students may not like Tom because he did not care about other people. (b) Students' opinions may be lower at the end because he had cheated others.

2. (a) Tom asks for time to consider the devil's offer. (b) Although Tom is tempted by the devil's offer, he does not want to make a rash decision.

3. (a) Loud, physically abusive, and greedy (b) She encourages Tom to cultivate a friendship with the devil.

4. (a) She most likely tried to make a deal with the devil in the forest and was killed. (b) The narrator wants readers to believe that Tom's wife was involved in a fight with the devil, because that is the version that is described in greatest detail.

5. He is whisked away by the devil, and his wealth is reduced to cinders.

6. (a) To establish the credibility of the narrator (b) The narrator seems to be careful to distinguish fact from hearsay.

7. (a) The story satirizes marriage, the expectation that characters will be heroes, and the social institutions fostering greed. (b) Students' responses will vary.

8. Tom represents the evil side of both—he is greedy and concerned with money over all else, and he takes up religion only to try to save himself from being taken by the devil.

9. Students may note that while the depiction of the devil kidnapping a person may not be realistic, greedy people often do face consequences for their behavior in modern society.

Group Activity

1. Irving adapts an old tale, making it seem fresh and new to readers through characterization, setting, and dialogue. The story also teaches a moral lesson.

2. A story based on an old favorite can be successful if it has some originality. A writer can bring values and style to a familiar story to make it seem fresh.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 109–110.

After You Read

Assess

Literary Element

Characterization

1. Possible response: Direct: "Tom was a hard-minded fellow"; Indirect: "Any one but he would have felt unwilling to linger in this lonely, melancholy place." Direct characterization reveals what readers must know to interpret characters and events as the author intended. Indirect characterization shows more than it tells, allowing readers to interpret characters and events.
2. The narrator gives us information that Tom cannot. Tom's wife shows how greedy Tom is. Tom shows the reader the moral of the story.

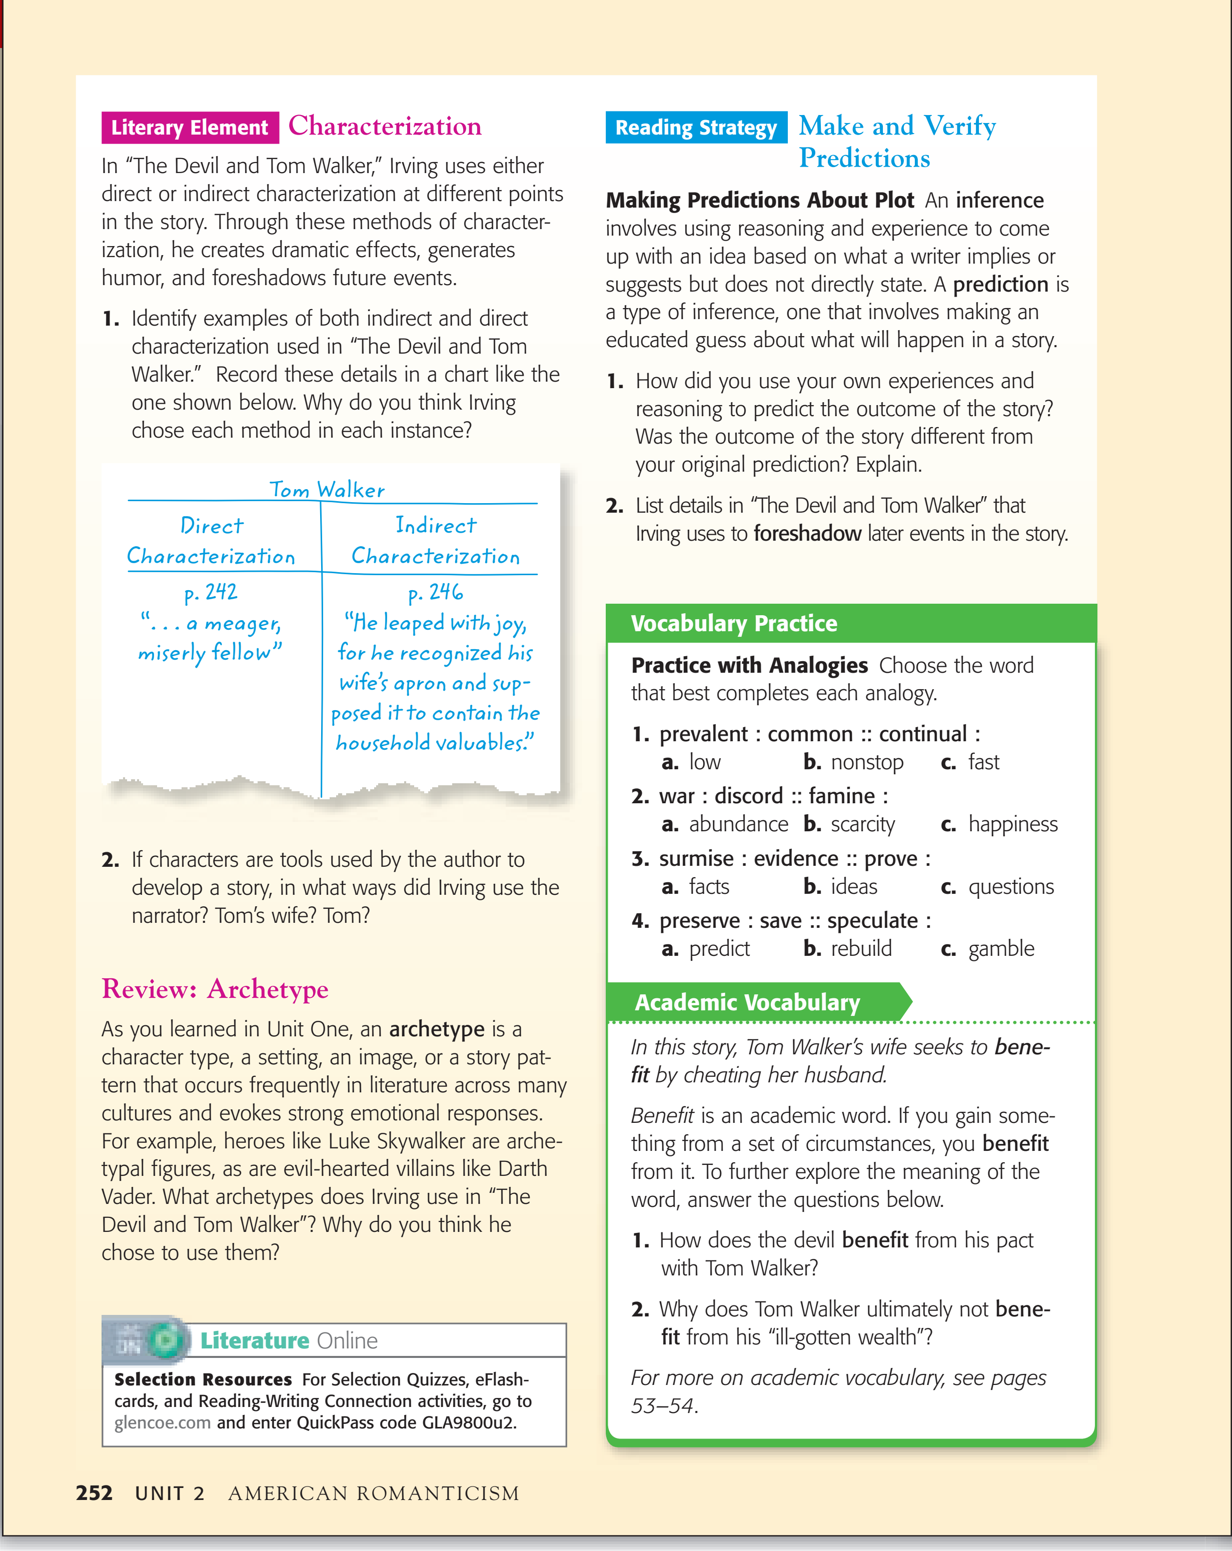
Progress Check

Can students identify character?

If No → See Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 107.

Review: Archetype

Irving uses the archetype of the villain. Also, the setting of a dark forest is archetypal. Archetypes stir deep emotions in the reader.



Literary Element Characterization

In "The Devil and Tom Walker," Irving uses either direct or indirect characterization at different points in the story. Through these methods of characterization, he creates dramatic effects, generates humor, and foreshadows future events.

1. Identify examples of both indirect and direct characterization used in "The Devil and Tom Walker." Record these details in a chart like the one shown below. Why do you think Irving chose each method in each instance?

Tom Walker
Direct Characterization	Indirect Characterization
p. 242 ". . . a meager, miserly fellow"	p. 246 "He leaped with joy, for he recognized his wife's apron and supposed it to contain the household valuables."

2. If characters are tools used by the author to develop a story, in what ways did Irving use the narrator? Tom's wife? Tom?

Review: Archetype

As you learned in Unit One, an archetype is a character type, a setting, an image, or a story pattern that occurs frequently in literature across many cultures and evokes strong emotional responses. For example, heroes like Luke Skywalker are archetypal figures, as are evil-hearted villains like Darth Vader. What archetypes does Irving use in "The Devil and Tom Walker"? Why do you think he chose to use them?

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Reading Strategy Make and Verify Predictions

Making Predictions About Plot An inference involves using reasoning and experience to come up with an idea based on what a writer implies or suggests but does not directly state. A prediction is a type of inference, one that involves making an educated guess about what will happen in a story.

1. How did you use your own experiences and reasoning to predict the outcome of the story? Was the outcome of the story different from your original prediction? Explain.
2. List details in "The Devil and Tom Walker" that Irving uses to foreshadow later events in the story.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Analogies Choose the word that best completes each analogy.

1. prevalent : common :: continual :
a. low b. nonstop c. fast

2. war : discord :: famine :
a. abundance b. scarcity c. happiness

3. surmise : evidence :: prove :
a. facts b. ideas c. questions

4. preserve : save :: speculate :
a. predict b. rebuild c. gamble

Academic Vocabulary

In this story, Tom Walker's wife seeks to benefit by cheating her husband.

Benefit is an academic word. If you gain something from a set of circumstances, you benefit from it. To further explore the meaning of the word, answer the questions below.

1. How does the devil benefit from his pact with Tom Walker?
2. Why does Tom Walker ultimately not benefit from his "ill-gotten wealth"?

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Reading Strategy

1. Students may have predicted that Tom would get what he deserved in the end because bad deeds are often punished. They may have been surprised that Tom's wife disappeared and Tom became religious.
2. "He was sulky . . . and would not come to terms" hints that Tom's wife will have trouble making a deal with Old Scratch. "Still, in spite of all this strenuous attention to forms, Tom had a lurking dread that the devil, after all, would have his due" foreshadows Tom's being whisked off by the devil.

Vocabulary

1. b 2. b 3. a 4. c

Academic Vocabulary

1. The devil benefits by gaining a moneylender with whom he can torment desperate people.
2. Tom Walker ultimately does not benefit from his "ill-gotten wealth" because he loses his home in a fire and his soul to the devil.

Respond Through Writing

Summary

Report Story Events When summarize a story, you tell a short version of the original and report its main events in sequence. A summary does not include personal opinions. In about 100 words, write a plot summary of "The Devil and Tom Walker." Write in the present tense.

Prewrite Skim the text to review the main events in the plot. Then complete a sequence notes chart like the one below, which is based on "How the World Was Made" (see pages 24–25).

Animals living in the sky determine they need more room, but all is water.

↓

The Water-beetle stirs up mud to form land on which the animals can settle.

↓

Plants grow on the land, followed by the emergence of humans.

Draft As you draft your summary, draw upon the sequence of events you made. Be sure to distinguish between major and minor events. Example:

> The Cherokee creation myth "How the World Was Made" describes the formation and population of the earth. In this myth water surrounds the earth, which hangs from cords attached to a rock in the sky. (When the earth grows old, it will sink.) In the early stages of this myth, animals living in the sky seeking more space send the Water-beetle to explore an area underwater. The beetle discovers soft mud, which it pulls to the surface. This mud expands to form the earth. Animals then settle on the land and set the height and movement of the sun. Plants grow on the land, and finally humans emerge after the development of both plants and animals.

Revise Have a partner read your summary and ask him or her to circle the basic elements of the plot you included. If your partner cannot recognize these events, revise your summary so that the major plot points are clear.

Edit and Proofread Proofread your paper, correcting grammar, spelling, and punctuation. Use the Grammar Tip in the side column for help.

Learning Objectives

In this assignment, you will focus on the following objectives:

Writing: Writing a summary.

Grammar: Using verb tenses.

Grammar Tip

Verb Tenses

The tense of a verb indicates when the action or state of being occurs. Present tense expresses a constant, repeated, or habitual action or condition. It also expresses an action or condition that exists only now. When writing about a literary work—such as in your summary of Irving's story—use the present tense. For example:

In "The Devil and Tom Walker," Tom's wife is greedy.

Past tense is used to express an action or condition started and completed in the past. Future tense expresses an action or condition that will occur in the future.

After You Read

Assess

Writing

Evaluate students' writing using the following criteria. Students' reports should:

- summarize the story in sequence of events
- avoid mentioning personal opinions
- be written in present tense

Scoring Guide

- Students who meet all of these criteria should receive the equivalent of a 4-point response.
- Students who fully meet two or partially meet three of these criteria should receive the equivalent of a 3-point response.
- Student who fully meet one or partially meet two of these criteria should receive the equivalent of a 2-point response.
- Students who partially meet one of these criteria should receive the equivalent of a 1-point response.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

AAVE For approaching level students who are users of AAVE, the past tense may present two types of difficulties. Some consonant clusters may be pronounced without the -ed sound, so past tense may sound like present tense in verbs such as stamped or scrambled. Also AAVE speakers may need practice using the standard forms of irregular verbs in the past tense. While students will write their summaries in the present tense, they will need to use the past tense in some places. Have students who use AAVE practice forming the past tense by replacing the verb in parentheses with the simple past tense in these sentences.

- Tom wonders if the devil (to kill) his wife.
- He thinks she (to talk) to the Devil the same way she (to speak) to him.
- Tom suspects his wife (to quarrel) with the devil.

(killed, talked, spoke, quarrelled)

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Literature Launchers:
Pre-Reading Videos DVD, Selection Launcher

Selection Focus
Transparency 18

Daily Language Practice
Transparency 27

Or display images of a variety of Gothic structures, such as mansions and castles.

Say: Poe used these types of settings to create atmosphere in his poems and stories.

Ask: How do these images make you feel? What type of mood do these images convey?

List students' responses on the board. Tell students that Poe developed stories of horror and violence with a focus on the supernatural. Have students note the details of each setting and how the setting contributes to the mood in Poe's poem and story.

Before You Read

The Raven and The Pit and the Pendulum

Meet Edgar Allan Poe

(1809–1849)

Today's authors might well envy Edgar Allan Poe. More than 150 years after his death, he is still one of the world's most popular writers. Known primarily as a master of horror and suspense tales, he is also credited with inventing the detective story and contributing to the development of science fiction. Despite his talent, Poe led a troubled life marked by poverty, restlessness, and loneliness.

Poe's Early Life Poe was born in Boston, the son of traveling actors. His father abandoned the family when Poe was an infant, and his mother died a year later. John and Frances Allan, a wealthy couple from Richmond, Virginia, became his foster parents. Though Poe got along well with his foster mother, he and John Allan frequently quarreled. Allan refused to pay for Poe's education because of his gambling debts and wild life. Later, when Poe was expelled from West Point for breaking rules, his relationship with his foster father ended.

Penniless, Poe moved to Baltimore, where he lived with his aunt and her daughter, Virginia Clemm. He had already published three volumes of poems and now began to write short stories. In 1835 he returned to Richmond, where he edited the Southern Literary Messenger and married his cousin Virginia.

Poe's World During Poe's lifetime, the literary world in the United States was centered in Boston, New York, and Philadelphia. Poe contributed to an assortment of journals in these cities. Still, he spent much of his life struggling for financial stability.

In 1847, just as Poe seemed to be gaining recognition for his writing, his world collapsed. His wife died at the age of twenty-four, and Poe plunged into a sorrow too deep to bear. Two years after his wife's death, Poe was found delirious on the streets of Baltimore and died shortly thereafter, completely alone.

Poe's Influence To the Irish poet W. B. Yeats, Poe was "certainly the greatest of American poets." Poe's story "The Unparalleled Adventures of One Hans Pfaal" influenced Jules Verne and other science-fiction writers. Fictional detectives such as Sherlock Holmes and Hercule Poirot are modeled after C. Auguste Dupin, the detective Poe introduced in "The Murders in the Rue Morgue." Modern writers of horror influenced by Poe include Richard Matheson, Anne Rice, and Stephen King.

> "They who dream by day are cognizant of many things which escape those who dream only by night."
>
> —Edgar Allan Poe, from "Eleonora"

The Mystery Writers of America (MWA) annually confers the Edgar Allan Poe Awards® to recognize outstanding achievement in the mystery genre. The award is a statuette of Poe. But perhaps the strongest proof of Poe's enduring popularity is the name of the National Football League team in Baltimore—the Ravens.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Edgar Allan Poe, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Selection Skills

The Raven

Literary Elements
- Narrative Poem (SE pp. 255. 257, 260, 261)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a Summary (SE p. 261)
- Combine Main Clauses (TE p. 260)

Reading Skills
- Analyze Sound Devices (SE pp. 255, 257–261)
- Classify (TE p. 256)

Vocabulary Skills
- Synonyms (SE p. 255, 258, 261)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Poem

Make a list of songs, movies, or stories you know that deal with strong emotions. Underneath each one, write down the emotion(s) that were portrayed and how you responded.

Build Background

Poe wrote that in this poem he set out to create a melancholy effect and that nevermore was the first word that came into his mind, both for its sound and for its meaning. The subject of the poem, he decided, would be the death of a beautiful woman, "unquestionably, the most poetical topic in the world."

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The Power of Darkness

As you read, ask yourself, How does "The Raven" reflect the Romantics' fascination with madness and death?

Literary Element Narrative Poem

A narrative poem is a poem that tells a story. Although the poem may include figurative language, imagery, rhythm, and rhyme, it also includes story elements such as setting, characters, and plot. As you read, ask yourself, How is telling a story in a poem similar to and different from telling one in prose?

Reading Strategy Analyze Sound Devices

Poets take advantage of words' sounds as well as their meanings. Two common sound devices are the repetition of words and alliteration, the repetition of consonant sounds at the beginnings of words. For example, Poe uses alliteration to create an almost hypnotic effect in phrases like "weak and weary." As you read, look for examples of these sound devices.

Tip: Take Notes On a chart, list examples of repetition and alliteration and describe their effects.

Sound Devices	Examples	Effects
alliteration	"nodded, nearly napping"

Learning Objectives

For pages 254–261

In studying these texts, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study:
Analyzing narrative poetry.
Analyzing sound devices.

Writing: Writing a summary.

Vocabulary

lattice (laʹ təs) n. a structure of crisscrossed strips forming a pattern of openings; p. 258 The dog tried to push its nose through the fence lattice.

beguile (bi gīlʹ) v. to influence by deceit; to trick; p. 258 The amateur magician's tricks beguiled only the children in the audience.

placid (plaʹ səd) adj. calm; peaceful; undisturbed; p. 259 The placid lake reflected the blue sky.

respite (resʹ pət) n. a period of rest or relief, as from work or sorrow; p. 259 The students looked forward to the respite of vacation.

balm (bäm) n. something that heals or soothes, as an ointment; p. 260 The aloe gel was a balm.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Some students may have difficulty with Poe's language. Help students by providing an overview of the poem. Explain that it is a narrative (story) told in the first person. The speaker refers to himself as "I" or "me." Each stanza, or group of lines, includes an event in the "plot" of the poem. Display the first line of the poem: "Once upon a midnight dreary, while I pondered weak and weary." Explain that this line can be rewritten in simpler terms as follows: It is midnight and the speaker is sad and thoughtful. As students read, ask them to think of each stanza as an event in the plot. Have them restate the events of the poem's "plot" in simple terms.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

In "The Raven," the speaker is a melancholy man who has lost his beloved Lenore. Late one night, while he is grieving, he is visited by an eerie and mysterious raven. The man questions the raven about Lenore, but the raven's only response is "Nevermore." The poem shows how loneliness and excessive grieving drive the man to madness.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 114–119.

Vocabulary

Word Origins Explain that the word placid comes from the Latin placere, meaning "to please." Ask: What is the connection between the Latin meaning of placere and the meaning of placid? (Both connote calm, peace.)

ADVANCED Have students explain the connection between the vocabulary words and their derivations: lattice (from Old French lath*—a thin piece of wood)*; respite (from Latin respectus, the act of looking back); balm (from Greek balsamon, a substance used for soothing ointments)

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 122.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD–ROM.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

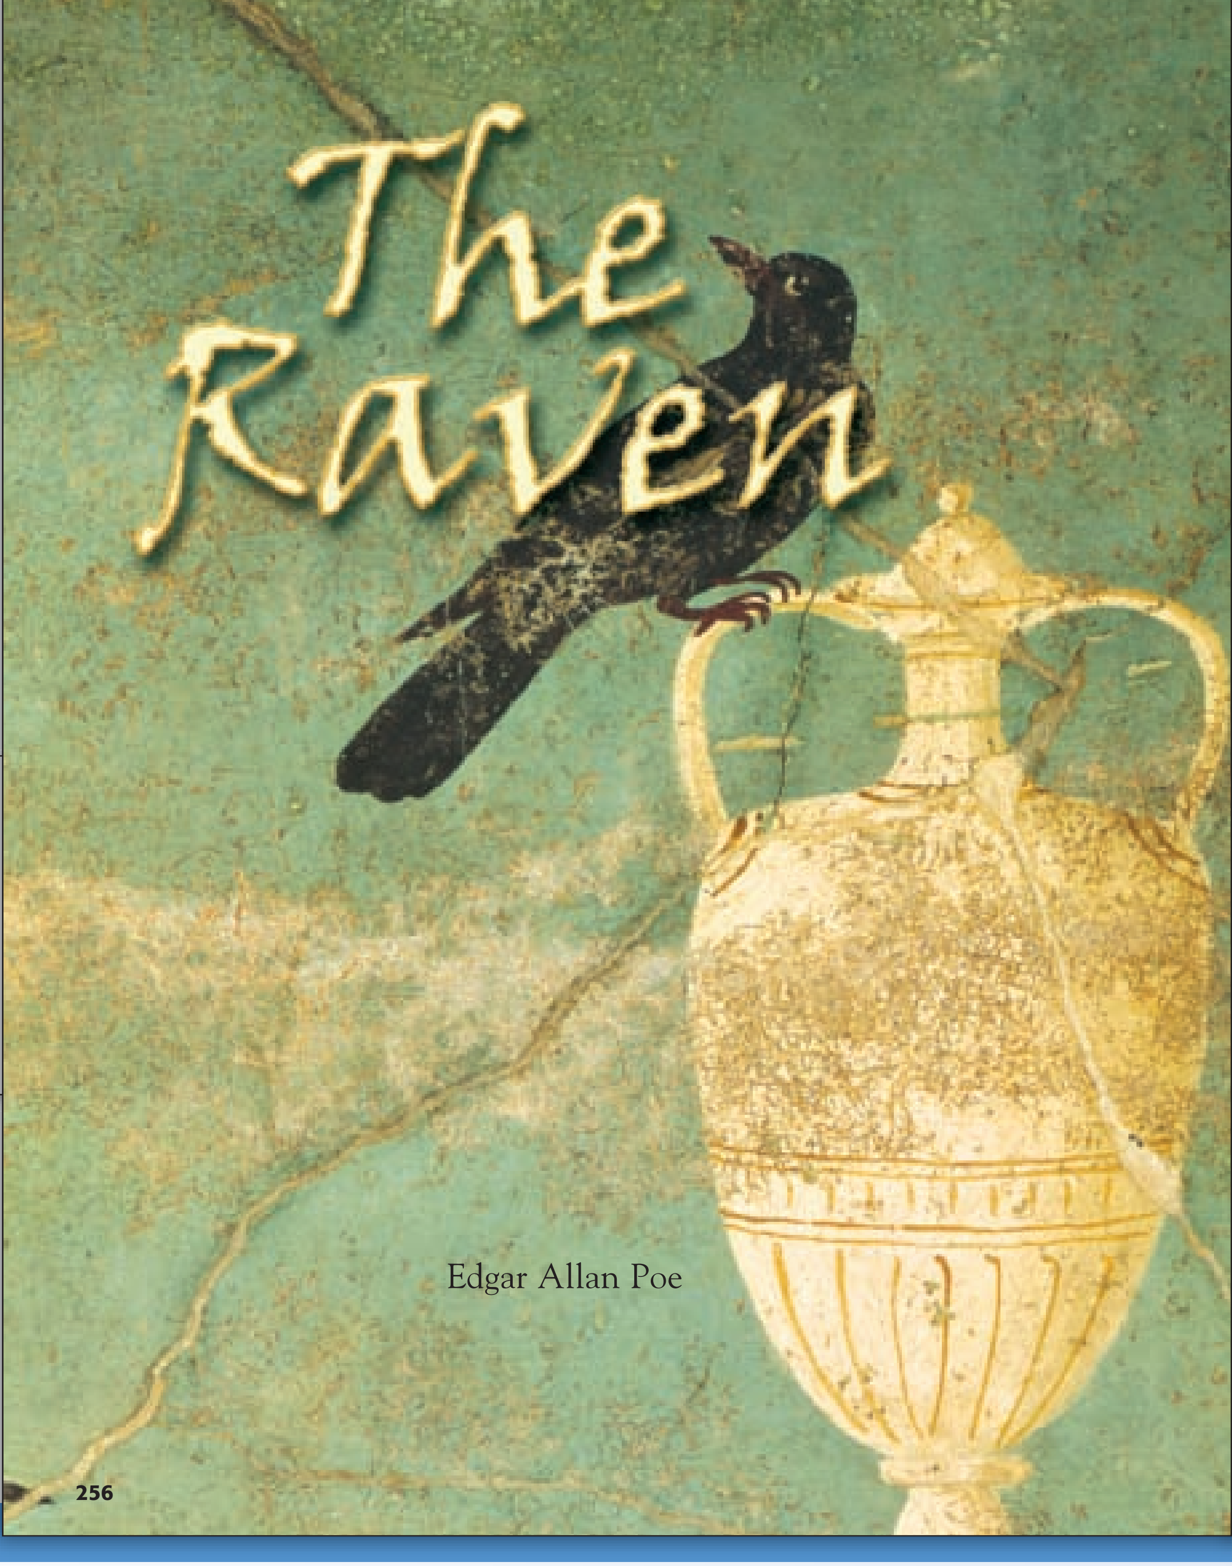
Analyze Sound Devices

Have a volunteer read the first two stanzas aloud. Say: Poets often use internal rhyme, or rhyming words within individual lines, to emphasize ideas. Ask: What are the internal rhymes in lines 1, 3, 7, and 9? (dreary/weary; napping/tapping; remember/December; morrow/borrow)

Literary History ☆

Ravens Ravens have a long literary history. They are often, like Poe's raven, viewed as birds of ill omen. They appear as tricksters in many Native American myths. The raven also plays a role in Aesop's fables.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD–ROM.



The Raven

Edgar Allan Poe

Reading Practice

Classify Tell students that as they read "The Raven," they should try to recreate the poem's sensory images in their imaginations. Write the following images from "The Raven" on the board:

- "a tapping, / As of someone gently rapping"
- "each separate dying ember wrought its ghost upon the floor"
- "silken, sad, uncertain rustling"
- "Deep into that darkness peering"
- "the air grew denser, perfumed from an unseen censer"

Have students identify the sense to which each image appeals. ("Tapping" and "rustling" appeal to the sense of sound; "dying ember" and "darkness" appeal to the sense of sight; "perfumed from an unseen censer" appeals to the sense of smell)

Once upon a midnight dreary, while I pondered, weak and weary,
Over many a quaint and curious volume of forgotten lore—
While I nodded, nearly napping, suddenly there came a tapping,
As of someone gently rapping, rapping at my chamber[1] door.
"'Tis some visitor," I muttered, "tapping at my chamber door—
Only this and nothing more."

1

Ah, distinctly I remember it was in the bleak December;
And each separate dying ember wrought its ghost upon the floor.
Eagerly I wished the morrow;—vainly I had sought to borrow
From my books surcease[2] of sorrow—sorrow for the lost Lenore—
For the rare and radiant maiden whom the angels name Lenore—
Nameless here for evermore.

And the silken, sad, uncertain rustling of each purple curtain
Thrilled me—filled me with fantastic terrors never felt before;
So that now, to still the beating of my heart, I stood repeating
"'Tis some visitor entreating entrance at my chamber door—
Some late visitor entreating entrance at my chamber door;—
This it is and nothing more."

Presently my soul grew stronger; hesitating then no longer,
"Sir," said I, "or Madam, truly your forgiveness I implore;
But the fact is I was napping, and so gently you came rapping,
And so faintly you came tapping, tapping at my chamber door,
That I scarce was sure I heard you"—here I opened wide the door;—
Darkness there and nothing more.

Deep into that darkness peering, long I stood there wondering, fearing,
Doubting, dreaming dreams no mortal ever dared to dream before;
But the silence was unbroken, and the stillness gave no token,
And the only word there spoken was the whispered word, "Lenore!"
This I whispered, and an echo murmured back the word, "Lenore!"
Merely this and nothing more.

---

[1] A chamber is a room.
[2] Surcease means "an end."

Narrative Poem What element of storytelling is established in these lines? 2

Analyze Sound Devices Why might Poe have used alliteration in this line? 3

Teach

Literary Element 2

Narrative Poem

Answer: The speaker establishes the setting here: It is a bleak December night, and the fire in his room has gone out.

APPROACHING Ask: How would you describe the character of the speaker—the main character in this narrative? (The speaker is melancholy and in a state of grief. He seems to be lonely, and he probably spends a lot of time with his books.) Ask: Look for quotation marks to identify the speaker talking to himself in line 5. What does he say? ("Tis some visitor")

For additional literary element practice, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 120.

Reading Strategy 3

Analyze Sound Devices

Answer: The repeated s sound mimics the sound curtains make as they rustle.

Ask: What is the effect of the s sounds? (The s sounds create suspense and a sense of mystery.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Point out that Poe frequently changes, or inverts, the normal order of sentence parts, putting some verbs and objects before the subjects. Display these passages from the poem and ask students to read them in conventional sentence order:

- "there came a tapping" (a tapping came there)
- "this it is…" (it is this)
- "your forgiveness I implore" (I implore your forgiveness)

Tell students to be alert to this usage and to read such passages in conventional sentence order to clarify meaning.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Sound Devices

Answer: The repetition emphasizes the fact that the speaker would have to walk underneath the raven in order to leave the room.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Say: Give an example of alliteration in these lines. (The p sound is repeated.) Remind students that alliteration is the repetition of initial vowel sounds.

Big Idea 2

The Power of Darkness

Answer: The lines include a reference to Pluto, the god of the dead; the words ghastly, grim, and ancient all evoke dark, sinister elements. "Nightly shore" may refer to death.

ADVANCED Ask: How might the raven's perching above the door affect the speaker? (The presence of the raven is a reminder of the speaker's loss of Lenore.)

Cultural History ☆

Athena Athena was also a goddess of war and the patron of the city of Athens. She is sometimes depicted wearing armor and a helmet.

Back into the chamber turning, all my soul within me burning,
Soon again I heard a tapping somewhat louder than before.
"Surely," said I, "surely that is something at my window lattice;
Let me see, then, what thereat is, and this mystery explore—
Let my heart be still a moment and this mystery explore;—
'Tis the wind and nothing more!"

Open here I flung the shutter, when, with many a flirt and flutter
In there stepped a stately Raven of the saintly days of yore.[3]
Not the least obeisance[4] made he; not a minute stopped or stayed he;
But, with mien of lord or lady, perched above my chamber door—
Perched upon a bust of Pallas[5] just above my chamber door—
Perched, and sat, and nothing more.

Then this ebony bird beguiling my sad fancy into smiling,
By the grave and stern decorum of the countenance[6] it wore,
"Though thy crest be shorn and shaven, thou," I said, "art sure no craven, Ghastly grim and ancient Raven wandering from the Nightly shore—
Tell me what thy lordly name is on the Night's Plutonian[7] shore!"
Quoth the Raven "Nevermore."

Much I marveled this ungainly fowl to hear discourse so plainly,
Though its answer little meaning—little relevancy bore;
For we cannot help agreeing that no living human being Ever yet was blessed with seeing bird above his chamber door—
Bird or beast upon the sculptured bust above his chamber door,
With such name as "Nevermore."

---

[3] Days of yore means "days of long ago." Here Poe is referring to a Bible story in which ravens feed the Hebrew prophet Elijah during a sojourn in the wilderness. (1 Kings 17:1–7)

[4] Obeisance means "a movement or gesture, such as a bow, that expresses respect."

[5] A bust is a statue of someone's head and shoulders. Pallas refers to Pallas Athena, the Greek goddess of wisdom. ☆

[6] Here, countenance means "facial expression."

[7] Plutonian refers to Pluto, the Roman god of the dead and ruler of the underworld.

1 Analyze Sound Devices What effect does Poe create by repeating the description "above my chamber door"?

2 The Power of Darkness How does this bit of dialogue reflect the dark side of Romanticism?

Vocabulary

lattice (la´ təs) n. a structure of crisscrossed strips forming a pattern of openings beguile (bi gīl´) v. to influence by deceit; to trick

Vocabulary Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Synonyms Point out that many words in this poem are no longer commonly used. Most of these words have synonyms that are used today. Identifying synonyms of these words will help students better understand the poem and Poe's meaning.

Write the following words on the board. Have students use a dictionary or a thesaurus to locate synonyms of each word.

- chamber (room)
- obeisance (bow)
- yore (past)
- quaff (drink)
- balm (ointment)

But the Raven, sitting lonely on the placid bust, spoke only 3
That one word, as if his soul in that one word he did outpour.
Nothing farther then he uttered—not a feather then he fluttered—
Till I scarcely more than muttered "Other friends have flown before—
On the morrow he will leave me, as my Hopes have flown before."
Then the bird said "Nevermore."

Startled at the stillness broken by reply so aptly spoken, 4
"Doubtless," said I, "what it utters is its only stock and store
Caught from some unhappy master whom unmerciful Disaster
Followed fast and followed faster till his songs one burden bore—
Till the dirges[8] of his Hope that melancholy burden bore
Of 'Never—nevermore.' "

But the Raven still beguiling all my fancy into smiling,
Straight I wheeled a cushioned seat in front of bird, and bust and door;
Then, upon the velvet sinking, I betook myself to linking Fancy unto fancy, thinking what this ominous bird of yore—
What this grim, ungainly, ghastly, gaunt, and ominous bird of yore
Meant in croaking "Nevermore."

This I sat engaged in guessing, but no syllable expressing
To the fowl whose fiery eyes now burned into my bosom's core;
This and more I sat divining,[9] with my head at ease reclining
On the cushion's velvet lining that the lamplight gloated o'er,
But whose velvet violet lining with the lamplight gloating o'er,
She shall press, ah, nevermore!

Then, methought, the air grew denser, perfumed from an unseen censer[10]
Swung by Seraphim[11] whose foot-falls tinkled on the tufted floor.
"Wretch," I cried, "thy God hath lent thee—by these angels he hath sent thee
Respite—respite and nepenthe[12] from thy memories of Lenore;
Quaff,[13] oh quaff this kind nepenthe and forget this lost Lenore!"
Quoth the Raven "Nevermore."

---

[8] Dirges are slow, mournful pieces of music, such as funeral hymns.

[9] Divining means "knowing through insight or intuition" or "guessing."

[10] A censer is a container in which incense is burned.

[11] Seraphim are angels of the highest rank.

[12] The ancient Greeks believed the drug nepenthe (ni pen′ thē) would ease pain and grief by causing forgetfulness.

[13] Quaff means "to drink heartily and deeply."

Analyze Sound Devices How is this repetition of the word nevermore different than others in the poem, and what is the significance of that difference? 5

Vocabulary

placid (pla´ səd) adj. calm; peaceful; undisturbed respite (res´ pət) n. a period of rest or relief, as from work or sorrow

Teach

Vocabulary 3

Synonyms Say: Read the definition of placid on this page. The word is defined by synonyms. Ask: What is a synonym of placid? (Possible answers: quiet; tranquil)

Literary Element 4

Narrative Poem Ask: Why is the speaker "startled" in line 61? (The bird speaks the word nevermore as if in answer to the speaker's thoughts.)

Reading Strategy 5

Analyze Sound Devices

Answer: Here, nevermore is not said by the bird but is a part of the speaker's thoughts. He has connected the repeated word to the haunting memory of his lost love.

Say: Many of the poem's stanzas end in nevermore. What is the effect of this repetition? (Hypnotic; it emphasizes the mournful mood of the poem.)

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging To help students keep track of the sequence of events in this poem, show them how to complete a sequence map as they continue to read. In the first box, display the following sentences retelling the first event in the poem: It is midnight and the speaker is alone. He is sad about his lost love Lenore. The speaker hears a rustling at the curtains. In the second box, write He opens the shutter and lets the Raven inside his room. Ask: What does the speaker say to the Raven? What does he do? Ask students to write their answers in boxes on their sequence maps.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Remind students to use the footnotes at the bottom of the page. Have students find the meanings of ominous, gaunt, and syllable and record them in their two-column charts.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Sound Devices

Answer: The repetition of the commands "take thy beak from" and "take thy form from" emphasizes the speaker's frustration and agitation.

Literary Element 2

Narrative Poem

Answer: The end of the poem ties up the narrative. The story peaks, or reaches its climax, in the second-to-last stanza. The last lines present the final resolution to the story.

Language History ☆

Biblical Allusions Literature is peppered with allusions to persons, places, and events in—as well as quotations from—the Bible. When Poe uses the phrase "balm in Gilead," he expects readers to be familiar with the Biblical prophet Jeremiah, who calls out for relief from pain.

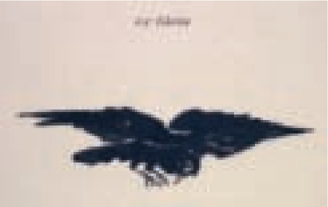
To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 124.

"Prophet!" said I, "thing of evil!—prophet still, if bird or devil!—
Whether Tempter[14] sent, or whether tempest tossed thee here ashore,
Desolate yet all undaunted, on this desert land enchanted—
On this home by Horror haunted—tell me truly, I implore—
Is there—is there balm in Gilead?[15]—tell me—tell me, I implore!"
Quoth the Raven "Nevermore."

"Prophet!" said I, "thing of evil!—prophet still, if bird or devil!
By that Heaven that bends above us—by that God we both adore—
Tell this soul with sorrow laden if, within the distant Aidenn,[16]
It shall clasp a sainted maiden whom the angels name Lenore—
Clasp a rare and radiant maiden whom the angels name Lenore."
Quoth the Raven "Nevermore."

"Be that word our sign of parting, bird or fiend!" I shrieked, upstarting—
"Get thee back into the tempest and the Night's Plutonian shore!
Leave no black plume as a token of that lie thy soul hath spoken!
Leave my loneliness unbroken!—quit the bust above my door!
Take thy beak from out my heart, and take thy form from off my door!"
Quoth the Raven "Nevermore."

And the Raven, never flitting, still is sitting, still is sitting
On the pallid[17] bust of Pallas just above my chamber door;
And his eyes have all the seeming of a demon's that is dreaming,
And the lamp-light o'er him streaming throws his shadow on the floor;
And my soul from out that shadow that lies floating on the floor
Shall be lifted—nevermore!



Le Corbeau (The Raven), 1875. Edouard Manet. Lithograph. Hamburger Kunsthalle, Germany.

---

[14] Tempter refers to the devil.

[15] Gilead was a region in ancient Palestine. Here Poe paraphrases a line from the Bible (Jeremiah 8:22): "Is there no balm in Gilead?" By this he means, "Is there no relief from my suffering?"

[16] Aidenn means "Eden."

[17] Pallid means "lacking in color" or "pale."

Analyze Sound Devices What is the effect of the repetition in this line? 1

Narrative Poem How is the end of this poem similar to the end of a short story? 2

Vocabulary

balm (bäm) n. something that heals or soothes, as an ointment

Writing Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Combine Sentences Explain to students that a main clause has a subject and a verb and expresses a complete thought. Closely related main clauses can be combined to form a compound sentence. Write these two main clauses on the board: Poe's father abandoned his family when Poe was an infant. His mother died a year later. Show students that these two main clauses can be combined using a coordinating conjunction preceded by a comma: Poe's father abandoned his family when Poe was an infant, and his mother died a year later. Have students write a summary of one stanza from "The Raven" using coordinating conjuctions to combine two main clauses.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. In your opinion, what is the most haunting image in this poem?
2. (a)Why is the speaker reading at the beginning of the poem? (b)How would you describe his emotional state in the first six stanzas?
3. (a)What is the speaker's first reaction to the raven's entrance? (b)Why does he react this way?
4. (a)What will never be lifted from the raven's shadow? (b)What does the future hold for him?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. What is the effect of the repetition of nevermore?
6. (a)How would you describe Poe's purpose in writing this poem? (b)Did he achieve his purpose? Explain.

Connect

7. Big Idea The Power of Darkness Which details contribute to the mood of this poem, and how do they illustrate the dark side of Romanticism?
8. Connect to the Author As you read on page 254, Poe's life was full of both tragedy and controversy—including heavy gambling and marriage to his 13-year-old cousin. In your opinion, how did his experiences and his lifestyle affect his literary efforts and career?

Literary Element Narrative Poem

Narrative poems include a narrator, or speaker.

1. Who is the "I" in "The Raven"?
2. What words would you use to describe this speaker?

Reading Strategy Analyze Sound Devices

The music of Poe's verses derives from his use of sound devices, most of which are kinds of repetition.

1. What is the effect of the repetition of the word tapping?
2. The words grim, ungainly, ghastly, and gaunt describe the raven. How do these words contribute to the meaning of the poem?

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Synonyms With a partner, match each boldfaced vocabulary word below with its synonym. (You will not use all options.) Check your work with a thesaurus or dictionary.

1. lattice
2. beguile
3. placid
4. respite
5. balm

a. evade
b. net
c. charm
d. lull
e. chaotic
f. serene
g. ointment

Writing

Write a Summary Narrative poems contain elements of both poetry and storytelling. Summarize the plot in "The Raven," making sure to identify the climax, or point of greatest emotional intensity. Remember that a summary should be shorter than the original because the purpose is to highlight main points. For help summarizing, see page 79.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students' answers will vary.
2. (a) To distract himself from his sorrow (b) He moves from grief to curiosity to fear.
3. (a) He is startled and amused. (b) He is relieved to be distracted from his melancholy.
4. (a) The speaker's soul (b) The future will be one of despair.
5. It unifies the poem and adds to the mystery of the raven's arrival and ability to speak.
6. (a) Students may say that Poe's purpose was to write a poem that would create a mood of melancholy and a speaker haunted by memories. (b) Students may point to the poem's enduring popularity as evidence that Poe achieved his purpose.
7. Details such as "darkness," "midnight dreary," "fantastic terrors," and "ominous bird," as well as details about the speaker's distress, create a haunting, mysterious mood that reflects Romanticism's dark side.
8. Students may say that his father's disappearance and his mother's death likely affected the themes of death and mystery that permeate his works.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 111–112.

Progress Check

Can students analyze sound devices?

If No → See Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 121.

Literary Element

1. The "I" is the lover of Lenore.
2. Students might suggest obsessed, tortured, depressed, melancholy, grieving, and distracted.

Writing

Students' summaries should clearly identify the climax and main points of the poem.

Vocabulary

1. b 2. c 3. f 4. d 5. g

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

A soldier is sentenced to death by the Spanish Inquisition but escapes a sharp swinging pendulum. Just as he is about to be forced into a pit by heated metal walls, French soldiers enter the city, and he is saved.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 126–131.

Vocabulary

Synonyms and Antonyms

Say: Look at the definition for deduce. The word conclusion is in the definition. A synonym for deduce is conclude. Ask: What is an antonym for impede? (help, assist) Ask students to find a synonym and/or antonym for each word in the vocabulary list.

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 134.

Before You Read

The Pit and the Pendulum

Connect to the Story

Why do certain things terrify some people more than they do others? Freewrite for a few minutes about personal phobias and what might cause them.

Build Background

This story is set during the last years of the Spanish Inquisition (1478–1834). Established in 1231 by the Roman Catholic Church, the Inquisition was a court that arrested and tried suspected heretics, or those who opposed Church teaching. Those convicted of heresy were imprisoned for life or sentenced to death. Today, the Inquisition is remembered as a period of mercilessness and brutality.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The Power of Darkness

As you read, ask yourself, How are psychological darkness and terror—two topics that fascinated some Romantics—portrayed in this story?

Literary Element Suspense

Suspense is a feeling of curiosity, uncertainty, or even dread about what is going to happen next. Writers heighten the suspense in a story by creating a threat to the central character, or protagonist, and giving readers clues about what might happen. As you read "The Pit and the Pendulum," ask yourself, How does Poe create suspense?

Reading Strategy Identify Sequence

Sequence is the logical order of ideas or events. To indicate time order, writers often use signal words or phrases, such as before, earlier that morning, or after that. As you read Poe's story, look for signal words that indicate the sequence of events.

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart to record the sequence of events.

Learning Objectives

For pages 262–275

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing sequence.

Reading: Identifying sequence.

Vocabulary

deduce (di do͞os′) v. to draw a conclusion from something known or assumed; p. 265 Several clues helped us deduce the location of the runaways.

impede (im pēd′) v. to slow or block progress or action; obstruct; p. 265 Road construction will impede travel this summer.

lethargy (leth′ ər jē) n. sluggish inactivity or drowsiness; p. 268 Dad told Bill to be active and get over his lethargy.

proximity (prok sim′ ə tē) n. closeness in space, time, sequence, or degree; nearness; p. 271 The proximity of the cobra made us nervous.

diffuse (di fūz′) v. to spread widely; to scatter in all directions; p. 273 Green dye was diffused into the river on St. Patrick's Day.

Selection Skills

The Pit and the Pendulum

Literary Elements
- Suspense (SE pp. 262, 263, 266, 267, 269, 273, 275)

Reading Skills
- Identify Sequence (SE pp. 262, 265, 267–271, 275)
- Evaluate Tone (TE p. 272)

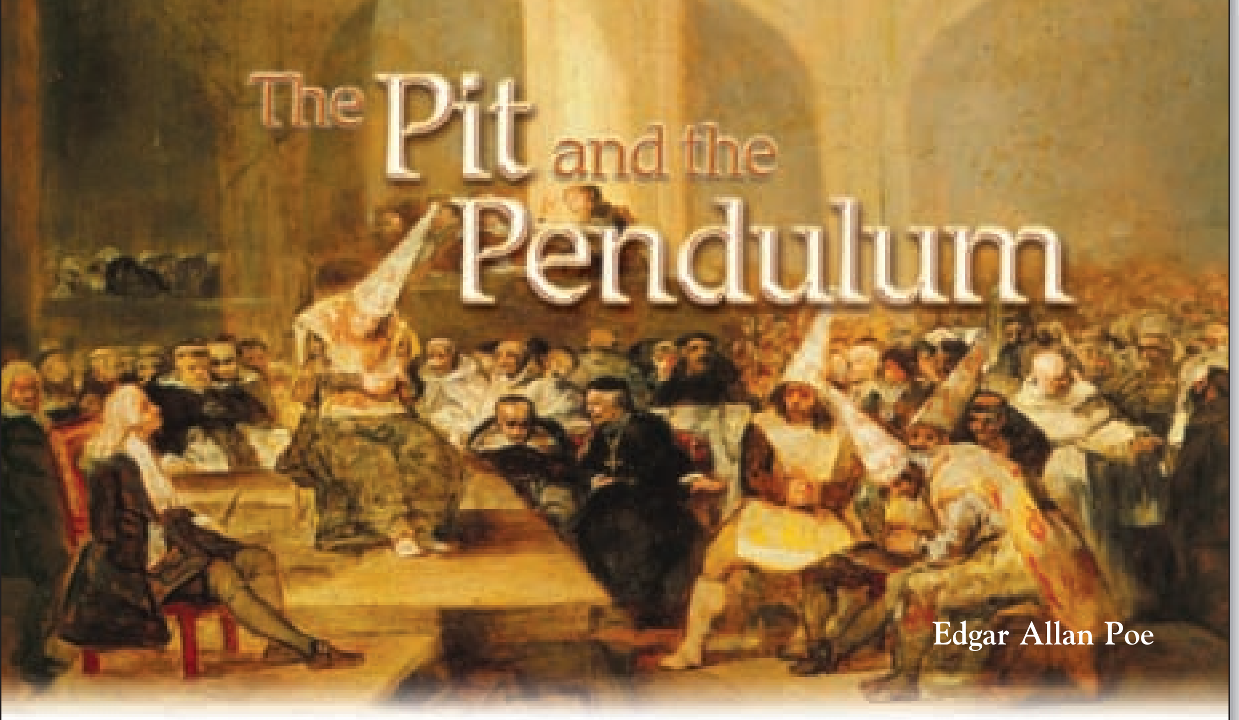
Vocabulary Skills
- Word Origins (SE p. 275)
- Context Clues (TE p. 264)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write an Essay (SE p. 276)
- Analyze Description (TE p. 266)
- Imagine (TE p. 268)
- Use the Dash (TE p. 270)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE pp. 266, 270, 274)

The Pit and the Pendulum

Edgar Allan Poe



Inquisition Scene, 1816. Francisco Goya. Oil on canvas, 46 x 73 cm. Real Academia de Bellas Artes de San Fernando, Madrid. ★

I was sick—sick unto death with that long agony; and when they at length unbound me, and I was permitted to sit, I felt that my senses were leaving me. The sentence—the dread sentence of death—was the last of distinct accentuation which reached my ears.

After that, the sound of the inquisitorial voices seemed merged in one dreamy indeterminate hum. It conveyed to my soul the idea of revolution—perhaps from its association in fancy with the burr of a millwheel. This only for a brief period; for presently I heard no more. Yet, for a while, I saw; but with how terrible an exaggeration! I saw the lips of the black-robed judges. They appeared to me white—whiter than the sheet upon which I trace these words—and thin even to grotesqueness;[1] thin with the intensity of their expression of firmness—of immovable resolution—of stern contempt of human torture. I saw that the decrees of what to me was Fate, were still issuing from those lips. I saw them writhe with a deadly locution.[2] I saw them fashion the syllables of my name; and I shuddered because no sound succeeded. I saw, too, for a few moments of delirious horror, the soft and nearly imperceptible waving of the sable draperies which enwrapped the walls of the apartment. And then my vision fell upon the seven tall candles upon the table. At first they wore the aspect of charity, and seemed white slender angels who would save me; but then, all at once, there came a most deadly nausea over my spirit, and I felt every 1 Suspense The narrator obviously lives to tell his story despite his death sentence. How do you think the author will maintain interest in his tale?

2 The Power of Darkness What is the effect of Poe's description of extreme whiteness here?

---

1. Grotesqueness is the state of being distorted or unnatural in shape or appearance.
2. Locution is a form or style of verbal expression.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Write the words immovable, imperceptible, and unconsciousness. Tell students the prefixes in- im-, and un- mean "not" or "the opposite of." Explain that immovable means "not movable." Ask students to make a three-column chart with the headings Word, Prefix, and Meaning and list words with these prefixes.

Advanced Point out words that Poe uses in an older sense, such as fancy and fashion. Guide students to determine their meanings from context. (fancy refers to imagination; fashion means "to shape or form in a certain way")

Teach

Literary Element 1

Suspense Answer: Students who previewed the story will be able to answer that the narrator will endure various trials—each more horrible than the last. Others may say that the author will show how the narrator escaped death.

For additional literary element practice, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 132.

Big Idea 2

The Power of Darkness
Answer: The effect is ghostly.

View the Art ★

This painting is by Spanish artist Francisco de Goya y Lucientes (1746–1828). Much of Goya's work records historical disasters and upheavals; this scene depicts the Inquisition's trial of an old woman. Many old women were tried and executed for witchcraft in 16th- and 17th-century Spain.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 9.0
DRP: 65
Lexile: 1010

Interactive Read and Write

Other options for teaching this selection can be found in

- Interactive Read and Write for EL Students, pp. 79-98
- Interactive Read and Write for Approaching-Level Students, pp. 79-98
- Interactive Read and Write for On-Level Students, pp. 79-98

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Identify Sequence Read the bracketed passage aloud.

Say: In this passage, the narrator is describing his descent into a lower dungeon. Ask: What words and phrases describe the sequence of the descent? (Possible answers: "down—down—still down"; "Then comes"; "After this")

APPROACHING Ask students whether the descent took place slowly or quickly. (The repetition of the word down suggests that it felt like a long time to the narrator.)

StdNA

Literary History

The Gothic Tradition Dark, mysterious, and often ghastly settings and subjects are part of the Gothic literary tradition. Mary Shelley's Frankenstein and Bram Stoker's Dracula are two of the most famous British Gothic novels. In the United States, Poe and Nathaniel Hawthorne were the two most famous authors to write in the Gothic tradition.

fiber in my frame thrill as if I had touched the wire of a galvanic battery,[3] while the angel forms became meaningless specters,[4] with heads of flame, and I saw that from them there would be no help. And then there stole into my fancy, like a rich musical note, the thought of what sweet rest there must be in the grave. The thought came gently and stealthily, and it seemed long before it attained full appreciation; but just as my spirit came at length properly to feel and entertain it, the figures of the judges vanished, as if magically, from before me; the tall candles sank into nothingness; their flames went out utterly; the blackness of darkness supervened; all sensations appeared swallowed up in a mad rushing descent as of the soul into Hades.[5] Then silence, and stillness, and night were the universe.

I had swooned; but still will not say that all of consciousness was lost. What of it there remained I will not attempt to define, or even to describe; yet all was not lost. In the deepest slumber—no! In delirium—no! In a swoon—no! In death—no! even in the grave all is not lost. Else there is no immortality[6] for man. Arousing from the most profound[7] of slumbers, we break the gossamer web of some dream. Yet in a second afterward, (so frail may that web have been) we remember not that we have dreamed. In the return to life from the swoon there are two stages; first, that of the sense of mental or spiritual; secondly, that of the sense of physical, existence. It seems probable that if, upon reaching the second stage, we could recall the impressions of the first, we should find these impressions eloquent in memories of the gulf beyond. And that gulf is—what? How at least shall we distinguish its shadows from those of the tomb? But if the impressions of what I have termed the first stage, are not, at will, recalled, yet, after long interval, do they not come unbidden, while we marvel whence they come? He who has never swooned, is not he who finds strange palaces and wildly familiar faces in coals that glow; is not he who beholds floating in midair the sad visions that the many may not view; is not he who ponders over the perfume of some novel[8] flower—is not he whose brain grows bewildered with the meaning of some musical cadence which has never before arrested his attention.

Very suddenly there came back to my soul motion and sound . . . .

Amid frequent and thoughtful endeavors to remember; amid earnest struggles to regather some token of the state of seeming nothingness into which my soul had lapsed, there have been moments when I have dreamed of success; there have been brief, very brief periods when I have conjured up remembrances which the lucid reason of a later epoch assures me could have had reference only to that condition of seeming unconsciousness. These shadows of memory tell, indistinctly, of tall figures that lifted and bore me in silence down—down—still down—till a hideous dizziness oppressed me at the mere idea of the interminableness[9] of the descent. They tell also of a vague horror at my heart, on account of that heart's unnatural stillness. Then comes a sense of sudden motionlessness throughout all things; as if those who bore me (a ghastly train!) had outrun, in their descent, the limits of the limitless, and paused from the wearisomeness of their toil. After this I call to mind flatness and dampness; and that all is madness—the madness of a memory which busies itself among forbidden things.

Very suddenly there came back to my soul motion and sound—the tumultuous motion of

---

[3] In a galvanic battery, direct electric current is produced by means of chemical action.

[4] Specters are ghosts or ghostly visions.

[5] In Greek myth, Hades is the underground place of the dead.

[6] Here, immortality means "eternal life."

[7] Here, profound means "complete" or "deep."

[8] A novel flower is new and unusual.

[9] Interminableness means "endlessness."

Vocabulary Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Context Clues Tell students that many words have multiple meanings. Readers must rely on context clues to determine which meanings authors intend. For example, brief can mean "short in length" or "a summary of the main points of a law case." Context determines its meaning.

Point out the word stole in the fifth line from the beginning of this page. Ask: What context clues help you determine the meaning of the word? (The words gently and stealthily and the phrase "it seemed long . . . appreciation" are clues that the meaning is "came gradually and secretly.")

the heart, and, in my ears, the sound of its beating. Then a pause in which all is blank. Then again sound, and motion, and touch—a tingling sensation pervading my frame. Then the mere consciousness of existence, without thought—a condition which lasted long. Then, very suddenly, thought, and shuddering terror, and earnest endeavor to comprehend my true state. Then a strong desire to lapse into insensibility.[10] Then a rushing revival of soul and a successful effort to move. And now a full memory of the trial, of the judges, of the sable draperies, of the sentence, of the sickness, of the swoon. Then entire forgetfulness of all that followed; of all that a later day and much earnestness of endeavor have enabled me vaguely to recall.

So far, I had not opened my eyes. I felt that I lay upon my back, unbound. I reached out my hand, and it fell heavily upon something damp and hard. There I suffered[11] it to remain for many minutes, while I strove to imagine where and what I could be. I longed, yet dared not to employ my vision. I dreaded the first glance at objects around me. It was not that I feared to look upon things horrible, but that I grew aghast lest there should be nothing to see. At length, with a wild desperation at heart, I quickly unclosed my eyes. My worst thoughts, then, were confirmed. The blackness of eternal night encompassed me. I struggled for breath. The intensity of the darkness seemed to oppress and stifle me. The atmosphere was intolerably close. I still lay quietly, and made effort to exercise my reason. I brought to mind the inquisitorial proceedings,[12] and attempted from that point to deduce my real condition. The sentence had passed; and it appeared to me that a very long interval of time had since elapsed. Yet not for a moment did I suppose myself actually dead. Such a supposition, notwithstanding what we read in fiction, is altogether inconsistent with real existence;—but where and in what state was I? The condemned to death, I knew, perished usually at the autos-da-fé,[13] and one of these had been held on the very night of the day of my trial. Had I been remanded to my dungeon, to await the next sacrifice which would not take place for many months? This I at once saw could not be. Victims had been in immediate demand. Moreover, my dungeon, as well as all the condemned cells at Toledo,[14] had stone floors, and light was not altogether excluded.

A fearful idea now suddenly drove the blood in torrents upon my heart, and for a brief period, I once more relapsed into insensibility. Upon recovering, I at once started to my feet, trembling convulsively in every fiber. I thrust my arms wildly above and around me in all directions. I felt nothing; yet dreaded to move a step, lest I should be impeded by the walls of the tomb. Perspiration burst from every pore and stood in cold big beads on my forehead. The agony of suspense grew at length intolerable, and I cautiously moved forward, with my arms extended, and my eyes straining from their

---

[10] The narrator is describing his wish to return to unconsciousness (insensibility).

[11] Here, suffered means "allowed."

[12] During the Inquisition, a person's refusal to confess was taken as evidence of guilt.

[13] Often, the sentence was to be burned alive in public ceremonies called autos-da-fé (ô′ tōz də fā′). The phrase is Portuguese for "acts of faith," referring to the Inquisitors' faith that the condemned persons were guilty as charged.

[14] The Spanish city of Toledo was important during the Inquisition.

2 Identify Sequence Note the number of times the narrator repeats the word then in this paragraph. What does this repetition tell you about the stages the narrator goes through as he gradually regains consciousness?

3 The Power of Darkness How does the narrator's description of his surroundings reflect the Gothic tradition?

Vocabulary

deduce (di do͞os′)	v. to draw a conclusion from something known or assumed impede (im pēd′)	v. to slow or block progress or action; obstruct

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Identify Sequence Answer: He alternates between extreme awareness of his predicament and blankness, thoughtlessness, and forgetfulness.

Big Idea 3

The Power of Darkness
Answer: The author mentions the "intensity of the darkness" and uses the words blackness, shadows, tomb, dampness, madness, fear, and eternal night*—all Gothic details.*

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Explain that an adverb describes a verb, an adjective, or another adverb. Many adverbs end in -ly. The word heavily (describes the verb fell) is an example of an adverb. Ask students to identify other adverbs and the words they describe on this page.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Explain to students that the narrator describes how all of his senses are taking in this horrible experience. For example, he refers to the sense of touch in this line: "I felt that I lay upon my back, unbound." Ask students to make a five-column "Senses" chart and use it to identify descriptions that show how the speaker's sight, hearing, smell, taste, and touch are affected in the dungeon.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Suspense Answer: The reader sympathizes with the narrator's attempts to escape fear, madness, and death. Until the narrator escapes, suspense is maintained.

APPROACHING Ask: How does the complete darkness in the dungeon create suspense? (In the total darkness, the narrator has no idea what dangers there might be in the room. This creates suspense for the reader.) Have a student act out these lines: "I struggled for breath. The intensity of the darkness seemed to . . . stifle me." Ask: How do these actions make the reader feel about the speaker's situation? Why? (The actions make the reader feel anxious because the speaker has trouble breathing.)

Literary Element 2

Suspense Answer: Poe tells what the narrator's focus is—the mode and the hour of his fate. The reader naturally focuses on this too.

View the Art ★

Answer: Poe gives us some sharp details, but leaves others "in the shadows." The effect is to suggest rather than show the horror of the dungeon. Also, the moods of Piranesi's art and Poe's story are similar—gloomy and sinister.

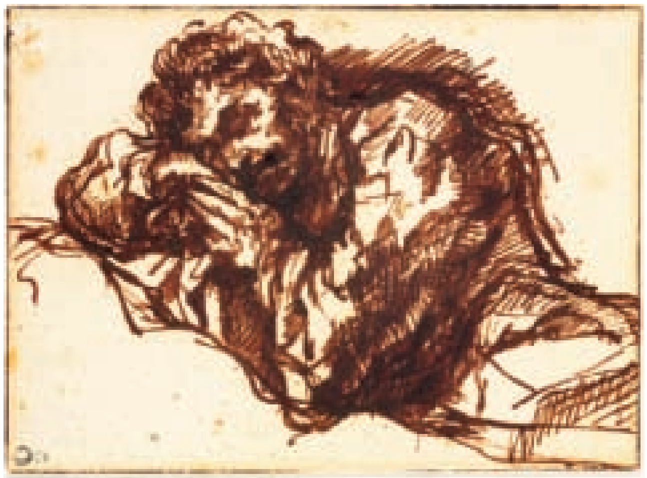
The Italian artist Giovanni Battista Piranesi (1720–1778) developed a technique for etching copperplate that produced rich textures and bold contrasts.

---

sockets, in the hope of catching some faint ray of light. I proceeded for many paces; but still all was blackness and vacancy. I breathed more freely. It seemed evident that mine was not, at least, the most hideous of fates.

And now, as I still continued to step cautiously onward, there came thronging upon my recollection a thousand vague rumors of the horrors of Toledo. Of the dungeons there had been strange things narrated—fables I had always deemed them—but yet strange, and too ghastly to repeat, save in a whisper. Was I left to perish of starvation in the subterranean[15] world of darkness; or what fate, perhaps even more fearful, awaited me? That the result would be death, and a death of more than customary bitterness, I knew too well the character of my judges to doubt. The mode and the hour were all that occupied or distracted me.



Half length portrait of a man bending over, 18th c. Giovanni Battista Piranesi. Pen and ink on paper, 15.8 x 21.6 cm. Hamburger Kunsthalle, Hamburg, Germany.

View the Art Giovanni Battista Piranesi uses lines to create areas of light and shadow in his portrait rather than sharp outlines. How does this technique compare with Poe's narration in this story? ★

My outstretched hands at length encountered some solid obstruction. It was a wall, seemingly of stone masonry—very smooth, slimy, and cold. I followed it up; stepping with all the careful distrust with which certain antique narratives had inspired me. This process, however, afforded me no means of ascertaining the dimensions of my dungeon; as I might make its circuit, and return to the point whence I set out, without being aware of the fact; so perfectly uniform seemed the wall. I therefore sought the knife which had been in my pocket, when led into the inquisitorial chamber; but it was gone; my clothes had been exchanged for a wrapper of coarse serge. I had thought of forcing the blade in some minute crevice of the masonry, so as to identify my point of departure. The difficulty, nevertheless, was but trivial; although, in the disorder of my fancy, it seemed at first insuperable.[16] I tore a part of the hem from the robe and placed the fragment at full length, and at right angles to the wall. In groping my way around the prison I could not fail to encounter this rag upon completing the circuit. So, at least I thought: but I had not counted upon the extent of the dungeon, or upon my own weakness. The ground was moist and slippery. I staggered onward for some time, when I stumbled and fell. My excessive fatigue induced me to remain prostrate; and sleep soon overtook me as I lay.

Upon awakening, and stretching forth an arm, I found beside me a loaf and a pitcher with water. I was too much exhausted to reflect upon this circumstance, but ate and drank with avidity.[17] Shortly afterward, I resumed my tour around the prison, and with much toil, came at last upon the fragment of the serge. Up to the period when I fell I had counted fifty-two paces, [15] Subterranean describes things that exist or occur below the earth's surface.

---

[16] Something that's insuperable cannot be overcome.

[17] Avidity is eagerness and enthusiasm.

1 Suspense How do the narrator's physical and psychological torments add to the suspense?

2 Suspense How does this sentence build tension?

Writing Practice

Analyze Description Explain to students that descriptive writing is controlled by a dominant impression that functions as a thesis. Details in the description should reinforce the dominant impression. Have students identify the dominant impression in one paragraph from Poe's story and write an analysis of the description. The analysis should identify the dominant impression Poe creates, explain how the descriptive details are organized, and point out the senses to which the description appeals.

and upon resuming my walk, I counted forty-eight more;—when I arrived at the rag. There were in all, then, a hundred paces; and admitting two paces to the yard, I presumed the dungeon to be fifty yards in circuit. I had met, however, with many angles in the wall, and thus I could form no guess at the shape of the vault; for vault I could not help supposing it to be.

I had little object—certainly no hope—in these researches; but a vague curiosity prompted me to continue them. Quitting the wall, I resolved to cross the area of the enclosure. At first I proceeded with extreme caution, for the floor, although seemingly of solid material, was treacherous with slime. At length, however, I took courage, and did not hesitate to step firmly; endeavoring to cross in as direct a line as possible. I had advanced some ten or twelve paces in this manner, when the remnant of the torn hem of my robe became entangled between my legs. I stepped on it, and fell violently on my face.

In the confusion attending my fall, I did not immediately apprehend a somewhat startling circumstance, which yet, in a few seconds afterward, and while I still lay prostrate, arrested my attention. It was this—my chin rested upon the floor of the prison, but my lips and the upper portion of my head, although seemingly at a less elevation than the chin, touched nothing. At the same time my forehead seemed bathed in a clammy vapor, and the peculiar smell of decayed fungus arose to my nostrils. I put forward my arm, and shuddered to find that I had fallen at the very brink of a circular pit, whose extent, of course, I had no means of ascertaining at the moment. Groping about the masonry just below the margin, I succeeded in dislodging a small fragment, and let it fall into the abyss.[18] For many seconds I hearkened to its reverberations as it dashed against the sides of the chasm in its descent; at length there was a sullen plunge into water, succeeded by loud echoes. At the same moment there came a sound resembling the quick opening, and a rapid closing of a door overhead, while a faint gleam of light flashed suddenly through the gloom, and as suddenly faded away.

I saw clearly the doom which had been prepared for me, and congratulated myself upon the timely accident by which I had escaped. Another step before my fall, and the world had seen me no more. And the death just avoided, was of that very character which I had regarded as fabulous and frivolous[19] in the tales respecting the Inquisition. To the victims of its tyranny, there was the choice of death with its direst physical agonies, or death with its most hideous moral horrors. I had been reserved for the latter. By long suffering my nerves had been unstrung, until I trembled at the sound of my own voice, and had become in every respect a fitting subject for the species of torture which awaited me.

Shaking in every limb, I groped my way back to the wall; resolving there to perish rather than risk the terrors of the wells, of which my imagination now pictured many in various positions about the dungeon. In other conditions of mind I might have had courage to end my misery at once by a plunge into one of these abysses; but now I was the veriest of cowards. Neither could I forget what I had read of these pits—that the sudden extinction of life formed no part of their most horrible plan.

Agitation of spirit kept me awake for many long hours; but at length I again slumbered. Upon arousing, I found by my side as before, a loaf and a pitcher of water. A burning thirst consumed me, and I emptied the vessel at a draught. It must have been drugged; for

---

[18] Here, abyss (ə bis′) refers to "an extremely deep hole."

[19] Here, fabulous means "fictional," and frivolous means "silly" or "unimportant."

3 Identify Sequence What signal words indicate the sequence of events in this paragraph?

4 Suspense How do the opening and closing of a door overhead help create suspense?

5 The Power of Darkness How does this sentence reflect Romanticism's fascination with disease and madness?

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Identify Sequence Answer: Signal words include at first and at length. Ask: What is the narrator attempting to do at this time? (He is attempting to walk directly across the dungeon rather than feel his way along the wall.)

ADVANCED Ask students to identify and record other words and structures that signal sequence as they continue to read.

Literary Element 4

Suspense Answer: It is ominous that the narrator is being observed. It is a mystery that urges the reader onward to discover the answer.

Big Idea 5

The Power of Darkness

Answer: The narrator's nerves are unstrung; even the sound of his own voice makes him tremble. These are indications that he is breaking down physically and mentally.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Help students visualize this dungeon scene by identifying some of the spatial relationships that the narrator describes. Display the following passages from the story:

- "fallen at the very brink of a circular pit"
- "closing of a door overhead"
- "groped my way back to the wall"
- "began my tour with the wall to the left"
- "ended . . . with the wall to the right"

Have students explain what each of the passages tells about the narrator's movement or location within the dungeon.

Advanced Learners

UNIVERSAL ACCESS

Spanish Inquisition Have students research these questions and share their findings: Who did the Inquisition target? How did the Inquisition period end? How does the story relate to the Inquisition?

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Identify Sequence Answer: Constant activity in chronological sequence would be as wearying for the reader as for the narrator. Both the reader and the narrator need time to rest and reflect on the rhythmic series of events.

Ask: What event has occurred while the narrator slept? (The room has been lighted.)

Literary History ☆

The Detective Story Critics consider Poe the father of the mystery/detective story. "The Murders in the Rue Morgue," his first mystery, was published in 1841, the same year as "The Pit and the Pendulum." "The Murders in the Rue Morgue," along with "The Mystery of Marie Roget" and "The Purloined Letter," features the brilliant and eccentric detective C. Auguste Dupin, who is considered one of the prototypes for the great fictional detective Sherlock Holmes. As he does in "The Pit and the Pendulum," Poe stresses close observation of details and logical deduction in his detective stories.

scarcely had I drunk, before I became irresistibly drowsy. A deep sleep fell upon me—a sleep like that of death. How long it lasted of course, I know not; but when, once again, I unclosed my eyes, the objects around me were visible. By a wild sulphurous luster, the origin of which I could not at first determine, I was enabled to see the extent and aspect of the prison.

In its size I had been greatly mistaken. The whole circuit of its walls did not exceed twenty-five yards. For some minutes this fact occasioned me a world of vain trouble; vain indeed! for what could be of less importance, under the terrible circumstances which environed[20] me, than the mere dimensions of my dungeon? But my soul took a wild interest in trifles, and I busied myself in endeavors to account for the error I had committed in my measurement. The truth at length flashed upon me. In my first attempt at exploration I had counted fifty-two paces, up to the period when I fell; I must then have been within a pace or two of the fragments of serge; in fact, I had nearly performed the circuit of the vault. I then slept, and upon awaking, I must have returned upon my steps—thus supposing the circuit nearly double what it actually was. My confusion of mind prevented me from observing that I began my tour with the wall to the left, and ended it with the wall to the right.

I had been deceived, too, in respect to the shape of the enclosure. In feeling my way around I had found many angles, and thus deduced an idea of great irregularity; so potent is the effect of total darkness upon one arousing from lethargy or sleep! The angles were simply those of a few slight depressions, or niches, at odd intervals. The general shape of the prison was square. What I had taken for masonry seemed now to be iron, or some other metal, in huge plates, whose sutures or joints occasioned the depression. The entire surface of this metallic enclosure was rudely daubed in all the hideous and repulsive devices[21] to which the charnel[22] superstitions of the monks has given rise. The figures of fiends in aspects of menace, with skeleton forms, and other more really fearful images, overspread and disfigured the walls. I observed that the outlines of these monstrosities were sufficiently distinct, but that the colors seemed faded and blurred, as if from the effects of a damp atmosphere. I now noticed the floor, too, which was of stone. In the center yawned the circular pit from whose jaws I had escaped; but it was the only one in the dungeon.

All this I saw distinctly and by much effort: for my personal condition had been greatly changed during slumber. I now lay upon my back, and at full length, on a species of low framework of wood. To this I was securely bound by a long strap resembling a surcingle.[23] It passed in many convolutions about my limbs and body, leaving at liberty only my head, and my left arm to such extent that I could, by dint of much exertion, supply myself with food from an earthen dish which lay by my side on the floor. I saw, to my horror, that the pitcher had been removed. I say to my horror; for I was consumed with intolerable thirst. This thirst it appeared to be the design of my persecutors to stimulate: for the food in the dish was meat pungently seasoned. ☆

Looking upward I surveyed the ceiling of my prison. It was some thirty or forty feet overhead, and constructed much as the side walls. In one of its panels a very singular figure riveted my whole attention. It was the painted figure of Time as he is commonly represented, save that, in lieu of[24] a scythe, he held what, at a casual

1 Identify Sequence Why does the author alternate periods of activity with periods of inaction?

Vocabulary

lethargy (leth′ ər jē) n. sluggish inactivity or drowsiness

---

[20] To environ is to encircle or surround.

[21] Here, the devices are ornamental designs.

[22] Here, charnel means "gruesome" or "deathlike." As a noun, it refers to a vault where bones or bodies are placed.

[23] A surcingle is a belt or band used to hold a saddle or pack on a horse or pack animal.

[24] In lieu (in lo͞o) of means "in place of" or "instead of."

Writing Practice

Imagine Explain that imagining the sights, sounds, smells, tastes, and feel of objects will help the reader appreciate the horror of Poe's story. Poe offers many descriptive details, but he also leaves many details to readers' imaginations.

Have students write their responses to the following questions:

- What does the dungeon smell like?
- What sounds are made by the rats and the moving pendulum?
- What sensations does the narrator feel from his bindings?

glance, I supposed to be the pictured image of a huge pendulum such as we see on antique clocks. There was something, however, in the appearance of this machine which caused me to regard it more attentively. While I gazed directly upward at it (for its position was immediately over my own) I fancied that I saw it in motion. In an instant afterward the fancy was confirmed. Its sweep was brief, and of course slow. I watched it for some minutes, somewhat in fear, but more in wonder. Wearied at length with observing its dull movement, I turned my eyes upon the other subjects in the cell.

A slight noise attracted my notice, and, looking to the floor, I saw several enormous rats traversing it. They had issued from the well, which lay just within view to my right. Even then, while I gazed, they came up in troops, hurriedly, with ravenous eyes, allured by the scent of the meat. From this it required much effort and attention to scare them away.

It might have been half an hour, perhaps even an hour, (for I could take but imperfect note of time) before I again cast my eyes upward. What I then saw confounded and amazed me. The sweep of the pendulum had increased in extent by nearly a yard. As a natural consequence, its velocity was also much greater. But what mainly disturbed me was the idea that it had perceptibly descended. I now observed—with what horror it is needless to say—that its nether extremity[25] was formed of a crescent of glittering steel, about a foot in length from horn to horn; the horns upward, and the under edge evidently as keen as that of a razor. Like a razor also, it seemed massy and heavy, tapering from the edge into a solid and broad structure above. It was appended to a weighty rod of brass, and the whole hissed as it swung through the air.

I could no longer doubt the doom prepared for me by monkish ingenuity[26] in torture. My cognizance of the pit had become known to the inquisitorial agents—the pit whose horrors had been destined for so bold a recusant[27] as myself—the pit, typical of hell, and regarded by rumor as the Ultima Thule[28] of all their punishments. The plunge into this pit I had avoided by the merest of accidents, and I knew that surprise, or entrapment into torment, formed an important portion of all the grotesquerie of these dungeon deaths. Having failed to fall, it was no part of the demon plan to hurl me into the abyss; and thus (there being no alternative) a different and a milder destruction awaited me. Milder! I half smiled in my agony as I thought of such application of such a term.

What boots it[29] to tell of the long, long hours of horror more than mortal, during which I counted the rushing vibrations of the steel! Inch by inch—line by line—with a descent only appreciable at intervals that seemed ages—down and still down it came! Days passed—it might have been that many days passed—ere it swept so closely over me as to fan me with its acrid breath. The odor of the sharp steel forced itself into my nostrils. I prayed—I wearied heaven with my prayer for its more speedy descent. I grew frantically mad, and struggled to force myself upward against the sweep of the fearful scimitar.[30] And then I fell suddenly calm, and lay smiling at the glittering death, as a child at some rare bauble.[31]

---

[25] The pendulum's nether extremity is its lower end.

[26] Ingenuity (in′ jə no͞o′ ə tē)—the noun form of ingenious—is creative ability or inventiveness.

[27] A recusant (re′ kyə zənt) is one who refuses to accept or obey established authorities.

[28] Here, Ultima Thule (ul′ tə mə tho͞o lē) means "extreme limit" or "greatest degree." In ancient times, this was the name of the northernmost part of the known world.

[29] What boots it is an expression meaning "What good is it?"

[30] A scimitar is a curved, single-edged sword of Asian origin.

[31] A bauble is any showy but worthless trinket.

2 Identify Sequence How does this reference to the passage of time contribute to the suspense of the following sentence?

Suspense What is to be his fate? Why is the destruction "milder?" 3

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Identify Sequence Answer: The reference reinforces the fact that the narrator has been looking away from the ceiling long enough for a startling change to have taken place there.

Literary Element 3

Suspense Answer: His fate will apparently not include being hurled into the abyss; therefore, some other form of "destruction" is in store. That destruction is milder only because the narrator so dreads the pit.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Physics of a Pendulum Explain to students that the narrator is describing the frightening swings of a pendulum. Have students find photos of pendulums and research the factors (weight, length, amplitude) that affect a pendulum's swing and answer these questions:

- What is the length of time of a pendulum swing in a standard wall clock? (about one second)
- What is the length of time of a pendulum swing in a standard grandfather clock? (about two seconds)
- How long is a pendulum in a standard grandfather clock? (between two and three feet)
- What factor or factors affect the period of time it takes for a pendulum to go back and forth? (length of the pendulum)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Identify Sequence Answer: The repetition of again indicates that the action of the pendulum is unceasing.

Ask: When the narrator repeats the word again, what is he anticipating will happen to him? (He anticipates that the pendulum will continue to lower until it slowly cuts through his chest and kills him.)

ADVANCED Say: The text says that the sweep of the pendulum is some thirty feet or more. Ask: What would you estimate the pendulum's length to be? (It is at least about ten feet long.)

View the Art ★

Answer: The prison in the illustration—apparently like that in the story—is vast, oppressive, and equipped with elaborate mechanisms.

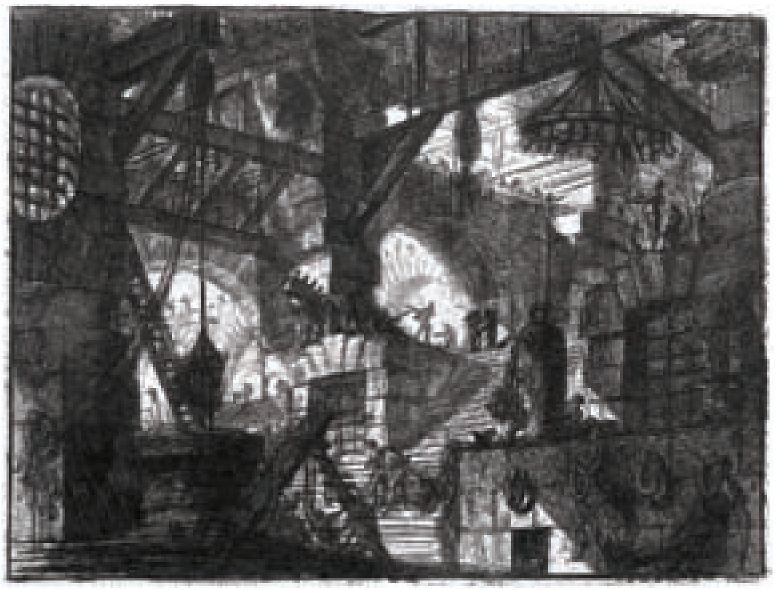
Piranesi created a series of etchings of imaginary prisons that influenced contemporary stage designers, artists, and Gothic novelists. The influence of these etchings continued into the 20th century, when they inspired designers of sets for horror films.



Carceri d'Invenzione, Plate XIII, 1780. Giovanni Battista Piranesi. Etching, 16 x 22 in. Private collection.

View the Art In a series called Carceri, Giovanni Battista Piranesi invented elaborate, ominous prison scenes—much as Poe does in this story. What in this illustration suggests a setting similar to the one described by the story's narrator? ★

There was another interval of utter insensibility; it was brief; for, upon again lapsing into life there had been no perceptible descent in the pendulum. But it might have been long; for I knew there were demons who took note of my swoon, and who could have arrested the vibration at pleasure. Upon my recovery, too, I felt very—oh, inexpressibly sick and weak, as if through long inanition.[32] Even amid the agonies of that period, the human nature craved food. With painful effort I outstretched my left arm as far as my bonds permitted, and took possession of the small remnant which had been spared me by the rats. As I put a portion of it within my lips, there rushed to my mind a half formed thought of joy—of hope. Yet what business had I with hope? It was, as I say, a half formed thought—man has many such which are never completed. I felt that it was of joy—of hope; but I felt also that it had perished in its formation. In vain I struggled to perfect—to regain it. Long suffering had nearly annihilated all my ordinary powers of mind. I was an imbecile—an idiot.

The vibration of the pendulum was at right angles to my length. I saw that the crescent was designed to cross the region of the heart. It would fray the serge of my robe—it would return and repeat its operations—again—and again. Notwithstanding its terrifically wide sweep (some thirty feet or more) and the hissing vigor of its descent, sufficient to sunder these very walls of iron, still the fraying of my robe would be all that, for several minutes, it would accomplish. And at this thought I paused. I dared not go farther than this reflection. I dwelt upon it with a pertinacity[33] of attention—as if, in so dwelling, I could arrest here the descent of the steel. I forced myself to ponder upon the sound of the crescent as it should pass across the garment—upon the peculiar thrilling sensation which the friction of cloth produces on the nerves. I pondered upon all this frivolity until my teeth were on edge.

Down—steadily down it crept. I took a frenzied pleasure in contrasting its downward with its lateral velocity. To the right—to the left—far and wide—with the shriek of a damned spirit; to my heart with the stealthy pace of the tiger! I alternately laughed and howled as the one or the other idea grew prominent.

1 Identify Sequence How does the repetition of the signal word again heighten the feeling of terror?

---

[32] The exhaustion caused by a lack of food or water is called inanition.

[33] Pertinacity is stubborn persistence.

Grammar Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW The Dash Point out that Poe punctuates many sentences with dashes. A dash is used to signal a change in thought or to emphasize parenthetical material.

Tell students that a good test of the correct use of dashes for parenthetical material is to delete the information that the dashes set off. If the remaining sentence keeps its basic meaning, then the dashes were properly used.

Have students apply this test to two sentences on this page. Have them explain how the sentences retain their meaning when the material enclosed by dashes is removed.

Down—certainly, relentlessly down! It vibrated within three inches of my bosom! I struggled violently, furiously, to free my left arm. This was free only from the elbow to the hand. I could reach the latter, from the platter beside me, to my mouth, with great effort, but no farther. Could I have broken the fastenings above the elbow, I would have seized and attempted to arrest the pendulum. I might as well have attempted to arrest an avalanche!

Down—still unceasingly—still inevitably down! I gasped and struggled at each vibration. I shrunk convulsively at its every sweep. My eyes followed its outward or upward whirls with the eagerness of the most unmeaning despair; they closed themselves spasmodically at the descent, although death would have been a relief, oh! how unspeakable! Still I quivered in every nerve to think how slight a sinking of the machinery would precipitate that keen, glistening axe upon my bosom. It was hope that prompted the nerve to quiver—the frame to shrink. It was hope—the hope that triumphs on the rack[34]—that whispers to the death-condemned even in the dungeons of the Inquisition.

They were wild, bold, ravenous . . . .

I saw that some ten or twelve vibrations would bring the steel in actual contact with my robe, and with this observation there suddenly came over my spirit all the keen, collected calmness of despair. For the first time during many hours—or perhaps days—I thought. It now occurred to me that the bandage, or surcingle, which enveloped me, was unique. I was tied by no separate cord. The first stroke of the razor-like crescent athwart any portion of the band, would so detach it that it might be unwound from my person by means of my left hand. 3 But how fearful, in that case, the proximity of the steel! The result of the slightest struggle how deadly! Was it likely, moreover, that the minions of the torturer had not foreseen and provided for this possibility! Was it probable that the bandage crossed my bosom in the track of the pendulum? Dreading to find my faint, and, as it seemed, my last hope frustrated, I so far elevated my head as to obtain a distinct view of my breast. The surcingle enveloped my limbs and body close in all directions—save in the path of the destroying crescent.

Scarcely had I dropped my head back into its original position, when there flashed upon my mind what I cannot better describe than as the unformed half of that idea of deliverance to which I have previously alluded, and of which a moiety[35] only floated indeterminately through my brain when I raised food to my burning lips. The whole thought was now present—feeble, scarcely sane, scarcely definite,—but still entire. I proceeded at once, with the nervous energy of despair, to attempt its execution.

For many hours the immediate vicinity of the low framework upon which I lay, had been literally swarming with rats. They were wild, bold, ravenous; their red eyes glaring upon me as if they waited but for motionlessness on my part to make me their prey. "To what food," I thought, "have they been accustomed in the well?"

They had devoured, in spite of all my efforts to prevent them, all but a small remnant of the contents of the dish. I had fallen into an habitual seesaw, or wave of the hand about the platter: and, at length, the unconscious uniformity

---

[34] The rack was an instrument of torture used to stretch or pull a victim's body in different directions.

[35] A moiety of something is a portion of it.

2 Identify Sequence How does the repetition of the word down at the beginning of each of three paragraphs indicate the passing of time?

Vocabulary

proximity (prok sim´ ə tē) n. closeness in space, time, sequence, or degree; nearness

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Identify Sequence Answer: Each time the pendulum moves down, a little more time has passed.

Ask: What sequence of events is occurring in the three paragraphs beginning with the word down? (The pendulum is slowly descending, and the narrator is becoming more terrified.)

Vocabulary 3

Context Clues Ask: How do the phrases "how fearful" and "result of the slightest struggle how deadly" help you understand the meaning of proximity? (The context shows that the pendulum is getting very close to the narrator.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Explain that Poe uses many terms to refer to the same object. Draw a word map and write rats in the center. In outer circles write ravenous animals; wild, bold; vermin; deliverers. Have students make a word map for pendulum with Poe's terms in the outer circles.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Explain that the narrator's emotions range from scared and depressed to wildly excited. Show students how this range might look on a line graph with high points for excitement and surprise and low points for sadness and terror. Have students make a graph using a vertical axis of 0–5 for emotional level. They should label the horizontal axis points with the page and paragraph number. Have students make a line graph of the emotions the narrator experiences on this page, and then make predictions about the next series of emotions the narrator may feel.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Identify Sequence

Say: Describe the sequence of events in this passage. (The narrator rubs his greasy hands on his bindings, then lies perfectly still, waiting for the rats to gnaw the bindings. The rats at first are frightened, but then they swarm over him.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS To help English learners follow the developments in the sequence, be sure they understand these terms: voracity (greediness in eating), writhed (twisted and turned), and severed (cut through).

Big Idea 2

The Power of Darkness

Answer: Nature is presented as malevolent.

of the movement deprived it of effect. In their voracity the vermin frequently fastened their sharp fangs into my fingers. With the particles of the oily and spicy viand which now remained, I thoroughly rubbed the bandage wherever I could reach it; then, raising my hand from the floor, I lay breathlessly still.

1 At first the ravenous animals were startled and terrified at the change—at the cessation of movement. They shrank alarmedly back; many sought the well. But this was only for a moment. I had not counted in vain upon their voracity. Observing that I remained without motion, one or two of the boldest leaped upon the frame-work, and smelt at the surcingle. This seemed the signal for a general rush. Forth from the well they hurried in fresh troops. They clung to the wood—they overran it, and leaped in hundreds upon my person. The measured movement of the pendulum disturbed them not at all. Avoiding its strokes they busied themselves with the anointed bandage. They pressed—they swarmed upon me in ever accumulating heaps. They writhed upon my throat; their cold lips sought my own; I was half stifled by their thronging pressure; disgust, for which the world has no name, swelled my bosom, and chilled, with a heavy clamminess, my heart. Yet one minute, and I felt that the struggle would be over. Plainly I perceived the loosening of the bandage. I knew that in more than one place it must be already severed. With a more than human resolution I lay still.

Nor had I erred in my calculations—nor had I endured in vain. I at length felt that I was free. The surcingle hung in ribands from my body. But the stroke of the pendulum already pressed upon my bosom. It had divided the serge of the robe. It had cut through the linen beneath. Twice again it swung, and a sharp sense of pain shot through every nerve. But the moment of escape had arrived. At a wave of my hand my deliverers hurried tumultuously away. With a steady movement—cautious, sidelong, shrinking, and slow—I slid from the embrace of the bandage and beyond the reach of the scimitar. For the moment, at least, I was free.

Free!—and in the grasp of the Inquisition! I had scarcely stepped from my wooden bed of horror upon the stone floor of the prison, when the motion of the hellish machine ceased and I beheld it drawn up, by some invisible force through the ceiling. This was a lesson which I took desperately to heart. My every motion was undoubtedly watched. Free!—I had but escaped death in one form of agony, to be delivered unto worse than death in some other. With that thought I rolled my eyes nervously around the barriers of iron that hemmed me in. Something unusual—some change which at first I could not appreciate distinctly—it was obvious, had taken place in the apartment. For many minutes in a dreamy and trembling abstraction,[36] I busied myself in vain, unconnected conjecture.[37] During this period, I became aware, for the first time, of the origin of the sulphurous light which illuminated the cell. It proceeded from a fissure, about half an inch in width, extending entirely around the prison at the base of the walls, which thus appeared, and were completely separated from the floor. I endeavored, but of course in vain, to look through the aperture.

As I arose from the attempt, the mystery of the alteration in the chamber broke at once upon my understanding. I have observed that, although the outlines of the figures upon the walls were sufficiently distinct, yet the colors seemed blurred and indefinite. These colors had now assumed, and were momentarily assuming, a startling and most intense brilliancy, that gave to the spectral and fiendish portraitures an aspect that might have thrilled even firmer nerves than my own. Demon eyes, of a wild and ghastly vivacity, glared upon me in a thousand directions, where none had been

2 The Power of Darkness What view of nature is presented here?

---

[36] Abstraction is the state of being lost in thought.

[37] Conjecture is the forming of an opinion without definite or sufficient evidence.

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Evaluate Tone Guide students to evaluate the tone of "The Pit and the Pendulum." Explain that the rhythm of the sentences is established by the punctuation and length of the sentences. Ask: How does Poe use sentence structure (or style) to show the horror of the speaker's situation? What makes the speaker sound frightened and desperate? (repetition and dashes reveal uncertainty; exclamation points reveal desperation) Have students support their evaluation of tone with five examples from the text.

visible before, and gleamed with the lurid luster[38] of a fire that I could not force my imagination to regard as unreal.

Unreal!—Even while I breathed there came to my nostrils the breath of the vapor of heated iron! A suffocating odor pervaded the prison! A deeper glow settled each moment in the eyes that glared at my agonies! A richer tint of crimson diffused itself over the pictured horrors of blood. I panted! I gasped for breath! There could be no doubt of the design of my tormentors—oh! most unrelenting! oh! most demoniac of men! I shrank from the glowing metal to the center of the cell. Amid the thought of the fiery destruction that impended, the idea of the coolness of the well came over my soul like balm.[39] I rushed to its deadly brink. I threw my straining vision below. The glare from the enkindled roof illumined its inmost recesses. Yet, for a wild moment, did my spirit refuse to comprehend the meaning of what I saw. At length it forced—it wrestled its way into my soul—it burned itself in upon my shuddering reason.—Oh! for a voice to speak! oh! horror!—oh! any horror but this! With a shriek, I rushed from the margin, and buried my face in my hands—weeping bitterly.

The heat rapidly increased, and once again I looked up, shuddering as with a fit of the ague.[40] There had been a second change in the cell—and now the change was obviously in the form. As before, it was in vain that I, at first, endeavoured to appreciate or understand what was taking place. But not long was I left in doubt. The Inquisitorial vengeance had been hurried by my two-fold escape, and there was to be no more dallying with the King of Terrors.[41] The room had been square. I saw that two of its iron angles were now acute—two, consequently, obtuse. The fearful difference quickly increased with a low rumbling or moaning sound. In an instant the apartment had shifted its form into that of a lozenge. But the alteration stopped not here—I neither hoped nor desired it to stop. I could have clasped the red walls to my bosom as a garment of eternal peace. "Death," I said, "any death but that of the pit!" Fool! might I have not known that into the pit it was the object of the burning iron to urge me? Could I resist its glow? or, if even that, could I withstand its pressure? And now, flatter and flatter grew the lozenge, with a rapidity that left me no time for contemplation. Its center, and of course, its greatest width, came just over the yawning gulf. I shrank back—but the closing walls pressed me resistlessly onward. At length for my seared and writhing body there was no longer an inch of foothold on the firm floor of the prison. I struggled no more, but the agony of my soul found vent in one loud, long, and final scream of despair. I felt that I tottered upon the brink—I averted my eyes—

There was a discordant hum of human voices! There was a loud blast of many trumpets! There was a harsh grating as of a thousand thunders! The fiery walls rushed back! An outstretched arm caught my own as I fell, fainting, into the abyss. It was that of General Lasalle.[42] The French army had entered Toledo. The Inquisition was in the hands of its enemies.

---

[38] The eyes are full of life (vivacity), with a fiery, reddish glare (a lurid luster).

[39] Although destruction was about to occur (impended), the idea of coolness seemed to be something calming or soothing (a balm).

[40] Ague (ā′ gū) is a fever accompanied by chills and shivering.

[41] The King of Terrors could be either the "Inquisitorial vengeance" or death.

[42] Lasalle was an officer of the French emperor Napoleon Bonaparte, whose army invaded Spain in 1808.

Vocabulary

diffuse (di fūz′) v. to spread widely; to scatter in all directions

Suspense How has the mystery of the pit heightened the suspense throughout the story? 3

The Power of Darkness An atmosphere of horror is essential to Gothic fiction. How does this passage create a sense of horror? 4

Teach

Literary Element 3

Suspense Answer: The reader is never certain whether the narrator will meet his end at the bottom of the pit. This uncertainty hovers over the entire story.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Check to make sure that English learners understand the three dangers involved in his uncertainty: the demon eyes of the rats, the darkness, and the pit.

Big Idea 4

The Power of Darkness
Answer: The passage creates a sense of horror by depicting the narrator shrinking in terror as he is about to topple into the pit.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 137.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

AAVE Read the following sentence in the selection: I saw that two of its iron angles were now acute—two, consequently, obtuse. Note the phrase two angles were acute. Approaching level students who are users of AAVE may not follow subject-verb agreement with irregular verbs. For example, they might say two angles was acute. Give students a few correct examples: She were my friend, They was happy, My friends has gone. Then provide students with a list of pronoun subjects (you, he, she, it, we, they) and a list of adjectives or nouns (funny, happy, my friend, etc.) and have them join one word from each list using either was or were, as appropriate. Provide students with lists of words that they can use to practice the correct use of does, do, have, has.

After You Read

Assess

1. (a) Horror, sympathy (b) Students may have been surprised by how the narrator is rescued.
2. (a) Death (b) He is so fearful that he cannot hear the judges; then he faints.
3. (a) He walks around the walls, counting his steps. (b) He wants to know what fate awaits him.
4. (a) A death of "hideous moral horrors," like hell (b) Its depth and contents are unknown.
5. (a) He is strapped down beneath a gradually descending pendulum. (b) Students may mention the narrator's hope and his renewed ability to think.
6. (a) Above all, the narrator fears the pit. (b) Yes: words like shriek and shuddering convey terror.
7. (a) Even the most rational people are subject to mental distress in extreme situations. (b) Many will say his attempts to escape death are realistic.
8. Frightening and macabre; Poe uses concise details to describe the setting, build suspense, and portray fear.
9. Answers will vary. Students may note that, in America today, certain groups do suffer because of the suspicion, fear, and misunderstanding of other citizens.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 113–114

Progress Check

Can students identify sequence?

If No → See Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 133.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)What emotions did you experience while reading this story? (b)Were you surprised by the ending? Why or why not?
2. (a)To what fate has the narrator been sentenced? (b)What does his immediate reaction tell you about his state of mind?
3. (a)How does the narrator determine the size of his prison? (b)Why might he feel that he must find out about his surroundings?
4. (a)What kind of death does he associate with the pit? (b)Why might the pit put him in such a state of terror?
5. (a)What horror does the narrator face after avoiding the pit? (b)Why do you think the narrator responds as he does to the second horror?

Analyze and Evaluate

6. (a)Why is the third method of torture especially frightening for the narrator? (b)Is Poe's portrayal of the third method as the most horrible convincing?
7. (a)What do the narrator's struggles and thoughts throughout his ordeal tell you about Poe's view of human nature? (b)Do you think the narrator's actions are realistic given his situation? Explain.

Connect

8. Big Idea The Power of Darkness How would you describe the mood or atmosphere of this story? How does Poe achieve this effect?
9. Connect to Today Could the Spanish Inquisition—or something like it—occur today? Explain your response.

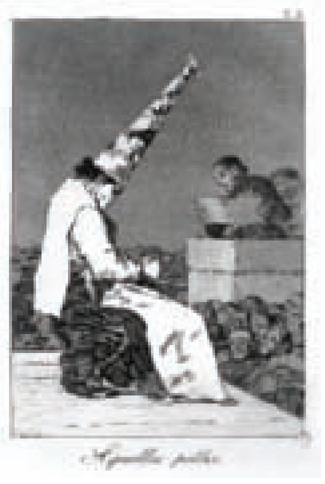
Primary Visual Artifact

Attacking the Inquisition

The artist Francisco de Goya (1746–1828) was a fierce critic of the Spanish Inquisition. Many of his works deal with the suffering it caused, including the series of prints, Los caprichos (The Caprices), published in 1799. Number 23 of the series, Aquellos polbos (Those Specks of Dust), depicts a disabled woman arrested for selling love potions. Dressed in the typical robe and conical hat worn by condemned heretics, she slumps before the officers of the Inquisition.

Group Activity Discuss the following questions:

1. Why do you think Goya might have chosen to depict the trial of this woman?
2. How would you compare and contrast Poe's and Goya's portrayals of the Inquisition?



Los caprichos, Plate 23, 1799. Francisco de Goya. Etching, 22 x 15 cm. Private Collection.

Group Activity

1. Her disability and her trivial offense show that she is a victim of a brutal institution.
2. Both show the Inquisition as brutal; Poe's story shows an impersonal, sadistic power, whereas Goya's print puts a face on the terror.

Literary Element Suspense

Suspense generally increases as the plot of a story moves toward its climax. In "The Pit and the Pendulum," Poe generates tension and uncertainty by pitting the narrator against one horror after another. The reader becomes more and more involved in the story and concerned about what will happen to the narrator.

1. The narrator undergoes moments of both physical and psychological torment. Give two examples of each. Describe the event, and tell how each event heightens the story's suspense.
2. In your opinion, what is the most suspenseful moment in the story? Explain your choice.

Review: Point of View

As you learned in Unit One, point of view refers to the perspective from which a story is told. Poe's story is told in the first-person point of view. The narrator is a character in the story who uses the pronouns I, me, and my. Everything that the reader learns is filtered through the eyes, ears, and thoughts of the narrator.

Partner Activity With another classmate discuss how the story's point of view contributes to its mood of suspense. Create a list of examples in which the first-person point of view limits your knowledge of events, characters, and setting. Then, explain how each example helps create suspense. If possible, share your findings with the class.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Reading Strategy Identify Sequence

ACT Skills Practice

1. The ending of "The Pit and the Pendulum" represents:

   A. a logical progression of events.

   B. an improbable solution to the narrator's plight.

   C. the triumph of the Inquisition.

   D. the negation of the narrator's premonitions and fears.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Origins Create a word map like the one shown for each selection vocabulary word. Use a dictionary for help.

deduce impede proximity diffuse lethargy

Definition: a peculiarity of constitution or temperament

Etymology: Greek idiosynkrasia means "to blend" idiosyncrasy

Sample Sentence: Her habit of making sarcastic comments during serious occasions was definitely an idiosyncrasy.

Academic Vocabulary

The action of "The Pit and the Pendulum" unfolds in an environment that is filled with mystery and terror.

The word environment can have different meanings in different subject areas. Use context clues to infer the meaning of environment in the sentence above. Check your inference in a dictionary.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

After You Read

Assess

Literary Element

1. Being tied to a table and being cut by the pendulum; the darkness and the rats. As each horror is overcome, another, more terrifying one looms ahead.
2. When the pendulum cuts through the narrator's clothing; when the heated walls move

Review: Point of View

Events: The narrator does not give details about the "long agony" he suffered prior to his trial; details of the trial are not made clear; what caused the French to rescue the narrator is not revealed.

Characters: People watching the narrator in the dungeon are unknown.

Setting: Details about the building that houses the dungeon are not revealed.

Vocabulary

impede Definition: to slow progress or action; Etymology: Latin impedire means "to hobble"; Sample Sentence: The curb impeded the driver from backing up.

deduce Definition: to draw a conclusion from something known or assumed; Etymology: Latin deduco means "to bring down"; Sample Sentence: From studying the patient's symptoms, the doctor was able to deduce a diagnosis.

lethargy Definition: sluggish inactivity or drowsiness; Etymology: Greek lethargus means "drowsiness"; Sample Sentence: Her lethargy prevented her from doing her chores.

proximity Definition: closeness in space, time, sequence, or degree; Etymology: Latin proximitas means "nearness"; Sample Sentence: The proximity of fast food was apparent from the smell.

diffuse Definition: to spread widely; to scatter in all directions; Etymology: Latin diffusilis means "capable of spreading"; Sample Sentence: The campaign manager tried to diffuse news of her candidate's lead in the polls.

After You Read

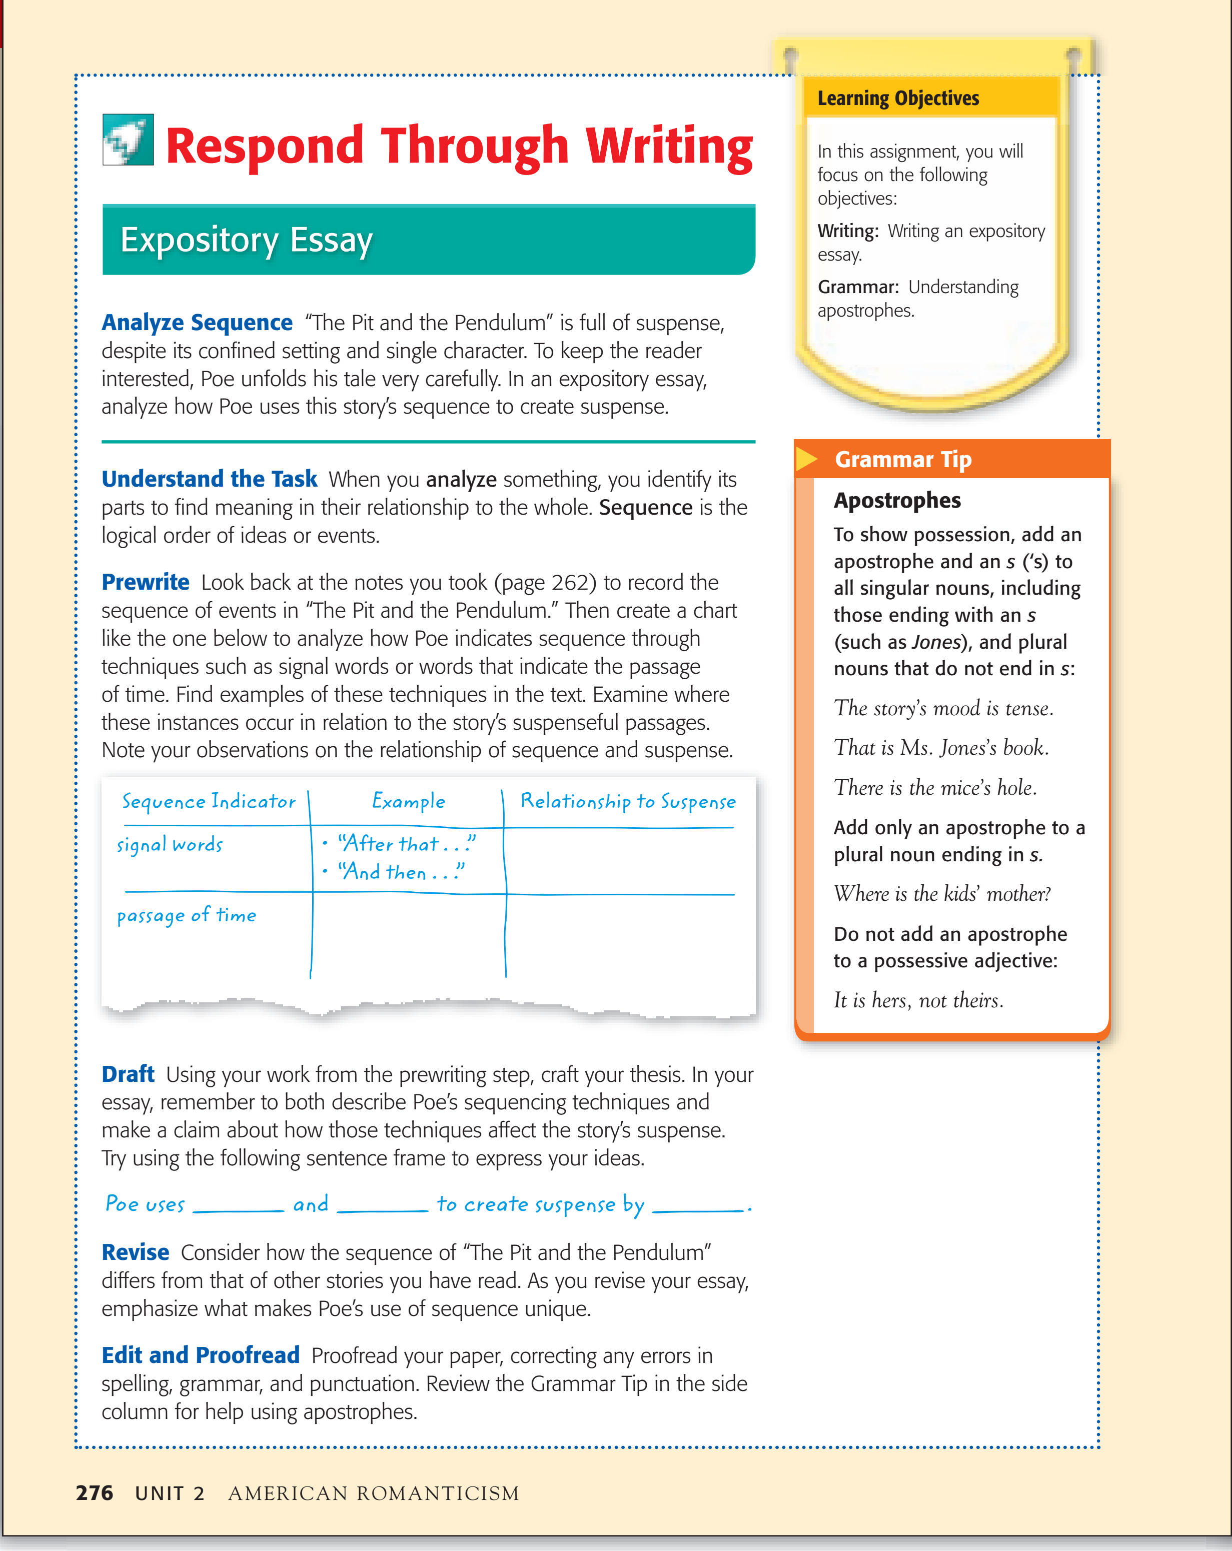
Assess

Respond Through Writing

Students' expository essays should have a clear thesis that examines the story sequence, supported by evidence from the text. Assess students' essays in the following categories using the rubric at the bottom of the page:

- Addresses all parts of the writing task.
- Provides a meaningful thesis, maintains focus and organization.
- Supports the thesis with details and examples.
- Provides a variety of sentence types; uses precise, descriptive language.
- Follows English language conventions.
- Makes a logical, convincing analysis.

For grammar practice, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 136.



Respond Through Writing

Expository Essay

Analyze Sequence "The Pit and the Pendulum" is full of suspense, despite its confined setting and single character. To keep the reader interested, Poe unfolds his tale very carefully. In an expository essay, analyze how Poe uses this story's sequence to create suspense.

Understand the Task When you analyze something, you identify its parts to find meaning in their relationship to the whole. Sequence is the logical order of ideas or events.

Prewrite Look back at the notes you took (page 262) to record the sequence of events in "The Pit and the Pendulum." Then create a chart like the one below to analyze how Poe indicates sequence through techniques such as signal words or words that indicate the passage of time. Find examples of these techniques in the text. Examine where these instances occur in relation to the story's suspenseful passages. Note your observations on the relationship of sequence and suspense.

Sequence Indicator	Example	Relationship to Suspense signal words	• "After that . . ." • "And then . . ."
passage of time

Draft Using your work from the prewriting step, craft your thesis. In your essay, remember to both describe Poe's sequencing techniques and make a claim about how those techniques affect the story's suspense. Try using the following sentence frame to express your ideas.

Poe uses ________ and ________ to create suspense by ________.

Revise Consider how the sequence of "The Pit and the Pendulum" differs from that of other stories you have read. As you revise your essay, emphasize what makes Poe's use of sequence unique.

Edit and Proofread Proofread your paper, correcting any errors in spelling, grammar, and punctuation. Review the Grammar Tip in the side column for help using apostrophes.

Learning Objectives

In this assignment, you will focus on the following objectives:

Writing: Writing an expository essay.

Grammar: Understanding apostrophes.

Grammar Tip

Apostrophes

To show possession, add an apostrophe and an s ('s) to all singular nouns, including those ending with an s (such as Jones), and plural nouns that do not end in s:

The story's mood is tense.

That is Ms. Jones's book.

There is the mice's hole.

Add only an apostrophe to a plural noun ending in s.

Where is the kids' mother?

Do not add an apostrophe to a possessive adjective:

It is hers, not theirs.

Scoring Guide	4	3	2	1
Task addressed	fully	mostly	partially	barely
Themes	meaningful	provided	partial	weak
Support	thoughtful	provided	limited	weak
Language	varied, descriptive	varied, often descriptive	predictable, imprecise	repetitive, limited
Convention errors	few or none	several	many	serious
Analysis is	convincing	mostly convincing	partially convincing	not convincing

Vocabulary Workshop

Context Clues

Literature Connection What does swooned mean in the quotation below?

> "I had swooned; but still will not say that all of consciousness was lost."
>
> —Edgar Allan Poe, from "The Pit and the Pendulum"

Sometimes the context in which a word appears provides clues to its meaning. That the narrator "will not say that all of consciousness was lost" is a clue that swooned means "to fall in a faint."

One or more kinds of context clues may be provided.

- Context sometimes provides an example of a word's meaning:
  Falling into a dark pit would certainly be a calamity.
- Context may provide a restatement or a definition of a word:
  Tom Walker was gullible, and his wife was just as easy to fool.
- Context may provide a synonym for the unfamiliar word:
  The money was sufficient—enough for everyone there.
- Context may also supply an antonym—a word or phrase with an opposite meaning—to contrast with the unfamiliar word.
  Many would fear a talking raven, but not the dauntless narrator.

Practice Use context clues to infer the meaning of each underlined word. Identify the type of context clue used to uncover its meaning.

1. Edgar Allan Poe is credited with writing the first crime stories that use ratiocination, or logical thinking, to solve a mystery.
   a. reasoning b. characters c. mathematics d. footprints
2. In one of Poe's stories, "The Purloined Letter," a detective is asked to get the document back that was taken without consent.
   a. ancient b. personal c. damaged d. stolen
3. Other characters may think that a problem is inexplicable, but Poe's detective, C. Auguste Dupin, finds it easy to understand.
   a. mysterious b. boring c. simple d. dangerous
4. Many modern sleuths, from Nancy Drew to the police investigators on TV crime shows, owe their methods to Dupin.
   a. criminals b. readers c. detectives d. authors

Learning Objectives

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objectives:

Vocabulary: Inferring meaning from context clues.

Vocabulary Terms

The context of a word refers to the words and sentences surrounding a given word. Synonyms are words that have similar meanings.

Tip

When you are asked for the meaning of a word that appears in a reading passage, you will usually find one or more context clues near the word.

Literature Online

Vocabulary For more vocabulary practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Vocabulary Workshop

Context Clues

Focus

Context Clues Say: When you meet an unfamiliar word in a sentence, you should check the sentence before and the sentence after to see if they contain context clues to the word's meaning.

Teach

Have students identify the context clues offered for the underlined words in the Practice sentences:

sentence 1: logical thinking sentence 2: taken without consent sentence 3: easy to understand sentence 4: investigators

Then have them figure out the meanings of the underlined words.

Assess

Practice

1. a; definition
2. d; synonym
3. a; antonym
4. c; example

For additional vocabulary practice, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD–ROM.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate English language learners may be unsure of the meaning of such academic vocabulary as definition, synonym, antonym, and example. If so, work through the exercise as a way of helping them grasp the meanings of these terms.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus Transparency 19

Daily Language Practice Transparency 28

Or display images of different types of masks (such as those worn by athletes and medical personnel, Halloween masks, and African and Native American masks).

Ask: What is the same about all masks? What are some of the purposes masks serve? Have students consider as they read how the minister's black veil is like and unlike other masks.

Before You Read

The Minister's Black Veil

Meet Nathaniel Hawthorne

(1804–1864)

What do you think it would be like to spend a dozen years in self-imposed solitude? Nathaniel Hawthorne did just that, reading widely in New England history and perfecting his skills as a writer. The dark Puritan past haunted Hawthorne's imagination. His ancestors included one judge who had prosecuted Quakers in the 1650s and another who had served in the notorious witchcraft trials at Salem, Massachusetts, in 1692. No churchgoer, Hawthorne was still as keenly aware of problems of sin and guilt as any early Puritan. He explored complex questions of right and wrong in tales he called "allegories of the heart"—stories that teach a moral principle.

Habits of Solitude Born in Salem, young Hawthorne was an avid reader of poetry and stories of adventure. He also spent long periods alone in the remote Maine woods, where "I first got my cursed habits of solitude." After attending college in Maine, Hawthorne returned to Salem, where he secluded himself at home for the "twelve lonely years" of his apprenticeship as a writer. He produced two books, first a novel titled Fanshawe and later a collection of short stories, Twice-Told Tales. The novel was a failure, but reviewers praised Twice-Told Tales, and the book sold well. In the late 1830s, as Hawthorne was beginning to establish his reputation as a writer, he met and fell in love with Sophia Peabody, whom he married in 1842. The couple moved to Concord, where Hawthorne socialized with Ralph Waldo Emerson and Henry David Thoreau. However, Hawthorne was not in sympathy with Emerson's optimistic outlook and goals of reforming society.

Literary Success Unable to support his growing family as a writer, Hawthorne returned to Salem and took a government job that he disliked. When he lost the job, he turned again to writing, completing his masterpiece, The Scarlet Letter, in early 1850. The book was a sensation, and Hawthorne soon followed it with another successful novel, The House of the Seven Gables. During this period, he moved his family from Salem to the countryside, where a close neighbor was the writer Herman Melville. The two writers, who shared a dark view of human life, spent a great deal of time together.

> "What other dungeon is so dark as one's own heart! What jailer so inexorable as one's self!"
>
> —Nathaniel Hawthorne
> from The House of the Seven Gables

In ill health, struggling to continue writing, and depressed, Hawthorne died in 1864 while on a journey. In his writing, he tried to create "a neutral ground where the Actual and the Imaginary might meet." When he succeeds, his fiction has, as the literary critic Alfred Kazin observes, "the mysterious authenticity and the self-sufficient form of a dream."

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Nathaniel Hawthorne, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Selection Skills

The Minister's Black Veil

Literary Elements
- Symbol (SE pp. 279, 281, 283, 285, 286, 288, 289, 291; TE p. 284)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE pp. 283, 287)

Reading Skills
- Make Inferences (SE pp. 279, 281, 286, 288, 291)
- Analyze Mood (TE p. 280)

Vocabulary Skills
- Synonyms (SE p. 291)
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 291)
- Affixes (TE pp. 279, 287)
- Connotations (TE p. 282)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Expository Essay (SE p. 292)
- Dangling Participles (TE p. 284)
- Write a Letter (TE p. 288)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Story

Do you ever wear a "mask" in order to hide or distance yourself from other people? Why or why not? Reflect on these questions in a journal entry. Refer to specific situations if possible.

Build Background

"The Minister's Black Veil" is set in a small town in Puritan New England in the early 1700s. Puritans believed that human beings were sinful by nature and deserved eternal punishment but that God had "elected" some people to be saved. Puritans fought the "natural" tendency to sin and felt responsible for the moral welfare of others. The subtitle of "The Minister's Black Veil" is "A Parable." A parable is a story meant to illustrate a moral lesson.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The Power of Darkness

As you read, ask yourself, How is the Romantics' fascination with the strange and sinister represented in the "The Minister's Black Veil"?

Literary Element Symbol

A symbol is a person, place, or thing that has meaning in itself and also stands for something other than itself. A crossroads, for example, may symbolize choices in life. A symbol in a literary work may be unique to that work, or it may be an archetype—a symbol that has universal meaning and appears in many cultures and historical periods. Hawthorne develops the meaning of the veil in ways that are specific to this story's characters and action. However, darkness has a symbolic meaning that is archetypal—it can be found in literature and art of many times and traditions. As you read, ask yourself, How does Hawthorne develop the symbolic meaning of the black veil?

Reading Strategy Make Inferences

To infer is to make a reasonable guess about the meaning of a literary work from what a writer implies. In a symbolic story such as "The Minister's Black Veil," we must observe details to infer the writer's meaning.

Learning Objectives

For pages 278–291

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing symbols.

Reading: Making inferences about theme.

Vocabulary

venerable (ven´ ər ə bəl) adj. deserving respect because of age, character, or position; p. 281 The people relied on the venerable judge's wisdom.

iniquity (in ik´ wə tē) n. sin; p. 282 He was too steeped in iniquity to tell right from wrong.

sagacious (sə gā´ shəs) adj. having or showing wisdom and keen perception; p. 282 The sagacious man often gave very good advice.

irreproachable (ir´ i prō´ chə bəl) adj. free from blame; faultless; p. 288 The lawyer's handling of the case was irreproachable.

zealous (zel´ əs) adj. filled with enthusiastic devotion; passionate; p. 288 The zealous music fan had attended hundreds of concerts.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

When Parson Hooper arrives in church to preach his Sunday sermon, he is wearing a black veil that hides much of his face. His congregation is deeply troubled by the veil, but no one is willing to ask him why he wears it. As the years pass, the minister's veil remains an object of dread but also makes him a more effective clergyman.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 139–144.

Vocabulary

Understand Affixes Point out the adjective suffixes in this list: -able ("worthy or capable of being") and -ous ("full of"). Explain that adding the suffix -ous to iniquity changes the noun to its adjective form iniquitous, which means "full of sin, wicked." Ask students to identify the roots of venerable, sagacious, irreproachable, and zealous. (venerate, sagacity, reproach, zeal)

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 147.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD–ROM.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Remind students that they learned about the Puritans in Unit One. Although this story was written in 1836, it is set in the 1700s, nearly one hundred years earlier. Ask students to recall details about the time period. Direct students back to the Timeline on pages 6–7 to stimulate their thinking. Ask: What questions might a writer ask to help him or her write a story set in a historic time period? (How did people live, work, and talk? What did people believe in? How were people's lives different from our lives today?)

Teach

Big Idea 1

The Power of Darkness

Say: Why might Hawthorne introduce hints of the supernatural into this story? (He was fascinated with the dark side of Romanticism.) How does this supernaturalism emphasize the sinister nature of the black veil? (It suggests an unobservable evil lurking behind the veil.)

APPROACHING Ask: Why would a person wear a veil or a mask? (to hide something)

Cultural History ☆

Architecture In the 1700s, small towns and villages had meetinghouses. The meetinghouse was often the only public gathering place. The community used this public "house" as a church, a school, and a gathering place for social and governmental functions. The style of these buildings was similar to that of the colonists' houses; it did not necessarily look like what we consider a "church."

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 8.0
DRP: 66
Lexile: 1240

[redacted]

A PARABLE

The Minister's Black Veil

Nathaniel Hawthorne

1

☆ The sexton[1] stood in the porch of Milford meeting-house, pulling busily at the bell-rope. The old people of the village came stooping along the street. Children, with bright faces, tripped merrily beside their parents, or mimicked a graver gait, in the conscious dignity of their Sunday clothes. Spruce[2] bachelors looked sidelong at the pretty maidens, and fancied that the Sabbath sunshine made them prettier than on week days. When the throng had mostly streamed into the porch, the sexton began to toll the bell, keeping his eye on the Reverend Mr. Hooper's door. The first glimpse of the clergyman's figure was the signal for the bell to cease its summons.

"But what has good Parson Hooper got upon his face?" cried the sexton in astonishment.

All within hearing immediately turned about, and beheld the semblance of Mr. Hooper, pacing slowly his meditative way towards the meeting house. With one accord[3] they started,[4] expressing more wonder than if some strange minister were coming to dust the cushions of Mr. Hooper's pulpit.[5]

"Are you sure it is our parson?" inquired Goodman[6] Gray of the sexton.

"Of a certainty it is good Mr. Hooper," replied the sexton. "He was to have exchanged pulpits with Parson Shute, of Westbury; but Parson Shute sent to excuse himself yesterday, being to preach a funeral sermon."

The cause of so much amazement may appear sufficiently slight. Mr. Hooper, a gentlemanly person, of about thirty, though still a bachelor, was dressed with due clerical neatness, as if a careful wife had starched his band,

---

1. A sexton is a church employee who cares for church property and who may also ring the bells and dig graves.
2. Spruce means "neat and trim in appearance" or "dapper."
3. With one accord means "with complete agreement" or "with unity."
4. Here, started means "made a sudden involuntary movement, as from fear or surprise."
5. A pulpit is a raised structure from which a minister delivers a sermon or conducts a worship service.
6. Goodman is a title of polite address similar to "Mister."

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Analyze Mood Point out the sexton's reaction to Mr. Hooper's face (page 281): "I can't really feel as if good Mr. Hooper's face was behind that piece of crepe." Also note the words "set all the congregation astir." Explain that this story deals with judgment. Ask:

- Have you ever judged someone incorrectly on the basis of appearance?
- What assumptions have you made based on someone's clothing or hairstyle?

As they read, have them consider how the mood of each scene is created by the judgments of the congregation.

and brushed the weekly dust from his Sunday's garb. There was but one thing remarkable in his appearance. Swathed about his forehead, and hanging down over his face, so low as to be shaken by his breath, Mr. Hooper had on a black veil. On a nearer view it seemed to consist of two folds of crepe,[7] which entirely concealed his features, except the mouth and chin, but probably did not intercept his sight, further than to give a darkened aspect to all living and 2 inanimate things. With this gloomy shade before him, good Mr. Hooper walked onward, at a slow and quiet pace, stooping somewhat, and looking on the ground, as is customary with abstracted[8] men, yet nodding kindly to those of his parishioners who still waited on the meeting-house steps. But so wonder-struck were they that his greeting hardly met with a return.

"I can't really feel as if good Mr. Hooper's face was behind that piece of crepe," said the sexton.

"I don't like it," muttered an old woman, as she hobbled into the meeting-house. "He has changed himself into something awful, only by hiding his face."

> "He has changed himself into something awful, only by hiding his face."

"Our parson has gone mad!" cried Goodman Gray, following him across the threshold.

A rumor of some unaccountable phenomenon had preceded Mr. Hooper into the meeting-house, and set all the congregation astir. Few could refrain from twisting their heads towards the door; many stood upright, and turned directly about; while several little boys clambered upon the seats, and came down again with a terrible racket. There was a general bustle, a rustling of the women's gowns and shuffling of the men's feet, greatly at variance with that hushed repose which should attend the entrance of the minister. But Mr. Hooper appeared not to notice the perturbation[9] of his people. He entered with an almost noiseless step, bent his head mildly to the pews on each side, and bowed as he passed his oldest parishioner, a white-haired great-grandsire, who occupied an arm-chair in the center of the aisle. It was strange to observe how slowly this venerable man became conscious of something singular in the appearance of his pastor. He seemed not fully to partake of the prevailing wonder, till Mr. Hooper had ascended the stairs, and showed himself in the pulpit, face to face with his congregation, except for the black veil. That mysterious emblem was never once withdrawn. It shook with his measured breath, as he gave out the psalm; it threw its obscurity between him and the holy page, as he read the Scriptures; and while he prayed, the veil lay heavily on his uplifted countenance.[10] Did he seek to hide it from the dread Being whom he was addressing?

Such was the effect of this simple piece of crepe, that more than one woman of delicate nerves was forced to leave the meeting-house. Yet perhaps the pale-faced congregation was almost as fearful a sight to the minister, as his black veil to them.

Mr. Hooper had the reputation of a good preacher, but not an energetic one: he strove to

---

[7] Crepe is a light, soft fabric with a crinkled surface.

[8] Here, abstracted means "lost in thought" or "preoccupied."

[9] Perturbation (pur′ tər bā′ shən) means "agitation" or "uneasiness."

[10] Countenance means "face."

3 Symbol How does Mr. Hooper's veil affect the way he views the world around him?

4 Make Inferences Why do you think Mr. Hooper may find his congregation a fearful sight?

Vocabulary

venerable (ven´ ər ə bəl) adj. deserving respect because of age, character, or position

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Make Inferences Have students examine the description of Mr. Hooper. Ask: What is wearing the black veil out of character for him? (The minister is neat, thoughtful, and quiet. He is not the type of person who would call attention to himself.)

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 146.

Literary Element 3

Symbol Answer: He views the world as dark and shadowy.

Ask: What does this suggest about the veil as a symbol? (It symbolizes guilty human nature and the eerie aspect of the natural world at night.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS Ensure that students understand the meaning of veil and can visualize a veil in front of the man's face.

Reading Strategy 4

Make Inferences

Answer: He is shy and fears their reactions; their uneasy response to his veil seems a sign of guilt to him.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Direct students' attention to Sabbath in the first paragraph of the story and Ask: What term in the previous sentence is a clue to the meaning of "Sabbath"? (The clue is "Sunday clothes"; Sabbath refers to Sunday.) Ask students to find a clue for "clergyman." (Reverend)

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Analyze Contrasts Explain that the complex characters and settings include contrasts: light/dark, real/unreal, past/present, beauty/horror, ordinary/extraordinary, and good/evil. Ask: Can people be both good and bad, beautiful and plain? As students read, ask them to identify the contrasts in the story and explain how Hawthorne uses them to develop a theme.

Teach

Literary History

Hawthorne and Original Sin

In a review, Herman Melville commented on the source of the darkness in Hawthorne's nature: "This great power of blackness in him derives its force from its appeals to that Calvinistic sense of Innate Depravity and Original Sin, from whose visitations, in some shape or other, no deeply thinking mind is always and wholly free. For, in certain moods, no man can weigh this world, without throwing in something, somehow like Original Sin, to strike the uneven balance."

win his people heavenward by mild, persuasive influences, rather than to drive them thither by the thunders of the Word. The sermon which he now delivered was marked by the same characteristics of style and manner as the general series of his pulpit oratory. But there was something, either in the sentiment of the discourse itself, or in the imagination of the auditors,[11] which made it greatly the most powerful effort that they had ever heard from their pastor's lips. It was tinged, rather more darkly than usual, with the gentle gloom of Mr. Hooper's temperament. The subject had reference to secret sin, and those sad mysteries which we hide from our nearest and dearest, and would fain[12] conceal from our own consciousness, even forgetting that the Omniscient[13] can detect them. A subtle power was breathed into his words. Each member of the congregation, the most innocent girl, and the man of hardened breast, felt as if the preacher had crept upon them, behind his awful veil, and discovered their hoarded iniquity of deed or thought. Many spread their clasped hands on their bosoms. There was nothing terrible in what Mr. Hooper said, at least, no violence; and yet, with every tremor of his melancholy voice, the hearers quaked. An unsought pathos[14] came hand in hand with awe. So sensible were the audience of some unwonted[15] attribute in their minister, that they longed for a breath of wind to blow aside the veil, almost believing that a stranger's visage[16] would be discovered, though the form, gesture, and voice were those of Mr. Hooper.

At the close of the services, the people hurried out with indecorous confusion, eager to communicate their pent-up amazement, and conscious of lighter spirits the moment they lost sight of the black veil. Some gathered in little circles, huddled closely together, with their mouths all whispering in the center; some went homeward alone, wrapt in silent meditation; some talked loudly, and profaned the Sabbath day with ostentatious laughter. A few shook their sagacious heads, intimating that they could penetrate the mystery; while one or two affirmed that there was no mystery at all, but only that Mr. Hooper's eyes were so weakened by the midnight lamp, as to require a shade. After a brief interval, forth came good Mr. Hooper also, in the rear of his flock. Turning his veiled face from one group to another, he paid due reverence to the hoary heads,[17] saluted the middle aged with kind dignity as their friend and spiritual guide, greeted the young with mingled authority and love, and laid his hands on the little children's heads to bless them. Such was always his custom on the Sabbath day. Strange and bewildered looks repaid him for his courtesy. None, as on former occasions, aspired to the honor of walking by their pastor's side. Old Squire Saunders, doubtless by an accidental lapse of memory, neglected to invite Mr. Hooper to his table, where the good clergyman had been wont[18] to bless the food, almost every Sunday since his settlement. He returned, therefore, to the parsonage, and, at the moment of closing the door, was observed to look back upon the people, all of whom had their eyes fixed upon the minister. A sad smile gleamed faintly from beneath the black veil, and flickered about his mouth, glimmering as he disappeared.

"How strange," said a lady, "that a simple black veil, such as any woman might wear on her bonnet, should become such a terrible thing on Mr. Hooper's face!"

---

[11] Auditors are "those who hear" or "listeners."
[12] Fain means "gladly" or "willingly."
[13] The Omniscient is "the all-knowing," or God.
[14] Pathos is a feeling of pity, compassion, or sorrow.
[15] Unwonted means "not customary" or "unusual."
[16] Visage means "face."
[17] Hoary heads are white-haired heads.
[18] Wont means "accustomed."

Vocabulary

iniquity (in ik′ wə tē) n. sin

Vocabulary

sagacious (sə gā′ shəs) adj. having or showing wisdom and keen perception

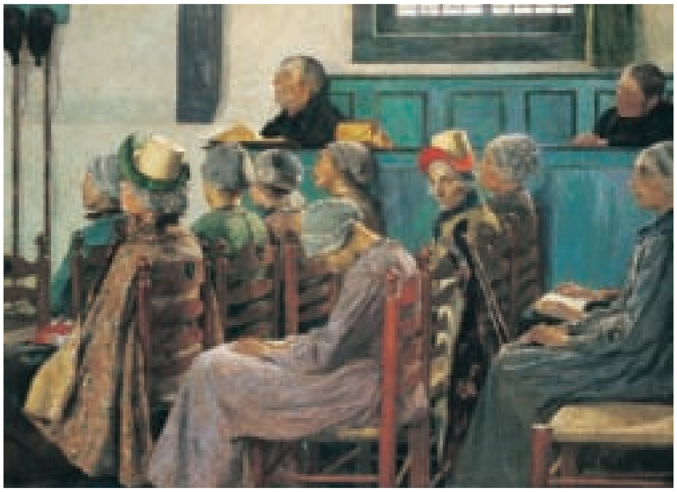
Vocabulary Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Connotations Beyond their literal meaning, words carry feelings called connotations. Sagacious and shrewd both mean "wise." However, sagacious carries the sense of "farsighted" or "prudent," whereas shrewd often has a connotation of "cunning" or "tricky."

In the following sentences, have students select the word whose connotations best fit the context.

1. The (sagacious/shrewd) salesperson can persuade a customer to buy. (shrewd)
2. The government created by the (sagacious/shrewd) statesmen endured for centuries. (sagacious)

Give students practice using words with different connotations. Ask them to write new sentences using the following word pairs: shroud/cloth; portend/warning.



The Sermon, 1886. Julius Gari Melchers. Oil on canvas, 62$\frac{5}{8}$ x 86$\frac{1}{2}$ in. Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC.

View the Art Gari Melchers's credo was "Waar en Klaar," Dutch for "True and Clear." What connections can you make between Melchers' painting and credo and Hawthorne's story? ★

"Something must surely be amiss with Mr. Hooper's intellects," observed her husband, the physician of the village. "But the strangest part of the affair is the effect of this vagary,[19] even on a sober-minded man like myself. The black veil, though it covers only our pastor's face, throws its influence over his whole person, and makes him ghostlike from head to foot. Do you not feel it so?"

"Truly do I," replied the lady; "and I would not be alone with him for the world. I wonder he is not afraid to be alone with himself!"

"Men sometimes are so," said her husband.

The afternoon service was attended with similar circumstances. At its conclusion, the bell tolled for the funeral of a young lady. The relatives and friends were assembled in the house, and the more distant acquaintances stood about the door, speaking of the good qualities of the deceased, when their talk was interrupted by the appearance of Mr. Hooper, still covered with his black veil. It was now an appropriate emblem. The clergyman stepped into the room where the corpse was laid, and bent over the coffin, to take a last farewell of his deceased parishioner. As he stooped, the veil hung straight down from his forehead, so that, if her eyelids had not been closed forever, the dead maiden might have seen his face. Could Mr. Hooper be fearful of her glance, that he so hastily caught back the black veil? A person who watched the interview between the dead and living, scrupled[20] not to affirm, that, at the instant when the clergyman's features were disclosed, the corpse had slightly shuddered, rustling the shroud[21] and muslin cap, though the countenance retained the composure of death. A superstitious old woman was the only witness of this prodigy.[22] From the coffin Mr. Hooper passed into the chamber of the mourners, and thence to the head of the staircase, to make the funeral prayer. It was a tender and heart-dissolving prayer, full of sorrow, yet so imbued with celestial hopes, that the music of a heavenly harp, swept by the fingers of the dead, seemed faintly to be heard among the saddest accents of the minister. The people trembled, though they but darkly understood him when he prayed that they, and himself, and all of mortal race, might be ready, as he trusted this young maiden had been, for the dreadful hour that should snatch the veil from their faces. The bearers went heavily forth, and the mourners followed, saddening all the street, with the dead before them, and Mr. Hooper in his black veil behind.

---

[19] A vagary is an odd or erratic action or idea.

[20] Scrupled means "hesitated."

[21] A shroud is a cloth used to wrap a dead body for burial.

[22] Here, prodigy means "an extraordinary event that causes amazement."

1 Symbol What meaning does this comment give to the symbolism of the veil?

Teach

Literary Element 1

Symbol Answer: It strengthens the association of the veil with the spiritual identity of its wearer.

Ask: How do the comments in the next two paragraphs strengthen this link? (They emphasize the weird effect of the veil, especially by the alarming possibility that Hooper, when alone, is forced to confront a ghostly double.)

ADVANCED Ask: What classic elements of Gothic fiction are evident in Hawthorne's symbol of the veil? (the ghostly double, or doppelgänger; the supernatural)

View the Art ★

Answer: Students may say that the painting and the story share religion as their subject; both portray churchgoers as somber people. Melchers' credo suggests that he believes in honesty, accuracy, and candor. This is in opposition to Hooper's dying words, that few people can or will reveal their innermost selves to others.

Born in Detroit, Michigan, Julius Gari Melchers (1860–1932) is known primarily for his portraits and murals, or wall paintings. Melcher's portraits include one of President Theodore Roosevelt, and his murals decorate the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Help students identify the irony in this passage: "Old Squire Saunders, doubtless by an accidental lapse of memory, neglected to invite Mr. Hooper to his table . . . ." Ask: Do you think Squire Saunders really forgot to invite Mr. Hooper? Or do you think he "forgot on purpose"? Explain that Hawthorne uses the word "doubtless," but he is really suggesting its opposite.

Emerging Students may more readily visualize this scene if they are familiar with the formal language. Say the following phrases from the story aloud with a formal and stiff tone:

- "How strange"
- "Something must surely be amiss"
- "Truly do I"

Tell students that this formal language is actually a "polite way" of gossiping about Mr. Hooper. Tell them to look beyond the formal language to decipher meaning as they read the dialogue. Encourage them to ask continually: What is this character really saying?

Teach

Big Idea 1

The Power of Darkness

Answer: Ghosts and other supernatural apparitions were a common feature of Gothic fiction.

Ask: How does the dialogue of the mourners reinforce the ambiguity of the story's meaning? (The dialogue reinforces the earlier supernatural hint of the shuddering corpse and anticipates the bride's sensations and the minister's odd reaction in the next paragraph. However, what Hawthorne means by these hints remains unclear.)

APPROACHING Say: The people at the wedding make a connection between the previous day's funeral and this event. What is the mood at this wedding? Why? (The mood at this wedding is dark and gloomy because of Mr. Hooper's presence and because of the thought that the bride is the spirit of the woman whose funeral was held earlier.)

"Why do you look back?" said one in the procession to his partner.

"I had a fancy," replied she, "that the minister and the maiden's spirit were walking hand in hand."

"And so had I, at the same moment," said the other.

That night, the handsomest couple in Milford village were to be joined in wedlock. Though reckoned a melancholy man, Mr. Hooper had a placid cheerfulness for such occasions, which often excited a sympathetic smile where livelier merriment would have been thrown away. There was no quality of his disposition which made him more beloved than this. The company at the wedding awaited his arrival with impatience, trusting that the strange awe, which had gathered over him throughout the day, would now be dispelled. But such was not the result. When Mr. Hooper came, the first thing that their eyes rested on was the same horrible black veil, which had added deeper gloom to the funeral, and could portend[23] nothing but evil to the wedding. Such was its immediate effect on the guests that a cloud seemed to have rolled duskily from beneath the black crepe, and dimmed the light of the candles. The bridal pair stood up before the minister. But the bride's cold fingers quivered in the tremulous hand[24] of the bridegroom, and her deathlike paleness caused a whisper that the maiden who had been buried a few hours before was come from her grave to be married. If ever another wedding were so dismal, it was that famous one where they tolled the wedding knell.[25] After performing the ceremony, Mr. Hooper raised a glass of wine to his lips, wishing happiness to the new-married couple in a strain of mild pleasantry that ought to have brightened the features of the guests, like a cheerful gleam from the hearth. At that instant, catching a glimpse of his figure in the looking-glass, the black veil involved his own spirit in the horror with which it overwhelmed all others. His frame shuddered, his lips grew white, he spilt the untasted wine upon the carpet, and rushed forth into the darkness. For the Earth, too, had on her Black Veil.

For the Earth, too, had on her Black Veil.

The next day, the whole village of Milford talked of little else than Parson Hooper's black veil. That, and the mystery concealed behind it, supplied a topic for discussion between acquaintances meeting in the street, and good women gossiping at their open windows. It was the first item of news that the tavern-keeper told to his guests. The children babbled of it on their way to school. One imitative little imp covered his face with an old black handkerchief, thereby so affrighting his playmates that the panic seized himself, and he well-nigh lost his wits by his own waggery.[26]

It was remarkable that of all the busybodies and impertinent people in the parish, not one ventured to put the plain question to Mr. Hooper, wherefore he did this thing. Hitherto, whenever there appeared the slightest call for such interference, he had never lacked advisers, nor shown himself averse to be guided by their judgment. If he erred at all, it was by so

---

[23] Portend means "to be a warning or an indication of."

[24] A tremulous hand is one that is trembling or shaking.

[25] Hawthorne is referring to his own short story "The Wedding Knell." A knell is the solemn sound of a bell ringing, as at a funeral.

[26] Waggery is mischievous or joking behavior.

1 Power of Darkness How does Hawthorne's description of the imaginings of those at the funeral service link his story to Gothic literature?

Reading Practice

SMALL GROUP Symbol Discuss with students the significance of the minister's wearing something that allows him to see out but does not allow others to see in. Ask: How does the veil give the minister power? (It puts him in control of what is seen by others, while he can see what he wants to see.) What are some powerful things that an unseen or hiding person can do? (An unseen person can surprise another person, invade another person's privacy, or make another person feel suspicious.) Have students brainstorm in small groups and make a list of how they might feel if they knew someone was hiding in a room that they were in. Then as a class discuss how these feelings relate to the feelings people have toward the minister.

painful a degree of self-distrust, that even the mildest censure would lead him to consider an indifferent action as a crime. Yet, though so well acquainted with this amiable weakness, no individual among his parishioners chose to make the black veil a subject of friendly remonstrance. There was a feeling of dread, neither plainly confessed nor carefully concealed, which caused each to shift the responsibility upon another, till at length it was found expedient to send a deputation[27] of the church, in order to deal with Mr. Hooper about the mystery, before it should grow into a scandal. Never did an embassy so ill discharge its duties. The minister received them with friendly courtesy, but became silent, after they were seated, leaving to his visitors the whole burden of introducing their important business. The topic, it might be supposed, was obvious enough. There was the black veil swathed round Mr. Hooper's forehead, and concealing every feature above his placid mouth, on which, at times, they could perceive the glimmering of a melancholy smile. But that piece of crepe, to their imagination, seemed to hang down before his heart, the symbol of a fearful secret between him and them. Were the veil but cast aside, they might speak freely of it, but not till then. Thus they sat a considerable time, speechless, confused, and shrinking uneasily from Mr. Hooper's eye, which they felt to be fixed upon them with an invisible glance. Finally, the deputies returned abashed[28] to their constituents, pronouncing the matter too weighty to be handled, except by a council of the churches, if, indeed, it might not require a general synod.[29] ☆

But there was one person in the village unappalled by the awe with which the black veil had impressed all beside herself. When the deputies returned without an explanation, or even venturing to demand one, she, with the calm energy of her character, determined to chase away the strange cloud that appeared to be settling round Mr. Hooper, every moment more darkly than before. As his plighted wife,[30] it should be her privilege to know what the black veil concealed. At the minister's first visit, therefore, she entered upon the subject with a direct simplicity, which made the task easier both for him and her. After he had seated himself, she fixed her eyes steadfastly upon the veil, but could discern nothing of the dreadful gloom that had so overawed the multitude: it was but a double fold of crepe, hanging down from his forehead to his mouth, and slightly stirring with his breath.

"No," said she aloud, and smiling, "there is nothing terrible in this piece of crepe, except that it hides a face which I am always glad to look upon. Come, good sir, let the sun shine from behind the cloud. First lay aside your black veil: then tell me why you put it on."

Mr. Hooper's smile glimmered faintly.

"There is an hour to come," said he, "when all of us shall cast aside our veils. Take it not amiss, beloved friend, if I wear this piece of crepe till then."

"Your words are a mystery, too," returned the young lady. "Take away the veil from them, at least."

"Elizabeth, I will," said he, "so far as my vow may suffer me. Know, then, this veil is a type and a symbol, and I am bound to wear it ever, both in light and darkness, in solitude and before the gaze of multitudes, and as with strangers, so with my familiar friends. No mortal eye will see it withdrawn. This dismal shade must separate me from the world: even you, Elizabeth, can never come behind it!"

"What grievous affliction hath befallen you," she earnestly inquired, "that you should thus darken your eyes forever?"

"If it be a sign of mourning," replied Mr. Hooper, "I, perhaps, like most other mortals, have sorrows dark enough to be typified by a black veil."

---

[27] A deputation is a delegation.

[28] Abashed means "ashamed" or "embarrassed."

[29] A synod is a council of church officials or a governing body of all churches.

[30] Plighted wife means "intended wife," or "fiancée."

Symbol How does Mr. Hooper's reply to Elizabeth indicate another view of the veil's meaning? 2

Teach

Literary Element 2

Symbol Answer: The minister's reply, which associates the veil with the separation of body and soul at death, seems to point to the veil as a symbol of mortal life.

APPROACHING Say: The veil symbolizes two ideas. Hooper thinks it represents one, Elizabeth and the congregation think it means something else. Name two things that the veil represents. (The veil represents shame or evil; it represents moral life.)

Cultural History ☆

Early Puritanism Hawthorne was descended from one of the judges who presided at the Salem witchcraft trials in 1692. Salem was a small town in the Massachusetts Bay Colony that had been founded as a religious community by Puritans in the early 1600s. By the end of the century, many Puritans felt they were losing hold of their religious ideals, helping to create a climate of guilt and blame that encouraged accusations of witchcraft in Salem. Hundreds of people were accused and 20 were executed before the hysteria ceased.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging To help them follow the events, have students make a two-column list with the heads "What people say" and "What people do." Suggest that they start their lists with these items: adults gossip about the veil; children make fun of Mr. Hooper and the veil.

Established Hawthorne places the paragraphs about the funeral and the wedding one after the other. Have students compare and contrast the events by completing a chart like the one shown.

	Funeral	Wedding
Behavior of Hooper
Hooper's effect on event
Reactions of those present

Teach

Literary Element 1

Symbol Answer: The minister's "sad smile" seems to be a profound reflection of his personality. Its association with the veil emphasizes the symbolism of the veil as an element that obscures the deepest self.

Reading Strategy 2

Make Inferences

Answer: She is repelled by his decision to wear the veil. She has made an important request of him, which he has refused. She has begun to share the fear (an emotion she despises) that the veil inspires in others.

Literary History ☆

Hawthorne's Source Hawthorne included a footnote suggesting one source for "The Minister's Black Veil": "Another clergyman in New England, Mr. Joseph Moody, of York, Maine, who died about eighty years since, made himself remarkable by the same eccentricity that is here related of the Reverend Mr. Hooper. In his case, however, the symbol had a different import. In early life he had accidentally killed a beloved friend, and from that day till the hour of his own death, he hid his face from men."

"But what if the world will not believe that it is the type of an innocent sorrow?" urged Elizabeth. "Beloved and respected as you are, there may be whispers that you hide your face under the consciousness of secret sin. For the sake of your holy office, do away this scandal!"

The color rose into her cheeks as she intimated the nature of the rumors that were already abroad in the village. But Mr. Hooper's mildness did not forsake him. He even smiled again—that same sad smile, which always appeared like a faint glimmering of light, proceeding from the obscurity beneath the veil.

"If I hide my face for sorrow, there is cause enough," he merely replied; "and if I cover it for secret sin, what mortal might not do the same?"

And with this gentle, but unconquerable obstinacy did he resist all her entreaties.[31] At length Elizabeth sat silent. For a few moments she appeared lost in thought, considering, probably, what new methods might be tried to withdraw her lover from so dark a fantasy, which, if it had no other meaning, was perhaps a symptom of mental disease. Though of a firmer character than his own, the tears rolled down her cheeks. But, in an instant, as it were, a new feeling took the place of sorrow: her eyes were fixed insensibly on the black veil, when, like a sudden twilight in the air, its terrors fell around her. She arose, and stood trembling before him.

"And do you feel it then, at last?" said he mournfully.

She made no reply, but covered her eyes with her hand, and turned to leave the room. He rushed forward and caught her arm.

"Have patience with me, Elizabeth!" cried he, passionately. "Do not desert me, though this veil must be between us here on earth. Be mine, and hereafter there shall be no veil over my face, no darkness between our souls! It is but a mortal veil—it is not for eternity! O! you know not how lonely I am, and how frightened, to be alone behind my black veil. Do not leave me in this miserable obscurity forever!"

"Lift the veil but once, and look me in the face," said she.

"Never! It cannot be!" replied Mr. Hooper.

"Then farewell!" said Elizabeth.

She withdrew her arm from his grasp, and slowly departed, pausing at the door, to give one long shuddering gaze, that seemed almost to penetrate the mystery of the black veil. But, even amid his grief, Mr. Hooper smiled to think that only a material emblem had separated him from happiness, though the horrors, which it shadowed forth, must be drawn darkly between the fondest of lovers.

☆ From that time no attempts were made to remove Mr. Hooper's black veil, or, by a direct appeal, to discover the secret which it was supposed to hide. By persons who claimed a superiority to popular prejudice, it was reckoned merely an eccentric whim, such as often mingles with the sober actions of men otherwise rational, and tinges them all with its own semblance of insanity. But with the multitude, good Mr. Hooper was irreparably a bugbear.[32] He could not walk the street with any peace of mind, so conscious was he that the gentle and timid would turn aside to avoid him, and that others would make it a point of hardihood[33] to throw themselves in his way. The impertinence of the latter class compelled him to give up his customary walk at sunset to the burial ground; for when he leaned pensively over the gate, there would always be faces behind the gravestones, peeping at his black veil. A fable went the rounds that the stare of the dead people drove him thence. It grieved him, to the very depth of his kind heart, to observe how the children fled from his approach, breaking up their merriest sports, while his melancholy figure was yet afar off. Their instinctive dread caused him to feel more strongly

---

[31] Entreaties are pleas.

[32] A bugbear is a real or imaginary object of fear.

[33] Hardihood is offensive boldness or daring.

1 Symbol Hawthorne closely links the minister's black veil with his "sad smile." How does this affect the meaning of the symbol?

Make Inferences Why do you think Elizabeth decides to break off her engagement with Mr. Hooper? 2

Grammar Practice

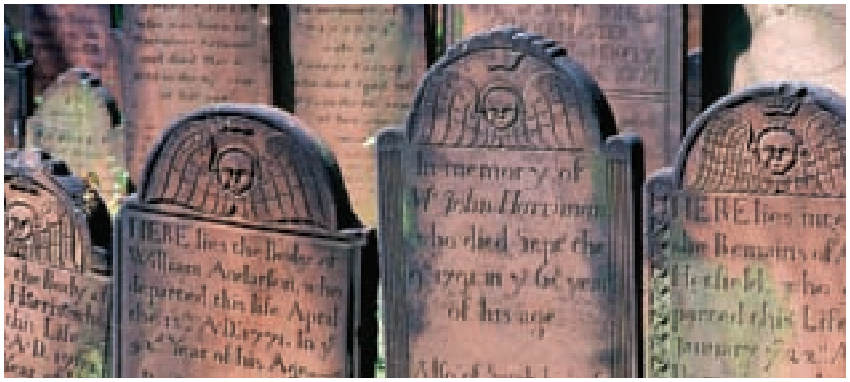
SPIRAL REVIEW Dangling Participles A participle is a verb form that can function as an adjective, and a participial phrase contains a participle plus any complements and modifiers of it. A participial phrase at the beginning of a sentence must modify the sentence's subject.

Write on the board:

Rising over the horizon, the Reverend Mr. Hooper saw the morning sun.

Veiling the minister's countenance, I saw a piece of somber black cloth.

Have students rewrite each sentence to eliminate the dangling phrase.



View the Art One example of American colonial craft is the tombstone, which typically displays the sense of the nearness of death that was a part of this culture. How does this image affect your view of Puritan daily life?

than aught else, that a preternatural[34] horror was interwoven with the threads of the black crepe.

In truth, his own antipathy[35] to the veil was known to be so great, that he never willingly passed before a mirror, nor stooped to drink at a still fountain, lest, in its peaceful bosom, he should be affrighted by himself. This was what gave plausibility to the whispers, that Mr. Hooper's conscience tortured him for some great crime too horrible to be entirely concealed, or otherwise than so obscurely intimated. Thus, from beneath the black veil, there rolled a cloud into the sunshine, an ambiguity of sin or sorrow, which enveloped the poor minister, so that love or sympathy could never reach him. It was said that ghost and fiend consorted with him there. With self-shudderings and outward terrors, he walked continually in its shadow, groping darkly within his own soul, or gazing through a medium that saddened the whole world. Even the lawless wind, it was believed, respected his dreadful secret, and never blew aside the veil. But still good Mr. Hooper sadly smiled at the pale visages of the worldly throng as he passed by.

Among all its bad influences, the black veil had the one desirable effect, of making its wearer a very efficient clergyman. By the aid of his mysterious emblem—for there was no other apparent cause—he became a man of awful power over souls that were in agony for sin. His converts always regarded him with a dread peculiar to themselves, affirming, though but figuratively, that, before he brought them to celestial light, they had been with him behind the black veil. Its gloom, indeed, enabled him to sympathize with all dark affections. Dying sinners cried aloud for Mr. Hooper, and would not yield their breath till he appeared; though ever, as he stooped to whisper consolation, they shuddered at the veiled face so near their own. Such were the terrors of the black veil, even when Death had bared his visage! Strangers came long distances to attend service at his church, with the mere idle purpose of gazing at his figure, because it was forbidden them to behold his face. But many were made to quake ere they departed! Once, during Governor Belcher's[36] administration, Mr. Hooper was appointed to preach the election sermon.[37] Covered with his black veil, he stood before the chief magistrate, the council, and the representatives,

---

[34] Preternatural means "supernatural."

[35] Antipathy is a feeling of intense dislike.

[36] Jonathan Belcher was governor of Massachusetts and New Hampshire from 1730 to 1741.

[37] Mr. Hooper was given the honor of preaching at the governor's inaugural ceremony.

Make Inferences What does Hawthorne mean by "dark affections"? Why has Mr. Hooper come to understand or share these emotions? 3

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Make Inferences Answer: The "dark affections" are such negative feelings as guilt, remorse, and fear. Wearing the black veil has enabled Mr. Hooper to understand these feelings.

Ask: Why do Mr. Hooper's converts regard him with dread? (They feel this way because he understands their sinful state, when they were "with him behind the black veil.")

View the Art

Answer: Students might say that this does not really affect their view of Puritan daily life, since Puritans are known for their focus on being "saved" after death. Additionally, death pervades Hawthorne's story, so students may already have noticed the closeness of death in the Puritan world.

A vivid sense of the shortness of life, the nearness of death, and the decay of the body pervaded Puritan culture. This cultural outlook was graphically expressed in the epitaphs on colonial tombstones. Some are frank warnings to the living: "Come mortal man & cast an eye, read thy doom, prepare to die." Others describe the circumstances of a person's death: "Here lies one whose life's threads cut asunder. She was struck dead by a clap of thunder."

Approaching Level

UNIVERSAL ACCESS

SMALL GROUP

Emerging The black veil has many "bad influences . . . and one desirable effect." Help students identify the effects of the veil on Mr. Hooper and the community at large. To get them started, display a two-column chart with the heads "Bad Influences/Effects" and "Good Influence/Effect." Have students work in small groups to identify the bad effects and the one desirable effect.

Established Explain to students that Puritans near death wanted to "cleanse" themselves of sin and guilt. Hawthorne is describing the "desirable" effect of Mr. Hooper's veil, which seems to draw people to him to receive salvation. Ask students to list the different types of people who seek Mr. Hooper (converts, dying sinners, government officials) and the effect Mr. Hooper has on meeting with them.

Teach

Vocabulary 1

Suffixes Knowing the meaning of suffixes can help students understand unfamiliar words. The suffix -ous means "full of"; therefore, zealous means "full of zeal" or "passionate." Ask: What does calamitous mean? ("dreadful" or "unfortunate") .

ENGLISH LEARNERS Ensure that students know the meaning of calamity (a great misfortune that causes damage or suffering). Lead them to see that calamitous literally means "full of calamity" or "unfortunate."

Literary Element 2

Symbol Answer: Referring to the movement of the veil caused by the minister's breathing both makes the piece of cloth seem like a living thing and links it to the minister's own life force.

and wrought[38] so deep an impression, that the legislative measures of that year were characterized by all the gloom and piety of our earliest ancestral sway.[39]

In this manner Mr. Hooper spent a long life, irreproachable in outward act, yet shrouded in dismal suspicions; kind and loving, though unloved, and dimly feared; a man apart from men, shunned in their health and joy, but ever summoned to their aid in mortal anguish. As years wore on, shedding their snows above his sable veil,[40] he acquired a name throughout the New England churches, and they called him Father Hooper. Nearly all his parishioners, who were of mature age when he was settled, had been borne away by many a funeral: he had one congregation in the church, and a more crowded one in the churchyard; and having wrought[41] so late into the evening, and done his work so well, it was now good Father Hooper's turn to rest.

Several persons were visible by the shaded candlelight, in the death chamber of the old clergyman. Natural connections[42] he had none. But there was the decorously grave, though unmoved physician, seeking only to mitigate[43] the last pangs of the patient whom he could not save. There were the deacons, and other eminently pious members of his church. There, also, was the Reverend Mr. Clark, of Westbury, a 1 young and zealous divine, who had ridden in haste to pray by the bedside of the expiring minister. There was the nurse, no hired handmaiden of death, but one whose calm affection had endured thus long in secrecy, in solitude, amid the chill of age, and would not perish, even at the dying hour. Who, but Elizabeth! And there lay the hoary head of good Father Hooper upon the death pillow, with the black veil still swathed about his brow, and reaching down over his face, so that each more difficult gasp of his faint breath caused it to stir. All through life that piece of crepe had hung between him and the world: it had separated him from cheerful brotherhood and woman's love, and kept him in that saddest of all prisons, his own heart; and still it lay upon his face, as if to deepen the gloom of his darksome chamber, and shade him from the sunshine of eternity.

For some time previous, his mind had been confused, wavering doubtfully between the past and the present, and hovering forward, as it were, at intervals, into the indistinctness of the world to come. There had been feverish turns, which tossed him from side to side, and wore away what little strength he had. But in his most convulsive struggles, and in the wildest vagaries of his intellect, when no other thought retained its sober influence, he still showed an awful solicitude[44] lest the black veil should slip aside. Even if his bewildered soul could have forgotten, there was a faithful woman at his pillow, who, with averted eyes, would have covered that aged face, which she had last beheld in the comeliness of manhood. At length the death-stricken old man lay quietly in the torpor[45] of mental and bodily exhaustion, with an imperceptible pulse, and breath that grew fainter and fainter, except when a long, deep, and irregular inspiration seemed to prelude the flight of his spirit.

The minister of Westbury approached the bedside.

"Venerable Father Hooper," said he, "the moment of your release is at hand. Are you

---

[38] Here, wrought means "made."

[39] Here, sway means "influence."

[40] [As years … veil] This phrase refers to the fact that his hair was turning white with time.

[41] Here, wrought means "worked."

[42] Natural connections are relatives.

[43] Mitigate means "to make less intense, severe, or painful."

[44] Solicitude means "concern" or "anxiety."

[45] Torpor is a state of being unable to move or feel.

Vocabulary

irreproachable (ir´ i prō´ chə bəl) adj. free from blame; faultless zealous (zel´ əs) adj. filled with enthusiastic devotion; passionate

Symbol Several times a narrator describes the movement of the veil caused by Mr. Hooper's breath. What quality does this give to the symbol? 2

Writing Practice

Compose a Letter

Have students imagine they are Mr. Clark of Westbury, the minister at Mr. Hooper's deathbed. As Mr. Clark, have them write a letter to a friend, describing his mood, his feelings about being there, what he hopes to accomplish, and his expectations about Mr. Hooper's final moments. Tell students to use the story as a guide for descriptions, tone, and mood.

ready for the lifting of the veil that shuts in time from eternity?"

Father Hooper at first replied merely by a feeble motion of his head; then, apprehensive, perhaps, that his meaning might be doubted, he exerted himself to speak.

"Yea," said he, in faint accents, "my soul hath a patient weariness until that veil be lifted."

"And is it fitting," resumed the Reverend Mr. Clark, "that a man so given to prayer, of such a blameless example, holy in deed and thought, so far as mortal judgment may pronounce; is it fitting that a father in the church should leave a shadow on his memory, that may seem to blacken a life so pure? I pray you, my venerable brother, let not this thing be! Suffer us to be gladdened by your triumphant aspect as you go to your reward. Before the veil of eternity be lifted, let me cast aside this black veil from your face!"

> "Are you ready for the lifting of the veil that shuts in time from eternity?"

And thus speaking, the Reverend Mr. Clark bent forward to reveal the mystery of so many years. But, exerting a sudden energy, that made all the beholders stand aghast, Father Hooper snatched both his hands from beneath the bedclothes, and pressed them strongly on the black veil, resolute to struggle, if the minister of Westbury would contend with a dying man.

"Never!" cried the veiled clergyman. "On earth, never!"

"Dark old man!" exclaimed the affrighted minister, "with what horrible crime upon your soul are you now passing to the judgment?"

Father Hooper's breath heaved; it rattled in his throat; but, with a mighty effort, grasping forward with his hands, he caught hold of life, and held it back till he should speak. He even raised himself in bed; and there he sat, shivering with the arms of death around him, while the black veil hung down, awful, at that last moment, in the gathered terrors of a lifetime. And yet the faint, sad smile, so often there, now seemed to glimmer from its obscurity, and linger on Father Hooper's lips.

"Why do you tremble at me alone?" cried he, turning his veiled face round the circle of pale spectators. "Tremble also at each other! Have men avoided me, and women shown no pity, and children screamed and fled, only for my black veil? What, but the mystery which it obscurely typifies, has made this piece of crepe so awful? When the friend shows his inmost heart to his friend; the lover to his best beloved; when man does not vainly shrink from the eye of his Creator, loathsomely treasuring up the secret of his sin; then deem me a monster, for the symbol beneath which I have lived, and die! I look around me, and, lo! on every visage a Black Veil!"

While his auditors shrank from one another, in mutual affright, Father Hooper fell back upon his pillow, a veiled corpse, with a faint smile lingering on the lips. Still veiled, they laid him in his coffin, and a veiled corpse they bore him to the grave. The grass of many years has sprung up and withered on that grave, the burial stone is moss-grown, and good Mr. Hooper's face is dust; but awful is still the thought that it moldered[46] beneath the Black Veil!

---

[46] Moldered means "turned to dust" or "crumbled."

Symbol To what "mystery" do you think the minister is referring? 3

The Power of Darkness How does this final detail reflect the dark side of Romanticism? 4

Teach

Literary Element 3

Symbol Answer: In his last words, the minister seems to link the veil with the final "mystery" of our innermost selves, which few will reveal to another.

Big Idea 4

The Power of Darkness

Answer: The dark side of Romanticism, particularly the Gothic literary tradition, emphasized such images of death and decay.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 150.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Help students break down sentences into manageable pieces of information. Take the full sentence beginning "'And is it fitting,' resumed the Reverend Mr. Clark," on page 289.

Write on the board "It is fitting that . . ." and then make a chart to sort out the remainder of the sentence. Start with these entries:

Subject:	a man
Modifiers:	so given to prayer of such a blameless example holy in deed and thought, so far as mortal judgment may pronounce
Verb:	should leave
Object:	a shadow

Guide students in completing the analysis of this sentence and restating it in their own words.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students' answers will vary.
2. (a) They are surprised, and fearful that he is insane. (b) It is unusual and seems sinister. They may recognize that they too have secret sins.
3. (a) The subject is secret sin. (b) They suspect that he has a secret sin.
4. (a) Summaries should include (at least) the Sunday sermon, funeral, wedding, meeting with Elizabeth, and death scene. (b) Answers will vary.
5. (a) The veil makes Mr. Hooper a very effective clergyman. (b) It frightens children and timid people. It prompts bolder people to confront him. It surrounds him with sinister rumors.
6. (a) Elizabeth's decision to break off their engagement confirms her firmness of character. Her care for him at his time of death reveals the depth of her feeling for him. (b) Answers will vary.
7. (a) Students will probably be most puzzled by Mr. Hooper's original decision to wear the veil. (b) Possible question: "What prompted Mr. Hooper to put on the veil in the first place?"
8. Hawthorne shows the Romantic view in the value Mr. Hooper puts on feelings and on the importance of his spiritual life, which transcends daily human concerns.
9. Students should be able to support their points with relevant examples. Students might say that the parable is still relevant because people in modern society still have difficulty revealing their true selves and are often judged on the way they choose to present themselves.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. (a)What was your first reaction to the minister's black veil? (b)Did your reaction change as the story developed?
2. (a)How do the townspeople react when they first see Mr. Hooper wearing the black veil? (b)Why might the veil affect them as it does?
3. (a)What is the subject of Mr. Hooper's sermon on the first day he wears the black veil? (b)What do you think is the association between the veil and congregation's interpretation of the sermon?
4. (a)Briefly retell in your own words the main events of the story. (b)Which of these events was most surprising?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)What is "the one desirable effect" that the veil has on Mr. Hooper? (b)What are the negative effects?
6. (a)What does Elizabeth's changing relationship with Mr. Hooper reveal about her personality? (b)Do you find her a sympathetic character? Explain.
7. (a)What do you think was most puzzling about the story? (b)Write your thoughts down in the form of question.

Connect

8. Big Idea The Power of Darkness The Puritan view of sin and human nature is a basic element of this story. How is the Romantic view of human nature also shown?
9. Connect to Today In your opinion, is "The Minister's Black Veil" a relevant parable for today? Explain.

You're the Critic: Different Viewpoints

How Pessimistic Was Hawthorne?

How do the viewpoints expressed below differ?

> "What pleased [Hawthorne in gloomy subjects] was their picturesqueness, their rich duskiness of color, their chiaroscuro; but they were not the expression of a hopeless...feeling about the human soul."
>
> —Henry James

> "...this black conceit [Original Sin] pervades [Hawthorne's writing].... You may be witched by his sunlight,—transported by the bright gildings in the skies he builds over you; but... even his bright gildings but fringe and play upon the edges of thunder-clouds."
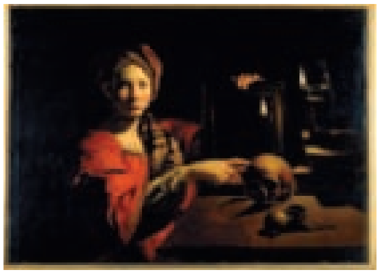
>
> —Herman Melville

Group Activity Discuss the following questions. Cite evidence from "The Minister's Black Veil."

1. Do you think James or Melville comes closer in assessing Hawthorne's pessimism? Explain.
2. Chiaroscuro is the use of strongly contrasting light and dark areas in visual art. How might this technique apply to Hawthorne?



Group Activity

1. Melville views Hawthorne as more of a pessimist than James does. Answers will vary.
2. The blend of light and shade resembles the mixture of good and evil that for Hawthorne was fundamental to human nature.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 115–116.

Literary Element Symbol

There are two basic types of symbols—traditional and original. Traditional symbols usually have a single meaning. For example, the theater masks shown here are traditional symbols representing the two sides of drama—comedy and tragedy.

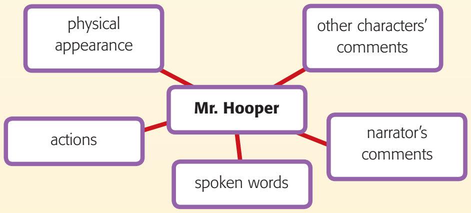
In contrast, writers often create original symbols that have no familiar meanings to readers. This allows writers more freedom to develop what the symbols represent.

1. What kind of symbol—traditional or original—does Hawthorne use in "The Minister's Black Veil"? Explain.
2. What different meanings do you think the black veil represents for Mr. Hooper, Elizabeth, and the townspeople?

Review: Characterization

Characterization refers to the methods a writer uses to develop the personality of a character.

Partner Activity Create a web diagram like the one below. Then fill it in with an example for each method of characterization that Hawthorne uses.



Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Reading Strategy Make Inferences

ACT Skills Practice

1. The theme of "The Minister's Black Veil" is the:
   - A. paralyzing terror of the hidden and unknown.
   - B. inescapable guilt that drives people's actions.
   - C. inability of people to reveal their true natures.
   - D. omnipresence of the supernatural in human life.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Synonyms A synonym is a word that has the same or nearly the same meaning as another word. With a partner, match each boldfaced vocabulary word below with its synonym. Use a thesaurus or dictionary to check your answers.

1. venerable
2. iniquity
3. sagacious
4. irreproachable
5. zealous

- a. wise
- b. reckless
- c. faultless
- d. esteemed
- e. enthusiastic
- f. uncaring
- g. wickedness

Academic Vocabulary

Strict interpretation of the Bible and belief in punishment were cultural convictions of the Puritans in New England in the early 1700s.

Cultural is an academic word. In more casual conversation, someone might say that a person of a certain ethnicity practices the cultural traditions of that ethnicity. Using context clues, try to figure out the meaning of the word in the sentence above describing the setting and characters of "The Minister's Black Veil." Check your conclusion in a dictionary.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Review: Characterization

physical appearance

Mr. Hooper's faint, sad smile that glimmers in the shadow of his black veil actions

Making a wedding toast, Mr. Hooper catches a glimpse of himself in a mirror and is so frightened he spills his wine.

spoken words

"O! you know not how lonely I am, and how frightened . . . behind my black veil."

other characters' comments

"I wonder he is not afraid to be alone with himself!"

narrator's comments

"It grieved him . . . to observe how the children fled from his approach, breaking up their merriest sports, while his melancholy figure was yet afar off."

After You Read

Assess

Literary Element

1. Although some students may recall traditional blindfolded figures (such as Justice or Cupid), Hawthorne creates an original symbol in "The Minister's Black Veil."
2. For Mr. Hooper, the veil seems to represent guilt; for Elizabeth, perhaps the unknowable secret self of Mr. Hooper; for the townspeople, many things, including guilt, sin, madness, and the terrifying unknown.
3. By providing no final explanation of what caused Mr. Hooper's decision, Hawthorne makes the veil a more mysterious symbol.

Progress Check

Can students interpret a symbol?

If No → See Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 145.

Reading Strategy

1. H is the correct answer because the point of the story is that everyone has a hidden sin.

Vocabulary

1. d 2. g 3. a 4. c 5. e

Academic Vocabulary

The words interpretation, belief, and punishment should help students deduce that the word cultural describes the customs and beliefs shared by the people of a certain social, ethnic, or religious group.

After You Read

Assess

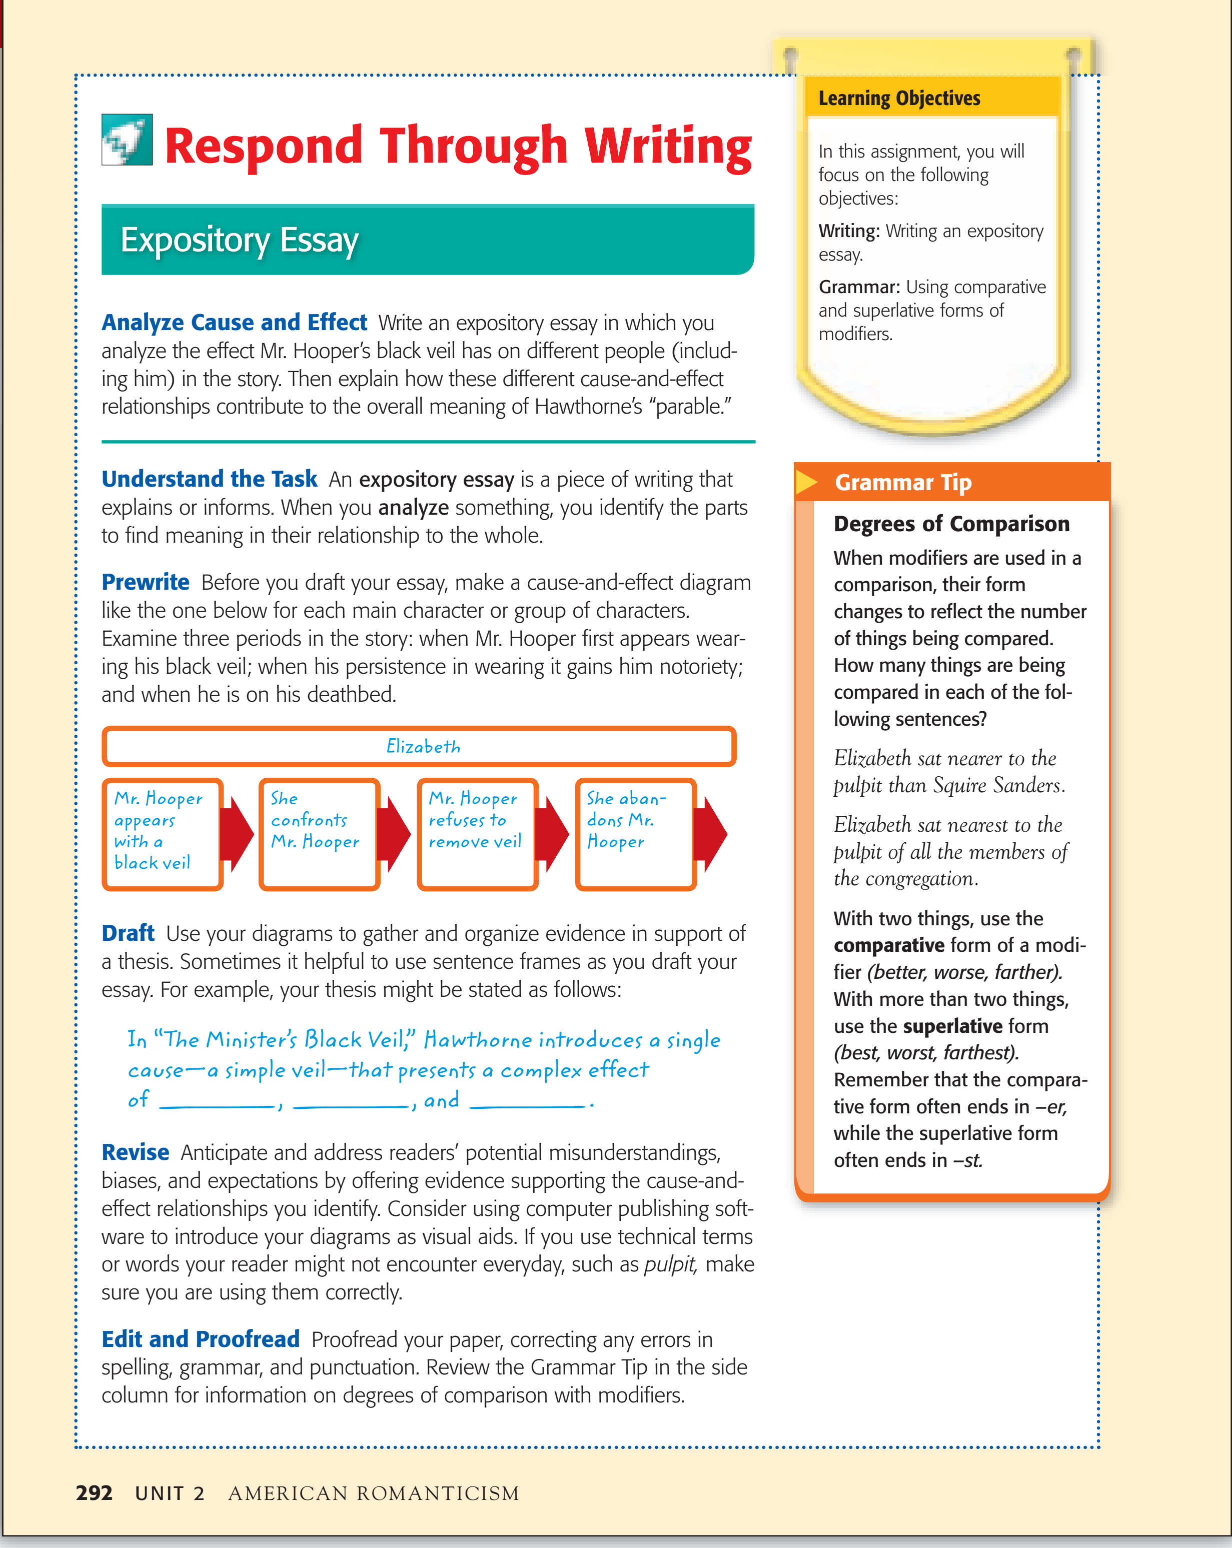
Respond Through Writing

Students' essays should draw clear connections between the veil and the reactions it inspired and use these connections to analyze the meaning of the story. To evaluate the essays, use the scoring guide below.

Prewrite

Help students determine how many characters they will include in their essays and how they will go about gathering the information they need in order to fill in a cause-and-effect diagram for each character. Explain to students that the first box in the diagram is already determined by the assignment. Remind them that the second box will be an effect of the first box, but it will also be a cause of the event in the third box. Students may use more than four boxes in their diagrams.

For grammar practice, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 149.



Respond Through Writing

Expository Essay

Analyze Cause and Effect Write an expository essay in which you analyze the effect Mr. Hooper's black veil has on different people (including him) in the story. Then explain how these different cause-and-effect relationships contribute to the overall meaning of Hawthorne's "parable."

Understand the Task An expository essay is a piece of writing that explains or informs. When you analyze something, you identify the parts to find meaning in their relationship to the whole.

Prewrite Before you draft your essay, make a cause-and-effect diagram like the one below for each main character or group of characters. Examine three periods in the story: when Mr. Hooper first appears wearing his black veil; when his persistence in wearing it gains him notoriety; and when he is on his deathbed.

Elizabeth
Mr. Hooper appears with a black veil
She confronts Mr. Hooper
Mr. Hooper refuses to remove veil
She abandons Mr. Hooper

Draft Use your diagrams to gather and organize evidence in support of a thesis. Sometimes it helpful to use sentence frames as you draft your essay. For example, your thesis might be stated as follows:

> In "The Minister's Black Veil," Hawthorne introduces a single cause—a simple veil—that presents a complex effect of __________, __________, and __________.

Revise Anticipate and address readers' potential misunderstandings, biases, and expectations by offering evidence supporting the cause-and-effect relationships you identify. Consider using computer publishing software to introduce your diagrams as visual aids. If you use technical terms or words your reader might not encounter everyday, such as pulpit, make sure you are using them correctly.

Edit and Proofread Proofread your paper, correcting any errors in spelling, grammar, and punctuation. Review the Grammar Tip in the side column for information on degrees of comparison with modifiers.

Learning Objectives

In this assignment, you will focus on the following objectives:

Writing: Writing an expository essay.

Grammar: Using comparative and superlative forms of modifiers.

Grammar Tip

Degrees of Comparison

When modifiers are used in a comparison, their form changes to reflect the number of things being compared. How many things are being compared in each of the following sentences?

Elizabeth sat nearer to the pulpit than Squire Sanders.

Elizabeth sat nearest to the pulpit of all the members of the congregation.

With two things, use the comparative form of a modifier (better, worse, farther). With more than two things, use the superlative form (best, worst, farthest). Remember that the comparative form often ends in –er, while the superlative form often ends in –st.

Scoring Guide	4	3	2	1
Task addressed	fully	mostly	partially	barely
Thesis	meaningful	provided	partial	weak
Support	thoughtful	provided	partial	weak
Language	varied, descriptive	varied, often descriptive	predictable, imprecise	repetitive, limited
Convention errors	few or none	several	many	serious
Analysis is	convincing	mostly convincing	partially convincing	not convincing

Grammar Workshop

Misplaced and Dangling Modifiers

Learning Objectives

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objective:

Grammar: Understanding how to avoid misplaced and dangling modifiers.

Literature Connection In the quotation below, Hawthorne places the phrase with bright faces directly after the noun it modifies, children.

> "Children, with bright faces, tripped merrily beside their parents…"
>
> —Nathaniel Hawthorne, from "The Minister's Black Veil"

If Hawthorne had written Children tripped merrily beside their parents, with bright faces, one could interpret with bright faces as modifying parents. A modifier placed in such a way that it appears to modify something it does not is a misplaced modifier.

To correct a misplaced modifier, move it closer in the sentence to the word or phrase that it modifies.

Misplaced: Children tripped merrily beside their parents, with bright faces. (It sounds as though the parents have bright faces.)

Corrected: Children, with bright faces, tripped merrily beside their parents. (It is clear that the children have bright faces.)

A modifier that does not clearly or logically modify any word in a sentence is a dangling modifier: Passing into the chamber, the funeral prayer created a solemn mood. What does Passing into the chamber modify?

To correct a dangling modifier, add to the sentence a word or phrase that the modifier goes with.

Dangling: Passing into the chamber, the funeral prayer created a solemn mood. (What is passing into the chamber is not stated.)

Corrected: Passing into the chamber, Hooper spoke the funeral prayer, which created a solemn mood. (It is clear that Hooper is passing.)

Prepositional and Participial Phrases as Modifiers

Prepositional phrases can act as adjectives or adverbs. With bright faces in the example at left is a prepositional phrase acting as an adjective.

A participle is a verb form that ends in –ed or –ing. Participial phrases always act as adjectives. Passing into the chamber in the example at left is a participial phrase.

Language Handbook

For more on modifiers, see Language Handbook pp. R42–R61.

Revise Correct the following misplaced or dangling modifiers.

1. Looking for movie ideas, Poe's stories were discovered one day.
2. Working feverishly, the script was finally finished.
3. Watching the 1926 film The Scarlet Letter, the theater was filled with people.
4. Admitted to the theater late, the lights were out.

Literature Online

Grammar For more grammar practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Misplaced and dangling modifiers create confusion and misunderstanding. Examples, such as the following, are sometimes found in newspaper headlines:

- Confused Minister Injures Governor with Phone
- Miners Refuse to Work After Death
- Two Sisters Reunite After Eighteen Years at College

Ask students to identify the misplaced or dangling modifiers and to rewrite the headlines to make them clear and sensible.

Grammar Workshop

Misplaced and Dangling Modifiers

Focus

Write this sentence on the board:

After reading the directions, the machine was ready to assemble.

Discuss why this sentence is confusing. Remind students that the sequence, or order, of words in a sentence determines the meaning of the sentence.

Teach

Participles Point out that participial phrases that appear at the beginning of a sentence must be followed immediately by the subject.

Assess

Possible rewrites:

1. Looking for movie ideas, the director discovered Poe's stories.
2. Working feverishly, the screenwriter finally finished the script.
3. Watching the 1926 film The Scarlet Letter, the audience filled the theater.
4. The audience smiled at the silent film actress, who was gesturing wildly.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 29

Or display an image of a sperm whale and an image of Captain Ahab (an illustration or a still from the movie Moby Dick). Write on the board: What have you heard about the great white whale named Moby Dick? What do you know about the man who pursued him, Captain Ahab? Have students write their responses to the questions. After they read the selection, have them verify whether their responses were accurate.

Ask: What are some examples of nature as a powerful and mysterious force in myths and other forms of literature?

Before You Read

from Moby-Dick

Meet Herman Melville

(1819–1891)

"NO! in thunder." This, according to Herman Melville, is what the true writer says. With his own great "NO!" Melville set himself against the optimism of the Transcendentalists and rejected the idea of progress and prosperity that dominated the American mind in the 1800s.

Adventure and Fame Born in New York City, Melville faced many misfortunes in his youth despite being the son of a wealthy merchant. He was forced to leave school at the age of twelve and began focusing on finding a profession. Unable to do so, in 1841 he became a sailor aboard the whale ship Acushnet, bound for the South Pacific.

During his time as a sailor, Melville jumped ship and lived for a month with the Typee, a tribe that treated him graciously. He also took part in a mutiny and spent time in jail on the island of Tahiti. These sailing years gave him the background knowledge of ships and exotic islands that served him well in his first two novels, Typee (1846) and Omoo (1847), both popular tales of adventure.

The success of these novels brought temporary stability into Melville's life. In 1847, he married Elizabeth Shaw, the daughter of the chief justice of Massachusetts. He became a literary celebrity in both England and America, but his sudden success was short-lived. His third novel, Mardi (1849), written in an allegorical style, was poorly received because it was not the adventure story that readers had expected.

Critical Neglect In 1850, Melville purchased a farm near Pittsfield, Massachusetts, and befriended Nathaniel Hawthorne, who lived just six miles away. The two writers shared the Puritan view of humanity as inherently evil, and they wrote fiction that explored the dark side of life.

Hawthorne's influence can be seen in Melville's later work, beginning with Moby-Dick, a whaling story of complexity and power, meant to rival the work of Shakespeare. Published in 1851, this tale of Captain Ahab and his search for the white whale is now regarded as one of the greatest American novels. When the novel first appeared, however, it met with neither critical nor popular acclaim.

The commercial failure of his next two works convinced Melville that he could not support his family by writing. He sold his farm and spent nearly twenty years as a customs inspector in New York City. In his later years, he published poems, which were overlooked by the public. At his death he left behind the manuscript of his last work, the novel Billy Budd. It was published posthumously in 1924.

During his life, Herman Melville achieved fame and then watched it fade to nothing. His most important achievements were ridiculed by critics and ignored by the public. Nathaniel Hawthorne, however, asserted that no "writer ever put . . . reality before his reader more unflinchingly" than did Herman Melville. Generations later, readers began to discover the depth and power of his writing and to accept his bold rendering of reality.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Herman Melville, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Selection Skills

from Moby-Dick

Literary Elements
- Motivation (SE pp. 295, 296, 298, 299, 302, 304)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Literary Criticism (SE p. 305)
- Character Sketch (TE p. 298)

Reading Skills
- Monitor Comprehension (SE pp. 295, 296, 298, 301, 303, 305)
- Preview (TE p. 296)

Vocabulary Skills
- Antonyms (SE p. 305; TE p. 295)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE p. 300)
- Dramatic Presentation (TE p. 296)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Story

Think of someone you know who has a magnetic personality. What gives him or her that quality? To explore this question, make a word web. In the center of a page, write the person's name. List the person's engaging traits or behaviors in surrounding circles.

Build Background

Melville's novel is set in the early 1800s. It describes the voyage of the Pequod, a whale ship, which hunts and kills sperm whales for their oil. Ishmael, the young sailor who narrates the book, signs on because he is penniless but curious to find out what life aboard a whale ship is like. Despite dangerous work, fierce weather, low pay, bad food, and harsh treatment, Americans and foreigners alike were drawn to whaling.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea The Power of Darkness

As you read, ask yourself, Why does Captain Ahab consider the white whale Moby Dick to be evil?

Literary Element Motivation

Motivation refers to the stated or implied reason or cause for a character's actions. A character's motivation helps the reader understand why he or she behaves in a certain way. In a great literary work such as Moby-Dick, the main character's motivation is complex, but comprehensible. As you read, ask yourself, Why does Captain Ahab act as he does?

Reading Strategy Monitor Comprehension

Monitoring comprehension is a helpful way to make sure that you understand what you are reading. Melville's style is highly ornate, with long, complicated passages and sentences rich in descriptive detail. To get the most from this selection, reread challenging passages and break down difficult sentences.

Tip: Break Down Difficult Sentences Use the following tips to break down difficult sentences:

1. Identify the subject.
2. Isolate the verb or verb phrase.
3. Rephrase the sentence in your own words.

Learning Objectives

For pages 294–305

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing motivation.

Reading: Monitoring comprehension.

Writing: Writing a literary critical response.

Vocabulary

fortitude (fôr′ tə to͞od′) n. strength, particularly strength of mind that enables one to encounter danger or bear adversity with courage; p. 298 The soldier showed fortitude in facing the enemy.

genial (jēn′ yəl) adj. mild or friendly; p. 298 Despite her severe illness, my grandmother remained genial.

recluse (rek′ lo͞os) n. someone who leads a secluded or solitary life; p. 298 The author was considered a recluse because he granted no interviews and never spoke in public.

misanthropic (mis′ ən throp′ ik) adj. having hatred for humankind; p. 298 Lack of compassion may be a sign of a misanthropic cast of mind.

inscrutable (in skro͞o′ tə bəl) adj. mysterious, or not able to be interpreted or understood; p. 301 Her actions may be clear, but her intentions are inscrutable.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Give students help with the nautical terms in this selection. Write these words on the board: cabin, captain, deck, harpooners, crew, southward, latitude, plank. Have students sort them into these three categories: people, ship, navigation. You may refer to a photo or illustration of a nineteenth-century whaling ship and have students label or point out the parts mentioned in the selection. Students may clarify the navigational terms by referring to a map.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Moby-Dick is the story of a man's obsessive desire for vengeance against a white whale that took off one of his legs. In this excerpt, the ship Pequod has just set sail, with its crew believing that they are on a routine whaling voyage. In the first days of the voyage, Captain Ahab quickly shows himself to be a stern, joyless, obsessed man. The crew soon learn the true purpose of the voyage—to "hunt Moby Dick to his death."

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 153–158.

Vocabulary

Antonyms Explain to students that all of the words in the vocabulary list can describe people. Ask students to provide an antonym for each word. For example, an antonym for genial is unfriendly.

ADVANCED Ask students to use each word and its antonym in a sentence describing a character from a story. (Mr. Hooper in "The Minister's Black Veil" is genial at the outset, but he becomes more unfriendly when he puts on the veil.)

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 161.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Motivation Answer: Ahab feels superior to the crew and stays aloof, letting the mates attend to the ship's business early in the voyage. By remaining in his cabin, Ahab instills a sense of wonder and awe in the crew.

Reading Strategy 2

Monitor Comprehension
Answer: Ishmael describes the harpooneers and the ship's crew.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 160.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD–ROM.

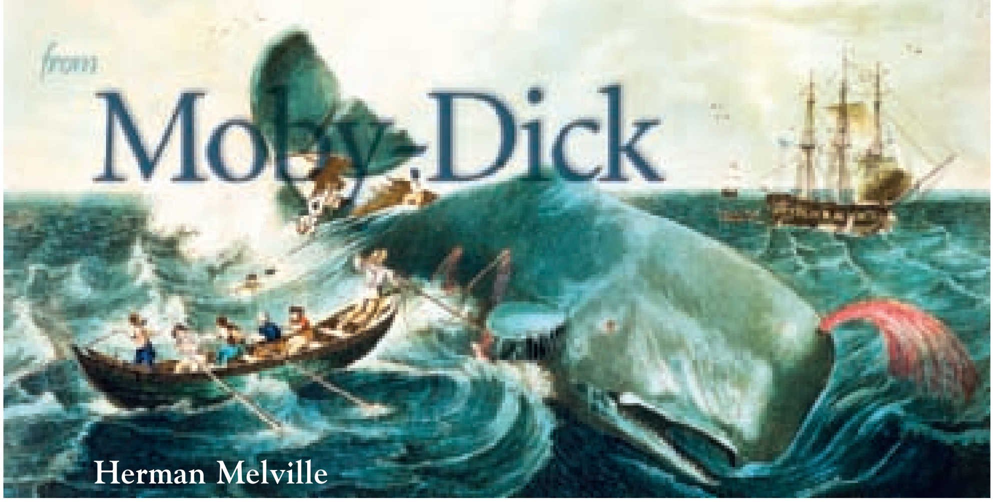
Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 9.0
DRP: 67
Lexile: 1150

---

from

Moby-Dick



Herman Melville

Capturing a Sperm Whale, published 1835. J. Hill. Engraving, 47.1 x 61.5 cm. Peabody Essex Museum, Salem, MA.

Ahab

For several days after leaving Nantucket, nothing above hatches[1] was seen of Captain Ahab. The mates regularly relieved each other at the watches, and for aught[2] that could be seen to the contrary, they seemed to be the only commanders of the ship; only they sometimes issued from the cabin with orders so sudden and peremptory, that after all it was plain they but commanded vicariously. Yes, their supreme lord and dictator was there, though hitherto unseen by any eyes not permitted to penetrate into the now sacred retreat of the cabin.

Every time I ascended to the deck from my watches below, I instantly gazed aft[3] to mark if any strange face were visible; for my first vague disquietude touching the unknown captain, now in the seclusion of the sea, became almost a perturbation. This was strangely heightened at times by the ragged Elijah's diabolical incoherences uninvitedly recurring to me, with a subtle energy I could not have before conceived of. But poorly could I withstand them, much as in other moods I was almost ready to smile at the solemn whimsicalities of that outlandish prophet of the wharves.[4] But whatever it was of apprehensiveness or uneasiness—to call it so—which I felt, yet whenever I came to look about me in the ship, it seemed against all warranty to cherish such emotions. For though the harpooneers, with the great body of the crew, were a far more barbaric, heathenish, and motley set than any of the tame merchant-ship companies which my previous experiences had made me acquainted with, still I ascribed this—and rightly ascribed it—to the fierce uniqueness of the very nature of that wild Scandinavian vocation in which I had so abandonedly embarked. But it was especially the aspect of the three chief officers of the ship, the mates, which was most forcibly calculated to allay these colorless misgivings, and induce confidence and cheerfulness in every presentment of the voyage. Three better, more likely sea-officers and men, each in his own different way, could not readily be found, and they were every one of the Americans; a Nantucketer, a Vineyarder, a Cape man. Now, it being

---

1. Above hatches means "on deck."
2. Here, aught means "anything" or "all."
3. Aft means "the rear section of a ship."
4. Before the Pequod set sail, an odd sailor, Elijah, warned Ishmael about Captain Ahab.

1 Motivation Why does Ahab isolate himself from his crew?

Monitor Comprehension Whom does Ishmael describe in this passage? 2

Reading Practice

Previewing This story deals with a man obsessed with his quest for vengeance and tells how he engages others in his mission. Have students discuss these questions.

- Have you ever known or read about someone who seemed irrationally obsessed with a thing or an idea?
- Was the person able to convince others to share his or her obsession?

As students read the selection, they should note how Ahab draws others into his plans. Encourage students to think about how they might react if they were a crew member. Have students also preview the illustrations and captions and scan the footnotes and questions at the bottoms of pages to get a sense of the content of this selection.

Christmas when the ship shot from out her harbor, for a space we had biting Polar weather, though all the time running away from it to the southward; and by every degree and minute of latitude which we sailed, gradually leaving that merciless winter, and all its intolerable weather behind us. It was one of those less lowering, but still grey and gloomy enough mornings of the transition, when with a fair wind the ship was rushing through the water with a vindictive sort of leaping and melancholy rapidity, that as I mounted to the deck at the call of the forenoon watch, so soon as I levelled my glance towards the taffrail, foreboding shivers ran over me. Reality outran apprehension; Captain Ahab stood upon his quarter-deck.[5]

There seemed no sign of common bodily illness about him, nor of the recovery from any. He looked like a man cut away from the stake, when the fire has overrunningly wasted all the limbs without consuming them, or taking away one particle from their compacted aged robustness. His whole high, broad form, seemed made of solid bronze, and shaped in an unalterable mould, like Cellini's cast Perseus.[6] Threading its way out from among his grey hairs, and continuing right down one side of his tawny scorched face and neck, till it disappeared in his clothing, you saw a slender rod-like mark, lividly whitish. It resembled that perpendicular seam sometimes made in the straight, lofty trunk of a great tree, when the upper lightning tearingly darts down it, and without wrenching a single twig, peels and grooves out the bark from top to bottom, ere running off into the soil, leaving the tree still greenly alive, but branded. Whether that mark was born with him, or whether it was the scar left by some desperate wound, no one could certainly say. By some tacit consent, throughout the voyage little or no allusion was made to it, especially by the mates. But once Tashtego's senior, an old Gayhead Indian[7] among the crew, superstitiously asserted that not till he was full forty years old did Ahab become that way branded, and then it came upon him, not in the fury of any mortal fray, but in an elemental strife at sea. Yet, this wild hint seemed inferentially negatived, by what a grey Manxman[8] insinuated, an old sepulchral man, who, having never before sailed out of Nantucket, had never ere this laid eye upon wild Ahab. Nevertheless, the old sea-traditions, the immemorial credulities, popularly invested this old Manxman with preternatural powers of discernment. So that no white sailor seriously contradicted him when he said that if ever Captain Ahab should be tranquilly laid out—which might hardly come to pass, so he muttered—then, whoever should do that last office for the dead, would find a birthmark on him from crown to sole.

So powerfully did the whole grim aspect of Ahab affect me, and the livid[9] brand which streaked it, that for the first few moments I hardly noted that not a little of this overbearing grimness was owing to the barbaric white leg upon which he partly stood. It had previously come to me that this ivory leg had at sea been fashioned from the polished bone of the sperm whale's jaw. "Aye, he was dismasted[10] off Japan," said the old Gayhead Indian once; "but like his dismasted craft, he shipped another mast without coming home for it. He has a quiver of 'em."

I was struck with the singular posture he maintained. Upon each side of the Pequod's quarter deck, and pretty close to the mizen shrouds,[11] there was an auger hole, bored

---

[5] The quarter-deck is the part of a ship set aside by the captain for official use.

[6] Cellini's cast Perseus refers to Benvenuto Cellini's bronze statue that shows Perseus, a Greek mythological hero, holding Medusa's severed head.

[7] Gayhead Indian refers to a Native American from Gayhead, a town in Martha's Vineyard, Massachusetts.

[8] A Manxman is someone from the Isle of Man, an island in the Irish Sea.

[9] Here, livid means "pale."

[10] Literally, dismasted means "with the mast removed or broken off." This term is used figuratively to describe Ahab's loss of his leg.

[11] Shrouds means "sails."

3 The Power of Darkness How does this detail suggest that Ahab is strange, perhaps even unnatural?

Teach

Big Idea 3

The Power of Darkness

Answer: Ahab's body looks as though it has been pulled from a fire but not completely burned. He seems at odds with nature, but nature has been unable to destroy him.

Cultural History

Ship's Captain The author refers to Ahab as a "supreme lord and dictator." At the time this story is set, the captain of a ship was the absolute authority on board. The crew was bound to follow the captain's orders without question. The captain had the authority to administer harsh punishment for any infractions.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Students may find it difficult to follow Melville's long complex sentences. Display this sentence from this page: "So powerfully did the whole grim aspect . . . ." Help students find the main clause's subjects (aspect and brand), verb (did affect) and direct object (me). Then have them state the basic parts of sentences in conventional sentence order.

Emerging To help students understand information that is implied, not stated, guide them in formulating questions as they read, such as "What theories are given about how Ahab got his scar?" and "What is his white leg made of?" Help them make inferences to answer the questions and have them write the answers.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Motivation Answer: The "crucifixion in his face" and the "overbearing dignity of some mighty woe" suggest a terrible suffering, perhaps unmerited, that continues to afflict him. This suffering may cause him to act in irrational ways.

Ask: How would you explain the metaphor "a crucifixion in his face"? (Crucifixion was a Roman punishment that caused great suffering. The metaphor means that Ahab's face bears the signs of great suffering.)

Reading Strategy 2

Monitor Comprehension
Answer: The Pequod is not yet in a whaling area, so Ahab is not needed to direct the crew; he is alone with his troubled thoughts.

Literary History ☆

The Pequod Tell students that the Pequod set sail from Nantucket on Christmas Day, at the beginning of winter. As the ship sails south toward the equator, the weather gradually becomes warmer. In the Southern Hemisphere, December begins the summer season.

Writing Practice

Character Sketch Have students write a brief character sketch of Ahab. Their sketches should include both his physical and his personality traits. Remind students that Melville reveals Ahab's character both directly and indirectly. Students should include evidence of characterization, both direct and indirect, to support their statements about his character.

---

about half an inch or so, into the plank. His bone leg steadied in that hole; one arm elevated, and holding by a shroud; Captain Ahab stood erect, looking straight out beyond the ship's ever-pitching prow. There was an infinity of firmest fortitude, a determinate, unsurrenderable wilfulness, in the fixed and fearless, forward dedication of that glance. Not a word he spoke; nor did his officers say aught to him; though by all their minutest gestures and expressions, they plainly showed the uneasy, if not painful, consciousness of being under a troubled master-eye. And not only that, but moody stricken Ahab stood before them with a crucifixion in his face; in all the nameless regal overbearing dignity of some mighty woe.

Ere long, from his first visit in the air, he withdrew into his cabin. But after that morning, he was every day visible to the crew; either standing in his pivot-hole, or seated upon an ivory stool he had; or heavily walking the deck. As the sky grew less gloomy; indeed, began to grow a little genial, he became still less and less a recluse; as if, when the ship had sailed from home, nothing but the dead wintry bleakness of the sea had then kept him so secluded. And, by and by, it came to pass, that he was almost continually in the air; but, as yet, for all that he said, or perceptibly did, on the at last sunny deck, he seemed as unnecessary there as another mast. But the Pequod was only making a passage now; not regularly cruising; nearly all whaling preparatives needing supervision the mates were fully competent to, so that there was little or nothing, out of himself to employ or excite Ahab, now; and thus chase away, for that one interval, the clouds that layer upon layer were piled upon his brow, as ever all clouds choose the loftiest peaks to pile themselves upon.

Nevertheless, ere long, the warm, warbling persuasiveness of the pleasant, holiday weather we came to, seemed gradually to charm him from his mood. For, as when the red-cheeked, dancing girls, April and May, trip home to the wintry, misanthropic woods; even the barest, ruggedest, most thunder-cloven old oak will at least send forth some few green sprouts, to welcome such glad-hearted visitants; so Ahab did, in the end, a little respond to the playful allurings of that girlish air. More than once did he put forth the faint blossom of a look, which, in any other man, would have soon flowered out in a smile.

As the Pequod sails farther south, Ahab grows increasingly restless. He paces the deck even in the dead of night when most of the crew are asleep. No longer able to relax and enjoy simple pleasures, he tosses his pipe into the sea. ☆

The Quarter-Deck

(Enter Ahab: Then, all.)

It was not a great while after the affair of the pipe, that one morning shortly after breakfast, Ahab, as was his wont, ascended the cabin-gangway to the deck. There most sea-captains usually walk at that hour, as country gentlemen, after the same meal, take a few turns in the garden.

1 Motivation What is revealed about Ahab's past that may help explain his present or future actions?

Vocabulary

fortitude	(fôr′ tə to͞od′) n. strength, particularly strength of mind that enables one to encounter danger or bear adversity with courage
genial	(jēn′ yəl) adj. mild or friendly
recluse	(rek′ lo͞os) n. someone who leads a secluded or solitary life

2 Monitor Comprehension What is happening in this sentence? Rephrase the sentence in your own words.

3 The Power of Darkness What effect does Melville create by describing the routine walks of other sea captains and country gentlemen before describing Ahab's pacing?

Vocabulary

misanthropic	(mis′ ən throp′ ik) adj. having hatred for humankind

Soon his steady, ivory stride[12] was heard, as to and fro he paced his old rounds, upon planks so familiar to his tread, that they were all over dented, like geological stones, with the peculiar mark of his walk. Did you fixedly gaze, too, upon that ribbed and dented brow; there also, you would see still stranger foot-prints—the foot-prints of his one unsleeping, ever-pacing thought.

But on the occasion in question, those dents looked deeper, even as his nervous step that morning left a deeper mark. And, so full of his thought was Ahab, that at every uniform turn that he made, now at the main-mast and now at the binnacle,[13] you could almost see that thought turn in him as he turned, and pace in him as he paced; so completely possessing him, indeed, that it all but seemed the inward mould of every outer movement.

"D'ye mark him, Flask?" whispered Stubb; "the chick that's in him pecks the shell. 'Twill soon be out."

The hours wore on;—Ahab now shut up within his cabin; anon, pacing the deck, with the same intense bigotry of purpose[14] in his aspect.

It drew near the close of day. Suddenly he came to a halt by the bulwarks,[15] and inserting his bone leg into the auger-hole there, and with one hand grasping a shroud, he ordered Starbuck to send everybody aft.

"Sir!" said the mate, astonished at an order seldom or never given on shipboard except in some extraordinary case.

"Send everybody aft," repeated Ahab. "Mast-heads, there! come down!"

When the entire ship's company were assembled, and with curious and not wholly unapprehensive faces, were eyeing him, for he looked not unlike the weather horizon when a storm is coming up, Ahab, after rapidly glancing over the bulwarks, and then darting his eyes among the crew, started from his stand-point; and as though not a soul were nigh[16] him resumed his heavy turns upon the deck. With bent head and half-slouched hat he continued to pace, unmindful of the wondering whispering among the men; till Stubb cautiously whispered to Flask, that Ahab must have summoned them there for the purpose of witnessing a pedestrian feat. But this did not last long. Vehemently pausing, he cried:—

"What do ye do when ye see a whale, men?"

"Sing out for him!" was the impulsive rejoinder[17] from a score of clubbed voices.

"Good!" cried Ahab, with a wild approval in his tones; observing the hearty animation into which his unexpected question had so magnetically thrown them.

"And what do ye next, men?"

"Lower away, and after him!"

"And what tune is it ye pull to, men?"

"A dead whale or a stove boat!"[18]

More and more strangely and fiercely glad and approving grew the countenance[19] of the old man at every shout; while the mariners began to gaze curiously at each other, as if marvelling how it was that they themselves became so excited at such seemingly purposeless questions.

But, they were all eagerness again, as Ahab, now half-revolving in his pivot-hole, with one hand reaching high up a shroud, and tightly, almost convulsively grasping it, addressed them thus:—

"All ye mast-headers have before now heard me give orders about a white whale. Look ye! d'ye see this Spanish ounce of gold?"—holding

---

[12] Ivory stride refers to Ahab's walking with an artificial leg made from a whale's jawbone.

[13] A binnacle is a compartment on a ship for the ship's lamp and compass.

[14] Bigotry of purpose refers to Ahab's fierce single-mindedness.

[15] The sides of a ship above the upper deck are known as the bulwarks.

[16] Here, nigh means "close" or "near."

[17] An impulsive rejoinder is a spontaneous response or reply.

[18] A dead whale or a stove boat! is a whaler's motto meaning, "We kill a whale or wreck our boat in the attempt!"

[19] Countenance refers to the appearance or expression of the face that reveals mood or emotion.

4 Motivation Why does Ahab pace the deck so resolutely?

Teach

Big Idea 3

The Power of Darkness

Answer: Melville creates a contrast between the others' relaxed walks and Ahab's anxious pacing, which creates dents upon the planks. This contrast further establishes Ahab's mood as unusual.

Literary Element 4

Motivation Answer: His outward movements suggest that his thoughts are stuck in a groove. They go back and forth over the same issue endlessly.

Ask: What does Melville mean by the metaphor in this sentence? (The thought or feeling in Ahab's mind is striving to come out into the open, like a chick pecking its way out of an egg.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS Say: Visualize the way Ahab is walking. Why would his steps make footprints and deep marks on the planks of the deck? (Walking over the same place again and again would wear marks into the surface.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Intermediate Have English learners work with a partner to interpret and explain the meaning of these figurative expressions: "the chick that's in him pecks the shell"; "not unlike the weather horizon when a storm is coming up."

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Explain that Melville writes with great detail. Help readers sort out main ideas from additional descriptive detail. Read aloud the paragraph that begins "It was not a great while after the affair . . . ." Explain that the main idea of this paragraph is that Ahab goes up to the deck for a walk. As extra detail, Melville compares Ahab to a country gentleman who takes a walk after his breakfast. As students continue to read, ask them to separate the main idea in each paragraph from details that illustrate or help them visualize the scenes.

Teach

View the Art ★

Answer: Students' answers will vary, but they should express plausible views of Ahab's character and of the attitude of the man depicted in the artwork.

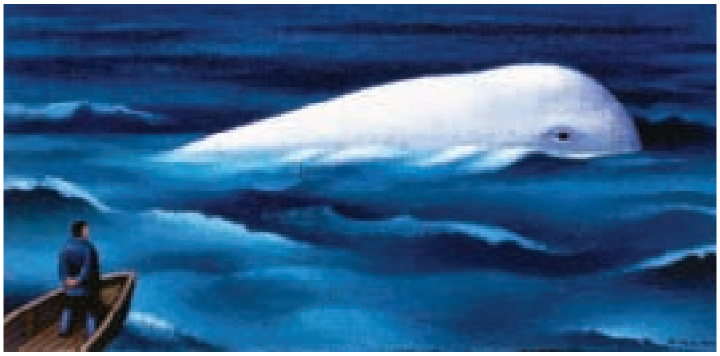
Prior to 1712, the British hunted whales off the coast of the North American colonies. In 1712, a ship sailing out of Nantucket was the first to kill a sperm whale, which produced far more oil and other valuable products than other kinds of whales. Sperm whales had a wide range, from the cold waters of the North Atlantic to the warmer southern waters. With the promise of high profits from sperm whales, whaling voyages extended far into the Pacific, sometimes lasting as long as four years. When a crew spotted a whale, a six-man group set out in a boat to pursue it. The whale was struck with harpoons with coiled ropes attached and held until it tired. A whaler then used a hand lance to kill the whale.



Man in Boat Looking at White Whale. Christopher Zacharow.

View the Art This painting focuses on the man and the whale, with few other elements included. How does the image correspond to your view of Ahab's character? ★ up a broad bright coin to the sun—"it is a sixteen dollar piece, men,—a doubloon. D'ye see it? Mr. Starbuck, hand me yon topmaul."

While the mate was getting the hammer, Ahab, without speaking, was slowly rubbing the gold piece against the skirts of his jacket, as if to heighten its lustre, and without using any words was meanwhile lowly humming to himself, producing a sound so strangely muffled and inarticulate that it seemed the mechanical humming of the wheels of his vitality in him.

Receiving the topmaul from Starbuck, he advanced towards the main-mast with the hammer uplifted in one hand, exhibiting the gold with the other, and with a high raised voice exclaiming: "Whosoever of ye raises[20] me a white-headed whale with a wrinkled brow and a crooked jaw; whosoever of ye raises me that white-headed whale, with three holes punctured in his starboard fluke[21]—look ye, whosoever of ye raises me that same white whale, he shall have this gold ounce, my boys!"

"Huzza! huzza!" cried the seamen, as with swinging tarpaulins they hailed the act of nailing the gold to the mast.

"It's a white whale, I say," resumed Ahab, as he threw down the topmaul; "a white whale. Skin your eyes for him, men; look sharp for white water; if ye see but a bubble, sing out."

All this while Tashtego, Daggoo, and Queequeg[22] had looked on with even more intense interest and surprise than the rest, and at the mention of the wrinkled brow and crooked jaw they had started as if each was separately touched by some specific recollection.

"Captain Ahab," said Tashtego, "that white whale must be the same that some call Moby Dick."

"Moby Dick?" shouted Ahab. "Do ye know the white whale then, Tash?"

"Does he fan-tail a little curious, sir, before he goes down?" said the Gayheader deliberately.

"And has he a curious spout, too," said Daggoo, "very bushy, even for a parmacetty,[23] and mighty quick, Captain Ahab?"

"And he have one, two, tree—oh! good many iron in him hide, too, Captain," cried Queequeg disjointedly, "all twiske-tee betwisk, like him—him—" faltering hard for a word, and screwing his hand round and round as though uncorking a bottle—"like him—him—"

"Corkscrew!" cried Ahab, "aye, Queequeg, the harpoons lie all twisted and wrenched in him;[24] aye, Daggoo, his spout is a big one, like a whole shock of wheat, and white as a pile of our Nantucket wool after the great annual sheep-shearing; aye, Tashtego, and he fan-tails like a split jib in a squall.[25] Death and devils! men, it is Moby Dick ye have seen—Moby Dick—Moby Dick!"

---

20. To raise a whale is to spot or identify it in the sea.
21. Starboard fluke means "the right half of a whale's tail."
22. Tashtego, Daggoo, and Queequeg are the harpooneers on the Pequod; Ishmael befriended Queequeg in Nantucket before signing up for the voyage.
23. Parmacetty (or spermaceti) is a white, waxy solid found in the oil of whales. Here, it refers to the whale itself.
24. Moby Dick has survived many attacks and bears the wounds (and mangled harpoons) inflicted by those who failed to kill him.
25. Like a split jib in a squall means "like a torn sail in a storm."

Writing Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Research Questions Moby Dick is a sperm whale, a kind of whale that was frequently hunted because of its great commercial value. Encourage students to research the sperm whale.

Before students begin, help them formulate research questions. To get students started, offer these questions:

- What is the range of the sperm whale?
- What is its size?
- Why was it commercially valuable?
- What were its products used for?

"Captain Ahab," said Starbuck, who, with Stubb and Flask, had thus far been eyeing his superior with increasing surprise, but at last seemed struck with a thought which somewhat explained all the wonder. "Captain Ahab, I have heard of Moby Dick—but it was not Moby Dick that took off thy leg?"

"Who told thee that?" cried Ahab; then pausing, "Aye, Starbuck; aye, my hearties all round; it was Moby Dick that dismasted me; Moby Dick that brought me to this dead stump I stand on now. Aye, aye," he shouted with a terrific, loud, animal sob, like that of a heart-stricken moose; "Aye, aye! it was that accursed white whale that razeed[26] me; made a poor pegging lubber of me for ever and a day!" Then tossing both arms, with measureless imprecations he shouted out: "Aye, aye! and I'll chase him round Good Hope, and round the Horn, and round the Norway Maelstrom, and round perdition's[27] flames before I give him up. And this is what ye have shipped for, men! to chase that white whale on both sides of land, and over all sides of earth, till he spouts black blood and rolls fin out. What say ye, men, will ye splice hands on it, now? I think ye do look brave." 1

"Aye, aye!" shouted the harpooneers and seamen, running closer to the excited old man: "A sharp eye for the White Whale; a sharp lance for Moby Dick!"

"God bless ye," he seemed to half sob and half shout. "God bless ye, men. Steward! go draw the great measure of grog.[28] But what's this long face about, Mr. Starbuck; wilt thou not chase the white whale? art not game for Moby Dick?"

"I am game for his crooked jaw, and for the jaws of Death too, Captain Ahab, if it fairly comes in the way of the business we follow; but I came here to hunt whales, not my commander's vengeance. How many barrels will thy vengeance yield thee even if thou gettest it, Captain Ahab? it will not fetch thee much in our Nantucket market."

"Nantucket market! Hoot! But come closer, Starbuck; thou requirest a little lower layer. If money's to be the measurer, man, and the accountants have computed their great counting-house the globe, by girdling it with guineas, one to every three parts of an inch; then, let me tell thee, that my vengeance will fetch a great premium here!"

"He smites[29] his chest," whispered Stubb, "what's that for? methinks it rings most vast, but hollow."

"Vengeance on a dumb brute!" cried Starbuck, "that simply smote thee from blindest instinct! Madness! To be enraged with a dumb thing, Captain Ahab, seems blasphemous."

"Hark ye yet again,—the little lower layer. All visible objects, man, are but as pasteboard masks. But in each event—in the living act, the undoubted deed—there, some unknown but still reasoning thing puts forth the mouldings of its features from behind the unreasoning mask. If man will strike, strike through the mask! How can the prisoner reach outside except by thrusting through the wall? To me, the white whale is that wall, shoved near to me. Sometimes I think there's naught beyond. But 'tis enough. He tasks me; he heaps me; I see in him outrageous strength, with an inscrutable malice sinewing it. That inscrutable thing is chiefly what I hate; and be the white whale agent, or be the white whale principal, I will wreak that hate upon him. Talk not to me of blasphemy, man; I'd strike the sun if it insulted me. For could the sun do that, then could I do the other; since there is

Monitor Comprehension Whom does Ahab describe in this passage? 2

Vocabulary

inscrutable (in skro͞o′ tə bəl) adj. mysterious, or not able to be interpreted or understood

---

[26] A razee is a "cut-off" ship, or a ship with its upper decks removed. Ahab, too, has had a part of himself removed, namely, his leg.

[27] Here, perdition is hell.

[28] Grog is alcoholic liquor, such as rum, often diluted with water.

[29] To smite is to strike sharply.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate English learners may have trouble with the archaic language in the dialogue on this page. Tell students that this language is no longer commonly used. Review the following words and phrases with students:

thee, ye	"you"
aye	"yes"
wilt thou not	"won't you"
art	"are"
thou, thy	"you," "your"
methinks	"it seems to me" hark ye	"listen"

Encourage students to write down these words and their meanings for reference as they continue to read.

Teach

Big Idea 1

The Power of Darkness

Say: In this passage, Ahab—with great emotion—reveals to his crew the true reason for their voyage. Have a volunteer read the passage aloud, with feeling. (You may wish to allow the volunteer a brief time to prepare by reading the passage silently.) Ask: What dark and brooding element of his spirit does Ahab reveal in this speech? (Ahab reveals a soul tormented by hatred and a thirst for vengeance. He acknowledges that he will go to any lengths to kill Moby Dick.)

APPROACHING Say: Ahab lists many places around the world, including the Cape of Good Hope in South Africa and the Norway Maelstrom. He also mentions hell. What do these references tell you about Ahab's past experience on the sea and his present plans? (Ahab has sailed in many parts of the world. He will go anywhere to get the white whale.)

Reading Strategy 2

Monitor Comprehension

Answer: Ahab is describing the whale, Moby Dick.

Ask: What actions or characteristics does Captain Ahab attribute to Moby Dick in this passage? (Ahab characterizes Moby Dick as immensely strong and deliberately malicious.)

Teach

Big Idea 1

The Power of Darkness

Answer: Expressions such as "Starbuck now is mine" suggest a growing madness in Ahab. Also, the imagery Ahab uses to describe his influence on Starbuck ("Something shot from my dilated nostrils, he has inhaled it in his lungs") is strange and demonic.

Literary Element 2

Motivation Answer: Ahab believes that Starbuck is "his" and will not oppose him. Lost in his own obsessions, Ahab is oblivious to everything else.

Reading Strategy 3

Monitor Comprehension

Answer: The leader of the prairie wolves rushes after bison but gets caught in the Indian's snare (trap). Ahab is compared to the wolves' leader.

Ask: What does this passage suggest about Ahab's power over his crew? (It suggests that Ahab has a mysterious, almost mesmerizing power over the crew.)

---

ever a sort of fair play herein, jealousy presiding over all creations. But not my master, man, is even that fair play. Who's over me? Truth hath no confines. Take off thine eye! more intolerable than fiends' glarings is a doltish stare! So, so; thou reddenest and palest; my heat has melted thee to anger-glow. But look ye, Starbuck, what is said in heat, that thing unsays itself. There are men from whom warm words are small indignity.[30] I meant not to incense[31] thee. Let it go. Look! see yonder Turkish cheeks of spotted tawn—living, breathing pictures painted by the sun. The Pagan[32] leopards—the unrecking and unworshipping things, that live; and seek, and give no reasons for the torrid life they feel! The crew, man, the crew! Are they not one and all with Ahab, in this matter of the whale? See Stubb! he laughs! See yonder Chilean! he snorts to think of it. Stand up amid the general hurricane, thy one tost sapling cannot, Starbuck! And what is it? Reckon it. 'Tis but to help strike a fin; no wondrous feat for Starbuck. What is it more? From this one poor hunt, then, the best lance out of all Nantucket, surely he will not hang back, when every foremast-hand has clutched a whetstone? Ah! constrainings seize thee; I see! the billow lifts thee! Speak, but speak!—Aye, aye! thy silence, then, that voices thee. (Aside) Something shot from my dilated nostrils, he has inhaled it in his lungs. Starbuck now is mine; cannot oppose me now, without rebellion."

"God keep me!—keep us all!" murmured Starbuck, lowly.

But in his joy at the enchanted, tacit acquiescence of the mate, Ahab did not hear his foreboding invocation;[33] nor yet the low laugh from the hold; nor yet the presaging vibrations of the winds in the cordage;[34] nor yet the hollow flap of the sails against the masts, as for a moment their hearts sank in. For again Starbuck's downcast eyes lighted up with the stubbornness of life; the subterranean[35] laugh died away; the winds blew on; the sails filled out; the ship heaved and rolled as before. Ah, ye admonitions and warnings! why stay ye not when ye come? But rather are ye predictions than warnings, ye shadows! Yet not so much predictions from without, as verifications of the foregoing things within. For with little external to constrain us, the innermost necessities in our being, these still drive us on.

"The measure! the measure!" cried Ahab.

Receiving the brimming pewter, and turning to the harpooneers, he ordered them to produce their weapons. Then ranging them before him near the capstan,[36] with their harpoons in their hands, while his three mates stood at his side with their lances, and the rest of the ship's company formed a circle round the group; he stood for an instant searchingly eyeing every man of his crew. But those wild eyes met his, as the bloodshot eyes of the prairie wolves meet the eye of their leader, ere he rushes on at their head in the trail of the bison; but, alas! only to fall into the hidden snare of the Indian.

"Drink and pass!" he cried, handing the heavy charged flagon to the nearest seaman. "The crew alone now drink. Round with it, round! Short draughts—long swallows, men; 'tis hot as Satan's hoof. So, so; it goes round excellently. It spiralizes in ye; forks out at the serpent-snapping eye. Well done; almost drained. That way it went, this way it comes. Hand it me—here's a hollow! Men, ye seem the years; so brimming life is gulped and gone. Steward, refill!

---

[30] An indignity is an insult.

[31] Incense means "to cause extreme anger."

[32] Here, Pagan describes someone with little or no religion.

[33] An invocation is the act of calling on an authority for help or support.

[34] Cordage is the rope used in a ship's rigging.

[35] Here, subterranean refers to something below the deck of the ship.

[36] A capstan is a vertical drum around which a cable is turned to move or raise weights.

1 The Power of Darkness What does this passage suggest about Ahab?

2 Motivation Why does Ahab not hear Starbuck's invocation?

3 Monitor Comprehension What happens to the leader of the prairie wolves in this comparison? Who on the ship is compared to that leader?

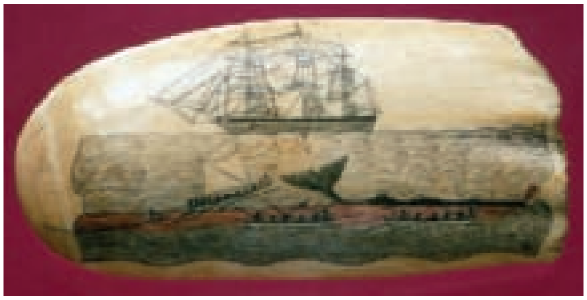
Listening and Speaking Practice

Dramatic Presentation Pages 301–303 include a pivotal scene that reveals Ahab's character. Form the class into small groups to present a dramatic reading of this scene, starting with the next to last paragraph on page 301, the paragraph beginning "Vengeance on a dumb brute!" and ending after the first full paragraph on page 303.

Each group should have a reader for Ahab's dialogue, one for Starbuck's dialogue, and one for the narrator. Have students present their readings before the class.



Scrimshaw on Whalebone. New Bedford Whaling Museum, New Bedford, MA.

"Attend now, my braves. I have mustered ye all round this capstan; and ye mates, flank me with your lances; and ye harpooneers, stand there with your irons; and ye, stout mariners, ring me in, that I may in some sort revive a noble custom of my fisherman fathers before me. O men, you will yet see that—Ha! boy, come back? bad pennies come not sooner. Hand it me. Why, now, this pewter had run brimming again, wert not thou St. Vitus' imp—away, thou ague![37]

"Advance, ye mates! Cross your lances full before me. Well done! Let me touch the axis." So saying, with extended arm, he grasped the three level, radiating lances at their crossed centre; while so doing, suddenly and nervously twitched them; meanwhile, glancing intently from Starbuck to Stubb; from Stubb to Flask. It seemed as though, by some nameless, interior volition,[38] he would fain[39] have shocked into them the same fiery emotion accumulated within the Leyden jar[40] of his own magnetic life. The three mates quailed before his strong, sustained, and mystic aspect. Stubb and Flask looked sideways from him; the honest eye of Starbuck fell downright.

"In vain!" cried Ahab; "but, maybe, 'tis well. For did ye three but once take the full-forced shock, then mine own electric thing, that had perhaps expired from out me. Perchance, too, it would have dropped ye dead. Perchance ye need it not. Down lances! And now, ye mates, I do appoint ye three cup-bearers to my three pagan kinsmen there—yon three most honorable gentlemen and noblemen, my valiant harpooneers. Disdain the task? What, when the great Pope washes the feet of beggars, using his tiara for ewer? Oh, my sweet cardinals![41] your own condescension, that shall bend ye to it. I do not order ye; ye will it. Cut your seizings and draw the poles, ye harpooneers!"

Silently obeying the order, the three harpooneers now stood with the detached iron part of their harpoons so me three feet long, held, barbs up, before him.

"Stab me not with that keen steel! Cant them; cant them over! know ye not the goblet end? Turn up the socket! So, so; now, ye cup-bearers, advance. The irons! take them; hold them while I fill!" Forthwith, slowly going from one officer to the other, he brimmed the harpoon sockets with the fiery waters from the pewter.

"Now, three to three, ye stand. Commend the murderous chalices! Bestow them, ye who are now made parties to this indissoluble league. Ha! Starbuck! but the deed is done! Yon ratifying sun now waits to sit upon it. Drink, ye harpooneers! drink and swear, ye men that man the deathful whaleboat's bow—Death to Moby Dick! God hunt us all, if we do not hunt Moby Dick to his death!" The long, barbed steel goblets were lifted; and to cries and maledictions[42] against the white whale, the spirits were simultaneously quaffed down with a hiss. Starbuck paled, and turned, and shivered. Once more, and finally, the replenished pewter went the rounds among the frantic crew; when, waving his free hand to them, they all dispersed; and Ahab retired within his cabin. ∾

The Power of Darkness How does Ahab's use of religious language and ritual reveal the darker side of his intention? 4

---

[37] St. Vitus' or St. Vitus' Dance is a nervous disorder that causes shaking of the limbs. Ahab mocks the steward for having a shaky hand and spilling some of the liquor. An ague is a fever.

[38] Volition is an act of choosing or willing something.

[39] Here, fain means "rather."

[40] A Leyden jar is a form of capacitor, or "electrical circuit element that can store an electrical charge temporarily."

[41] Cardinals are high officials of the Roman Catholic Church; Ahab addresses his three mates as cardinals.

[42] A malediction is a curse.

Teach

Big Idea 4

The Power of Darkness

Answer: Ahab subverts religious ritual and language, using them to induce his crew to accept his mission as their own. Although he manipulates his crew, he maintains that they have chosen this mission of their own free will, as though they were aware of his intent from the outset of the voyage.

Cultural History ☆

Movies Even though Moby-Dick is a literary classic, Hollywood has been reluctant to adapt the novel for film. The best-known movie version of Moby-Dick was released in 1956. Its director, John Huston, tried for three years to convince studios to produce the film. Hollywood's complaint was that Moby-Dick is a depressing tale without a female character and with no love story.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 164.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging Explain to students that Ahab is inspiring his crew with a speech as a military leader does before a battle or as a coach does before a big game. He wants them to commit to his goal of catching the white whale. Have students work in pairs or small groups to interpret and summarize each paragraph—what Ahab says and what he does. Remind them to use the footnotes and questions at the bottoms of these pages.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students should show insight into Ahab's character.
2. (a) He notices Ahab's scar and artificial leg. (b) His injuries reveal the savage nature of Ahab's fight with the whale and escape from death.
3. (a) He stands erect, looking straight ahead. (b) His stance suggests he is fearless.
4. (a) Starbuck opposes Ahab's intention. (b) He wants to make money, and Ahab's mission is unprofitable.
5. (a) To Ahab, Moby Dick represents "inscrutable malice"; to Starbuck, a "dumb brute"; to the rest of the crew, an adventure. (b) Melville suggests that Ahab's perspective is not the only valid one.
6. (a) Ahab is seeking revenge against a brute that acted from instinct. (b) Ahab shows a lack of reverence by usurping God's role and engaging in a mock-religious ritual.
7. (a) Ahab's passion is contagious. (b) His passion exerts an almost physical force on the crew.
8. Students may say the crew seems just as devoted as Ahab, or may cite Ahab's apparent madness.
9. Ahab perceives him as an unknowable evil that confronts him and mankind.
10. Students may note that it has validity today, as people become obsessed with finding someone or something.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 117–118.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Would you want to sail with a captain like Ahab? Explain.
2. (a)What does Ishmael notice about Ahab's appearance? (b)How does Ahab's appearance influence Ishmael's impression of him?
3. (a)Describe Ahab's posture as he stands on the quarter-deck. (b)How does his stance affirm his position as captain?
4. (a)What is Starbuck's reaction to Ahab's intention to hunt Moby Dick? (b)Why does he react this way?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)What does Moby Dick represent to Ahab, Starbuck, and the crew of the Pequod? (b)Why does Melville present different perceptions of the whale?
6. (a)Why does Starbuck accuse Ahab of blasphemy? (b)Is Ahab guilty of blasphemy or not? Explain.
7. (a)Why does the crew choose to follow Ahab in his mission to kill Moby Dick? (b)How do you account for the "magnetism" between Ahab and his crew?
8. Is Ahab justified in not revealing the Pequod's mission until the voyage is underway? Support your answer with evidence from the story.

Connect

9. Big Idea The Power of Darkness How does Melville use Ahab and his mission as a means of exploring the mystery of evil in the world?
10. Connect to Today Does Melville's depiction of obsession have validity in today's world? Explain.

Literary Element Motivation

Motivation is a central feature of psychological realism, the attempt to portray characters in a plausible, objective manner. Above all else, psychological realism insists that characters be clearly motivated; they should not act without apparent reason.

In Moby-Dick, Ahab's words and actions as well as the words and thoughts of the other characters, particularly Ishmael, provide clues to Ahab's motivation.

1. Are Ahab's motivations clearly depicted? Support your answer.
2. Is Ahab's motivation in hunting Moby Dick purely revenge? Explain.

Review: Metaphor

A metaphor is a figure of speech in which two seemingly unlike things are equated. In a metaphor the comparison is implied, rather than stated directly.

Metaphor	What Is Compared	Why It Is Appropriate
p. 301 "it was Moby Dick that dismasted me"

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Literary Element

1. Yes, Ahab states that he hates the white whale.
2. Students' answers will vary. Some students will argue that Ahab is a complex character whose motivations run deeper than revenge. Other students will argue that revenge is the single motivating factor in Ahab's hunt for Moby Dick.

Progress Check

Can students analyze motivation?

If No → See Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, p. 159.

Reading Strategy Monitor Comprehension

Reread this passage from page 302. Then break it down and answer the questions below.

"And what is it? Reckon it. 'Tis but to help strike a fin; no wondrous feat for Starbuck. What is it more? From this one poor hunt, then, the best lance out of all Nantucket, surely he will not hang back, when every foremast-hand has clutched a whetstone?"

1. To whom is Ahab speaking?
2. What is Ahab trying to do?
3. How would you summarize the passage?

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Antonyms An antonym is a word that has a meaning opposite to that of another word. With a partner, match each boldfaced vocabulary word below with its antonym. You will not use all of the options. Check your answers in a thesaurus or dictionary.

1. fortitude
2. recluse
3. misanthropic
4. inscrutable
5. genial

a. morose
b. clear
c. bizarre
d. cowardice
e. friendly
f. busy
g. socialite

Academic Vocabulary

In Moby-Dick, Captain Ahab exercises a passionate authority over his crew.

Authority is an academic word. It can mean "direct power to command," but also "trusted source of information." To further explore the meaning of this word, complete the sentence below.

Her main authority for her claims about the causes of the War of 1812 was ________.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Research and Report

Literary Criticism

Assignment Evaluate a passage of literary criticism about Melville's work. Write a short response in which you explain whether you agree or disagree that the criticism applies to the selection from Moby-Dick. Deliver your response to the class.

Prepare Read the following passage from a review of Moby-Dick in the London Leader, November 8, 1851. (Cetology is the branch of zoology that deals with whales and other sea mammals. One definition of romance is "a prose narrative treating imaginary characters involved in events remote in time or place and usually heroic, adventurous, or mysterious.")

"The book is not a romance, nor a treatise on cetology. It is something of both: a strange, wild work with the tangled overgrowth and luxuriant vegetation of American forests, not the trim orderliness of an English park. Criticism may pick many holes in this work; but no criticism will thwart its fascination."

To help you evaluate this statement, use a simple chart like the one below. In one column, record details from Moby-Dick that convey information about whaling. In the other, record details that fit the description of romance. When you have completed the chart, review it and decide how well the story supports the review. Then craft a thesis statement and write your response.

Whaling	Romance

Report When you deliver your response, make eye contact, speak loudly and clearly, and maintain good posture to reflect confidence. Use appropriate tones of voice to clarify logical appeals and enhance emotional ones.

Evaluate Write a paragraph evaluating your delivery of your response. When your classmates present their reports, offer oral feedback on their performances. Use the checklist on page 624 for help in your evaluation.

Research and Report

Students should express a clear evaluation of the literary criticism and use evidence from the selection to support opinions. Students should effectively use verbal and nonverbal techniques in their presentation.

After You Read

Assess

Review: Metaphor

Possible answers:

Metaphor: p. 296, "their supreme lord and dictator was there"; What Is Compared: Captain Ahab is compared to a king and a dictator; Why It Is Appropriate: Like a king or dictator, the captain of a ship commands the absolute obedience of others.

Metaphor: p. 303, "Oh, my sweet cardinals!"; What Is Compared: The mates are compared to cardinals, high officials of the Catholic Church; Why It Is Appropriate: The mates are high officials under Ahab, just as cardinals are under the pope.

Reading Strategy

1. Ahab is speaking to Starbuck.
2. Ahab is trying to convince Starbuck to join the hunt for Moby Dick.
3. Ahab boosts Starbuck's ego by calling him "the best lance out of all Nantucket," de-emphasizes the danger of the hunt, and mentions the crew's endorsement of the mission.

Vocabulary

1. d 2. g 3. e 4. b 5. a

Academic Vocabulary

Possible answer: Her main authority for her claims about the causes of the War of 1812 was a general who left behind a careful account of the war.

Focus

Summary

A day after their whaling ship has sunk, the survivors are divided among three small boats in the middle of the Pacific. They plan how to seek help and how to divide up their food.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

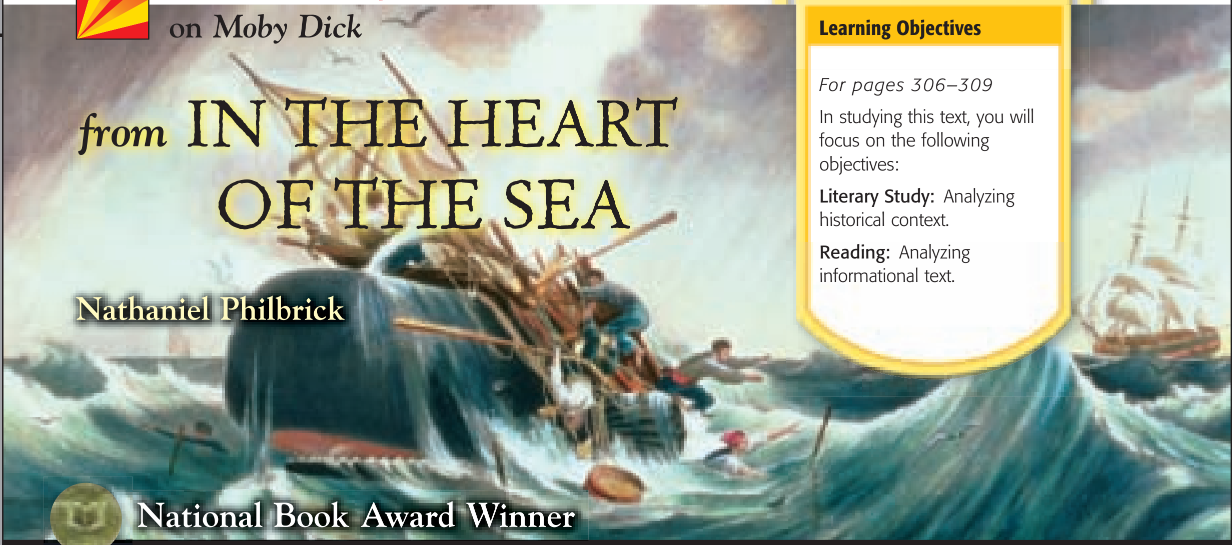
Analyze Historical Context Before students read this passage, encourage them to recall the details they found most memorable in the excerpts of Moby-Dick they have read. These details will be useful in constructing their two-column charts.

For an activity related to this selection, see Unit 2 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 166–174.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 9.0
DRP: 67
Lexile: 1150



from IN THE HEART OF THE SEA

Nathaniel Philbrick

National Book Award Winner

Learning Objectives

For pages 306–309

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing historical context.

Reading: Analyzing informational text.

Set a Purpose for Reading

Read to discover the historical basis for Melville's novel Moby-Dick.

Build Background

In 1820 a sperm whale sank the Nantucket whaling ship Essex. The crew was lost at sea for four months; eight survived. This event inspired Herman Melville's Moby-Dick. In the chapters "Ahab" and "The Quarter-Deck" (see pages 296–303), Melville models his portrayal of Captain Ahab on first mate Owen Chase's account of the tragedy. The following selection, from historian Nathaniel Philbrick's nonfiction book, describes the Essex crew's first days stranded at sea.

Reading Strategy Analyze Historical Context

Analyzing historical context involves gathering background information and exploring social forces that influenced the writing of a literary work. As you read, take notes on the historical context for Melville's tale. Use a two-column chart like the one below.

World of Ahab	World of Owen Chase

The Sperm Whale in a Flurry (showing reversed) from The Whale Fishery, published by Currier & Ives. After Louis Ambroise Garneray. Colour lithograph. Peabody Essex Museum, Salem, MA.

As darkness approached at the end of the first day, the wind built steadily, kicking up a steep, irregular chop.[1] The Essex whaleboats were hybrids—built for rowing but now adapted to sail—and the men were still learning how they handled. Instead of a rudder, each boat was equipped with a steering oar. This eighteen-foot lever enabled a rowed whaleboat to spin around in its own length, but it was not so effective in guiding a sailboat, and required the helmsman to stand at the cumbersome oar. At this early stage in the voyage, the whaleboats were dangerously overloaded. Instead of five hundred pounds of whaling equipment, each boat contained close to a thousand pounds of bread, water, and tortoises,[2] and waves broke over the built-up gunnels[3] and soaked the men. The boats were also without centerboards or skegs[4] to help them track through the water, forcing the helmsmen to tug 1

---

1. Here, chop means "waves."
2. Tortoises were commonly kept aboard whaleships to be used as food for the crew.
3. A gunnel is the upper edge of a boat's side.
4. A skeg is the rear, or stern, of a ship's keel, or main timber. A centerboard is a retractable keel.

Vocabulary Practice

Context Clues Remind students that context clues sometimes take the form of definitions. Write these examples on the board and have students identify the definitions of the underlined words:

- When ships met at sea, the sailors held a get-together, or gam. (get-together)
- The boat hung from the side of the ship on a davit, a type of crane. (a type of crane)
- The whales scooped up brit—tiny sea animals floating near the surface. (tiny sea animals floating near the surface)

Have students pick several words from the selection and write sentences containing context clues.

and push their steering oars as their little, deeply laden boats corkscrewed in the turbulent seas.

Each boat-crew was divided into two watches. While half the men attempted to rest—curling up with the Galapagos tortoises in the bilge[5] or leaning uncomfortably against the seats—the others steered, tended the sails, and bailed. They also attempted to keep an eye on the other boats, which would sometimes disappear entirely from view when they dipped down into the trough of a wave.

2 At the start it had been decided that every effort would be made to keep the three boats together. Together they could help if one of them ran into trouble; together they could keep one anothers' spirits up. “[U]naided, and unencouraged by each other,” Chase[6] observed, “there were with us many whose weak minds, I am confident, would have sunk under the dismal retrospections of the past catastrophe, and who did not possess either sense or firmness enough to contemplate our approaching destiny, without the cheering of some more determined countenance than their own.”

First Mate Owen Chase

There was also a more practical reason for staying together: there was not enough navigational equipment to go around. Pollard[7] and Chase each had a compass, a quadrant, and a copy of Bowditch's Navigator, but Joy[8] had nothing. If his boat-crew should become separated from the other two, they would be unable to find their way across the ocean.

Night came on. Although moon and starlight still made it possible to detect the ghostly paleness of the whaleboats' sails, the men's field of vision shrank dramatically in the darkness even as their perception of sounds was heightened.

The whaleboats' clinker, or lapstrake, construction (with planks overlapping, resembling the clapboards of a house) made them much noisier than a smooth-bottomed boat, and the fussy, fluted sound of water licking up against their boats' lapped sides would accompany them for the duration of the voyage.

Even at night the crews were able to maintain a lively three-way conversation among the boats. The subject on everyone's mind was of course the “means and prospects of our deliverance.” It was agreed that their best chance of survival lay in happening upon a whaleship. The Essex had sunk about three hundred miles north of the Offshore Ground.[9] They still had about five days of sailing before they entered the Ground, where, they desperately hoped, they would come across a whaler.

A circumstance in their favor was that, unlike merchant vessels, whaleships almost always had a lookout posted at the masthead, so in whaling territory they had a better chance of being seen. Against them was the immensity of the Offshore Ground. It encompassed an enormous amount of ocean—more than twice the area of the state of Texas, a rectangle about three hundred miles north to south and almost two thousand miles from east to west. There were at least seven whaleships on the Offshore Ground at this time. But even if there were double that number, the odds were poor that three whaleboats sailing along a straight line through the Ground (which might take only four or five days to cross) would be spotted by a ship.

One possibility was to extend their time in the Offshore Ground and actively search for whalers. But that was a gamble. If they searched the region and didn't find a ship, they would jeopardize their chances of reaching

---

5. In this context bilge means “the lowest part of a ship's hull.”
6. Owen Chase was the first mate aboard the Essex.
7. George Pollard was the captain of the Essex.
8. Matthew Joy was second mate aboard the Essex.
9. The Offshore Ground was a heavily whaled expanse of ocean off the coast of Peru.

Teach

Big Idea 2

The Power of Darkness

Explain to students that the crew of the Essex faced a terrible fate after their ship was sunk. Some survivors committed murder, some went insane, many engaged in cannibalism, and most died from starvation.

Write these questions on the board and ask students to keep the questions in mind as they read:

- How do real-life tragedies, such as the Essex disaster, affect my view of Emerson's optimism?
- What was it about these events that attracted Melville's imagination?

APPROACHING Encourage students to copy these questions on paper before they begin reading.

View the Art ★

Capturing a Sperm Whale is a colored engraving made from a painting by the American artist William Page (1811–1885), who based his image on a sketch drawn in the 1830s by the whaler C. B. Hulsart.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Explain that conditional sentences present events linked by cause-effect relationships: If A happens, then B will follow. Give this example: “If his boat-crew should become separated from the other two, they would be unable to find their way across the ocean.” Ask students for other examples from the selection.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Explain that this excerpt describes the crew lost at sea after their ship, the Essex, sank. Guide comprehension by having students find answers to these questions:

- How were the smaller Essex whaleboats outfitted?
- How is the crew divided for the search?
- Why do they keep the three boats together?
- Why are they looking for a whaleship?
- What problems do they have?

Ask students to use sticky notes to mark places in the text with answers to the questions.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Historical Context Ask: Why do you think Melville limited his adaptation of the Essex tragedy to those events related to the ship's sinking? (Students might argue that Melville was more interested in the allegory of the whale than in the human tragedy that followed. Students might also point out that disasters at sea were common, but the sinking of a ship by a whale was unique.)

Cross-Curricular Link ☆

Biology The sperm whale's skull contains the spermaceti organ. This massive organ can extend through 40 percent of the whale's length and hold upwards of 530 gallons of sperm oil. Sperm oil was used widely during earlier eras in fuels, lubricants, and cosmetics.

The sea chest of Captain George Pollard

South America before their food supplies ran out. As it was, they would be entering the western extreme of the Ground and would have a difficult time heading east against the southeasterly trades.[10]

There was another factor influencing their decision to continue on with the original plan. After having fallen victim to such a seemingly random and inexplicable attack, the men felt an overpowering need to reclaim at least some control of their own destiny. Being sighted by a whaleship would, according to Chase, not "depend on our own exertions, but on chance alone." Reaching South America, on the other hand, depended "on our own labors." From Chase's perspective, this made all the difference and demanded that they not "lose sight, for one moment, of the strong probabilities which, under Divine Providence, there were of our reaching land by the route we had prescribed to ourselves."

The plan had one iron requirement: they had to make their provisions last two months. Each man would get six ounces of hardtack and half a pint of water a day. Hardtack was a simple dried bread made out of flour and water. Baked into a moisture-free rock to prevent spoilage, hardtack had to be broken into small pieces or soaked in water before it was eaten, if a sailor didn't want to crack a tooth.

The daily ration was equivalent to six slices of bread, and it provided about five hundred calories. Chase estimated that this amounted to less than a third of the nourishment required by "an ordinary man." Modern dietary analysis indicates that for a five-foot, eight-inch person weighing 145 pounds, these provisions met about a quarter of his daily energy needs. True, the men of the Essex had more than just bread; they had tortoises. Each tortoise was a pod of fresh meat, fat, and blood that was capable of providing as many as 4,500 calories per man—the equivalent of nine days of hardtack. Yet, even augmented by the tortoises, their daily rations amounted to a starvation diet. If they did succeed in reaching South America in sixty days, each man knew he would be little more than a breathing skeleton.

But as they would soon discover, their greatest concern was not food but rather water. The human body, which is 70 percent water, requires a bare minimum of a pint a day to remove its waste products. The men of the Essex would have to make do with half that daily amount. If they experienced any hot weather, the deficit would only increase.

That first night of their journey, Chase, Pollard, and Joy distributed the rations of bread and water to their boat-crews. It was two days after the sinking now, and the men's interest in food had finally returned; the bread was quickly eaten. There was something else they craved: tobacco. A whaleman almost always had a quid[11] of tobacco in his mouth, going through more than seventy pounds of it in a single voyage. In addition to all their other woes, the crew of the Essex had to contend with the jittery withdrawal symptoms associated with nicotine addiction.

After the meager meal, the men not on watch went to sleep. "Nature became at last worn out with the watchings and anxieties of the two preceding nights," Chase recalled, "and sleep came insensibly upon us." But as his men fell into what he judged to be a dreamless stupor, Chase found himself in the middle of a waking nightmare.

Unable to sleep for the third night in a row, he continued to dwell obsessively on the circumstances of the ship's sinking. He could not

---

[10] The trades are trade winds, or winds that always move in the same direction.

[11] A quid means "a cut of something chewable."

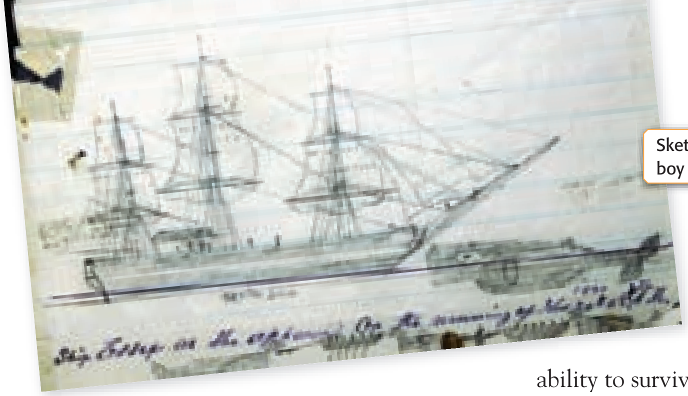
Writing Practice

Analyze Data Display this sentence for students: "Modern dietary analysis indicates that for a five-foot, eight-inch person weighing 145 pounds, these provisions met about a quarter of his daily energy needs." Explain to students that 2,000 calories per day is an average—and that active people and athletes often need more than 2,000 calories per day to fuel their bodies.

Ask students to complete a three-column chart with these heads: "Rations," "Calories per Ration," "Calories per Day Needed to Survive." For example, the third column would indicate that a man needs at least 2,000 calories per day. Remind students that the crew had to make their provisions last for two months. Tell students to also do some research on the effects of starvation and malnutrition.

Have students use the data from their charts and from their research to write a paragraph drawing conclusions about the effect of the crew's diet and its possible outcome.



Sketch of the attack by cabin boy Thomas Nickerson get the creature out of his mind: "[T]he horrid aspect and revenge of the whale, wholly engrossed my reflections." In his desperate attempts to find some explanation for how a normally passive creature could suddenly become a predator, Chase was plagued by what psychologists call a "tormenting memory"—a common response to disasters. Forced to relive the trauma over and over again, the survivor finds larger, hidden forces operating through the incident. The philosopher William James felt this compulsion firsthand some years later. After the San Francisco earthquake of 1906, he wrote: "I realize now how inevitable were men's earlier mythological versions [of disaster] and how artificial and against the grain of our spontaneous perceiving are the later habits which science educates us."

For most disaster victims, the repeated flashbacks of a tormenting memory have a therapeutic value, gradually weaning the sufferer from anxieties that might otherwise interfere with his ability to survive. There are some, however, who cannot rid themselves of the memory. Melville, building upon Chase's account, would make his 1 Captain Ahab a man who never emerged from the psychic depths in which Chase had writhed these three nights. Just as Chase was convinced that the whale that attacked the Essex exhibited "decided, calculating mischief," so was Ahab haunted by a sense of the white whale's "outrageous strength, with an inscrutable malice sinewing[12] it."

Locked in his own private chamber of horrors, Ahab resolved that his only escape was through hunting down and killing Moby Dick: "How can the prisoner reach outside except by thrusting through the wall? To me, the white whale is that wall, shoved near to me." Chase, on a tiny boat a thousand miles from land, did not have the possibility of revenge. Ahab was fighting a symbol; Chase and his shipmates were fighting for their lives.

---

[12] Sinewing means "supporting."

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Are you surprised that the whale's attack on the Essex haunted Chase? Why or why not?

Analyze and Evaluate

2. After the attack, the Essex crew "felt an overpowering need to reclaim at least some control of their own destiny." Do you think that this need for control drove Ahab's obsessive quest? Explain.

Connect

3. In an interview, Philbrick states, "I think all of us wonder while reading a survival tale, what would I have done in this situation?" What questions did you think about as you read the story? Explain.

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Historical Context Discuss the two-column charts that students created while they read this passage. Make sure that they have included information exclusive to each world, as well as similarities and differences between the two.

Cultural History ☆

During the nearly four months that the crew was stranded at sea, they traveled approximately 4,500 miles. To fend off starvation, the crew engaged in cannibalism. Ironically, the decision to sail toward South America, instead of the much closer Marquesas Islands, resulted from a fear that the native inhabitants of this island chain were cannibals.

Assess

1. No, because the attack and the situation in which the crew were left were unusual. Yes, Chase should have been prepared for such an event, considering the level of violence commonly employed by whalers.
2. Yes, a need for control is what drove Ahab to hunt Moby Dick: Melville refers to Ahab as "supreme lord or dictator." No, as Starbuck states, Ahab's drive is really a need for vengeance.
3. Students may ask about their own chances for survival. Some may think about the history of whaling or the reasons for the whale's attack.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 119–120.

Writing Workshop

Reflective Essay

Focus

Bellringer

Display word images of nature, such as photographs of forest fires, thunderstorms, birds in flight, or trees lining a city street.

Ask: What feelings or thoughts do these images of nature evoke? How do different aspects of nature affect our lives?

Ask students to reflect on their most memorable experiences with nature as they learn how to write a reflective essay about nature.

Summary

In this workshop, students will write and present a reflective essay. Students will follow the stages of the writing process, including prewriting, drafting, revising, and editing. In addition, two mini-lessons on elaborating ideas and correcting comma splices are provided.

Learning Objectives

For pages 310–317

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objective:

Writing: Writing a reflective essay using the writing process.

Writing Workshop

Reflective Essay

Literature Connection In "Nature," as in other writing, Emerson often looks back, or reflects, on his experiences and uses them as jumping-off places for exploring his thoughts on a subject.

> "Crossing a bare common, in snow puddles, at twilight, under a clouded sky, without having in my thoughts any occurrence of special good fortune, I have enjoyed a perfect exhilaration."

In a reflective essay, you narrate and describe a personal experience to show both what the experience taught you and what it might teach others. To write a successful essay, you will need to learn the goals of reflective writing and the strategies to achieve those goals.

Checklist: Features of Reflective Essays

Goals	Strategies
To retell a personal experience	☑ Use narrative details to tell a story with a clear beginning, middle, and end ☑ Include precise, relevant details
To connect with an audience	☑ Use first-person point of view ☑ Use fresh, natural, vivid language and varied sentences ☑ Use effective rhetorical devices, such as parallelism, repetition, and analogy
To reflect on a personal experience	☑ Explore the significance ☑ Connect the experience to broader themes or abstract concepts

Writing Process

At any stage of a writing process, you may think of new ideas. Feel free to return to earlier stages as you write.

Prewrite

Draft

Revise

Focus Lesson: Elaborate Ideas

Edit & Proofread

Focus Lesson: Comma Splices

Present

Assignment: Write a Reflective Essay

Write a reflective essay of about 1,500 words that describes one of your experiences and expresses the insight you gained. As you work, keep your audience and purpose in mind.

Audience: peers and classmates

Purpose: to explore the significance of a personal experience

Literature Online

Writing and Research For prewriting, drafting, and revising tools, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Workshop Resources

Print Materials

- Unit 2 Teaching Resources pp. 176-178
- Writing Kit
- Success in Writing: Research and Reports

Transparencies

- Grammar and Language Transparency 67
- Writing Transparency 11, 12, 13, 14, 15

Technology

- Literature Online: Writing Resources and Grammar Resources, www.glencoe.com
- Online Essay Grader, www.glencoe.com
- Student Presentation Builder on StudentWorks Plus CD-ROM
- Media Workshop DVD
- Online Student Edition

Analyze a Professional Model

In her autobiography, Pulitzer Prize-winning author Annie Dillard reflects on the significance of a childhood encounter with a moth. As you read the following passage, note how Dillard uses both narrative and descriptive details to convey her unique voice. Pay close attention to the comments in the margin. They point out features that you might want to include in your own reflective essay.

From An American Childhood by Annie Dillard

At school I saw a searing sight. It turned me to books; it turned me to jelly; it turned me much later, I suppose, into an early version of a runaway, a scapegrace. It was only a freshly hatched Polyphemus moth crippled because its mason jar was too small.

The mason jar sat on the teacher's desk; the big moth emerged inside it. The moth had clawed a hole in its hot cocoon and crawled out, as if agonizingly, over the course of an hour, one leg at a time; we children watched around the desk, transfixed. After it emerged, the wet, mashed thing turned around walking on the green jar's bottom, then painstakingly climbed the twig with which the jar was furnished.

There, at the twig's top, the moth shook its sodden clumps of wings. When it spread those wings—those beautiful wings—blood would fill their veins, and the birth fluids on the wings' frail sheets would harden to make them tough as sails. But the moth could not spread its wide wings at all; the jar was too small. The wings could not fill, so they hardened while they were still crumpled from the cocoon. A smaller moth could have spread its wings to their utmost in that mason jar, but the Polyphemus moth was big. Its gold furred body was almost as big as a mouse. Its brown, yellow, pink, and blue wings would have extended six inches from tip to tip, if there had been no mason jar. It would have been as big as a wren.

The teacher let the deformed creature go. We all left the classroom and paraded outside behind the teacher with pomp and

Real-World Connection

Some magazines and Web sites offer opportunities for high-school students to publish essays and creative writing. Use a search engine to locate reputable publishers, or ask a reference librarian for help.

First-Person Point of View

Use the pronoun I to speak directly to your reader

Audience

Use fresh, natural, vivid language and varied sentences.

Narrative Details

Include precise, relevant details.

Descriptive Details

Show, don't tell. Use vivid details to create a clear picture.

Reflective Essay

Teach

Big Idea

Optimism and Individualism Have students make a connection between the reflective essay and optimism and individualism. Explain that Romantic writers such as Emerson and Thoreau often used reflective writing in their journals and observations.

Ask: What connection exists between the reflective essay and Romanticism's emphasis on individualism? (Individualism stresses the value of the ordinary person and his or her views on life.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Ask students what words they see within the words reflective (reflect) and individualism (individual). Help students remember the meaning of the words suffix and root word. The additions -ive and -ism are suffixes. Discuss the meaning of the word reflect and associated terms such as reflection (in a mirror). Ask them to describe an individual. Discuss individualism. Tell students to reflect on their personal experiences as they write to find characteristics that make them an individual.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Explain that adjectives are words that describe people, things, actions, and feelings. Display the sentence: "After it emerged, the wet, mashed thing . . . ." Have students point out the adjectives.

Writing Workshop

Reflective Essay

Teach

Writing Skills

Show vs. Tell The writing principle of "show vs. tell" means that a writer should show readers the setting, plot, and details through descriptive imagery rather than simply tell them. Ask students to point out examples of how An American Childhood shows rather than tells. (Dillard does not say that she feels sorry for the moth, but implies it with her vivid description of the insect's emergence from its cocoon.)

Sentence Variety Say: Reread the paragraph that ends, "I watched it go." Note how Dillard creates fluency and drama in her writing by varying her sentence length.

Cross-Curricular Link ☆

Biology The Polyphemus moth feeds on tree leaves such as oak and maple. The insect's green-and-white larva eventually metamorphoses into the colorful moth Dillard describes. Some varieties of the Polyphemus moth are used for commercial silk.

circumstance. She bounced the moth from its jar and set it on the school's asphalt driveway. The moth set out walking. It could only heave the golden wrinkly clumps where its wings should have been; it could only crawl down the school driveway on its six frail legs. The moth crawled down the driveway toward the rest of Shadyside, an area of fine houses, expensive apartments, and fashionable shops. It crawled down the driveway because its shriveled wings were glued shut. It crawled down the driveway toward Shadyside, one of several sections of town where people like me were expected to settle after college, renting an apartment until they married one of the boys and bought a house. I watched it go.

I knew that this particular moth, the big walking moth, could not travel more than a few yards before a bird or cat began to eat it, or a car ran over it. Nevertheless, it was crawling with what seemed wonderful vigor, as if, I thought at the time, it was still excited from being born. I watched it go till the bell rang and I had to go in. I have told this story before, and may yet tell it again, to lay the moth's ghost, for I still see it crawl down the broad black driveway, and I still see its golden wing clumps heave.

Rhetorical Devices
Use repetition, parallelism, analogies, or other devices to retell your experience.

Significance
Connect your experience to broader themes or abstract concepts; make or imply a generalization about life.

Reading-Writing Connection Think about the writing techniques that you just encountered and try them out in the reflective essay that you write.

Writing Practice

Create Outlines An outline like this allows students to brainstorm ideas and map out a sequence of events at the same time:

1. I found injured bird.
    A. I called veterinarian.
    B. I took bird to animal rescuer.
2. Bird could not be saved.
    A. Bird was old.
    B. Animal rescuer helped other animals.
3. Concern for animals can coexist with tough-mindedness.

Have students create an outline of the Dillard selection.

Prewriting

Gather Ideas Prewriting is the stage of the writing process during which you generate ideas. You can use many different strategies:

- If you keep a journal, you might review it for ideas. Thoreau referred to his journal as he wrote Walden.
- Look at family videos or photograph albums to recall important or formative events in your life.
- Find memory triggers. Start by dividing your life into a series of stages. For each stage, list one or more key personal experiences that you can recall and briefly state why they were significant.

Age/Stage in Life	Experience	Significance
Up to Kindergarten	Fight with my best friend Tris over his robots	Learned that I couldn't have everything my friends had
Elementary School	Sat the bench all season in Minor A baseball	Learned to value the team more than my own efforts
High School	Found injured starling	Learned different ways of caring about nature

Choose a Subject After reviewing some of your experiences, choose one of them as a subject for your reflective essay.

Talk About Your Ideas Meet with a partner to help focus on what you will say to your readers and how you will say it. Think about your essay as a conversation on the page in which you, the writer, do all the talking. To help develop your writing voice, take turns telling each other the most vivid details of your experience. As you and your partner speak, listen to the style of your language and your original approach to ideas. Jot down notes and refer to them when you are developing your essay.

Next, explore the significance of your experience.

- How did you feel about your experience at the time?
- Looking back, do you feel different about your experience now?

Sequence the Events

Test your idea for writing by making a sequence chain or storyboard. Before you begin drafting, decide whether you can retell a clear series of events that leads you to a specific realization about life.

Avoid Plagiarism

An older friend or sibling may have written on this topic for the same class last year. Resist the temptation to resubmit someone else's work! For one thing, your teacher may recall it and fail your work as a result. You will also forego an important opportunity to develop your own writing skills.

Teach

Writing Process

Prewrite Some students find it difficult to recognize how their own experiences have caused them to change. These students will benefit from class time spent brainstorming about the kinds of experiences in nature that are most likely to influence a young person, such as moving to a new place where the landscape is very different; starting a new outdoor activity that becomes very important; or experiencing an unexpected success or failure that is influenced by an event in nature.

Writing Skills

Observation Dillard used close observation to help her describe her subject. She watched the moth as long as she could, "till the bell rang," and described each detail she observed. Tell students to think back as if they are "watching" the subject they are writing about, and to record each detail with close observation.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging Have students work in small groups to brainstorm ideas for their essays. Have each student fill in a cluster diagram as group members volunteer ideas. Remind students that there are no bad ideas in brainstorming. They can select the ideas that work best for them after they write down many ideas. Give students some examples of times they might write about:

- when nature took care of them
- when nature seemed to be against them
- when they noticed something in nature for the first time
- when they first saw a landscape that was very different from the one they knew

Have pairs of students exchange webs and ask each other questions that will help them narrow down their ideas.

Teach

Writing Process

Draft Direct students to the opening sentence of the model essay. Explain that the opening should catch readers' attention and make them want to continue. Have students create alternate opening sentences for the model and share their ideas with the class.

Writing Skills

First-Person Point of View

Answer: The first-person point of view helps you understand the author's thoughts and feelings. If this were written in third-person, readers might not feel as much empathy for the bird.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Make sure that English learners know which pronouns indicate first-person point of view. Ask: What words tell you this is first-person point of view? (I, my, me)

Rhetorical Devices

Answer: Asking a question engages the reader; it encourages the reader to think of a response, thus making the tone more conversational.

Narrative Purpose

Answer: The writer structures the essay chronologically.

Draft

Just Jump In When you begin writing, don't get bogged down trying to find the perfect word or to make your sentences flow smoothly. You can revise later. Do stop occasionally and reflect on your work. If your writing is going in an unexpected direction, you may want to follow it. You could gain new insights about your experience—and yourself.

Analyze a Workshop Model

Here is a final draft of a reflective essay. Read it, and use your answers to the questions in the margins to guide you as you write.

Writing Frames

As you read the workshop model, think about the writer's use of the following frames:

Along the way, I began to think about ______. Thinking about ______ later, it was clear that ______. My ______ taught me that ______.

Consider using frames like these in your own reflective essay.

First-Person Point of View

What are the advantages of using the first-person point of view? What effect would these sentences have if they were written in the third-person?

Rhetorical Devices

How does asking a question invite the audience's participation?

Narrative Purpose

How does the writer structure the essay?

Animal 911

I generally like nature to keep its distance—wild things belong outside. So when I saw a white-flecked feather on the stairs leading up to the second floor, I knew it was a bad sign. I followed the trail of fluff to the kitchen, where I found the rest of the bird. I didn't know what kind of bird it was—just a small round creature with a long bill. It had somehow survived a meeting with our family cat. By the time I managed to corner and capture the bird, it seemed to be in deep shock. I wasn't feeling too well myself.

I had no way of knowing how seriously injured the poor creature was. Should I simply put the bird outside on the porch and let nature—the neighborhood cats—take its course? I called the vet. He suggested I get in touch with a Mrs. Roberts, who lived not far away. This woman took in injured animals that people brought her and cared for them until they were well enough to return to the wild. She sounded like just the person I needed. I put my injured bird into a shoe box lined with tissue and took the bus to see her.

Along the way, I began to think about the person I was about to meet. What would Mrs. Roberts look like? Since she was in the business of looking after hurt animals, I began to picture her as a very sweet and gentle sort of person—sort of cuddly. I was wrong.

When I got to her house, I rang the bell, then walked around to the back. I knew immediately I had come to the right place. There were large screened-in areas, where I could see different

Writing Practice

Passive Voice Explain that students should avoid passive voice in writing and instead use active voice. In active voice, the subject performs an action. Passive voice, the opposite of active voice, tends to overuse linking verbs such as am, is, was, were, be and been, thus confusing the reader.

Write out the following examples:

Shawn ate the last slice of pizza. (active)

The last slice of pizza was eaten by Shawn. (passive)

Ask students to write a sentence with passive voice and a second version of the same sentence using an active voice.

animals, including a deer. A large, fierce-looking bird—some kind of hawk, I guess—sat on a post. It glared at me as if I were a mouse. As I waited, I was startled by a clear, low voice behind me.

"May I help you?" I spun around, nearly dropping my shoe box.

"Mrs. Roberts?" She simply nodded in reply. My cuddly fantasy of an animal rescuer was quickly replaced by a far tougher reality. She was an old woman but still very strong and sturdy, with dark eyes and sharp features. She looked a bit like a hawk herself.

"I have an injured bird here," I began, offering her my shoe box.

As she took the box and removed the lid, she seemed to smile. It may have been the sight of the tissue paper I had used. She probably thought it looked like a doll bed created by a little kid. She picked up the bird in one strong, brown hand and studied it for a time before returning it to the box and replacing the cover.

"It's a starling," Mrs. Roberts said, as if she understood I wouldn't know. "I'm afraid there's nothing I can do for it."

"Really?" I asked, feeling a sharp stab of disappointment.

"It's a very old bird," she explained.

This comment was also a bit of shock. During my bus ride, I had decided—based on no knowledge at all—that the bird was young. Part of my fantasy had been visiting the bird as it got better.

"People bring me so many animals that I have to limit myself to aiding those that are worth saving," Mrs. Roberts explained. "This starling just isn't. Sorry. I'll dispose of the bird for you."

I was grateful she had relieved me of responsibility for the injured bird, but I still felt that somehow Mrs. Roberts didn't "care" for nature in the way I had expected. She wasn't cuddly. Thinking about her later, however, it was clear that she cared very much; but she only applied her concern to creatures that could benefit from it. My meeting with Mrs. Roberts taught me that to love nature does not mean to be sentimental about wild creatures. You can be both realistic and caring.

Narrative Details

In what ways are these details relevant and precise?

Audience

How do variations in sentence structure and the use of fresh, natural language help to create interest?

Narrative Details/Significance

How does the use of dialogue show your readers what is happening? How does the writer use it to relate the incidents to more abstract ideas?

Teach

Writing Skills

Narrative Details

Answer: The author uses descriptive words that help the reader see what is happening. The words that describe the bird—fierce-looking, gripped, glared—create a feeling of tension.

Audience

Answer: The writer avoids the use of clichés, which are overused phrases in writing such as "tried-and-true" or "as easy as taking candy from a baby." Fresh language keeps the audience curious about what the writer will say next.

Narrative Details/Significance

Answer: Dialogue helps readers feel as if they are experiencing the scene as it happens, putting them in the middle of the action. The dialogue demonstrates the contrast between the narrator's expectations and reality.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Explain that students can write descriptive details using figurative language to compare unlike things. For example, the line "She looked a bit like a hawk herself" uses figurative speech—a simile. Encourage students to compare two unlike things by using the connecting words like or as.

Intermediate Explain how to write dialogue by pointing out phrases and writing them on the board:

- To show that Mrs. Roberts is speaking: "It's a starling," Mrs. Roberts said.
- To show order of punctuation: "Really?" I asked. The question mark appears before the quotation mark.
- To add details to describe how something is said: "Really?" I asked, feeling a sharp stab of disappointment. The final phrase helps the reader understand how the word "Really" is expressed.

Teach

Writing Process

Revise Writing workshops can create a sense of community in the classroom. After students have revised their reflective essays, ask volunteers to read their work aloud. If time permits, place students into small groups and have them read each other's essays.

Writing Skills

Elaborate with Details

Tell students that elaboration is the support or development of a main idea with facts, statistics, sensory details, or examples. Ask students how Dillard uses sensory details in her essay to make the moth appealing to the reader. Encourage students to elaborate in their own writing using details that appeal to the five senses.

APPROACHING Explain the sensory details in the revision example: "the sight of the tissue paper" (sight, touch); "injured bird" (sight, touch); "doll bed created by a little kid" (sight, touch).

Revise

Peer Review Ask a peer reviewer to help you assess your essay. Talk over your ideas and ask your partner for feedback. Identify any strengths and weaknesses you find. Remember to refer to the traits of strong writing. Use the checklist below to evaluate and strengthen each other's writing.

Checklist

- ☑ Do you tell a story with a clear beginning, middle, and end?
- ☑ Do you include precise, relevant details?
- ☑ Do you vividly describe the details and vary your sentences?
- ☑ Do you use first-person point of view?
- ☑ Do you include effective rhetorical devices?
- ☑ Do you connect the experience to broader themes or abstract concepts?

Traits of Strong Writing

Include these traits of strong writing to express your ideas effectively.

Ideas
Organization
Voice
Word Choice
Sentence Fluency
Conventions
Presentation

For more information on using the Traits of Strong Writing, see pages R30–R32.

Focus Lesson

Elaborate Ideas

Give your readers a detailed picture of what is happening and when. Elaboration is a technique you can use to include details that develop, support, or explain the ideas presented in your essay. Here is a sentence from the Workshop Model followed by three kinds of elaboration—reasons, descriptions, and dialogue—you might want to try.

Draft:

As she took the box and removed the lid, I noticed she seemed to smile.

Revision:

As she took the box and removed the lid, I noticed she seemed to smile. It might have been the sight of the tissue paper I had used.[1] She probably thought it looked like a doll bed created by a little kid.[2] "It's a starling," Mrs. Roberts said.[3]

1: Reasons 2: Descriptions 3: Dialogue

Word Choice

This academic vocabulary appears in the student model:

benefit (be' nə fit) v. 1. to draw an advantage from; 2. to promote the well-being of; She only applied her concern to creatures that could benefit from it. Using academic vocabulary may help strengthen your writing. Try to use one or two academic vocabulary words in your reflective essay. See the complete list on pages R89–R91.

Literature Online

Writing and Research For editing and publishing tools, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Writing Practice

Describe Art and Photographs

To help students gain practice in developing details, have them describe art or photographs using adjectives. Provide magazines and books, and ask students to describe an image that appeals to them. Ask them to make a list of five adjectives using the five senses for each piece of art or photograph. To get students started, offer these questions:

- What subjects are in the image? How are light and color used for effect?
- Can you feel anything from the image? Is it cool or hot?
- Does the image suggest any of the other senses—how something might taste, sound, or smell?

Edit and Proofread

Get It Right Proofread your final draft for errors in grammar, usage, mechanics, and spelling. See Language Handbook, pages R42–R61.

Focus Lesson

Correct Comma Splices

A comma splice is a type of run-on sentence that occurs when two main clauses are joined only by a comma.

Comma Splice:

I was grateful she had relieved me of responsibility for the injured bird, I still felt that somehow Mrs. Roberts didn't "care" for nature in the way I had expected.

Solution A: Replace the comma with end punctuation, such as a period or a question mark, and begin a new sentence.

I was grateful she had relieved me of responsibility for the injured bird. I still felt that somehow Mrs. Roberts didn't "care" for nature in the way I had expected.

Solution B: Place a semicolon between the two main clauses.

I was grateful she had relieved me of responsibility for the injured bird; I still felt that somehow Mrs. Roberts didn't "care" for nature in the way I had expected.

Solution C: Add a coordinating conjunction after the comma.

I was grateful she had relieved me of responsibility for the injured bird, but I still felt that somehow Mrs. Roberts didn't "care" for nature in the way I had expected.

Present

Appearance Matters Make your essay inviting to read. Handwritten papers should be neat and legible. If you are working on a word processor, double-space the lines of text and use a readable font, or typeface. Other design elements—such as boldfaced headings—can help you present information effectively and make your essay look more appealing. Be sure to check with your teacher about presentation guidelines.

Peer Review Tips

A classmate may ask you to read his or her reflective essay. Take your time and jot down notes as you read so you can give constructive feedback. Use the following questions to get started:

- Can you identify a story with a clear beginning, middle, and end?
- Do you understand the significance of the events and their connection to broader ideas and concepts?

Word-Processing

Did you know that font helps to convey tone? Some fonts telegraph a message of playfulness or friendliness; others evoke computer systems or laws inscribed on stone tablets from the days of the ancient Greeks. For most essay writing, choose common, conservative, highly readable fonts such as those found in your textbooks and newspapers.

Writer's Portfolio

Place a copy of your reflective essay in your portfolio to review later.

Teach

Writing Skills

Edit Explain to students that commas and semicolons organize ideas and show the relationship between ideas. Remind students that a semicolon is needed when separating two related sentences and that a comma should be used to separate a related phrase.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Check to make sure that English learners understand the difference between the comma and semicolon by providing them with the symbols. Explain the difference between a colon and a semicolon.

Writer's Technique ☆

Dillard on Revision "You must demolish the work and start over. You can save some of the sentences, like bricks. It will be a miracle if you can save some of the paragraphs, no matter how excellent in themselves or hard won. You can waste a year worrying about it, or you can get it over with now."

—Annie Dillard

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Help students by listing the main rules for commas as outlined here. Then read each corresponding example sentence aloud and leave pauses for the commas. Ask students to explain where the commas should appear in the sentences. Have students write the sentences with the commas inserted.

- Items in a series: Birds, squirrels, and rabbits live here.
- Long introductory prepositional phrases: In the early days of spring, the birds fly north.
- Introductory participles: Fearing the worst, I took the bird to her house.
- Before and, or, or but to join main clauses: Caring for animals is rewarding, but it is hard work.

Have students work with a partner to exchange work and identify places where commas may be necessary or misplaced in their own essays.

Focus

Summary

In this workshop, students will learn techniques for planning, rehearsing, and delivering a presentation of a reflective essay.

Teach

Speaking Skills

Ease Stage Fright Some students may be nervous about speaking in front of the class. Share the following strategies to ease students' stage fright:

- Be well prepared, with note cards if needed.
- Imagine you are having a casual conversation with friends.
- Rehearse the speech often.
- Make eye contact with the friendliest faces in the classroom, such as a teacher or friends.

Learning Objectives

For pages 318–319

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objective:

Writing: Delivering a reflective presentation.

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshop

Reflective Presentation

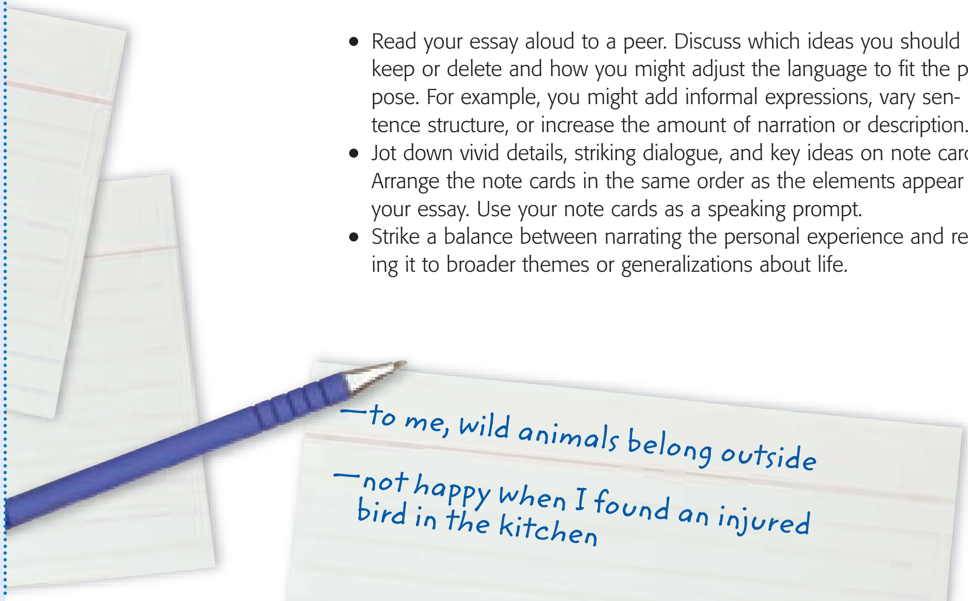
Literature Connection During Ralph Waldo Emerson's lifetime, more Americans probably became acquainted with his ideas from hearing him lecture than from reading his essays. After he spoke in Cincinnati, a newspaper there observed that "without his own language, his manner, his delivery," no report could really convey the effect he created. Emerson's speaking style was very much a part of the appeal of his thoughts. In this workshop, you will deliver an oral presentation of your reflective essay.

Assignment Present your reflective essay to the class.

Plan Your Presentation

When you wrote your reflective essay, you were addressing an audience of readers. When you deliver your reflective presentation, you will be addressing an audience of listeners. Use your essay as a starting point.

- Read your essay aloud to a peer. Discuss which ideas you should keep or delete and how you might adjust the language to fit the purpose. For example, you might add informal expressions, vary sentence structure, or increase the amount of narration or description.
- Jot down vivid details, striking dialogue, and key ideas on note cards. Arrange the note cards in the same order as the elements appear in your essay. Use your note cards as a speaking prompt.
- Strike a balance between narrating the personal experience and relating it to broader themes or generalizations about life.



—to me, wild animals belong outside
—not happy when I found an injured bird in the kitchen

Writing Practice

Plan a Presentation Explain to students that writing key ideas on note cards is similar to developing an outline. The main ideas are the roman numerals (I, II) and the details are listed below the main ideas (A, B). Have students practice by writing an outline for the sample reflective essay "Animal 911." To help them get started, provide the following:

Animal 911

I. Bird found
  A. In deep shock, injured
  B. Help, or not?

After students complete their outlines, tell them to use the outlines as a guide for identifying the most important information and details from their essays.

Create Your Visual Media

Think about how visual media, such as a photograph, collage, drawing, or computer presentation, can make your ideas clearer. Reflect on how symbols, colors, and organization may work within your visual to effectively convey your point. Use the chart below to brainstorm ideas.

Which parts of my essay best reflect my experience or its broader meaning?	What images can I create of my essay to illustrate these parts?	How will I use my choice of media to balance retelling with reflection?

Rehearse

Rehearsing your speech with a partner will strengthen your speaking and listening skills. Your partner can help you identify any flaws that you missed. As you listen to your partner's speech, practice these skills:

- Show your interest by looking at the speaker and maintaining an upright, slightly forward posture.
- Show understanding by responding appropriately with subtle changes in your facial expression or slight movements of your head or hands.

Use some of the verbal and nonverbal techniques below to ensure that your audience understands you and is engaged in what you have to say.

Techniques for Delivering a Reflective Presentation

Verbal Techniques	Nonverbal Techniques
☑ Volume Speak loudly enough so that everyone can hear you.	☑ Posture Stand up tall with your head straight.
☑ Pronunciation Speak clearly, pronouncing all the words.	☑ Eye Contact Make eye contact with people throughout your audience.
☑ Pace Speak at a moderate speed, but vary the rate and use pauses to convey your meaning.	☑ Facial Expressions Vary your facial expressions to reflect what you are saying.
☑ Emphasis Stress important words and ideas.	☑ Gestures Use natural gestures to reinforce your ideas.

Use a Mirror

Practice your gestures in front of a mirror until your body language looks natural.

Speaking Frames

Consider using the following frames in your reflective presentation:

Looking back on it now, I think _____.

At the time, _____, but now _____.

Presentation Tips

Use the following checklist to evaluate your reflective presentation.

Did you effectively adjust your language to turn an essay into an oral presentation?

Did you use visuals to enhance your presentation and to reflect both the experience and its broader meanings?

Did you listen attentively and responsively to others?

Literature Online

Speaking, Listening, and Viewing For project ideas, templates, and presentation tips, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

Teach

Speaking Skills

Use Models Have students listen to an oral reading, such as "Total Eclipse" by Annie Dillard. Ask them to describe Dillard's speaking skills, including her word choice and use of tone and rhythm. Have students include these skills in their own presentations.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Check to make sure that English learners understand the difference between verbal and nonverbal techniques. Explain that they communicate verbally with words and their voices, and nonverbally with the rest of the body.

Listening Skills

Peer Assessment Ask students to respond to each other's speeches, using the following criteria:

- Is there a clear account of the details of the incident?
- Does the speech illustrate feelings as well as actions?
- Does the speech show evidence of self-discovery?
- Does the speaker follow the Techniques for Delivering a Presentation?

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Students may have trouble with the vocabulary in the techniques chart. Explain the terms using visual and auditory clues. For example, read a paragraph on this page with a high and low volume to explain volume. Demonstrate the terms pronunciation, pace, tone, and emphasis as you read. Have students repeat examples back to you. For posture, eye contact, facial expressions, and gestures use body language to define these terms. Ask students to give you examples to show that they understand each term.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Have students present their speech to a partner. Have the listener take notes on these topics: clear order of information, clear enunciation, eye contact and posture, and use of visual aids. Have students switch roles.

Focus

Summary

These pages summarize some of the best-known novels of the early 1800s, including The Last of the Mohicans and The Scarlet Letter. There is also an excerpt from Anthony Trollope's 1879 review of The Scarlet Letter. Annie Dillard's 1974 work, Pilgrim at Tinker Creek, is a twentieth-century Walden.

Teach

Literary History ☆

Clarissa Samuel Richardson's novel Clarissa was an enormous success; it was widely read and critically acclaimed during the Romantic period. Clarissa is an epistolary novel, that is, it is told in the form of letters, written mainly by the heroine. Samuel Johnson said the novel was "the first book in the world for the knowledge it displays of the human heart."

Independent Reading

American Writing: From Novel to Nature

IN THE LATE 1700s, READERS AND CRITICS BEGAN, FOR THE FIRST TIME, to accept the novel as a legitimate literary form. This shift can be attributed partly to the novels of English author Samuel Richardson, which became popular in the mid-1700s. ☆

By the 1820s, however, the first truly American novels emerged. Romanticism started to take hold in Europe, and American writers embraced the movement's celebration of the individual, freedom from old forms, and love of nature.

But it was not only American fiction that thrived in this era—essays by Transcendentalists such as Henry David Thoreau and Ralph Waldo Emerson have inspired both novelists and nonfiction writers from the mid-1800s through today.

The Last of the Mohicans

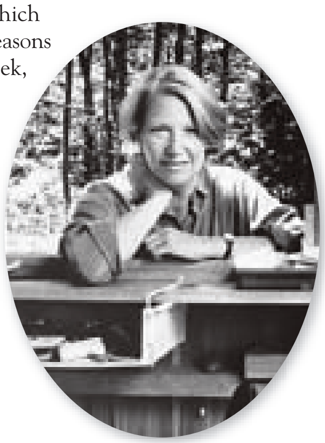
James Fenimore Cooper

James Fenimore Cooper's The Leatherstocking Tales, about wilderness scout Natty Bumppo, contains the first novels to depict realistic American frontier scenes and characters. The Last of the Mohicans, the second in the series, is set during the French and Indian War and portrays a group of Native Americans whose way of life is quickly disappearing. The novel offers thrills and adventure galore, while presenting a serious contrast of two ways of life: the Native Americans' freedom and reverence for nature, and the settlers' drive to build farms and towns.

Pilgrim at Tinker Creek

by Annie Dillard

Dillard's book is as much a meditation on spirituality as it is a piece of Walden-inspired American nature writing. The nonfiction work details Dillard's explorations in her neighborhood near Roanoke, Virginia, over the course of a year, and her reflections about her findings. In chapter one, she writes: "I propose to keep here what Thoreau called a 'meteorological journal of the mind.'" As Dillard observes the birds, trees, frogs, flowers, and insects which inhabit the seasons of Tinker Creek, she ponders both nature's and God's purposes. The widely acclaimed book won a Pulitzer Prize for Nonfiction in 1975.



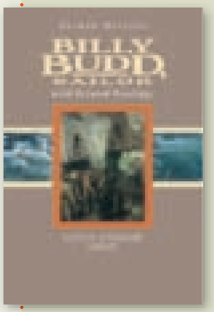
Writing Practice

Report Tell students that understanding the historical period in which a book was written can help them when they compare books from two different periods of time. The world that Henry David Thoreau describes in Walden and the one Annie Dillard describes in Pilgrim at Tinker Creek are very different places. Have students research and write a paragraph summarizing the political climate or the role of technology in Thoreau's time, the 1840s. Then have students do the same for Dillard's time, the 1970s. Students may use these questions to guide their research:

- What wars or political disputes might have influenced each writer?
- What technologies were developing at the time?

Have students discuss their findings.

GLENCOE LITERATURE LIBRARY

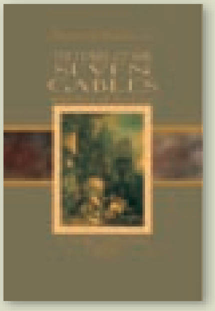


Billy Budd

Herman Melville

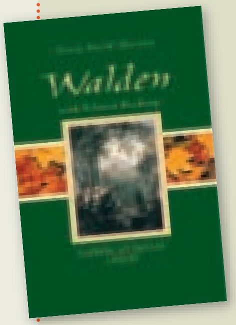
An industrious young sailor accidentally kills the tyrannical master-at-arms who victimized him.

The House of the Seven Gables



Nathaniel Hawthorne

For two centuries, the inhabitants of a New England mansion experience mysterious misfortunes that stem from the moral corruption of its first owner.



Walden

Henry David Thoreau

Thoreau abandons society and its comforts to pursue a solitary and independent life in the woods.

CRITICS' CORNER

"[The Scarlet Letter] is so terrible in its pictures of diseased human nature as to produce most questionable delight. The reader's interest never flags for a moment. There is nothing of episode or digression. The author is always telling his one story with a concentration of energy which, as we can understand, must have made it impossible for him to deviate. The reader will certainly go on with it to the end very quickly, entranced, excited, shuddering, and at times almost wretched. His consolation will be that he too has been able to see into these black deeps of the human heart."

—Anthony Trollope, The North American Review
September 1879

The Scarlet Letter

Nathaniel Hawthorne

Rooted in American Puritanism, this tragic tale of colonial New England examines three complex characters—a woman who follows her heart rather than Puritan standards of behavior, a minister torn by guilt, and a husband consumed by hatred and revenge. Hawthorne, who called this a novel of "frailty and human sorrow," peers deeply into the mind and heart of each character to reveal tortuous moral dilemmas.

Make a Collage

Read one of the books listed on this page. Then make a collage to represent your interpretation of the book's main message or theme. Present your collage to the class, explaining how the images you chose relate to ideas in the book.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate When reading the excerpt of the review by Anthony Trollope, English learners may have trouble understanding comments such as "diseased human nature" and "black deeps of the human heart." Encourage students to review some of the material about Puritans that appears in Part 1 of Unit One, especially "Sinners in the Hands of an Angry God," by Jonathan Edwards. You might also obtain a copy of an overview of The Scarlet Letter. Read students the overview. Then lead a discussion of Trollope's comments.

Teach

Glencoe Literature Library

Glencoe Literature Library offers an extensive collection of hardcover books that help you encourage your students to read independently. Choose among the more than 120 full-length literary works—novels, novellas, plays, and nonfiction. Each book includes related readings from a broad range of genres. Go to www.glencoe.com for more information.

Make a Collage

Evaluate students' collages on the following:

- effective representation of the book's theme through elements in the collage
- well-organized explanation
- effective presentation with attention to grammar and spelling conventions

For access to all study guides for the Glencoe Literature Library Teacher Resources CD-ROM.

To create customized reading lists from a database of more than 30,000 titles, use BookLink K-12 CD-ROM.

Assessment

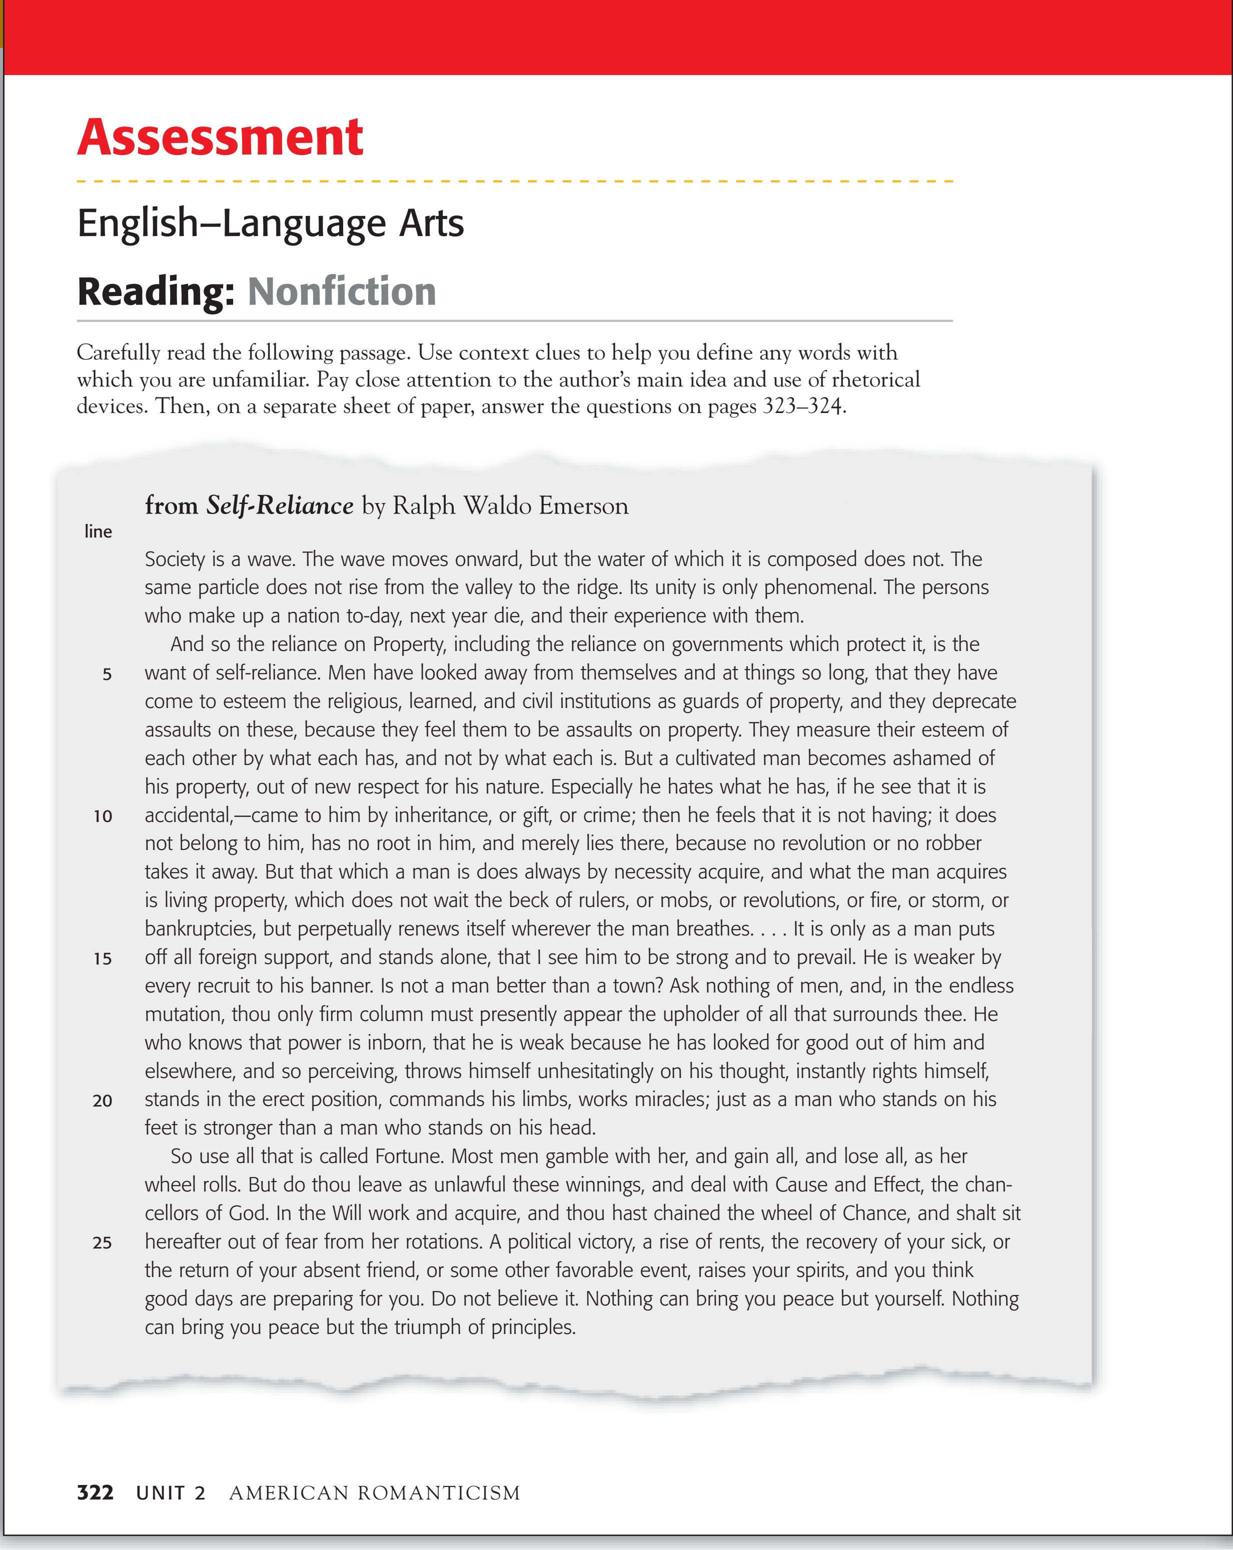
Focus

Bellringer

Say: In addition to helping you to be successful students, knowing test-taking strategies can help you obtain certifications and other benefits throughout your lives. Have students brainstorm a list of test-taking strategies they have learned so far.

Teach

Assessment Tell students that the Assessment features will help them prepare for the SAT and ACT tests and for state assessments. This practice will also help them review the skills and vocabulary taught in each unit. For this test, they will read a nonfiction selection and answer comprehension, analysis, and vocabulary questions about it. Then they will answer questions dealing with the process and conventions of writing, and respond to a reflective-essay prompt.



Assessment

English–Language Arts

Reading: Nonfiction

Carefully read the following passage. Use context clues to help you define any words with which you are unfamiliar. Pay close attention to the author's main idea and use of rhetorical devices. Then, on a separate sheet of paper, answer the questions on pages 323–324.

from Self-Reliance by Ralph Waldo Emerson

Society is a wave. The wave moves onward, but the water of which it is composed does not. The same particle does not rise from the valley to the ridge. Its unity is only phenomenal. The persons who make up a nation to-day, next year die, and their experience with them.

And so the reliance on Property, including the reliance on governments which protect it, is the want of self-reliance. Men have looked away from themselves and at things so long, that they have come to esteem the religious, learned, and civil institutions as guards of property, and they deprecate assaults on these, because they feel them to be assaults on property. They measure their esteem of each other by what each has, and not by what each is. But a cultivated man becomes ashamed of his property, out of new respect for his nature. Especially he hates what he has, if he see that it is accidental,—came to him by inheritance, or gift, or crime; then he feels that it is not having; it does not belong to him, has no root in him, and merely lies there, because no revolution or no robber takes it away. But that which a man is does always by necessity acquire, and what the man acquires is living property, which does not wait the beck of rulers, or mobs, or revolutions, or fire, or storm, or bankruptcies, but perpetually renews itself wherever the man breathes. . . . It is only as a man puts off all foreign support, and stands alone, that I see him to be strong and to prevail. He is weaker by every recruit to his banner. Is not a man better than a town? Ask nothing of men, and, in the endless mutation, thou only firm column must presently appear the upholder of all that surrounds thee. He who knows that power is inborn, that he is weak because he has looked for good out of him and elsewhere, and so perceiving, throws himself unhesitatingly on his thought, instantly rights himself, stands in the erect position, commands his limbs, works miracles; just as a man who stands on his feet is stronger than a man who stands on his head.

So use all that is called Fortune. Most men gamble with her, and gain all, and lose all, as her wheel rolls. But do thou leave as unlawful these winnings, and deal with Cause and Effect, the chancellors of God. In the Will work and acquire, and thou hast chained the wheel of Chance, and shalt sit hereafter out of fear from her rotations. A political victory, a rise of rents, the recovery of your sick, or the return of your absent friend, or some other favorable event, raises your spirits, and you think good days are preparing for you. Do not believe it. Nothing can bring you peace but yourself. Nothing can bring you peace but the triumph of principles.

Skills Practice

Reread Tell students that rereading a passage like the one on this page will help them identify the passage's main ideas and supporting details, the author's tone and purpose for writing, and any rhetorical or literary devices used. Write the following note headings on the board:

Main Ideas and Supporting Details
Tone
Author's Purpose
Rhetorical and Literary Devices
Unfamiliar Words

Have students copy these headings onto a piece of paper to guide their notetaking as they reread.

1. What literary or rhetorical device does Emerson use in the first sentence?
   - (A) parallelism
   - (B) connotative language
   - (C) hyperbole
   - (D) metaphor
   - (E) rhetorical question

2. What type or types of rhetorical appeal does Emerson make in the first paragraph?
   - (A) ethical appeal
   - (B) rational appeal
   - (C) emotional appeal
   - (D) emotional and ethical appeals
   - (E) emotional and rational appeals

3. According to Emerson, why do people deprecate assaults on religious, learned, and civil institutions?
   - (A) They hate property.
   - (B) They believe that these assaults are on property.
   - (C) They believe in self-reliance.
   - (D) They believe that people should rely solely on the government.
   - (E) They are afraid of all criticism.

4. Why does the cultivated man become ashamed of his property?
   - (A) No robber or revolution has taken it away.
   - (B) He has stolen his property.
   - (C) His property comes from an inheritance.
   - (D) He realizes that property is alien to his true nature.
   - (E) He has allowed his property to deteriorate.

5. From the context, what does the word beck in line 13 mean?
   - (A) command
   - (B) failure
   - (C) creation
   - (D) loss
   - (E) help

6. What can you infer from the sentence He is weaker by every recruit to his banner in lines 15 and 16?
   - (A) The individual should look for support from others.
   - (B) The individual cannot help but receive support from others.
   - (C) The individual becomes weak from relying on the support of others.
   - (D) Every cause is weakened by the individual.
   - (E) Only the individual can prevail.

7. What literary or rhetorical device does Emerson use in the sentence Is not a man better than a town? in line 16?
   - (A) parallelism
   - (B) connotative language
   - (C) metaphor
   - (D) rhetorical question
   - (E) allusion

8. To what does endless mutation, in lines 16 and 17, refer?
   - (A) constant change
   - (B) random accident
   - (C) perpetual motion
   - (D) steady equilibrium
   - (E) inborn power

9. From the context, what does the word rights in line 19 mean?
   - (A) justifies
   - (B) subjects
   - (C) corrects
   - (D) claims as true
   - (E) liberates

LOG ON Literature Online

Assessment For additional test practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u2.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging You may wish to discuss with English learners the specific features of your state's exam. If possible, provide them with sample questions and review the particulars. Provide one-on-one instructions for students who need extra help.

Assess

Reading

1. (D) is the correct answer because Emerson directly compares society to a wave. DOK 2
2. (B) is the correct answer because Emerson appeals to reason by making an analogy between the people who constitute a society and the particles of water that constitute a wave. DOK 2
3. (B) is the correct answer because Emerson says in line 7, "they feel them to be assaults on property." DOK 1
4. (D) is the correct answer because Emerson says in line 11 that property "has no root in him." DOK 1
5. (A) is the correct answer because beck means "a summons or command." DOK 1
6. (C) is the correct answer because Emerson is emphasizing his earlier statement that a man becomes strong only when he "puts off all foreign support." DOK 4
7. (D) is the correct answer because Emerson asks a question for effect. DOK 2
8. (A) is the correct answer because mutation means "alteration." DOK 1
9. (C) is the correct answer because rights means "to redress injury." DOK 1

Assess

10. (C) is the correct answer because Emerson refers to a popular gambling device. DOK 2

11. (D) is the correct answer because Emerson occasionally uses a short sentence to contrast with his longer sentences. DOK 4

12. (B) is the correct answer because Emerson wants to convince readers to agree with his position. DOK 4

13. (B) is the correct answer because Emerson is supporting the ability of the individual to be self-reliant. DOK 4

14. (C) is the correct answer because Emerson does not acknowledge the validity of opposing viewpoints. DOK 4

15. (E) is the correct answer because it restates Emerson's conclusion in line 27, "Nothing can bring you peace but yourself." DOK 2

10. By referring to the wheel of fortune, what literary technique is Emerson using?
   (A) foreshadowing
   (B) irony
   (C) allusion
   (D) motif
   (E) analogy

11. Which trait of good writing is Emerson demonstrating in the sentence Do not believe it, in line 27?
   (A) organization
   (B) presentation
   (C) word choice
   (D) sentence variety
   (E) voice

12. What type of essay is this?
   (A) informal
   (B) persuasive
   (C) expository
   (D) narrative
   (E) personal

13. On the basis of this passage, with which of the following statements would Emerson be most likely to agree?
   (A) People are generally solitary.
   (B) Individuals are stronger than communities.
   (C) There is no such thing as community.
   (D) Only governments can protect private property.
   (E) Private property must be outlawed.

14. On the basis of this passage, what is the overall tone of this essay?
   (A) despairing
   (B) ironic
   (C) authoritative
   (D) angry
   (E) sarcastic

15. What is the main idea of this passage?
   (A) The individual is greedy and corrupt.
   (B) Individuals should reject society.
   (C) Individuals must look to themselves to be free.
   (D) There is no such thing as chance.
   (E) People must reject governments and property.

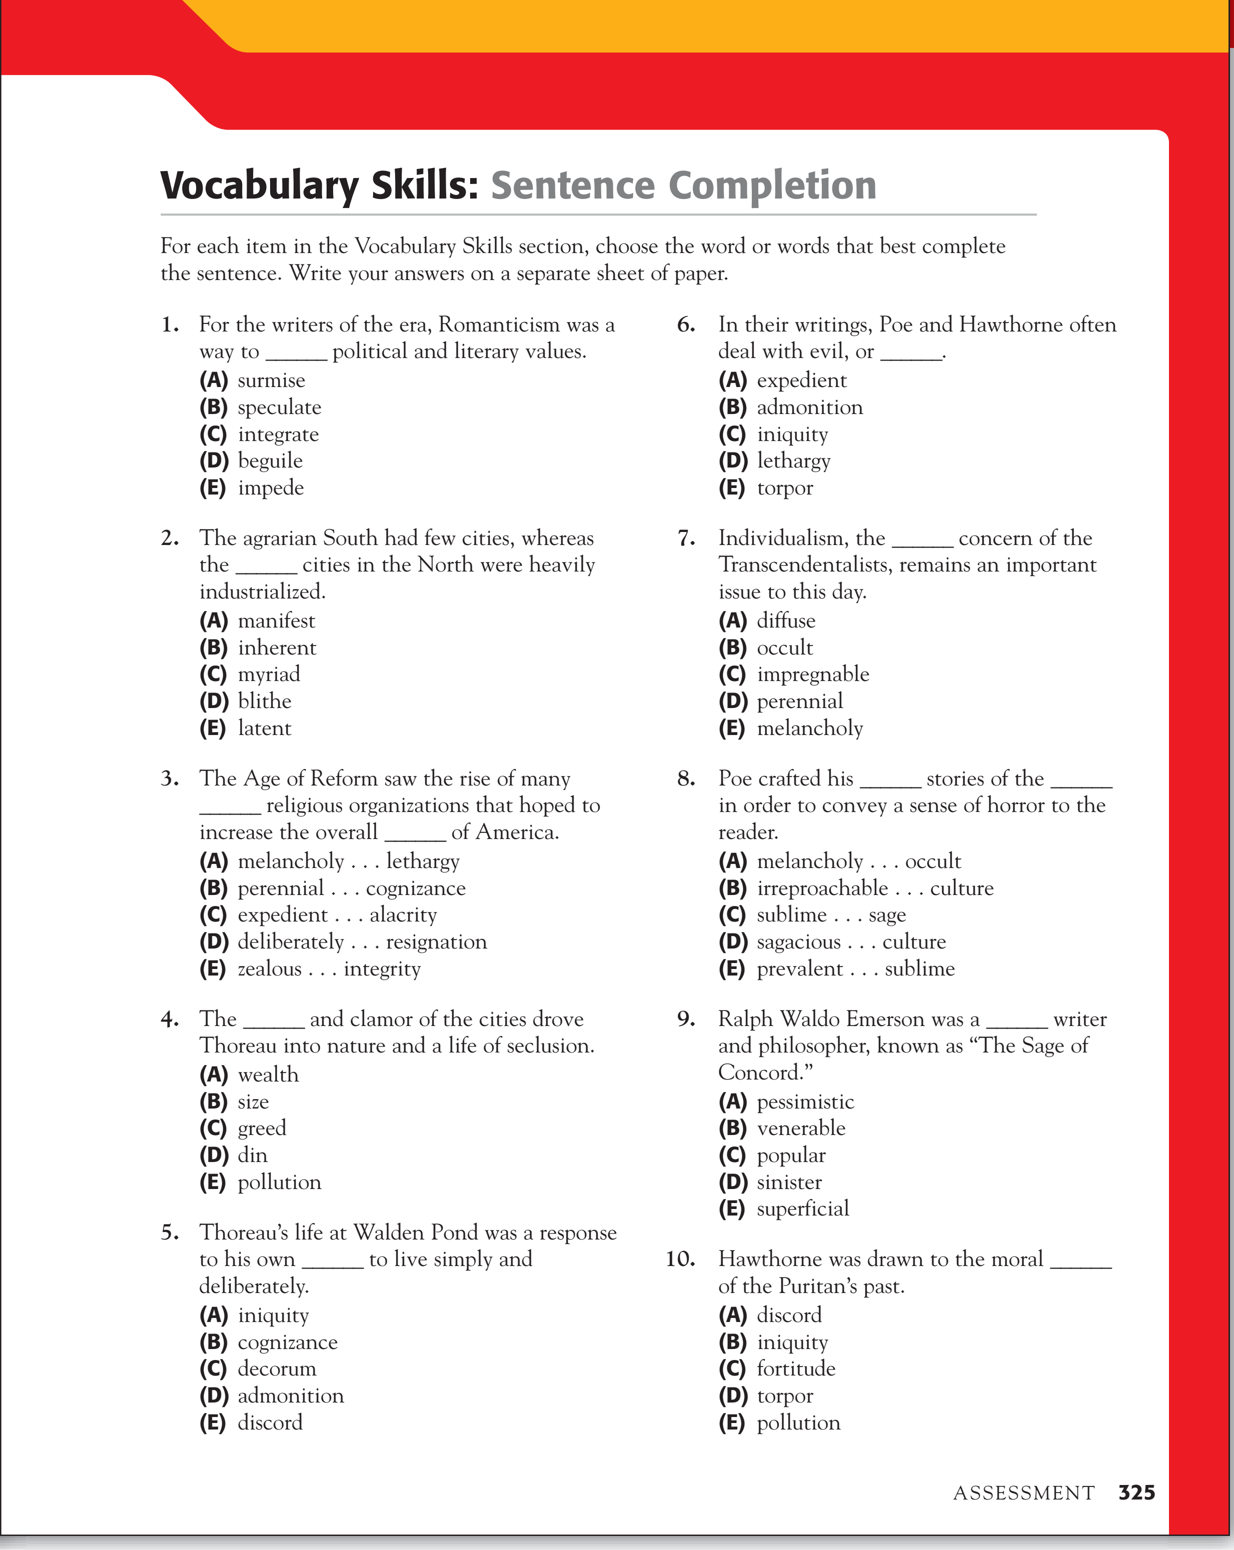
Vocabulary Practice

Context Clues Explain that standardized tests often assess a student's ability to determine the meaning of unfamiliar words. Clues to a word's meaning can often be found in the context of that word.

Write the following sentence on the board:

> After their team's victory, the football fans waved their banners and hands exultantly.

Have students read the sentence and use context clues to determine the meaning of the underlined word.



Vocabulary Skills: Sentence Completion

For each item in the Vocabulary Skills section, choose the word or words that best complete the sentence. Write your answers on a separate sheet of paper.

1. For the writers of the era, Romanticism was a way to _____ political and literary values.
   (A) surmise
   (B) speculate
   (C) integrate
   (D) beguile
   (E) impede

2. The agrarian South had few cities, whereas the _____ cities in the North were heavily industrialized.
   (A) manifest
   (B) inherent
   (C) myriad
   (D) blithe
   (E) latent

3. The Age of Reform saw the rise of many _____ religious organizations that hoped to increase the overall _____ of America.
   (A) melancholy . . . lethargy
   (B) perennial . . . cognizance
   (C) expedient . . . alacrity
   (D) deliberately . . . resignation
   (E) zealous . . . integrity

4. The _____ and clamor of the cities drove Thoreau into nature and a life of seclusion.
   (A) wealth
   (B) size
   (C) greed
   (D) din
   (E) pollution

5. Thoreau's life at Walden Pond was a response to his own _____ to live simply and deliberately.
   (A) iniquity
   (B) cognizance
   (C) decorum
   (D) admonition
   (E) discord

6. In their writings, Poe and Hawthorne often deal with evil, or _____.
   (A) expedient
   (B) admonition
   (C) iniquity
   (D) lethargy
   (E) torpor

7. Individualism, the _____ concern of the Transcendentalists, remains an important issue to this day.
   (A) diffuse
   (B) occult
   (C) impregnable
   (D) perennial
   (E) melancholy

8. Poe crafted his _____ stories of the _____ in order to convey a sense of horror to the reader.
   (A) melancholy . . . occult
   (B) irreproachable . . . culture
   (C) sublime . . . sage
   (D) sagacious . . . culture
   (E) prevalent . . . sublime

9. Ralph Waldo Emerson was a _____ writer and philosopher, known as "The Sage of Concord."
   (A) pessimistic
   (B) venerable
   (C) popular
   (D) sinister
   (E) superficial

10. Hawthorne was drawn to the moral _____ of the Puritan's past.
   (A) discord
   (B) iniquity
   (C) fortitude
   (D) torpor
   (E) pollution

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Students still acquiring English will likely have a difficult time with choosing the best way to fill in the missing words. Explain that it is often possible to determine the correct answer by reading each choice, eliminating any unlikely answers, and then choosing the sentence that sounds best.

Assess

Vocabulary

1. (B) is the correct answer because it is the only option makes sense in this context. DOK 1
2. (C) is the correct answer because no other option conveys a meaning opposite to few. DOK 1
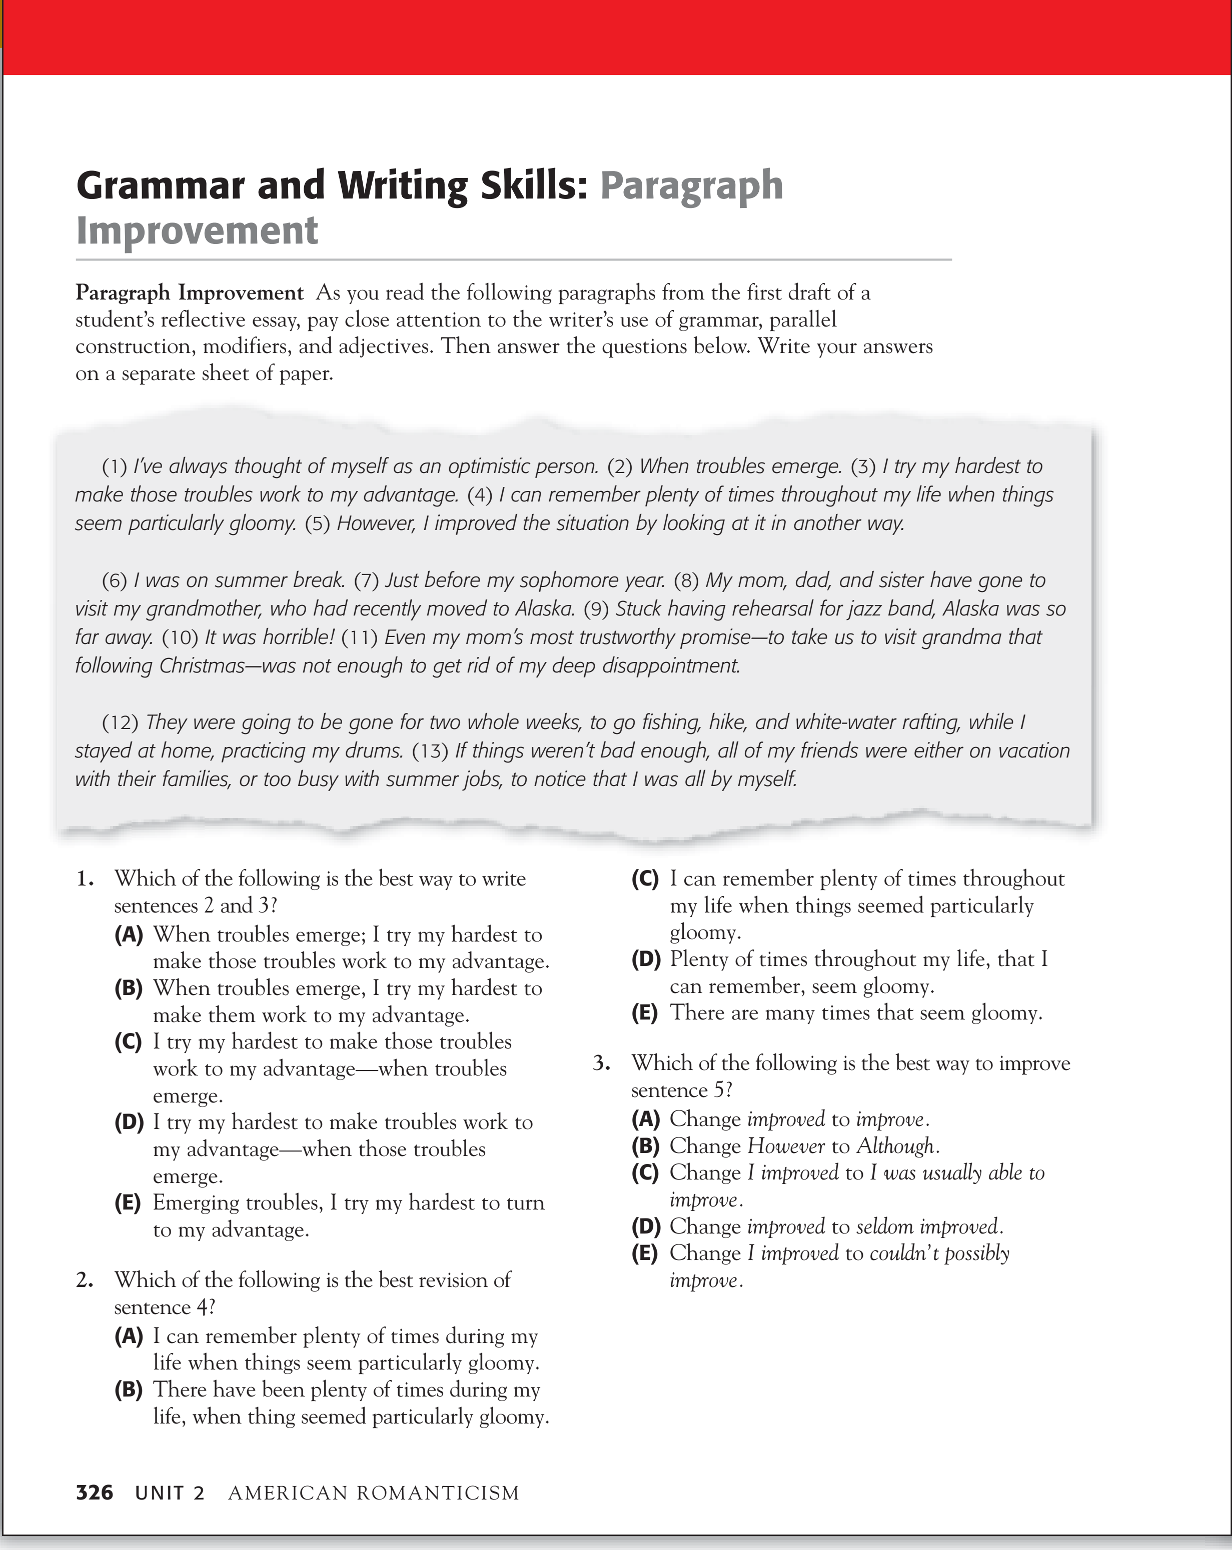
3. (D) is the correct answer because it is the only option that makes sense in this context. DOK 2
4. (B) is the correct answer because clamor suggests that the missing word should have something to do with sound. DOK 1
5. (C) is the correct answer because the context suggests that the missing word should be a synonym of advice. DOK 1
6. (C) is the correct answer because the context suggests that the missing word should be a synonym of evil. DOK 1
7. (D) is the correct answer because it is the only option that makes sense in this context. DOK 1
8. (A) is the correct answer because it is the only option that indicates a sense of horror. DOK 2
9. (B) is the correct answer because it is the only option that reflects the status of a sage. DOK 1
10. (C) is the correct answer because it is the only option that goes with drawn. DOK 1

Assess

Grammar and Writing

1. (B) is the correct answer because the context suggests that the missing word should be a synonym of belief. DOK 1
2. (C) is the correct answer because no other option conveys a meaning opposite to few. DOK 1
3. (C) is the correct answer because it is the only answer that makes sense in this context. DOK 1



Grammar and Writing Skills: Paragraph Improvement

Paragraph Improvement As you read the following paragraphs from the first draft of a student's reflective essay, pay close attention to the writer's use of grammar, parallel construction, modifiers, and adjectives. Then answer the questions below. Write your answers on a separate sheet of paper.

(1) I've always thought of myself as an optimistic person. (2) When troubles emerge. (3) I try my hardest to make those troubles work to my advantage. (4) I can remember plenty of times throughout my life when things seem particularly gloomy. (5) However, I improved the situation by looking at it in another way.

(6) I was on summer break. (7) Just before my sophomore year. (8) My mom, dad, and sister have gone to visit my grandmother, who had recently moved to Alaska. (9) Stuck having rehearsal for jazz band, Alaska was so far away. (10) It was horrible! (11) Even my mom's most trustworthy promise—to take us to visit grandma that following Christmas—was not enough to get rid of my deep disappointment.

(12) They were going to be gone for two whole weeks, to go fishing, hike, and white-water rafting, while I stayed at home, practicing my drums. (13) If things weren't bad enough, all of my friends were either on vacation with their families, or too busy with summer jobs, to notice that I was all by myself.

1. Which of the following is the best way to write sentences 2 and 3?
   - (A) When troubles emerge; I try my hardest to make those troubles work to my advantage.
   - (B) When troubles emerge, I try my hardest to make them work to my advantage.
   - (C) I try my hardest to make those troubles work to my advantage—when troubles emerge.
   - (D) I try my hardest to make troubles work to my advantage—when those troubles emerge.
   - (E) Emerging troubles, I try my hardest to turn to my advantage.

2. Which of the following is the best revision of sentence 4?
   - (A) I can remember plenty of times during my life when things seem particularly gloomy.
   - (B) There have been plenty of times during my life, when thing seemed particularly gloomy.
   - (C) I can remember plenty of times throughout my life when things seemed particularly gloomy.
   - (D) Plenty of times throughout my life, that I can remember, seem gloomy.
   - (E) There are many times that seem gloomy.

3. Which of the following is the best way to improve sentence 5?
   - (A) Change improved to improve.
   - (B) Change However to Although.
   - (C) Change I improved to I was usually able to improve.
   - (D) Change improved to seldom improved.
   - (E) Change I improved to couldn't possibly improve.

326 UNIT 2 AMERICAN ROMANTICISM

Grammar Practice

Subject-Verb Agreement Explain that standardized tests regularly assess a student's ability to identify and correct sentences lacking subject-verb agreement.

Write these sentences on the board:

The cat on the basement steps were clawing at the door.

John, Patrick, and I was stuck in the snow for most of the afternoon.

Over by the girls stand the mathematics instructor.

Have students identify the subject and verb of each sentence. Then have them rewrite to create agreement between the subject and verb.

4. Which of the following sentences could the writer insert at the start of the second paragraph to improve the essay's organization?
   - (A) Lots of bad things have happened to me.
   - (B) In general I've been pretty lucky in the past.
   - (C) Sometimes bad things happen to good people.
   - (D) A different perspective can be a really good thing.
   - (E) One occasion in particular springs to mind.

5. Which of the following is the best way to write sentences 6 and 7?
   - (A) I was on summer break, just before my sophomore year.
   - (B) Around the start of my sophomore year—I was on summer break.
   - (C) Just as my sophomore year was getting ready to start, I had summer break.
   - (D) In August, before the start of my sophomore year in high school, I had summer break.
   - (E) Just before the start of my sophomore year—I had summer break.

6. Which of these errors appears in sentence 8?
   - (A) run-on sentence
   - (B) incorrect parallelism
   - (C) fragment
   - (D) incorrect verb tense
   - (E) misplaced modifier

7. Which of the following is the best revision of sentence 9?
   - (A) Stuck having rehearsal for jazz band, Alaska stays far away.
   - (B) Because I was stuck with rehearsal for jazz band, I couldn't go to Alaska.
   - (C) Because there was rehearsal for jazz band, Alaska was far away from me.
   - (D) I have rehearsal for jazz band, so Alaska was far away.
   - (E) Jazz band rehearsal had me stuck, so Alaska was so far away.

8. Which of the following sentences could replace sentence 10 to illustrate better the reason for the writer's feelings?
   - (A) Alaska was so far away!
   - (B) I'd never been outside of my home state, and Alaska sure seemed exciting.
   - (C) I was pretty sure that Alaska wasn't horrible.
   - (D) Going to Alaska is about as exciting as going to jazz band.
   - (E) It is really unfair—my family should never have gone to Alaska.

9. Which of these errors appears in sentence 12?
   - (A) run-on sentence
   - (B) misplaced modifier
   - (C) fragment
   - (D) incorrect verb tense
   - (E) incorrect parallelism

10. While writing the concluding paragraphs of this draft, what information should the writer include to illustrate the essay's general idea?
    - (A) examples of other people wasting their free time
    - (B) how to get a summer job
    - (C) how the writer's optimism improved the situation
    - (D) details about band rehearsal
    - (E) details about his family's trip to Alaska

Essay

Ralph Waldo Emerson claimed that "nothing can bring you peace but yourself." Do you agree with this statement? Write a short reflective essay that expresses your ideas about individualism and Emerson's claim. As you write, keep in mind that your essay will be checked for ideas, organization, voice, word choice, sentence fluency, conventions, and presentation.

Assess

3. (C) is the correct answer because it is the only option that is grammatical and conveys the writer's meaning.
4. (E) is the correct answer because it creates a transition between the introductory paragraph and the first body paragraph.
5. (A) is the correct answer because no other option corrects the fragment in sentence 7 as efficiently.
6. (D) is the correct answer because the sentence requires a past perfect verb, had gone, to indicate that this event took place before the past tense of the narrative.
7. (B) is the correct answer because it corrects the dangling modifier without awkwardness.
8. (B) is the correct answer because it provides evidence that supports the writer's feeling of disappointment.
9. (E) is the correct answer because hike is not parallel with fishing and white-water rafting.
10. (C) is the correct answer because it is needed to support the main idea of the essay as stated in the topic sentence of the first paragraph

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Tell students that while demonstrating a command of sophisticated vocabulary is good, error-free writing and logical organization are more important. Remind students that creating an outline can improve the organization of their writing a great deal. Have students write an outline for a three-paragraph reflective essay. They should include a thesis statement and at least three pieces of evidence in support of this thesis.

Writing

Essay

Evaluate essays for the following:

- clearly stated main ideas supported by good reasons and details
- effective voice, word choice, and sentence variety
- effective presentation with attention to grammar and spelling conventions

Skills Scope and Sequence

Readability Scores Key: Dale-Chall/DRP/Lexile

PART 1: Resistance to Slavery

Selections and Features	Literary Elements
Unit Introduction pp. 328–342	Allusion TE p. 337, TE p. 339 Figurative Language. TE p. 340 Imagery TE p. 340, SE p. 341 Metaphor SE p. 341, Poetic Language TE p. 341
Songs Swing Low, Sweet Chariot; Go Down, Moses; and Keep Your Hand on the Plow pp. 344–349	Refrain SE p. 345
Comparing Literature from My Bondage and My Freedom (autobiography), by Frederick Douglass 6.6/63/1160 Frederick Douglass (poem), by Robert Hayden In Texas Grass (poem), by Quincy Troupe pp. 350–361	Autobiography SE p. 352
Literary History Slave Narratives and Civil War Memoirs, Letters, and Diaries pp. 362–363
Informational Text TIME: Slavery Under Glass, by Richard Lacayo 8.8/68/1240 pp. 364–367
Speech And Ain't I a Woman?, by Sojourner Truth 3.7/49/750 pp. 368–371	Oratory SE p. 369 Rhetorical Question TE p. 370
Vocabulary Workshop p. 372

Reading Skills and Strategies	Vocabulary	Writing Grammar	Speaking, Listening, and Viewing
Use Timelines TE p. 330 Analyze Graphic Information SE p. 331 Use Bar Graphs TE p. 332 Analyze Cause and Effect TE p. 336 Analyze Author's Purpose SE p. 337 Summarize Main Idea SE p. 339		Summarize TE p. 334 Write an Essay TE p. 338	Analyze Art SE and TE p. 328 Oral Interpretation SE p. 342 Create a Timeline SE p. 342
Analyze Historical Context SE p. 345 Evaluate TE p. 348	Academic Vocabulary SE p. 349	Write a List SE p. 349	Analyze Art SE and TE p. 343
Analyze Cause-and-Effect Relationships SE and TE p. 352	Denotation and Connotation, SE p. 352	Write a Critical Response TE p. 354 Write a Dialogue SE p. 358 Analyze Imagery TE p. 360	Analyze Art TE p. 355
		Write Interview Questions TE p. 362	Analyze Art TE p. 363
		Write Persuasive Letters TE p. 364 Write a Journal Entry TE p. 366	Analyze Art TE p. 366
Evaluate Argument SE p. 369	Multiple-Meaning Words TE p. 369 Word Usage SE p. 371	Write a Speech SE p. 371
	Denotation and Connotation SE p. 372

Readability Scores Key: Dale-Chall/DRP/Lexile

PART 2: The Civil War: A Nation Divided

Selections and Features	Literary Elements
Memoir from Mary Chesnut's Civil War, by Mary Chesnut 6.9/52/680 pp.373–380	Journal SE p. 375
Grammar Workshop p. 381
Letter Letter to His Son, by Robert E. Lee 9.9/64/1130 pp. 382–386	Diction SE p. 383
Short Story An Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge, by Ambrose Bierce 7.3/63/1000 pp. 387–399	Point of View SE p. 388
Speech The Gettysburg Address, by Abraham Lincoln 9.3/62/1490 pp. 400–403	Parallelism SE p. 401
Political Perspective from Lincoln at Gettysburg: The Words that Remade America, by Garry Wills 10.4/68/1250 pp. 404–406

PART 3: A Poetic Revolution

Selections and Features	Literary Elements
Poems I Hear America Singing and When I Heard the Learn'd Astronomer, by Walt Whitman pp. 407–412	Free Verse SE p. 409
Poems A Sight in Camp in the Daybreak Gray and Dim and Beat! Beat! Drums!, by Walt Whitman pp. 413–415	Alliteration TE p. 414 Free Verse SE p. 415
Memoir from Specimen Days, by Walt Whitman 5.8/62/1410 pp. 416–419	Historical Narrative SE and TE p. 416
Poem from Song of Myself, by Walt Whitman pp. 420–429	Voice SE p. 420 Parallelism TE p. 422 Author's Purpose TE p. 428
Historical Perspective from Walt Whitman: A Life, by Justin Kaplan 8.4/68/1390 pp. 430–436

Reading Skills and Strategies	Vocabulary	Writing Grammar	Speaking, Listening, and Viewing
Distinguish Fact and Opinion SE p. 375 Analyze Point of View TE p. 378	Word Parts TE p. 375 Context Clues SE p. 380	Sentence Fragments TE p. 376	Analyze Art SE and TE p. 379
		Transitional Expressions SE p. 381
Determine Main Idea and Supporting Details SE p. 383 Analyze Cause and Effect TE p. 384	Diction TE p; 383 Word Parts SE p. 383	Write a Summary SE p. 386
Make and Verify Predictions SE p. 388 Chronological Order TE p. 388 Identify Sequence TE p. 390 Make Inferences TE p. 392	Synonyms TE p. 396, SE p. 398 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 398	Conjunctions SE p. 399 Write an Expository Essay SE p. 399	Analyze Art TE p. 389
Analyze Style SE p. 401 Identify Main Idea TE p. 402	Synonyms TE p. 401 Analogies SE p. 403	Write an Interior Monologue SE p. 403
Connect to Political Context SE and TE p. 404		Primary and Secondary Sources TE p. 404

Reading Skills and Strategies	Vocabulary	Writing Grammar	Speaking, Listening, and Viewing
Paraphrase SE p. 409	Word Parts TE p. 409	Sentence Fragments TE p. 410 Write a Poem SE p. 412	Analyze Art TE p. 410
Paraphrase SE p. 414		Run-on Sentences TE p. 414 Write an Essay SE p. 415	Analyze Art TE p. 413
	Context Clues SE p. 419 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 419	Write a Journal Entry SE p. 419	Analyze Art TE p. 418
Draw Conclusions SE p. 420 Parallelism TE p. 422	Academic Vocabulary SE and TE p. 428	Write a Reflective Essay SE p. 429 Hyphens SE p. 429	Analyze Art SE and TE p. 422
Synthesize Information SE and TE p. 430 Interpret TE p. 432		Subject-Verb Agreement TE p. 434

Readability Scores Key: Dale-Chall/DRP/Lexile

PART 3: A Poetic Revolution (continued)

Selections and Features	Literary Elements
Poems If you were coming in the Fall, My Life closed twice, and The Soul selects, by Emily Dickinson pp. 437–441	Rhyme SE p. 438
Poems Much Madness is divinest Sense and Success is counted sweetest, by Emily Dickinson pp. 442–444	Imagery SE p. 443 Rhyme SE p. 444
Poems I heard a fly buzz and The Bustle in a House, by Emily Dickinson pp. 445–447	Irony SE p. 445 Rhyme SE p. 447
Poem Because I could not stop for Death, by Emily Dickinson pp. 448–449	Personification SE p. 448
Poems There's a certain Slant and This is my letter to the World, by Emily Dickinson pp. 450–454	Rhyme SE p. 450 Personification (review) SE p. 453
Historical Perspective Emily Dickinson: An Introduction, by Billy Collins 10.6/66/1360 pp. 455–457
Writing Workshop pp. 458–467
Speaking, Listening, and Viewing Workshop pp. 468–471
Independent Reading pp. 472–473
Assessment pp. 474–479

Reading Skills and Strategies	Vocabulary	Writing Grammar	Speaking, Listening, and Viewing
Analyze Sound Devices SE p. 438		Write a Paraphrase TE p. 440 Write a Journal Entry SE p. 441
Analyze Sound Devices SE p. 442		Ellipses TE p. 442 Write a Poem SE p. 444	Analyze Art SE p. 443
Respond to Poetry TE p. 446 Analyze Sound Devices SE p. 447		Write an Essay SE p. 447	Analyze Art TE p. 445
Clarify Meaning SE p. 448	Word Origins TE p. 448	Write a Paragraph SE p. 449
Connect TE p. 450	Word Usage SE p. 453 Academic Vocabulary SE p. 453	Write an Expository Essay SE p. 454 Dashes SE p. 454	Analyze Art TE p. 450 Discussion SE p. 452
Analyze Literary Criticism SE p. 455 Identify Main Idea TE p. 456		Write a Summary SE p. 457
Draw Conclusions TE p. 464		Prewrite SE p. 459 Thesis Statement TE p. 460 Draft SE p. 461 Works Cited Page TE p. 462 Revise SE p. 466 Coherent Paragraphs SE p. 466 Sentence Variety TE p. 466 Write a Historical Investigation Report SE p. 467
		Create a Storyboard SE p. 470	Multimedia Presentation SE p. 468
		Write Research Questions TE p. 472 Write a Review SE p. 473
		Write a Persuasive Essay SE p. 479

Focus

Bellringer Options

Literature Launcher DVD
Pre-Reading Video: Unit 3

Daily Language Practice
Transparency 30

Or say: Imagine you are on a sports team or the school newspaper. What kinds of issues might cause divisiveness within the group? (Ideas about how the team should be led; ideas about how to accomplish goals) Ask: What might cause citizens to begin a war against another region of the country? (Disputes over land, wealth, power, or beliefs)

View the Art ★

Answer: People's faces are painted as if a light is shining on them. Their expressions show great respect toward Lincoln.

Lincoln's Drive Through Richmond, 1866. Dennis Malone Carter. Oil on canvas, 77.5 x 19.9 cm. Chicago Historical Society, IL.

View the Art The setting of this painting is Richmond, Virginia, the capital of the Confederacy, following the end of the Civil War. How does the artist depict the feelings of the people in this painting? Why do you think he might have done so? ★

Unit Introduction Skills

The Civil War Era

Reading Skills
- Analyze Graphic Information (SE pp. 331, 333)
- Analyze Author's Purpose (SE p. 337)
- Summarize Main Idea (SE p. 339)
- Analyze Imagery and Metaphor (SE p. 341)
- Analyze Cause and Effect (TE p. 336)
- Use Bar Graphs (TE p. 332)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Summarize (TE p. 334)
- Write an Essay (TE p. 338)

Literary Elements
- Imagery (SE p. 341)
- Metaphor (SE p. 341; TE p. 337)
- Allusion (TE p. 339)
- Poetic Language (TE p. 341)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Give an Oral Interpretation (SE p. 342)
- Create a Timeline (SE p. 342)
- Analyze Art (SE p. 328; TE pp. 329, 333, 334, 337, 339, 341)

UNIT THREE

The Civil War Era

1850–1880

Looking Ahead

By the 1850s, the Southern states had become increasingly isolated from the rest of the country because of their support of slavery and their exclusion from the industrial boom in the North. Tensions between the North and South grew, and the end of the Union—or a war to preserve it—hovered on the horizon. Writers responded to the issues of slavery, regional conflict, and eventually the Civil War. Many moved from Romanticism to a realistic portrayal of the problems confronting the nation. Two major poets of the period also found inspiration in personal feelings and ordinary events.

Keep the following questions in mind as you read:

◇ How did the slavery question lead to the Civil War?

◇ How was the Civil War reflected in the writing of the period?

◇ What made the poetry of Whitman and Dickinson revolutionary?

UNIT THREE

Focus

Summary

This introduction relates the historical, social, and cultural forces of the American Civil War era, 1850–1880, to the literature of this period. It connects the religious traditions and narratives of enslaved Africans to growing tensions between the North and the South. It considers how the speeches and memoirs of the war's participants influenced American values, attitudes, and beliefs. It also looks at how two major writers spurred sweeping changes in the art of writing poetry.

For diagnostic and end-of-unit assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 17–24, 345–346.

For school-to-home activities, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 5–11.

For students who would profit from independent novel study, see Novel Companion, pp. 119–162.

Unit Resources

Print Materials

- Unit 3 Teaching Resources, pp. 1–262
- Interactive Read and Write (On Level, Approaching, EL), pp. 99–146
- Novel Companion, pp. 119–162
- Bellringer Option Transparencies: Selection Focus 20–29; Daily Language Practice 30–40
- Literary Element Transparencies 16, 46, 49, 55, 72, 77, 88, 107
- Assessment Resources, Unit Assessment, pp. 17–24, 345–346
- Assessment Resources, Selection Assessment, pp. 121–160

Technology

- TeacherWorks Plus CD
- StudentWorks Plus CD
- Literature Launchers: Pre-Reading Videos DVD, Unit 3
- Literature Online
- Visual Vocabulary CD-ROM
- Listening Library CD-ROM
- ExamView CD-ROM
- Skill Level Up! CD-ROM

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Use the Timeline Connect works of literature to historical events.

Ask: How do the following works written between 1850 and 1865 reflect the events in the United States at that time?

- My Bondage and My Freedom by Frederick Douglass
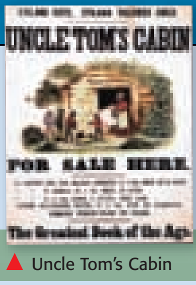
- Lincoln's Gettysburg Address

(Douglass's autobiography reflects the ongoing controversy about slavery; Lincoln's address is connected with the Battle of Gettysburg.)

Literary History ☆

A Little Woman and a Great War Outraged by the Fugitive Slave Act of 1850, Harriet Beecher Stowe (1811–1896) wrote Uncle Tom's Cabin, a novel depicting the suffering and human dignity of an African American slave. Stowe's book influenced the nation's move toward war. Stowe was about five feet tall, and when President Lincoln met her in person during the Civil War, he reportedly said, "So you're the little woman who wrote the book that started this great war!"

Timeline 1850–1880



UNCLE TOM'S CABIN
FOR SALE HERE.
The Greatest Book of the Age.

▲ Uncle Tom's Cabin

AMERICAN LITERATURE 1

1850

1852
Harriet Beecher Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin is published ☆

1855
Walt Whitman's Leaves of Grass is published

1855
Frederick Douglass's autobiography, My Bondage and My Freedom, is published

1858
Abraham Lincoln gives A House Divided speech

1860

1859–1865
Emily Dickinson writes more than eight hundred poems

1861
Harriet Jacobs's Incidents in the Life of a Slave Girl is published under the pseudonym Linda Brent

1862
Julia Ward Howe's "Battle Hymn of the Republic" is published

1863
Abraham Lincoln delivers the Gettysburg Address

1865
Walt Whitman's Drum-Taps is published

UNITED STATES EVENTS

1850

1850
Compromise of 1850 strengthens Fugitive Slave Act

1854
Congress passes Kansas-Nebraska Act

1857
Dred Scott decision makes slavery legal in all territories

1859
John Brown raids federal arsenal at Harpers Ferry, VA

1860

◀ 1860–1861
Pony Express runs from Missouri to California

1860
Abraham Lincoln wins presidential election

1860
South Carolina secedes from the Union

1861
Jefferson Davis becomes the Confederate president

1861
Confederate forces fire on Fort Sumter, SC, starting the Civil War

1861
First Battle of Bull Run

1862
Richard Gatling patents the first practical machine gun

1863
Union collects income tax to fund the Civil War

WORLD EVENTS

1850

1850
Chinese Taiping Rebellion

1853
Commodore Perry opens Japan to world trade

1857
Flaubert's Madame Bovary

1858 ▶
Benito Juárez becomes president of Mexico

1860

1861
Alexander II, czar of Russia, frees serfs

1861
Burke and Wills expedition reaches Australia

1865
Lewis Carroll's Alice's Adventures in Wonderland

1867
Alfred Nobel receives British patent on dynamite

1868
Meiji Restoration reforms Japan's government

Literature Online

Literature and Reading To explore the Interactive Timeline, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Writing Practice

Use Timelines Remind students that timelines help us track the chronological sequence of events (the order in which events occur), examine the importance of each event, and see how one event leads to another. Have students research one of the following people:

- Walt Whitman
- Emily Dickinson
- Abraham Lincoln

Instruct students to create a timeline that includes the date and a brief description of at least five significant events in the life of the person.

▲ 1868
Louisa May Alcott's Little Women is published ☆

◀ Medal of Honor

1870

1873
Henry Timrod's "Cotton Boll" is published

1875
Mary Baker Eddy's Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures is published

1876
Mark Twain's Adventures of Tom Sawyer is published

1878
Henry James's Daisy Miller and The Europeans are published

1879
George W. Cable's Old Creole Days is published

War Department, Washington, April 20, 1865,

$100,000 REWARD!

THE MURDERER

Of our late beloved President, Abraham Lincoln,

IS STILL AT LARGE.

$50,000 REWARD

$25,000 REWARD

$25,000 REWARD

1870

1863
Emancipation Proclamation declares freedom for enslaved persons in the Confederate states

1863
Battle of Gettysburg

1864
Abraham Lincoln is reelected president

1865
Lincoln is assassinated by John Wilkes Booth

1865
Civil War ends

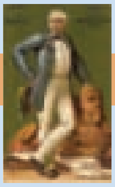
1866
Ku Klux Klan organizes in Tennessee

1868
Ulysses S. Grant is elected president; he holds office until 1877

1870
Hiram Revels becomes the first African American elected to the U.S. Senate

1876
Battle of the Little Bighorn (Custer's Last Stand)

1877
Reconstruction ends



Ferdinand de Lesseps, engineer for Suez Canal

1870

1869
Suez Canal opens in Egypt

1869
Mohandas K. Gandhi is born

1870
Franco-German War begins

1872
Claude Monet completes Impression: Sunrise

1874
The Three-Cornered Hat by Pedro Antonio de Alarcón y Ariza is published

1879
Henrik Ibsen's A Doll's House is published

Reading Check

Analyze Graphic Information:

1. How long did the Civil War last?
2. Did the Emancipation Proclamation come before or after the freeing of the serfs in Russia?

Teach

Reading Check

Answers: 1. 1861 to 1865 2. The serfs were freed in Russia (1861) before the Emancipation Proclamation was issued (1863).

Reading Strategy

Connect Help students connect their prior knowledge of the literature and events on the timeline to historical periods and events unfamiliar to them. Ask: Which of the people, places, and events listed on the timeline have you heard of before? What do you know about them? (Allow students to share their prior knowledge with the rest of the class.)

Literary History ☆

Louisa May Alcott

Alcott's popular novel Little Women (1868–1869) is an autobiographical work about her childhood. In addition to being an author, Alcott worked as a nurse in a Union hospital and was later involved in the women's suffrage movement.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate To familiarize students with the format of a timeline, ask several questions about the information and the images on this spread. Ask: Who is being sought by the "wanted poster" shown on this page? (The murderer of President Lincoln) In what year did the Dred Scott decision occur? (1857) The Pony Express ran between which two states? (Missouri and California) What book did Mark Twain publish in 1876? (The Adventures of Tom Sawyer)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Draw Conclusions Have students note the difference in resources available to the North and the South. Then direct them to compare a Confederate soldier's monthly income with the prices for common goods.

Ask: Why were these goods so expensive? (Students might say the Civil War caused serious problems for the Southern economy, including shortages.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS Have students look up and discuss synonyms for the economic terminology used on this page: resources (support, supplies); production (output); capital (money to invest), and inflation (rising prices).

Political History ☆

Economy and War Regional economic differences helped bring about the outbreak of the Civil War. In the South, enslaved Africans provided the labor that maintained the agricultural economy. In the North, free people, including African Americans, worked for wages in a growing industrial economy.

By the Numbers

DIVISION OF RESOURCES BETWEEN THE UNION AND THE CONFEDERACY ☆

Source: Historical Statistics of the United States

1 Inflation in the South

Limited resources caused severe inflation in the South during the war. Compare the income of a Confederate soldier with the prices for these goods:

Monthly income: $18.00

Pound of coffee:	$12.00
Quart of milk:	$10.00
Pound of butter:	$6.25
Dozen eggs:	$6.00

SLAVERY

At the start of the 1800s, there were 700,000 enslaved persons in the South. By 1860, there were four million.

CIVIL WAR FORCES

Union

Troops:	2,100,000
Casualties:	634,703
Military Deaths:	360,222

Confederate

Troops:	800,000
Casualties:	483,000
Military Deaths:	260,000

POPULATION

Most populous states in 1880:

New York	5,082,871
Pennsylvania	4,282,891
Ohio	3,198,062
Illinois	3,077,871
Missouri	2,168,380

AFRICAN AMERICAN SOLDIERS

- 180,000 served in the Union army.
- There were 66 all-black Union regiments.
- Twenty-three were awarded the Medal of Honor.

Source: For the Common Defense

Reading Practice

Bar Graphs Direct students' attention to the bar graph that shows the division of resources between the North and South. The graph breaks down the totals of various types of resources, comparing the percentages held by each side in the Civil War. Ask: Which three resources were held most heavily by the Union? (Manufactured goods, merchant ships, and iron production) Which three resources did the Confederacy hold more than 30 percent of? (Exports, grain production, number of farms) What do these numbers tell you about the South's dependence on slavery? (The South's economy was based on agriculture, which had grown through the labor of enslaved people.)

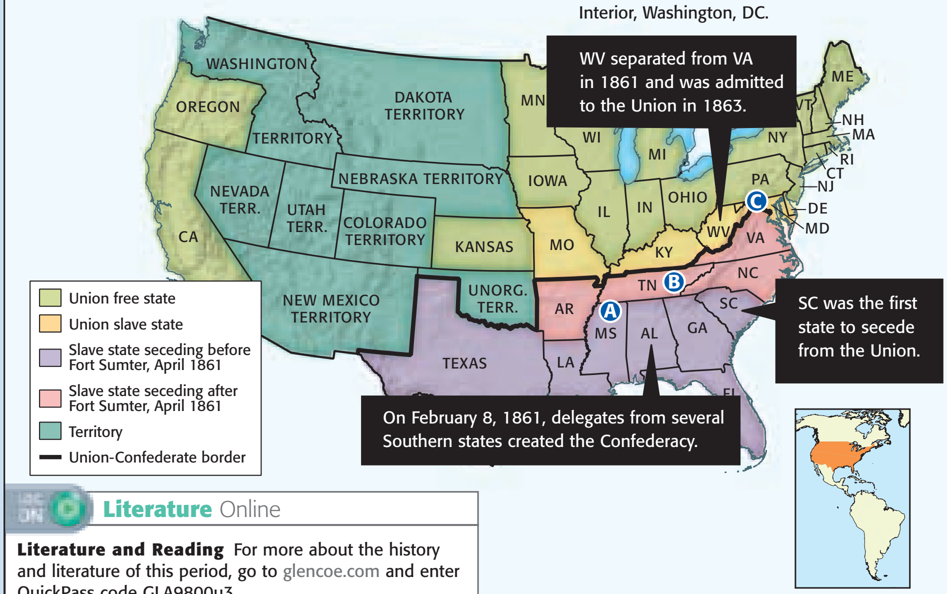
A Plantation on the Mississippi, nineteenth century. Currier & Ives. Color lithograph. Museum of the City of New York.

Being There

Before South Carolina seceded in December 1860, the nation stood on the brink of destruction. After secession began, the tensions between the industrial North and the agricultural South came to a violent head.

B Wounded Union soldiers being cared for by nurse Anne Bell, 1861–1865. Photograph.

C The Battle of Antietam, 1862. Captain James Hope. Oil on canvas. U.S. Department of the Interior, Washington, DC.



WASHINGTON
OREGON
TERRITORY
DAKOTA TERRITORY
MN
WI
MI
NY
ME
VT
NH
MA
RI
CT
NJ
PA
DE MD
IOWA
NEBRASKA TERRITORY
NEVADA TERR.
UTAH TERR.
COLORADO TERRITORY
CA
KANSAS
MO
IL
IN OHIO
WV
VA
KY
TN
NC
SC
GA
AL
MS
AR
LA
TEXAS
UNORG. TERR.
NEW MEXICO TERRITORY
FL
A
B
C
🟩 Union free state
🟨 Union slave state
🟪 Slave state seceding before Fort Sumter, April 1861
🟥 Slave state seceding after Fort Sumter, April 1861
🟩 Territory
— Union-Confederate border

WV separated from VA in 1861 and was admitted to the Union in 1863.

SC was the first state to secede from the Union.

On February 8, 1861, delegates from several Southern states created the Confederacy.

Literature Online

Literature and Reading For more about the history and literature of this period, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Reading Check

Analyze Graphic Information:

1. In which category in the bar graph on page 332 is the difference between the resources of the Union and the Confederacy greatest?
2. How many slave states seceded, as shown on the map, before the firing on Fort Sumter?
3. How do the political boundaries west of the Mississippi River during the Civil War compare with those in the present-day United States?

Teach

Reading Check

Answers: 1. Iron production—Union 94 percent versus Confederacy 6 percent
2. Seven states—Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, and Florida
3. The territories controlled by the United States had not yet been divided into the states we have today.

View the Art

A. Plantation owners formed the ruling class in Southern society, and much of the South's economy depended on the slave labor required to operate the plantations.

B. The Civil War death toll was nearly as great as that for all other American wars combined, from the Revolutionary War through the Vietnam War.

C. More than 4,000 Northern and Southern soldiers died on the first day of fighting at Antietam, making it the single bloodiest day of the Civil War.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Draw students' attention to the Civil War map of the states. Ask them to point out the five Union slave states. (Missouri, Kentucky, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware) Why do you think these states are known as "border states"? (These states create a border or dividing line between the Union and the Confederacy.)

Established Point out to students the different connotations of the terms Union and Confederacy. Explain that Union emphasizes the binding of states into a single national unit. Confederacy suggests a voluntary association of states that keep important rights and independence. (Remind students, if necessary, that at first the United States operated as a confederation of states.) Despite the Confederacy's strong emphasis on state's rights, its constitution was almost identical to the U.S. Constitution.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Predict Have students read the headings to themselves and think about what they might read about in each of the five sections.

Ask: Which section would most likely contain information about the Underground Railroad? (This information is given in the section entitled Antislavery Movement.)

View the Photograph

In 1862, American photographer Mathew Brady (1823–1896) formed a team of photographers who would document all the major engagements of the war, as well as Union camp life. This effort led to Brady's financial ruin, and though his photographs are highly valued today, Brady died a pauper in a New York poorhouse.

Ask: How do photos like this one help us better understand the Civil War era? (Students may say that the photos help us visualize the events of the war.)

Learning Objectives

For pages 334–342

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing literary periods. Evaluating historical influences.

Reading: Connecting to the literature.

The Civil War Era

1850–1880

Historical, Social, and Cultural Forces

The Path to War 1

As the nation expanded westward, it became evident that the legality of slavery in the new territories would have to be determined. Northerners in Congress pushed to prohibit it in new territories, while Southern senators argued that such a move would deny slaveholders their constitutional rights. In 1850, Senator Henry Clay, in an effort to save the Union, proposed several compromise measures. For the North, Congress admitted California as a free state. To appease the South, Congress passed the Fugitive Slave Act. This law mandated the return of enslaved Africans who had fled to the North and penalized individuals who helped them escape. The Compromise of 1850 averted immediate disaster for the Union but it proved to be only a temporary solution to the problem.

Antislavery Movement

Most Northerners opposed the Fugitive Slave Act, and most free-state legislatures passed laws in an attempt to block it. The Underground Railroad, a secret network that aided enslaved fugitives escaping to the North, became more active than ever.

In 1852, Harriet Beecher Stowe's best-selling novel Uncle Tom's Cabin depicted the cruelty of slavery and the fight for freedom. Abolitionists hailed the book; one review proclaimed, "A slaveholder might read it without anger, but not easily without a secret abhorrence of the system which he himself upholds."

Abraham Lincoln with General George Brinton McClellan talking in a tent at the Antietam battlefield. Mathew Brady.

Secession

As the 1860 presidential election approached, the Republican Party nominated Abraham Lincoln. Lincoln was not an outright abolitionist; he simply believed that slavery should be excluded from the new territories. With Lincoln's victory, many Southern states, anticipating the abolition of slavery, felt that they had no choice but to leave the

Writing Practice

Summarize Have students write a two-sentence summary for each section on pages 334 and 335. Tell students that in order to write an accurate summary, they must first identify the main idea of a passage. Review The Path to War section as a class, pointing out the differing goals of the North and the South. Then write this sample summary on the board: The North wanted to stop slavery's spread, but Southerners insisted that new states should have the right to allow slavery. To satisfy both sides, Henry Clay proposed the Compromise of 1850. Next have students work independently to summarize the next four sections. Invite volunteers to share their summaries with the class.

Union. On December 20, 1860, South Carolina seceded. Six more states soon followed. These states formed the Confederate States of America, or the Confederacy, which included eleven states by the start of the war. In Lincoln's inaugural address, he pleaded for the North and South to avoid bloodshed and violence. His plea was not heeded, and on April 12, 1861, Confederate troops attacked Fort Sumter in the harbor of Charleston, South Carolina. The Civil War had begun.

☆

> "We failed, but in the good providence of God apparent failure often proves a blessing."
>
> —Confederate General Robert E. Lee

War

The South's long tradition of military service gave the Confederate army an early advantage over the Union. As the war continued, however, the Union grew stronger, while Confederate losses weakened the South. To win the war, Union General Ulysses S. Grant finally began to attack Southern resources as well as Confederate forces. President Lincoln, assassinated on April 14, 1865, did not witness the end to the struggle that had divided the nation. After more than 600,000 deaths on both sides, the last Confederate soldiers surrendered in May. The Thirteenth Amendment became law in December, officially ending slavery in the nation. The North's victory in the Civil War destroyed the South's slave economy.

Reconstruction

Although the fighting had ended, the period of Reconstruction involved more than rebuilding and repairing the South. It would take years to restructure Southern society, grant rights to those who had been enslaved, and readmit the Southern states to the Union. Congress passed the Civil Rights Act in 1866 and then the Fourteenth Amendment—redefining citizenship to include African Americans and requiring their equal protection under the law—but the nation did little to help those who had been freed. After Reconstruction, the new South was in some ways similar to the pre-Civil War South: White Southern Democrats returned to power, and African Americans lost many of their civil rights. 2

PREVIEW Big Ideas of the Civil War Era

1 Resistance to Slavery

The culture of African Americans was shaped by their struggle against slavery. Spirituals and slave narratives testified to the harshness of slavery and African Americans' fierce resistance to it.

See pages 336–337.

2 A Nation Divided

During the Civil War, Americans created a literary record that ranged from vivid accounts of wartime life to profound expressions of faith in American ideals.

See pages 338–339.

3 A Poetic Revolution

Poets Walt Whitman and Emily Dickinson experimented with new verse forms during this period. In divergent ways, they explored the self and its relation to the world.

See pages 340–341.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging To help students keep track of the three Big Ideas covered in this unit, draw a three-column chart on the board and use the three Big Ideas as column heads. Have students copy the chart and tell them to use it to make notes as they read the rest of the introduction. As the class completes each Big Idea section, have students volunteer to share the important ideas with the class, using their notes to support their answers. For example, after students read the Resistance to Slavery section, students should know that spirituals and slave narratives raised peoples' awareness of the horrors of slavery.

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Make Inferences

Ask: After the war, what do you think life was like for African Americans in the South? In the North? (Possible answers: In the South, African Americans were no longer slaves, but they faced poverty, racism, and lack of rights. In the North, life for African Americans was probably about the same as before; perhaps there was more optimism because slavery had been abolished.)

Political History ☆

Lee's Dilemma Unlike many Southerners, General Robert E. Lee (1807–1870) at first did not support secession. Rising tensions forced Lee to weigh his love for his native Virginia against his love for the Union. To avoid fighting against his relatives, Lee sided with the South and became its military commander. By resigning his commission as a career military officer in the United States Army, Lee said goodbye to and then fought brilliantly against many of his longtime comrades from the North.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Evaluate Sources Ask: What is one advantage and one disadvantage of using an eyewitness account as a source? (Advantage: It gives a personal, emotional account of an event. Disadvantage: It is limited to one person's point of view.)

ENGLISH LEARNERS Have English learners orally paraphrase the Slave Narratives section to increase comprehension.

Writer's Technique ☆

The Narrative Form A narrative is a piece of writing or a speech that tells a story and is an important element in nonfiction. Narratives include biographies, autobiographies, memoirs, and essays. Two narratives were the inspiration for Harriet Beecher Stowe's novel Uncle Tom's Cabin: Frederick Douglass's Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass, an American Slave (1845), and Josiah Henson's The Life of Josiah Henson (1849).

Big Idea 1

Resistance to Slavery

Suppose you were not allowed to read or write or own property. Picture being whipped for disobeying or hunted after running away. Imagine being sold away from your family. Such was slave-life.

> "There is no Negro problem. The problem is whether the American people have loyalty enough, honor enough, patriotism enough, to live up to their own Constitution."
>
> —Frederick Douglass

The Realities of Slavery

Southern plantation owners purchased Africans to work in the fields. The law made enslaved people property for life. It was illegal to teach them to read or write; owners feared that knowledge would bring revolt. Escape was difficult, and captured fugitives might be whipped or even killed.

Slavery was legal in the North, too; however, conditions were different. Slaves could work in industrial trades, and in some states marry and own property. They could be punished, but an owner who killed one could be charged with murder. Religious groups had always opposed slavery, and many Northerners came to believe it was wrong.

Strength in Religion

Enslaved Africans combined traditional African music with Christian hymns to create spirituals, or songs of salvation and religious beliefs (see pages 344–349). Much of the imagery in spirituals was drawn from the Bible, as slaves likened their situation to that of the Jews held captive in Egypt.

Many songs had a dual meaning, expressing both religious faith and a hunger for freedom. Some also served as encoded messages. The first line of "Follow the Drinking Gourd"—"When the sun comes back and the first quail calls"—refers to late winter. "Conductors" on the Underground Railroad found that it took about a year for escapees to journey from the South to the Ohio River and that crossing the river was easiest during winter, when the river was frozen. Thus, the song suggests that enslaved Africans make their escape during winter and follow the "Drinking Gourd"—the Big Dipper constellation, whose cup points to the North Star.

Frederick Douglass

Frederick Douglass (see pages 351–358) was born on a Maryland plantation and was separated from his mother soon after birth. Early on, Douglass realized that education was the path to freedom. As he taught himself to read and write, he grew determined to gain that freedom. After Douglass escaped at age twenty, he spoke at an antislavery meeting, launching his career as a powerful orator and an influential member of the abolitionist movement. In 1845, he authenticated his life story and the brutality he had endured by writing Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass, an American Slave, later expanded into My Bondage and My Freedom and Life and Times of Frederick Douglass. ☆

Slave Narratives

Slave narratives became increasingly popular in the decades before the Civil War. In addition to Frederick Douglass, writers William Wells Brown, Solomon Northup, and Sojourner Truth (see pages 368–371) sold tens of thousands of copies of their life stories. They not only provided Northerners and abolitionists with glimpses of the horrors of slavery but also contradicted the claims of slave owners. Through these narratives, slaves could be seen as people rather than property. 1

Reading Practice

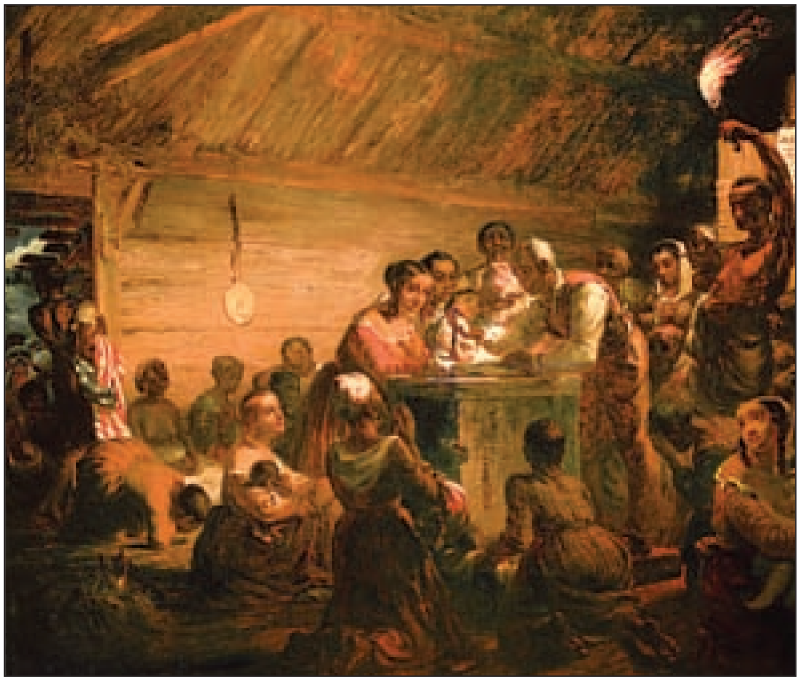
Analyze Cause and Effect Have students practice finding cause-and-effect relationships. Tell students to create a two-column chart with the headings Cause and Effect. Have students reread this page to find cause-and-effect relationships and record them on their chart. Give these examples:

Cause: The Ohio River freezes in winter.

Effect: Escape to the North was easier in winter when slaves could walk across the Ohio River.

Cause: Frederick Douglass realized that education could lead to freedom.

Effect: He taught himself to read and write.



The Hour of Emancipation, 1863. William Tolman Carlton. Oil on canvas. Private collection. ★

Frederick Douglass gave a speech to a white audience in Rochester, New York, on July 5, 1852. The following paragraphs are taken from that speech.

from The Meaning of July Fourth for the Negro by Frederick Douglass

2 The blessings in which you, this day, rejoice, are not enjoyed in common. The rich inheritance of justice, liberty, prosperity and independence, bequeathed by your fathers, is shared by you, not by me. The sunlight that brought light and healing to you has brought stripes and death to me. This Fourth July is yours, not mine. You may rejoice, I must mourn. . . .

What, to the American slave, is your fourth of July? I answer, a day that reveals to him, more than all other days in the year, the gross injustice and cruelty to which he is the constant victim. To him, your celebration is a sham; your boasted liberty, an unholy license; your national greatness, swelling vanity; your sounds of rejoicing are empty and heartless; your denunciation of tyrants, brass fronted impudence; your shouts of liberty and equality, hollow mockery; your prayers and hymns, your sermons and thanksgivings, with all your religious parade and solemnity, are, to him mere bombast, fraud, deception, impiety, and hypocrisy—a thin veil to cover up crimes which would disgrace a nation of savages. There is not a nation on earth guilty of practices more shocking and bloody than are the people of the United States, at this very hour.

Reading Check

Analyze Author's Purpose How did Douglass try to persuade his white readers and listeners to fight against slavery?

Teach

Reading Check

Answer: Douglass showed them slavery and its horrors, which often contradicted the claims made by slave owners. He also showed his readers and listeners that slaves were real people, rather than mere property.

Literary Element 2

Metaphor Say: A metaphor is a figure of speech that compares two seemingly unlike things without using the word like or as. Read Douglass's July Fourth speech and identify the key metaphor. (Sunlight is a metaphor for independence from Great Britain.)

View the Art ★

President Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation in two parts. In September 1862, he proclaimed that if the Confederate states did not return to the Union by 1863, he would issue a declaration freeing all of their slaves. This declaration was issued on January 1, 1863. Carlton's painting depicts a group of slaves gathered around a watch on the night that emancipation was declared.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP Advanced Douglass's language in this speech is both deeply emotional and highly formal, characterized by powerful word choices, parallel sentence structure, and elliptical clauses. Have students work together to determine the meaning of words and expressions that may be unfamiliar. Point out that in the second paragraph, Douglass sometimes omits repetitive words when his meaning is clear, using a comma to indicate the omission. To help students identify patterns, write this example on the board, using brackets to show the words that are omitted. Example: ". . . your boasted liberty [is] an unholy license; your national greatness [is] swelling vanity."

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Connect Ask: If you were asked to record your life experiences from the last month, what events would you choose to emphasize? (Students should share significant life events and respond to those of others.)

Ask: How might the events of the Civil War era have influenced the letters, journals, and speeches written at this time? (Students might say that the struggles and demands of the time occupied people's thoughts and were expressed in their private and public writings.)

Political History ☆

War Begins In April 1861, the newly declared Confederacy refused to allow provisions to be delivered to Fort Sumter in South Carolina. Instead, General P.G.T. Beauregard demanded that the Union surrender the fort. Rather than acknowledge Southern autonomy, Lincoln ordered that provisions be sent to the men. Beauregard's troops opened fire on the fort, and on the second day, with Fort Sumter badly damaged, U.S. Army Major Robert Anderson surrendered.

Big Idea 2

A Nation Divided

Fighting any war brings fear, loss, suffering, and death, but a war that turns the people of a country against each other is doubly bitter. In the American Civil War, communities and sometimes even families became divided by the conflict. Letters home were written from places most people had never heard of—Shiloh, Antietam, Gettysburg, and Chickamauga—all sites of major battles where thousands of soldiers were wounded or killed.

"Many are the hearts that are weary tonight, Wishing for the war to cease,"

—from the Civil War song "Tenting on the Old Campground" by Walter C. Kittredge Revolution or Treason?

When Abraham Lincoln (see pages 400–403) was elected to the U.S. Congress in 1846, he voted against abolishing slavery, because he thought it would destroy the Union. Still, he opposed its spreading to new territories, believing they should remain "places for poor people to go and better their condition." In his speech A House Divided in 1858, Lincoln warned of the possible end of the Republic:

> "We are now far into the fifth year, since a policy was initiated with the avowed object and confident promise of putting an end to slavery agitation. . . . In my opinion, it will not cease until a crisis shall have been reached, and passed—'A house divided against itself cannot stand.'"

When Lincoln was elected president in 1860, his words proved true. The North saw secession as an act of treason. The South believed that it had launched a second American revolution, and the Civil War began soon after Lincoln took office. ☆

Mary Chesnut's World

Mary Boykin Miller Chesnut (see pages 374–380) grew up in luxury on a large South Carolina plantation. Although she personally hated slavery, her family owned hundreds of slaves, and both her father and husband served as proslavery senators. Chesnut had little choice but to remain loyal to the South, but she documented the brutal cost of the war in her journal:

> July 1st [1862] . . . Edward Cheves, only son of John Cheves, killed. His sister kept crying, 'Oh, mother, what shall we do; Edward is killed,' but the mother sat dead still, white as a sheet, never uttering a word or shedding a tear. Are our women losing the capacity to weep?

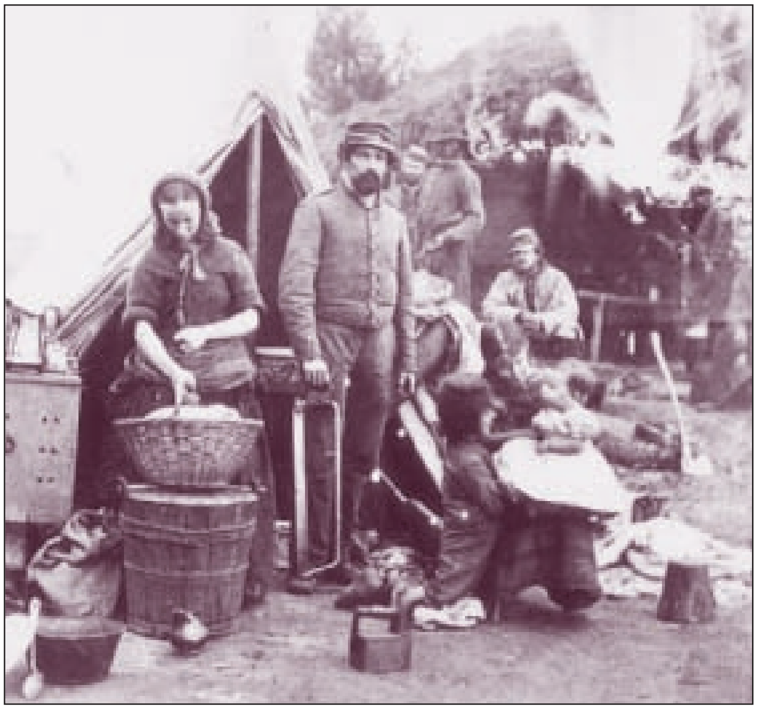
Chesnut visited hospitals, rejoiced with friends at Confederate victories, and cried over Confederate losses. Through it all, she detailed the cruelties and evils of war in her journal. Her story told of her own fears and reactions, the devaluation of Confederate currency, and the inflation that forced families into starvation.

Lincoln's Vision and Words

Abraham Lincoln initially wished only to limit slavery and to preserve the Union, but he came under increasing pressure to turn the war into a campaign against slavery. He cautiously committed himself to eliminating slavery throughout the country, beginning with the Emancipation Proclamation, which announced that he would free the enslaved people in the South on January 1, 1863. The proclamation turned the war into a moral battle that aroused not only the spirit of the North but also the spirits of those who were enslaved. Lincoln's speeches reflected his dedication to the preservation of the Union and his desire to heal the nation. When Lincoln delivered the Gettysburg Address in 1863, he expressed a new vision of the United States. 1

Writing Practice

Compare Songs Point out that Julia Ward Howe's song "Battle Hymn of the Republic," noted on the timeline on page 330, came to be regarded as the anthem of the Union cause during the war. Similarly, "Dixie," a minstrel-show song written before the war, became the anthem of the Confederate cause. Ask students to listen to versions of both songs and to compare the first verses and choruses of each. Point out that both songs have strong, steady rhythms that make them ideal for marching soldiers. Ask: What other similarities and differences do you find in the music and the language? In imagery and theme? Ask students to write an essay comparing the two Civil War anthems.



Civilians at 31st Pennsylvania Infantry Camp, 1862. Black and white photograph. Medford Historical Society Collection. ★ from Second Inaugural Address, March 4, 1865 by Abraham Lincoln

2 The Almighty has his own purposes. "Woe unto the world because of offenses! for it must needs be that offenses come; but woe to that man by whom the offense cometh!" If we shall suppose that American slavery is one of those offenses which, in the providence of God, must needs come, but which, having continued through His appointed time, He now wills to remove, and that He gives to both North and South, this terrible war, as the woe due to those by whom the offense came, shall we discern therein any departure from those divine attributes which the believers in a Living God always ascribe to Him? Fondly do we hope—fervently do we pray—that this mighty scourge of war may speedily pass away. Yet, if God wills that it continue, until all the wealth piled by the bond-man's two hundred and fifty years of unrequited toil shall be sunk, and until every drop of blood drawn with the lash, shall be paid by another drawn with the sword, as was said three thousand years ago, so still it must be said, "the judgments of the Lord, are true and righteous altogether." 2

With malice toward none; with charity for all; with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in; to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow, and his orphan—to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace, among ourselves, and with all nations.

Reading Check

Summarize Main Ideas What are the main ideas of each of the two paragraphs from Lincoln's Second Inaugural Address?

Teach

Reading Check

Answers: 1. God's will shall be done, and the length of the war shall be determined by it. 2. The country must both carry out the war and prepare to reunite with the enemy in peace.

Literary Element 2

Allusion Say: When writing to persuade, authors often make allusions to famous works to support their positions. In the excerpt from Lincoln's second inaugural address, there are two quotations. Ask: Where do these quotations come from? (Both come from the Bible.)

View the Photograph ★

Ask: How does this photograph make the Civil War more real? (Students may say that the image of people of different genders, races, and ages conveys a feeling of everyday life in the scene. Objects such as the tools suggest the work that waits to be done. The young child could belong to the woman at the left, or she might have been orphaned.) Say: Photographs like this one are valuable contributions to the historical record of the Civil War.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Oral Interpretation Have students work in groups to arrange the final paragraph of Lincoln's Second Inaugural Address into the form of a poem to present to the class. Encourage them to use line breaks to achieve clarity and force. They should determine in advance which lines will be spoken by solo voices and which will be spoken in unison; what words should be stressed; where pauses or changes in speaking rate would add dramatic effect. After rehearsing, each group should present a performance of their choral reading to the class.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Connect Ask: What does Whitman mean when he says, "The genius of the United States is . . . most in the common people"? (Students might point out that the United States is a democracy, and so the common people deserve credit for the country's achievements.)

Literary History ☆

Poet of Controversy Walt Whitman (1819–1892) wrote innovative poetry, and the subject of his writing was sometimes controversial because some of his poems celebrated the human body. While some people hailed Whitman as a prophet and genius, others viewed him as crude and unseemly. In the same year that he wrote his great elegy to Lincoln, Whitman was fired from his job as a government clerk, reportedly because the new secretary of the interior, James Harlan, hated Whitman's poetry.

Big Idea 3

A Poetic Revolution

In the middle of the 1800s, two poets with dramatically contrasting lives and writing styles altered the course of American poetry. Walt Whitman and Emily Dickinson explored their emotions through poetry that broke with traditional themes and forms. Their work created two diverse inspirations for poets to this day.

> "The genius of the United States is not best or most in its executives or legislatures, nor in its ambassadors or authors or colleges . . . but always most in the common people." 1
>
> —Walt Whitman

Whitman's World

Walt Whitman (see pages 408–429) found poetry in the lives of everyday Americans. He took daily walks to absorb the sights and sounds of Brooklyn and its people, especially blue-collar workers. ☆ Whitman used his experiences as a reporter, teacher, laborer, and Civil War nurse to create his poetry. His distinctive style is marked by long, rollicking lines written in free verse—poetry based on the irregular rhythms of speech, rather than on traditional poetic meter. Whitman imagined his work as one long, boundless poem that expressed his all-embracing view of the world. Leaves of Grass captured the colorful speech and brash, optimistic spirit of a vital young nation. In an essay on the ideal poet, Ralph Waldo Emerson had observed: "The poet has a new thought; he has a whole new experience to unfold; he will tell us how it was with him, and all men will be the richer in his fortune." Inspired by Emerson's vision, Whitman saw himself as this poet.

Whitman on the War

When the Civil War came, Whitman's work reflected his sympathies for the struggles of the Union. The poems in Drum-Taps reflect his changing attitudes and experiences as a nurse. Whitman cared for both Union and Confederate soldiers in war hospitals. Being on the scene was essential to him, whether he was sharing the energy of city life or the grief of battle casualties. In President Abraham Lincoln, Whitman found an American hero. He celebrated the "Rail-Splitter" who had emerged from humble origins to unify the nation and felt profound grief when Lincoln was assassinated. In the elegy "When Lilacs Last in the Dooryard Bloom'd," Whitman addresses the nature of grief and embraces a theme of renewal in spite of the tragic assassination.

Dickinson's Introspection

While Whitman experienced America and its people, Emily Dickinson (see pages 437–454) observed the life of Amherst, Massachusetts, from her bedroom window, composing poetry that could turn the ordinary into the deeply meaningful. Dickinson wrote approximately 1,775 poems, though less than a dozen were published in her lifetime. She suggested that her work had to make its points subtly: "The Truth must dazzle gradually / Or every man be blind." Although Dickinson created poetry during the Civil War, her poems do not place the reader on the battlefield and in the action as Whitman's do. Instead, her themes connect the reader to moments and feelings.

In her poem on the following page, Dickinson describes the time before darkness envelops the day. Her metaphor relates sunset and darkness to death. Though this poem is not about the Civil War, it conveys a fear of dying, appropriate to a period of war. Dickinson has been described as an expert miniaturist because of the depth of expression contained in her tightly constructed poems.

Reading Practice

Imagery and Figurative Language Define imagery as descriptive language that evokes an emotional response and appeals to the senses. Define figurative language as words not meant to be read literally (e.g., simile, metaphor, personification). Have students find examples of imagery and figurative language in the two poems on this spread. Tell them to list their findings on a two-column chart. Examples:

Imagery

- arms flash in the sun; the musical clank

Figurative Language

- Tables in the sky; awful Cutlery

Central Park, 20th century. George Luks. Oil on canvas, 31.5 x 34.4 in. Private collection. ★

"Cavalry Crossing a Ford"
by Walt Whitman

A line in long array where they wind betwixt
  green islands,
They take a serpentine course, their arms flash
  in the sun—hark to the musical clank, Behold the silvery river, in it the splashing horses loitering stop to drink,
Behold the brown-faced men, each group, each person a picture, the negligent rest on the saddles,
Some emerge on the opposite bank, others are just entering the ford—while,
Scarlet and blue and snowy white,
The guidon flags flutter gayly in the wind. 2

"The Lightning is a yellow Fork"
by Emily Dickinson

The Lightning is a yellow Fork
From Tables in the sky
By inadvertent fingers dropt
The awful Cutlery

Of mansions never quite disclosed
And never quite concealed
The Apparatus of the Dark
To ignorance revealed.

Reading Check

Analyze Imagery How does Whitman convey a sense of motion in his poem? To how many senses does this poem appeal and in what lines?

Analyze Metaphor What two things does Dickinson compare in her poem?

Teach

Reading Check

Analyze Imagery

Answers: Whitman conveys a sense of motion through long lines with an irregular rhythm. The imagery shows multiple perspectives of the cavalry, providing a sense of moving with the troops. The poem appeals to sight (lines 1–5) and hearing (lines 2 and 3).

Analyze Metaphor

Answer: A storm and a heavenly dinner party

Literary Element 2

Poetic Language Poetry expresses experiences or insights through the imaginative use of language. Say: Review the poem by Whitman. How does he describe usual things in unusual ways? (He gives them particular attention—for example, the shining weapons and the snakelike appearance of the column of men on horseback.)

View the Art ★

In addition to painting, George Luks (1867–1933) led a colorful life as a war correspondent in Cuba, a cartoonist, and a boxer. His subjects were often society's social outcasts. Like Walt Whitman, Luks looked to the lives of common people for his inspiration.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Tell students that figurative language appears in many common sayings that compare two unlike things, for example, when the wind is said to be "as cold as ice" or a truck is "as big as a house." Point out how these comparisons help readers understand the wind's temperature and the truck's size. Ask: How does Dickinson help you see lightning when she compares it to a "yellow Fork"? (Readers see the shape and color of a lightning bolt.) Ask: How does Whitman help you feel the breeze in the last line? (The words "flags fluttering gayly" make the wind seem playful, not harsh.)

Assess/Close

Legacy of the Period

Refer students to the quotation by Whitman: "The United States themselves are essentially the greatest poem." Ask: Since Whitman lived during a time when the nation's future seemed bleak, what might have caused him to make this statement? (Whitman had faith in the nation's people and character.)

Cultural and Literary Links

Suggest that students look for music, art, or literature that was influenced by the Civil War era.

Activities

1. Follow up The South believed it was a constitutional right to allow slavery, while the North disagreed. The Civil War became a focal point for many of the writings from this period. Whitman and Dickinson revolutionized poetry by breaking traditional forms and themes.
2. Contrast Literary Periods Students should use specific examples to support how one of the Big Ideas reflects American culture today.
3. Visual Literacy Students could create a timeline of landmark events in the struggle against slavery.
4. Take Notes Students should use the study organizer to identify main ideas in this unit and hone their note taking skills.

FOLDABLES Study Organizer

Have students make and label the Three-Tab Book, and then write notes about the people, places, and events for each Big Idea beneath each tab.

Wrap-Up

Legacy of the Period

Up to and during the Civil War, writers shifted from Romanticism to Realism in response to the cultural and social forces affecting the nation. Depictions of slavery, and of fugitives from slavery, by Frederick Douglass and others stirred the Northern conscience and infuriated Southern planters.

Eventually, the North's resistance to slavery and the South's insistence on states' rights resulted in a bloody conflict that tore the nation apart. Civil War cemeteries and battlefields throughout Eastern and Southern states today are grim reminders of lives shattered or ended.

Walt Whitman claimed that "the United States themselves are essentially the greatest poem." Poets continue to emulate the free verse of Whitman and his exploration of the self in relationship to the world. Emily Dickinson is now recognized as one of the greatest American poets. Her work—with its concise style, experimental grammar and punctuation, and everyday subjects transformed into the meaningful and universal—has influenced poets worldwide.

Cultural and Literary Links

- Whitman has influenced scores of poets, including Allen Ginsberg, who called him "dear father, graybeard, lonely old courage-teacher."
- One of the most famous movies ever made, Gone with the Wind, was based on a 1936 novel about the Civil War and Reconstruction by Southerner Margaret Mitchell.

Literature Online

Unit Resources For additional skills practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Activities

Choose one of the following activities to explore and develop as you read this unit.

1. Follow Up Go back to the Looking Ahead section on page 329 and answer the questions.
2. Contrast Literary Periods Working in a small group, create a brief presentation for your class about how one of this time period's big ideas is reflected in American culture today. Focus your presentation on one aspect of contemporary culture, such as art, music, literature, or politics.
3. Visual Literacy Create a timeline that represents the American people and the struggles they faced during the Civil War. Use works of art, photographs, advertisements, book covers, and posters in your presentation. Include brief descriptions of how these works reflect the period.
4. Take Notes Use this study organizer to record information about the people, settings, and events you read about in this unit.

FOLDABLES Study Organizer THREE-TAB BOOK

Speaking Practice

Persuasive Language Ask students to practice their persuasive skills by responding to the following statement: "Abraham Lincoln was the greatest president in American history." Tell students to research both sides of the issue in order to argue in a classroom "town meeting." Suggest that they come prepared to state why their position is right. Tell students to use study strategies, such as note taking, outlining, and asking questions, to understand their research materials. Suggest that they write down opposing arguments and prepare notes in defense.

PART 1

Resistance to Slavery

A Ride for Liberty, or The Fugitive Slaves, 1862. J. Eastman Johnson. 55.9 x 66.7 cm. Brooklyn Museum of Art, New York.

View the Art Eastman Johnson claimed he based this painting on an event he witnessed near a Virginia battlefield in 1862. Scholars believe Johnson never exhibited this work because it was too controversial. What aspects of this painting might have aroused controversy in the 1860s? ★

> "You have seen how a man was made a slave;
> you shall see how a slave was made a man."
>
> —Frederick Douglass
> Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass, an American slave 1

UNIT THREE

PART 1

Analyze and Extend

Reading Strategy 1

Connect Say: Frederick Douglass became a powerful orator for the abolitionist cause. Yet many doubted such an educated man could ever have been a slave. This led Douglass to write his autobiography. Direct students to read the quotation from Douglass.

Ask: How does this quotation explain Douglass's purpose for writing his biography? (Douglass intends to show how he developed into an independent person out of the conditions of slavery.)

View the Art ★

Answer: The painting would have been controversial because the man is African American and the woman is white, and because in the South, slaves' escape was illegal.

Jonathan Eastman Johnson (1824–1906) was born in Maine and studied in the Netherlands. He became known as the American Rembrandt. His paintings are noted for their detail and their storytelling quality.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Ask students to make a list of the details they notice in the painting. (Three people on a horse; man, woman, and child; woman appears Caucasian while the man and child appear African American; woman is looking backwards; horse is moving quickly; the landscape is blurred, reddish color; the sky appears cloudy) Discuss the details and what each might suggest about the meaning of the painting. Ask students to write two sentences describing the painting and their interpretation of the painting's meaning. Read the Frederick Douglass quotation aloud. Discuss connections between the quotation and the painting. Have students write a sentence explaining a connection.

For additional support for English Learners, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 19.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus
Transparency 20
Daily Language Practice
Transparency 31

Or play recordings of African American spirituals other than those included in this anthology. Possibilities include "Go Tell It on the Mountain," "Deep River," and "Wade in the Water." Tell students to listen for similarities. Ask: What do these spirituals have in common? (Students might point out rhythm or references to God, Jesus, and the Bible.)

Before You Read

Three Spirituals

Who Wrote the Spirituals?

The spirituals featured here came out of the oral tradition of African Americans enslaved in the South before the outbreak of the Civil War. These "sorrow songs," as they were called, were created by anonymous artists and transmitted by word of mouth. As a result, several versions of the same spiritual may exist. According to the Library of Congress, more than six thousand spirituals have been documented, though some are not known in their entirety.

Cultures Old and New African American spirituals combined the tunes and texts of Christian hymns with the rhythms, finger-snapping, clapping, and stamping of traditional African music. The spirituals allowed enslaved Africans to retain some of the culture of their homelands and forge a new culture while facing the hardships of captive life in the United States. Many spirituals followed a call-and-response pattern in which a leader sang the verses and was answered by a group of singers. The singers often improvised the songs by changing words or adding new verses.

> "Every tone [in the spirituals] was a testimony against slavery, and a prayer to God for deliverance from chains."
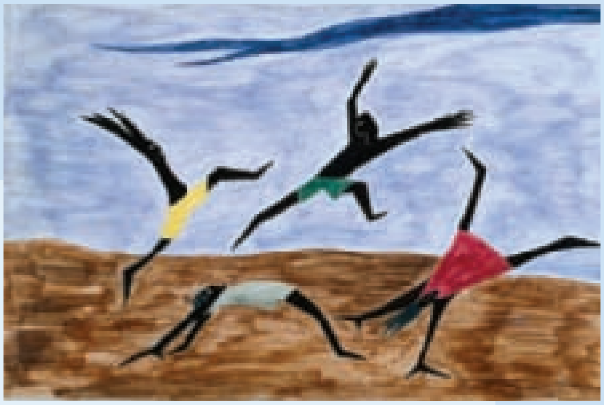
>
> —Frederick Douglass

Enslaved African Americans sang spirituals both in worship and while laboring in the field. Many of the songs have a dual meaning, expressing both religious faith and a hunger for freedom. The New York Tribune published "Go Down, Moses" after Reverend Lewis Lockwood heard African Americans singing it on September 3, 1861, and submitted the lyrics.



The Life of Harriet Tubman, #4, 1940. Jacob Lawrence. Casein tempera on hardboard, 12 x $17\frac{7}{8}$ in. Hampton University Museum, Hampton, VA.

Encoded Messages Some spirituals served as encoded messages by which enslaved field workers, forbidden to speak to each other, could communicate practical information about escape plans. Some typical code words included Egypt, referring to the South or the state of bondage, and the promised land or heaven, referring to the North or freedom. To communicate a message of hope, spirituals frequently recounted Bible stories about people liberated from oppression through divine intervention. The spiritual "Keep Your Hand on the Plow," for example, tells the story of Paul and Silas, who were released from prison after God sent an earthquake to free them.

Saved from Obscurity The spirituals were saved from obscurity after the Civil War by the Jubilee Singers of Fisk University in Nashville, Tennessee. To raise money for the school during a time of financial hardship, the small university choir sang spirituals to church groups around the country. The Jubilee Singers were soon in demand and eventually performed the spirituals for President Ulysses S. Grant and England's Queen Victoria.

The spirituals became a part of American pop culture, paving the way for other musical forms including blues and jazz and influencing poets such as James Weldon Johnson. When Martin Luther King Jr. led the march in Washington, D.C., for civil rights in March 1963, he quoted from the spiritual "Free at Last": "You can hinder me here, but you can't hinder me there."

Selection Skills

Three Spirituals

Literary Elements
- Refrain (SE pp. 345, 346, 349)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (TE pp. 346–348)

Reading Skills
- Analyze Historical Context (SE pp. 345, 348, 349)
- Evaluate (TE p. 342)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a List (SE p. 349)
- Compare Songs and Poems (TE p. 346)

Vocabulary Skills
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 349)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Spirituals

What music do you turn to for inspiration or comfort? Why do you think it helps you? Discuss these questions with a partner.

Build Background

For many enslaved African Americans, the situation of the Jews in the Bible was especially poignant. According to the Bible, the Jews were forced into slavery by a pharaoh, or ruler, of Egypt. Moses, a leader of the Jews, asked the pharaoh to free his people, warning that otherwise God would send ten plagues upon the Egyptians. The plagues came, and the pharaoh released the Jews. After Egyptian soldiers chased the Jews to the shores of the Red Sea, Moses called upon God to part the waters so his people could cross. The sea rolled back for the Jews to pass but closed in on the Egyptian soldiers. When the Jews "reached the other shore," they were free people once again.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Resistance to Slavery

As you read, ask yourself, What role did spirituals play in the African American struggle for freedom?

Literary Element Refrain

A refrain is a line or lines repeated in a poem or song. For example, the line "Let my people go" is repeated in every stanza of the spiritual "Go Down, Moses." As you read, ask yourself, How do the refrains in each spiritual help emphasize a central idea?

Reading Strategy Analyze Historical Context

Understanding the context in which the spirituals were created can help you better appreciate them. Enslaved African Americans toiled long hours, were barred from communicating with each other, and were frequently threatened with violence. In spirituals, African Americans were depicted as the beloved children of a just and mighty God, destined for freedom.

Spirituals were a fundamental part of slave life. They were sung during worship, rest, work, and play. As you read the spirituals, jot down your thoughts about how they reflect the hopes and beliefs of slaves.

Learning Objectives

For pages 344–349

In studying these texts, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing repetition.

Reading: Analyzing historical context.

Writing: Writing a list.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

The three spirituals reproduced here represent part of the body of "sorrow songs" created by African Americans during their enslavement of more than 200 years. All three have roots in an oral tradition that combined the traditions of Christian faith and those of African music. Sung during work, during worship, and for secret communication, the spirituals are a rich part of the cultural heritage of the United States.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 20–25.

Literary History ☆

Symbols in Spirituals In spirituals, Egypt and Pharaoh represent the South, slavery, and the slave master. Canaan, the Promised Land, heaven and home represent freedom, the North, and an end to trouble and pain. Crossing the Jordan River has a dual meaning: making a risky move and entering a new and better life.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Some students may be more familiar with chorus than its synonym refrain. Ask them to think of refrains from pop or folk songs they know. Point out that a refrain is a memory device that reinforces the main idea or emotion of a song or poem. Ask them to focus on repeated lines in the spirituals to identify the idea or emotion that is being emphasized.

Established Have students make a three-column chart or other graphic organizer to keep track of the details of each song as they read. When you begin to read the selection, model for students an example of your own response to a detail from "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot." Then, tell students to continue using the chart as they read the spirituals.

Teach

Big Idea

Resistance to Slavery

Say: How can singing be a form of resistance? (Music can bring people dignity when they are mistreated; music lifts spirits; music can communicate through rhythm or symbolic lyrics.)

Literary Element 1

Refrain Answer: It is part of the call-and-response structure; it emphasizes the singers' longing to be "home."

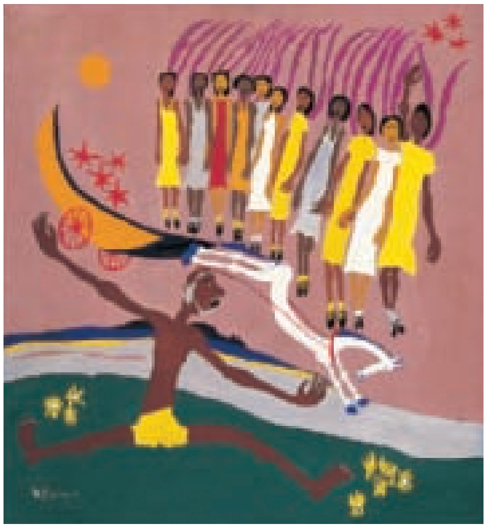
View the Art ★

William H. Johnson (1901–1970) was a master of several artistic styles. In the 1930s he began to use a distinctive folk style to reflect the African American experience. Ask: What specific elements of "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" are shown in the painting? (Students should identify the band of angels, the chariot, and the Jordan River.) What emotion does the figure in the foreground seem to be expressing? (Students may say that the figure seems to be welcoming or embracing the arrival of the chariot and angels.)

Swing Low, Sweet Chariot



Swing Low, Sweet Chariot, 1944. William H. Johnson. Oil on board, 28½ x 26½ in. National Museum of American Art, Washington, DC.

Swing low, sweet chariot,
Coming for to carry me home,
Swing low, sweet chariot,
Coming for to carry me home.

I looked over Jordan[1] and what did I see,
Coming for to carry me home?
A band of angels coming after me,
Coming for to carry me home.

If you get there before I do,
Coming for to carry me home,
Tell all my friends I'm coming too;
Coming for to carry me home.

I'm sometimes up, I'm sometimes down,
Coming for to carry me home,
But still my soul feels heavenly bound;
Coming for to carry me home.

Swing low, sweet chariot,
Coming for to carry me home,
Swing low, sweet chariot,
Coming for to carry me home.

---

[1] Jordan refers to the Jordan River. In the Book of Exodus in the Bible, when the Jews were fleeing from slavery in Egypt, they had to cross the Jordan to reach their Promised Land.

Refrain How does the refrain function in the spiritual? 1

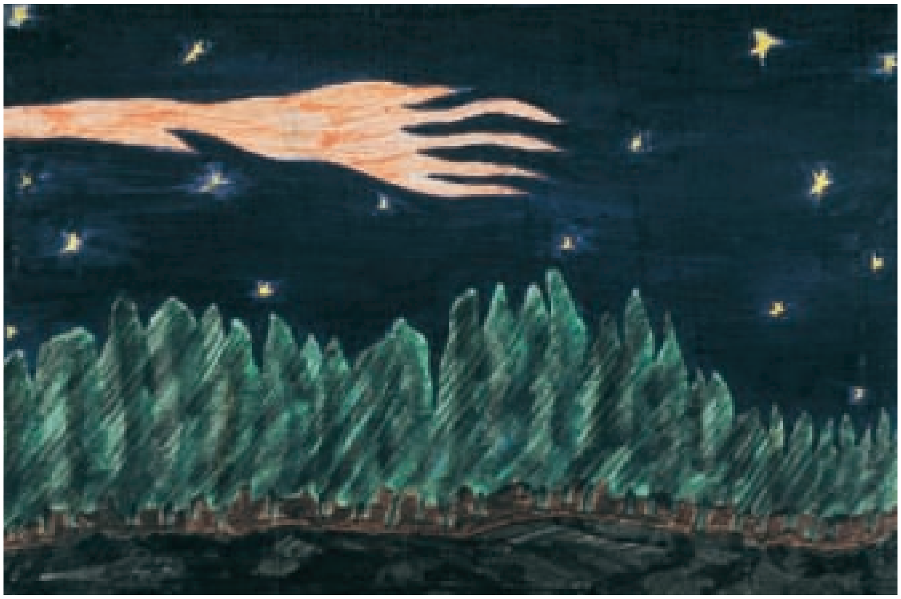
Writing Practice

Compare Songs and Poems Initiate a brief discussion. Ask: In what ways are songs similar to poems? (Students might say that both contain stanzas and refrains, and both use rhyme, rhythm, repetition, figurative language, and imagery.) Point out that spirituals can be experienced by reading them, singing them, or listening to them.

Say: Which way of experiencing the spirituals do you prefer? Write a paragraph explaining your preference.



Harriet Tubman Series No. 11, 1939-40. Jacob Lawrence. Casein tempera on gessoed hardboard, 12 x 17⅞ in. Hampton University Museum, Hampton, VA.

Go Down, Moses

Go down, Moses,
'Way down in Egypt's land;
Tell ole Pharaoh
Let my people go.

When Israel was in Egypt's land,
Let my people go;
Oppressed so hard they could not stand,
Let my people go.

Thus saith the Lord, bold Moses said,
Let my people go;
Let them come out with Egypt's spoil,
Let my people go.

The Lord told Moses what to do,
Let my people go;
To lead the children of Israel thro',
Let my people go.

When they had reached the other shore,
Let my people go;
They sang a song of triumph o'er.
Let my people go.

Go down, Moses,
'Way down in Egypt's land;
Tell ole Pharaoh
Let my people go.

Resistance to Slavery How does this biblical allusion reflect the enslaved people's desire to escape slavery? 2

Teach

Big Idea 2

Resistance to Slavery

Answer: Enslaved people would have drawn a parallel between the Israelites' escape from Egypt and their own escape from slavery.

View the Art ★

Jacob Lawrence (1917–2000), whose work is featured in Part 3 of Unit Five, is one of the most well-known African American artists of the 1900s. Lawrence created several series of paintings showing scenes from African American history. Ask: What details in this painting remind you of the spirituals sung by African American slaves? (Students might say that the painting draws attention to the sky, particularly the stars, where the slaves looked for direction as they escaped toward the North.)

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Some students may have difficulty making detailed analogies between the slavery experience of the Israelites and that of African Americans. Review the basic parallels: Egypt's land represents the South; Pharoah represents slave owners; my people (the Israelites) represent people enslaved in America. Ask: What is "the other shore" in line 17? What does that phrase mean to the people singing the song? (Students should recognize that the shore is the other side of the Jordan River, in the Promised Land. For African Americans in slavery, the other shore is the land of freedom.)

Teach

Big Idea 1

Resistance to Slavery

Answer: These lines connect bondage with the hope of salvation.

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Historical Context

Answer: In the antebellum South, slavery was a form of both physical and psychological bondage. Enslaved people would have made the connection between their bondage and Paul and Silas's time in jail.

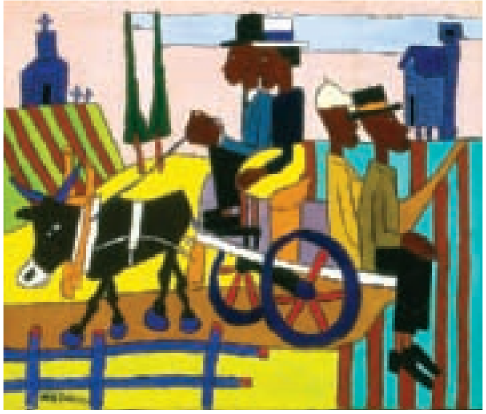
For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 27.

View the Art ★

William H. Johnson (1901–1970) learned to draw by copying comics. His pursuit of a career in painting led him to Paris, Denmark, and North Africa. He focused his art on reworking traditional religious images in African American culture. Ask: What religious traditions of African American culture are depicted in the painting? (The family is dressed up for church, and the entire family is going to church together.)

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 28.



Going to Church, 1940–1941. William H. Johnson. Oil on burlap, 38⅛ x 45½ in. Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC. ★

Keep Your Hand on the Plow

Mary wo' three links of chain,
Ev'ry link was Jesus' name.
Keep your hand on the plow,
Hold on.

CHORUS
Hold on, hold on,
Keep your hand on the plow,
Hold on.

Paul and Silas bound in jail,[1]
Had nobody for to go their bail,
Keep your hand on the plow,
Hold on.

Paul and Silas began to shout,
Jail doors opened and they walked out . . .

Peter was so nice and neat,[2]
Wouldn't let Jesus wash his feet . . .

Jesus said, "If I wash them not,
You'll have no father in this lot" . . .

Peter got anxious and he said,
"Wash my feet, my hands and head," . . .

Got my hand on the gospel plow,
Wouldn't take nothin' for my journey now, . . .

---

[1] In the Bible (Acts 16:16–40) the Apostle Paul and his companion Silas are imprisoned, but an earthquake shakes the prison and releases them.

[2] In the Bible (John 13:4–20) the Apostle Peter objects at first when Jesus wants to wash his feet.

Resistance to Slavery How might these lines have helped singers and listeners endure slavery? 1

Analyze Historical Context Why might enslaved people have connected with these lines in the spiritual? 2

Reading Practice

Evaluate Frederick Douglass wrote of spirituals, "Every tone was a testimony against slavery and a prayer to God for deliverance from chains." Ask: How does this spiritual support what he wrote? (Students might say that the reference to Mary's chain and the imprisonment of Paul and Silas point to the injustice of slavery; the allusion to Jesus and Peter suggests the freedom the slaves could hope for.)

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Which phrases or lines from these spirituals did you find most comforting or inspiring?
2. (a)What feelings does the speaker express in lines 13–16 of "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot"? (b)Why do you think the speaker's "soul feels heavenly bound"?
3. (a)In lines 1–8 of "Go Down, Moses," what is the speaker asking Moses to do? (b)What might these lines say about the experiences and hopes of enslaved African Americans?
4. (a)Summarize the two Bible stories retold in "Keep Your Hand on the Plow." (b)Why do you think these particular stories were included in a spiritual? Explain.

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)What do you think is the meaning of lines 1–3 of "Keep Your Hand on the Plow"? (b)In what way do these lines illuminate the theme, or overall message, of the song?
6. Describe the mood, or overall feeling, created by each of the spirituals. Use specific examples from each song to support your response.

Connect

7. Big Idea Resistance to Slavery What elements of the spirituals helped singers and listeners endure and overcome slavery? Include details from the spirituals in your answer.
8. Connect to the Author From what you have read, what do you think the authors of the spirituals were like? Explain.

Literary Element Refrain

Spirituals usually contain at least one refrain that emphasizes the central idea, or theme, and that also helps establish the mood.

1. What mood is created by the refrain in "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot"?
2. In "Go Down, Moses," what impact does the repetition of "Let my people go" create?

Reading Strategy Analyze Historical Context

Spirituals often combined phrases from English hymns with harmonies and rhythms found in African music. How do spirituals reflect the history of African Americans?

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Academic Vocabulary

The South's economic reliance on slavery made the prospect of abolition an unsavory one.

Reliance is an academic word. In more casual conversation, someone might say a man with terrible eyesight has an unavoidable reliance on his glasses.

To study the word further, finish the sentence below.

A person who has a reliance on __________ needs it/them for __________ .

Writing

Write a List Think about a modern-day issue that might be the subject of a spiritual. Write a list of five refrains that you think represent that issue. Remember that a refrain contributes to theme, mood, and rhythm. Next to each refrain, jot down a reason for your choice.

After You Read

Assess

1. Sample answers: "Carry me home" and "heavenly bound"
2. a) Sometimes feels all right, sometimes depressed; always believes he/she will attain freedom (b) The speaker has faith.
3. (a) Demand freedom for the Jews (b) That they suffered and desired liberation
4. (a) Paul and Silas were in prison; freed by God. Peter first refuses to let Jesus wash his feet, then lets him do so. (b) To encourage people to have faith
5. (a) Remain hopeful that escape is possible (b) Faith in God helps overcome hard times.
6. Plaintive, hopeful; people are unjustly oppressed but supported by faith; students should provide details for support.
7. Comfort, hope, advice about escape; students should provide details for support.
8. Students may say the authors felt oppressed by slavery but drew strength from their religious faith and their sense of community.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 121–122.

Literary Element

1. Anticipation, hopefulness
2. Adds power to the demand

Progress Check

Can students identify a refrain?

If No → See Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 26.

Reading Strategy

They tell of enslavement and hardship. They are reminders of a difficult past.

Academic Vocabulary

Sample Sentence: A person who has a reliance on an inhaler needs it for easing asthma attacks.

Writing

Students' lists and reasons will vary. Some students may say their issues would work in a spiritual because they deal with injustice or discrimination, just as the original spirituals did.

Focus

Bellringer Options

Literature Launchers DVD: Pre-Reading Videos

Selection Focus Transparency 21

Daily Language Practice Transparency 32

Or on the board, write: Knowledge is power.

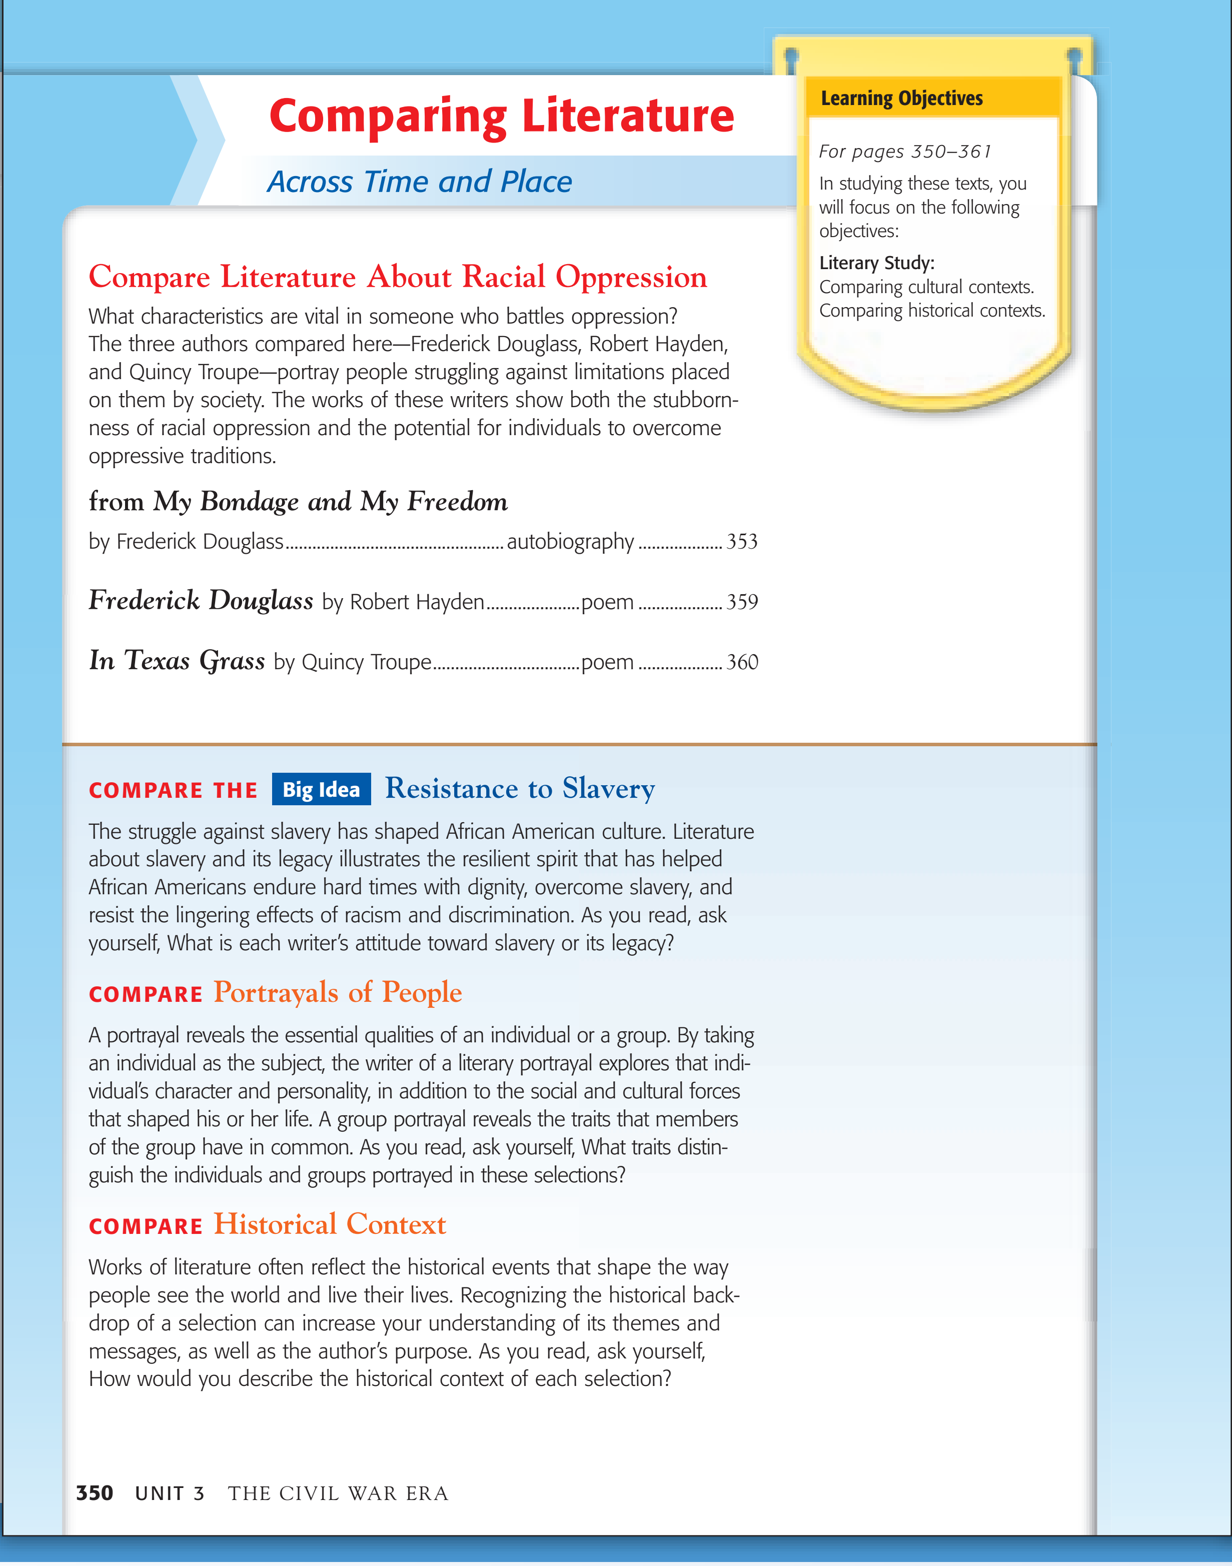
Ask: How can education help a person who is oppressed? (Students may say that learning can help one become more persuasive and influence others to help; education makes people proud of their abilities.)

Connect to the Reading Selections

Ask students if they know people who have struggled or are struggling under oppression. Allow them to share their responses with the class. Then have students discuss what they already know about Frederick Douglass and slavery in the American South.



Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

Learning Objectives

For pages 350–361

In studying these texts, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study:
Comparing cultural contexts.
Comparing historical contexts.

Compare Literature About Racial Oppression

What characteristics are vital in someone who battles oppression? The three authors compared here—Frederick Douglass, Robert Hayden, and Quincy Troupe—portray people struggling against limitations placed on them by society. The works of these writers show both the stubbornness of racial oppression and the potential for individuals to overcome oppressive traditions.

from My Bondage and My Freedom
by Frederick Douglass .... autobiography 353

Frederick Douglass by Robert Hayden .... poem 359

In Texas Grass by Quincy Troupe .... poem 360

COMPARE THE Big Idea Resistance to Slavery

The struggle against slavery has shaped African American culture. Literature about slavery and its legacy illustrates the resilient spirit that has helped African Americans endure hard times with dignity, overcome slavery, and resist the lingering effects of racism and discrimination. As you read, ask yourself, What is each writer's attitude toward slavery or its legacy?

COMPARE Portrayals of People

A portrayal reveals the essential qualities of an individual or a group. By taking an individual as the subject, the writer of a literary portrayal explores that individual's character and personality, in addition to the social and cultural forces that shaped his or her life. A group portrayal reveals the traits that members of the group have in common. As you read, ask yourself, What traits distinguish the individuals and groups portrayed in these selections?

COMPARE Historical Context

Works of literature often reflect the historical events that shape the way people see the world and live their lives. Recognizing the historical backdrop of a selection can increase your understanding of its themes and messages, as well as the author's purpose. As you read, ask yourself, How would you describe the historical context of each selection?

Selection Skills

from My Bondage and My Freedom

Literary Elements
- Autobiography (SE pp. 352, 354, 358)

Reading Skills
- Analyze Cause and Effect (SE pp. 352, 356, 358; TE p. 352)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a Dialogue (SE p. 358)
- Critical Response (TE p. 354)
- Analyze Imagery (TE p. 360)

Study Skills/Research/Assessment
- Short Answer Questions (TE p. 356)

Vocabulary Skills
- Connotation (SE p. 352)
- Transitive Verbs (TE p. 352)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (TE p. 355)

Before You Read

from My Bondage and My Freedom

Meet Frederick Douglass

(1818–1895)

Of all of the voices raised against slavery, few were as powerful as that of Frederick Douglass's. He was, as women's rights activist Elizabeth Cady Stanton wrote, "conscious of his dignity and power, grand in his proportions, majestic in his wrath."

> "Where justice is denied, where poverty is enforced, where ignorance prevails, and where any one class is made to feel that society is in an organized conspiracy to oppress, rob, and degrade them, neither persons nor property will be safe."
>
> —Frederick Douglass

From Bondage to Freedom Douglass was born on a Maryland plantation and given the name Frederick Bailey. When Frederick was eight years old, he went to work as a house servant for the Auld family in Baltimore. Mrs. Auld decided to teach Frederick how to read, which violated a Maryland state law. When her husband discovered what was happening, he forbade any further reading lessons. Frederick then secretly continued his education on his own. At the age of twenty, Frederick Bailey finally escaped to freedom and changed his name to Douglass to avoid capture.

In 1841 Douglass's life took a remarkable turn. He was asked to speak at an antislavery convention in Nantucket, Massachusetts. Although he was nervous about speaking, Douglass's speech about his experiences as a slave was so eloquent that it prompted abolitionist leaders to ask him to work as an agent for the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society. While Douglass toured for the society, his reputation quickly grew.

Public Life In 1845 Douglass wrote his autobiography, Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass, an American Slave. Because Douglass identified his former owner in the book, he sailed to Great Britain to avoid capture. Abolitionists welcomed Douglass and raised money to enable him to buy his freedom and return home in 1847. That same year he started publishing a newspaper, The North Star. The paper's masthead read: "Right is of no Sex—Truth is of no Color," proclaiming both Douglass's abolitionism and his support for women's rights.

At the outbreak of the Civil War in 1861, President Lincoln appointed Douglass one of his advisers. After the war, he remained a staunch supporter of civil rights for formerly enslaved people. Before his death in 1895, Douglass served as the marshal and recorder of deeds in Washington, D.C., and as consul general to Haiti. He also revised and republished his autobiography as My Bondage and My Freedom in 1855, and then again as Life and Times of Frederick Douglass in 1882. Douglass's autobiography remains one of the most important chronicles of the enslaved person's experience and displays the brilliance of Douglass's literary mind.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Frederick Douglass, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Comparing Literature

Before You Read

Focus

Big Idea

Resistance to Slavery

Have a student read aloud the highlighted quotation on this page. Ask: In your own words, what is Douglass saying? (No people or possessions can be safe in a society where one group of people oppresses another.) Ask: Based on this statement, what can you infer about Douglass's values? (He believes that for society to function properly, all people must have justice.)

APPROACHING If students have difficulty with the quotation, help them identify and rephrase the main clause. (People and property will not be safe.)

Political History ☆

Douglass in the Civil War

Douglass played an active role in recruiting African Americans to serve in the Union army. More than 180,000 African Americans served in the war, including all three of Douglass's sons. Douglass met personally with President Lincoln in July 1863 to seek improvements in pay and treatment for African American soldiers.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging Students may have difficulty comprehending the Douglass quotation due to its complex structure and formal vocabulary. Assign students to work in small groups, first to identify the main clause of the sentence (neither persons nor property will be safe), and then to rewrite the sentence in words and in a sequence that they find easier to understand. After the groups have completed and compared their various versions, have the class return to Douglass's original version for discussion.

Interactive Read and Write

Other options for teaching this selection can be found in

- Interactive Read and Write for EL Students, pp. 99–114
- Interactive Read and Write for Approaching-Level Students, pp. 99–114
- Interactive Read and Write for On-Level Students, pp. 99–114

Focus

Summary

Douglass tells of his struggle to learn to read and write. At first Mrs. Auld is happy to teach him, but then her husband insists she stop. Douglass turns to his white friends to continue learning. They help him in return for "fees" of food. Douglass's newfound knowledge creates in him a deep scorn for the institution of slavery, because he sees that it harms both the enslaved person and the slaveholder.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 31–36.

Vocabulary

Transitive Verbs Point out to students that the verbs induce, vanquish, and censure are transitive verbs, that is, verbs that act upon a direct object. Ask: Which verb would you be most likely to use for an action upon an enemy, foe, or opponent? (vanquish) Which verb would you use for an action upon a listener or audience? (induce) Which verb would you use for an action upon one who has done wrong or made a error. (censure)

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Autobiography

What would your life be like if you couldn't read? Freewrite for a few minutes about the effects illiteracy might have on you.

Build Background

As a result of restrictive slave laws, Douglass had to improvise to improve his reading and writing skills. For example, while running errands for workers in the Baltimore shipyards, he observed carpenters who were painting signs on boards.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Resistance to Slavery

In this excerpt, Douglass reveals his thoughts about his life as an enslaved African American. As you read, ask yourself, What role does he believe that education plays in fighting slavery?

Literary Element Autobiography

An autobiography is a narrative that a person writes about his or her life. Douglass wrote about his own life in the wider historical context of slavery. As you read, ask yourself, What was Douglass's purpose in writing about his experiences?

Reading Strategy Analyze Cause and Effect

Analyzing cause-and-effect relationships means figuring out how a writer arranges details to show that certain events and ideas can cause, or bring about, certain results or effects. As you read, ask yourself the following questions:

- What major events does Douglass write about?
- What effects were caused by these major events?

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart to record the cause-and-effect relationships you find in the selection.

Cause	Effect
Mrs. Auld introduces Douglass to reading.	Douglass determines to attain knowledge at any cost.

Vocabulary

benevolent (bə nev′ ə lənt) adj. doing or desiring to do good; kind; p. 353 The benevolent girl helped the woman who was struggling to carry bags of groceries.

depravity (di prav′ ə tē) n. the state of being morally bad or corrupt; p. 353 The brutal tactics of slave traders showed a depravity that has shocked modern citizens.

induce (in dōōs′) v. to lead by persuasion or influence; p. 354 The powerful speaker tried to induce the members of his audience to change their minds on the issue.

vanquish (vang′ kwish) v. to defeat; p. 356 President Lincoln decided that military force would be the only way to vanquish slavery in the South.

censure (sen′ shər) v. to express disapproval of; to find fault with; to blame; p. 357 The writer decided to censure the government policy in her report.

Tip: Denotation and Connotation Some words that have the same dictionary definition can have different cultural definitions. For example, benevolent and nice have a similar meaning, but benevolent has a stronger connotation.

Reading Practice

SMALL GROUP

Analyze Cause and Effect Cause-and-effect relationships can work in a variety of ways. Explain to students that some examples of causal relationships are

- one cause can have multiple effects
- multiple causes can lead to one effect
- a causal chain can be created with one cause producing an effect, which then becomes the cause of another effect, creating a chain of events

Have students work in small groups to create examples for these relationships, starting with the statement "I overslept." As students read, have them analyze cause and effect. (Douglass will show that several factors combined to produce the total change in Mrs. Auld's attitude toward him.)

from

MY BONDAGE and MY FREEDOM

Frederick Douglass

Series No. 8. Jacob Lawrence. Casein tempera on gessoed hardboard, 12 x 17⅞ in. Hampton University Museum, VA.

I lived in the family of master Hugh, at Baltimore, seven years, during which time—as the almanac[1] makers say of the weather—my condition was variable. The most interesting feature of my history here, was my learning to read and write, under somewhat marked disadvantages. In attaining this knowledge, I was compelled to resort to indirections by no means congenial to my nature, and which were really humiliating to me. My mistress—who, as the reader has already seen, had begun to teach me—was suddenly checked in her benevolent design, by the strong advice of her husband. In faithful compliance with this advice, the good lady had not only ceased to instruct me, herself, but had set her face as a flint against my learning to read by any means. It is due, however, to my mistress to say, that she did not adopt this course in all its stringency at the first. She either thought it unnecessary, or she lacked the depravity indispensable to shutting me up in mental darkness. It was, at least, necessary for her to have some training, and some hardening, in the exercise of the slaveholder's prerogative, to make her equal to forgetting my human nature and character, and to treating me as a thing destitute of a moral or an intellectual nature. Mrs. Auld—my mistress—was, as I have said, a most kind and tender-hearted woman; and, in the humanity of her heart, and the simplicity of her mind, she set out, when I first went to live with her, to treat me as she supposed one human being ought to treat another.

It is easy to see, that, in entering upon the duties of a slaveholder, some little experience is needed. Nature has done almost nothing to prepare men and women to be either slaves or slaveholders. Nothing but rigid training, long persisted in, can perfect the character of the one or the other. One cannot easily forget to love freedom; and it is as hard to cease to respect that natural love in our fellow creatures. On entering upon the career of a slave-

---

[1] An almanac is an annual publication that includes calendars, weather forecasts, and other information.

Vocabulary

benevolent (bə nev′ ə lənt) adj. doing or desiring to do good; kind

Vocabulary

depravity (di prav′ ə tē) n. the state of being morally bad or corrupt

Teach

Big Idea

Resistance to Slavery Say: Keep the following questions in mind as you read. What does Douglass do to resist oppression? (He took every possible opportunity to learn how to read; he argued the issue of slavery with white children.) How does slavery affect the oppressor? (Students might note the change in attitude and behavior of Mrs. Auld.)

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 6.6
DRP: 63
Lexile: 1160

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Douglass's Use of Irony In the first paragraph, Douglass introduces his quest for an education as a means of rising above the condition of slavery. He also ironically describes the education Mrs. Auld receives in order to become a "hardened" slaveholder. Ask: According to Douglass, what "training" did Mrs. Auld need? (She needed to forget Douglass's status as a human being and to learn to treat him as a "thing" without character or intellect.) How does Douglass's ironic reference to Mrs. Auld's "education" make a larger point about slavery? (Students may say that the reference suggests that slavery is unnatural and that it requires that slaveholders learn to ignore their natural impulses and to harden themselves.)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Clarify Ask: Why did Mr. Douglass's mistress go beyond her husband's instructions and try to prohibit Douglass from learning altogether? (Students may say that the mistress was persuaded that slaves should not learn, or that she wanted to show her husband that she took his concerns seriously.)

Literary Element 2

Autobiography Answer: Slavery prevented him from obtaining an education because it corrupted Mrs. Auld, who at one time was eager to teach him.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 38.

holding mistress, Mrs. Auld was singularly deficient; nature, which fits nobody for such an office, had done less for her than any lady I had known. It was no easy matter to induce her to think and to feel that the curly-headed boy, who stood by her side, and even leaned on her lap; who was loved by little Tommy, and who loved little Tommy in turn; sustained to her only the relation of a chattel.[2] I was more than that, and she felt me to be more than that. I could talk and sing; I could laugh and weep; I could reason and remember; I could love and hate. I was human, and she, dear lady, knew and felt me to be so. How could she, then, treat me as a brute, without a mighty struggle with all the noble powers of her own soul. That struggle came, and the will and power of the husband was victorious. Her noble soul was overthrown; but, he that overthrew it did not, himself, escape the consequences. He, not less than the other parties, was injured in his domestic peace by the fall.

When I went into their family, it was the abode of happiness and contentment. The mistress of the house was a model of affection and tenderness. Her fervent piety and watchful uprightness made it impossible to see her without thinking and feeling—"that woman is a Christian." There was no sorrow nor suffering for which she had not a tear, and there was no innocent joy for which she had not a smile. She had bread for the hungry, clothes for the naked, and comfort for every mourner that came within her reach. Slavery soon proved its ability to divest her of these excellent qualities, and her home of its early happiness. Conscience cannot stand much violence. Once thoroughly broken down, who is he that can repair the damage? It may be broken toward the slave, on Sunday, and toward the master on Monday. It cannot endure such shocks. It must stand entire, or it does not stand at all. If my condition waxed bad, that of the family waxed not better. The first step, in the wrong direction, was the violence done to nature and to conscience, in arresting the benevolence that would have enlightened my young mind. In ceasing to instruct me, she must begin to justify herself to herself; and, once consenting to take sides in such a debate, she was riveted to her position. One needs very little knowledge of moral philosophy, to see where my mistress now landed. She finally became even more violent in her opposition to my learning to read, than was her husband himself. She was not satisfied with simply doing as well as her husband had commanded her, but seemed resolved to better his instruction. Nothing appeared to make my poor mistress—after her turning toward the downward path—more angry, than seeing me, seated in some nook or corner, quietly reading a book or a newspaper. I have had her rush at me, with the utmost fury, and snatch from my hand such newspaper or book, with something of the wrath and consternation which a traitor might be supposed to feel on being discovered 1 in a plot by some dangerous spy.

Mrs. Auld was an apt woman, and the advice of her husband, and her own experience, soon demonstrated, to her entire satisfaction, that education and slavery are incompatible with each other. When this conviction was thoroughly established, I was most narrowly watched in all my movements. If I remained in a separate room from the family for any considerable length of time, I was sure to be suspected of having a book, and was at once called upon to give an account of myself. All this, however, was entirely too late. The first, and never to be retraced, step had been taken. In teaching me the alphabet, in the days of her simplicity and [2] Chattel is property, such as furniture or livestock. Enslaved people were sometimes referred to as chattel.

---

Vocabulary

induce (in do͞os´) v. to lead by persuasion or influence

Autobiography What is Douglass saying here about the effects of slavery on his own life? 2

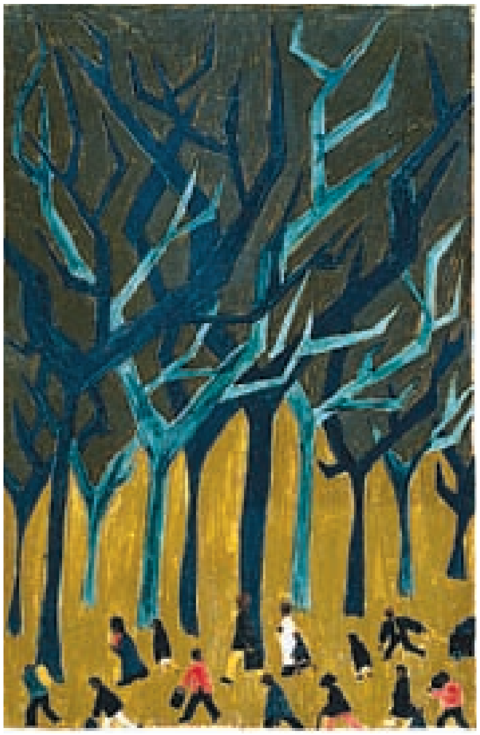
Writing Practice

Critical Response Explain to students that Douglass sought to tell his life story and to argue against slavery. Elicit examples from the selection that show each purpose and discuss how effective the examples are. Write the following question on the board: How does Douglass use details from his life story to argue against slavery? Have students write a paragraph that uses a declarative form of the question as the topic sentence. Have them use specific examples from the text.



The Life of Frederick Douglass #29: The war was over. The slaves were literally turned out by their masters into a world unknown to them. They had ceased to be slaves of man and became slaves of nature, 1939. Jacob Lawrence. Casein tempera on hardboard, 17 x 12. Hampton University Museum, Hampton, VA. ★ kindness, my mistress had given me the "inch," and now, no ordinary precaution could prevent me from taking the "ell."[3]

Seized with a determination to learn to read, at any cost, I hit upon many expedients to accomplish the desired end. The plea which I mainly adopted, and the one by which I was most successful, was that of using my young white playmates, with whom I met in the street, as teachers. I used to carry, almost constantly, a copy of Webster's spelling book in my pocket; and, when sent of errands, or when play time was allowed me, I would step, with my young friends, aside, and take a lesson in spelling. I generally paid my tuition fee to the boys, with bread, which I also carried in my pocket. For a single biscuit, any of my hungry little comrades would give me a lesson more valuable to me than bread. Not every one, however, demanded this consideration, for there were those who took pleasure in teaching me, whenever I had a chance to be taught by them. I am strongly tempted to give the names of two or three of those little boys, as a slight testimonial of the gratitude and affection I bear them, but prudence forbids; not that it would injure me, but it might, possibly, embarrass them; for it is almost an unpardonable offense to do any thing, directly or indirectly, to promote a slave's freedom, in a slave state. It is enough to say, of my warm-hearted little play fellows, that they lived on Philpot street, very near Durgin & Bailey's shipyard.

Although slavery was a delicate subject, and very cautiously talked about among grown up people in Maryland, I frequently talked about it—and that very freely—with the white boys. I would, sometimes, say to them, while seated on a curb stone or a cellar door, "I wish I could be free, as you will be when you get to be men." "You will be free, you know, as soon as you are twenty-one, and can go where you like, but I am a slave for life. Have I not as good a right to be free as you have?" Words like these, I observed, always troubled them; and I had no small satisfaction in wringing from the boys, occasionally, that fresh and bitter condemnation of slavery, that springs from nature, unseared and unperverted. Of all consciences, let me have those to deal with which have not been bewildered by the cares of life. I do not remember ever to have met with a boy, while I was in slavery, who defended the slave system; but I have often had boys to console me, with the hope that something would yet occur, by which I might be made free. Over and over again, they have told me, that "they believed I had as good a right to be free as they had"; and that "they did not believe God ever made any one to be a slave." The reader will 3

---

[3] An ell is equal to forty-five inches. Douglass is referring to the adage "give him an inch, and he'll take an ell."

Comparing Literature

Teach

Literary Element 3

Autobiography Ask: How does Douglass's choice of the genre of autobiography enhance the impact of this statement? (Douglass's description of boys' refusing to defend slavery gives his point more impact and credibility than if it had been presented in a work of fiction or in an essay. He is presenting information gained from personal experience.)

View the Art ★

Lawrence used tempera paint, a mixture of pigment and water-soluble materials, such as egg yolk, to depict enslaved persons and important figures in the struggle against slavery, including Harriet Tubman and Frederick Douglass. Have students read the caption beneath the painting. Ask: What might the next painting in this series depict? (Students might say it will show how African Americans struggled to make a living in a world where few cared what happened to them.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Point out to students that the idiomatic expression "give him an inch and he'll take an ell" is more commonly known today as "give him an inch and he'll take a mile." Ask students if they have a saying in their home language that has a similar meaning. Such sayings usually imply a negative meaning of greediness or exploitation. However, they can imply a positive meaning of ambition and full use of opportunities. Ask: Do you think Douglass uses this expression in a positive or negative way? (Students may say that Douglass is using the saying in a positive way, emphasizing his powerful ambition to learn.)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Analyze Cause and Effect

Answer: The ironic effect was that Douglass's reading about the free states, which might have given him hope, made him feel even worse about being enslaved.

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Cause and Effect

Ask: What effect did reading this anecdote about the slave and his master have on Douglass? (His reading of this anecdote had a profound effect on him. He became hopeful that some day he too would be able to argue eloquently against slavery.)

Literary History ☆

Return to Africa? Harriet Beecher Stowe suggested that African Americans, once freed from slavery, should find their own homeland in Africa. In a letter to Stowe, Douglass said, "The truth is, dear madame, we are here, and here we are likely to remain." Ask: Why would Douglass have disagreed with Stowe? (Americans who were formerly enslaved would be outsiders in Africa too—especially if they had been born in the United States.)

easily see, that such little conversations with my play fellows, had no tendency to weaken my love of liberty, nor to render me contented with my condition as a slave.

When I was about thirteen years old, and had succeeded in learning to read, every increase of knowledge, especially respecting the Free States, added something to the almost intolerable burden of the thought—"I am a Slave for life." To my bondage I saw no end. It was a terrible reality, and I shall never be able to tell how sadly that thought chafed my young spirit. Fortunately, or unfortunately, about this time in my life, I had made enough money to buy what was then a very popular school book, viz:[4] the "Columbian Orator." I bought this addition to my library, of Mr. Knight, on Thames street, Fell's Point, Baltimore, and paid him fifty cents for it. I was first led to buy this book, by hearing some little boys say that they were going to learn some little pieces out of it for the Exhibition. This volume was, indeed, a rich treasure, and every opportunity afforded me, for a time, was spent in diligently perusing it. Among much other interesting matter, that which I had perused and reperused with unflagging satisfaction, was a short dialogue between a master and his slave. The slave is represented as having been recaptured, in a second attempt to run away; and the master opens the dialogue with an upbraiding speech, charging the slave with ingratitude, and demanding to know what he has to say in his own defense. Thus upbraided, and thus called upon to reply, the slave rejoins, that he knows how little anything that he can say will avail, seeing that he is completely in the hands of his owner; and with noble resolution, calmly says, "I submit to my fate." Touched by the slave's answer, the master insists upon his further speaking, and recapitulates the many acts of kindness which he has performed toward the slave, and tells him he is permitted to speak for himself. Thus invited to the debate, the quondam[5] slave made a spirited defense of himself, and thereafter the whole argument, for and against slavery, was brought out. The master was vanquished at every turn in the argument; and seeing himself to be thus vanquished, he generously and meekly emancipates the slave, with his best wishes for his prosperity. It is scarcely necessary to say, that a dialogue, with such an origin, and such an ending—read when the fact of my being a slave was a constant burden of grief—powerfully affected me; and I could not help feeling that the day might come, when the well-directed answers made by the slave to the master, in this instance, would find their counterpart in myself. . . . 2

I had now penetrated the secret of all slavery and oppression, and had ascertained their true foundation to be in the pride, the power and the avarice of man. The dialogue and the speeches were all redolent of the principles of liberty, and poured floods of light on the nature and character of slavery. . . . Nevertheless, the increase of knowledge was attended with bitter, as well as sweet results. The more I read, the more I was led to abhor and detest slavery, and my enslavers. "Slaveholders," thought I, "are only a band of successful robbers, who left their homes and went into Africa for the purpose of stealing and reducing my people to slavery." I loathed them as the meanest and the most wicked of men. As I read, behold! the very discontent so graphically predicted by Master Hugh, had already come upon me. I was no longer the light-hearted, gleesome boy, full of mirth and play, as when I landed first at Baltimore. Knowledge had come; light had penetrated the moral dungeon where I dwelt; and,

---

4. Viz is an abbreviation for the Latin word videlicet, meaning "namely" or "that is."

5. Quondam means "that once was" or "former."

1 Analyze Cause and Effect What was the ironic effect of Douglass's learning to read?

Vocabulary

vanquish (vang´ kwish) v. to defeat

Assessment Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Short-Answer Questions Short-answer questions on tests often ask students to use critical thinking skills and to cite support from the text. Present the following as a sample short-answer question: What does the way Douglass spent his money reveal about his character? (Students might say that Douglass's choice to spend his money on a schoolbook indicates that he valued education over almost anything else.)

behold! there lay the bloody whip, for my back, and here was the iron chain; and my good, kind master, he was the author of my situation. The revelation haunted me, stung me, and made me gloomy and miserable. As I writhed under the sting and torment of this knowledge, I almost envied my fellow slaves their stupid contentment. This knowledge opened my eyes to the horrible pit, and revealed the teeth of the frightful dragon that was ready to pounce upon me, but it opened no way for my escape. I have often wished myself a beast, or a bird—anything, rather than a slave. I was wretched and gloomy, beyond my ability to describe. I was too thoughtful to be happy. It was this everlasting thinking which distressed and tormented me; and yet there was no getting rid of the subject of my thoughts. All nature was redolent of it. Once awakened by the silver trump[6] of knowledge, my spirit was roused to eternal wakefulness. Liberty! the inestimable birthright of every man, had, for me, converted every object into an asserter of this great right. It was heard in every sound, and beheld in every object. It was ever present, to torment me with a sense of my wretched condition. The more beautiful and charming were the smiles of nature, the more horrible and desolate was my condition. I saw nothing without seeing it, and I heard nothing without hearing it. I do not exaggerate, when I say, that it looked from every star, smiled in every calm, breathed in every wind, and moved in every storm.

I have no doubt that my state of mind had something to do with the change in the treatment adopted, by my once kind mistress toward me. I can easily believe, that my leaden, downcast, and discontented look, was very offensive to her. Poor lady! She did not know my trouble, and I dared not tell her. Could I have freely made her acquainted with the real state of my mind, and given her the reasons therefor, it might have been well for both of us. Her abuse of me fell upon me like the blows of the false prophet upon his ass; she did not know that an angel stood in the way;[7] and—such is the relation of master and slave—I could not tell her. Nature had made us friends; slavery made us enemies. My interests were in a direction opposite to hers, and we both had our private thoughts and plans. She aimed to keep me ignorant; and I resolved to know, although knowledge only increased my discontent. My feelings were not the result of any marked cruelty in the treatment I received; they sprung from the consideration of my being a slave at all. It was slavery—not its mere incidents—that I hated. I had been cheated. I saw through the attempt to keep me in ignorance; I saw that slaveholders would have gladly made me believe that they were merely acting under the authority of God, in making a slave of me, and in making slaves of others; and I treated them as robbers and deceivers. The feeding and clothing me well, could not atone for taking my liberty from me. The smiles of my mistress could not remove the deep sorrow that dwelt in my young bosom. Indeed, these, in time, came only to deepen my sorrow. She had changed; and the reader will see that I had changed, too. We were both victims to the same overshadowing evil—she, as mistress, I, as slave. I will not censure her harshly; she cannot censure me, for she knows I speak but the truth, and have acted in my opposition to slavery, just as she herself would have acted, in a reverse of circumstances.

---

[6] Trump is a trumpet.

[7] Douglass refers to a Bible story (Numbers 22:21–35) in which a donkey, despite being beaten by its master, Balaam, cannot go forward because its way is blocked by an angel whom Balaam cannot see.

Resistance to Slavery What does this statement say about the institution of slavery? 3

Vocabulary

censure (sen´ shər) v. to express disapproval of; to find fault with; to blame

Comparing Literature

Teach

Big Idea 3

Resistance to Slavery

Answer: Slavery hurts both the enslaved person and the slaveholder. The enslaved person is a victim, deprived of liberty and the ability to reach his or her potential. The slaveholder is a victim, having become dehumanized and morally corrupt.

Political History ☆

Slavery and Civil War Douglass believed that the Union could not be saved without overthrowing slavery. He wrote dozens of editorials and speeches asserting that slavery was the cause of the conflict and that victory was impossible without emancipation.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 42.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Established In the paragraph beginning "I had now penetrated the secret," Douglass describes slave owners as "a band of robbers." Point out that this metaphor expresses Douglass's deep disgust. Assign students to work in pairs to find at least one other metaphor in the paragraph that expresses Douglass's feelings about slavery. ("moral dungeon," "horrible pit")

Emerging Students may be surprised that knowledge only increases Douglass's gloom and anger. As a class, reread the paragraph on pages 356–357 that begins "I had now penetrated the secret." Ask: What has Douglass learned that deepens his unhappiness? (Knowledge has given Douglass insights into the hateful nature of slavery, slave owners, and his own circumstance. Everything he sees and experiences reminds him that he is hopelessly trapped in a "wretched condition.")

After You Read

Assess

1. Students should compare their lives with Douglass's life.
2. (a) She helps him learn to read. (b) Uncorrupted human nature prompts people to treat each other as equals.
3. (a) She stops teaching and becomes cruel. (b) He says that slavery had made them enemies.
4. (a) White children (b) They believe he has "a right to be free."
5. (a) It is "in the pride, the power, and the avarice of man." (b) Students should provide support with their answers.
6. Some may say the Aulds have lost their conscience.
7. By not being brainwashed and by reading and thinking
8. They gave a firsthand look at the horrors of slavery.
9. Students who say they would choose as Douglass did may say the truth is worth sacrificing for. Students who say they would choose differently may say that he should have put his freedom and survival above all else.

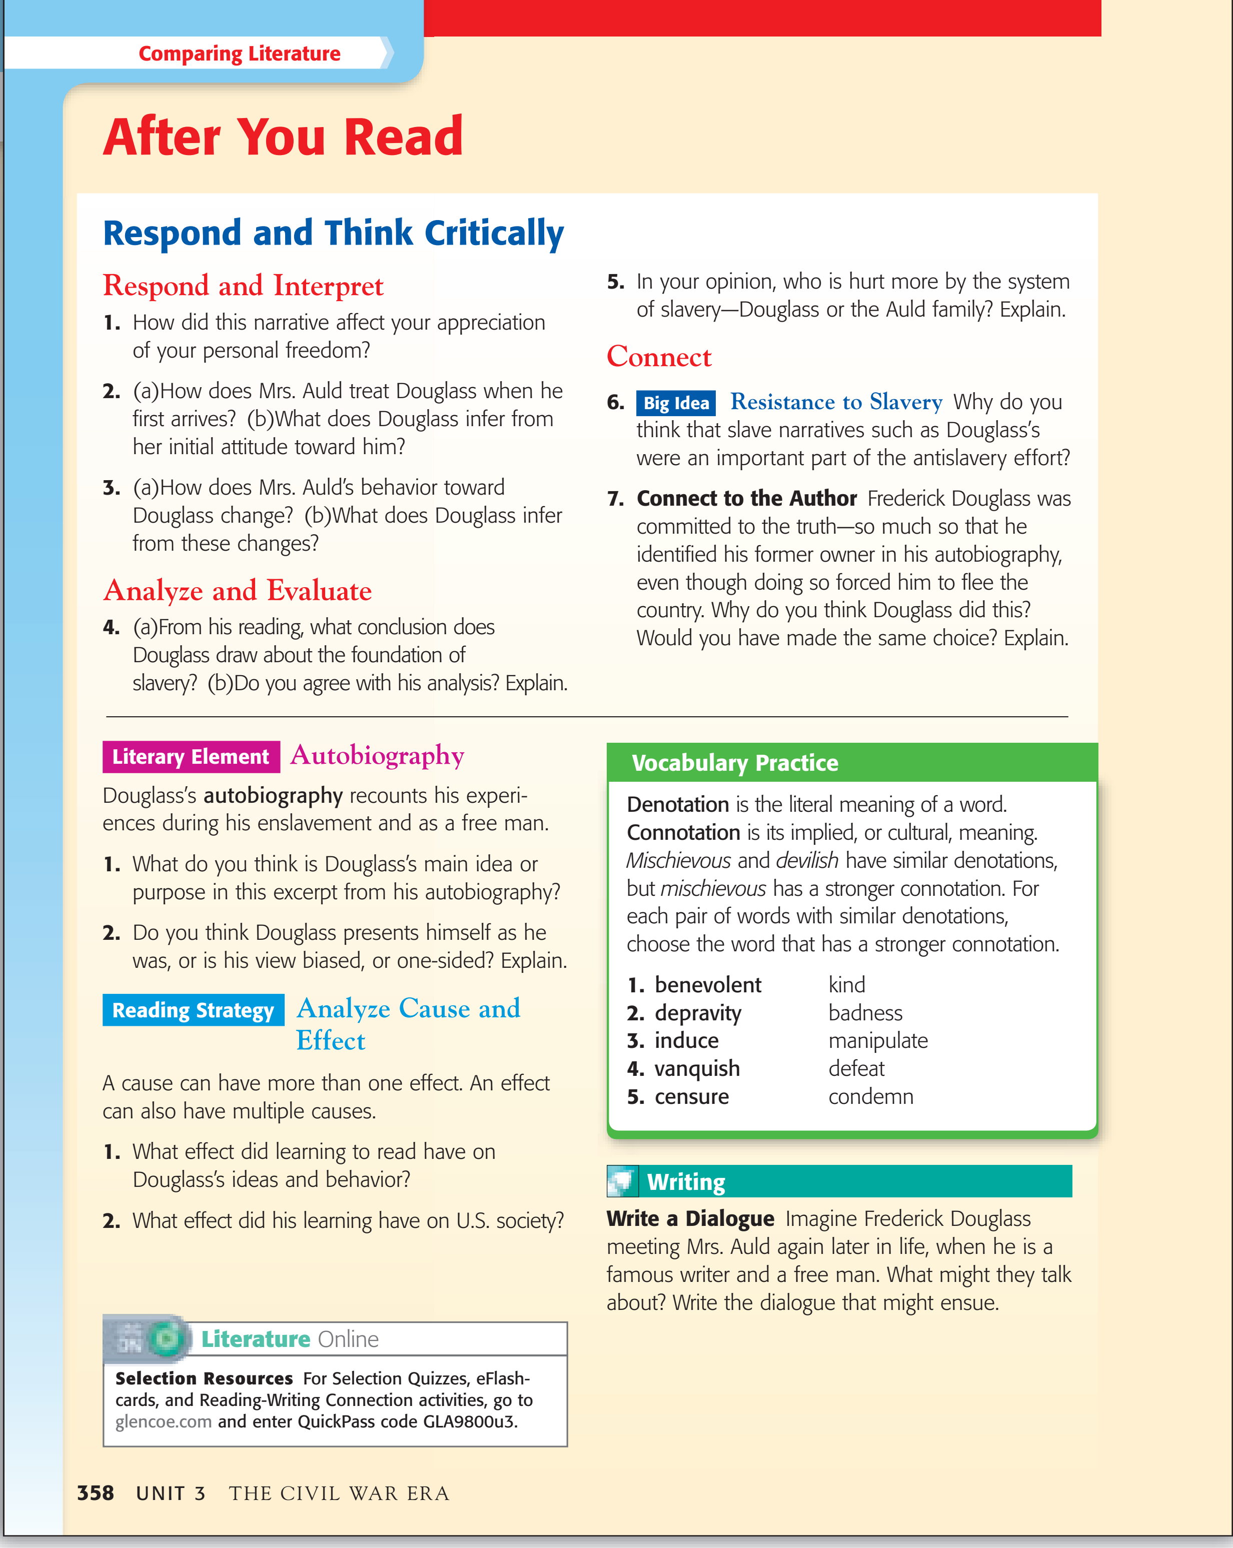
Literary Element

1. Slavery victimizes both the enslaved person and the slaveholder.
2. Students' answers will vary.

Progress Check

Can students identify an autobiography?

If No → See Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 37.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. How did this narrative affect your appreciation of your personal freedom?
2. (a)How does Mrs. Auld treat Douglass when he first arrives? (b)What does Douglass infer from her initial attitude toward him?
3. (a)How does Mrs. Auld's behavior toward Douglass change? (b)What does Douglass infer from these changes?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. (a)From his reading, what conclusion does Douglass draw about the foundation of slavery? (b)Do you agree with his analysis? Explain.
5. In your opinion, who is hurt more by the system of slavery—Douglass or the Auld family? Explain.

Connect

6. Big Idea Resistance to Slavery Why do you think that slave narratives such as Douglass's were an important part of the antislavery effort?
7. Connect to the Author Frederick Douglass was committed to the truth—so much so that he identified his former owner in his autobiography, even though doing so forced him to flee the country. Why do you think Douglass did this? Would you have made the same choice? Explain.

Literary Element Autobiography

Douglass's autobiography recounts his experiences during his enslavement and as a free man.

1. What do you think is Douglass's main idea or purpose in this excerpt from his autobiography?
2. Do you think Douglass presents himself as he was, or is his view biased, or one-sided? Explain.

Reading Strategy Analyze Cause and Effect

A cause can have more than one effect. An effect can also have multiple causes.

1. What effect did learning to read have on Douglass's ideas and behavior?
2. What effect did his learning have on U.S. society?

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Vocabulary Practice

Denotation is the literal meaning of a word. Connotation is its implied, or cultural, meaning. Mischievous and devilish have similar denotations, but mischievous has a stronger connotation. For each pair of words with similar denotations, choose the word that has a stronger connotation.

1. benevolent	kind
2. depravity	badness
3. induce	manipulate
4. vanquish	defeat
5. censure	condemn

Writing

Write a Dialogue Imagine Frederick Douglass meeting Mrs. Auld again later in life, when he is a famous writer and a free man. What might they talk about? Write the dialogue that might ensue.

Reading Strategy

1. He understood relations between enslaved persons and slaveholders, was inspired to learn more, and was discontent because of his knowledge.
2. Mrs. Auld's submission to her husband's order; the system of slavery that required people to be treated as less than human.

Vocabulary

1. benevolent
2. depravity
3. manipulate
4. vanquish
5. condemn

Writing

Students' dialogues should reflect their understanding of Douglass's and Auld's personalities and of how Douglass has changed as a free man.

Build Background

Born in Detroit, Michigan, in 1913, Robert Hayden viewed history "as a long, tortuous, and often bloody process of becoming, of psychic evolution." He created elegant, well-crafted poetry, much of it concerned with African American history and featuring prominent African American historical figures such as Nat Turner, Frederick Douglass, and Malcolm X.

Hayden wanted to be known as a poet rather than as a black poet. He believed that racial labeling restricted African American poets, placing them "in a kind of literary ghetto," where the standards of other writers were not applied to them. In 1976 Hayden was the first African American poet to be appointed poetry consultant to the Library of ☆ Congress. He died in 1980.

Frederick Douglass

Robert Hayden

When it is finally ours, this freedom, this liberty, this beautiful and terrible thing, needful to man as air, usable as earth; when it belongs at last to all,
when it is truly instinct, brain matter, diastole,[1] systole,[2] reflex action; when it is finally won; when it is more than the gaudy mumbo jumbo of politicians:
this man, this Douglass, this former slave, this Negro beaten to his knees, exiled, visioning a world where none is lonely, none hunted, alien, this man, superb in love and logic, this man shall be remembered. Oh, not with statues' rhetoric, not with legends and poems and wreaths of bronze alone, but with the lives grown out of his life, the lives fleshing his dream of the beautiful, needful thing.

Quickwrite

From reading this poetic portrayal, what did you learn about Frederick Douglass? Write a paragraph explaining what you learned about Douglass, using examples from the text to support your points.

---

[1] Diastole (dī as′ tə lē′) is the period of normal relaxation of the heart between beats.

[2] Systole (sis′ tə lē) is the period of normal contraction between diastoles.

Focus

Summary

Hayden's poem memorializes Frederick Douglass to all who continue to struggle for human freedom. The poem confronts the rhetoric of politicians and envisions a time when there will truly be freedom for all.

Teach

Literary Element

Repetition Writers sometimes repeat sounds, words, phrases, or stanzas in a piece of writing. Repetition increases the unity in a work and calls attention to particular ideas. Ask: What words or phrases does Hayden repeat in his poem? (this, needful, beautiful, when it, the lives, and this man)

Literary History ☆

Hayden's Achievement Just as Frederick Douglass won distinction as the first African American to consult with an American president, Robert Hayden was honored to be the first African American poetry consultant to the Library of Congress, a position that is now known as poet laureate. Hayden served so effectively he was appointed to a second term.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning To help students through the complexities and repetition of the first sentence of the poem, work as a class to reduce those ten and a half lines to their simplest meaning: This man shall be remembered.

Intermediate Review the definitions of diastole and systole. Point out that Hayden is suggesting that freedom is as important as a heartbeat. Ask: What other details in lines 2–5 suggest that freedom is physically essential? ("needful to man as air," "usable as earth," "brain matter")

Focus

Summary

"In Texas Grass" depicts a nation's negligence with regard to its resources, particularly its people. Troupe uses the imagery of decay and death to communicate the sense of a people waiting in vain for compensation that may never come.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Alliteration When writers repeat consonant sounds at the beginning of words, they are using alliteration. Ask: Where does Troupe use alliteration in his poem? ("tracks of texas / old train cars lay" and "like photos fading")

Build Background

Poet Quincy Troupe, born in St. Louis, Missouri, in 1939, experienced firsthand the limitations that racial discrimination placed on generations of African Americans.

In the following poem, "In Texas Grass," Troupe alludes to a "promise of forty acres & a mule." At the end of the Civil War, General William T. Sherman promised that freed African Americans would receive forty acres of land and a mule. However, few formerly enslaved African Americans ever received land, or even a mule, from the government. As a result, that phrase came to represent the failure of Reconstruction to assist African Americans emerging from slavery.

In Texas Grass

Quincy Troupe

all along the railroad tracks of texas 1
old train cars lay rusted & overturned like new african governments long forgotten by the people who built & rode them till they couldn't run no more & they remind me of old race horses who've been put out to pasture amongst the weeds
rain, sleet & snow till they die & rot away 1 like photos fading
in grandma's picture book of old black men & women, in mississippi texas, who sit on dilapidated porches that fall away like dead man's skin like white people's eyes
& inside the peeling photos old men sit, sad eyed & waiting, waiting for worm dust thinking of the master & his long forgotten promise of forty acres & a mule & even now, if you pass across this bleeding flesh ever changing landscape
you will see the fruited countryside, stretching, stretching & old black men & young black men, sitting on porches, waiting waiting for rusted trains silent in texas grass

Discussion Starter

Although this poem is set after the end of slavery in the United States, it describes in vivid and poignant detail slavery's legacy. With a small group, discuss the literal and figurative examples the poem gives of the conditions African Americans experienced after slavery. What conclusions about the journey from slavery to equality can you draw from these examples? Share your group's conclusions with the rest of the class.

Writing Practice

Analyze Imagery Quincy Troupe uses vivid images to appeal to readers' compassion for the ignored and oppressed. Tell students to reread the poem and find three images that elicit emotion. For each image, they should write a brief explanation of the emotional effects of the words. Ask students to compare the images they find and state what they have in common.

Wrap-Up: Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

- from My Bondage and My Freedom by Frederick Douglass
- Frederick Douglass by Robert Hayden
- In Texas Grass by Quincy Troupe

COMPARE THE Big Idea Resistance to Slavery

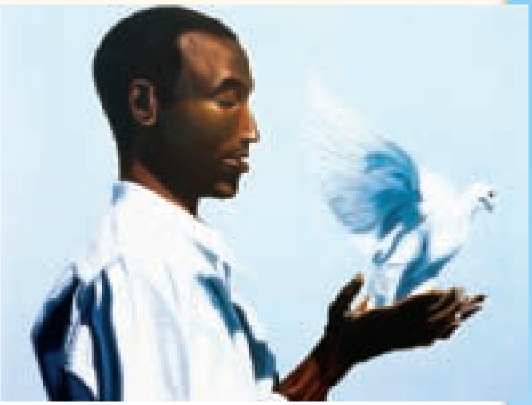
Writing About Literature In the three selections you have read, each writer uses a different tone, or attitude toward his subject. How would you describe the tone used by each writer? Whose tone is most optimistic? Whose is most bitter? Write a brief essay in which you compare the tone used by each writer. Cite evidence from the selections to support your conclusions.

COMPARE Portrayals of People

Speaking and Listening With a partner, review the three selections to identify several passages that portray an individual, such as Frederick Douglass in the excerpt from his autobiography or in Hayden's poem, or a group, such as the African Americans "waiting for rusted trains / silent in Texas grass" in Troupe's poem. Discuss how each passage relates to the oppression of slavery or racial discrimination. Then share your conclusions with the class in an oral report.



Be Free Three, 21st c. Kaaria Mucherera. Oil and acrylic on canvas, 30 x 40 in. Private collection.

COMPARE Historical Context

Group Activity These selections treat both the progress and the setbacks in the journey of African Americans toward liberty and equality. With a small group, discuss the following questions.

1. What is the historical context that shapes each selection?
2. How effective is each writer's use of historical background? Which author presents the most compelling rendition of historical events?
3. Which of the selections most sparked your interest in the historical context? Explain.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Wrap-Up: Comparing Literature

Across Time and Place

Assess

Compare the Big Idea

Writing About Literature

When evaluating essays, make sure that students understand the concept of tone and that they offer support from the text.

Compare Portrayals of People

Speaking and Listening

Instruct partners to share ideas and to support conclusions by citing evidence from the selections.

Compare Historical Context

Group Activity

Make sure that all students in the group are given a chance to express their views and that all students support their opinions by citing evidence from the text.

View the Art ★

Mucherera's painting shows a black man setting loose a dove. Ask: How does this painting reflect the themes addressed by the three selections? (The dove in this painting is a symbol of peace and freedom, which connects with the themes of an oppressed people seeking freedom.)

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 123–124.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging To help students organize their Writing About Literature essays, tell them to use a four-column graphic organizer to record evidence as they review the tone in the three selections they have read. Students should use the first column to set the categories: Evidence of Optimistic Tone, Evidence of Bitter Tone. They should record related details from the three poems in the three remaining columns.

The Douglass selection is far longer than the two poems and may naturally produce more evidence. Remind students that the purpose of the essay is to compare quality of tone—optimism or bitterness of tone—rather than quantity of material.

Focus

Bellringer Options

Daily Language Practice Transparency 33

Or lead a discussion on the importance of eyewitness testimony. Ask: How does eyewitness testimony affect one's understanding of a crime, an accident, or a historical event? (Students may say that eyewitnesses provide factual details about events as well as personal impressions that make events more vivid and real to others.)

View the Photograph

In Sarah Gudger's interview, recorded in 1937, Gudger recalls the backbreaking labor and chronic cruelty of slavery, but she also mentions a childhood memory of a night when stars fell like rain: the famous meteor shower of 1833. Ask: Why was it fortunate that WPA writers were able to record stories such as these in the 1930s? (By then, few survivors of slavery were left, so it was fortunate that WPA writers were able to record the remaining survivors' tales before they were lost.)

For an activity related to this selection, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 44–45.

Learning Objectives

For pages 362–363

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing literary periods.

Reading: Evaluating historical influences.

Slave Narratives and Civil War Memoirs, Letters, and Diaries

In the nineteenth century, many writers shared their personal accounts of the two major issues of the day—slavery and the Civil War. These writings, which recount the emotions their authors felt, the details they saw, and the battles they fought, contribute much to the understanding of this tumultuous time in the United States.

Accounts of Slavery

Nineteenth-century African American writers, such as Frederick Douglass (pp. 351–358) and Sojourner Truth (pp. 368–371), told variations of one compelling story—the story of life in slavery, escape from bondage, and life as a free person. These accounts, called slave narratives, were written as early as 1760 and continued to be written after the Civil War. The pre-war narratives were in part intended to recruit Northerners to the abolitionist cause, especially after the Fugitive Slave Act was passed in 1850. 1

> "Reader, be assured this narrative is no fiction. I am aware some of my adventures may seem incredible; but they are, nevertheless, strictly true."
>
> —Harriet Jacobs
> from Preface to Incidents in the Life of a Slave Girl, 1861

After the Civil War, emancipated slaves, such as Elizabeth Keckley, who had worked for Mary Todd Lincoln as a dressmaker, continued to write autobiographies. Many writers hoped to show how well they had succeeded in a free society after the war. Others, especially those later in the century, expressed disappointment with the restrictions they still encountered.

Sarah Gudger, age 121. North Carolina. Library of Congress photo.

From 1936 to 1938, during the Depression, writers and journalists from the Works Progress Administration (WPA) interviewed more than 2,300 former slaves and recorded their memories of the past. These narratives are a rich source of details about life on plantations and in cities.

Slave narratives have had an influence on modern literature as well, in the works of such writers as Richard Wright (pp. 899–908), Ernest J. Gaines, Alice Walker (pp. 1161–1165), and Toni Morrison (pp. 1308–1314).

Writing Practice

Write Interview Questions Have students assume the role of writers and journalists from the Works Progress Administration. Their assignment is to interview former slaves. Tell students to prepare for the interviews by writing a list of ten questions that they may ask. Students may wish to do some research on the historical period and on slave narratives in order to write more informed and more specific questions for the interview. Remind students that their questions should be tactful and respectful.

> "I hope both you and Johnston will write the history of your campaigns. Every one should do all in his power to collect and disseminate the truth, in the hope that it may find a place in history and descend to posterity."
>
> —Robert E. Lee
> letter to Confederate General
> P. G. T. Beauregard, 1865

Memoirs, Letters, and Diaries

Many who lived through the Civil War felt that it was the central event of their lives. Writers on both sides composed memoirs, letters, and diaries. These accounts ranged from those of generals recollecting great battles, to soldiers commenting on life on the battlefields, to civilians recounting details from the home front, especially in the South, where the battlefield and the home front were side-by-side.

Mark Twain persuaded his friend Ulysses S. Grant to write his acclaimed Personal Memoirs, which he completed a week before he died in 1885. Union Generals William T. Sherman, Philip H. Sheridan, and George B. McClellan also published memoirs.

The letters of Confederate General Robert E. Lee were saved and published after his death. Some letters, such as his letter to Grant agreeing to release prisoners of war on both sides, give details of the war and its aftermath. Others, such as his letters to his family, including the letter to his son (pp. 382–386), express concern and describe the hardships of his troops, many of whom had no shoes.

Soldiers—often farm boys who had never been away from home—also wrote to their families describing the excitement, horrors, and hardships of war as well as their longing for home.

Diarists such as Mary Chesnut (pp. 374–380) and Rachel Cormany documented everyday events along with the worries, loneliness, and difficulties caused by the war. Chesnut recounts her fear as the Union army swept through the South. These diaries provide rich detail about life on the home front.

These first-person accounts of slavery and the Civil War provide insight into what it was like to be enslaved, to face an enemy who was also a countryman, and to remain on the home front as family and friends left for war. Nineteenth-century writers documented their tumultuous lives and times to understand and preserve their stories. Today, their work offers us great historical insights.

Literature Online

Literature and Reading For more about slave narratives and Civil War memoirs, letters, and diaries, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Ulysses S. Grant, American Civil War general, and later president, writing his memoirs at Mount McGregor, New York, 1885. ★

Respond and Think Critically

1. How might slave narratives have influenced the abolitionist cause?
2. A memoir, unlike an autobiography, focuses on only part of the writer's life, often a significant part. What are some reasons a person might choose to write a memoir? Explain.
3. Why are personal diaries and letters often of interest to general readers in later times?

Teach

Big Idea 1

Resistance to Slavery The slave narrative genre drew many Northerners to the abolitionist cause. Ask: Why do you think that slave narratives continue to influence writers today? (Students may say that writers are interested in slave narratives because they have great historical value and the power to move people emotionally.)

View the Photograph ★

Bankrupt and dying of throat cancer, Grant focused on completing his Personal Memoirs in order to secure his family's financial well being. Ask: What impression do you get of Grant from this photograph? (Possible answers: a sense of illness, seriousness, concentration, or determination)

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Assess

1. Slave narratives may have shown people in the North, who were less familiar with slavery, the realities of slave life.
2. Students may answer that memoirists might write about major political and historical events that influenced their lives.
3. Students may answer that letters and diaries are of interest because they contain details of everyday life.

TIME

Focus

Summary

The article showcases the Underground Railroad Freedom Center in Cincinnati, Ohio. It begins by examining contemporary feelings about American slavery. It then gives details about the museum experience: the brutality of American slavery is presented in two exhibits, along with an exhibit that concentrates on the struggles against bondage and oppression today.

For summaries in other languages and for activities related to this selection, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 46–54.

Reading Strategy 1

Question To ask good questions about a text, a student should skim it first. This type of quick reading prepares students to read the text more thoroughly the second time. This second reading will yield more substantive questions. Remind students that when they are pre-reading, it is not necessary to understand every word or idea.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 8.8
DRP: 68
Lexile: 1240

Learning Objectives

For pages 364–367

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Reading:
Analyzing and evaluating informational text.
Connecting to contemporary issues.

Set a Purpose for Reading

As you read, ask, How do these museums educate us about slavery and the struggle for freedom?

Preview the Article

1. What clues to the content of the article do the photographs on pages 365–367 provide?
2. Skim the first paragraph. From it, what do you think that this article might teach you about slavery?

Reading Strategy Question

As you read, ask these questions:

1
- How is this idea important? Why?
- Do I understand this passage?
- How does this information relate to what I already know?

Record your answers in a chart.

Question	Answer
How is this idea important?

TIME

Slavery Under GLASS

New African American–history museums try to balance authenticity and to uplift.

By RICHARD LACAYO

THE GLASS-WALLED MAIN ENTRY OF THE UNDERGROUND Railroad Freedom Center in Cincinnati, Ohio, faces south across the banks of the Ohio River. The center faces that direction for good reason—the river is at the heart of the story of the Underground Railroad. Separating free-soil Ohio from slave-holding Kentucky, the Ohio River was a desperate crossing point for runaway slaves. The river's north banks were the site of persistent low-intensity warfare between abolitionists and armed slave owners, who were permitted by law to pursue their human "property" into free states. In that era of escalating confrontation, Cincinnati and nearby towns became important way stations in the Underground Railroad. This informal network of safe houses, sympathetic whites, and free African Americans helped conduct escaped slaves to safety.

African American Life in Focus

The Freedom Center is part of a wave of more than 20 new museums dedicated to African American history that are in development around the country. They include the U.S. National Slavery Museum in Fredericksburg, Virginia, the International African American Museum in Charleston, South Carolina, the National Museum of African American History and Culture in Washington, D.C., and the Reginald F. Lewis Museum of Maryland African History and Culture in Baltimore, Maryland. In addition, numerous locales from the 20th century civil rights movement, like the Montgomery, Alabama, bus stop

Writing Practice

Persuasive Letter After students have learned the purpose and features of the Underground Railroad Freedom Center, discuss with the class the educational benefits of the museum to students. Say: Write a persuasive letter to your teacher or school principal, proposing that your class make a field trip to the Freedom Center. Tell students to develop arguments that will particularly appeal to their audience and to emphasize features of the Freedom Center that support those points. If necessary, have students do additional research into the current exhibits at the Freedom Center. Briefly review the form of a business letter before students begin to write.

where Rosa Parks was arrested, are being turned into monuments and pilgrimage points. Clearly, the story of African American life, for so long passed over in near silence, is finally being set down in stone.

The Delicate Subject of Slavery

All the same, telling the part of that story concerning slavery can be tricky. Any museum needs to inspire and instruct. It also needs to bring in paying customers. Slavery is one of the most shameful chapters of American history, but shameful stories are not the kind that everybody wants to pay money to hear.

"There is a reluctance on the part of African Americans and whites to deal with slavery," says former Virginia Governor Doug Wilder. He conceived the National Slavery Museum, scheduled to open in 2007. "People don't want to discuss it. 'Let's get past it,' they say. Well, I say that attitude is insulting to our history. We need to develop a conscious awareness of how far we've come and who we are."

The museum envisioned by Wilder, a descendant of enslaved persons, will unabashedly be a museum about the brutal merchandising of human beings. The Freedom Center in Cincinnati, which cost $110 million to build and hopes to attract 250,000 visitors each year, is more cautious about its approach to a difficult subject. Even the center's name sidesteps the loaded word slavery. By taking the Underground Railroad as its focus, the center gets to emphasize biracial resistance, not racial victimization.

The Underground Railroad was a rare triumph of African American and white cooperation in those days, not the far more usual story of white oppression. "The story of the Underground Railroad allows you to talk about slavery in a way that's productive, positive, and uplifting," says Ed Rigaud, the center's president. ☆

Using the Past to Heal the Present

The project was first conceived 11 years ago by Robert C. Harrod. He is the executive director of the regional chapter of what was then called the National Conference of Christians and Jews, now the National Conference of Community and Justice. His hope was that it could help improve race relations in Cincinnati—it was only in 2002 that the Ku Klux Klan stopped its annual mounting of a Christmas tree in the city's main square. The desire for reconciliation is built into the center's mission. Its focus, says Spencer Crew, its executive director, "is not about finger pointing."

More than that, it also aims to be America's first museum intended not just to arouse feelings but also to resolve them safely. Concerned that people might exit the exhibition galleries with feelings of guilt (whites), anger (African Americans), and resentment (both), the center offers a final room that is not a gallery of any kind but a space for discussion. Trained facilitators will encourage visitors to examine their feelings and share them.

"Productive, positive, uplifting"—is this any way to tell a story so full of suffering? Well, maybe it is. For one thing, the

CONNECTING Examining shackles in the Ohio museum

TIME

Teach

Reading Strategy

Connect Say: Recall an event that caused someone you know to suffer deeply, and imagine how the person would feel if he or she were not allowed to talk about it. Allow students to share their experiences. Then ask if these experiences help them understand former governor Wilder's comment.

Political History ☆

Abolitionism Prominent African Americans, such as Frederick Douglass and Sojourner Truth, worked to fight slavery. Douglass became a member of the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society, and Truth was appointed by President Lincoln as a counselor to escaped slaves in Washington, D.C.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Point out that subheads provide useful prompts for questions about the text. Read the first subhead with the class and model how you would ask a question based on that subhead. (Possible question: How is African American life being put into focus?) As a class, read the first subsection to see how the text offers an answer to the question.

Established Explain that a "loaded word" is one that conveys a strong emotional impression in addition to its literal meaning. Often, loaded words carry an extremely negative emotional meaning. Ask: Why is slavery a loaded word? Have students answer the question by drawing a concept map and filling it with the impressions and associations they have for the word.

TIME

Teach

Reading Strategy

Question The author suggests that despite its fame, the Underground Railroad succeeded on only a small scale. Say: Let's think of some questions that might help us understand why this was so. Tell students to consider what it might have been like to manage the Underground Railroad: the communication required and the large number of slaves involved. Students may jot down notes as ideas come to mind. Have them use their notes to pose questions aloud. Guide students to see how asking questions can lead to a deeper understanding of a subject.

View the Photograph ★

Structures like this served as holding pens for slaves who were being sold or as temporary housing for slaves traveling with their masters. The structures were also used to confine and punish slaves who had angered their masters. Ask: What features of this building would make it an unpleasant place to be? (The building has few openings; it would be dark, hot, and suffocating for those inside.)

Informational Text

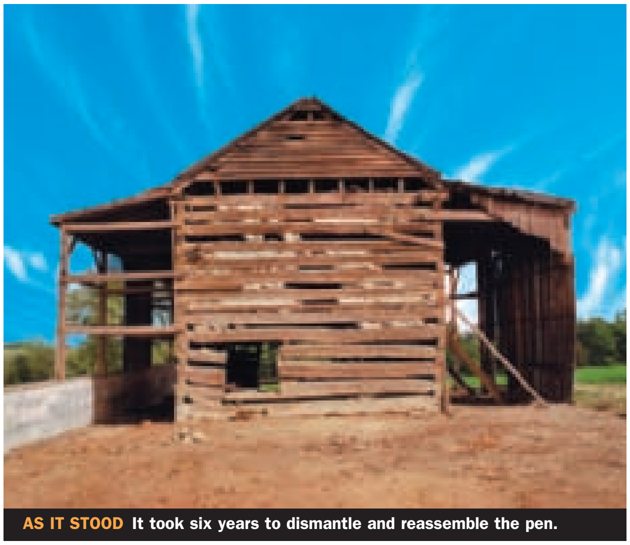
A STARRY OPENING GALA

Joining in the center's festivities were Courtney Vance (left), Angela Bassett, and Oprah Winfrey, who said the Freedom Center honors those who "paid the price for me to be who I am."

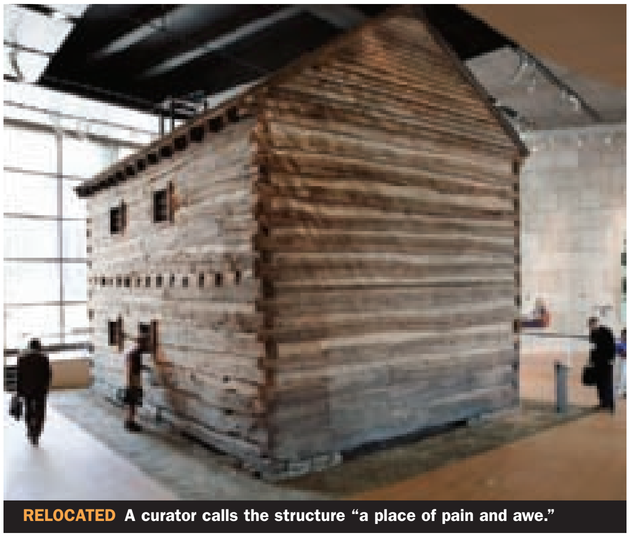
Freedom Center is in many respects still the thing it claims not to be: a museum of slavery. Its largest feature is a two-story, rough-hewn log cabin rescued from a Kentucky farm. Built by slave trader Captain John W. Anderson, the structure held dozens of men and women waiting to be sold, shackled in pairs to a central chain and confined to sitting or lying. It lets visitors imagine themselves in the cramped space where enslaved persons were crammed. Carl Westmoreland, a historian and preservationist, was responsible for rescuing the cabin. The great-grandson of an enslaved blacksmith, Westmoreland says, "It's a place that's ugly and dark. But you've got to look at the ugly side of the journey to see the glory of our emergence."

Eyes Still on the Prize

The longest of the center's display areas is a series of galleries devoted to the history of slave labor, the miseries of the Middle Passage across the Atlantic from Africa, and the resistance struggles that eventually led to emancipation. Visitors can see an image of the scarred back of a whipped enslaved person and hear actors reading the testimonies of enslaved people who described the suffering they endured.



AS IT STOOD It took six years to dismantle and reassemble the pen.



RELOCATED A curator calls the structure "a place of pain and awe."

★

Writing Practice

Journal Entry Direct students to study the photograph of the slave pen. Say: What would it be like to be locked inside such a place? Write a journal entry of a freed slave remembering the day when he or she arrived there. Prompt students' thinking by asking what the occupants might see inside such a building. What would the temperature and air quality be like? Encourage students to use sensory details to help their readers imagine what someone would see, hear, smell, and feel in the pen.

CINCINNATI A gallery at the Underground Railroad Freedom Center

By placing so much stress on the system of escape routes for runaways, the center takes the risk of inflating the real importance of the Underground Railroad. By some estimates, of the 4 million enslaved persons in the United States when the Civil War began, no more than 100,000 benefited from the system. But that emphasis is essential for the center to sustain its uplifting message. Its next significant section of exhibits is the "Hall of Everyday Freedom Heroes." It offers portraits and touch-screen information about a whole spectrum of figures from throughout the world who fought for the rights of religious and racial minorities, women, and just about anyone who ever stood up against an oppressive system. That leads in turn to a final area, called "The Struggle Continues." Here interactive computer displays allow you to learn about ongoing efforts against oppression, hunger, illiteracy, bigotry, and modern-day slavery.

So you may well leave the last galleries with your mind far from the horrors of the slave experience or even the struggles against it. But the center will also have temporary exhibitions that will expand on both themes. "We will prove ourselves to be the museum of the future," promises Naomi Nelson, the center's director of education. She may be right about that. If it also always manages to do justice to the past, the future looks O.K.

— UPDATED 2006, from TIME, August 30, 2004, and People, September 6, 2004

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Write a brief summary of the main ideas in this article before you answer the following questions. For help on writing a summary, see page 79.
2. What was your initial reaction to the idea of creating museums dedicated to the experience of slavery? How did your reaction change after reading the article?
3. (a)What is the emphasis of the Freedom Center? (b)Why do you think this approach is favored?
4. (a)What role did Cincinnati play in the antislavery movement? (b)How is the struggle for freedom a contemporary issue as well as a historical one?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. According to the article, why is it difficult to create a successful museum dedicated to the subject of slavery?
6. (a)How do you think the author feels that the goals of the Freedom Center compare with those of other slavery museums? (b)What evidence from the text supports your answer?

Connect

7. How do you think Frederick Douglass, Sojourner Truth, and other abolitionists would want the subject of slavery to be taught today? How do you think it should be taught?

TIME

Assess

1. Students' summaries should accurately describe all the main points of the article.
2. Students should describe their reactions and explain how their reactions changed.
3. (a) To teach about cooperative resistance to slavery (b) The Freedom Center wants to uplift people by teaching them about how some enslaved persons escaped.
4. (a) It was a meeting point for the Underground Railroad. (b) People continue to struggle against oppression, hunger, illiteracy, and slavery.
5. Slavery is a sensitive topic in American history. Some people will not visit a museum that makes them upset or angry.
6. (a) The author feels that the Freedom Center is more cautious than other slavery museums. (b) The author mentions that the center's mission includes the desire for reconciliation.
7. Students may say that Douglass, Truth, and other abolitionists would want slavery to be presented with accuracy. Students should support their ideas with well-reasoned thoughts.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 125–126.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Multimedia Presentation Assign students to work in groups to prepare a multimedia presentation about the Freedom Center. Tell students to develop a three-minute commercial for the Center, using text, images, and sound. Students should use the Internet and other sources to gather material for their presentation. Their target audience is parents, and the purpose is to encourage them to bring their children to the museum. The presentation should include practical details about the museum's location and hours of operation as well as information about the purposes and nature of its exhibits.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus Transparency 22

Daily Language Practice Transparency 34

Or point out that the Fifteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution states that citizens can vote regardless of their "race, color, or previous condition of servitude." The amendment does not mention women, who would not win the right to vote for 55 years.

Literary History ☆

Speaking Truth When Sojourner Truth rose to speak, some women feared she would focus on antislavery issues and distract attention from women's rights. They urged Frances Gage, who was presiding at the meeting, not to let her speak. Gage did otherwise.

Before You Read

And Ain't I a Woman?

Meet Sojourner Truth

(1797–1883)

Armed with common sense and sharp wit, Sojourner Truth spent her long life battling slavery and demanding voting rights for women. Nearly six feet tall, Truth had a deep, smooth voice that quieted rowdy crowds and won devoted supporters. She believed that resisting injustice was her divinely ordained duty.

Sojourner Truth, whose given name was Isabella, was born into slavery in Ulster County, New York, a Dutch-speaking region. She endured cruel slave owners, backbreaking work, and harsh beatings until, at age twenty-nine, she escaped. Given refuge by Isaac and Maria Van Wagener, she took the name Isabella Van Wagener. Since childhood, Isabella had believed she saw visions and heard messages sent from God. In about 1843, she changed her name to Sojourner Truth—meaning that she would become a sojourner, or visiting traveler, spreading the truth of God—and started to preach throughout the northeastern United States. Before long, she began to weave antislavery messages into her preaching.

> "There is no use in one man, or one nation, to try to do or be everything. It is a good thing to be dependent on each other for something, it makes us civil and peaceable."
>
> —Sojourner Truth

Truth also became an ardent champion of women's rights. In 1850 she began traveling the Midwest, attracting large crowds wherever she spoke. On this tour, in Akron, Ohio, she delivered what would become her most famous address, "And Ain't I a Woman?" Truth then moved to ☆ Battle Creek, Michigan, where she continued to agitate for women's rights and abolition. After the start of the Civil War in 1861, Truth worked to gather supplies and funds for black volunteer regiments. Toward the end of the war, Truth moved to Washington, D.C., where she accepted a job with the National Freedmen's Relief Association, counseling former slaves. At the age of seventy-eight, Truth returned to Battle Creek, where she remained until her death.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Sojourner Truth, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Selection Skills

And Ain't I a Woman?

Reading Skills
- Evaluate Argument (SE pp. 369–371; TE p. 370)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Persuasive Speech (SE p. 371)

Literary Elements
- Oratory (SE pp. 369, 371)
- Rhetorical Question (TE p. 369)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Usage (SE pp. 369, 371)
- Multiple Meanings (TE p. 369)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Speech

Can one person's stand against injustice make a difference? Discuss your opinion with a partner. Use examples from your own experience to support your views.

Build Background

On the second day of the 1851 Women's Rights Convention where Truth gave her speech, a number of male ministers spoke, insisting that women were too weak and intellectually inferior to vote. One man gave religious reasons against women's suffrage, or right to vote. Truth's speech is her answer to these critics. Her speech was not written or rehearsed, so many versions have survived—some in what might be interpreted as the dialect of an enslaved person from the South. In reality, Truth spoke Standard English and was from New York.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea Resistance to Slavery

As you read, ask, What obstacles and challenges did Sojourner Truth face as she spoke out against injustices of the time?

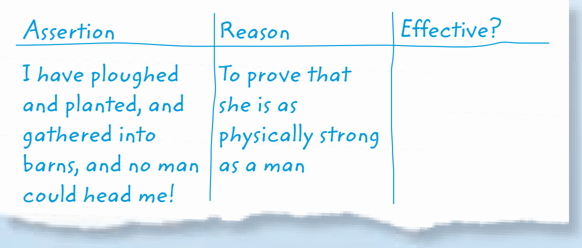
Literary Element Oratory

Oratory is the art of effective public speaking, or the use of persuasive skills when speaking. Oratory is common in politics, law, and religion. As you read the speech, ask yourself, How does Truth use persuasive devices, such as providing evidence from her personal experience, to achieve her purpose?

Reading Strategy Evaluate Argument

To evaluate is to make a judgment or form an opinion about something you read. Evaluating a persuasive text means determining whether its arguments are convincing. Think about how effective Truth is in convincing you to adopt her positions.

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart to evaluate Truth's arguments.



Assertion	Reason	Effective?
I have ploughed and planted, and gathered into barns, and no man could head me!	To prove that she is as physically strong as a man

Learning Objectives

For pages 368–371

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing oratory.

Reading: Evaluating argument.

Writing: Writing a speech.

Vocabulary

racket (rak´ it) n. loud noise; clamor; din; p. 370 We couldn't hear over the racket of the saw.

borne (bôrn) v. past participle of bear; given birth to; produced; p. 370 The peach trees have not borne any fruit yet.

oblige (ə blīj´) v. to make grateful or indebted; to do a favor or service for; p. 370 I would be obliged if you would remove your hat.

Tip: Word Usage When you encounter new words, it might help you to answer a specific question about the word. Example: What is something that makes a racket?

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Beginning Sojourner Truth's speech contains some idioms that may be unfamiliar to students. Have students work together to interpret the meanings of these expressions: "out of kilter," "in a fix," and "bear the lash." Then ask volunteers to explain the meanings.

Intermediate The ministers made three assertions: women were physically weak, less intelligent, and Christ was a man. Have students note Truth's responses to these three points. Ask them to explain why her arguments are persuasive.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

In this famous speech supporting women's rights, Sojourner Truth recites commonly accepted arguments against women's rights—and then destroys each one by reference to personal experience, logic, and common sense.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 49–52.

Vocabulary

Multiple Meanings Point out to students that racket has several meanings. It refers to a loud noise, to a criminal scheme, or to an item of sporting equipment. When confronted with words with multiple meanings, readers should pay close to the context of the word. Ask: In the first sentence of Sojourner Truth's speech, what is racket referring to? (The noise generated by a large group of people)

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Interactive Read and Write

Other options for teaching this selection can be found in

- Interactive Read and Write for English Learners, pp. 115–122
- Interactive Read and Write for Approaching-Level Learners, pp. 115–122
- Interactive Read and Write for On-Level Learners, pp. 115–122

For a pre-reading video for this selection, use Literature Launchers DVD: Selection Launcher.

Teach

Big Idea 1

Resistance to Slavery

Answer: Her experience of slavery showed that men and women are equal. She held up just as well as any man under slavery.

Reading Strategy 2

Evaluate Argument

Answer: He is one of the male speakers who insisted that women are not intelligent enough to vote. Truth addresses him because she is exhibiting her intelligence.

Literary Element 3

Rhetorical Question

Ask: What rhetorical questions does Truth use to persuade her audience? ("Ain't I a woman?" and "Where did your Christ come from?")

For additional literary element practice, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 61.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 3.7
DRP: 49
Lexile: 750

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 65.

Anna Washington Derry, 1927. Laura Wheeler Waring. Oil on canvas, 20 x 16 in. Gift of the Harmon Foundation. Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC.

And Ain't I a Woman?

Address to the Ohio Women's Rights Convention, 1851

Sojourner Truth

Well, children, where there is so much racket there must be something out of kilter.[1] I think that 'twixt[2] the Negroes of the South and the women at the North, all talking about rights, the white men will be in a fix pretty soon. But what's all this here talking about? That man over there says that women need to be helped into carriages, and lifted over ditches, and to have the best place everywhere. Nobody ever helps me into carriages, or over mud-puddles, or gives me any best place! And ain't I a woman? Look at me! Look at my arm. I have ploughed and planted, and gathered into barns, and no man could head[3] me! And ain't I a woman? I could work as much and eat as much as a man—when I could get it—and bear the lash as well! And ain't I a woman? I have borne thirteen children, and seen them most all sold off to slavery, and when I cried out with my mother's grief, none but Jesus heard me! And ain't I a woman?

3 Then they talk about this thing in the head; what's this they call it? [Intellect, someone whispers.] That's it, honey. What's that got to do with women's rights or Negroes' rights? If my cup won't hold but a pint, and yours holds a quart, wouldn't you be mean not to let me have my little half-measure full?

Then that little man in black there, he says women can't have as much rights as men, 'cause Christ wasn't a woman! Where did your Christ come from? Where did your Christ come from? From God and a woman! Man had nothing to do with Him.

If the first woman God ever made was strong enough to turn the world upside down all alone, these women together ought to be able to turn it back, and get it right side up again! And now they is asking to do it, the men better let them.

Obliged to you for hearing me, and now old Sojourner ain't got nothing more to say.

1 Resistance to Slavery How does Truth connect slavery and women's rights?

2 Evaluate Argument Who is the "little man in black"? Why is it appropriate that she addresses him during her speech?

Vocabulary

racket (rak´ it)	n. loud noise; clamor; din
borne (bôrn)	v. past participle of bear; given birth to; produced oblige (ə blīj´)	v. to make grateful or indebted; to do a favor or service for

---

[1] The phrase out of kilter means "out of order" or "mixed up."
[2] 'Twixt is a shortened form of betwixt, an Old English word meaning "between."
[3] Here, Truth uses head to mean "to do better than" or "to get ahead of."

Reading Practice

Evaluate an Argument Point out that in addressing arguments made by male ministers, Truth twice refers to the Bible for evidence. Ask: What does Truth mean by stating that man had nothing to do with Christ? (According to the Bible, Jesus Christ did not have a human father.) Who is Truth referring to as "the first woman God ever made"? (Eve, who according to the Bible, first ate forbidden fruit in the Garden of Eden and changed the destiny of the human race) Why would Truth's choice of evidence be effective in an argument with ministers? (By using details from the Bible, the ministers might find it difficult to refute.)

National Standards TK

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond

1. Imagine you are attending the Women's Rights Convention in 1851. How might you respond to Sojourner Truth's speech?

Recall and Interpret

2. (a)How does Truth refute the first three reasons given against women's suffrage? (b)What does Truth's response tell you about her character?
3. What is the effect of the repetition Truth uses in the first part of her argument?
4. (a)How does Truth answer the religious argument against letting women vote? (b)What does her argument tell you about her religious beliefs?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)What allusion to the Bible does Truth make in the paragraph just before her closing statement? (b)Evaluate the impact of that allusion on her message.

Connect

6. Big Idea Resistance to Slavery (a)How does Truth introduce the antislavery message into her speech? (b)How appropriate is this message, given the purpose of the convention?
7. Connect to Today Are Sojourner Truth's arguments about equality for women and minorities still relevant today? Explain.

Literary Element Oratory

Oratory is the art of effective public speaking, or the use of persuasive skills when speaking. Identify the qualities that you think make this speech effective and help Truth achieve her purpose. Use details from the speech to support your answer.

Reading Strategy Evaluate Argument

Evaluate one of Truth's arguments by analyzing her reasoning. Do you agree with her reasoning? Why or why not?

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Vocabulary

Practice with Word Usage Respond to these statements to help you explore the meanings of vocabulary words from the selection.

1. Give an example of an environment in which you would hear a racket.
2. What is one responsibility you have borne?
3. Describe a situation from your life wherein you have obliged someone.

Writing

Write a Speech Sojourner Truth supports the rights of women and slaves—both marginalized groups in the mid-1850s. Think of a group of people today that lacks equal rights. Write a brief speech championing that group's rights, using persuasive skills.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students may respond sympathetically.
2. (a) She says nobody has helped her into carriages or over mud puddles or has given her the best place. (b) She is strong.
3. It underscores the inaccuracy of her opponent's assertions.
4. (a) Christ was born of God and a woman. (b) She is deeply familiar with the Bible.
5. (a) Adam and Eve (b) Strong; speakers opposing women's suffrage had referred to the Bible.
6. (a) She refers to the backbreaking work she did when she was enslaved. (b) Linking "Negroes of the South" and "women at the North" makes her message appropriate.
7. Students may say that women and minorities still face discrimination in some situations.

Writing

Students' speeches should incorporate persuasive techniques such as the use of personal experiences, rhetorical questions, and logical arguments.

Literary Element

Truth's emotional appeal in describing her experiences as a slave and her allusions to the Bible are effective in refuting opponents' arguments and in persuading the audience to support women's rights.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 127–128.

Vocabulary

1. You would hear a racket on a construction site.
2. A student may have borne certain responsibilities in doing chores at home.
3. A student might mention having obliged a peer by helping with a cleanup project.

Progress Check

Can students evaluate an argument?

If No → See Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 62.

Vocabulary Workshop

Denotation and Connotation

Focus

Write these words and their synonyms on the board:

short (squat, petite); tall (lanky, towering).

Ask students which synonyms have positive connotations and which have negative connotations.

Teach

Denotation Work through the Denotation column of the chart as a class, asking volunteers to check the accuracy of each definition with a dictionary.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Assess

Practice

1. Grief conveys deep and powerful suffering. Sorrow conveys an enduring sense of loss or guilt. Regret conveys disappointment or remorse. Sojourner Truth was trying to convey deep distress at the loss of her children, so grief seems most appropriate.
2. Students might find similar words in the spirituals (pages 346–348) or in the excerpt from Frederick Douglass's autobiography (pages 353–357). Answers will vary but should reflect an understanding of the denotations and connotations of the words selected.

Learning Objectives

In this assignment, you will focus on the following objective:

Vocabulary: Understanding denotation and connotation.

Vocabulary Workshop

Denotation and Connotation

Literature Connection Sojourner Truth recounts the experience of watching helplessly as her children are sold into slavery.

> "And when I cried out with my mother's grief, none but Jesus heard me!"
>
> —Sojourner Truth, from "And Ain't I a Woman?"

Truth could have used words other than grief. She could have spoken of sorrow or regret—after all, those words have a meaning similar to grief. But they also convey subtle differences. Words can have similar denotations (dictionary definitions) but different connotations (ideas, images, or feelings suggested by the word). The power of a word to suggest an array of connotations contributes to precision in speaking and in writing.

A chart like the one below can help you analyze the words grief, sorrow, and regret—their similarities, their differences, and their shades of meaning. Follow these instructions to create the chart:

- Place the words to be analyzed in the left-hand column.
- Look up different definitions, or denotations, for each word.
- In the second column, record the definition for each term.
- In the third column, list ideas, images, or feelings that you associate with each word.

Semantic Features Chart

	Denotation	Connotation
Grief
Sorrow Regret

Denotation and Connotation

The denotation of a word is its literal meaning; the connotation of a word is its implied meaning.

Tip

If, during a test, you are asked what the denotation of a word is, think about how you would define the word for someone else. To describe the word's connotations, think about the images and ideas the word brings to mind.

Practice

1. Complete the chart. With your classmates, discuss the denotations and connotations of the three words. Why do you think Truth chose to describe her feeling as grief and not as sorrow or regret? Explain.
2. Find three or four words that have denotations similar to each other in other selections in Unit 3, Part 1. Fill in a semantic features chart using these words. Explain how the connotations of these words help the authors to suggest different shades of meaning.

Literature Online

Vocabulary For more vocabulary practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

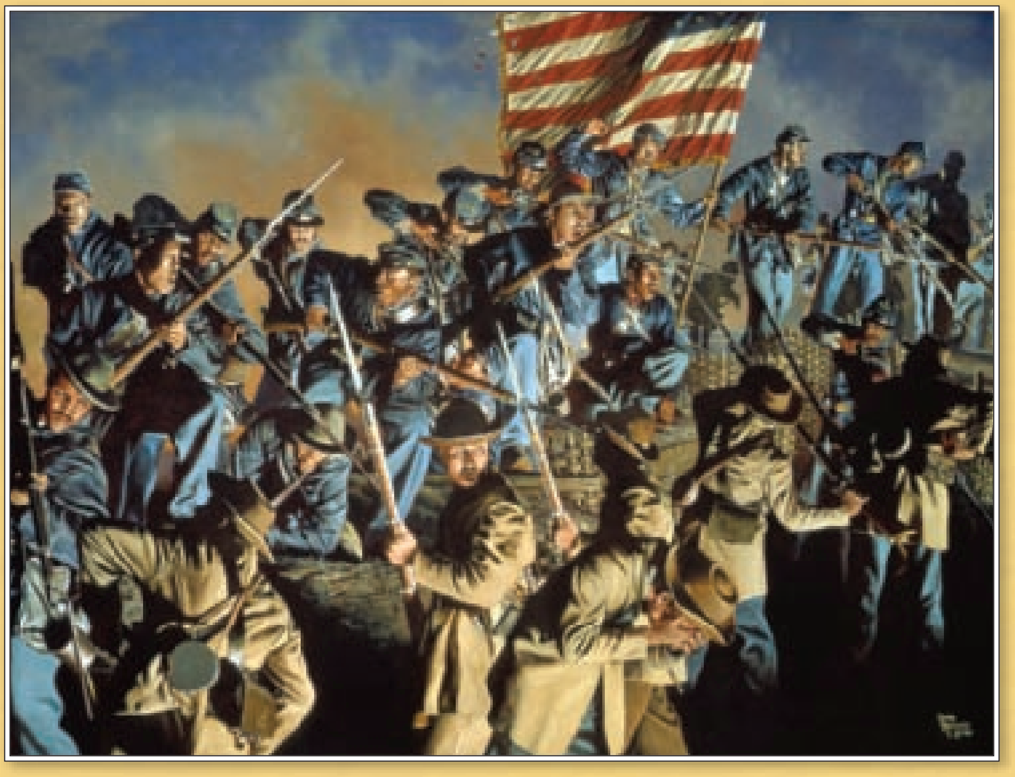
Vocabulary Practice

Connotation Students may sometimes find it helpful to figure out a word's connotation by trying out the word on themselves. Say: Consider the words clever and sly. Which of these would you prefer to apply to yourself? Why? (Students may prefer clever, noting that sly has a slightly less positive connotation.) Have students use the same technique to identify connotations for the following word pairs: slim or skinny; timid or prudent; cheap or thrifty; unaware or ignorant; rigid or firm. (Students may select slim, prudent, thrifty, unaware, and firm as words having the more positive connotation.)

National Standards TK

PART 2

The Civil War: A Nation Divided



The Old Flag Never Touched The Ground. Rick Reeves.

View the Art Following this 1863 battle at Fort Wagner, a soldier named William Carney was given the Congressional Medal of Honor—the first African-American to receive this award. A song was also written in 1901 commemorating this event. Why do you think these artists felt the need to record and preserve Carney's achievement? ★

> "Many are the hearts that are weary tonight, > Wishing for the war to cease . . . " 1
>
> —Walter C. Kittredge, "Tenting on the Old Campground"

UNIT THREE

PART 2

Analyze and Extend

Reading Strategy 1

Connect Direct students to read the quotation from Kittredge's song. Remind them that most soldiers and nearly all civilians affected by the Civil War—on both sides—were American.

Ask: Why are Kittredge's lines especially true for Americans during the Civil War? (Possible response: Americans fought on both sides, with families and communities sometimes divided.)

View the Art ★

Answer: Carney's achievement is an important milestone in African American history.

Rick Reeves (1959–), a former commercial artist, specializes in military-historical art. "The Old Flag Never Touched the Ground" shows an attack on Fort Wagner, a Confederate stronghold near Charleston, South Carolina, by the 54th Massachusetts Infantry, one of the first units of African American soldiers to see combat. This costly 1863 battle has also been depicted in the movie Glory (1989).

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Read the Kittredge quotation aloud to students. Ask: What does Kittredge mean by "the hearts that are weary"? (He is referring to people who have struggled for a long time.) Point out that Kittredge is using a particular kind of figurative language, using a part to represent the whole. In referring to people as "hearts," feeling is emphasized. A writer might refer to people as "minds" or "hands" to emphasize thinking or action. Ask students to think of other examples of this type of figurative language in daily use.

For additional support for English Learners, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 68.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Literature Launchers DVD: Pre-Reading Video

Selection Focus Transparency 23

Daily Language Practice Transparency 35

Or ask students to recall books they have read that are written in diary form, such as The Diary of Anne Frank. Ask: How does a journal provide insight into a writer's character?

Before You Read

from Mary Chesnut's Civil War

Meet Mary Chesnut

(1823–1886)

Mary Boykin Chesnut's life was one of opposites. Before the Civil War, she was the privileged daughter of Stephen Miller, a wealthy plantation owner in South Carolina. When the war ended, however, she and her husband were financially ruined. Although she abhorred slavery, her family owned hundreds of slaves, and her father was a pro-slavery congressman, senator, and governor. Chesnut's observant nature, education, and social position made her an excellent chronicler of the South during the Civil War.

Education Unlike many women of her era, Chesnut received a formal education. She attended Madame Talvande's French School for Young Ladies in Charleston, South Carolina, where she was an excellent student. During her time at Madame Talvande's, she met James Chesnut Jr., a lawyer from a neighboring plantation. The couple married just after Chesnut turned seventeen years old. When James was elected to the Senate in 1858, the Chesnuts moved to Washington, D.C., where they entertained politicians who would become the leading figures of the Confederacy, such as Jefferson Davis, the future president of the Confederacy. When she was not charming her friends with her sharp wit, Chesnut immersed herself in reading history books and English and French novels.

When the war broke out, Chesnut remained loyal to the South despite her opposition to slavery. Her husband had relinquished his seat in the U.S. Senate in 1860 after the ideological differences between the North and South became too extreme. Afterward, he was a prominent figure in the Confederacy, and as a result the Chesnuts traveled throughout the South. Throughout the Civil War, Chesnut lamented the cruelties and evils of war in detailed journals that reflected what people of the time believed, thought, and said.

Publication After the war ended, Chesnut and her family came upon difficult times. They lost their plantation due to debt, and James died in 1884. After his death, Chesnut was left alone to oversee their struggling dairy farm. Despite these hardships, she still worked to publish her memoirs. Similar to many other works of the Civil War era, Chesnut's "diary" is actually a compilation of journal entries recorded during the war and recollections written after it ended. Chesnut wrote her memoirs between 1881 and 1884. Unfortunately, she died of a heart attack before it could reach publication. The first public version of her journals, A Diary from Dixie, was published almost twenty years later. Today it is lauded for its vivid descriptions and details of a life in the Confederacy.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Mary Chesnut, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Selection Skills

from Mary Chesnut's Civil War

Literary Elements
- Journal (SE pp. 375, 378, 379, 380)
- Point of View (TE p. 378)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Sentence Fragments (TE p. 376)

Reading Skills
- Distinguish Fact and Opinion (SE pp. 375, 377, 378, 380)

Vocabulary Skills
- Context Clues (SE pp. 375, 380)
- Latin Word Parts (TE p. 375)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE p. 379; TE p. 376)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Journal

Why do people keep journals? Why do we like to read other people's journals? Compile a list of possible answers to these two questions.

Build Background

The passage you are about to read from Chesnut's journal describes the outbreak of the Civil War. By early 1861, South Carolina had seceded from the Union and claimed ownership of all federal property within the state. Only Fort Sumter, located in Charleston Harbor, remained under federal control. Confederate authorities demanded the removal of U.S. troops from the fort. President Lincoln refused their request, and on April 12, 1861, Confederate cannons opened fire on the fort. The Civil War had begun.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea A Nation Divided

As you read these journal entries, ask yourself, What conflicting feelings might Chesnut and other Southerners have felt about supporting the Confederacy?

Literary Element Journal

A journal is a daily record of events by a participant in those events or a witness to them. Journals are subjective, which means that they reflect the writer's personal perspective. As you read, ask yourself, What do Chesnut's journal entries reveal about her personality and character?

Reading Strategy Distinguish Fact and Opinion

A fact is a statement that can be validated with proof, while an opinion offers a personal point of view or feeling. As you read Chesnut's journal, note where she offers an opinion rather than presenting the facts.

Tip: Identify Opinion Statements Adverbs and adjectives, such as delightfully, silly, and horrible, are often indicators of opinion statements.

Learning Objectives

For pages 374–380

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing a journal.

Reading: Distinguishing fact and opinion.

Vocabulary

allusion (ə lo͞o´ zhən) n. an indirect or casual reference; an incidental mention; p. 377 She ignored his allusion to her tardiness.

audaciously (ô dā´ shəs lē) adv. boldly; arrogantly; p. 377 He audaciously interrupted the teacher.

prostrate (pros´ trāt) adj. stretched out with face to the ground in humility, adoration, or submission; p. 377 The priest was prostrate before the altar.

delusion (di lo͞o´ zhen) n. a false impression or belief; p. 378 The defeated candidate still had the delusion that he could win.

pervade (pər vād´) v. to spread through every part; p. 378 Dampness pervaded the old castle.

Tip: Context Clues To help you determine the meaning of an unfamiliar word, it helps to examine its context clues—such as the surrounding phrases. For example, in the sentence But tea trays pervade the corridors, going everywhere on page 378, it is clear that to pervade means to be present everywhere.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Mary Chesnut's husband served as the Confederate president Jefferson Davis's liaison with Major Robert Anderson, commander of the Union forces at Fort Sumter. This excerpt covers the events leading up to the outbreak of the Civil War. In these entries, Chesnut writes about preparations for the attack, her concern for her husband, and the excitement of the surrender.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 69–74.

Vocabulary

Latin Word Parts Ask: Which two words share the same root and suffix? (allusion, delusion). Tell students that the suffix -ion changes a verb form into a noun. Allusion and delusion share the Latin root ludere, meaning "to play; to jest."

ADVANCED Ask: What other words in English share this same Latin root? (Possible responses: prelude, preclude, elude, collude, and interlude)

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Interactive Read and Write

Other options for teaching this selection can be found in

- Interactive Read and Write for English Learners, pp. 123–132
- Interactive Read and Write for Approaching-Level Learners, pp. 123–132
- Interactive Read and Write for On-Level Learners, pp. 123–132

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Explain that people in the Civil War era had strong, patriotic attachment to their home states because they spent their whole lives in those states.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Point out that facts often involve dates, numbers, or actions that have taken place and can be verified. Opinions cannot be checked or proved; they are personal ideas or feelings. Tell students to look for these signals of opinion:

- words expressing approval or disapproval
- statements with "should" or "should not"
- intensifiers such as "too, "very," or "overly"

Teach

Big Idea 1

A Nation Divided Say: Keep these questions in mind as you read: Where do Mary Chesnut's loyalties lie? (Her loyalties are to her husband and the Confederacy.) How might this affect her writing? (It might cause her writing to be biased or slanted, unfairly favoring the Confederate cause.)

Big Idea 2

A Nation Divided Answer: Although Chesnut makes a negative comment about Union leaders, she wants peace. Like many Southerners, she feels resentment toward the North but does not relish the violence of war.

View the Art ★

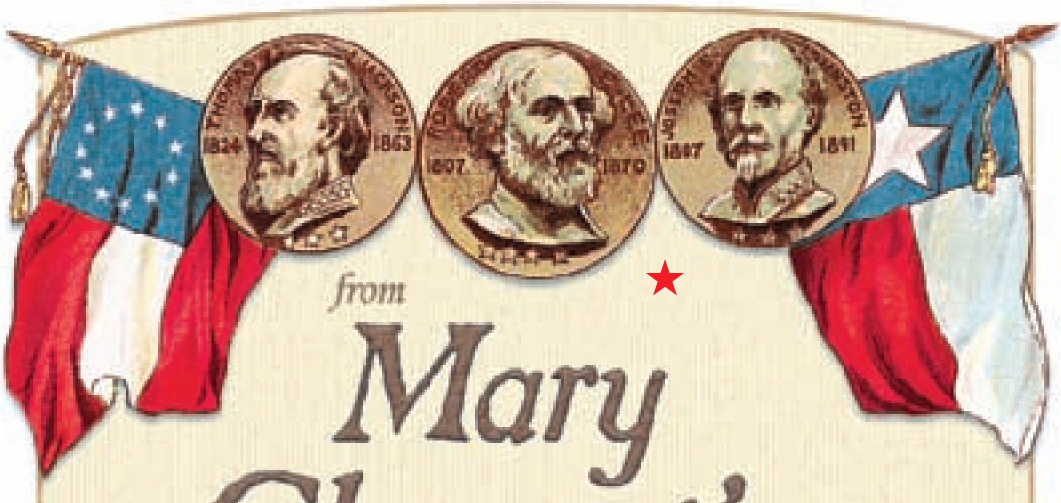
The medallions depict the well-known Confederate generals Thomas "Stonewall" Jackson, Robert E. Lee, and Joseph Johnston.

Ask: What attitude do these medallions express toward their subjects? (They seem to honor their subjects in a favorable way.) How does this attitude compare to Chesnut's feelings for the South? (She is dedicated to the South and to the Confederacy.)

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 6.9
DRP: 52
Lexile: 680



★

from

Mary Chesnut's Civil War

Mary Chesnut

1

April 7, 1861. . . . Today things seem to have settled down a little. One can but hope still. Lincoln or Seward[1] have made such silly advances and then far sillier drawings back. There may be a chance for peace, after all.

Things are happening so fast.

My husband has been made an aide-de-camp[2] of General Beauregard.[3] Three hours ago we were quietly packing to go home. The convention has adjourned.

Now he tells me the attack upon Fort Sumter may begin tonight. Depends upon Anderson and the fleet outside. The Herald says that this show of war outside of the bar[4] is intended for Texas.[5]

John Manning came in with his sword and red sash. Pleased as a boy to be on Beauregard's staff while the row goes on. He has gone with Wigfall to Captain Hartstene with instructions.

Mr. Chesnut[6] is finishing a report he had to make to the convention.

Mrs. Hayne called. She had, she said, "but one feeling, pity for those who are not here."

2 A Nation Divided How does this statement show the conflicting feelings of Southerners during the Civil War?

---

[1] William Henry Seward was U.S. Secretary of State from 1861 to 1869.

[2] An officer who serves as an assistant to a superior officer is an aide-de-camp.

[3] General Beauregard commanded the Confederate forces surrounding Fort Sumter.

[4] Bar refers to a sandbar.

[5] Texas, a pro-slavery state, had recently voted to secede from the Union.

[6] Mr. Chesnut (also called Colonel Chesnut) refers to Mary's husband, James, who served as the liaison between Confederate President Jefferson Davis and Major Robert Anderson.

Grammar Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Sentence Fragments Explain that journal writers often write in sentence fragments to allow their thoughts to flow freely. Explain that a sentence fragment is an incomplete sentence punctuated as if it were a complete sentence. A sentence fragment lacks a subject or a verb or is a subordinate clause. Have students rewrite the following passage, eliminating the sentence fragment:

"By 1860 the United States was a nation divided. Eighteen free states and 15 slave states. Abraham Lincoln won the election that year." (By 1860 the United States was a nation divided. There were eighteen free states and fifteen slave states. Abraham Lincoln won the election that year.)

Jack Preston, Willie Alston—"the take-life-easys," as they are called—with John Green, "the big brave," have gone down to the island—volunteered as privates.

Seven hundred men were sent over. Ammunition wagons rumbling along the streets all night. Anderson burning blue lights—signs and signals for the fleet outside, I suppose.

Today at dinner there was no allusion to things as they stand in Charleston Harbor. There was an undercurrent of intense excitement. There could not have been a more brilliant circle. In addition to our usual quartet (Judge Withers, Langdon Cheves, and Trescot) our two governors dined with us, Means and Manning.

These men all talked so delightfully. For once in my life I listened.

That over, business began. In earnest, Governor Means rummaged a sword and red sash from somewhere and brought it for Colonel Chesnut, who has gone to demand the surrender of Fort Sumter.

* * *

And now, patience—we must wait.

* * *

☆ Why did that green goose Anderson go into Fort Sumter? Then everything began to go wrong.

Now they have intercepted a letter from him, urging them to let him surrender. He paints the horrors likely to ensue if they will not.

He ought to have thought of all that before he put his head in the hole.

April 12, 1861. . . . Anderson will not capitulate.

* * *

Yesterday was the merriest, maddest dinner we have had yet. Men were more audaciously wise and witty. We had an unspoken foreboding it was to be our last pleasant meeting. Mr. Miles dined with us today. Mrs. Henry King rushed in: "The news, I come for the latest news—all of the men of the King family are on the island"—of which fact she seemed proud.

While she was here, our peace negotiator—or envoy—came in. That is, Mr. Chesnut returned—his interview with Colonel Anderson had been deeply interesting—but was not inclined to be communicative, wanted his dinner. Felt for Anderson. Had telegraphed to President Davis for instructions.

What answer to give Anderson, &c&c.[7] He has gone back to Fort Sumter, with additional instructions.

When they were about to leave the wharf, A. H. Boykin sprang into the boat, in great excitement; thought himself ill-used. A likelihood of fighting—and he to be left behind!

* * *

I do not pretend to go to sleep. How can I? If Anderson does not accept terms—at four—the orders are—he shall be fired upon.

I count four—St. Michael chimes. I begin to hope. At half-past four, the heavy booming of a cannon.

I sprang out of bed. And on my knees—prostrate—I prayed as I never prayed before.

There was a sound of stir all over the house—pattering of feet in the corridor—all seemed hurrying one way. I put on my double gown and a shawl and went, too. It was to the housetop.

The shells were bursting. In the dark I heard a man say "waste of ammunition."

3 Distinguish Fact and Opinion Is Chesnut presenting here a fact or an opinion?

Vocabulary

allusion (ə lo͞o´ zhən) n.	an indirect or casual reference; an incidental mention
audaciously (ô dā´ shəs lē) adv.	boldly; arrogantly
prostrate (pros´ trāt) adj.	stretched out with face to the ground in humility, adoration, or submission

---

[7] &c&c means "et cetera" or "and others."

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Analyze Historical Accounts Chesnut's journal is a jumble of incidental detail, rumor, and opinion, yet it still manages to give readers a "front row seat" to a historically momentous event: the start of the Civil War. Ask students to review each passage of Chesnut's journal to identify the historically important information. When they have done so, ask them to read at least two other brief historical accounts of the Fort Sumter attack. Then have students write an analysis of the benefits of each perspective on the Sumter event.

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Distinguish Fact and Opinion Answer: Opinion: Mary Chesnut is expressing a judgment on Major Anderson's decision to go into Fort Sumter. The word ought shows that this is her opinion. Explain to students that Chesnut refers to Anderson as "Colonel," but that he was actually a major.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Some students may have difficulty interpreting some of Chesnut's expressions in the sentences that precede the highlighted one. Point out that goose means "a silly person." Ask what green might mean. (Green is a figurative expression meaning "inexperienced.")

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 76.

Political History ☆

Fort Sumter Amazingly, no one was killed on either side during the thirty-four-hour bombardment, though a Union soldier died afterward in an accidental explosion during the firing of a salute. Anderson and his men were allowed to return to the North. In 1865, exactly four years after he lowered his colors, Anderson, now Major General, raised the same flag over Fort Sumter, which was once again the property of the United States.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Journal Answer: A soldier might worry more about his personal safety. A soldier could also see the effects of the volleys. Overall, a soldier's experience would be more immediate than Chesnut's.

Reading Strategy 2

Distinguish Fact and Opinion Answer: It is unclear how Chesnut has learned that no one has been hurt. The way she presents this information is subjective, making it difficult, at this point, to know how much of what she says is factual.

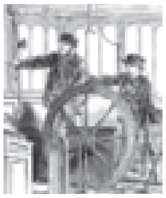
Writer's Technique ☆

Dress on Fire Chesnut's setting her clothes on fire is potentially very serious; the highly flammable dress fabrics of the time resulted in many tragic accidents. From the man's comment, however, it is apparent that Chesnut was never in any real danger. This anecdote shows the writer contrasting a comical, almost slapstick event with the larger, very serious events around her. Ask: What does this anecdote suggest about Mary Chesnut? (She had a sense of humor, even in the middle of a war.)

I knew my husband was rowing about in a boat somewhere in that dark bay. And that the shells were roofing it over—bursting toward the fort. If Anderson was obstinate—he was to order the forts on our side to open fire. Certainly fire had begun. The regular roar of the cannon—there it was. And who could tell what each volley accomplished of death and destruction.

The women were wild, there on the housetop. Prayers from the women and imprecations[8] from the men, and then a shell would light up the scene. Tonight, they say, the forces are to attempt to land.



Visual Vocabulary
The wheelhouse is the enclosed area on the deck of a ship that shelters the steering equipment and the pilot.

The Harriet Lane[9] had her wheelhouse smashed and put back to sea.

* * *

We watched up there—everybody wondered. Fort Sumter did not fire a shot.

* * *

Today Miles and Manning, colonels now—aides to Beauregard—dined with us. The latter hoped I would keep the peace. I give him only good words, for he was to be under fire all day and night, in the bay carrying orders, &c.

* * *

Last night—or this morning truly—up on the housetop I was so weak and weary I sat down on something that looked like a black stool.

☆ "Get up, you foolish woman—your dress is on fire," cried a man. And he put me out. It was a chimney, and the sparks caught my clothes. Susan Preston and Mr. Venable then came up. But my fire had been extinguished before it broke out into a regular blaze.

* * *

Do you know, after all that noise and our tears and prayers, nobody has been hurt. Sound and fury, signifying nothing.[10] A delusion and a snare. . . .

* * *

Somebody came in just now and reported Colonel Chesnut asleep on the sofa in General Beauregard's room. After two such nights he must be so tired as to be able to sleep anywhere. . . .

APRIL 13, 1861. . . . Nobody hurt, after all. How gay we were last night.

Reaction after the dread of all the slaughter we thought those dreadful cannons were making such a noise in doing.

Not even a battery[11] the worse for wear.

Fort Sumter has been on fire. He has not yet silenced any of our guns. So the aides—still with swords and red sashes by way of uniform—tell us.

But the sound of those guns makes regular meals impossible. None of us go to table. But tea trays pervade the corridors, going everywhere.

Some of the anxious hearts lie on their beds and moan in solitary misery. Mrs. Wigfall and I solace ourselves with tea in my room.

These women have all a satisfying faith. . . .

APRIL 15, 1861. . . . I did not know that one could live such days of excitement.

They called, "Come out—there is a crowd coming."

A mob indeed, but it was headed by Colonels Chesnut and Manning.

---

[8] Imprecations are curses.

[9] The Harriet Lane was a federal ship that brought provisions to the troops at Fort Sumter.

[10] "Sound and fury, signifying nothing" is taken from Macbeth (act 5, scene 5, lines 27–28), a play by Shakespeare.

[11] A battery is an artillery unit.

1 Journal How might a soldier describe this situation differently?

Distinguish Fact and Opinion Do you think that this statement is based on factual information, or is it Chesnut's opinion? 2

Vocabulary

delusion (di lo͞o′ zhen) n. a false impression or belief pervade (pər vād′) v. to spread through every part

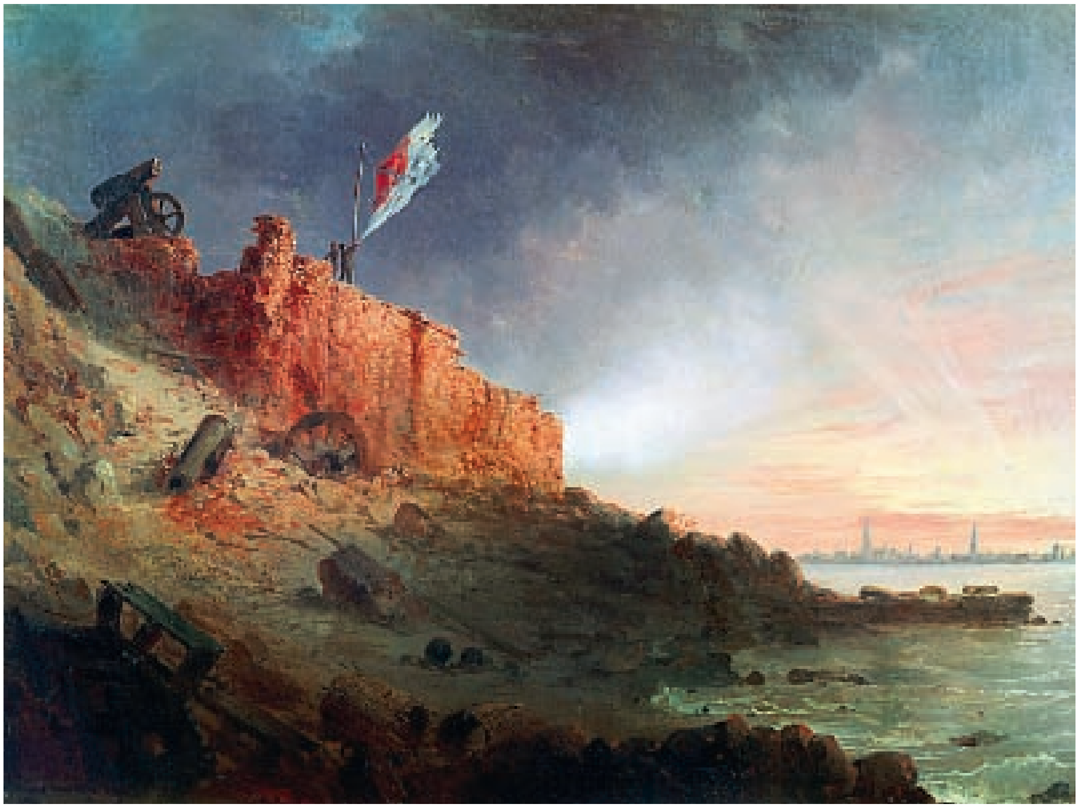
Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Point of View Explain that because a journal is autobiographical writing, it is written from a first-person point of view, with the writer referring to himself or herself as "I." Everything is presented through the writer's eyes. Reading a first-person account gives readers an intimate understanding of that person but limits what they learn about other people or events. Have students choose an event from the journal, such as Mary's setting her dress on fire, and describe it from another point of view.



Sunset at Fort Sumter, 1863. Conrad Wise Chapman.

View the Art Conrad Wise Chapman didn't have to seek out war scenes to paint—he encountered them daily as a Confederate soldier stationed in South Carolina. What do the details of this painting reveal about the situation at Fort Sumter at this time? ★

The crowd was shouting and showing these two as messengers of good news. They were escorted to Beauregard's headquarters. Fort Sumter had surrendered.

Those up on the housetop shouted to us, "The fort is on fire." That had been the story once or twice before.

— ★ —

When we had calmed down, Colonel Chesnut, who had taken it all quietly enough—if anything, more unruffled than usual in his serenity—told us how the surrender came about.

Wigfall was with them on Morris Island when he saw the fire in the fort, jumped in a little boat and, with his handkerchief as a white flag, rowed over to Fort Sumter. Wigfall went in through a porthole.

When Colonel Chesnut arrived shortly after and was received by the regular entrance, Colonel Anderson told him he had need to pick his way warily, for it was all mined.

As far as I can make out, the fort surrendered to Wigfall.

But it is all confusion. Our flag is flying there. Fire engines have been sent to put out the fire.

Everybody tells you half of something and then rushes off to tell something else or to hear the last news. . . .

Journal Would a member of the Confederate army or a Confederate official agree that "it is all confusion"? 3

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging To help students track the events at Fort Sumter through Chesnut's journal, organize the class into groups. Assign each group one journal entry. Have them identify important events that relate to the developing attack on the fort. Ask a volunteer from each group to orally describe the sequence of events on a given date. As a class, create a timeline of the attack.

Established Point out to students that the journal does not report everything that happened to Chesnut, only events she chose to record. Explain that each blue star indicates a break in the narrative. Tell students to pause at each blue star.

Teach

Literary Element 3

Journal Answer: War is inherently confusing, so even those in the military might agree that "it is all confusion." However, a soldier or an official would have more information than Chesnut and would find the situation less confusing than she does.

View the Art ★

Answer: The painting shows a tattered Confederate flag, a broken wall, an abandoned cannon. These details, plus the title, Sunset at Fort Sumter, 1863, suggest that the Confederacy is losing the war.

Conrad Wise Chapman (1842–1913) is known for his paintings of the Civil War. He made many paintings during his time as a Confederate soldier on the South Carolina coast. Point out that this painting was created two years after the events described in Mary Chesnut's journal.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 80.

Progress Check

Can students analyze a journal?

If No → See Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 75.

After You Read

Assess

1. Possible response: People had varied feelings and perspectives about the war.
2. (a) Soldiers assembling, ammunition wagons moving (b) Hope for peace
3. (a) Fort Sumter was fired upon. (b) Foreboding and fear
4. (a) Restrained excitement (b) No, since war means death.
5. (a) To show her status in sharing meals with prominent people (b) They show how war affects everyday lives.
6. Yes, Anderson had a chance to surrender before the fighting began.
7. Support for those close to her, such as her husband

Literary Element

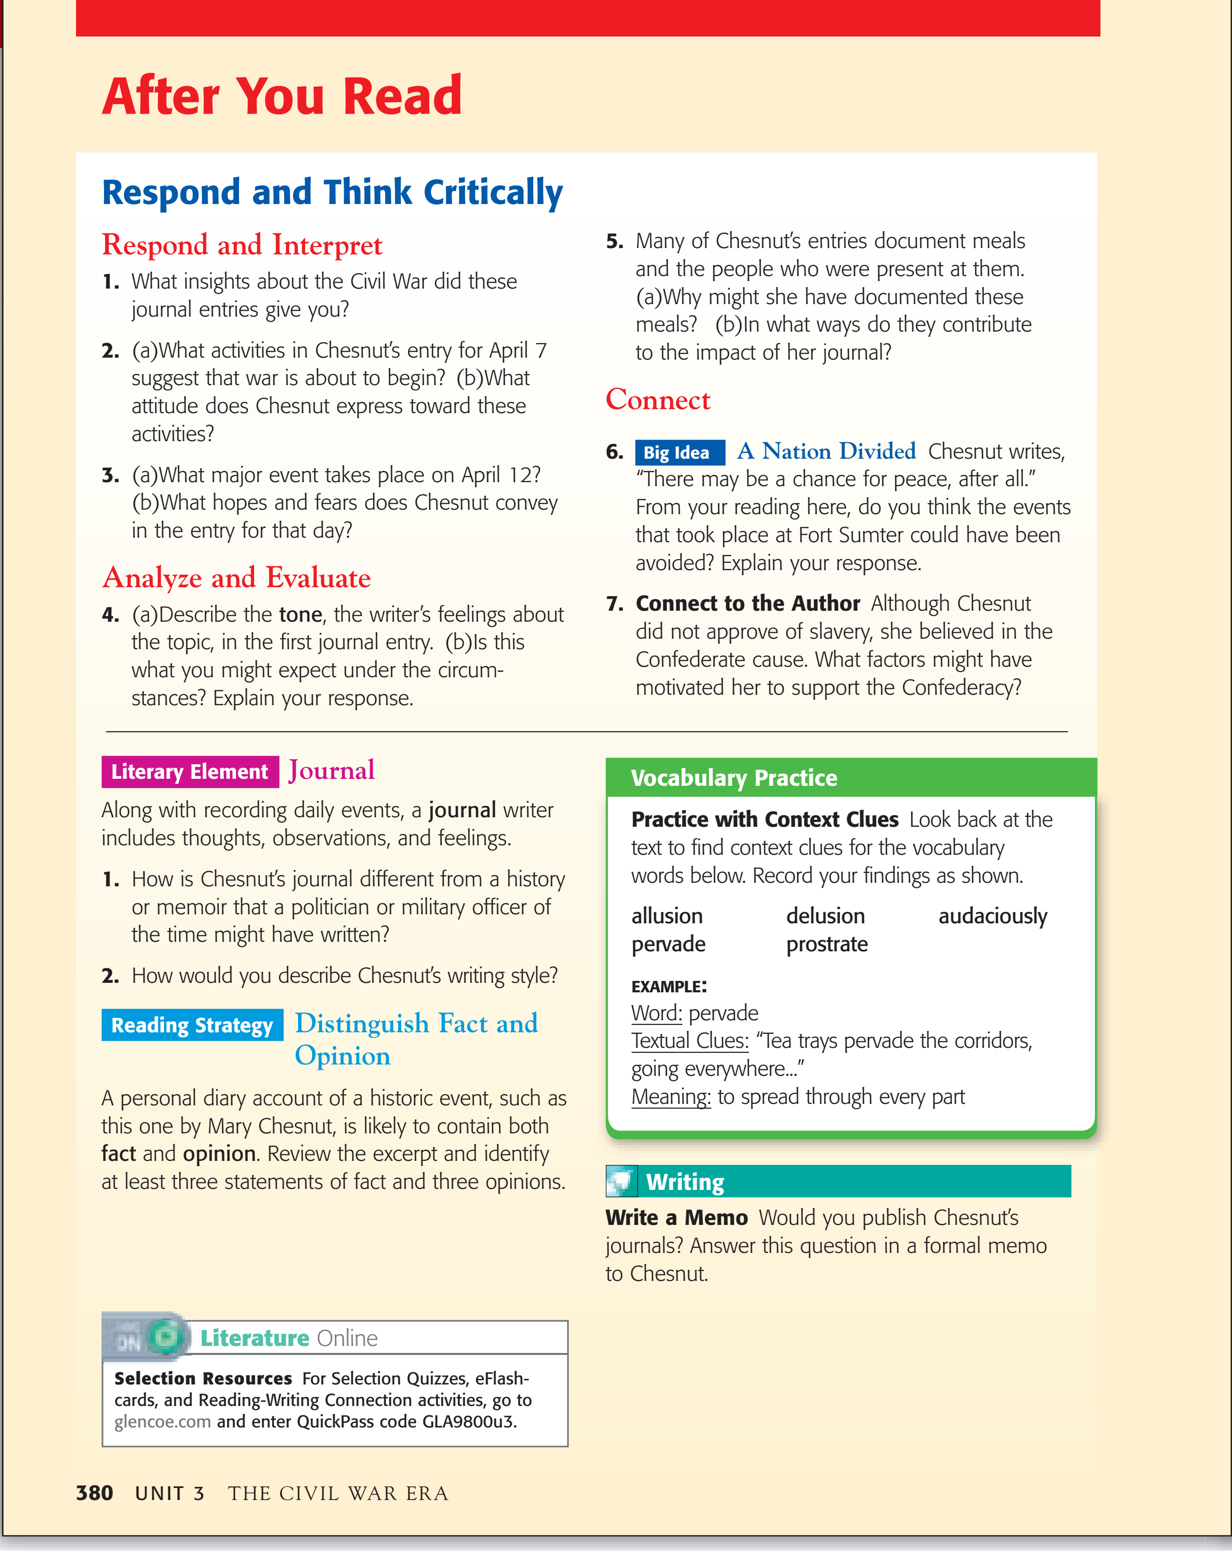
1. It is less objective.
2. Possible answers: formal; eloquent; hurried

Reading Strategy

Facts: "The convention has adjourned"; "Seven hundred men were sent over"; "Fort Sumter has been on fire." Opinions: "There could not have been a more brilliant circle"; "These men all talked so delightfully"; "But it is all confusion."

Writing

Answers will vary. Students should use a standard memo format, address a specific audience, and provide reasons for their opinions.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. What insights about the Civil War did these journal entries give you?
2. (a)What activities in Chesnut's entry for April 7 suggest that war is about to begin? (b)What attitude does Chesnut express toward these activities?
3. (a)What major event takes place on April 12? (b)What hopes and fears does Chesnut convey in the entry for that day?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. (a)Describe the tone, the writer's feelings about the topic, in the first journal entry. (b)Is this what you might expect under the circumstances? Explain your response.
5. Many of Chesnut's entries document meals and the people who were present at them. (a)Why might she have documented these meals? (b)In what ways do they contribute to the impact of her journal?

Connect

6. Big Idea A Nation Divided Chesnut writes, "There may be a chance for peace, after all." From your reading here, do you think the events that took place at Fort Sumter could have been avoided? Explain your response.
7. Connect to the Author Although Chesnut did not approve of slavery, she believed in the Confederate cause. What factors might have motivated her to support the Confederacy?

Literary Element Journal

Along with recording daily events, a journal writer includes thoughts, observations, and feelings.

1. How is Chesnut's journal different from a history or memoir that a politician or military officer of the time might have written?
2. How would you describe Chesnut's writing style?

Reading Strategy Distinguish Fact and Opinion

A personal diary account of a historic event, such as this one by Mary Chesnut, is likely to contain both fact and opinion. Review the excerpt and identify at least three statements of fact and three opinions.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Context Clues Look back at the text to find context clues for the vocabulary words below. Record your findings as shown.

allusion pervade delusion prostrate audaciously

EXAMPLE:
Word: pervade
Textual Clues: "Tea trays pervade the corridors, going everywhere..."
Meaning: to spread through every part

Writing

Write a Memo Would you publish Chesnut's journals? Answer this question in a formal memo to Chesnut.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Vocabulary

allusion; Textual Clues: At dinner, no one mentioned the situation at Charleston Harbor; Meaning: an indirect reference delusion; Textual Clues: All the "sound and fury" was a delusion because no one was hurt; Meaning: a false impression or belief audaciously; Textual Clues: "Men were more audaciously wise and witty" at an especially merry dinner; Meaning: boldly; arrogantly prostrate; Textual Clues: Chesnut says, "on my knees—prostrate—I prayed as I never prayed before." She is lying on the ground; Meaning: stretched out with face to the ground

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 129–130.

Grammar Workshop

Transitional Expressions

Literature Connection In the passage below, Mary Chesnut uses transitional expressions to show connections between ideas.

> "My husband has been made an aide-de-camp of General Beauregard. Three hours ago we were quietly packing to go home. The convention has adjourned.
>
> "Now he tells me the attack upon Fort Sumter may begin tonight."
>
> —Mary Chesnut, from "Mary Chesnut's Civil War"

The transitional phrase three hours ago tells when Chesnut and her husband were packing. The transitional word now tells when she hears about the attack. Both expressions show time relationships. Transitional words and phrases can clarify not only time order but other relationships as well. Each of those relationships uses particular transitions.

Relationship	Transitional Words and Phrases
Time	first, next, now, today, yesterday, meanwhile
Importance	especially, above all, in fact, primarily, more importantly
Cause and Effect	because, as a result, consequently
Contrast	but, yet, now, on the other hand, however, nevertheless
Example	namely, for instance, that is, for example

Examples

- Because Anderson refused to surrender Fort Sumter, the battle began.

  [Because shows a cause/effect relationship.]

- The cannon fire was intense; however, no one was hurt.

  [However shows a contrast relationship.]

Revise Add a transitional expression to show the relationship between sentences in each pair. Underline the transition and explain the relationship.

1. Many Charleston men were exhausted during the battle. Colonel Chesnut fell asleep on a sofa in the commanding general's quarters.
2. Mrs. Auld began to teach Frederick Douglass to read. She became angry when she saw him reading.
3. "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" was sung in worship. It carried a coded meaning.

Learning Objectives

In this workshop, you will focus on the following objective:

Grammar: Using transitional expressions.

Transitions

Transitional expressions may be used between parts of sentences, between paragraphs, or between sections of text.

Tip

To identify transitions in a test-taking situation, skim the text for key terms shown in the chart.

Dashes

Dashes are used to add emphasis. Dashes that set off text signify a sudden change or an abrupt interruption in thought. Therefore, in some cases a dash may be used in place of a semicolon before a transitional expression.

Language Handbook

For more about transitions, see Writing Handbook, p. R31.

Literature Online

Grammar For more grammar practice, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Approaching Level

UNIVERSAL ACCESS

AAVE Approaching level students who use AAVE may have difficulty with the proper placement of adverbs in writing. Transitional adverbs, such as those listed above, often appear at the beginning of a sentence. Adverbs which appear in the middle of a sentence, such as "always," "never," or "probably," are placed after "to be" verbs, but before other verbs. For example: "He is always going to school," and "He always goes to school," show the correct placement of the adverb. Have students insert adverbs into the following sentences.

1. He is studying at home. (always)
2. She earns high grades. (always)
3. He walks the dog. (never)
4. She is at the office. (never)

Focus

Write on the board: Tomorrow there will be a quiz on content, but the test on Friday will also include grammar.

Discuss how the transition tomorrow helps readers understand time and how but signals a contrast between the quiz and the test.

Teach

Transitions Have students list additional examples of transitions and write sentences using them. Discuss how each transition clarifies meaning.

ENGLISH LEARNERS Students may be unfamiliar with such transitional terms as meanwhile, primarily, and consequently. Define these terms and model their use in sentences.

Assess

Revise

1. Many Charleston men were exhausted during the battle. For instance [example], Colonel Chesnut fell asleep on a sofa in the commanding general's quarters.
2. Mrs. Auld began to teach Frederick Douglass to read. Later, however [time, contrast], she became angry when she saw him reading.
3. "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" was sung in worship. More importantly [importance], it carried a coded message.

For additional grammar practice, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 68.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus
Transparency 24
Daily Language Practice
Transparency 36

Or list some common conflicts that students might face, such as a disagreement between friends or between family members. Ask: What underlying emotions create conflicts? How do these conflicts demonstrate the strength of people's attachments? As they read, students should consider the challenges that divided loyalties pose to people in all time periods.

Political History ☆

Lee's Choice Lee was not alone in his decision. Hundreds of Southern-born officers trained at West Point chose to serve their home states. One notable exception was Virginia-born George Thomas, considered one of the best Union generals of the war.

Before You Read

Letter to His Son

Meet Robert E. Lee
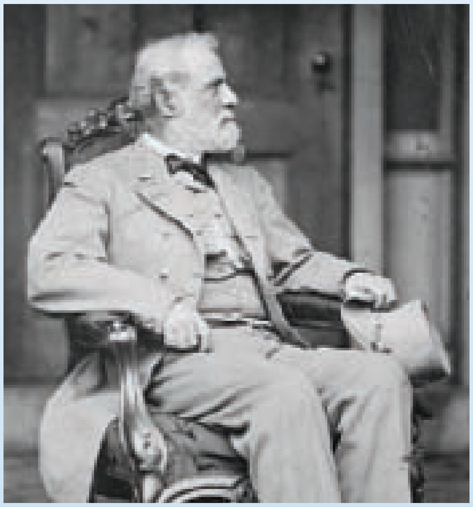
(1807–1870)

Adored by his troops and respected by his enemies, Robert E. Lee remains a symbol of Southern and American dignity. He was born into the famous Lee family of Virginia, who, according to President John Adams, had "more men of merit in it than any other family." His father was a cavalry commander during the Revolutionary War, a governor of Virginia, and a friend to George Washington. As a student at West Point, Lee earned many honors, including a commission to the elite Army Corps of Engineers. During the Mexican War (1846–1848), he rose to the rank of captain. General Winfield Scott said that Lee was "the very best soldier I ever saw in the field."

A Difficult Decision In 1861 Lee faced an agonizing decision. President Lincoln asked him to command the Union forces in the Civil War. Unwilling to fight against his state, Lee declined and resigned his position in the United States Army. He had been in the army for thirty-six years. Lee then joined the Confederate forces and took command of the Army of Northern Virginia in 1862.



Within three weeks of taking command, Lee had organized his troops, improved discipline and morale, and convinced his soldiers of his authority. Nevertheless, he knew that the powerful Union forces far outnumbered his own and had no doubt that his regiment would be crushed in the open battlefield.

> "There was not a man in the Confederacy whose influence with the whole people was as great as his."
>
> —Ulysses S. Grant

Victory and Defeat Lee achieved brilliant victories at the battles of Second Manassas, Fredericksburg, and Chancellorsville. Then, in order to keep fighting off of Virginia soil, Lee pushed north into Maryland and Pennsylvania, engaging the U.S. Army at Antietam and Gettysburg in June and July of 1863. However, after Gettysburg, the Union forces began to prevail. Lee's forces were malnourished and undersupplied, while those of Union General Grant had a fresh batch of recruits, superior armaments, and an impressive cavalry. Grant's troops progressed farther and farther into Virginia. On April 9, 1865, seeing that the end had come, Lee surrendered to General Grant at Appomattox. After the war Lee urged his fellow Southerners to put their bitterness behind them. An enduring U.S. hero, Lee was a brilliant soldier with a noble spirit and a chivalric manner.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Robert E. Lee, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Selection Skills

Letter to His Son

Literary Elements
- Diction (SE pp. 383, 385, 386)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Summary (SE p. 386)

Reading Skills
- Determine Main Idea and Supporting Details (SE pp. 383, 386)
- Cause and Effect (TE p. 384)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Parts (SE pp. 383, 386)
- Diction (TE p. 383)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Letter

Whom would you contact if you needed to talk about two conflicting loyalties or a tough decision? How would you expect this person to respond?

Discuss these questions with a partner. Refer to personal experiences if possible.

Build Background

In the days before telephones and e-mail, letters were the most common way to communicate at a distance. Robert E. Lee's letters are of interest because they throw light on historic events and reveal the mind and heart of a great leader. Lee wrote this letter on January 23, 1861. South Carolina had seceded from the Union in December 1860, followed quickly by Mississippi, Florida, and Alabama. Lee's home state of Virginia would secede approximately three months later, on April 17, 1861.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea A Nation Divided

As you read, ask yourself, How does Lee's personal conflict reflect the sharp divide between the North and South?

Literary Element Diction

Diction is a writer's choice of words, an important element in the writer's "voice" or style. As you read, ask yourself, How does Lee's choice of words express his concerns shortly before the outbreak of the Civil War?

Reading Strategy Determine Main Idea and Supporting Details

The main idea in a paragraph is the guiding thought that all of the sentences in the paragraph support. As you read, identify Lee's main ideas and the details that support them.

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart to record main ideas and details.

Main Idea	Supporting Details

Learning Objectives

For pages 382–386

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing diction.

Reading: Determining main idea and supporting details.

Vocabulary

perusal (pə ro͞o′ zəl) n. the process of examining carefully; p. 385 Her perusal of the essay revealed errors.

anarchy (an′ ər kē) n. the absence of government; p. 385 Without lawmen, anarchy frequently ruled.

array (ə rā′) v. to place in proper or methodical order; p. 385 The chess pieces were arrayed correctly.

redress (rē′ dress′) n. compensation, as for wrong done; p. 385 The victim demanded redress.

contend (kən tend′) v. to argue; dispute; p. 385 Martin contends that he is a master at checkers.

Tip: Word Parts Word roots, prefixes, and suffixes can help with unfamiliar words. Anarchy, for example, has the prefix an–, "without," and the root –arch, "ruler."

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Students may need background on the figures Lee mentions. Ask students to identify George Washington (led the American army and became the first president), Thomas Jefferson (wrote the Declaration of Independence), Alexander Hamilton, and James Madison (played key roles in shaping and passing the Constitution).

SMALL GROUP Intermediate Help students comprehend Lee's letter by clarifying some of his figurative and idiomatic expressions. Have students find and read the lines in which these expressions occur: "fruit of his deeds," "gulf of revolution," "resort to force." Put students in groups to discuss the meanings of these expressions.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Robert E. Lee's letter expresses dismay at the state of the Union. He calls civil war an "evil," but fears it is likely. Lee believes the South has been subjected to aggression by the North. He concludes that if war comes, he will return to Virginia and will draw his sword only to defend himself.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 83–88.

Vocabulary

Diction Point out that each of the vocabulary words represents a high level of formality that contributes to the lofty tone Lee uses in his letter. In ordinary conversation, one would likely say "careful reading" rather than "perusal."

Ask: What informal words would you use in conversation for the following: anarchy, array, redress, contend? (Possible answers: lawlessness, arrange, compensation, argue*)*

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 91.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Teach

Big Idea

A Nation Divided Say: Keep these questions in mind as you read: How could Lee praise the Union but plan to fight for the Confederacy? (His loyalty to his state is greater than his admiration for his nation.) What problems might this cause for Lee and for others in his situation? (He might lose his rank in the military.)

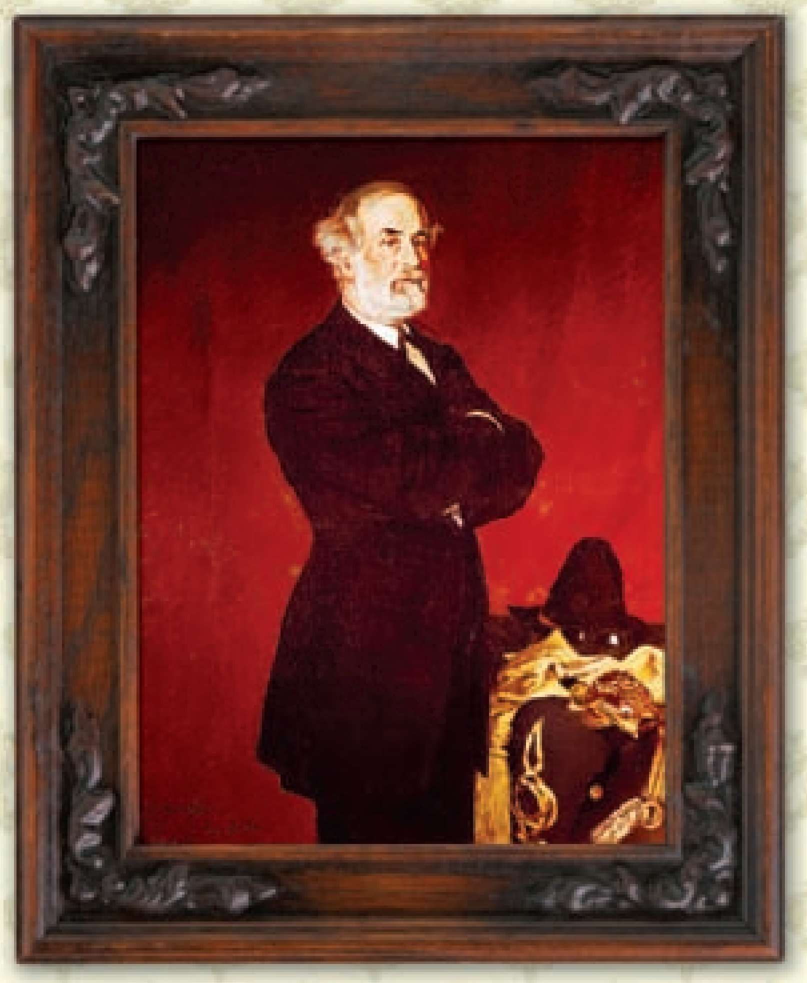
Political History ☆

Harper's Ferry Robert E. Lee was involved in a violent prologue to the Civil War. Abolitionist John Brown tried to ignite an insurrection by raiding the federal arsenal at Harper's Ferry, Virginia, in 1859. Lee was given command of the federal response. Lee's troops overwhelmed the raiders' position, captured John Brown, and restored order.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 9.9
DRP: 64
Lexile: 1130



General Robert E. Lee, 1869. Frank Buchser. Oil on canvas. Kunstmuseum, Bern, Switzerland.

Letter to His Son

Robert E. Lee

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Cause and Effect Discuss Lee's strong opinions about the causes of the impending Civil War and its probable devastating effects. Ask students to examine Lee's letter and to identify any cause-and-effect relationships among the events mentioned. In Lee's opinion, what will have caused the war? What will cause him to return to his native state? What would be the effects of a reunited nation?

Have students list the causes and effects in a chart.

Cause	Effect

I received Everett's[1] Life of Washington which you sent me, and enjoyed its perusal. How his spirit would be grieved could he see the wreck of his mighty labors! I will not, however, permit myself to believe, until all ground of hope is gone, that the fruit of his noble deeds will be destroyed, and that his precious advice and virtuous example will so soon be forgotten by his countrymen. As far as I can judge by the papers, we are between a state of anarchy and civil war. May God avert[2] both of these evils from us! I fear that mankind will not for years be sufficiently Christianized to bear the absence of restraint and force. I see that four states[3] have declared themselves out of the Union; four more will apparently follow their example.

Then, if the border states are brought into the gulf of revolution, one half of the country will be arrayed against the other. I must try and be patient and await the end, for I can do nothing to hasten or retard it.

The South, in my opinion, has been aggrieved by the acts of the North, as you say. I feel the aggression and am willing to take every proper step for redress. It is the principle I contend for, not individual or private benefit. As an American citizen, I take great pride in my country, her prosperity and institutions, and would defend any state if her rights were invaded. But I can anticipate no greater calamity for the country than a dissolution of the Union. It would be an accumulation of all the evils we complain of, and I am willing to sacrifice everything but honor for its preservation. I hope, therefore, that all constitutional means will be exhausted before there is a resort to force. Secession is nothing but revolution. The framers of our Constitution never exhausted so much labor, wisdom, and forbearance in its formation, and surrounded it with so many guards and securities, if it was intended to be broken by every member of the Confederacy at will. It was intended for "perpetual union," so expressed in the preamble, and for the establishment of a government, not a compact, which can only be dissolved by revolution or the consent of all the people in convention assembled. It is idle to talk of secession. Anarchy would have been established, and not a government, by Washington, Hamilton, Jefferson, Madison, and the other patriots of the Revolution. . . . Still, a Union that can only be maintained by swords and bayonets,[4] and in which strife and civil war are to take the place of brotherly love and kindness, has no charm for me. I shall mourn for my country and for the welfare and progress of mankind. If the Union is dissolved, and the government disrupted, I shall return to my native state and share the miseries of my people; and, save in defense, will draw my sword on none.

---

1. Edward Everett was a noted American politician and orator.
2. Here, avert means "to ward off."
3. The first four states to secede from the Union were South Carolina, Mississippi, Florida, and Alabama. With Georgia, Louisiana, Texas, Virginia, Arkansas, Tennessee, and North Carolina, these states would make up the Confederate States of America.
4. A bayonet is a large knife or dagger that can be attached to the muzzle of a rifle.

1 Diction What does Lee's choice of adjectives indicate about his feelings toward George Washington?

Vocabulary

perusal (pə ro͞o´ zəl) n.	the process of examining carefully
anarchy (an´ ər kē) n.	the absence of government array (ə rā´) v.	to place in proper or methodical order redress (rē´ dress´) n.	compensation, as for wrong done
contend (kən tend´) v.	to argue; dispute

A Nation Divided What does this statement reveal about Lee's personal response to the imminent war? 2

Teach

Literary Element 1

Diction Answer: The words noble, precious, and virtuous all indicate Lee's high esteem for Washington.

Big Idea 2

A Nation Divided Answer: Despite the fact that he was a military man, Lee was hesitant to go to war because he knew the reality of war was grim.

Literary History ☆

Edward Everett The man who wrote the biography of George Washington that Lee so admired would later deliver a grand oration at the dedication of a cemetery on the Gettysburg battlefield, the site of Lee's most significant defeat of the war. Everett's speech is not well remembered because Abraham Lincoln delivered the Gettysburg Address on the same occasion.

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 94.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Students may need help in using the note-taking chart for main ideas on page 383. Model the use of the chart on the board by putting "Breaking up the Union would be a disaster for the country" in the Main Idea column and listing two details from Lee's letter in the Supporting Details column.

Emerging Lee's highly formal style produces long, complicated sentences that include many modifiers and descriptions that may be unfamiliar to students. Tell students to locate the subject, the verb, and the object in each sentence and to use these to understand the sentence's main intent. Model this strategy by reading and paraphrasing the third sentence of Lee's letter, beginning "I will not, however . . ." A basic restatement of that sentence would be: I refuse to think that results of Washington's great work will be ruined and that his ideas and example will be forgotten.

After You Read

Assess

1. Why is the South "aggrieved"? What principles do you stand for?
2. (a) As a man of "mighty labors," "noble deeds," "precious advice," and "virtuous example" (b) Lee admires people of great character.
3. (a) Anarchy and civil war (b) Strict laws and the military are needed to hold society together.
4. (a) If the Union is dissolved, Lee will return to Virginia and fight only in self-defense. (b) Patriotic; opposed to secession; loyal to Virginia.
5. (a) Since the Constitution was not arrived at easily, it should not be set aside easily. (b) He wants to preserve the Union.
6. Torn between love for the Union and belief that the North mistreated the South
7. He would want to defend our nation and Constitution.

Literary Element

1. A breakup of the Union is the worst thing that could happen.
2. A serious and formal tone

Progress Check

Can students analyze diction?

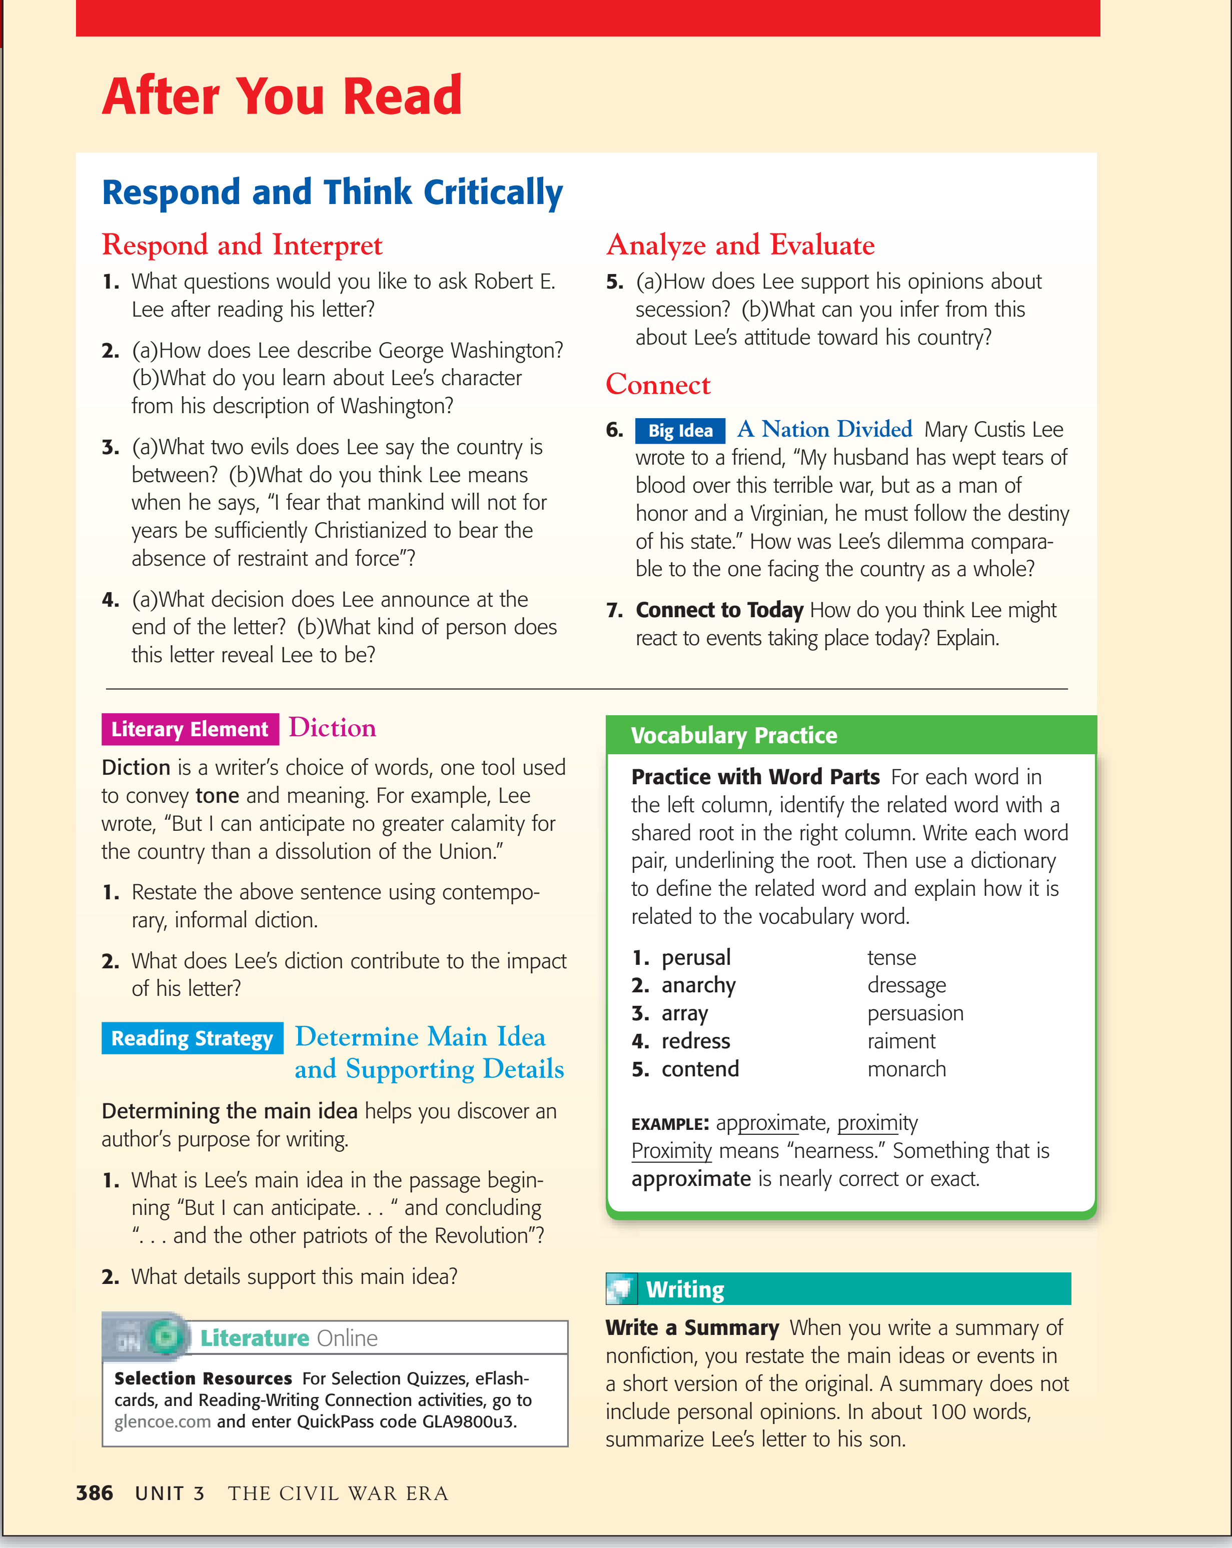
If No → See Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 89.

Reading Strategy

1. Ending the Union is the worst possible outcome for the nation.
2. Secession is revolution; it is not an option in the Constitution.

Writing

Students' summaries should be about 100 words long, include the main ideas, and omit opinions.



After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. What questions would you like to ask Robert E. Lee after reading his letter?
2. (a)How does Lee describe George Washington? (b)What do you learn about Lee's character from his description of Washington?
3. (a)What two evils does Lee say the country is between? (b)What do you think Lee means when he says, "I fear that mankind will not for years be sufficiently Christianized to bear the absence of restraint and force"?
4. (a)What decision does Lee announce at the end of the letter? (b)What kind of person does this letter reveal Lee to be?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)How does Lee support his opinions about secession? (b)What can you infer from this about Lee's attitude toward his country?

Connect

6. Big Idea A Nation Divided Mary Custis Lee wrote to a friend, "My husband has wept tears of blood over this terrible war, but as a man of honor and a Virginian, he must follow the destiny of his state." How was Lee's dilemma comparable to the one facing the country as a whole?
7. Connect to Today How do you think Lee might react to events taking place today? Explain.

Literary Element Diction

Diction is a writer's choice of words, one tool used to convey tone and meaning. For example, Lee wrote, "But I can anticipate no greater calamity for the country than a dissolution of the Union."

1. Restate the above sentence using contemporary, informal diction.
2. What does Lee's diction contribute to the impact of his letter?

Reading Strategy Determine Main Idea and Supporting Details

Determining the main idea helps you discover an author's purpose for writing.

1. What is Lee's main idea in the passage beginning "But I can anticipate. . . " and concluding ". . . and the other patriots of the Revolution"?
2. What details support this main idea?

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Word Parts For each word in the left column, identify the related word with a shared root in the right column. Write each word pair, underlining the root. Then use a dictionary to define the related word and explain how it is related to the vocabulary word.

1. perusal	tense
2. anarchy	dressage
3. array	persuasion
4. redress	raiment
5. contend	monarch

EXAMPLE: approximate, proximity
Proximity means "nearness." Something that is approximate is nearly correct or exact.

Writing

Write a Summary When you write a summary of nonfiction, you restate the main ideas or events in a short version of the original. A summary does not include personal opinions. In about 100 words, summarize Lee's letter to his son.

Vocabulary

1. perusal, persuasion: root meaning "to examine." Persuasion involves examining an argument and perusal is the process of examining.
2. anarchy, monarch: A monarch is the head of state. Anarchy is a state without a leader.
3. array, raiment: Raiment is clothing; to array is to make sure it looks right.
4. redress, dressage: Horses' movements are corrected in a dressage. Redress is correction for wrong done.
5. contend, tense: Tense means "stretched tight or in a strained state." When you contend, you oppose.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 131–132.

Before You Read

An Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge ☆

Meet Ambrose Bierce

(1842–1914)

Ambrose Bierce did not trust people. Nor did he trust governments, businesses, or churches. Most of all, "Bitter Bierce," as he was known, did not trust easy answers or sentimentality. As his biographer Carey McWilliams wrote, Bierce was "idealistic, cynical, morose . . . a realist who wrote romances, a fine satirist and something of a charlatan."

> "Nothing is so improbable as what is true."
>
> —Ambrose Bierce, "The Short Story"

Soldier and Civilian Ambrose Bierce was born into an impoverished Ohio farm family. He was the tenth of thirteen children. After one year of high school at the Kentucky Military Institute, Bierce became a printer's apprentice for a newspaper in Indiana.

At the outbreak of the Civil War, Bierce enlisted in the Ninth Indiana Volunteers. He fought in several important battles, including Shiloh and Chickamauga. At the battle of Kennesaw Mountain in 1864, Bierce suffered a severe head wound. He would later say that the bullet "crushed my skull like a broken walnut."

After the war, Bierce settled in San Francisco, California. For the next two years, he worked as a guard at the mint and studied for long periods of time at the public library. In 1868 Bierce landed a position at the San Francisco News Letter and Commercial Advertiser, a financial weekly. He was put in charge of the paper's humor section, "The Town Crier." Bierce's columns often consisted of satirical attacks against politicians and business leaders, attracting great notoriety for himself and the News Letter.

Nuggets and Dust In 1872 Bierce and his wife, Mary Ellen, traveled to England. While overseas, he published three books of fiction, The Fiend's Delight, Nuggets and Dust Panned Out in California, and Cobwebs from an Empty Skull. In 1875 Bierce returned to San Francisco, but his life continued to be restless and dissatisfied. He quit his job as editor for the Argonaut and traveled to the Dakota Territory. There Bierce worked as a manager for a mining firm that was losing money. The firm collapsed and he returned to San Francisco. From 1881 to 1886, Bierce wrote for Wasp, a humor magazine. From 1887 to 1908, Bierce worked as a columnist for the San Francisco Examiner.

In 1914 Bierce disappeared in Mexico, which was then in the midst of a revolution. In a letter to a friend, he wrote, "Goodbye, if you hear of my being stood up against a Mexican stone wall and shot to rags please know that I think it a pretty good way to depart this life. It beats old age, disease, or falling down the cellar stairs." His disappearance and death remain a mystery.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Ambrose Bierce, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus
Transparency 25

Daily Language Practice
Transparency 37

Or write on the board: panic, sharpened mind, quick reflexes, religious thoughts, important memories. Ask: Which of these expressions best describe how people respond to life-threatening situations? What words or phrases would you add to this list? Have students consider, as they read, how Peyton Farquhar responds to a threat against his life.

Cultural History ☆

Bierce on Film At least three film versions have been made of "Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge." The most recent version was released in 2005. An earlier French film was adapted into an episode of The Twilight Zone.

Selection Skills

An Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge

Literary Elements
- Point of View (SE pp. 388, 389, 393, 396, 398)

Reading Skills
- Make and Verify Predictions (SE pp. 388, 391–393, 398)
- Chronological Order (TE p. 388)
- Identify Steps in a Process (TE p. 390)
- Make Inferences (TE p. 392)

Vocabulary Skills
- Synonyms (SE p. 398; TE p. 396)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Coordinating Conjunctions (SE p. 399)
- Expository Essay (SE p. 399)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE p. 394; TE pp. 389, 391, 396)
- Group Discussion (SE p. 397)

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

A man is about to be hanged from a railroad bridge in northern Alabama. The platform he stands on is released. In a flashback, the reader learns the man is Peyton Farquhar, a wealthy Southern planter. A disguised Union spy has tricked him into attempting to burn the Owl Creek Bridge. As Farquhar is plunging to his death, the rope appears to break, and he escapes. Just as he is about to reach his loving wife's arms, the noose takes his life. The reader learns that the escape was an elaborate, split-second fantasy.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 96–101.

Vocabulary

Pronunciation Draw attention to poignant, a word often mispronounced. Model the correct pronunciation, and then have the class repeat the word aloud several times. Point out that the three verbs on the list, protrude, adorn, and assent, are each accented on the second syllable. Have the class pronounce the words aloud.

For additional vocabulary practice, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 104.

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Story

How much of reality is constructed by our own minds? Is it possible to use the imagination to protect oneself in an unpleasant situation? Explore these questions in a journal entry.

Build Background

This story, set during the Civil War in rural Alabama, was inspired by events that Bierce witnessed at the Battle of Shiloh. Union troops, encamped at Pittsburg Landing in southwestern Tennessee, were planning a southward offensive, when Confederate troops unexpectedly attacked. In two days, 20,000 soldiers were killed. This battle shocked both sides and anticipated the enormous loss of life that was still to come.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea A Nation Divided

As you read, ask yourself, How are Bierce's attitudes toward the Civil War reflected in this story?

Literary Element Point of View

Point of view is the relationship of the narrator, or storyteller, to the story. A story with a first-person point of view is told by one of the characters. In a story with third-person limited point of view, the narrator is outside the story and reveals the thoughts, feelings, and observations of only one character. In a story with an omniscient, or all-knowing, point of view, the narrator is outside the story and knows everything about all of the characters and events in the story. As you read, ask, How does Bierce use point of view? What effects does he achieve?

Reading Strategy Make and Verify Predictions

To predict means to make an educated guess about what will happen based on the clues that a writer provides. As you read, verify, adjust, or change your predictions as you get new information.

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart to record your predictions and the evidence on which you base those predictions.

Prediction	Evidence
Things are not what they seem. Something is wrong with the character's perceptions.	"great golden stars looking unfamiliar and grouped in strange constellations"

Learning Objectives

For pages 387–398

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing point of view.

Reading: Making and verifying predictions.

Vocabulary

protrude (prō tro͞od´) v. to stick out; to project; p. 390 After the accident, the victim had a large bump protruding from his forehead.

adorn (ə dôrn´) v. to make beautiful; to decorate; p. 390 The vain man adorned himself with jewelry and expensive clothes.

ardently (ärd´ ent lē) adv. passionately; enthusiastically; p. 391 The man ardently pursued the woman he loved.

assent (ə sent´) v. to express agreement; p. 392 After meeting for three hours, the committee finally assented to the chairman's proposal.

poignant (poin´ yənt) adj. sharp; severe; causing emotional or physical anguish; p. 392 Dan experienced a poignant loss when his grandmother died.

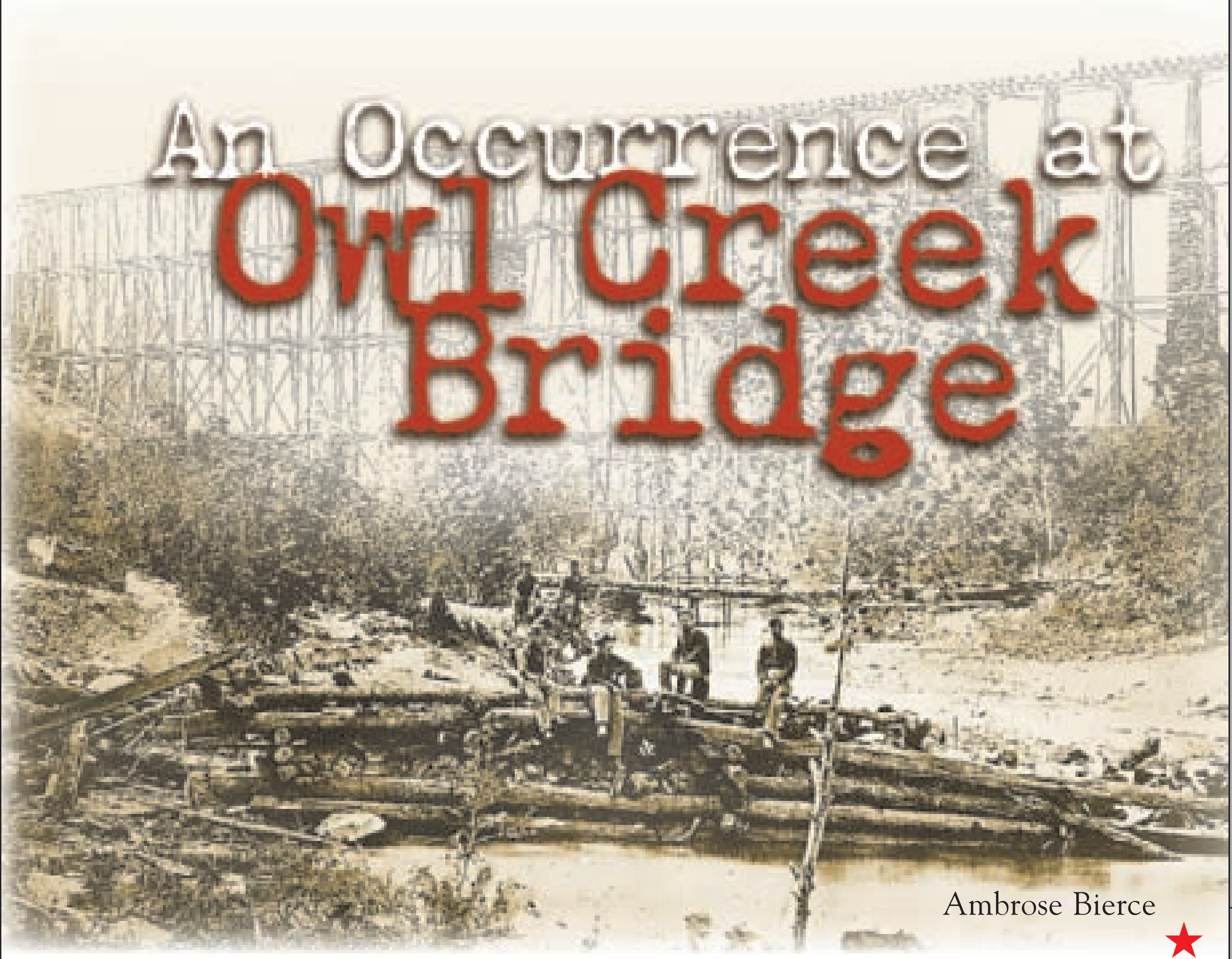
Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Chronological Order The action in "An Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge" moves forward and backward in time. To help students comprehend the sequence in which the events occur, have them list the main events as they read. When they have finished, they can organize the events into a timeline. Explain that the beginning of the timeline will not coincide with the beginning of the story.



An Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge

Ambrose Bierce ★

I

1 A man stood upon a railroad bridge in northern Alabama, looking down into the swift water twenty feet below. The man's hands were behind his back, the wrists bound with a cord. A rope closely encircled his neck. It was attached to a stout cross-timber above his head and the slack fell to the level of his knees. Some loose boards laid upon the sleepers supporting the metals of the railway supplied a footing for him and his executioners—two private soldiers of the Federal army, directed by a sergeant who in civil life may have been a deputy sheriff. At a short remove upon the same temporary platform was an officer in the uniform of his rank, armed. He was a captain. A sentinel[1] at each end of the bridge stood with his rifle in the position known as "support," that is to say, vertical in front of the left shoulder, the hammer[2] resting on the forearm thrown straight across the chest—a formal and unnatural position, enforcing an erect carriage of the body. It did not appear to be the duty of these two men to know what was occurring at the

---

[1] A sentinel is a soldier who guards a point of passage.

[2] A hammer is the part of a gun that helps to ignite the cartridge.

Point of View What does this detail tell the reader about the narrative point of view at this point in the story? 2

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Tell students that during the Civil War, several synonyms applied to each side. Federal was used interchangeably with the words Union and Northern. Here the term Federal army refers to Union soldiers. Similarly, Confederate was synonymous with secessionist and Southern.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Ask students to evaluate the first paragraph in terms of creating a suspenseful mood. Ask: What is happening in the first paragraph? (A bound man is about to be hanged; soldiers are carrying out the execution.) Do you think the story will be about what caused the man to be in this situation or about what happens to him next? Ask volunteers to share their predictions with the class.

Teach

Big Idea 1

A Nation Divided Say: As you read, consider how this story suggests sympathy for both sides in the war. (Readers develop sympathy for Farquhar as an individual, even though he is a criminal.) What does the fact that Union forces control Farquhar's Alabama community suggest about the war's progress? (The South is losing.)

Literary Element 2

Point of View Answer: It is omniscient.

View the Photograph ★

The photograph shows a railroad trestle bridge made of wood. Union and Confederate forces built these structures to enable supply trains to reach their armies. Ask: How might such a bridge be damaged or destroyed by sabotage? (It could be burned or blown up.)

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 7.3
DRP: 63
Lexile: 1000

Teach

Big Idea 1

A Nation Divided Answer: He is a civilian Southern planter being hanged by Union troops; therefore, he has probably committed an act of subversion against the Union army.

Writer's Technique ☆

Tone Dry cynicism is a hallmark of Ambrose Bierce's writing. Cynicism is an attitude based on a belief that all actions are rooted in selfish motives. Bierce, in his Devil's Dictionary, defines a cynic as "a blackguard whose faulty vision sees things as they are, not as they ought to be."

center of the bridge; they merely blockaded the two ends of the foot planking that traversed it.

Beyond one of the sentinels nobody was in sight; the railroad ran straight away into a forest for a hundred yards, then, curving, was lost to view. Doubtless there was an outpost farther along. The other bank of the stream was open ground—a gentle acclivity[3] topped with a stockade of vertical tree trunks, loop-holed for rifles, with a single embrasure through which protruded the muzzle of a brass cannon commanding the bridge. Midway of the slope between bridge and fort were the spectators—a single company of infantry in line, at "parade rest," the butts of the rifles on the ground, the barrels inclining slightly backward against the right shoulder, the hands crossed upon the stock. A lieutenant stood at the right of the line, the point of his sword upon the ground, his left hand resting upon his right. Excepting the group of four at the center of the bridge, not a man moved. The company faced the bridge, staring stonily, motionless. The sentinels, facing the banks of the stream, might have been statues to adorn the bridge. The captain stood with folded arms, silent, observing the work of his subordinates, but making no sign. Death is a dignitary who when he comes announced is to be received with formal manifestations of respect, even by those most familiar with him. In the code of military etiquette silence and fixity[4] are forms of deference.

The man who was engaged in being hanged was apparently about thirty-five years of age. He was a civilian, if one might judge from his habit,[5] which was that of a planter. His features were good—a straight nose, firm mouth, broad forehead, from which his long, dark hair was combed straight back, falling behind his ears to the collar of his well-fitting frock-coat. He wore a mustache and pointed beard, but no whiskers; his eyes were large and dark gray, and had a kindly expression which one would hardly have expected in one whose neck was in the hemp. Evidently this was no vulgar assassin. The liberal military code makes provision for hanging many kinds of persons, and gentlemen are not excluded. ☆

The preparations being complete, the two private soldiers stepped aside and each drew away the plank upon which he had been standing. The sergeant turned to the captain, saluted and placed himself immediately behind that officer, who in turn moved apart one pace. These movements left the condemned man and the sergeant standing on the two ends of the same plank, which spanned three of the cross-ties[6] of the bridge. The end upon which the civilian stood almost, but not quite, reached a fourth. This plank had been held in place by the weight of the captain; it was now held by that of the sergeant. At a signal from the former the latter would step aside, the plank would tilt and the condemned man go down between two ties. The arrangement commended itself to his judgment as simple and effective. His face had not been covered nor his eyes bandaged. He looked a moment at his "unsteadfast footing," then let his gaze wander to the swirling water of the stream racing madly beneath his feet. A piece of dancing driftwood caught his attention and his eyes

Visual Vocabulary A frock-coat is a man's coat that reaches to the knees. Popular in the nineteenth century, it is usually double-breasted and fitted at the waist.

1 A Nation Divided What does the condemned man's position in life suggest about the possible causes for his execution?

Vocabulary

protrude (prō tro͞od′) v. to stick out; to project adorn (ə dôrn′) v. to make beautiful; to decorate

---

[3] An acclivity is an upward slope.

[4] Fixity refers to a steady and unmoving stance.

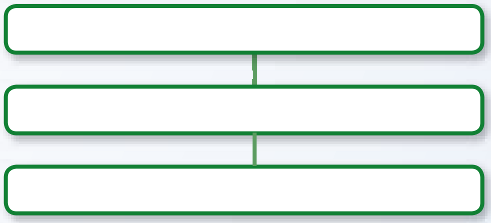
[5] Habit refers to a distinctive manner of dress or type of clothing.

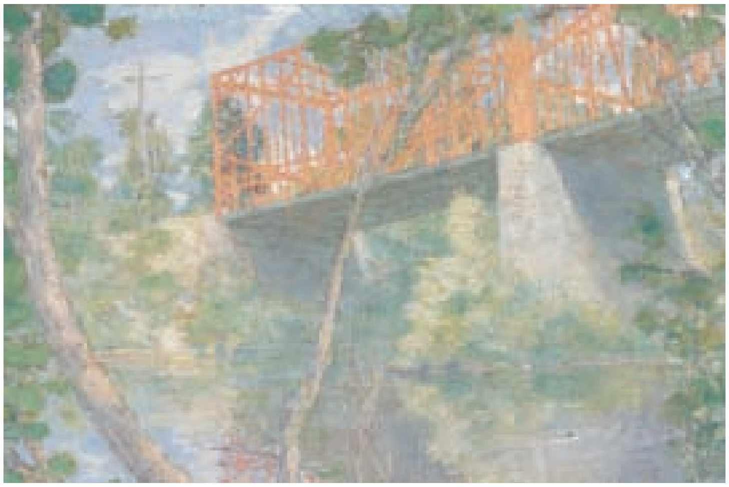
[6] Cross-ties are the wooden pieces to which railroad rails are secured.

Reading Practice

Identifying Steps in a Process Explain that military activities of all types are carried out in precise, predetermined steps. The steps are called a sequence. As students read the story, have them use a chart to note the steps involved in Farquhar's hanging.

Suggest that students use their notes to explain the process of a military hanging during the Civil War.





The Red Bridge, 1896. Julian Alden Weir. Oil on canvas, 24¼ x 33¾ in. The Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York.

followed it down the current. How slowly it appeared to move! What a sluggish stream!

2 He closed his eyes in order to fix his last thoughts upon his wife and children. The water, touched to gold by the early sun, the brooding mists under the banks at some distance down the stream, the fort, the soldiers, the piece of drift—all had distracted him. And now he became conscious of a new disturbance. Striking through the thought of his dear ones was a sound which he could neither ignore nor understand, a sharp, distinct, metallic percussion like the stroke of a blacksmith's hammer upon the anvil; it had the same ringing quality. He wondered what it was, and whether immeasurably distant or near by—it seemed both. Its 3 recurrence was regular, but as slow as the tolling of a death knell.[7] He awaited each stroke with impatience and—he knew not why—apprehension. The intervals of silence grew progressively longer; the delays became maddening. With their greater infrequency the sounds increased in strength and sharpness. They hurt his ear like the thrust of a knife; he feared he would shriek. What he heard was the ticking of his watch.

He unclosed his eyes and saw again the water below him. "If I could free my hands," he thought, "I might throw off the noose and spring into the stream. By diving I could evade the bullets and, swimming vigorously, reach the bank, take to the woods and get away home. My home, thank God, is as yet outside their lines; my wife and little ones are still beyond the invader's farthest advance."

As these thoughts, which have here to be set down in words, were flashed into the doomed man's brain rather than evolved from it the captain nodded to the sergeant. The sergeant stepped aside.

II

Peyton Farquhar was a well-to-do planter, of an old and highly respected Alabama family. Being a slave owner and like other slave owners a politician he was naturally an original secessionist[8] and ardently devoted to the Southern cause. Circumstances of an imperious nature, which it is unnecessary to relate here, had prevented him from taking service with the gallant army that had fought the disastrous campaigns ending with the fall of Corinth, and he chafed[9] under the inglorious restraint, longing for the release of his energies, the larger life of the soldier, the opportunity for distinction. That opportunity,

---

[7] A knell is the solemn sound of a bell ringing.

[8] A secessionist was one in favor of breaking away from the Union.

[9] Chafe means "to fret; to feel irritation."

Make and Verify Predictions What can the reader predict about the condemned man from this statement? 4

Vocabulary

ardently (ärd′ ent lē) adv. passionately; enthusiastically

Teach

Literary Element 2

Point of View Ask: What insights does this sentence provide about the condemned man? (The sentence provides insight into the condemned man's thoughts and personality.)

Reading Strategy 3

Make Inferences Ask: What is happening to the man's perception of time? (The intervals of silence between the sounds of his watch ticking are growing longer. Time is moving more slowly.)

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 103.

Reading Strategy 4

Make and Verify Predictions Answer: The word doomed suggests that Farquhar will not escape death.

View the Art

Julian Alden Weir (1852–1919) learned to paint from his father, the landscape painter Robert Walter Weir. In works such as The Red Bridge, the younger Weir focused on variations in light and confluences of angles. The real Red Bridge spanned the Connecticut River near a farm Weir owned.

Ask: How does the style of this painting compare or contrast with scenes Bierce describes in the story? (Some students may say the soft visual style matches Farquhar's impressionistic descriptions. Others may say that the painting's style is in contrast to the sharply observed physical details of the story.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate The powerful opening of "An Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge" is filled with military terminology. Have volunteers identify military terms in section I of the story. Write them on the board and help students build meanings from context. Add any of the following terms the class did not identify: private soldiers, Federal army, captain, sentinel, outpost, stockade, loop-holed, muzzle, company, infantry, stock, lieutenant, subordinates, sergeant. Have the class use dictionaries to verify their definitions and then read section I again with knowledge of meaning.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Make and Verify Predictions Answer: The sentence suggests that Farquhar is being betrayed by a Union spy and that his mission will be unsuccessful.

he felt, would come, as it comes to all in war time. Meanwhile he did what he could. No service was too humble for him to perform in aid of the South, no adventure too perilous for him to undertake if consistent with the character of a civilian who was at heart a soldier, and who in good faith and without too much qualification assented to at least a part of the frankly villainous dictum[10] that all is fair in love and war.

One evening while Farquhar and his wife were sitting on a rustic bench near the entrance to his grounds, a gray-clad[11] soldier rode up to the gate and asked for a drink of water. Mrs. Farquhar was only too happy to serve him with her own white hands.[12] While she was fetching the water her husband approached the dusty horseman and inquired eagerly for news from the front.

"The Yanks are repairing the railroads," said the man, "and are getting ready for another advance. They have reached the Owl Creek bridge, put it in order and built a stockade[13] on the north bank. The commandant has issued an order, which is posted everywhere, declaring that any civilian caught interfering with the railroad, its bridges, tunnels or trains will be summarily[14] hanged. I saw the order."

"How far is it to the Owl Creek bridge?" Farquhar asked.

"About thirty miles."

"Is there no force on this side the creek?"

"Only a picket post[15] half a mile out, on the railroad, and a single sentinel at this end of the bridge."

"Suppose a man—a civilian and student of hanging—should elude the picket post and perhaps get the better of the sentinel," said Farquhar, smiling, "what could he accomplish?"

The soldier reflected. "I was there a month ago," he replied. "I observed that the flood of last winter had lodged a great quantity of driftwood against the wooden pier at this end of the bridge. It is now dry and would burn like tow."[16]

The lady had now brought the water, which the soldier drank. He thanked her ceremoniously, bowed to her husband and rode away. An hour later, after nightfall, he repassed the plantation, going northward in the direction from which he had come. He was a Federal scout.[17]

As Peyton Farquhar fell straight downward through the bridge he lost consciousness . . .

III

As Peyton Farquhar fell straight downward through the bridge he lost consciousness and was as one already dead. From this state he was awakened—ages later, it seemed to him—by the pain of a sharp pressure upon his throat, followed by a sense of suffocation. Keen, poignant

---

[10] A dictum is a formal, authoritative pronouncement.

[11] Confederate soldiers wore gray uniforms.

[12] [Mrs. Farquhar . . . hands] Ordinarily, a servant or slave would have served the guest. In this case, Mrs. Farquhar brought the soldier a drink of water.

[13] A stockade is an enclosure made of posts in which prisoners may be kept.

[14] Summarily means "without delay; arbitrarily."

[15] A picket post is a group of soldiers sent ahead to watch for and to warn of a surprise attack.

[16] Tow (tō) is the coarse fibers of flax or hemp used to make yarn and twine.

[17] Here, a Federal scout is a Union spy.

Make and Verify Predictions What does this sentence enable the reader to predict about the outcome of Farquhar's mission to burn the bridge? 1

Vocabulary

assent (ə sent′) v. to express agreement

Vocabulary

poignant (poin′ yənt) adj. sharp; severe; causing emotional or physical anguish

Reading Practice

Make Inferences Have students read the first paragraph of section II. Then challenge them to infer the identity of the condemned man from this passage. Have them list the information they might use to support an inference that the condemned man is Peyton Farquhar:

- The man on the bridge is a civilian who looks like a planter. He is about to be hanged by the Federal army.
- Peyton Farquhar is a civilian and a planter. He is eager to serve the Confederate cause.

agonies seemed to shoot from his neck downward through every fiber of his body and limbs. These pains appeared to flash along well-defined lines of ramification[18] and to beat with an inconceivably rapid periodicity.[19] They seemed like streams of pulsating fire heating him to an intolerable temperature. As to his head, he was conscious of nothing but a feeling of fullness—of congestion. These sensations were unaccompanied by thought. The intellectual part of his nature was already effaced; he had power only to feel, and feeling was torment. He was conscious of motion. Encompassed in a luminous cloud, of which he was now merely the fiery heart, without material substance, he swung through unthinkable arcs of oscillation,[20] like a vast pendulum. Then all at once, with terrible suddenness, the light about him shot upward with the noise of a loud plash;[21] a frightful roaring was in his ears, and all was cold and dark. The power of thought was restored; he knew that the rope had broken and he had fallen into the stream. There was no additional strangulation; the noose about his neck was already suffocating him and kept the water from his lungs. To die of hanging at the bottom of a river!—the idea seemed to him ludicrous. He opened his eyes in the darkness and saw above him a gleam of light, but how distant, how inaccessible! He was still sinking, for the light became fainter and fainter until it was a mere glimmer. Then it began to grow and brighten, and he knew that he was rising toward the surface—knew it with reluctance, for he was now very comfortable. "To be hanged and drowned," he thought, "that is not so bad; but I do not wish to be shot. No; I will not be shot; ☆ that is not fair."

He was not conscious of an effort, but a sharp pain in his wrist apprised him that he was trying to free his hands. He gave the struggle his attention, as an idler[22] might observe the feat of a juggler, without interest in the outcome. What splendid effort!—what magnificent, what superhuman strength! Ah, that was a fine endeavor! Bravo! The cord fell away; his arms parted and floated upward, the hands dimly seen on each side in the growing light. He watched them with a new interest as first one and then the other pounced upon the noose at his neck. They tore it away and thrust it fiercely aside, its undulations[23] resembling those of a water-snake. "Put it back, put it back!" He thought he shouted these words to his hands, for the undoing of the noose had been succeeded by the direst pang that he had yet experienced. His neck ached horribly; his brain was on fire; his heart, which had been fluttering faintly, gave a great leap, trying to force itself out at his mouth. His whole body was racked and wrenched with an insupportable anguish! But his disobedient hands gave no heed to the command. They beat the water vigorously with quick, downward strokes, forcing him to the surface. He felt his head emerge; his eyes were blinded by the sunlight; his chest expanded convulsively, and with a supreme and crowning agony his lungs engulfed a great draft of air, which instantly he expelled in a shriek!

He was now in full possession of his physical senses. They were, indeed, preternaturally[24] keen and alert. Something in the awful disturbance of his organic system had so exalted and refined them that they made record of things never before perceived. He felt the ripples upon his face and heard their separate sounds as they struck. He looked at the forest on the bank of the stream, saw the individual trees, the leaves and the veining of each leaf—saw the very insects upon them: the locusts, the brilliant-bodied flies, the gray spiders stretching their webs from twig to twig. He noted the prismatic colors in all the dewdrops

---

[18] Here, ramification means "the act of branching out."

[19] Periodicity means "recurrence at regular intervals."

[20] Oscillation is swinging back and forth with regular rhythm.

[21] Plash is a splash or the sound of a splash.

[22] An idler is a person who is lazy or not employed.

[23] Undulations are regular movements that come in waves.

[24] Preternaturally (prē′ tər nach′ ər əl ē) means "going beyond what is normal" or "extraordinarily."

2 Point of View What does this statement tell the reader about the narrator's point of view?

Make and Verify Predictions What does this statement suggest about Farquhar's attempt to escape? 3

Teach

Literary Element 2

Point of View Answer: Because the narrator reveals only Farquhar's thoughts, Bierce is using a third-person limited point of view at this point in the story.

Reading Strategy 3

Make and Verify Predictions Answer: The word preternaturally suggests that Farquhar's attempt to escape possesses an aura of unreality.

Cultural History ☆

Hanging Peyton Farquhar is being hanged for a crime. Hanging was a legal means of execution during the Civil War and continues to be a lawful alternative to lethal injection in some states. The last execution by hanging in the United States occurred in Delaware in 1996.

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Eyewitness Account Say: Write a Federal soldier's account of the incident at the bridge. Write your account as an officer's official report or a journal entry.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Approaching-level students may have difficulty with the use of multiple negatives. Explain to students that there are many ways to make a sentence negative, but as in mathematics, two negatives produce a positive. Review the sentence, "As to his head, he was conscious of nothing but a feeling of fullness." Point out that this sentence uses a single negative term "nothing." Ask students to add a second negative term to the sentence, such as, "As to his head, he was not conscious of nothing…" Discuss with students how the second negative term changes the sentence's meaning.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Point of View Ask: What parts of this descriptive passage are specific physical details? What parts represent Farquhar's personal impressions? (Farquhar notices such specific details as the bridge, the fort, and soldiers by rank and by number. He hears the men's shouts and sees their actions. Farquhar's impressions are reflected in his sense of a turning motion and his view that the soldiers were "gigantic" and their actions "grotesque and horrible.")

View the Art ★

Answer: The bridge and type of foliage depicted in this painting are consistent with what is described in the story. The painting's dark and somber mood also reflects the mood of the story.

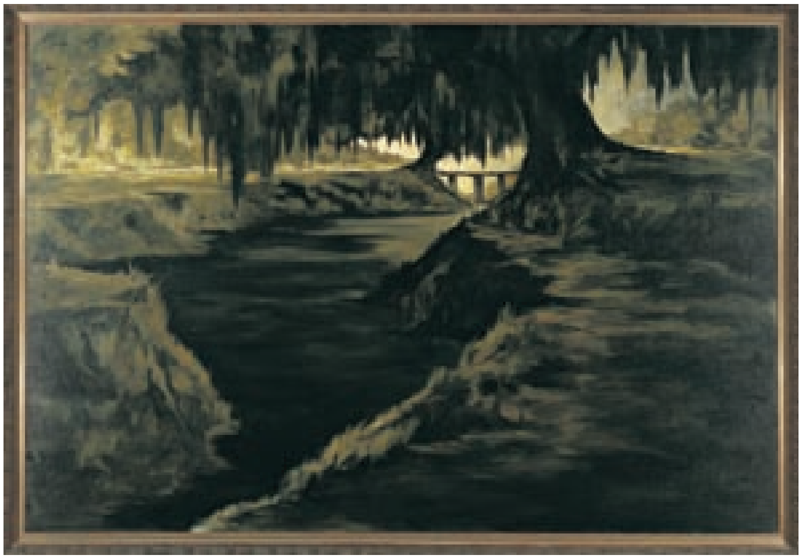
George Rodrigue (1944–) was born in southern Louisiana and began his career by painting the scenes and people of this region. These paintings were dark and brooding.



Sugar Bridge Over Coulee, 1973. George Rodrigue. Oil on canvas, 48 x 75 in. Private collection.

View the Art Fascinated by the Louisiana live oak, George Rodrigue painted hundreds of studies of his native ground, sky, and trees, often in shadowy, sepia tones. Does this painting look as if it could depict a scene from "An Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge"? Explain. ★ upon a million blades of grass. The humming of the gnats that danced above the eddies[25] of the stream, the beating of the dragon-flies' wings, the strokes of the water-spiders' legs, like oars which had lifted their boat—all these made audible music. A fish slid along beneath his eyes and he heard the rush of its body parting the water.

1 He had come to the surface facing down the stream; in a moment the visible world seemed to wheel slowly round, himself the pivotal point, and he saw the bridge, the fort, the soldiers upon the bridge, the captain, the sergeant, the two privates, his executioners. They were in silhouette against the blue sky. They shouted and gesticulated, pointing at him. The captain had drawn his pistol, but did not fire; the others were unarmed. Their movements were grotesque and horrible, their forms gigantic.

Suddenly he heard a sharp report[26] and something struck the water smartly within a few inches of his head, spattering his face with spray. He heard a second report, and saw one of the sentinels with his rifle at his shoulder, a light cloud of blue smoke rising from the muzzle. The man in the water saw the eye of the man on the bridge gazing into his own through the sights of the rifle. He observed that it was a gray eye and remembered having read that gray eyes were keenest, and that all famous marksmen had them. Nevertheless, this one had missed.

A counter-swirl had caught Farquhar and turned him half round; he was again looking into the forest on the bank opposite the fort. The sound of a clear, high voice in a monotonous singsong now rang out behind him and came across the water with a distinctness that pierced and subdued all other sounds, even the beating of the ripples in his ears. Although no soldier, he had frequented camps enough to know the dread significance of that deliberate, drawling, aspirated[27] chant; the lieutenant on shore was taking a part in the morning's work. How coldly and pitilessly—with what an even, calm intonation, presaging,[28] and enforcing tranquillity in the men—with what accurately measured intervals fell those cruel words:

"Attention, company! . . . Shoulder arms! . . . Ready! . . . Aim! . . . Fire!"

Farquhar dived—dived as deeply as he could. The water roared in his ears like the voice of

---

[25] Eddies are currents that move contrary to the main current in a river or stream, usually in a circular motion.

[26] Here, a report is an explosive sound or noise, especially from a rifle or a pistol when fired.

[27] Here, aspirated refers to a breathy sort of speech.

[28] Presaging means "acting as a sign or a warning of."

Speaking and Listening Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Motivation Point out that in attempting to destroy the bridge as a civilian, Farquhar was taking a far greater risk than if he had been acting as a uniformed soldier. A soldier would have the benefit of military training and, if captured, could not be executed for attacking an enemy position. Ask: If Farquhar loved his wife and children so much, why did he take such extraordinary risks? Why did he act so abruptly, so alone, and with so little preparation? In small groups, have students discuss Farquhar's motivation and intention before he left on his mission. After students have had time to discuss, select a student volunteer to stand up and explain Farquhar's reasoning by pretending to be Farquhar. The rest of the class can ask questions to the student acting as Farquhar, who should answer questions based on what has been learned about the character. Tell students that they may add imagined details from Farquhar's past that might explain his motives as long as the details fit with his character. Have several students take turns role playing.

Niagara, yet he heard the dulled thunder of the volley[29] and, rising again toward the surface, met shining bits of metal, singularly flattened, oscillating slowly downward. Some of them touched him on the face and hands, then fell away, continuing their descent. One lodged between his collar and neck; it was uncomfortably warm and he snatched it out.

As he rose to the surface, gasping for breath, he saw that he had been a long time under water; he was perceptibly farther down stream—nearer to safety. The soldiers had almost finished reloading; the metal ramrods[30] flashed all at once in the sunshine as they were drawn from the barrels, turned in the air, and thrust into their sockets. The two sentinels fired again, independently and ineffectually.

The hunted man saw all this over his shoulder; he was now swimming vigorously with the current. His brain was as energetic as his arms and legs; he thought with the rapidity of lightning.

"The officer," he reasoned, "will not make that martinet's[31] error a second time. It is as easy to dodge a volley as a single shot. He has probably already given the command to fire at ☆ will. God help me, I cannot dodge them all!"

2 An appalling plash within two yards of him was followed by a loud, rushing sound diminuendo,[32] which seemed to travel back through the air to the fort and died in an explosion which stirred the very river to its deeps! A rising sheet of water curved over him, fell down upon him, blinded him, strangled him! The cannon had taken a hand in the game. As he shook his head free from the commotion of the smitten[33] water he heard the deflected shot humming through the air ahead, and in an instant it was cracking and smashing the branches in the forest beyond.

"They will not do that again," he thought; "the next time they will use a charge of grape.[34] I must keep my eye upon the gun; the smoke will apprise me—the report arrives too late; it lags behind the missile. That is a good gun."

Suddenly he felt himself whirled round and round—spinning like a top. The water, the banks, the forests, the now distant bridge, fort and men—all were commingled and blurred. Objects were represented by their colors only; circular horizontal streaks of color—that was all he saw. He had been caught in a vortex[35] and was being whirled on with a velocity of advance and gyration that made him giddy and sick. In a few moments he was flung upon the gravel at the foot of the left bank of the stream—the southern bank—and behind a projecting point which concealed him from his enemies. The sudden arrest of his motion, the abrasion of one of his hands on the gravel, restored him, and he wept with delight. He dug his fingers into the sand, threw it over himself in handfuls and audibly blessed it. It looked like diamonds, rubies, emeralds; he could think of nothing beautiful which it did not resemble. The trees upon the bank were giant garden plants; he noted a definite order in their arrangement, inhaled the fragrance of their blooms. A strange, roseate[36] light shone through the spaces among their trunks and the wind made in their branches the music of æolian harps.[37] He had no wish to perfect his escape—was content to remain in that enchanting spot until retaken.

A whiz and rattle of grapeshot among the branches high above his head roused him from his dream. The baffled cannoneer had fired him a random farewell. He sprang to his feet,

---

[29] Here, a volley is a discharge of bullets in rapid succession.

[30] Ramrods are rods used for stuffing the charge down the barrel of a rifle that is loaded from the muzzle.

[31] A martinet is one who stresses strict attention to forms and rules.

[32] Diminuendo (di min′ ū en′ dō) is a musical term that describes a gradual decrease in volume.

[33] Here, smitten means that the water has been bombarded with ammunition from the cannon.

[34] Grape refers to grapeshot, a cluster of small iron balls that disperse when shot from a cannon.

[35] Here, a vortex is a whirling mass of water that pulls everything to its center.

[36] Roseate means "rose-colored."

[37] Æolian harps produce musical sounds when air passes through the strings.

3 A Nation Divided How do you think Bierce's actual experiences in the war affected his descriptions of combat?

Teach

Literary Element 2

Imagery Have students read this passage aloud, and then examine the descriptive language in it. Ask: How does Bierce use imagery to create sympathy for Farquhar? (He puts the reader in Farquhar's shoes and describes how it would look and feel to be in his predicament.)

Big Idea 3

A Nation Divided Answer: Bierce's experiences in war enabled him to include realistic details about combat.

APPROACHING Remind students that Bierce saw action in many battles in the war and survived a bullet wound to the head.

Language History ☆

"Fire at Will" The phrase "fire at will" means that soldiers may fire and reload as quickly as they can, producing a fairly continuous rate of fire. However, in "volley" fire, soldiers all shoot at the same time on command. The reloading interval of ten or fifteen seconds when no shots were fired would allow Farquhar more time to escape.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Beginning Guide students in clarifying details of Farquhar's escape. Ask: What are the "shining bits of metal" Farquhar sees in the water? (bullets) What causes the big splash and loud noise? (A cannon ball strikes the river near Farquhar and ricochets into the woods.)

SMALL GROUP Intermediate Help students visualize some of Farquhar's sensations, by directing their attention to the phrases "voice of Niagara" and "circular horizontal streaks of color." Have students work with a partner to explain these terms. If necessary, tell them that Niagara refers to a huge waterfall and that horizontal means "flat and level."

Teach

Literary Element 1

Point of View Answer: The statement suggests that the narrator has been intentionally misleading the reader about the reality of Farquhar's escape.

View the Photograph

Point out the yellowish tone of this photograph and the stark contrast between the light sky and the dark trees. Ask: How does this image relate to Farquhar's experiences? (It suggests the distortion of his reality.)

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 107.

rushed up the sloping bank, and plunged into the forest.

All that day he traveled, laying his course by the rounding sun. The forest seemed interminable; nowhere did he discover a break in it, not even a woodman's road. He had not known that he lived in so wild a region. There was something uncanny[38] in the revelation.

By nightfall he was fatigued, footsore, famishing. The thought of his wife and children urged him on. At last he found a road which led him in what he knew to be the right direction. It was as wide and straight as a city street, yet it seemed untraveled. No fields bordered it, no dwelling anywhere. Not so much as the barking of a dog suggested human habitation. The black bodies of the trees formed a straight wall on both sides, terminating on the horizon in a point, like a diagram in a lesson in perspective. Overhead, as he looked up through this rift in the wood, shone great golden stars looking unfamiliar and grouped in strange constellations. He was sure they were arranged in some order which had a secret and malign[39] significance. The wood on either side was full of singular noises, among which—once, twice, and again—he distinctly heard whispers in an unknown tongue.

Somerset Place at Creswell, North Carolina.

His neck was in pain and lifting his hand to it he found it horribly swollen. He knew that it had a circle of black where the rope had bruised it. His eyes felt congested; he could no longer close them. His tongue was swollen with thirst; he relieved its fever by thrusting it forward from between his teeth into the cold air. How softly the turf had carpeted the untraveled avenue—he could no longer feel the roadway beneath his feet!

Doubtless, despite his suffering, he had fallen asleep while walking, for now he sees another scene—perhaps he has merely recovered from a delirium. He stands at the gate of his own home. All is as he left it, and all bright and beautiful in the morning sunshine. He must have traveled the entire night. As he pushes open the gate and passes up the wide white walk, he sees a flutter of female garments; his wife, looking fresh and cool and sweet, steps down from the veranda to meet him. At the bottom of the steps she stands waiting, with a smile of ineffable[40] joy, an attitude of matchless grace and dignity. Ah, how beautiful she is! He springs forward with extended arms. As he is about to clasp her he feels a stunning blow upon the back of the neck; a blinding white light blazes all about him with a sound like the shock of a cannon—then all is darkness and silence!

Peyton Farquhar was dead; his body, with a broken neck, swung gently from side to side beneath the timbers of the Owl Creek bridge.

---

[38] Uncanny means "eerie" or "weird."

[39] Malign (mə līn') means "evil or harmful in nature or effect."

[40] Ineffable means "indescribable" or "unspeakable."

Point of View What does this statement suggest to the reader about the reliability of the narrator in Part III of the story? 1

Vocabulary Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Synonyms Review that synonyms are words with the same or similar meaning. Many words could describe Farquhar's attempt to escape in this story. For example, the words evade, elude, circumvent, and skirt all convey the idea of avoiding or escaping.

Have students find pairs of synonyms in this list, using a dictionary if needed:

destroyed obstinate daringly confiscate seize upbraid boldly criticize obliterated stubborn

(destroyed—obliterated; obstinate—stubborn; seize—confiscate; upbraid—criticize; boldy—daringly)

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

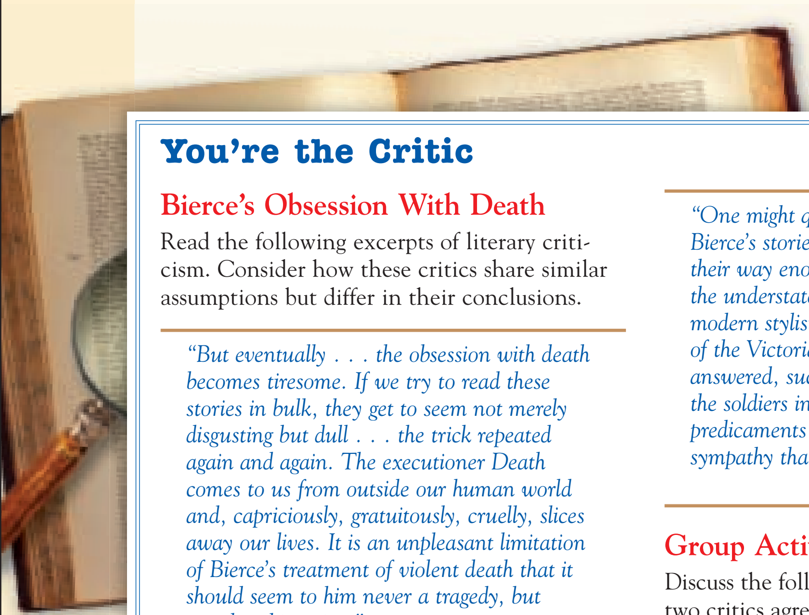
1. What was your reaction to the end of the story?
2. (a)Summarize the scene in the story's first two paragraphs. Who is involved? What reactions does the narrator describe? (b)Why do the observers of the event respond to it in the way they do?
3. (a)In sections I and II, what do you learn about Farquhar's appearance, personality, and background? (b)What can you infer about the narrator's attitude toward Farquhar from these descriptions?
4. (a)Describe the specific physical sensations that Farquhar experiences in section III. (b)How do his sensations change during the course of this section? (c)What do these changes suggest?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)What literary device does Bierce use in section II of the story? (b)Did you find this literary device to be effective? Explain.
6. Do you think that the description of Farquhar's final thoughts is realistic? Explain.

Connect

7. Big Idea A Nation Divided How do you think Bierce's war experiences affected his attitude toward the events in this story? What view of people's desire to fight wars do you think Bierce expresses in this selection?
8. Connect to Today (a)Are Bierce's ideas relevant to today? Why or why not? (b)If Bierce were writing about a contemporary conflict, how might his story be the same or different? Explain.



You're the Critic

Bierce's Obsession With Death

Read the following excerpts of literary criticism. Consider how these critics share similar assumptions but differ in their conclusions.

> "But eventually . . . the obsession with death becomes tiresome. If we try to read these stories in bulk, they get to seem not merely disgusting but dull . . . the trick repeated again and again. The executioner Death comes to us from outside our human world and, capriciously, gratuitously, cruelly, slices away our lives. It is an unpleasant limitation of Bierce's treatment of violent death that it should seem to him never a tragedy, but merely a bitter jest."
>
> —Edmund Wilson

> "One might quibble with the charge that Bierce's stories lack sympathy; they are, in their way enormously sympathetic, but it is the understated and unspoken sympathy of the modern stylist, not the breathy sentimentality of the Victorian. Besides, Bierce might have answered, such sentimental bosh is what got the soldiers in his stories into their deadly predicaments in the first place. It is not sympathy that Bierce is after, but clarity."
>
> —Roy Morris Jr.

Group Activity

Discuss the following questions. How do these two critics agree and differ in their conclusions about Bierce? Which critic do you think comes closer to accurately assessing Bierce's attitude?

After You Read

Assess

1. Students may say they were surprised and shocked by his death.
2. (a) Federal soldiers are about to execute a man by hanging. Those watching are mostly emotionless. (b) Codes of military discipline probably dictate that observers remain quiet during an execution.
3. (a) He is a wealthy planter devoted to the Southern cause and wants a part in the conflict. (b) It is sympathetic but faintly ironic; it subtly hints that Farquhar's effort to burn the bridge is futile.
4. (a) A sense of suffocation; pain in his neck (b) His sensations heighten—for example, he sees the tiny veins and insects upon each leaf of a tree. (c) They suggest a lapse into fantasy.
5. (a) Flashback (b) Yes, a flashback creates suspense and supplies information the reader needs to interpret the story.
6. Encourage students to appreciate that Bierce's juxtaposition of realism and fantasy is what makes this story compelling.
7. Bierce's war experiences left him disillusioned about the value of heroism and the glory of war. He believes that the desire to fight is misguided and tragic.
8. (a) Students who think Bierce's ideas are relevant to today may mention current wars and violence. (b) Students may say the story might have been the same in its bleak portrayal of war or different in that the setting would be somewhere other than America and the weapons and technology would be more advanced.

Group Activity

Possible answers: Wilson: Bierce lacks sympathy for his characters' violent deaths; Morris: Bierce expresses sympathy without sentimentality, but clarity is his main goal; Both: Bierce is obsessed with death.

Possible answer: Morris more accurately assesses Bierce's unsentimental attitude.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 133–134.

After You Read

Assess

Literary Element

1. Sections of the story that focus on characters other than Farquhar are told from a third-person omniscient point of view. Most of the story, which focuses on Farquhar's thought processes, is told from a third-person limited point of view.
2. Students should realize Bierce's use of the third-person limited point of view allows the narrator to convey Farquhar's thought processes without commentary, thus intentionally misleading the reader and setting up the surprise ending.

Progress Check

Can students identify point of view?

If No → See Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 102.

Reading Strategy

1. Farquhar's exaggerated perceptions near the end of the story; the unusually loud ticking of his watch; the narrator's statement (at the beginning of section III) that as Farquhar falls through the bridge, he is "as one already dead"
2. The somber tone of the opening section; the description of "grotesque" and "gigantic" figures of soldiers in the third section

To create custom assessments using software, use ExamView Assessment Suite.

Literary Element Point of View

Authors will sometimes shift the narrative point of view during a story. The shift might be dramatic, such as a change from the first- to the third-person point of view, or it might be a subtle shift from the third-person omniscient to the third-person limited point of view.

1. How does Bierce shift the point of view in this story? Explain.
2. What does Bierce achieve by using the third-person limited point of view for most of the story?

Review: Description

As you learned in Unit One, description is the use of details to give the reader a vivid picture of a person, place, thing, or event.

Partner Activity Meet with a classmate and discuss the descriptions used in section III of the story. Pay attention to Bierce's use of precise and vivid adjectives, nouns, and verbs and sensory details, such as color, texture, or smell. Working with your partner, create a list of those descriptions that you found most compelling. Be sure to take note of what the author is describing and what kind of details he uses to describe it. Use a simple table, such as the one shown below.

What Is Described	Details
the lieutenant's order to fire	vivid adjectives: "deliberate" "drawling" "aspirated"

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Reading Strategy Make and Verify Predictions

Predictions can be made about various aspects of a text. In "An Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge," Bierce intentionally misleads the reader to make the ending a surprise. However, Bierce does provide clues to help the reader predict the plot's outcome.

1. What images, details, or descriptions do you notice that foreshadow the story's conclusion?
2. List any clues that you did not notice initially that now can be seen to foreshadow the conclusion.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Synonyms With a partner, match each boldfaced vocabulary word below with its synonym. Use a thesaurus or dictionary to check your answers.

1. protrude
2. adorn
3. ardently
4. assent
5. poignant

a. sentimental
b. passsionately
c. severe
d. send
e. embellish
f. jut
g. concur

Academic Vocabulary

Bierce relates the sequence of events leading to Peyton Farquhar's hanging.

Sequence is an academic word. It can have different meanings in different subject areas. Use context clues to infer its meaning in each sentence below.

1. The movie opened with a sequence showing the main character's wedding preparations.
2. Beethoven's Symphony No. 1 features the repetition of the harmonies in sequence that explore the musical subject.

For more on academic vocabulary, see pages 53–54.

Vocabulary

1. f 2. e 3. b 4. g 5. c

Academic Vocabulary

1. In this sentence about film, sequence means a series of scenes or shots that together make up an episode of the movie's narrative.
2. In this sentence about music, sequence means a pattern, melodic or harmonic, that is repeated at least three times throughout a piece of music at different pitches.

Respond Through Writing

Expository Essay

Analyze Point of View Most fiction writers maintain the same point of view throughout a story. But in "An Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge," Bierce dramatically shifts point of view. Write an essay analyzing this technique. Discuss Bierce's purpose in using this technique, as well as its effect on the story.

Understand the Task When you analyze, you identify the parts to understand their relationships to the whole. Point of view is the standpoint from which a story is told (see page 388).

Prewrite Before you begin, make some notes about how point of view affects the story. You might record your notes in a three-column chart like the one below. To clarify your points, refer to direct quotations in the text.

Point of view	Quotation	Effect
third person omniscient	"At a short remove upon the same temporary platform was an officer in the uniform of his rank, armed."	factual, detached

To help you understand Bierce's purpose, you might also ask yourself questions such as, How did I react to the shift in point of view as I read this story? Did this technique affect my ability to predict the story's outcome? How would the story have been different written from another point of view?

Draft After you consider your purpose and audience, craft your thesis—your central idea or unifying point. You might phrase your thesis like this: In "An Occurrence at Owl Creek Bridge," Bierce shifts the point of view within the story in order to ____________ .

Revise Ask a partner to read your draft. Ask whether your ideas are clear, and whether the quotations you used from the text are accurate. Revise your draft based on the feedback you get.

Edit and Proofread Proofread your paper, correcting any errors in grammar, spelling, and punctuation. Use the Grammar Tip in the side column for help with conjunctions.

Learning Objectives

In this assignment, you will focus on the following objectives:

Writing: Writing an expository essay.

Grammar: Using conjunctions.

Grammar Tip

Conjunctions

Coordinating conjunctions (such as and, but, or, nor, for, yet) join phrases or clauses that have equal grammatical weight in a sentence:

Farquhar had a moustache and beard yet no whiskers.

He was from a prestigious family, yet Farquhar had a difficult life.

Subordinating conjunctions (such as because, since, who, that, and how) join phrases or clauses so that one is grammatically dependent on the other: Because of his prestigious family, Farquhar had a lot to lose.

After You Read

Assess

Writing

Make sure students' essays address the story's shifting point of view. Check that students discuss the effects of the shifting perspective in their essays.

Scoring Guide

Assess students' performance in the following categories using the scoring guide at the bottom of the page:

- Addresses all parts of the writing task.
- Provides a meaningful thesis, maintains focus and organization.
- Supports the thesis with details and examples.
- Provides a variety of sentence types; uses precise, descriptive language.
- Follows English language conventions.
- Makes a logical, convincing analysis.

For grammar practice, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 106.

Scoring Guide	4	3	2	1
Task addressed	fully	mostly	partially	barely
Thesis	meaningful	provided	partial	weak
Support	thoughtful	provided	limited	weak
Language	varied, descriptive	varied, often descriptive	predictable, imprecise	repetitive, limited
Convention errors	few or none	several	many	serious
Analysis is	convincing	mostly convincing	partially convincing	not convincing

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Selection Focus Transparency 26

Daily Language Practice Transparency 38

Or display several images of Abraham Lincoln. Ask: What kind of man was Abraham Lincoln? What did he accomplish? Why are his accomplishments important today? Have students consider, as they read, the challenges that leaders face, especially in wartime.

Political History ☆

Lincoln's Illness Lincoln grew feverish on his return trip to the capital after he delivered the Gettysburg Address. He was ill for the three weeks with what was diagnosed as a mild form of smallpox. Some medical researchers now contend that Lincoln actually had a more serious form of the disease.

Before You Read

The Gettysburg Address

Meet Abraham Lincoln
(1809–1865)

> "A new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal."
>
> —Abraham Lincoln
> The Gettysburg Address

Abraham Lincoln's impact on the history and culture of the United States has been immeasurable. He is a familiar figure to all Americans—even small children recognize his trademark hat. One of the United States' greatest presidents, Lincoln led the country through the Civil War, helping to preserve the Union and to end slavery. Lincoln and the United States showed the world that democracy can be a durable form of government.

Politician Born in Hardin County, Kentucky, Lincoln grew up mainly on frontier farms in Indiana, where he worked as a rail-splitter, flatboatman, storekeeper, surveyor, and postmaster. Lincoln's parents were nearly illiterate and Lincoln received no formal education. Nevertheless, he developed a hunger for learning and read every book he could find. Following a move to New Salem, Illinois, Lincoln began to study law. At twenty-five, he was elected to the Illinois state legislature, marking the beginning of an astounding political career. In 1836, the self-taught Lincoln passed the bar examination and began to practice law. Twenty-four years later, after gaining national political prominence, he was nominated as the Republican presidential candidate. Lincoln won the election on November 6, 1860.

President and Commander in Chief Because Lincoln believed that Congress should prevent the spread of slavery, his victory prompted seven Southern states to secede from the Union. As a result the nation plunged into the Civil War. A man who had once described military glory as "that attractive rainbow that rises in showers of blood—that serpent's eye that charms to destroy" became a great war leader only because it was necessary to preserve the Union. Lincoln believed quite strongly that a Confederate victory would most likely have resulted in at least two separate nations. That, he felt, would have marked the failure of our nation's democracy. His policies as president proved shrewd, and the war ended on April 9, 1865, with victory for the North.

Public Speaker Lincoln's tragic and dramatic assassination cemented his place as a U.S. legend. His fame stems largely from the enduring power of his words, and the Gettysburg Address and his Second Inaugural Address are perhaps the most notable examples of Lincoln's mastery of public speaking. These speeches forcefully convey Lincoln's deepest convictions in spare, highly evocative language. Both speeches have had a vast influence on the language of U.S. politics. ☆

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Abraham Lincoln, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Selection Skills

The Gettysburg Address

Literary Elements
- Parallelism (SE pp. 401–403)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Interior Monologue (SE p. 403)

Reading Skills
- Analyze Style (SE pp. 401, 403)
- Identify Main Idea (TE p. 402)

Vocabulary Skills
- Analogies (SE p. 403)
- Synonyms (TE p. 401)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Speech

Imagine you have lost a loved one in a war and are attending a memorial service for that person. What words of comfort would you expect to hear? What rhetorical skills would you find appropriate for such an occasion? Discuss these questions with a small group of classmates.

Build Background

Lincoln delivered the Gettysburg Address on November 19, 1863, at the dedication of a military cemetery in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania. The main speaker was Edward Everett, one of the most famous orators of the time. Everett spoke first—for two hours. Lincoln spoke for approximately two minutes. Everett wrote to Lincoln afterward, "I should be glad if I could flatter myself that I came as near to the central idea of the occasion in two hours as you did in two minutes."

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea A Nation Divided

As you read, ask yourself, How does Lincoln stress the way the Civil War has tested the United States' democracy?

Literary Element Parallelism

Parallelism is the use of a series of words, phrases, or sentences that have similar grammatical form. As you read, ask yourself, How does Lincoln use parallelism as a rhetorical technique?

Reading Strategy Analyze Style

Style is a term that denotes the expressive qualities that distinguish an author's work. As you analyze Lincoln's style in this speech, note his word choice, the structure and length of his sentences, and his figurative language.

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart to record examples of Lincoln's style.

Style Element	Example
word choice	dedicate
repetition	consecrate

Learning Objectives

For pages 400–403

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing parallelism.

Reading: Analyzing style.

Writing: Writing an interior monologue.

Vocabulary

score (skôr) n. a group of twenty items; p. 402 Ben ordered ten tablecloths and six score of napkins.

consecrate (kon´ sə krāt´) v. to set apart as sacred; to make or declare holy; p. 402 A ceremony was held to consecrate the young couple's marriage.

hallow (hal´ ō) v. to make or select as holy; to regard or honor as sacred; p. 402 The church stands on hallowed ground.

perish (per´ ish) v. to pass from existence; to disappear; p. 402 Thousands of animals perish in forest fires.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

Lincoln agrees that the dedication of a cemetery at Gettysburg is "altogether fitting and proper" because of what the soldiers accomplished. The living, however, should dedicate themselves to "government of the people, by the people, for the people."

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 109–114.

Vocabulary

Synonyms Point out that consecrate and hallow are synonyms. They are also similar in meaning to dedicate, a word that appears in some form six times in Lincoln's short speech. Ask: Why are these words appropriate in speaking at a cemetery on the site of an important battlefield? (They are appropriate both in their literal meaning of setting something apart for a purpose and in their formal tone, which honors the soldiers' sacrifice.)

ADVANCED Which words sound especially formal because they are no longer in common use? (score, hallow)

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Ask students to explain the source of the phrase "all men are created equal." If necessary, remind them that it is from the Declaration of Independence. Explain that Lincoln's reference to these words expresses his view of what is at stake in the war.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Tell students that Lincoln's style is very formal. Instead of saying "eighty-seven," he says "four score and seven." Ask students to for examples when they use a different level of formality. Explain that Lincoln's purpose at Gettysburg required the most serious tone and loftiest language at his command.

Teach

Big Idea 1

A Nation Divided Say: Keep this question in mind as you read: To whom is Lincoln's message figuratively addressed? (to all Americans, even those not present)

Big Idea 2

A Nation Divided Answer: A Southerner might have denied that the war was a civil war, considering it a war of aggression against the Confederacy.

Literary Element 3

Parallelism Answer: The words "what we say here" and "what they did here" are similar grammatical constructions.

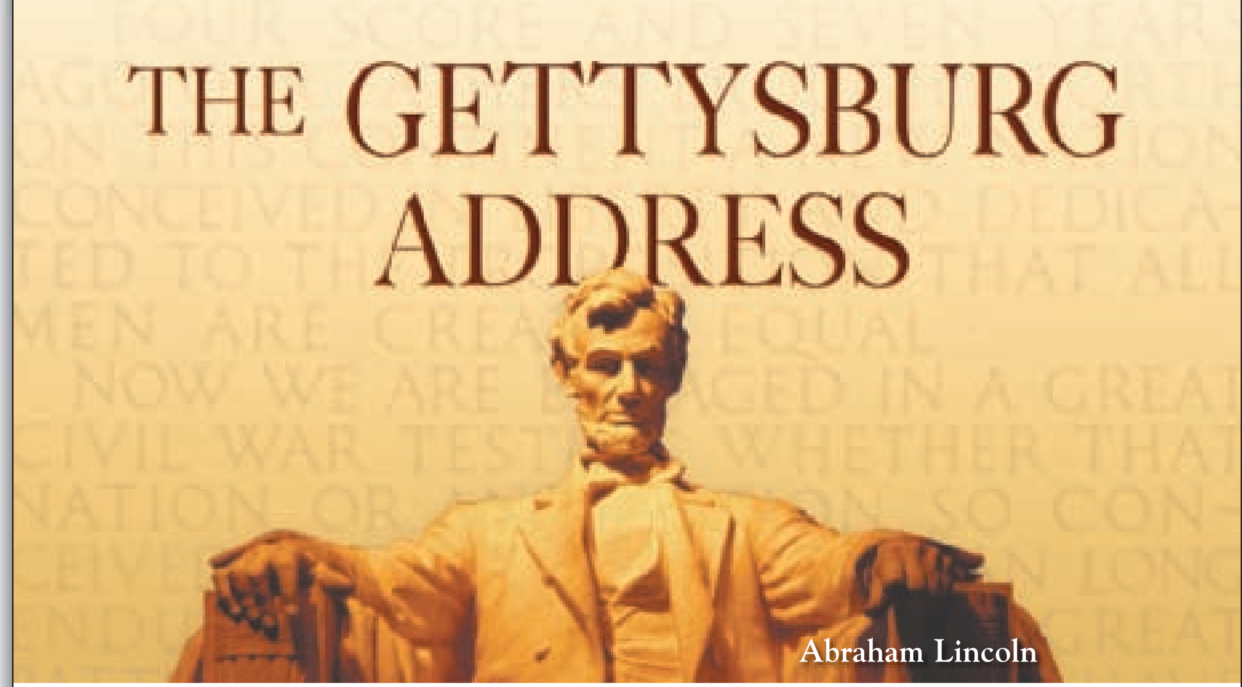
Have students analyze the impact of Lincoln's use of parallelism by listening to an audio version of the speech.

For additional literary element practice, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 115.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 9.3
DRP: 62
Lexile: 1490



THE GETTYSBURG ADDRESS

Abraham Lincoln

1 FOUR SCORE AND SEVEN YEARS AGO OUR fathers brought forth on this continent, a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battle-field of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field, as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we can not dedicate—we can not consecrate—we can not hallow—this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

2 A Nation Divided How do you think someone living in a Confederate state might have perceived this statement? Explain.

Vocabulary

score (skôr) n. a group of twenty items consecrate (kon′ sə krāt′) v. to set apart as sacred; to make or declare holy hallow (hal′ ō) v. to make or select as holy; to regard or honor as sacred perish (per′ ish) v. to pass from existence; to disappear

Parallelism How is this sentence an example of parallelism? 3

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Identify Main Idea Remind students that sometimes an author states a main idea directly—often in the first or last sentence of a work—and sometimes readers must infer the main idea from many parts of the work. Have students read the speech several times to identify Lincoln's main point. Highlight sentences that point to the main idea (the need for Americans to dedicate themselves to the preservation of freedom and the Union), such as "It is rather for us to be here dedicated. . . ."

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Which part of this speech made the greatest impression on you? Why?
2. (a)In the opening sentence, what words does Lincoln use to describe the United States? (b)What does this sentence tell you about Lincoln's concept of government?
3. (a)According to Lincoln, why are he and those in the audience gathered together? (b)In what way does Lincoln believe that the battlefield has already been consecrated?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. This speech is often quoted. What, in your opinion, makes it so memorable and inspiring?
5. What is unintentionally ironic about Lincoln's statement that "The world will little note, nor long remember what we say here"?

Connect

6. Big Idea A Nation Divided Why did Lincoln consider the Civil War a test of U.S. democracy?
7. Connect to Today Does the United States face tests of its democracy today? Explain.

Literary Element Parallelism

The expression "of the people, by the people, for the people" is a famous example of parallelism in American literature. The grammatical structure that is repeated is the prepositional phrase. Find another example of parallelism in this speech and identify the grammatical structure that is repeated.

Reading Strategy Analyze Style

SAT Skills Practice

1. The last sentence of Lincoln's address serves to
   - (A) reiterate and elaborate on Lincoln's main ideas
   - (B) confuse and bore listeners with its repetition
   - (C) build momentum toward an emotional climax
   - (D) leave listeners breathless and relieved to hear the last word
   - (E) symbolize the intricacy and weight of the issues facing the nation

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Analogies Choose the pair that best completes each analogy.

1. twenty : score ::
   - a. four : quarter
   - b. twelve : dozen
   - c. hundred : millennium
   - d. twice : three
2. consecrate : church ::
   - a. sterilize : hospital
   - b. sport : stadium
   - c. discuss : school
   - d. plan: schedule
3. hallow : holy ::
   - a. relax : stressed
   - b. celebrate : unite
   - c. disrespect : ashamed
   - d. freeze : solid
4. perish : survive ::
   - a. soar : sail
   - b. fail : succeed
   - c. defeat : lose
   - d. blaze : fire

Writing

Write an Interior Monologue Write an interior monologue describing the thoughts and feelings of someone present during Lincoln's speech.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students may say the first and last sentences.
2. (a) "A new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal" (b) It should be dedicated to the democratic principles of liberty and equality.
3. (a) To dedicate a cemetery for the Union soldiers killed in the Battle of Gettysburg (b) Soldiers have consecrated it with their heroic sacrifices.
4. Students should quote memorable lines and discuss the powerful emotions they evoke.
5. Lincoln did not know that his speech would be as famous as the Battle of Gettysburg.
6. The Civil War tested the concepts on which U.S. democracy was founded—liberty and equality.
7. Students may mention political polarization or the threat of terrorism. Or, they may mention ways our political system is designed to deal with such challenges.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 135–136.

Writing

Students' monologues should include thoughts and feelings related to Lincoln's speech, and evaluate Lincoln's style.

Progress Check

Can students analyze style?

If No → See Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 116.

Literary Element

Possible answer: "we can not dedicate—we can not consecrate—we can not hallow"; The parallel structure unifies key ideas by emphasizing them.

Reading Strategy

1. C is the correct answer because the parallel structure of the extended phrases sweeps readers toward the powerful conclusion.

Vocabulary

1. b 2. a 3. d 4. b

Political Perspective on The Gettysburg Address

Focus

Summary

This passage from Lincoln at Gettysburg: The Words that Remade America begins by describing Lincoln's appearance at the dedication of the cemetery and the audience's response to his speech. It goes on to analyze how contemporaries of Lincoln perceived the speech.

For activities related to this selection, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 122–130.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Connect to Political Context Before students read the passage, encourage them to recall the events Lincoln discusses in his speech and the background that they learned on page 401.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 10.4
DRP: 68
Lexile: 1250

Political Perspective
on The Gettysburg Address

from
Lincoln at Gettysburg
The Words that Remade America
Garry Wills

Pulitzer Prize Winner

Learning Objectives

For pages 404–406

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Making connections across literature.

Reading: Analyzing informational text.

Set a Purpose for Reading

Read to discover the significance of the Gettysburg Address and why it remains important today.

Build Background

In the following passage, historian Garry Wills closely examines the continuing significance of Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, which is considered one of the greatest speeches ever given by an American president. In Wills's Pulitzer Prize–winning book, he discusses the meaning of Lincoln's words, their long-term effect, and the historical environment in which Lincoln delivered the address. Wills maintains that the importance of Lincoln's brief 272-word speech is nearly unparalleled.

Reading Strategy Connect to Political Context

When you connect to political context, you examine the political assumptions that influenced the writing of a literary work. As you read this selection, look for the answer to this question: What is the basic political assumption that Wills attributes to Lincoln in the Gettysburg Address? Cite evidence from the text to support your answer.

1

When Lincoln rose, it was with a sheet or two, from which he read—as had the minister who offered the invocation. Lincoln's three minutes would, ever after, be obsessively contrasted with Everett's[1] two hours in accounts of this day. It is even claimed that Lincoln disconcerted the crowd with his abrupt performance, so that people did not know how to respond ("Was that all?"). Myth tells of a poor photographer making leisurely arrangements to take Lincoln's picture, expecting him to be there for some time. But it is useful to look at the relevant part of the program as Wills's[2] committee printed it:

> Music, by BIRGFIELD'S Band.
> Prayer, by REV. T. H. STOCKTON, D.D.
> Music, by the Marine Band.
> Oration, by Hon. EDWARD EVERETT.
> Music, Hymn composed by > B. B. FRENCH, Esq.

---

1. Edward Everett, who delivered the previous oration, had been president of Harvard University, a member of Congress, and the governor of Massachusetts. He was one of the most well-known speakers of his day.
2. David Wills was a prominent citizen of Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, and responsible for organizing the interstate commission that created the Gettysburg National Cemetery.

Writing Practice

Primary and Secondary Sources Tell students that primary sources are firsthand accounts or records of events, whereas secondary sources are written by people who did not experience or influence the events. Ask: Is this selection a primary or a secondary source? (Secondary) What two primary sources does Garry Wills refer to in his discussion? (The program of the organizing committee and an article from the New York Times) Have students write a paragraph explaining how reading both a primary source (The Gettysburg Address) and a secondary source helps them to understand a historical event more fully.

Dedicatory Remarks, by the PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.
Dirge, sung by Choir selected for the occasion.
Benediction, by REV. H. L. BAUGHER, D.D.

There was only one "oration" announced or desired here. Though we call Lincoln's text the Gettysburg Address, that title clearly belongs to Everett. Lincoln's contribution, labeled "remarks," was intended to make the dedication formal (somewhat like ribbon-cutting at modern "openings"). Lincoln was not expected to speak at length, any more than Reverend Stockton was (though Stockton's prayer is four times the length of the President's remarks). In fact, Lincoln's contribution was as ancillary to Everett's as were those of Reverend Baugher and B. B. French (Lamon's friend, who rushed in where Longfellow, Bryant, and Whittier feared to tread[3]). Lincoln's text had about the same number of words as French's, and twice the number of Dr. Baugher's. It is instructive to look at The New York Times' coverage of the events in Gettysburg. It ranked Lincoln's talk, about which it had good things to say, with two given the night before in response to roving serenaders,[4] rather than with Everett's, which was kept in a category of its own. The headline reads:

IMMENSE NUMBERS OF VISITORS
ORATION BY HON. EDWARD EVERETT—
SPEECHES OF PRESIDENT LINCOLN,
MR. SEWARD AND GOVERNOR SEYMOUR

Lincoln was briefer, even, than New York's Governor Seymour had been the night before; but comparison with him was more natural at the time than with the designated orator of the day. A contrast of length with Everett's talk raises a false issue. Lincoln's text is startlingly brief for what it accomplished, but that would be equally true if Everett had spoken for a shorter time or had not spoken at all.

The contrast in other ways was strong. Everett's voice was sweet and expertly modulated; Lincoln's was high to the point of shrillness, and his Kentucky accent offended some Eastern sensibilities. But Lincoln derived an advantage from his high tenor voice—carrying power. If there is agreement on any one aspect of Lincoln's delivery, at Gettysburg and elsewhere, it is his audibility. Modern impersonators of Lincoln, like Walter Huston, Raymond Massey, Henry Fonda, and the various actors who give voice to Disneyland animations of the President, bring him before us as a baritone, which is considered a more manly or heroic voice—though both the Roosevelt presidents of our century were tenors. What should not be forgotten is that Lincoln was himself an actor, an expert raconteur[5] and mimic, and one who spent hours reading speeches out of Shakespeare to any willing (and some unwilling) audiences. He knew a good deal about rhythmic delivery and meaningful inflections. John Hay,[6] who had submitted to many of those Shakespeare readings, gave high marks to his boss's performance at Gettysburg. He put in his diary at the time that "the President, in a fine, free way, with more grace than is his wont, said his half dozen words of consecration." Lincoln's text was polished, his delivery emphatic, he was interrupted by applause five times. Read in a slow, clear way to the farthest listeners, the speech would take about three minutes. It is quite true that the audience did not take in all that happened in that short time—we are still trying to weigh the consequences of that amazing performance. But the myth that Lincoln was disappointed in the result—that he told the unreliable Lamon that his speech, like a bad plow, "won't scour"—has no basis. He had done what he wanted to do,

2

---

[3] Ward Lamon was Lincoln's friend and bodyguard; Henry Wadsworth Longfellow (1807–1882), William Cullen Bryant (1794–1878), and John Greenleaf Whittier (1807–1892) were all famous poets (see pages 210–211).

[4] The night before the address, serenaders wandered through Gettysburg's crowded town square. The crowds prompted speeches from Lincoln's secretary of state, William Seward, and New York's governor, Horatio Seymour.

[5] A raconteur is a storyteller.

[6] John Hay was President Lincoln's personal secretary.

Political Perspective
on The Gettysburg Address

Teach

Big Idea 2

A Nation Divided Explain that for many Americans, Lincoln's leadership and eloquence were key elements in reuniting the divided nation.

Write on the board:

- How can strong leaders change our view of events?
- How did the combination of words and military actions win the Civil War for the North?

Tell students to keep these questions in mind as they read.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate To help students understand how Wills dismisses "myths" about Lincoln's speech, write the following two statements on the board:

> The audience was surprised by the shortness of the speech. Lincoln was disappointed by the audience's reaction to his speech.

Then have students respond to simple comprehension questions. Ask: How does the printed program describe Lincoln's role at the dedication? (Lincoln is to make "dedicatory remarks," not an oration, or long speech.) Who quoted Lincoln as saying his speech "won't scour"? What is Wills's opinion of this person? (Ward Lamon is the source of the quote. Wills describes Lamon as "unreliable.") After discussing Wills's treatment of these myths, ask students if they think Wills is successful in showing the two "myths" to be false.

Political Perspective
on The Gettysburg Address

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Connect to Political Context Point out the words testing and proposition, which appear in Lincoln's speech. Ask: What assumption does Lincoln make about the value of such a test? (Such a test is vital for the nation.)

Political History ☆

Turning Point The Battle of Gettysburg was a turning point in the war, even before Lincoln's dedication. Robert E. Lee's Southern army was devastated, suffering 25,000 to 28,000 casualties. Gettysburg was the last major attack that Lee could mount.

and Hay shared the pride his superior took in an important occasion put to good use.

1 At the least, Lincoln had far surpassed David Wills's hope for words to disinfect the air of Gettysburg. The tragedy of macerated[7] bodies, the many bloody and ignoble aspects of this inconclusive encounter, are transfigured in Lincoln's rhetoric, where the physical residue of battle is volatilized as the product of an experiment testing whether a government can maintain the proposition of equality. The stakes of the three days' butchery are made intellectual, with abstract truths being vindicated. Despite verbal gestures to "that" battle and the men who died "here," there are no particulars mentioned by Lincoln—no names of men or sites or units, or even of sides (the Southerners are part of the "experiment," not foes mentioned in anger or rebuke). Everett succeeded with his audience by being thoroughly immersed in the details of the event he was celebrating. Lincoln eschews[8] all local emphasis. His speech hovers far above the carnage. He lifts the battle to a level of abstraction that purges it of grosser matter—even "earth" is mentioned as the thing from which the tested form of government shall not perish. More than William Saunders[9] himself, Lincoln has aligned the dead in ranks of an ideal order. The nightmare realities have been etherealized[10] in the crucible of his language.

But that was just the beginning of this complex transformation. Lincoln did for the whole Civil War what he accomplished for the single battlefield. He has prescinded[11] from messy squabbles over constitutionality, sectionalism, property, states. Slavery is not mentioned, any more than Gettysburg is. The discussion is driven back and back, beyond the historical particulars, to great ideals that are made to grapple naked in an airy battle of the mind. Lincoln derives a new, a transcendental, significance from this bloody episode. Both North and South strove to win the battle for interpreting Gettysburg as soon as the physical battle had ended. Lincoln is after even larger game—he means to "win" the whole Civil War in ideological terms as well as military ones. And he will succeed: the Civil War is, to most Americans, what Lincoln wanted it to mean. Words had to complete the work of the guns.

---

[7] Macerated means "wasted away."

[8] Eschew means "to avoid."

[9] William Saunders designed the Gettysburg National Cemetery.

[10] Etherealized means "eliminated physical properties."

[11] Prescinded means "removed from thought."

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. Write a brief summary of the main ideas in this selection before answering the following questions. For help writing a summary, see page 79.
2. What did you find most interesting in this excerpt?
3. (a)Why does Wills say that comparing the lengths of Lincoln's address and Everett's oration "raises a false issue"? (b)How important to Wills is the length of the Gettysburg Address?
4. (a)What does Wills tell us about Lincoln's voice and delivery? (b)To what personal fact about Lincoln does Wills attribute the effectiveness of his speech?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)According to Wills, how did Lincoln elevate the discussion of the Civil War? (b)What evidence does Wills present to support this contention? (c)What effect do you think the speech has had on historians' interpretation of the war?

Connect

6. Wills says that, because of the Gettysburg Address, "the Civil War is, to most Americans, what Lincoln wanted it to mean." How has the Gettysburg Address influenced what the Civil War means to you?

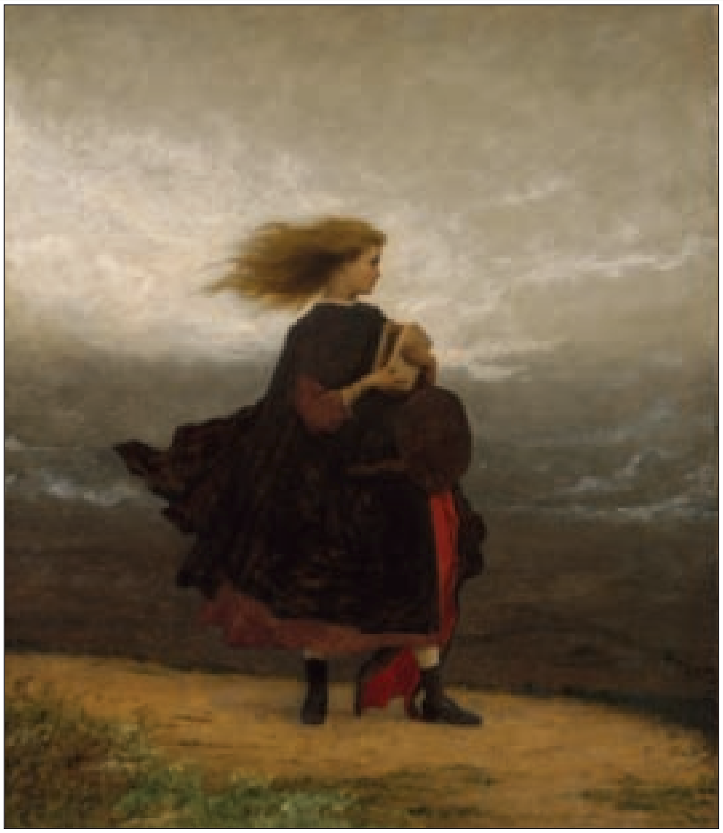
Assess

1. Students' summaries should be about 100 words long and include the main ideas of the article. The summaries should not include personal opinions.
2. Answers will vary. Students may mention the brevity of Lincoln's speech and people's reactions.
3. (a) They were meant to serve different purposes—one an oration and the other "remarks"—and were never meant to be compared. (b) The brevity is important; Lincoln expressed powerful sentiments in few words.
4. (a) Voice: high, shrill, audible; Delivery: polished and emphatic (b) He was an actor and expert storyteller.
5. (a) Lincoln elevates the Civil War to an intellectual plane of abstract idealism. (b) Lincoln never refers to slavery, sectionalism, or the name of the battlefield. (c) Lincoln influenced historians to concentrate on the war's ideological issues.
6. Students should explain how they view the Civil War and cite Lincoln's speech to support their points.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 137–138.

PART 3

A Poetic Revolution



The Girl I Left Behind Me, 1870–75. J. Eastman Johnson. Oil on canvas, 42 x $34\frac{7}{8}$ in. Smithsonian American Art Museum, Washington, DC.

View the Art The woman in this painting is the young wife of a Civil War soldier. What is the mood of the painting? What might the painting suggest about the couple's—and the country's—future? Explain. ★

> "A child said What is the grass? fetching it to me with full hands;
> How could I answer the child? I do not know what it is any more than he." 1
>
> —Walt Whitman, "Song of Myself"

UNIT THREE

PART 3

Analyze and Extend

Reading Strategy 1

Evaluate Read the quotation from Walt Whitman. Ask: What does Whitman mean by saying he does not know what grass is? (He may mean that even common things in nature, such as grass, are full of mystery.)

View the Art ★

Answer: The woman's tense pose, the ominous wind, and the darkening sky all suggest that the future may be dark and uncertain. Eastman Johnson (1824–1906) took the title for this painting from a popular Irish ballad.

For additional support for English Learners, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 132.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Point out that revolution is a cognate in other languages—for example, revolución in Spanish or revoluzione in Italian. Have students list words they associate with revolution (change, war, history) and predict what a poetic revolution might be like.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Emerging Explain that revolution has different meanings. In science, revolution refers to the way one object moves around another. In history, a revolution is a sudden change in events. Ask students to think of historical revolutions they may have studied (American Revolution, Industrial Revolution). Then ask students to explain how the word revolution is used in the title of Part 3.

Before You Read

Focus

Bellringer Options

Literature Launchers DVD: Pre-Reading Video

Selection Focus Transparencies 27, 28

Daily Language Practice Transparency 39

Or write on the board the quotation from Whitman displayed on this page. Ask: What traditional qualities of the United States and of individual Americans might make them an appropriate subject for a great poem?

Cultural History ☆

New York City Whitman's experiences and observations of life in New York City led him to believe that a democratic society is a vital, though imperfect, creation.

Before You Read

Whitman's Poetry

Meet Walt Whitman

(1819–1892)

When Walt Whitman first published Leaves of Grass in 1855, it marked the beginning of a revolution in poetry. At the time, however, few people noticed the young poet's radical work—and most of those who did were either dismayed or offended. Whitman's poetry was realistic, free flowing, and shockingly candid. He was the first poet in English to write extensively in free verse, an open, unregulated form that reflected the cadences of everyday speech. Although it took decades for his poetry to be broadly accepted, Leaves of Grass eventually became an enduring symbol of the democratic spirit it celebrated.

An American Voice As a young man, Whitman loved to wander through the streets of Manhattan, a section of New York City. As he walked, he jotted down his impressions of the city's sights, sounds, and array of characters. A great reader, Whitman was nurtured by the transcendentalists, yet he was no country dweller delighting in the quiet joys of nature. Instead, he believed in gathering a wide range of experiences, so he held numerous jobs: office boy, doctor's helper, printer's assistant, journalist, typesetter, and printer. He also traveled down the Mississippi River, listening to the talk of working people, farmers, and soldiers. Whitman used his experiences to create a new kind of poetry that celebrated the multifaceted spirit of his country.

The first edition of Leaves of Grass contained just twelve poems, but they were enough to convince Ralph Waldo Emerson, the most famous literary figure of his day, of the unknown poet's genius. In a letter to Whitman, Emerson said the collection was "the most extraordinary piece of wit and wisdom that America has yet contributed." With the encouragement of a small group of admirers, Whitman pressed on with his life's work: revising, rearranging, and adding to Leaves of Grass, envisioning all of his work as one vast poem.

Witness to War Like all Americans, Whitman was deeply distressed by the Civil War. In 1862, he traveled to the Virginia battlefront to care for his brother George, who had been wounded in the first battle of Fredericksburg. Deeply moved by the suffering he encountered and finding his brother's condition stable, Whitman went on to Washington, D.C., to work as a volunteer nurse in army hospitals. His experiences during the war inspired some of his greatest works, including "When Lilacs Last in the Door-yard Bloom'd," his elegy to President Lincoln.

> "The United States themselves are essentially the greatest poem."
>
> —Walt Whitman

Even in old age, Whitman kept writing, attempting to put "a Person, a human being (myself, in the latter half of the Nineteenth Century, in America) freely, fully, and truly on record." The final, "deathbed" edition of Leaves of Grass (1891), which contained 383 titled poems, put on record the man who had become America's national poet.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Walt Whitman, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Selection Skills

I Hear America Singing/When I Heard . . . /A Sight in Camp . . . /Beat! Beat! Drums!

Literary Elements
- Free Verse (SE pp. 409, 410, 412, 415)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Write a Poem (SE p. 412)
- Write an Essay (SE p. 415)
- Sentence Fragments (TE p. 410)
- Run-on Sentences (TE p. 414)

Vocabulary Skills
- Word Parts (TE p. 409)

Reading Skills
- Paraphrase (SE pp. 409, 411, 412, 414, 415)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (TE pp. 410, 411, 413)

Literature and Reading Preview

Connect to the Poems

To Whitman, working people were the essence of America. How do the people you know seem to feel about their jobs? How do you hope to feel about your own profession someday? Freewrite for ten minutes on these questions and the relationships between people and their work.

Build Background

Whitman wrote "I Hear America Singing" just before the Civil War and "When I Heard the Learn'd Astronomer" at its end. "A Sight in Camp in the Daybreak Gray and Dim" captures one of the poet's experiences in army hospitals. "Beat! Beat! Drums!" is Whitman's response to the defeat of the Union army by the Confederate forces in the first battle of Bull Run. All four poems reflect themes he explored during the Civil War.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea A Poetic Revolution

As you read, ask yourself, How does Whitman use ordinary details and sprawling lines to create a new kind of poetry?

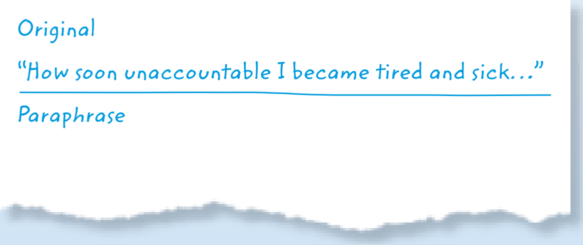
Literary Element Free Verse

Whitman is famous for using free verse—a type of poetry that does not have a regular pattern of rhythm or rhyme. As you read, ask yourself, What effects does Whitman create by using free verse?

Reading Strategy Paraphrase

When you paraphrase, you put something you have read into your own words. As you read the poems, break down long sentences and restate them in your own words.

Tip: Take Notes Use a chart to record your paraphrases.



Original

"How soon unaccountable I became tired and sick..."

Paraphrase

Learning Objectives

For pages 408–419

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study:
Analyzing free verse.
Analyzing historical narratives.

Reading: Paraphrasing.

Writing:
Writing a poem.
Writing an essay.
Writing a journal entry.

Vocabulary

impromptu (im promp´ to͞o, –tū) adv. done on the spur of the moment; p. 416 The committee held an impromptu meeting.

incredulity (in´ krə do͞o´ lə tē) n. disbelief; p. 417 Skeptics felt only incredulity when the team won.

subsequently (sub´ sə kwent´ lē) adv. at a later time; p. 417 She had cash and subsequently lost it.

susceptible (sə sep´ tə bəl) adj. easily influenced or affected; p. 417 Dogs do not sweat, so they are more susceptible to overheating.

convalescent (kon´ və le´ sənt) n. a person who is recovering from illness or injury; p. 418 The visit cheered the convalescent.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP Intermediate Help students understand the term free verse by having them work in groups to brainstorm for two word webs. One should focus on words or concepts associated with free; the other should focus on verse. Bring students together to share webs and to compare their ideas to the definition of free verse on this page.

SMALL GROUP Advanced Ask students to explain what they expect when they listen to a traditional poem. (regular rhymes and rhythms or sing-song sounds) Have students work in pairs to preview Whitman's poems and talk about how the poems' appearance surprises them.

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

In "I Hear America Singing," the speaker presents a catalog of the rich diversity of American life. In "When I Heard the Learn'd Astronomer," the speaker records his response to a dry lecture that seems to deprive nature of its grandeur and mystery. The speaker in "A Sight in Camp in the Daybreak Gray and Dim" describes three dead soldiers in the Civil War. In "Beat! Beat! Drums!" the speaker tells of the power of war to overwhelm all other elements of society.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 133–148.

Vocabulary

Word Parts Prefixes and suffixes affect the meaning and part of speech of a word. Ask: Which prefix in the vocabulary list means "not"? (in-) Which suffix indicates a noun form? (-ity) Which vocabulary words can be changed into another word by changing a prefix or suffix? (incredulity—incredulous; subsequently, consequently; susceptible—susceptibility; convalescent—convalescence)

For additional context, see Glencoe Interactive Vocabulary CD-ROM.

Interactive Read and Write

Other options for teaching this selection can be found in

- Interactive Read and Write for English Learners, pp. 133–138
- Interactive Read and Write for Approaching-Level Learners, pp. 133–138
- Interactive Read and Write for On-Level Learners, pp. 133–138

Teach

Big Idea 1

A Poetic Revolution Say: In free verse, two key elements are repetition and parallelism. In line 1, what phrase does Whitman repeat? ("I hear") In lines 3–6, what structure does Whitman use to begin the lines the same way? ("The [noun] singing")

ADVANCED Ask: What effect does the repetition have on readers? (It helps establish rhythm; it makes the reader expect to read about a different kind of singer at the beginning of each line.)

Literary Element 2

Free Verse Answer: Whitman describes everyday people at work. Free verse captures the rhythms of everyday speech better than formal poetry does.

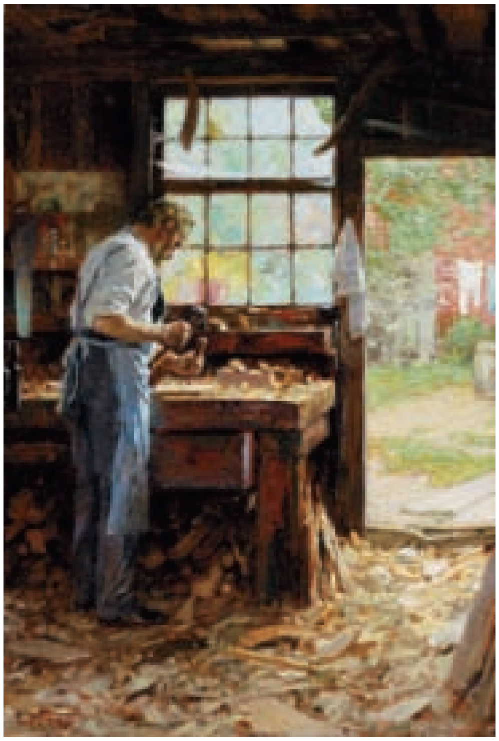
View the Art ★

Thomas Hart Benton (1889–1975), like Walt Whitman, celebrated the American worker in his art. Unlike Whitman, Benton lived well into the twentieth century, a time shaped by industrialization and urban growth. Ask: Do you think the subjects of this painting would fit in Whitman's poem? Why? (The workers in his poem, like the harvesters in the painting, are working honestly and hard.)

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.



Village Carpenter, 1899. Edward Henry Potthast. Oil on canvas. ★
Private Collection.

I Hear America Singing

Walt Whitman

I hear America singing, the varied carols I hear,
Those of mechanics, each one singing his as it should be blithe[1] and strong,
The carpenter singing his as he measures his plank or beam,
The mason singing his as he makes ready for work, or leaves off work, 1
The boatman singing what belongs to him in his boat,
    the deckhand singing on the steamboat deck,
The shoemaker singing as he sits on his bench, the hatter singing as he stands,
The wood-cutter's song, the ploughboy's on his way in the morning, or at noon intermission or at sundown,
The delicious singing of the mother, or of the young wife at work, or of the girl sewing or washing,
Each singing what belongs to him or her and to none else,
The day what belongs to the day—at night the party of young fellows, robust, friendly,
Singing with open mouths their strong melodious songs.

---

[1] Blithe means "lighthearted" or "cheerful."

2 Free Verse Why is free verse appropriate for the descriptions in this poem?

Grammar Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Sentence Fragments Point out that a sentence fragment is punctuated as though it were a complete sentence but is missing a subject or a verb or is a dependent clause. To fix the sentence fragment "Because Whitman wrote free verse," delete because or connect the fragment to another sentence. Ask students to rewrite each of the following as a complete sentence:

1. Which they sang as they worked. (They enjoyed the songs, which they sang as they worked.)
2. Singing as he sits on his bench. (I see the shoemaker singing as he sits on his bench.)

The Life of Harriet Tubman, #31, 1940. Jacob Lawrence. Casein tempera on hardboard, $17\frac{7}{8}$ x 12 in. Hampton University Museum.

When I Heard the Learn'd Astronomer

Walt Whitman

When I heard the learn'd astronomer,
When the proofs, the figures, were ranged in columns before me,
When I was shown the charts and diagrams, to add, divide, and measure them,
When I sitting heard the astronomer where he lectured with much applause in the lecture-room,
How soon unaccountable I became tired and sick,
Till rising and gliding out I wander'd off by myself,
In the mystical moist night-air, and from time to time,
Look'd up in perfect silence at the stars.

Paraphrase How would you rephrase these lines in your own words? 3

Teach

Reading Strategy 3

Paraphrase Answer: I became tired and bored while sitting and listening to the astronomer, who was applauded by the audience.

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 140.

View the Art

Although African American painter Jacob Lawrence (1917–2000) was born long after the end of slavery, the Abolitionist movement was central to much of his art. He created several series of paintings that depicted the efforts of anti-slavery heroes such as Harriet Tubman, who led slaves to freedom along the Underground Railroad, and Frederick Douglass, the former slave turned orator. Ask: How does Lawrence's painting connect to the feelings expressed by the speaker in Whitman's poem? (The painting captures the "mystical" nature and "perfect silence" of a night sky that the narrator yearns for.)

To check students' understanding of the poems, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 141.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Read the poem aloud to students. After each line, ask students "What happened?" Suggest that they replace each use of the word when with sequence words, such as first, second, next, and last. Finally, ask volunteers to give oral retellings of what happens in the poem using their own words.

AAVE Remind approaching level students who are users of African American vernacular English (AAVE) to use the past tense in their responses. When using past tense verbs, students should be careful to pronounce the -ed sound at the end of the verb. For example, students should say, "He walked outside," instead of "He walk outside."

After You Read

Assess

1. Students should offer evidence to support their opinions.
2. (a) Mechanic, carpenter, mason, boatman, deckhand, shoemaker, hatter, wood-cutter, ploughboy, mother, young wife at work, and girl sewing or washing (b) Labor makes the country strong. (c) Their work is satisfying and meaningful.
3. (a) Young fellows socialize and sing. (b) It takes many workers to make a strong America.
4. (a) Catalog of occupations (b) Images make the poem more immediate.
5. Common people
6. (a) Using mathematics, charts, diagrams (b) His approach is analytical and impersonal.
7. (a) It leads to direct spiritual knowledge. (b) It implies knowledge gained through emotional or spiritual means.
8. (a) It is spontaneous, mysterious, and emotional. (b) He values artistic experience and emotions over scientific analysis.
9. Students may say that Whitman wanted to highlight the accomplishments of everyday citizens, or to write in a new form of poetry.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 139–140.

Writing

Students' poems should be in free verse form and incorporate everyday scenes that depict modern culture.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

I Hear America Singing

Respond and Interpret

1. Which of these poems do you prefer, and why?
2. (a)What occupations does the speaker say represent America? (b)What do these occupations suggest about Whitman's view of his country? (c)What do the laborers' songs suggest about the work they do?
3. (a)What happens at night? (b)Why do you think the poem ends the way it does?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. (a)What catalog, or list of images and details, is included in this poem? (b)What effect does the catalog have on your reading of the poem?
5. What about America does Whitman seem to be celebrating in this poem?

When I Heard the Learn'd Astronomer

Respond and Interpret

6. (a)How does the astronomer present information? (b)What does this suggest about the astronomer's approach to his subject?
7. (a)Why is the night air "mystical"? (b)What is implied by this word?

Analyze and Evaluate

8. (a)How does the speaker's method for "studying" the stars differ from the astronomer's? (b)What difference in values does this imply?

Connect

9. Connect to the Author Based on these poems, what can you infer about Whitman's beliefs and values?

Literary Element Free Verse

Free verse lacks a regular pattern of stressed and unstressed syllables. The lengths of the lines usually differ, and the lines may not be grouped together in stanzas. Instead, the way words and phrases are arranged and repeated creates a natural, conversational rhythm in the poem.

1. With a partner, read one of Whitman's poems aloud. Do you find the rhythm of the poem similar to that of everyday speech? Explain.
2. In what ways might "I Hear America Singing" have a different effect if it were written in a regular pattern?

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Reading Strategy Paraphrase

Paraphrasing can help you judge whether you understand what you have read. This strategy also helps you appreciate particular words or phrases in the poem. Reread the following lines:

Till rising and gliding out I wander'd off by myself,
In the mystical moist night-air, and from time to time,
Look'd up in perfect silence at the stars.

1. How would you paraphrase these lines?
2. What is lost in your paraphrase?

Writing

Write a Poem In "I Hear America Singing," Whitman uses several snapshot descriptions to evoke nineteenth-century life. Following Whitman's example, write a free verse poem describing twenty-first-century America. Think about scenes you encounter every day to help you represent modern culture.

Literary Element

1. Yes; this is characteristic of free verse.
2. A regular rhythm might contradict the spirit at the heart of this poem.

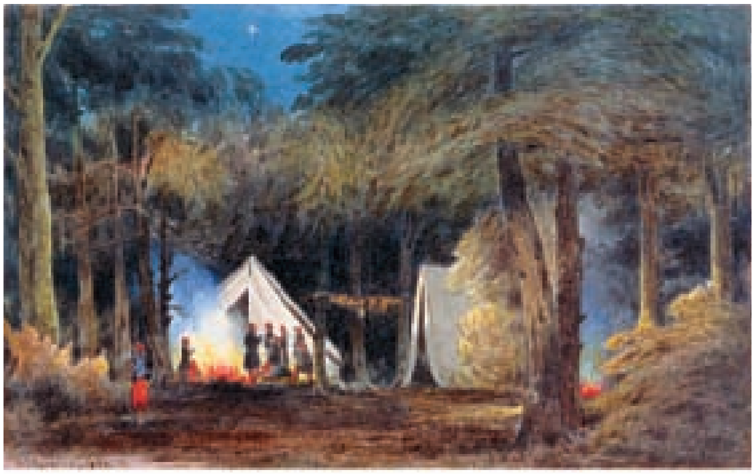
Progress Check

Can students identify free verse?

If No → See Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 139.

Reading Strategy

1. Until I rose from my seat and left the room, wandering away alone and occasionally looking at the stars and taking in their mystery
2. Rhythm, precision of image, voice, and eloquence



Encampment of Duryea's Zouaves, Virginia. 1862. William MacIlvaine the younger. Watercolor and gouache on paper, 18.1 x 27.3 in. New York Historical Society, NY. ★

A Sight in Camp in the Daybreak Gray and Dim

Walt Whitman

A sight in camp in the daybreak gray and dim,
As from my tent I emerge so early sleepless,
As slow I walk in the cool fresh air the path near by the hospital tent,
Three forms I see on stretchers lying, brought out there untended lying,
Over each the blanket spread, ample brownish woolen blanket,
Gray and heavy blanket, folding, covering all.

Curious I halt and silent stand,
Then with light fingers I from the face of the nearest the first just lift the blanket;
Who are you elderly man so gaunt and grim, with well-gray'd hair, and flesh all sunken about the eyes?
Who are you my dear comrade?

Then to the second I step—and who are you my child and darling? 1
Who are you sweet boy with cheeks yet blooming?

Then to the third—a face nor child nor old, very calm, as of beautiful yellow-white ivory;
Young man I think I know you—I think this face is the face of the Christ himself,
Dead and divine and brother of all, and here again he lies.

A Poetic Revolution How is this description different from what you might read in poems from an earlier era? 2

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Interpret Ask: What question does the speaker ask the first two men? ("Who are you?") Why doesn't he ask the third man this question? (The third man looks like Jesus Christ.)

ADVANCED Ask: What is the speaker suggesting by thinking that the third man is Jesus Christ? (He may be suggesting that the young man has made a great sacrifice for his fellow citizens.)

Big Idea 2

A Poetic Revolution
Answer: It is gritty and unpleasant.

View the Art ★

Painter William MacIlvaine (1813–1867) served with the New York 5th Regiment of Volunteers and witnessed the war first hand. Ask: Do you think the people in the painting would react to seeing dead soldiers in the same way the speaker does? (No, if they are not new to the war, they have probably become accustomed to witnessing death.)

For activities related to this poem and the poem on the next page, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 149 and 151.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP Emerging Divide students into pairs or teams of three and have each team paraphrase a stanza of the poem in writing. Ask volunteers to read their paraphrases aloud.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP Intermediate Read the poem aloud, using expression to convey meaning. Then ask volunteers to answer the questions "Who is speaking?" "What happens?" Have students work as a group to write a sentence that expresses the poem's message about war.

Teach

Big Idea 1

A Poetic Revolution Have students discuss why Whitman seems to condemn the Civil War itself, rather than the Union or the Confederate side. Ask: Why is this view a revolutionary approach to war? (It transcends the issues on both sides and questions the violence and destruction of war.)

Literary Element 2

Alliteration Point out Whitman's use of alliteration—a repetition of consonant sounds at the beginning of words—in the final stanza. Ask: How does Whitman's repetition of the m sound (make, mind, man, mother's) affect the reader's response to the poem? (The repetition of the m sound sets up a kind of hum or moan, which is appropriate to the weeping that is a response to the destruction of war.)

Reading Strategy 3

Paraphrase Answer: Students' paraphrases will be much longer than this line. Most will say that a paraphrase would not work because it would be too cumbersome.

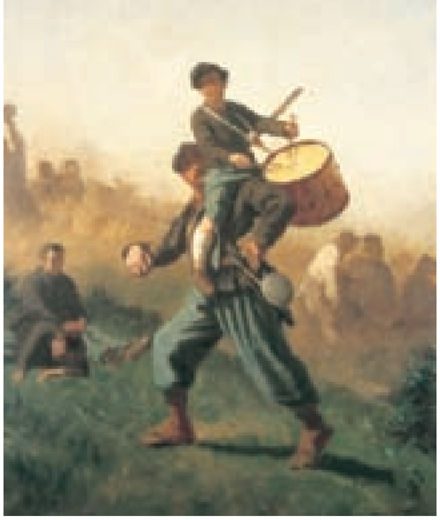
Progress Check

Can students paraphrase?

If No → See Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 150.

Beat! Beat! Drums!

Walt Whitman



The Wounded Drummer Boy, 1871. J. Eastman Johnson. Oil on canvas, 40 x 36 in. The Brooklyn Museum of Art, New York.

Beat! beat! drums!—blow! bugles! blow!
Through the windows—through doors—burst like a ruthless force,
Into the solemn church, and scatter the congregation,
Into the school where the scholar is studying;
Leave not the bridegroom quiet—no happiness must he have now with his bride,
Nor the peaceful farmer any peace, ploughing his field or gathering his grain,
So fierce you whirr and pound you drums—so shrill you bugles blow.

Beat! beat! drums!—blow! bugles! blow!
Over the traffic of cities—over the rumble of wheels in the streets;
Are beds prepared for sleepers at night in the houses? no sleepers must sleep in those beds,
No bargainers' bargains by day—no brokers or speculators[1]—would they continue?
Would the talkers be talking? would the singer attempt to sing?
Would the lawyer rise in the court to state his case before the judge?
1 Then rattle quicker, heavier drums—you bugles wilder blow.

Beat! beat! drums!—blow! bugles! blow!
Make no parley—stop for no expostulation,[2]
Mind not the timid—mind not the weeper or prayer,
2 Mind not the old man beseeching the young man,
Let not the child's voice be heard, nor the mother's entreaties,
Make even the trestles[3] to shake the dead where they lie awaiting the hearses,
So strong you thump O terrible drums—so loud you bugles blow.

---

[1] Speculators are people who engage in risky business ventures hoping to make quick or large profits.
[2] A parley is a conference between enemies to discuss terms of a truce or an agreement. Expostulation is the act of reasoning with a person to correct or dissuade him or her.
[3] Trestles are structures in which a beam is supported by four diverging legs.

3 Paraphrase Would your paraphrase of this line work with the rest of the poem?

Grammar Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Run-on Sentences A run-on sentence is two or more sentences written as one sentence. Correct a run-on by joining the sentences with a semicolon or a comma and a coordinating conjunction or by breaking the run-on into two or more sentences.

Have students correct these sentences:

1. He took books from the library none of them were returned overdue. (He took books from the library, and none of them were returned overdue.)
2. She searched for information about Whitman, the library had 20 of his books. (She searched for information about Whitman. The library had 20 of his books.)

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

A Sight in Camp in the Daybreak Gray and Dim

Respond and Interpret

1. Which image or idea from these two poems stands out in your mind? Why?
2. (a)What item does the speaker describe in lines 5–6? (b)Why might the speaker have focused on this item?
3. (a)Describe the first two soldiers. (b)What do the speaker's questions imply about his feelings toward the soldiers?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. Why do you think Whitman presents the three soldiers in this order?
5. (a)What comparison does Whitman make in the last stanza? (b)What is the effect of comparing the third soldier to Christ?

Beat! Beat! Drums!

Respond and Interpret

6. (a)What instruments are mentioned in this poem? (b)What might they represent?
7. (a)What kinds of activities do the instruments interrupt? (b)What does the variety of activities suggest to you about the speaker's message?

Analyze and Evaluate

8. (a)Why might the people in stanza 3 be praying, beseeching, and so on? (b)What message does this stanza convey? Explain your answer.
9. (a)What attitude toward war does the poem express? (b)Is the poem effective? Explain.

Connect

10. Connect to Today Do you think the views regarding war expressed in these two poems are applicable today? Support your answer.

Literary Element Free Verse

Whitman's poetry is an example of free verse at its most impressive. Free verse is poetry that has an irregular rhythm and line length and attempts to avoid any predetermined verse structure. Despite this lack of regularity, free verse does have a structure, which seems to "grow" organically to fit its subject matter. Whitman pioneered this form and made it important in American poetry.

1. Find examples of rhythm and repetition in "Beat! Beat! Drums!" In particular, consider the effect of lines 1, 8, and 15.
2. How do these examples reinforce the meaning of the poem?

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Reading Strategy Paraphrase

In "Beat! Beat! Drums!" the sound effects reinforce the meaning of the poem. One way to appreciate these effects is to paraphrase selected lines and then compare your paraphrases with Whitman's original lines. Refer to the notes you took while reading to help you answer these questions.

1. How would you paraphrase the last line of the first stanza?
2. How do the verbs and adjectives that describe the drums and bugles suggest that their sound is a "ruthless force"?

Writing

Write an Essay In describing the Civil War, Whitman often writes about subjects on the periphery (sidelines) rather than the battle itself. Why do you think he does this? Write a brief essay answering this question. Use examples from the poems to support your views.

After You Read

Assess

1. Answers will vary.
2. (a) The blanket that covers the dead (b) It is a sign of respect and hides the dead.
3. (a) Older man, gaunt, grim, gray-haired; rosy-cheeked boy (b) The deaths are personal, even though he does not know the victims.
4. It builds toward a dramatic and emotional high point.
5. (a) Whitman compares the soldier to Christ. (b) It emphasizes Whitman's sorrow for the soldier's death, making it a tragedy for all humankind.
6. (a) Drums and bugles (b) War's invasion of every aspect of life
7. (a) Sleeping, praying, ploughing, studying, talking, and singing (b) War disrupts all aspects of life.
8. (a) They are praying for loved ones not to go to war or to return safely from it. (b) War is oblivious to reason and emotion.
9. (a) The speaker's attitude is bitterly ironic; war bursts "like a ruthless force" over all aspects of life, and humans are powerless to stop it. (b) Yes, it expresses the speaker's attitude powerfully.
10. Students may agree that war causes unnecessary death, but may say that war is not necessarily inevitable.

Writing

Students' essays should answer the question in the prompt and include details from Whitman's poems as support.

Literary Element

1. The line "Beat! beat! drums!–blow! bugles! blow!" is repeated at the beginning of each stanza. The rhythm of this line derives from the heavily stressed, monosyllabic words beat, drums, and blow, and the repetition of the b sound.
2. They echo the unrelenting force of war.

Reading Strategy

1. You drums make a such a wild and rapid beat; you bugles make such a harsh, unpleasant sound.
2. Words such as beat, blow, burst, and shrill suggest a savage force.

For additional assessment, see Assessment Resources, pp. 141–142.

Focus

Summary

In these excerpts from his Civil War diary, Whitman chronicles the outbreak of war and the attitudes of Northerners toward the South, gives his personal impressions of the front, and pays a poignant tribute to Abraham Lincoln a few weeks after the president's assassination in April 1865.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 153–158.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Historical Narrative

Answer: The description of the newsboys running "furiously" through the streets creates a sense of heightened tension.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

Readability Scores

Dale-Chall: 5.8
DRP: 62
Lexile: 1410

from Specimen Days

Walt Whitman

Before You Read

Build Background

While serving as a volunteer nurse during the Civil War, Whitman recorded his experiences in the form of journal entries. Writing about this experience, Whitman noted, "I supply often to some of these dear suffering boys . . . that which doctors nor medicines nor skill nor any routine assistance can give. . . . There is something in . . . the magnetic flood of sympathy that does, in its way, more good than all the medicine in the world."

Literary Element Historical Narrative

A historical narrative is a nonfiction work that tells the story of important historical events or developments. Often told from an individual's point of view, historical narratives provide a "you-are-there" perspective, allowing readers to experience history deeply and personally. As you read these excerpts from Specimen Days, ask yourself, How does Whitman bring the Civil War home to his readers?

Opening of the Secession War

News of the attack on fort Sumter and the flag at Charleston harbor, S. C., was receiv'd in New York city late at night (13th April, 1861,) and was immediately sent out in extras of the newspapers. I had been to the opera in Fourteenth street that night, and after the performance was walking down Broadway toward twelve o'clock, on my way to Brooklyn, when I heard in the distance the loud cries of the newsboys, who came presently tearing and yelling up the street, rushing from side to side even more furiously than usual. I bought an extra and cross'd to the Metropolitan hotel (Niblo's) where the great lamps were still brightly blazing, and, with a crowd of others, who gather'd impromptu, read the news, which was evidently authentic. For the benefit of some who had no papers, one of us read the telegram aloud, while all listen'd silently and attentively. No remark was made by any of the crowd, which had increas'd to thirty or forty, but all stood a minute or two, I remember, before they dispers'd. I can almost see them there now, under the lamps at midnight again.

1 Historical Narrative How does this description set the tone for this entry?

Vocabulary

impromptu (im promp′ to͞o, -tū) adv. done on the spur of the moment

Selection Skills

from Specimen Days

Literary Elements
- Historical Narrative (SE pp. 416, 419)

Study Skills/Research/Assessment
- Text Aids (TE p. 418)

Vocabulary Skills
- Context Clues (SE p. 419)
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 419)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Journal Entry (SE p. 419)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (TE p. 418)

Contemptuous Feeling

Even after the bombardment of Sumter, however, the gravity of the revolt, and the power and will of the slave States for a strong and continued military resistance to national authority, were not at all realized at the North, except by a few. Nine-tenths of the people of the free States look'd upon the rebellion, as started in South Carolina, from a feeling one-half of contempt, and the other half composed of anger and incredulity. It was not thought it would be join'd in by Virginia, North Carolina, or Georgia. A great and cautious national official predicted that it would blow over "in sixty days," and folks generally believ'd the prediction. I remember talking about it on a Fulton ferry-boat with the Brooklyn mayor, who said he only "hoped the Southern fire-eaters would commit some overt act of resistance, as they would then be at once so effectually squelch'd, we would never hear of secession again—but he was afraid they never would have the pluck to really do anything." I remember, too, that a couple of companies of the Thirteenth Brooklyn, who rendezvou'd at the city armory, and started thence as thirty days' men, were all provided with pieces of rope, conspicuously tied to their musket-barrels, with which to bring back each man a prisoner from the audacious South, to be led in a noose, on our men's early and triumphant return!

Down at the Front

Falmouth, Va., opposite Fredericksburgh, December 21, 1862.—Begin my visits among the camp hospitals in the army of the Potomac. Spend a good part of the day in a large brick mansion on the banks of the Rappahannock, used as a hospital since the battle—seems to have receiv'd only the worst cases. Out doors, at the foot of a tree, within ten yards of the front of the house, I notice a heap of amputated feet, legs, arms, hands, &c., a full load for a one-horse cart. Several dead bodies lie near, each cover'd with its brown woolen blanket. In the door-yard, towards the river, are fresh graves, mostly of officers, their names on pieces of barrel-staves or broken boards, stuck in the dirt. (Most of these bodies were subsequently taken up and transported north to their friends.) The large mansion is quite crowded upstairs and down, everything impromptu, no system, all bad enough, but I have no doubt the best that can be done; all the wounds pretty bad, some frightful, the men in their old clothes, unclean and bloody. Some of the wounded are rebel soldiers and officers, prisoners. One, a Mississippian, a captain, hit badly in leg, I talk'd with some time; he ask'd me for papers, which I gave him. (I saw him three months afterward in Washington, with his leg amputated, doing well.) I went through the rooms, downstairs and up. Some of the men were dying. I had nothing to give at that visit, but wrote a few letters to folks home, mothers, &c. Also talk'd to three or four, who seem'd most susceptible to it, and needing it.

After First Fredericksburg

2

December 23 to 31.—The results of the late battle are exhibited everywhere about here in thousands of cases, (hundreds die every day,) in the camp, brigade, and division hospitals. These are merely tents, and sometimes very poor ones, the wounded lying on the ground, lucky, if their blankets are spread on layers of pine or hemlock twigs, or small leaves. No cots; seldom even a mattress. It is pretty cold. The ground is frozen hard, and there is occasional snow. I go around from one case to another. I do not see that I do much good to these wounded and dying; but I cannot leave them. Once in a while some youngster holds on to me convulsively, and I do what I can for him; at any

Vocabulary

incredulity (in´ krə do͞o´ lə tē) n. disbelief

Vocabulary

subsequently (sub´ sə kwent´ lē) adv. at a later time susceptible (sə sep´ tə bəl) adj. easily influenced or affected

Teach

Literary Element 2

Historical Narrative Have students characterize Whitman's attitude here toward visiting the wounded in the camp hospitals. (Although the realities of war are gruesome, Whitman is compassionate and seems at ease among the men.) Ask: What do Whitman's actions and comments here and throughout the selection suggest about his political assumptions about war? (Whitman seems to care only about the soldiers, not about the reasons they are fighting. He sees the soldiers from both sides as human beings.)

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Advanced Remind students that this selection is taken from the author's journal in which he jotted down his observations quickly and informally. Point out that often journal writers use sentence fragments and abbreviations because they do not expect others to read their writing. Ask students to identify the letters that are replaced by apostrophes or ideas that are indicated by "&c," which means "et cetera," or "and so on" and is used at the end of a list to indicate that the list continues.

Explain that Whitman's contemporaries would have understood many of the idioms and terms he uses. Work with students to decode unfamiliar words or phrases, such as "fire-eaters," "rendezvous'd," or "barrel staves."

Advanced Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Fredericksburg The battle at Fredericksburg, Virginia, was supposed to have ended the Civil War. Have students research what happened there from both the Union and Confederate perspectives and share the information with classmates.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Characterization Ask: What aspect of his own personality does Whitman convey in this passage? How do others regard him? (He portrays himself as friendly and sympathetic. By saying that he is always well used," he implies that others regard him the same way.)

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 163.

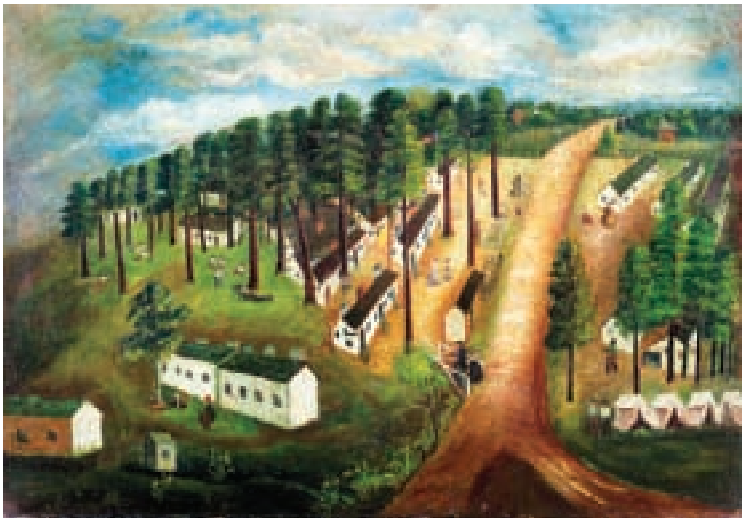
View the Art ★

Challenge students to think of words that describe the scene depicted in the artwork. (serene, calm, orderly) Ask: How does the artwork fit in with the world that Whitman describes in his journal entries? (The artwork does not convey the pain or fear that Whitman encounters, nor does it give a sense of the humanity that he appreciates.)

Progress Check

Can students identify a historical narrative?

If No → See Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 159.



Howard's Grove Hospital Near Richmond, Virginia, artist unknown, c. 19th century. Oil on canvas. The Chicago Historical Society. ★ rate, stop with him and sit near him for hours, if he wishes it.

1 Besides the hospitals, I also go occasionally on long tours through the camps, talking with the men, &c. Sometimes at night among the groups around the fires, in their shebang enclosures of bushes. These are curious shows, full of characters and groups. I soon get acquainted anywhere in camp, with officers or men, and am always well used. Sometimes I go down on picket with the regiment I know best. As to rations, the army here at present seems to be tolerably well supplied, and the men have enough, such as it is, mainly salt pork and hard tack. Most of the regiments lodge in the flimsy little shelter-tents. A few have built themselves huts of logs and mud, with fire-places.

No Good Portrait of Lincoln

Probably the reader has seen physiognomies (often old farmers, sea-captains, and such) that, behind their homeliness, or even ugliness, held superior points so subtle, yet so palpable, making the real life of their faces almost as impossible to depict as a wild perfume or fruit-taste, or a passionate tone of the living voice—and such was Lincoln's face, the peculiar color, the lines of it, the eyes, mouth, expression. Of technical beauty it had nothing—but to the eye of a great artist it furnished a rare study, a feast and fascination. The current portraits are all failures—most of them caricatures.

A Soldier on Lincoln

May 28.—As I sat by the bedside of a sick Michigan soldier in hospital to-day, a convalescent from the adjoining bed rose and came to me, and presently we began talking. He was a middle-aged man, belonged to the 2d Virginia regiment, but lived in Racine, Ohio, and had a family there. He spoke of President Lincoln, and said: "The war is over, and many are lost. And now we have lost the best, the fairest, the truest man in America. Take him altogether, he was the best man this country ever produced. It was quite a while I thought very different; but some time before the murder, that's the way I have seen it." There was deep earnestness in the soldier. (I found upon further talk he had known Mr. Lincoln personally, and quite closely, years before.) He was a veteran; was now in the fifth year of his service; was a cavalry man, and had been in a good deal of hard fighting.

Vocabulary

convalescent (kon və le´ sənt) n. a person who is recovering from an illness or injury.

Study Skills Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Text Aids Remind students to make use of the many study aids that the text provides to help their reading comprehension. Draw students' attention to the subheadings and the identifications of place names and dates in this selection. Ask how these features help. (The subheadings break up the text, and they can be used as heads for notetaking. The places and dates help to sequence the excerpts and categorize the content.) Remind students also to use the vocabulary definitions at the bottom of the pages to clarify meaning and the study questions to guide their reading.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. What is your impression of the Civil War after reading these excerpts?
2. (a)How has the soldier from the Virginia regiment changed his mind about Lincoln? (b)Why is Whitman fascinated by this soldier's story?
3. (a)Describe the attitude of many people in the North toward the South at the start of the war. (b)How would you account for this attitude?
4. (a)In "After First Fredericksburg," where does Whitman find the wounded soldiers lying? (b)Why do you think he includes this detail?

Analyze and Evaluate

5. (a)In "Down at the Front," what is Whitman's main theme? (b)How does he convey this theme?
6. (a)How would you describe the tone of "After First Fredericksburg"? (b)Do you think the tone is appropriate to the subject matter?
7. Connect to Today If you could read a first-person narrative about a current event or issue, what would it be? Why? What would you hope to learn that you couldn't get from a news report or a textbook entry?

Literary Element Historical Narrative

Historical narratives can provide compelling and intense portrayals of historical developments. One reason why these accounts can be so compelling is that they show large events from a human perspective. Seeing events through one person's eyes helps the reader experience what happened at a particular moment in history.

1. Why do you think Whitman chose to publish his journal notes?
2. How does reading Whitman's historical narrative compare with reading an account of the Civil War in a history book?

Vocabulary Practice

Practice with Context Clues Look at pages 416–418 to find context clues for the vocabulary words below. Write a list of these clues.

impromptu susceptible incredulity convalescent subsequently

Academic Vocabulary

Whitman's interaction with Northern and Southern soldiers shows that he seeks to help them, no matter their political affiliation.

Interaction is an academic word. When you talk to a friend, you have an interaction with him or her. To further explore the meaning of this word, answer the following question: Of all the interactions in your life, which do you look forward to the most?

Writing

Write a Journal Entry In the historical narrative Specimen Days, Whitman describes his experiences during and feelings about the Civil War. Think about an influential or historic event in your lifetime. Write a journal entry describing your experiences during that occurrence and how it affected you emotionally.

Literature Online

Selection Resources For Selection Quizzes, eFlashcards, and Reading-Writing Connection activities, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

After You Read

Assess

1. Students may say it conveys the suffering caused by war.
2. (a) The soldier did not like Lincoln before, but now calls Lincoln "the best man this country ever produced." (b) Whitman greatly admires Lincoln.
3. (a) Northerners felt contempt for the South and thought that it would be over quickly. (b) They failed to understand the determination of the Southerners.
4. (a) On the ground, most without even a mattress (b) The detail shows the extreme suffering of the wounded and the army's lack of supplies.
5. (a) The grotesqueness of the injuries and the suffering of the soldiers (b) His images are brutally candid—for example, the heap of amputated limbs.
6. (a) The tone is one of futility. (b) Students may say that the tone is appropriate.
7. Students may say they hope to get a personal, unfiltered perspective on their subject.

Writing

Students' journal entries should describe their emotional reaction to their experiences.

Literary Element

1. To tell people about the suffering and sacrifices made by the soldiers
2. Students may say that this is more focused on how war affected people.

Vocabulary

impromptu (The crowd gathered because the newsboys were yelling.)

incredulity (Northerners did not think that other states would join the conflict, which they looked upon with contempt, anger, and incredulity.)

subsequently (Bodies were buried, but subsequently they were dug up and brought north.)

susceptible (The speaker talks to dying men who are most susceptible to his company.)

convalescent (He was by the bedside of a sick soldier in the hospital.)

Academic Vocabulary

Possible answer: Having lunch with my best friend the most

Before You Read

Focus

Summary

In section 1, the speaker declares his goal to "sing myself" and to celebrate his kinship with the reader. In section 6, he ponders the grass as a symbol of regeneration. In section 16, he uses a series of paradoxes to emphasize his own diversity and sympathies. Section 17 asserts the universality of human thought, and section 46 pictures the speaker as a traveler who invites the reader to join him on his journey. In section 51, the speaker exhorts the listener to join him in a dialogue. In section 52, the speaker asserts the authenticity of his poetic voice, as he takes his leave of the reader.

For summaries in languages other than English, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, pp. 165–170.

Literary History ☆

The Divine Comedy Italian writer Dante completed Divine Comedy in 1321. The epic poem, a masterpiece of Western literature, tells of a man's spiritual development as he journeys through Hell, Purgatory, and Paradise.

Before You Read

from Song of Myself

Learning Objectives

For pages 420–428

In studying this text, you will focus on the following objectives:

Literary Study: Analyzing voice.

Reading: Drawing conclusions.

Connect to the Poem

What might it mean to feel "connected" to nature and to all of humankind? Discuss this question in a small group.

Build Background

When Whitman was young, he read Dante's classic epic poem the Divine Comedy. Several years later Whitman would ☆ create his own epic poem—Song of Myself. Like the Comedy, this poem describes the development of a hero whose quest is at once physical, poetic, and spiritual.

Set Purposes for Reading

Big Idea A Poetic Revolution

As you read, ask yourself, How does Whitman use irregular lines and rhythms to give form to his poem?

Literary Element Voice

Voice is the distinctive use of language that conveys the author's or speaker's personality to the reader. Voice is determined by several elements, including word choice and tone. In Song of Myself, Whitman set out to create a unique poetic voice—one that would reflect the nation as a whole and the language of the common people in particular. As you read, ask yourself, What characteristics describe Whitman's voice?

Reading Strategy Draw Conclusions

Drawing conclusions about a text involves using pieces of given information to make a general statement about the meaning of a line, passage, or section. Many elements in a literary work—including word choice, voice, imagery, and figurative language—contribute to the meaning. In a long poem such as Song of Myself, it is important to identify these elements from time to time and to use them to draw conclusions about the poem's meaning.

Literature Online

Author Search For more about Walt Whitman, go to glencoe.com and enter QuickPass code GLA9800u3.

Selection Skills

from Song of Myself

Literary Elements
- Voice (SE pp. 420, 423, 425, 426, 428)
- Author's Purpose (SE p. 428)
- Parallelism (TE p. 422)

Reading Skills
- Draw Conclusions (SE pp. 420, 422, 424, 426, 428)

Vocabulary Skills
- Academic Vocabulary (SE p. 428)
- Study Skills (TE p. 424)

Writing Skills/Grammar
- Reflective Essay (SE p. 429)
- Hyphens (SE p. 429)
- Free Verse (TE p. 426)

Listening/Speaking/Viewing Skills
- Analyze Art (SE pp. 422, 426)

from

Song of Myself ☆

Walt Whitman

1

I celebrate myself, and sing myself,
And what I assume you shall assume,
For every atom belonging to me as good belongs to you.

I loafe and invite my soul,
I lean and loafe at my ease observing a spear of summer grass.

My tongue, every atom of my blood, form'd from this soil, this air,
Born here of parents born here from parents the same, and their parents the same,
I, now thirty-seven years old in perfect health begin,
Hoping to cease not till death.

Creeds and schools in abeyance,[1]
Retiring back a while sufficed at what they are, but never forgotten,
I harbor for good or bad, I permit to speak at every hazard,
Nature without check with original energy.

6

A child said What is the grass? fetching it to me with full hands;
How could I answer the child? I do not know what it is any more than he.

I guess it must be the flag of my disposition, out of hopeful green stuff woven.

Or I guess it is the handkerchief of the Lord,
A scented gift and remembrancer[2] designedly dropt,
Bearing the owner's name someway in the corners, that we may see and remark, and say Whose?

---

[1] In abeyance means "suspended" or "in a state of being undetermined."

[2] A remembrancer is a reminder.

1 A Poetic Revolution In line 14 the rhythmic pattern creates a rising and falling effect, ending in a stop. What pattern does Whitman use in line 15?

Teach

Big Idea 1

A Poetic Revolution

Answer: He uses the same pattern: The rhythm rises with the question "How could I answer the child?" then falls with "I do not know what it is any more than he."

Literary History ☆

Naming "Song of Myself" The first edition of Leaves of Grass was published in 1855. The poem "Song of Myself," which did not even have a title at that point, served as a rambling introduction to the book. Over the years, Whitman gave the poem several titles, including "A Poem of Walt Whitman," "An American," and "Walt Whitman." The poet finally settled on the title "Song of Myself" in 1881. In the final edition of Leaves of Grass, published in 1892, "Song of Myself" concludes the first section of the book.

For an audio recording of this selection, use Listening Library Audio CD-ROM.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Point out that the poem repeats key words and often uses variations of the words. Hoping in line 9, for example, is followed by hopeful in line 16. Have students list repeated words and their variations in the poem.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

SMALL GROUP

Emerging Students may need help seeing the sentence structure within the form of free verse. Point out that the poet expresses a complete thought in each grouping of lines and has inserted a space between each "sentence." Have students work in small groups and take turns reading each "sentence" aloud and discussing its meaning. Ask students how the poem's structure affects the way they read it.

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Draw Conclusions Answer: The smallest sprout of grass convinces him that life, not death, is the ultimate reality.

APPROACHING Ask: What words or phrases does the speaker repeat on this page? ("What do you think," "become of," "and," and "life.") Why does the speaker repeat these words? (to suggest that the speaker thinks it is important to ask about life and about what may come afterward)

For additional practice using the reading skill or strategy, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 172.

View the Art ★

Answer: In the poem, Whitman celebrates the diverse people and occupations of our country as he rejoices in their connectedness. Homer also celebrates his subject, a farmer gathering hay, by depicting him peacefully working in a warm and appealing setting.

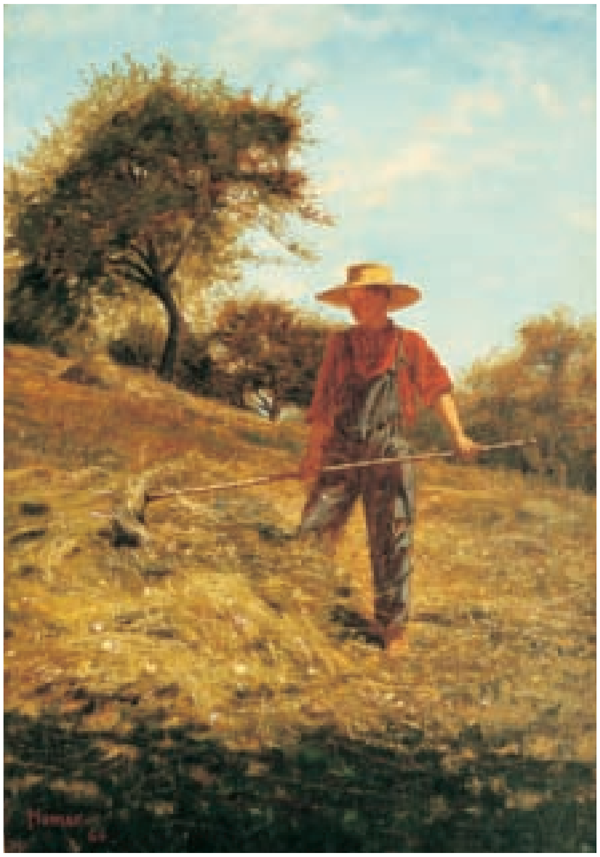
Winslow Homer (1835–1910), born in Boston, is considered by many to have been the greatest American artist of his time. Homer's paintings mainly depict people at work and play, Civil War scenes, and dramatic seascapes.



Haymaking, 1864. Winslow Homer. Oil on canvas. The Columbus Museum of Art, Columbus, OH.

View the Art Most of Winslow Homer's early works included people, unlike many of his nineteenth-century contemporaries, who focused on landscapes. In what ways does this painting capture the mood of Song of Myself? Explain, using details from both the painting and the poem. ★

What do you think has become of the young and old men?
And what do you think has become of the women and children?

They are alive and well somewhere,
The smallest sprout shows there is really no death,
And if ever there was it led forward life, and does not wait at the end to arrest it,
And ceas'd the moment life appear'd.

All goes onward and outward, nothing collapses,
And to die is different from what any one supposed, and luckier.

1 Draw Conclusions Why is the speaker convinced that death does not exist?

Reading Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Parallelism Explain that Whitman uses parallel structure to create a rhythmic effect that emphasizes his ideas. Parallelism is the repetition of phrases or sentences with similar structures. Direct students' attention to the example in lines 20 and 21, where he repeats the phrase "what do you think." Have students identify other examples of parallelism throughout the poem.

16

I am of old and young, of the foolish as much as the wise,
Regardless of others, ever regardful of others,
Maternal as well as paternal, a child as well as a man,
Stuff'd with the stuff that is coarse and stuff'd with the stuff that is fine,
One of the Nation of many nations, the smallest the same and the largest the same,
A Southerner soon as a Northerner, a planter nonchalant[3] and hospitable down by the Oconee[4] I live,
A Yankee bound my own way ready for trade, my joints the limberest joints on earth and the sternest joints on earth,
A Kentuckian walking the vale of the Elkhorn in my deer-skin leggings, a Louisianian or Georgian,
A boatman over lakes or bays or along coasts, a Hoosier, Badger, Buckeye;[5] 2
At home on Kanadian snow-shoes or up in the bush, or with fishermen off Newfoundland,
At home in the fleet of ice-boats, sailing with the rest and tacking,
At home on the hills of Vermont or in the woods of Maine, or the Texan ranch,
Comrade of Californians, comrade of free North-Westerners, (loving their big proportions,)
Comrade of raftsmen and coalmen, comrade of all who shake hands and welcome to drink and meat,
A learner with the simplest, a teacher of the thoughtfullest,
A novice beginning yet experient of myriads of seasons,
Of every hue and caste am I, of every rank and religion,
A farmer, mechanic, artist, gentleman, sailor, quaker,
Prisoner, fancy-man, rowdy,[6] lawyer, physician, priest.

I resist any thing better than my own diversity,
Breathe the air but leave plenty after me,
And am not stuck up, and am in my place.

(The moth and the fish-eggs are in their place, 3
The bright suns I see and the dark suns I cannot see are in their place,

The palpable[7] is in its place and the impalpable is in its place.)

17

These are really the thoughts of all men in all ages and lands, they are not original with me,
If they are not yours as much as mine they are nothing, or next to nothing,

---

3. Nonchalant means "showing a lack of interest or enthusiasm."
4. The Oconee is a river in Georgia.
5. Hoosier, Badger, and Buckeye are nicknames for natives or residents of Indiana, Wisconsin, and Ohio, respectively.
6. A rowdy is a rough, disorderly person.
7. Palpable means "able to be touched or felt."

4 Voice What do these lines convey about the speaker's personality?

Teach

Reading Strategy 2

Analyze Author's Beliefs

Point out that in lines 28–46, Whitman catalogs many people and places. Ask: What do the many people and places mentioned suggest about Whitman's view of his relationship to the rest of humanity? (Whitman thinks that he speaks for everyone, regardless of occupation or origin.)

Literary Element 3

Tone Have students reread lines 48–52 and identify the tone. (Some students may say the lines convey a self-deprecating humor. Others may say the lines locate humans in the chain of being, among moth and fish eggs, the heavenly bodies, and the material and immaterial.)

Literary Element 4

Voice Answer: The speaker embraces life in all its diversity. His personality blends opposite characteristics.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Make sure students read the definitions in the footnotes for the page above. Explain that Whitman uses nicknames, such as Hoosier, Badger, and Buckeye, to identify groups of people. Have students consult dictionaries to find the sources of such nicknames.

Approaching Level

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Established Because of the line lengths and syntax in section 16, students may have trouble seeing that many of the ideas he embraces are opposites. Have students work with partners and use sticky notes to identify and organize the ideas. Students should write down each thing or idea that Whitman mentions (for example: young, old, maternal, paternal, coarse, fine). Then they should line up the stickies on a sheet of paper, matching each idea with its opposite. (For example: place "young" next to "old.") Tell students that not all the ideas will have opposites.

Teach

Literary Element 1

Style Remind students that style involves the choice and arrangement of words in a written work. Ask: How does Whitman's choice of everyday language in section 46 reinforce his theme? (Whitman's words are appropriate for a conversation among friends and for his message about the connectedness of all people.)

APPROACHING Ask: What do you notice about the speaker's choice of words in section 46? How would you describe them? (Most of the words are simple, ordinary words. A few, such as perpetual and continents*, are longer; a few, like* duds and orbs*, are unusual.)*

Reading Strategy 2

Draw Conclusions
Answer: Only the reader can discover and travel his or her path in life.

If they are not the riddle and the untying of the riddle they are nothing,
If they are not just as close as they are distant they are nothing.

This is the grass that grows wherever the land is and the water is,
This is the common air that bathes the globe.

46

I know I have the best of time and space, and was never measured and never will be measured.

I tramp a perpetual journey, (come listen all!)
My signs are a rain-proof coat, good shoes, and a staff cut from the woods,
No friend of mine takes his ease in my chair,
I have no chair, no church, no philosophy,
I lead no man to a dinner-table, library, exchange,
But each man and each woman of you I lead upon a knoll,[8]
My left hand hooking you round the waist,
My right hand pointing to landscapes of continents and the public road.

Not I, not any one else can travel that road for you,
You must travel it for yourself.

It is not far, it is within reach,
Perhaps you have been on it since you were born and did not know,
Perhaps it is everywhere on water and on land.

Shoulder your duds[9] dear son, and I will mine, and let us hasten forth,
Wonderful cities and free nations we shall fetch as we go.

If you tire, give me both burdens, and rest the chuff of your hand[10] on my hip,

And in due time you shall repay the same service to me,
For after we start we never lie by again.

This day before dawn I ascended a hill and look'd at the crowded heaven,
And I said to my spirit When we become the enfolders of those orbs, and the pleasure and knowledge of every thing in them, shall we be fill'd and satisfied then?
And my spirit said No, we but level that lift to pass and continue beyond.
You are also asking me questions and I hear you,
I answer that I cannot answer, you must find out for yourself.

---

[8] A knoll is a small, rounded hill.
[9] Duds are personal belongings.
[10] Chuff of your hand refers to the fat part of the palm.

2 Draw Conclusions What message does the speaker convey about the reader's path in life?

Vocabulary Practice

SPIRAL REVIEW Study Skills Tell students that one type of vocabulary question on standardized tests asks them to recognize which meaning of a multiple-meaning word is the same as that in a given sentence. In the following example, tell students to choose the sentence in which the underlined word is used in the same way as in the line from Whitman's poem:

1. It is not far, it is within reach. (line 70)
A The temperature will reach 75° today.
B His unrealistic goals were out of reach.
C The jury is expected to reach a verdict today.
D Support organizations reach out to those in need.

The correct answer is B; the meaning is "achievable."

Sit a while dear son,
Here are biscuits to eat and here is milk to drink,
But as soon as you sleep and renew yourself in sweet clothes, I kiss you with a good-by kiss and open the gate for your egress hence.[11]

Long enough have you dream'd contemptible dreams,
Now I wash the gum from your eyes,
You must habit yourself to the dazzle of the light and of every moment of your life.

1

Long have you timidly waded holding a plank by the shore,
Now I will you to be a bold swimmer,
To jump off in the midst of the sea, rise again, nod to me, shout, and laughingly dash with your hair.

51

The past and present wilt—I have fill'd them, emptied them,
And proceed to fill my next fold of the future.

Listener up there! what have you to confide to me?
Look in my face while I snuff the sidle of evening,[12]
(Talk honestly, no one else hears you, and I stay only a minute longer.)

Do I contradict myself?
Very well then I contradict myself,
(I am large, I contain multitudes.)

I concentrate toward them that are nigh,[13] I wait on the door-slab.

Who has done his day's work? who will soonest be through with his supper?
Who wishes to walk with me?

Will you speak before I am gone? will you prove already too late?

52

The spotted hawk swoops by and accuses me, he complains of my gab and my loitering. 3

I too am not a bit tamed, I too am untranslatable,
I sound my barbaric yawp[14] over the roofs of the world.

---

[11] Egress hence means "departure from this place."
[12] Snuff the sidle of evening means "to put out the last light of the day, which is moving sideways across the sky."
[13] Nigh means "near."
[14] A yawp is a loud, sharp cry.

4 Voice How would you describe the intended relationship between the speaker and the reader of this poem?

Teach

Literary Element 3

Personification Remind students that personification is the giving of human characteristics to inanimate objects or animals. Ask: How does Whitman's use of personification in line 104 contribute to the poem's message? (Personification reinforces Whitman's theme of the link between people and nature.)

APPROACHING Ask: What object or animal acts like a human being in line 104? What does it do? (A hawk. It "accuses" and "complains.")

Literary Element 4

Voice Answer: The relationship is one of deep and tender intimacy, like that between a parent and child.

English Learners

DIFFERENTIATED INSTRUCTION

Intermediate Students may have trouble understanding the metaphors in line 92. Work with students to help them make connections. Read aloud line 92. Then ask students to identify things that wilt. (flowers, vegetables, clothing, and people on hot days) Ask students to use the information in the second part of the line to paraphrase the metaphor. (Memories and the present moment fade or wilt like flowers in a vase.)

Literary History ☆

Egress The word egress (line 86), originally from the Latin word egressus, means "the act of going forth or leaving." It was often used in legal documents and referred to the right of people, such as immigrants or travelers, to leave or pass through a place. Today the word is rarely used. Ask: What word do we use now to refer to the act of leaving? (exit)

Teach

Reading Strategy 1

Draw Conclusions

Answer: The speaker is about to leave the reader. He has reached the final stage of his life in the flesh.

Literary Element 2

Voice Answer: The poet longs to connect with the reader and hopes that some lines of the poem will resonate with the reader's spirit.

View the Art ★

Answer: The painting depicts robust, hard-working Americans, just as Whitman conveys the spirit of a powerful, young, and hard-working nation.

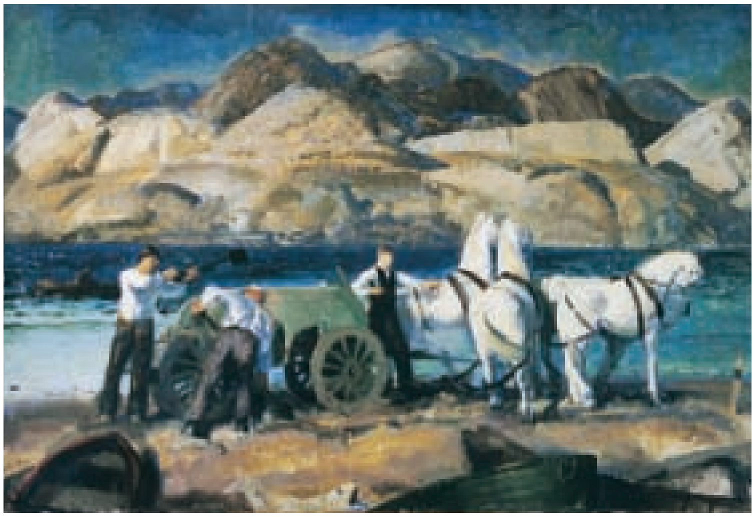
Writer's Technique ☆

Whitman's Philosophy The optimism expressed as the speaker leaves the world at the end of the poem reflects Whitman's own philosophy. In an afterword to the final edition of Leaves of Grass, Whitman expresses satisfaction with his life's work, explaining that his book "ought to emanate buoyancy and gladness legitimately enough, for it was grown out of those elements, and has been the comfort of my life since it was originally commenced."

To check students' understanding of the selection, see Unit 3 Teaching Resources Book, p. 173.



The Sand Team, 1917. George Bellows. Oil on canvas. The Brooklyn Museum of Art, New York.

View the Art Critics dubbed George Bellows and his colleagues the "Ashcan" school because their work—realistic portrayals of early twentieth-century social conditions—was considered crude. What spirit of America does this particular painting convey? How is it similar to or different from Whitman's view of the American spirit? ★

The last scud[15] of day holds back for me,
It flings my likeness after the rest and true as any on the shadow'd wilds,
It coaxes me to the vapor and the dusk.

I depart as air, I shake my white locks at the runaway sun,
I effuse[16] my flesh in eddies, and drift it in lacy jags.

I bequeath myself to the dirt to grow from the grass I love,
If you want me again look for me under your boot-soles.

You will hardly know who I am or what I mean,
But I shall be good health to you nevertheless,
And filter and fibre your blood.

Failing to fetch me at first keep encouraged,
Missing me one place search another,
I stop somewhere waiting for you. ☆

---

[15] Scud refers to wind-driven clouds or rain.
[16] Effuse means "to pour out or forth."

1 Draw Conclusions What stage of his journey has the speaker reached?

2 Voice How would you describe the poet's voice in the closing lines of the poem?

Writing Practice

Free Verse Have students pick their favorite section of "Song of Myself" and discuss in small groups what may have influenced Whitman to write these particular lines. After this activity, have students write their own poems in free verse, using lines of Whitman's poem as springboards. For example, a student might imitate line 114 and begin their poem with "You will hardly know who I am . . . ." The student may then write the rest of the poem using their own ideas. When they have finished writing, have volunteers read their poems to the class.

After You Read

Respond and Think Critically

Respond and Interpret

1. How did you react to the speaker in the poem? Explain your answer.

2. What do lines 10–13 and 20–27 suggest about the speaker's view of life and death?

3. (a)A paradox is a seemingly contradictory statement. What paradoxes does Whitman list in section 16? (b)What do these lines suggest about Whitman's attitude toward himself?

Analyze and Evaluate

4. (a)How does the speaker view himself in relation to nature and to the rest of the world? (b)Would you call the speaker a hero? Explain.

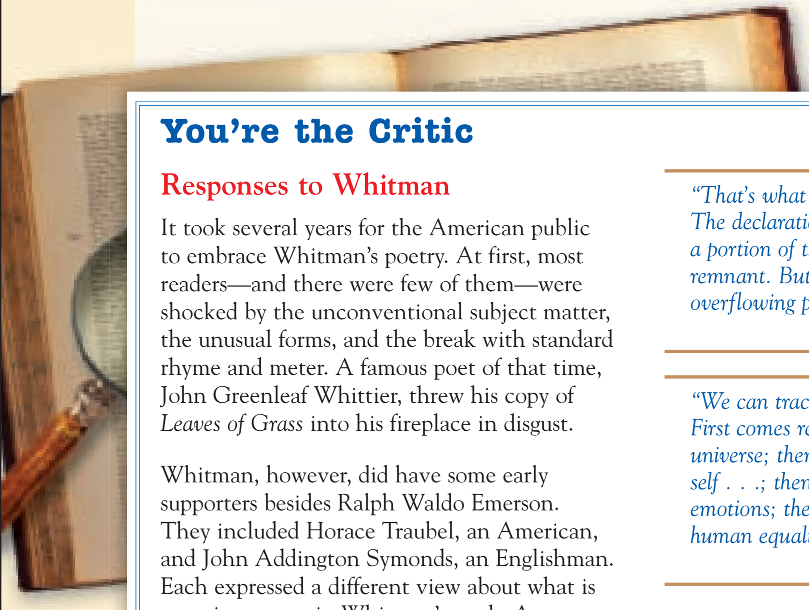
5. Why do you think the speaker gives his "son" the advice he does in lines 73–91? Explain.

6. (a)What does the image of the grass in sections 6 and 52 have to do with life and death? (b)Why might Whitman have called his volume of poetry Leaves of Grass?

Connect

7. Big Idea A Poetic Revolution Why is free verse particularly well suited to Whitman's ideas?

8. Connect to Today Whitman's poetry was a radical departure in both form and content. What are some examples of contemporary "radical" artists or movements that you know?



You're the Critic

Responses to Whitman

It took several years for the American public to embrace Whitman's poetry. At first, most readers—and there were few of them—were shocked by the unconventional subject matter, the unusual forms, and the break with standard rhyme and meter. A famous poet of that time, John Greenleaf Whittier, threw his copy of Leaves of Grass into his fireplace in disgust.

Whitman, however, did have some early supporters besides Ralph Waldo Emerson. They included Horace Traubel, an American, and John Addington Symonds, an Englishman. Each expressed a different view about what is most important in Whitman's work. As you read the two excerpts, notice their different perspectives.

> "That's what Leaves of Grass all comes to. The declaration that the people are first. Not a portion of the people. Not the saving remnant. But the everyday people. The vast overflowing populations."
>
> —Horace Traubel, 1912

> "We can trace an order in [Whitman's] ideas. First comes religion or the concept of the universe; then personality, or the sense of self . . .; then love . . . and comradely emotions; then democracy, or the theory of human equality and brotherhood."
>
> —John Addington Symonds, 1893

1. Find passages in Song of Myself that support the views of these critics.
2. Which of the two views do you think is more accurate? Explain.

After You Read

Assess

1. Some students may say that the speaker's words are inspirational. Others may say that he is irresponsible.

2. In lines 10–13, the speaker is putting aside formal education to experience all the good and bad life has to offer. The speaker believes in the continuity of life. For him, death is not an end. In death, we are reunited with nature and continue to live.

3. (a) Being both old and young, foolish and wise, careful and careless, male and female, coarse and cultured (b) He embraces all of himself and humanity, including contradictions.

